The diagram shows a chessboard from a top-down perspective. The board is divided into light and dark squares. On the light squares, there are several pieces: a white king, a white queen, a white knight, a white pawn, and two black pawns. On the dark squares, there are three black pawns. The white pawn is positioned such that it can move forward to a square where it would be promoted into a white queen. The black pawns are positioned to prevent the white pawn from moving forward to the next square.
