

LAST STOP: THE TWENTY FIRST CENTURY

By A. J. Reffes

Progress Publishers

For Kathy, friend, mentor and wife. Stupor Mundi.

Copyright © 2024 by A. J. Reffes. All rights reserved. Published by Progress Publishers, Berlin, Germany.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION	3
LAST STOP: THE TWENTY FIRST CENTURY	4
CANADA BUILDS MAOIST CAMPS	6
PHILOSOPHIES OF ANTISCIENCE	8
COMMISSAR RUNS FOR PRESIDENT	12
WESTERN JURISPRUDENCE ATTACKS MAN	15
HIGH COURT DECLARES FREEDOM UNCONSTITUTIONAL	17
AMERICA'S SALESMAN OF HATE	19
RED VANDALS HIT EIFFEL TOWER	22
WELFARE STATE TOPPLES THE WEST	24
REDS BLOW UP GERMAN NUCLEAR PLANTS	27
IRON CURTAIN DESCENDS ON THE WEST	29
THE AGE OF WELFARE	31
GERMANY'S COMMUNISTS OUTLAW CARS	34
WITCHES AND MARXISTS SPREAD MADNESS AT YALE	36
DEMOCRAT PARTY'S RED CHANNELS	38
THE ESTABLISHMENT DEBATES TRUMP	41
DEATH OF A STATESMAN	43
RED ARMY INVADES AMERICA	45
DEATH KNOCKS FROM HAITI	48
ENDLESS ROUNDS AGAINST TRUMP	50

INTRODUCTION

These reports are intended for a general, nonspecialist audience. They run the gamut of the arts and sciences, historical and current events, and should provide the reader with useful introductions to given topics. May they encourage a few happy hours of suggestive thought!

LAST STOP: THE TWENTY FIRST CENTURY

In the fin de siecle disposition, in the tendencies of contemporary art and poetry, in the life and conduct of men who write mystic, symbolic and decadent works and the attitude taken by their admirers in the tastes and esthetic impulses of fashionable society, is the confluence of two well defined conditions of disease with which the psychiatrist is quite familiar: degeneration and hysteria. (Degeneration by Max Nordau). Degeneration. Decadence. Fin de siecle. The turn of the century. The end of one century and the start of a new. Currents of irrationalism, mysticism, subjectivism and collectivism surge across society and incinerate free institutions. Civilizations throughout history have been afflicted with the disease of cultural degeneration; in ancient Rome, the onset occurred in the fourth century AD and saw the mass rejection of pagan reason and the acceptance of Christianity, barbarism, socialism and state worship; and in the West, the disease struck in the twentieth century and sought to revert the culture back to the ages before the Enlightenment. In the new millennium, the disease has completed its work of destruction and the West has been reduced to a wild animal rampaging across the wreckage of a culture and feeding on the souls of the morally and intellectually bankrupt. The vanishing minority of civilized people in the West today look around and see in every directions, in every field of endeavor and in every sector of society the fearsome and terrifying symptoms of cultural degeneration. In philosophy, they see the proclamation that physical objects do not exist and reality is human reality, human Dasein, human "being" or human "thereness." They see the proclamation that reality is a construct of "language games," that the meanings of words are products of the arbitrary rules of languages and have no relation to reality, that the meanings of words are determined by their use within language games and refer to no objects in the world, and that the task of philosophy is to analyse and report on the subjective games, rules and meanings governing language. They see the proclamation that reality is a construct of texts which can be endlessly interpreted or "deconstructed." They see the proclamation that there exist no "metanarratives" or universal truths, morality or human essentialism and reality is a construct of nations, communities and cultures. They see the proclamation that true philosophy is critical theory. This is called such because it is critical of the values of the Enlightenment, the values of reason, objectivity, empiricism, science and individual rights, and graduating from the school of Karl Marx, projects reality as relative, subjective and a creation of tribes based on gender, race and class, and promotes the political agendas of the tribes of gays, lesbians, transgenders, feminists, black racists, proletarian tub thumpers, and the preachers of an antiindustrial revolution. They see the proclamation that true philosophy is critical race theory, which is called such because like its Marxist predecessor it is critical of the values of the Enlightenment. Condemning the liberal order as systemic racism and the lash of white supremacy, it advocates the establishment of a black power, black swastika, black Aryan, black Hitlerite dictatorship. In the field of logic, civilized people see the proclamation that the notion that statements must be either true or false is a prejudice inherited from the Enlightenment. They see the proclamation that the highest form of logic is not the sane, ordinary, common sense binary logic of yes or no, true or false, but is a three valued logic indicating true, false and indeterminate or both true and false. In the field of mathematics, they see the proclamation that any complete mathematical system is in fact not a system at all but is an antisystem, because it contains within itself contradictions and inconsistencies. In the field of physics, they see the proclamation that separate particles do not exist, that physical objects are illusions, and that reality is pure field, energy, vibrations, space and geometry. They see the proclamation that particles do exist but they move by chance and can be anywhere and do anything, and are governed solely by the laws of probability. They see the proclamation that the universe is marked by an expansion of space or an expansion of absolute nothingness. In the field of biology, they see the proclamation that biological entities possess no essence and are indeterminate and contradictory. They see the proclamation that biological species change into other species, not in an instant as required by logic and reality, but gradually over time, in an evolutionary process, and thus there exist such intermediate species and contradictions as man-apes which are both human and apes at one and the same time. In the field of ethics, they see the proclamation that man's good is to categorically obey the decrees of his will, feelings and intuitions, to obey them without regard to reason or consequences, to obey them for the sake of obeying them, to become rebels without a cause, heroic terrorists who proudly take responsibility for their crimes and boast about them, and killers helter skelter who scrawl out messages of violence with the blood of their victims. In the field of politics, they see the proclamation that the primary reality in society is the collective, that individuals possess value and worth insofar as they serve its needs and interests, that individuals are defined in terms of the tribes to which they belong, and that a progressive society rejects the notion of individual rights and is predicated on the pursuit of gender, race and class politics. In the field of the arts, they see the proclamation that the highest form of art consists in the free play of pure forms without meaning, content or reference of any kind, that beauty exists in the eye of the beholder and has no relation to any order or harmony of existence, that the highest form of literature consists in streams of consciousness and depicts actions without plot or progression of events, the highest form of painting is nonrepresentational and consists in lines, shapes and colors without objects, and the highest form of music is randomly generated noise. Look at the tribal politics of the twenty first century and see the establishment of race and gender quotas at the workplace and in school admissions. See universities base admissions decisions on gender demographics in place of individual qualifications. See the establishment of institutional racism and sexism, and discrimination against whites and males, as the achievement of diversity and the highest form of fairness and equity. See the inherently racist and sexist notion of diversity exalted as the highest form of social progress. See preferential treatment given to black and female academic candidates in the name of correcting underrepresentation. See the notions of equal protection and equal opportunity sacrificed on the altars of parity and proportional representation. See the promotion of race and gender socialism. See individuals reduced to their race and gender identity groups, affirmative action programs established to benefit women, blacks and transgenders, and society descend into a savage jungle: "The California Institute of Technology's incoming class is 50 percent female for the first time in history, sparking concern from one legal expert about a focus on gender parity initiatives rather than merit. A profile of the undergraduate class of 2028 highlights the students' 'gender diversity,' showing 50 percent of the students are male and 50 percent are female. The private research university described the gender demographics as a 'historic milestone' in an article earlier this month on its website. Caltech has been 'piloting strategic initiatives' such as 'targeted outreach and recruitment efforts' to increase the number of female attendees, according to the article. These efforts are critical in order to 'combat inequities' and 'increase diversity among the undergraduate class,' the institution states. However, a former Department of Education assistant secretary in the Trump administration has concerns about the legality of Caltech's efforts. 'Gender parity initiatives are usually unjust because they tend to involve disparate treatment and disparate impact on the basis of sex,' Adam Kissel, a visiting fellow at the Heritage Foundation, told The Fix. According to Title IX, 'No person in the United States shall, on the basis of sex, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any education program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance.' 'Disparate treatment and intentional disparate impact in university recruitment of students are even more clearly unlawful following the Students for Fair Admission opinions from the Supreme Court,' Kissel said in a recent email to The Fix. The 2023 ruling shot down Harvard and University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill's race based admission system on the grounds of the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. The university also offers 10 affinity groups specifically for women, but none are listed for male students. Kissel gender parity initiatives 'almost always seek to lift up women at the expense of men, while the same institutions tend to express no interest in supporting men when they are underrepresented.' Kissel said that 'diversity by sex is a poor proxy for the actual viewpoint diversity that makes a college flourish.' 'Diversity initiatives for the sake of counting identity groups are more of a socialist redistribution exercise or a project in cultural division than a genuine effort to bring diverse views into academic discussion,' he told The Fix. With the rise of the transgender movement, Kissel said some universities that have gender parity goals and initiatives 'might be hard pressed to define what a woman is in the first place.' At the bottom of Caltech's article celebrating the incoming class's gender diversity, a disclaimer reads: 'Admissions data reflects students' legal sex per national reporting requirements. Students are not required to report their gender identity on college applications, so admissions data may not accurately reflect students' lived genders.' " (Caltech Boasts 'Diversity' Efforts Result In 50 Percent Female Class by Courtney Graves). At the dawn of the twentieth century, a train left Satan's station and commenced a fearsome journey. It was a train marked civilizational collapse and it carried dangerous freight on board. It carried Faustian philosophy proclaiming the primacy of self assertion and will power over the outer world. It carried Cartesian philosophy proclaiming universal doubt and the "prior certainty of consciousness" and certainty about nothing else. It carried Kantian philosophy proclaiming that the perception of physical objects is a universal delusion produced by the veils and screens of space and time. It carried Hegelian philosophy proclaiming that the perception of physical objects is a delusion produced by finite perception which conceals the true reality of the infinite, divine Absolute Mind. It carried Christian philosophy proclaiming that actual human personhood mystically begins at the moment of conception and abortion is therefore murder. The train accelerated as the century rolled on. Its freight were bacterial particles unleashing plagues of mental and physical violence. Its last stop is the twenty first century where it has crashed, reducing civilization to a wasteland.

CANADA BUILDS MAOIST CAMPS

The Red Guards were a student paramilitary army created and commanded by Chairman Mao Zedong in 1966 to enforce his Cultural Revolution. Consisting of twelve million high school and university students, the Red Guards were on a mission of mass murder and mass destruction directed against nonMarxist voices and culture. Their record of horror made China flow with rivers of blood and saw massacres bury the landscape, the Daxing Massacre, the Guangxi Massacre, the Inner Mongolia Incident, the Guangdong Massacre, the Yunnan Massacres and the Hunan Massacres, and claim the lives of hundreds of thousands of people. Rejecting five thousand years of Chinese freedom, Mao's Red Guards committed their crimes against humanity, and sought to spread their crimes across the world and across the universe, in the name of the people, the revolution and the proletariat: "Chairman Mao has defined our future as an armed revolutionary youth organization. So if Chairman Mao is our Red Commander in Chief and we are his Red Guards, who can stop us? First we will make China Maoist from inside out and then we will help the working people of other countries make the world red, and then the whole universe." (China's Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution: Master Narratives And Post Mao Counternarratives by Chong, Woei Lien, quoting a Red Guard leader). Formally dissolved in 1968, the Red Guards have lived on throughout the world for the past half century and reared their monstrous heads wherever Marxist repression has become the order of the day. In the twenty first century, ten thousand kilometers away from China, the Red Guards have reassembled and gone on the march, and disgraced a Western nation which once exalted the values of the Enlightenment in its phrase "peace, order and good government," which was its counterpart to America's famous phrase "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." In the twenty first century, the Red Guards have travelled across the mighty seas and made a home in Canada. They have grown since their days under Mao and are no longer high school or university students, but occupy the highest levels of society, and are journalists, judges, professors, doctors, politicians and senior government officials. Their mission remains the same and has succeeded in rendering the nation which enacted the Canadian Bill of Rights and the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms unrecognizable. On August 8, 2024, the Supreme Court of Canada dismissed an appeal by psychologist Jordan Peterson against the Red Guards' campaign to silence him for the crime of engaging in antiMarxist heresy. Canada's Red Guards sit on the nation's highest court, which rejected Peterson's right to challenge the tenets of latter day Marxism, and they run the College of Psychologists of Ontario, the regulatory body for psychologists in the province, which sets professional standards, keeps a register of licensed practitioners and can revoke licenses. Taken over by Red Guards in the twenty first century, the college has issued a series of proclamations which have cancelled the cherished Canadian right to speak the truth and constructed a barbed wire fence around the profession of psychology, behind which people of conscience, holding aloft candles of freedom, are persecuted and targeted for control. Listen to the proclamations of the college and hear the abolition of reason, science and professional development in Canada. Peterson's crime was to reject the religion of transgenderism championed by a fifty year old Marxist dragon breathing the fires of gender, race and class politics, inspired by its master Marx's original founding fire of the proletariat. Marx slammed the door on the Enlightenment, with its doctrines of human essentialism, universalism and individual rights, and opened the door to tribalism, with its doctrines of mysticism and collectivism, and in the 1960s, new logical offshoots of Marxism walked through the door. Race Marxists promoting black power walked through, as did gender Marxists promoting feminist hatred of males, as did gays, lesbians, and radical environmentalists condemning material progress and promoting an antiindustrial revolution. The twenty first century has seen another logical offshoot of Marxism. This is the religion of transgenderism. Rejecting the existence of genes, DNA and sex chromosomes, transgenderism proclaims that gender can be changed by human action or belief, that males can transform themselves into females, females can transform themselves into males, and people who pretend to be members of the opposite sex are in fact members of that sex and are entitled to be treated under the law as members of that sex. Now listen to the proclamations of the college, together with those of its fellow Red Guards in a transgender advocacy organization called Egale Canada, and hear the death knell toll for civilization in a storied land once dedicated to the values of "peace, order and good government." Commanded by a twenty first century Red Guard, the Canadian establishment proclaims that a progressive society forces psychologists who challenge transgenderism to attend social media training sessions to rectify their politically incorrect viewpoints and make them stand up, confess and recant. It proclaims that a progressive society revokes the licenses of psychologists who refuse to attend such social media training sessions and refuse to stand up, confess the error of their ways and recant. It proclaims that a progressive society forces psychologists who challenge transgenderism to submit to a course in ideological reeducation, programming and indoctrination. It proclaims that a progressive society silences psychologists who refuse to address transgender psychotics with the pronouns of their choice. It proclaims that psychologists who challenge transgenderism treat innocent, healthy, wholesome transgender psychotics with contempt and lower their dignity, and thereby bring their profession into disrepute. It proclaims that psychologists who condemn transgenderist ideologues as fanatics, bigots and dogmatists must be forced to submit to training on how to be a polished, practiced, professional promoter of the people's party line. It proclaims that a progressive society outlaws freedom of speech and forces practitioners of trades and professions to promote the transgenderist orthodoxy. It proclaims that psychologists who challenge transgenderism are guilty of discrimination, hate speech, making false claims and placing transgender psychotics in harm's way. It proclaims that courses of surgery and drug treatment to give transgender psychotics the appearance of being members of the opposite sex are courses of gender affirming health care and are constitutional rights. It proclaims that in a progressive society there is no freedom of speech or expression to promote views the state and government bureaucracy judge to be controversial and inimical to Marxist culture. It proclaims that in a progressive society, civil liberties and the right to practice a trade or profession, and the right to breathe and exist, extend to Marxists and to Marxists alone: "Polarizing psychologist Jordan Peterson now says he will attend the social media training he was ordered to undergo by his professional body after Canada's top court refused to hear his appeal, according to his lawyer. In 2022, the governing body for Ontario's psychologists told Peterson—who has gained international fame with his views on women, masculinity and gender identity—to undergo a social media training program or risk losing his licence to practise. The College of Psychologists of Ontario said some of his social media posts may be 'degrading,' raise questions about his abilities as a psychologist and risk bringing the profession into disrepute. Peterson—who has been a registered member of the College of Psychologists of Ontario since 1999 but stopped seeing patients in 2017—said his statements were not made in his capacity as a clinical psychologist. In one of the social media posts in question, Peterson refers to a then city councillor who uses they/them pronouns as an 'appalling, self righteous, moralizing thing.' The college's complaints committee noted that during an appearance on The Joe Rogan Experience podcast, Peterson identified himself as a clinical psychologist before demeaning a former client. Last summer, an Ontario court ruled against Peterson and upheld the regulatory body's order for him to undergo training on professionalism in public statements. That decision was affirmed by a panel of three judges with the Ontario Court of Appeal earlier this year. As usual, the Supreme Court of Canada did not explain why it won't hear Peterson's case. It was dismissed with costs. Peterson's lawyer, Howard Levitt, called the decision 'a tragic day for Canada. It seems ironic, even tragic, that he, one of the most adept persons in social media in this country and beyond, is going to attend 'reeducation' from people inherently less skilled and knowledgeable than he is himself,' Levitt wrote in an email to CBC News. 'The decision is a tragedy for freedom of speech in this country.' Levitt, an employment lawyer, said the decision will have a 'chilling' impact on Canadians who are members of regulated trades and professions. 'They now have to concern themselves with political and other enemies making complaints to their regulatory bodies over their political comments, with the risk of their ability to practice their trade. Most simply will avoid debate entirely,' he wrote. Peterson posted on the social media platform X that he's 'bereft of options on the legal front in Canada. This is a hill that's worth not so much dying on as retaking and now boys and girls the gloves are off,' he wrote. Egale Canada, which had intervenor status in the case, celebrated Thursday's Supreme Court decision. It said 2SLGBTQ+ communities can face discrimination in accessing health care. 'This is why a clinical psychologist making transphobic, discriminatory and false claims is particularly harmful and directly interferes with trans people's safety and autonomy,' said the national advocacy group's legal director, Bennett Jensen, in a media statement." (Jordan Peterson Agrees To Social Media Coaching After Supreme Court Declines Free Speech Case by Catharine Tunney). Joseph-Francois Foullon de Doue had an ignominious distinction in history. The Comptroller General of Finances under Louis XVI, he was the first recorded person to have been lynched by a mob from a lamp post. He was killed after the storming of the Bastille on July 14, 1789, and his lifeless form dangling over a Parisian square presaged the Reign of Terror which would engulf the nation. In the twenty first century, a reign of terror has swept through Canada, brought by mobs wearing Marxist shirts. Fueled by the spirit of the times, they have lynched truth from the lamp posts of political correctness.

PHILOSOPHIES OF ANTISCIENCE

In oceanography, an undertow is the undercurrent which moves offshore while visible waves move toward the shore. It is a current moving toward the sea whose direction is opposed to the prevailing inflowing current. Since the dawn of the twentieth century, the voices of reason have been like undertows and swimmers against the current, challenging the prevailing orthodoxy that knowledge is impossible and seeking to return to the values of the Enlightenment, and they have been silenced and buried beneath an ocean of academic nonexistence. For over a century, the voices of cultural degeneration have brought to a culmination the philosophies of subjectivism preached beginning with Descartes, and have conducted a frontal assault on the institution of science. At the dawn of the twentieth century, a train loaded with dangerous freight, travelling for five centuries toward a destination marked the abolition of science, began accelerating at lightning speed. It carried on board Cartesian philosophy proclaiming universal doubt and the "prior certainty of consciousness" and certainty about nothing else, and it carried on board Kantian philosophy proclaiming that the perception of physical objects is a universal delusion produced by the veils and screens of space and time. In the twenty first century, it has reached the end of the line and completed its work of destruction. The twisted wreckage of science blackens the cultural landscape during the twilight stages of civilization and has put an end to the most glorious discipline invented by man, the systematic discipline which creates knowledge by induction from the data of experience, by observation and experiment, and put an end to it for all time to come. Listen to the voices of destruction and hear the rejection of the sane person's creed of empiricism, accepted in the Enlightenment and in Classical culture, and hear a plunge into raging insanity. The Cartesian-Kantian train wreck has issued a series of proclamations which have riveted the coffin of science. These proclamations are a direct assault against the method of empiricism and the certainty derived therefrom. The method is championed by Aristotle: "induction is the advance from particulars to a universal." (Topics). It is championed by Francis Bacon: "I mean to open up and lay down a new and certain pathway from the perceptions of the senses themselves to the mind." (Novum Organum). Now listen to empiricism's enemies in control of the scientific establishment in the twenty first century. They proclaim that the questions, concepts and practices of science do not come from experience but form apriori paradigms produced by cultures and epochs. They proclaim that there is no such thing as progress in science but only arbitrary changes in paradigms. They proclaim that reality does not exist independently of the mind and is not physical in character, but is created by paradigms. They proclaim that experience is not the experience of anything outside the mind; it is not the experience of physical objects; but is created by paradigms. They proclaim that observations, measurements and laboratory experiments are not determined by physical reality but are determined by paradigms. They proclaim that scientists using different paradigms inhabit different realities and cannot communicate with each other using a common language: "The operations and measurements that a scientist undertakes in the laboratory are not the given of experience but rather the collected with difficulty. They are not what the scientist sees—at least not before his research is well advanced and his attention focused. Rather, they are concrete indices to the content of more elementary perceptions, and as such they are selected for the close scrutiny of normal research only because they promise opportunity for the fruitful elaboration of an accepted paradigm. Far more clearly than the immediate experience from which they in part derive, operations and measurements are paradigm determined. Science does not deal in all possible laboratory manipulations. Instead, it selects those relevant to the juxtaposition of a paradigm with the immediate experience that that paradigm has partially determined. As a result, scientists with different paradigms engage in different concrete laboratory manipulations.' (The Structure Of Scientific Revolutions by Thomas Kuhn). The scientific establishment proclaims that we can never know with certainty whether we perceive physical objects. It proclaims that the belief that we perceive physical objects is a groundless assumption and is unprovable, and has no greater truth or validity than the doctrine of solipsism, and is at best only pragmatically superior and more advantageous than solipsism: "As an individual we cannot know that the sensory information we perceive is generated artificially or originates from a real world. Any belief that it arises from a real world outside us is actually an assumption. It seems more beneficial to assume that an objective reality exists than to live with solipsism, and so people are quite happy to make this assumption. In fact we made this assumption unconsciously when we began to learn about the world as infants. The world outside ourselves appears to respond in ways which are consistent with it being real." (joanv.me/atheism/objectivism.php). The scientific establishment proclaims that reality is inherently chaotic and contingent, and the method of induction can never produce any state of knowledge or certainty. It proclaims that there is no way to infer universal statements from particular statements. It proclaims that empiricism is a problematic doctrine because no scientific statements can be held to be true: "According to a widely accepted view—to be opposed in this book—the empirical sciences can be characterized by the fact that they use inductive methods, as they are called. According to this view, the logic of scientific discovery would be identical with inductive logic, ie with the logical analysis of these inductive methods. It is usual to call an inference inductive if it passes from singular statements (sometimes also called particular statements), such as accounts of the results of observations or experiments, to universal statements, such as hypotheses or theories. Now it is far from obvious, from a logical point of view, that we are justified in inferring universal statements from singular ones, no matter how numerous; for any conclusion drawn in this way may always turn out to be false: no matter how many instances of white swans we may have observed, this does not justify the conclusion that all swans are white. The question whether inductive inferences are justified, or under what conditions, is known as the problem of induction." (The Logic Of Scientific Discovery by Karl Popper). The scientific establishment proclaims that scientific facts and theories are not derived from experience but are determined by the mind. It proclaims that there is no such thing as a scientific statement or theory being refuted by experience and any statement or theory whatever can be made to be true by suitable changes in language: "The totality of our so-called knowledge or beliefs, from the most casual matters of geography and history to the profoundest laws of atomic physics or even of pure mathematics and logic, is a manmade fabric which impinges on experience only along the edges. Or, to change the figure, total science is like a field of force whose boundary conditions are experience. A conflict with experience at the periphery occasions readjustments in the interior of the field. Truth values have to be redistributed over some of our statements. Reevaluation of some statements entails reevaluation of others, because of their logical interconnections—the logical laws being in turn simply certain further statements of the system, certain further elements of the field. Having reevaluated one statement we must reevaluate some others, whether they be statements logically connected with the first or whether they be the statements of logical connections themselves. But the total field is so undetermined by its boundary conditions, experience, that there is much latitude of choice as to what statements to reevaluate in the light of any single contrary experience. No particular experiences are linked with any particular statements in the interior of the field, except indirectly through considerations of equilibrium affecting the field as a whole." (Two Dogmas Of Empiricism by W. V. O. Quine). The scientific establishment proclaims that true science is not governed by any empirical prescriptions or standards and the demand for such is authoritarian, antiliberty, spiritually disfiguring, and opposed to human nature and the advancement of human welfare. It proclaims that true science entails the abolition of rationality and the descent into the raging, feverish, malarial waters of mysticism, witch doctory and supernaturalism: "The world which we want to explore is a largely unknown entity. We must, therefore, keep our options open and we must not restrict ourselves in advance. Epistemological prescriptions may look splendid when compared with other epistemological prescriptions, or with general principles—but who can guarantee that they are the best way to discover, not just a few isolated facts, but also some deep lying secrets of nature? A scientific education cannot be reconciled with a humanitarian attitude. It is in conflict 'with the cultivation of individuality which alone produces, or can produce, well developed human beings' (On Liberty by John Stuart Mill); it 'maims by compression, like a Chinese lady's foot, every part of human nature which stands out prominently, and tends to make a person markedly different in outline' (On Liberty by John Stuart Mill) from the ideals of rationality that happen to be fashionable in science, or in the philosophy of science. The attempt to increase liberty, to lead a full and rewarding life, and the corresponding attempt to discover the secrets of nature and of man, entails, therefore, the rejection of all universal standards and of all rigid traditions. Naturally, it also entails the rejection of a large part of contemporary science." (Against Method by Paul Feyerabend). The twenty first century has unlocked a door to the realm of madness. Floating through spaces of civilizational decline, this unlocked door reveals a world in which clocks race backward, truth and falsehood have been inverted, and societies have been turned upside down. It is a world of reversion to magic, sorcery and bloody savagery. It is a world which predates the advent of science by ten thousand years and rational man walked the Earth as a promise and potentiality, not yet actual.

COMMISSAR RUNS FOR PRESIDENT

The management of certain branches of state life is entrusted to commissions, whose composition should ensure the implementation of the program proclaimed by the Soviet Congress, in close union with the mass organizations of workers, sailors, soldiers, peasants and employees. Government power is vested in the collegium of the chairmen of these commissions, that is, in the Council of People's Commissars. Thus spoke the Decree On The Establishment Of The Council Of People's Commissars, adopted by the Congress of Soviets on November 9, 1917. The Soviet commissar. Soviet minister, administrator, organ, voice and wielder of communist power in specified sectors of the state and economy. In 1946, the title commissar was abolished and replaced by the title minister but the original name lived on the hearts of the people throughout the Soviet world who looked back on it with fond memories and warm sentimentality, and it continued to capture the imagination of communists throughout the West. In the twenty first century, in the nation which led the free world in the struggle against communism, this dark, storied title has come back to life and returned to power in the highest offices in the land. In the United States of America, it occupies the offices of the president and vice president, and it is currently running for president in the 2024 election under the Democrat Party. Communism is a cancer which invades every sector of society and every economic class, gathers princes and paupers on its side, is bankrolled by billionaires, fells nations high and low, and is supported by the masses in the greatest, freest societies, during the twilight stages of civilization. Three decades after the fall of the Soviet Union, the commissar is back promoting communism, promoting it on the American presidential campaign trail, promoting it in the figure of Kamala Harris. Look at the past political record and current campaign platform of Commissar Harris and see a nation disgraced by a populism which has shredded the system of sound government and constitutional freedoms which had made America the envy of the world and a light unto nations. See the passage of the American Rescue Plan and the Inflation Reduction Act which placed trillions of dollars of government spending into circulation and led to massive, across the board price increases. See price increases skyrocket into double digits and produce the nation's worst inflation rate in four decades. See the Soviet style advocacy of government price controls on grocery stores and food companies. See the Soviet style advocacy of government housing subsidies. See the raging fires of inflation fed by the petrol bombs of Soviet style government stimulus policies. See the Soviet style condemnation of corporate profits as price gouging against the public. See the Soviet style condemnation of corporate profits as the product of an intense desire for personal gain at the expense of the welfare of the proletariat, the true creators of wealth. See the Soviet style advocacy of price controls on food producers by federal bureaucrats. See the Soviet style advocacy of price controls on food by federal government orders. See the Soviet style advocacy of price caps on food by federal government enforcers. See the Soviet style condemnation of corporate profits as by definition excessive profits. See the advocacy of Soviet style standards of measurement of what constitutes fair corporate profits and see the judgment that no corporate profits constitute fair profits. See the Soviet style advocacy of price controls on food, which will lead to massive primary supply shortages, massive factory production cutbacks, and excessive purchases in retail stores. See the Soviet style advocacy of top down planning of food prices, which will lead to ranchers halting cattle shipments, farmers killing livestock and destroying crops, and consumers hoarding goods. See the Soviet style advocacy of a command economy. See a battle waged to take the economy to the heights of Soviet style totalitarian control. See the Soviet style advocacy of government aid to home buyers in the name "home affordability," which will lead to surges in housing prices and surges in the federal deficit. See the advocacy of Soviet style government welfare to home buyers in the amount of 25,000 dollars for down payment assistance.

See the Soviet style advocacy of government largesse to high risk, irresponsible borrowers for homes, which will lead to mass mortgage defaults and mass foreclosures by banks. See the Soviet style advocacy of home ownership as a human right to be subsidized by taxpayers. See the Soviet style advocacy of government bail outs to people cannot pay their home mortgages. See the Soviet style advocacy subsidies to millions of illegal aliens so they can buy their own homes. See the Soviet style advocacy of a regime to give millions of illegal aliens free education, free health care, free old age pension and free citizenship. See the Soviet style advocacy of a regime to police private sector food profit margins and reduce them to zero. See the Soviet style advocacy of a regime of price controls on rent and pharmaceuticals. See the Soviet style advocacy of a regime of distortions of the market, the abolition of the mechanism of supply and demand in the determination of prices, and the extinguishment of America's world historical torch of freedom: " 'Costs are still too high and on a deeper level, for too many people, no matter how much they work, it feels so hard to just be able to get ahead,' Vice President Kamala Harris said during her presidential campaign rally speech in North Carolina on August 16th. 'Like the cost of food.' Kamala Harris compared, by way of example, prepandemic prices for bread and ground beef (when Donald Trump was president) with the prices today on the Biden-Harris administration's watch. 'A loaf of bread costs 50% more today than it did before the pandemic' she noted. 'Ground beef is up almost 50%.' Former President Donald Trump could not have done a better job himself in describing the failure of the Biden-Harris administration's economic policies. But Vice President Harris is now speaking as if she were not part of the administration that has overseen the highest increases in prices in four decades. Harris declared that she will start working to bring down prices on the first day of her presidency if she is elected. Kamala Harris has had three and a half years to start working on bringing down prices while serving as vice president and bragging that she has been 'the last person in the room' when President Biden makes policy decisions. But she spent her time making matters worse by casting the tie breaking votes in the Senate on the two pieces of legislation that fueled the historic inflation—the American Rescue Plan Act and the misnamed Inflation Reduction Act. Now that Kamala Harris is running for president herself, she is proposing socialist style gimmicks to 'fix' the inflation problem she helped to create. Kamala Harris's 'cures' for supposedly bringing down costs for the middle class are top down government price controls and massive spending on new government housing subsidies. Harris's 'cures' will only result in another huge inflation spike if implemented. They are the equivalent of trying to put out a fire by pouring more gasoline on it. Harris proposed a federal ban on 'price gouging' by so-called 'greedy' food companies and groceries, which would impose price controls on companies that in fact are barely making a profit as it is. Groceries' average profit margin is 1-3%, hardly enough for anyone with a modicum of common sense to consider as evidence of price gouging. Nevertheless, Kamala Harris wants federal bureaucrats to decide if the prices that groceries and their food suppliers want to charge for their products are too high and must be blocked by government fiat. The bureaucrats would be free to use vaguely defined subjective metrics to determine what they believe constitutes an 'excessive' profit. Kamala Harris's proposal does not even pass the smell test for liberal economists. For example, Jason Furman, the former deputy director of the National Economic Council under former President Barack Obama and certainly no friend of Donald Trump, warned: 'You'll end up with bigger shortages, less supply and ultimately risk higher prices and worse outcomes for consumers if you try to enforce this in a real way, which I don't know if they would or wouldn't do.

COMMISSAR RUNS FOR PRESIDENT

The management of certain branches of state life is entrusted to commissions, whose composition should ensure the implementation of the program proclaimed by the Soviet Congress, in close union with the mass organizations of workers, sailors, soldiers, peasants and employees. Government power is vested in the collegium of the chairmen of these commissions, that is, in the Council of

People's Commissars. Thus spoke the Decree On The Establishment Of The Council Of People's Commissars, adopted by the Congress of Soviets on November 9, 1917. The Soviet commissar. Soviet minister, administrator, organ, voice and wielder of communist power in specified sectors of the state and economy. In 1946, the title commissar was abolished and replaced by the title minister but the original name lived on the hearts of the people throughout the Soviet world who looked back on it with fond memories and warm sentimentality, and it continued to capture the imagination of communists throughout the West. In the twenty first century, in the nation which led the free world in the struggle against communism, this dark, storied title has come back to life and returned to power in the highest offices in the land. In the United States of America, it occupies the offices of the president and vice president, and it is currently running for president in the 2024 election under the Democrat Party. Communism is a cancer which invades every sector of society and every economic class, gathers princes and paupers on its side, is bankrolled by billionaires, fells nations high and low, and is supported by the masses in the greatest, freest societies, during the twilight stages of civilization. Three decades after the fall of the Soviet Union, the commissar is back promoting communism, promoting it on the American presidential campaign trail, promoting it in the figure of Kamala Harris. Look at the past political record and current campaign platform of Commissar Harris and see a nation disgraced by a populism which has shredded the system of sound government and constitutional freedoms which had made America the envy of the world and a light unto nations. See the passage of the American Rescue Plan and the Inflation Reduction Act which placed trillions of dollars of government spending into circulation and led to massive, across the board price increases. See price increases skyrocket into double digits and produce the nation's worst inflation rate in four decades. See the Soviet style advocacy of government price controls on grocery stores and food companies. See the Soviet style advocacy of government housing subsidies. See the raging fires of inflation fed by the petrol bombs of Soviet style government stimulus policies. See the Soviet style condemnation of corporate profits as price gouging against the public. See the Soviet style condemnation of corporate profits as the product of an intense desire for personal gain at the expense of the welfare of the proletariat, the true creators of wealth. See the Soviet style advocacy of price controls on food producers by federal bureaucrats. See the Soviet style advocacy of price controls on food by federal government orders. See the Soviet style advocacy of price caps on food by federal government enforcers. See the Soviet style condemnation of corporate profits as by definition excessive profits. See the advocacy of Soviet style standards of measurement of what constitutes fair corporate profits and see the judgment that no corporate profits constitute fair profits. See the Soviet style advocacy of price controls on food, which will lead to massive primary supply shortages, massive factory production cutbacks, and excessive purchases in retail stores. See the Soviet style advocacy of top down planning of food prices, which will lead to ranchers halting cattle shipments, farmers killing livestock and destroying crops, and consumers hoarding goods. See the Soviet style advocacy of a command economy. See a battle waged to take the economy to the heights of Soviet style totalitarian control. See the Soviet style advocacy of government aid to home buyers in the name "home affordability," which will lead to surges in housing prices and surges in the federal deficit. See the advocacy of Soviet style government welfare to home buyers in the amount of 25,000 dollars for down payment assistance. See the Soviet style advocacy of government largesse to high risk, irresponsible borrowers for homes, which will lead to mass mortgage defaults and mass foreclosures by banks. See the Soviet style advocacy of home ownership as a human right to be subsidized by taxpayers. See the Soviet style advocacy of government bail outs to people cannot pay their home mortgages. See the Soviet style advocacy subsidies to millions of illegal aliens so they can buy their own homes. See the Soviet style advocacy of a regime to give millions of illegal aliens free education, free health care, free old age pension and free citizenship. See the Soviet style advocacy of a regime to police private sector food profit margins and reduce them to zero. See the Soviet style advocacy of a regime of price controls on rent and pharmaceuticals. See the Soviet style advocacy of a regime of distortions of the market, the abolition of the mechanism of supply and demand in the determination of prices, and the extinguishment of America's world historical torch of freedom: " 'Costs are still too high and on a deeper level, for too many people, no matter how much they work, it feels so hard to just be able to get ahead,' Vice President Kamala Harris said during her presidential campaign rally speech in North Carolina on August 16th. 'Like the cost of food.' Kamala Harris compared, by way of example, prepandemic prices for bread and ground beef (when Donald Trump was president) with the prices today on the Biden-Harris administration's watch. 'A loaf of bread costs 50% more today than it did before the pandemic' she noted. 'Ground beef is up almost 50%.' Former President Donald Trump could not have done a better job himself in describing the failure of the Biden-Harris administration's economic policies. But Vice President Harris is now speaking as if she were not part of the administration that has overseen the highest increases in prices in four decades. Harris declared that she will start working to bring down prices on the first day of her presidency if she is elected. Kamala Harris has had three and a half years to start working on bringing down prices while serving as vice president and bragging that she has been 'the last person in the room' when President Biden makes policy decisions. But she spent her time making matters worse by casting the tie breaking votes in the Senate on the two pieces of legislation that fueled the historic inflation—the American Rescue Plan Act and the misnamed Inflation Reduction Act. Now that Kamala Harris is running for president herself, she is proposing socialist style gimmicks to 'fix' the inflation problem she helped to create. Kamala Harris's 'cures' for supposedly bringing down costs for the middle class are top down government price controls and massive spending on new government housing subsidies. Harris's 'cures' will only result in another huge inflation spike if implemented. They are the equivalent of trying to put out a fire by pouring more gasoline on it. Harris proposed a federal ban on 'price gouging' by so-called 'greedy' food companies and groceries, which would impose price controls on companies that in fact are barely making a profit as it is. Groceries' average profit margin is 1-3%, hardly enough for anyone with a modicum of common sense to consider as evidence of price gouging. Nevertheless, Kamala Harris wants federal bureaucrats to decide if the prices that groceries and their food suppliers want to charge for their products are too high and must be blocked by government fiat. The bureaucrats would be free to use vaguely defined subjective metrics to determine what they believe constitutes an 'excessive' profit. Kamala Harris's proposal does not even pass the smell test for liberal economists. For example, Jason Furman, the former deputy director of the National Economic Council under former President Barack Obama and certainly no friend of Donald Trump, warned: 'You'll end up with bigger shortages, less supply and ultimately risk higher prices and worse outcomes for consumers if you try to enforce this in a real way, which I don't know if they would or wouldn't do.' Such price controls, when tried in the past, have led to disastrous distortions in the economy that caused substantial pain for the average consumer. Producers cut back drastically on production to avoid losses at the capped prices set by the government. When the price controls were temporarily eased to give producers more breathing room, the pent up demand burst open and pushed prices considerably higher as available supplies of products were not nearly enough to meet the soaring demand. 'We've seen this kind of thing tried in lots of other countries before; Venezuela, Argentina, the Soviet Union, et cetera,' a liberal economic commentator for the Washington Post and CNN, Catherine Rampell, observed. It is 'totally unworkable.' When former President Richard Nixon tried price controls in this country more than five decades ago, the result was an utter disaster. 'Ranchers stopped shipping their cattle to the market, farmers drowned their chickens, and consumers emptied the shelves of supermarkets,' explained Daniel Yergin and Joseph Stanislaw, authors of the book entitled The Commanding Heights: The Battle For The World Economy. (Kamala's Snake Oil To 'Cure' Biden-Harris Inflation by Joseph Klein)." During the Winter War between the Soviet Union and Finland in 1939-1940, in which the Soviets invaded Finland, were defeated by the Finns and were expelled from the League of Nations for their act of aggression, a proverb arose in Finland which gained global currency. It ran as follows: Communists are worse than fascists because communists shoot you in the back. Resurrecting the ghosts of the past in the nightmare which was communism, Kamala Harris has betrayed the ideals of her nation and given aid and comfort to history's greatest enemies of freedom.

WESTERN JURISPRUDENCE ATTACKS MAN

A gavel is a ceremonial mallet used in the chambers of law. It is used to call for attention, to punctuate rulings and to symbolise official authority. In the chambers of law, a philosopher's gavel has sounded, asked a question and provided an answer. The question is: what is law, and what should law be? This is the question posed by jurisprudence, the philosophy of law, and the answer is what common sense has known since time immemorial. The answer is that a legal system should reflect an objective moral order, and a legal system which does not do this is illegitimate. The answer was expressed by a maxim common in ancient Rome, a maxim which ruled its legal system for centuries until the ascendancy of statism, and emperor worship and Christian God worship in the twilight stages of Classical civilization. The maxim runs as follows: an unjust law is no law at all. This maxim was expressed in ancient Greece by Socrates, Plato and Aristotle, who affirmed that the state's law should reflect an order of natural justice and natural right external to the state's law. Aristotle in his Rhetoric affirms the existence of a natural, universal foundation of the state's law in the absence of which the state's law is law in name only: "Aside from the particular laws that each people has set up for itself, there is a common law that is according to nature." (Rhetoric). This common, natural law which should provide the foundation of the state's law is based on the definition of man as a rational animal. Because man is a rational animal, his proper flourishing consists in a life guided by reason as opposed to passion, and individuals who refuse to pursue such a life are not entitled to enjoy freedom. The purpose and justification of freedom, the rights to life, liberty and property, is to enable the individual to realize the definition of man and to flourish rationally, and freedom has no other purpose or justification, and the state is justified in depriving individuals of their freedom who have misused it. This doctrine that the state's law should be based on natural law, rational flourishing and the definition of man was the accepted doctrine in Classical civilization before the onset of its decline and fall in ancient Rome, but has not been accepted in the West, and has been under attack for centuries. The dominant jurisprudence in the West is that law is founded on society and is a command issued by society to serve its needs and interests. This social view of law and morality has been expressed under a variety of names, which one and all spell out the same rejection of moral objectivism and the definition of man as a rational animal. Listen to John Austin, venerated as the Father of Jurisprudence in the West and the founder of the school of legal positivism. He proclaims that law is positive law, a command issued by superiors to subjects, a rule established by the state for the political guidance of its citizens. He proclaims that the state's law has no relation to anything outside it, such as natural law or universal morality. He proclaims that law is the power of nations, states and governments and has no foundation in justice. He proclaims that there are many criteria for judging what constitutes good law and bad law, no one of which can be held to be more valid or more correct than any other, and all of which are completely arbitrary. A good law can be defined as that which comes from God or divine revelation, or as that which is useful to society, or as that which agrees with one's own inexplicable feelings or intuitions, but on no account can a good ever be defined as that which reflects the facts of man's nature and his definition as a rational animal, and as that which enforces the morality of rational flourishing: "The matter of jurisprudence is positive law: law, simply and strictly so-called, or law set by political superiors to political inferiors. A law, in the most general and comprehensive acceptance in which the term, in its literal meaning, is employed, may be said to be a rule laid down for the guidance of an intelligent being by an intelligent being having power over him. Of the laws or rules set by men to men, some are established by political superiors, sovereign and subject: by persons exercising supreme and subordinate government, in independent nations, or independent political societies. The aggregate of the rules thus established, or some aggregate forming a portion of that aggregate, is the appropriate matter of jurisprudence. To the aggregate of the rules thus established, or to some aggregate forming a portion of that aggregate, the term law, as used simply and strictly, is exclusively applied. But, as contradistinguished to natural law, or to the law of nature (meaning by those expressions the law of God), the aggregate of the rules, established by political superiors, is frequently styled positive law, or law existing by position. As contradistinguished to the rules which I style positive morality, and on which I shall touch immediately, the aggregate of the rules, established by political superiors, may also be marked commodiously with the name of positive law. For the sake, then, of getting a name brief and distinctive at once, and agreeably to frequent usage, I style that aggregate of rules, or any portion of that aggregate, positive law. Every law or rule (taken with the largest signification which can be given to the term properly) is a command. By every command, the party to whom it is directed is obliged to do or to forbear. Now where it obliges generally to acts or forbearances of a class, a command is a law or rule. When we say that a human law is good or bad, or is worthy of praise or blame, or is what it should be or what it should not be, or is what it ought to be or what it ought not to be, we mean (unless we intimate our mere liking or aversion) this: namely, that the law agrees with or differs from a something to which we tacitly refer it as to a measure or test. For example, a human law is good or bad as it agrees or does not agree with the law of God: that is to say, with the law of God as indicated by the principle of utility, or with the law of God as indicated by the moral sense. To the adherent of the theory of utility, a human law is good if it be generally useful, and a human law is bad if it be generally pernicious. For, in his opinion, it is consonant or not with the law of God inasmuch as it is consonant or not with the principle of general utility. To the adherent of the hypothesis of a moral sense, a human law is good if he likes it he knows not why, and a human law is bad if he hates it he knows not wherefore. For, in his opinion, that his inexplicable feeling of liking or aversion shows that the human law pleases or offends the Deity. To the atheist, a human law is good if it be generally useful, and a human law is bad if it be generally pernicious. For the principle of general utility would serve as a measure or test, although it were not an index to an ulterior measure or test. But if he call the law a good one without believing it useful, or if he call a law a bad one without believing it pernicious, the atheist simply intimates his mere liking or aversion. For, unless it be thought an index to the law set by the Deity, an inexplicable feeling of approbation or disapprobation can hardly be considered a measure or test. And, in the opinion of the atheist, there is no law of God which his inexplicable feeling can point at. To the believer in a supposed revelation, a human law is good or bad as it agrees with or differs from the terms wherein the revelation is expressed. In short, the goodness or badness of a human law is a phrase of relative and varying import. A law which is good to one man is bad to another, in case they tacitly refer it to different and adverse tests." (The Province Of Jurisprudence Determined by John Austin). Listen to Oliver Wendell Holmes, a leading voice of the school of legal realism and the most influential Supreme Court justice in American history. He proclaims that law is public command, public force, public strength, and public decrees issued by something mightier than the individual, without relation to any principles of morality. He proclaims that law is that which is found in reports, treatises, statutes and constitutions and has no basis in moral ideas. He proclaims that law is state power and state penalties, duty is legal duty, and right is legal right, and no legal powers, penalties, duties or rights have any justification in natural law or in the nature of man as a rational animal: "When we study law we are not studying a mystery but a well known profession. We are studying what we shall want in order to appear before judges, or to advise people in such a way as to keep them out of court. The reason why it is a profession, why people will pay lawyers to argue for them or to advise them, is that in societies like ours the command of the public force is intrusted to the judges in certain cases, and the whole power of the state will be put forth, if necessary, to carry out their judgments and decrees. People want to know under what circumstances and how far they will run the risk of coming against what is so much stronger than themselves, and hence it becomes a business to find out when this danger is to be feared. The object of our study, then, is prediction, the prediction of the incidence of the public force through the instrumentality of the courts. The means of the study are a body of reports, of treatises, and of statutes, in this country and in England, extending back for six hundred years, and now increasing annually by hundreds. In these sibylline leaves are gathered the scattered prophecies of the past upon the cases in which the axe will fall. These are what properly have been called the oracles of the law. Far the most important and pretty nearly the whole meaning of every new effort of legal thought is to make these prophecies more precise, and to generalize them into a thoroughly connected system. The primary rights and duties with which jurisprudence busies itself again are nothing but prophecies. One of the many evil effects of the confusion between legal and moral ideas, about which I shall have something to say in a moment, is that theory is apt to get the cart before the horse, and to consider the right or the duty as something existing apart from and independent of the consequences of its breach, to which certain sanctions are added afterward." (The Paths Of The Law by Oliver Wendell Holmes). Western jurisprudence is the worship of social power and from its dark, dismal chambers, Classical jurisprudence, the philosophy which defines as law only those state decrees enforcing and rewarding rational flourishing, has been banished forever. The names given to this unbridled social leviathan which stalks the West vary in accordance with the particular school of jurisprudence, and include the majority, the community, the nation, the people, the proletariat, black Marxists and feminist Marxists, but the essence and theme have remained the same. It is the denial that man possesses a rational nature and a rational perfection. It is the denial that man is human.

HIGH COURT DECLARES FREEDOM UNCONSTITUTIONAL

A two front war is a military situation in which a nation has to defend itself on two geographically separate fronts. The forces of two nations simultaneously engage their common enemy in order to increase their chances of victory. The attacked nation is forced to divide its troops, defend an extended line, and is cut off from access to trade and external assistance. During the Peloponessian War in the fifth century BC, Athens sought to avoid a two front war against Corinth and Sparta, so it first defeated Corinth before moving on to its stronger rival, Sparta. In the twenty first century, in the world's former arsenal and citadel of freedom, two enemies of freedom, increasing in strength and power during the twilight stages of civilization, are two forces involved in a two front war staged against their common target, and have obliterated it. These enemies have achieved such strength and power in the United States of America that they sit on the nation's high court and control it. These enemies have declared war on freedom, the one in the name of God, and the other in the name of Society, and their target has been defeated in a dark, inglorious, two front war. The voices of two gods, one held to mystically exist in Heaven and the other held to mystically exist on Earth, have pushed the values of the Enlightenment into the dustbin of history and reduced the West to a killing field whose casualties are truth, sanity, science and the rights of man. Classical civilization, during its twilight stages in ancient Rome, was beset by these enemies and went under. It had its mystics of Heaven in the form of Christians, and its mystics of Society in the form of statism, mob rule, emperor worship, welfare entitlements and barbarism, and fighting a two front war, pagan reason, which ruled Classical civilization for a thousand years but had now grown unpopular with the masses, collapsed. Fifteen centuries after Classical civilization fought a two front war and was reduced to the rubble of defeat, the attacking forces have returned and assumed control over the West, and sit on the bench of the United States Supreme Court. In this two front war staged in the venue of the high court, the armies against freedom have adopted schools of jurisprudence as a vehicle for their agendas and a justification for their rulings. The socialists on the court seek to enforce the doctrines of their faith under the cover of a school of jurisprudence known as the living constitution, while the Christians on the court seek to enforce the doctrines of their faith under the cover of a school of jurisprudence known as originalism. Listen to the advocates of the living constitution and the advocates of originalism and hear the death knell toll for the rule of logic, language, law and the constitution of freedom, for the noble words of a nation's founding document composed by the Age of Enlightenment, in the United States of America. The Living Constitution. The advocates of the living constitution proclaim that a nation's constitution does not say what it says but can be changed to suit the changing needs and requirements of the mystical organism called society. They proclaim that words do not mean what they mean but meanings develop and evolve in accordance with social interests. They proclaim that a progressive, scientific society is a totalitarian iron heel which has deprived people of their freedom in the name of the laws of life: "Society is a living organism and must obey the laws of life, not of mechanics; it must develop. All that progressives ask or desire is permission--in an era when development, evolution, is the scientific word--to interpret the Constitution according to the Darwinian principle; all they ask is recognition of the fact that a nation is a living thing and not a machine." (New Freedom by Woodrow Wilson). The advocates of the living constitution proclaim that nations are mystical organisms which exist apart from and superior to the individuals who compose them. They proclaim that the words and text of a constitution are invisible and do not say what they say but can be endlessly rewritten by the mystical organism called the nation in accordance with social needs and interests: "With regard to that we may add that when we are dealing with words that also are a constituent act, like the Constitution of the United States, we must realize that they have called into life a being the development of which could not have been foreseen completely by the most gifted of its begetters. It was enough for them to realize or to hope that they had created an organism; it has taken a century and has cost their successors much sweat and blood to prove that they created a nation. The case before us must be considered in the light of our whole experience and not merely in that of what was said a hundred years ago. The treaty in question does not contravene any prohibitory words to be found in the Constitution. The only question is whether it is forbidden by some invisible radiation from the general terms of the Tenth Amendment. We must consider what this country has become in deciding what that amendment has reserved." (Missouri versus Holland, United States Supreme Court, 1920, Opinion of Oliver Wendell Holmes). The advocates of the living constitution proclaim that the state may ignore the meanings of words and abrogate constitutional rights and freedoms in the name of solving social problems and protecting people in volatile economic times: "In the early twentieth century, this Court regularly struck down economic regulation enacted by the peoples' representatives in both the States and the Federal Government. The Chief Justice's Commerce Clause opinion, and even more so the joint dissenters' reasoning, bear a disquieting resemblance to those long overruled decisions. Ultimately, the Court upholds the individual mandate as a proper exercise of Congress' power to tax and spend 'for the general Welfare of the United States.' I concur in that determination, which makes the Chief Justice's Commerce Clause essay all the more puzzling. Why should the Chief Justice strive so mightily to hem in Congress' capacity to meet the new problems arising constantly in our ever developing modern economy? I find no satisfying response to that question in his opinion." (National Federation of Independent Businesses versus Sebelius, United States Supreme Court, 2012, Opinion of Ruth Bader Ginsburg). Originalism. The advocates of originalism proclaim that in the interpretation of a constitution, a court must determine what the authors of the constitution were trying to achieve, what they were intending to accomplish, without regard to the actual text of the constitution. They proclaim that meaning of a constitution is determined by reference to the intent of its framers and not by reference to the actual meanings of the words in the text. They proclaim that the Constitution does not confer a right to abortion on the grounds that the word abortion is not mentioned in the Constitution and there was no intent to protect the right to obtain an abortion by the framers. They proclaim that the right to obtain an abortion is not part of the history or traditions of the nation and therefore does not exist, notwithstanding the fact that the right to liberty means the right to liberty: "The Constitution does not confer a right to abortion; Roe and Casey are overruled; and the authority to regulate abortion is returned to the people and their elected representatives. (a) The critical question is whether the Constitution, properly understood, confers a right to obtain an abortion. Casey's controlling opinion skipped over that question and reaffirmed Roe solely on the basis of stare decisis. A proper application of stare decisis, however, requires an assessment of the strength of the grounds on which Roe was based. The Court therefore turns to the question that the Casey plurality did not consider. First, the Court reviews the standard that the Court's cases have used to determine whether the Fourteenth Amendment's reference to liberty protects a particular right. The Constitution makes no express reference to a right to obtain an abortion, but several constitutional provisions have been offered as potential homes for an implicit constitutional right. Roe held that the abortion right is part of a right to privacy that springs from the First, Fourth, Fifth, Ninth, and Fourteenth Amendments. The Casey Court grounded its decision solely on the theory that the right to obtain an abortion is part of the liberty protected by the Fourteenth Amendment's Due Process Clause. Others have suggested that support can be found in the Fourteenth Amendment's Equal Protection Clause, but that theory is squarely foreclosed by the Court's precedents, which establish that a State's regulation of abortion is not a sex based classification and is thus not subject to the heightened scrutiny that applies to such classifications. Next, the Court examines whether the right to obtain an abortion is rooted in the Nation's history and tradition and whether it is an essential component of ordered liberty. The Court finds that the right to abortion is not deeply rooted in the Nation's history and tradition. The Court's decisions have held that the Due Process Clause protects two categories of substantive rights—those rights guaranteed by the first eight Amendments to the Constitution and those rights deemed fundamental that are not mentioned anywhere in the Constitution. In deciding whether a right falls into either of these categories, the question is whether the right is 'deeply rooted in our history and tradition' and whether it is essential to this Nation's 'scheme of ordered liberty.' The term liberty alone provides little guidance. Thus, historical inquiries are essential whenever the Court is asked to recognize a new component of the liberty interest protected by the Due Process Clause. In interpreting what is meant by liberty, the Court must guard against the natural human tendency to confuse what the Fourteenth Amendment protects with the Court's own ardent views about the liberty that Americans should enjoy. For this reason, the Court has been reluctant to recognize rights that are not mentioned in the Constitution." (Dobbs versus Jackson Women's Health Organization, United States Supreme Court, 2022, Opinion by Samuel Alito). In the twenty first century, the United States Supreme Court is devoid of light and air. It renders decisions in a moral vacuum and seeks to transform a nation consecrated to freedom into a hermetically sealed chamber of totalitarian repression. The advocates of socialism promote their agenda under the guise of the living constitution and proclaim that A does not mean A, the right to liberty does not mean the right to liberty, and the government has the right to force people to obtain health insurance on the grounds that the Constitution is an organic document which may deny the meaning of words in order to serve changing social needs and exigencies. The advocates of Christianity promote their agenda under the guise of originalism and proclaim that A does not mean A, the right to liberty does not mean the right to liberty, and the right to get an abortion is not a constitutional right because it was not part of the original meaning and intent of the framers of the Constitution. Seeking to promote a Christian agenda, the advocates of originalism proclaim that states have a right to violate the First Amendment and establish religion by defining actual human personhood to commence at the moment of conception with a supernatural infusion, and to define the destruction of the one cell zygote appearing at the moment of conception as an act of murder. Two schools of constitutional interpretation, two armies attacking, invading and ranged against freedom, two movements conducting a war on two fronts to shred the constitution. Freedom lost the war. Confronting two enemies together supported by the overwhelming majority of the American people, freedom never stood a chance.

AMERICA'S SALESMAN OF HATE

On the morning of September 4, 1957, at the Little Rock Central High School in Little Rock, Arkansas, Elizabeth Ann Eckford, fifteen years old, was followed and threatened by an angry white mob as she was trying to enter the school. She was part of the Little Rock Nine, a group of black students who in that year were the first black students ever to attend the school. Her ordeal was captured in a photograph which flashed across the world and cast a pall over all who saw it. This was a photograph of Eckford yelled out by hate and confronting it with grace. In the twenty first century in America, hatred has risen to the highest office in the land and been shouted out from the bully pulpit of the president of the United States. It is not the race hate which assailed Elizabeth Ann Eckford but a species of hate manufactured in the dark, satanic mills of Karl Marx. It is class hatred, the hatred born of envy by the have nots, the failures and the frustrated of the world toward those who have achieved more than they. It is the hatred of the producers toward the nonproducers, which gives rise to a desire in the latter to discredit and destroy the former. Pioneered by Marx, class hatred was the official religion of the nations of the former Communist Bloc and saw policies of class extermination the likes of which mankind had never seen before. It saw the mass murder of all those labelled the bourgeois by governments which justified their crimes in the name of the proletariat. Committed by the Soviet Union, by Maoist China and by the Khmer Rouge regime in Cambodia, committed from the 1920s through to the 1970s, these crimes of classcide claimed the lives of 100 million people and created the worst bloodbath, the worst holocaust and the worst genocide in the history of mankind. On January 20, 2009, class hatred was elected president of the United States and remained in office for the next eight years. It was elected the forty fourth president by a nation which had descended into a swampland of collectivism, a swampland which had buried all previous free societies throughout history during their twilight stages of decline. This swampland buried ancient Rome in the fourth century AD, in whose dying hours statism, socialism, mob rule, class wars and emperor worship consumed the masses. America made the plunge into collectivism at the dawn of the twentieth century and called its terrifying, new, unAmerican creed progressivism. The American people gave it other names as well. Peddled as a Square Deal, the National Interest, a New Deal, a Fair Deal, a New Frontier, a Great Society, Centrism, the Third Way, a Kinder, Gentler Nation, Compassionate Conservatism, Hope and Change, Yes, We Can! and Build Back Better, collectivism and class hatred have been the official religion of America for the past one hundred years. On July 13, 2012, at a campaign rally in Roanoke, Virginia, class hatred reared its ugly head as it had never been reared before, and the malarial virulence of the words expressed served as a thermometer of the white hot fever which had gripped the nation. The America which voted for Barack Obama and cheered on his words at Roanoke was not the America consecrated to freedom on the battlefields of Lexington and Concord two hundred years before, but was a blazing inferno of marsh gases emanating collectivism, communitarianism and class hatred. The America which gave Obama wild ovations at Roanoke was not the America which held aloft the torch of Anglo-Saxon liberty during its revolution, and not the America conceived during the Age of Enlightenment, but was an America which disgraced and betrayed the free soil on which it stood. Listen to the words and see an America rendered unrecognizable by the claw marks of mob rule. Obama proclaimed that wealthy, successful people did not create their wealth or success but society did, and they must give back all their wealth and success to society. He proclaimed that no person creates wealth or success by his own effort or initiative but wealth and success are created by the efforts and initiative of society. He proclaimed that wealth and success are not created by an individual's hard work but by the hard work of society. He proclaimed that wealth and success are social products created by society's intelligence, acumen and resources. He proclaimed that society is the thinker, the scientist, the inventor, the teacher, the bridge builder, the road digger and the street sweeper which creates all the wealth and success enjoyed by individuals. He proclaimed that individuals achieve wealth and success not by virtue of anything they themselves have done but by virtue of what society had done and the help society has given to them. He proclaimed that only the naive, the ignorant, the untutored and the prejudiced believe that wealth and success are created by the actions of individuals and not by the actions of society. He proclaimed that society is a mystical being which exists apart from and superior to the individuals who compose it. He proclaimed that this mystical being is the primary reality and unit of value. He proclaimed that no person in this world is ever on his own, no person is separate, independent or exists outside this mystical being, and all wealth which occurs does so by virtue of this being, and the individual is but an agent and instrument for the satisfaction of its needs. He proclaimed that it is this mystical being and not any individuals which gave the world the Internet, the Hoover Dam and the Golden Gate Bridge, and which walked on the moon, and progressive individuals are those who bow down in submission to this mystical being and obey all its laws and decrees: "There are a lot of wealthy, successful Americans who agree with me—because they want to give something back. They know they didn't—look, if you've been successful, you didn't get there on your own. You didn't get there on your own. I'm always struck by people who think, well, it must be because I was just so smart. There are a lot of smart people out there. It must be because I worked harder than everybody else. Let me tell you something—there are a whole bunch of hardworking people out there. If you were successful, somebody along the line gave you some help. There was a great teacher somewhere in your life. Somebody helped to create this unbelievable American system that we have that allowed you to thrive. Somebody invested in roads and bridges. If you've got a business—you didn't build that. Somebody else made that happen. The Internet didn't get invented on its own. Government research created the Internet so that all the companies could make money off the Internet. The point is, is that when we succeed, we succeed because of our individual initiative, but also because we do things together. There are some things, just like fighting fires, we don't do on our own. I mean, imagine if everybody had their own fire service. That would be a hard way to organize fighting fires. So we say to ourselves, ever since the founding of this country, you know what, there are some things we do better together. That's how we funded the GI Bill. That's how we created the middle class. That's how we built the Golden Gate Bridge or the Hoover Dam. That's how we invented the Internet. That's how we sent a man to the moon. We rise or fall together as one nation and as one people, and that's the reason I'm running for President—because I still believe in that idea. You're not on your own, we're in this together." The Roanoke hate rally held by Obama was an encore performance demanded by the mob delivered after his State of the Union Address on January 25, 2011. In this address, Obama proclaimed that in a progressive society, every person is his neighbor's keeper, guardian and slave, and no person has the right to be selfish and irresponsible and assert his freedom against the claims made by society. He proclaimed that a progressive society enforces a universal right to receive healthcare subsidized by the people. He proclaimed that a progressive society enforces the duty incumbent upon every person to obtain health insurance and through his insurance premiums to help subsidize the health care of others. He proclaimed that a progressive society enforces social responsibility and requires that every person do his part, contribute his share, renounce his freedom, become a sacrificial lamb, and feed the people's leviathan and monster called the Collective: "Now, even if we provide these affordable options, there may be those—particularly the young and healthy—who still want to take the risk and go without coverage. There may still be companies that refuse to do right by their workers. The problem is, such irresponsible behavior costs all the rest of us money. If there are affordable options and people still don't sign up for health insurance, it means we pay for those people's expensive emergency room visits. If some businesses don't provide workers health care, it forces the rest of us to pick up the tab when their workers get sick, and gives those businesses an unfair advantage over their competitors. And unless everybody does their part, many of the insurance reforms we seek—especially requiring insurance companies to cover pre-existing conditions—just can't be achieved. That's why under my plan, individuals will be required to carry basic health insurance—just as most states require you to carry auto insurance. Likewise, businesses will be required to either offer their workers health care, or chip in to help cover the cost of their workers. There will be a hardship waiver for those individuals who still cannot afford coverage, and 95% of all small businesses, because of their size and narrow profit margin, would be exempt from these requirements. But we cannot have large businesses and individuals who can afford coverage game the system by avoiding responsibility to themselves or their employees. Improving our health care system only works if everybody does their part. While there remain some significant details to be ironed out, I believe a broad consensus exists for the aspects of the plan I just outlined: consumer protections for those with insurance, an exchange that allows individuals and small businesses to purchase affordable coverage, and a requirement that people who can afford insurance get insurance." On January 30, 1939, Adolf Hitler gave a speech in the Kroll Opera House to members of the Reichstag on the sixth anniversary of his seizure of power. Heard by millions of Germans over the newly produced people's receivers, the speech is notorious for its overt racism and physical threats against the Jews. Hitler proclaimed: "If international finance Jewry inside and outside Europe should succeed in plunging the nations once more into a world war, the result will be not the Bolshevization of the earth and thereby the victory of Jewry, but the annihilation of the Jewish race in Europe." Less than a century after Hitler broadcast race hatred over the airwaves, the hate microphones have been switched on again, 8000 kilometers away in the nation which once led the fight of the free world against Hitler's Germany. They have been switched on by the mobs in control of the United States of America. In the new broadcasts, the names have changed but the story has remained the same. Adolf Hitler's broadcasts of race hatred have been replaced by Barack Obama's broadcasts of class hatred, in the continuing story of Marxist hate politics running rampant during the dying hours of the West.

RED VANDALS HIT EIFFEL TOWER

May 10, 1940. Germans attack France and defeat the French army. The French government flees from Paris and on May 14, Germans occupy the city. A pall spreads over the city like a cloth spread over a coffin. A curfew is imposed from 9 PM to 5 AM. At night, the city goes dark. Food, tobacco, coal and clothing are rationed. One million Parisians flee from the city and head for the provinces. Less than a century after Hitler's forces plunged the City of Light into shame, shortages and humiliation, his heirs and successors have staged another invasion and placed their victory sign on a global cultural icon of the nation and one of the most venerated and recognizable structures in the world. This structure was built as the centerpiece of the 1899 World's Fair and was used to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the French Revolution. Reaching three hundred and thirty meters into the sky, it is the tallest structure in Paris, and for forty one years, this towering symbol of human skill and ingenuity was the tallest man made structure in the world. On September 2, 2024, the new invaders placed their victory sign on the Eiffel Tower. The invasion commenced on July 26, 2024, at the opening ceremony of the Paris Summer Olympics. The peddlers of gender, race and class politics, an offshoot like Hitler's national socialism of master Marx's religion of the proletariat, paraded their creed on a boat along the Seine River, and signaled the destruction of Paris as a free city. The city was now under the control of a global movement dedicated to overthrowing the heritage of the Enlightenment to which France was a major contributor. Transforming the Olympic Games from a festival of sports into a festival of politics, the global movement of Marx's twenty first century family issued a series of proclamations which sounded the death knell of the world of the Enlightenment. The movement proclaimed that a progressive Olympics is a platform for gay and lesbian politics. It proclaimed that a progressive Olympics is a platform for the queer community. It proclaimed that a progressive Olympics is a platform for the promotion of transgenderism. According to this doctrine, genes, chromosomes and DNA do not exist and gender can be changed by human action or belief. Males can change into females and females can change into males through medical intervention or simple identification. A transgender female is as fully female as a biological female, and a transgender male is as fully male as a biological male. There are no such things as sex chromosomes and people who claim to be members of the opposite sex are in fact members of the opposite sex and are entitled to be treated as such under the law. The global movement of Marxism proclaimed that a progressive Olympics advocates full legal rights and recognition for people who pretend to be members of the opposite sex in the name of inclusion and nondiscrimination. It proclaimed that a progressive Olympics is not a series of sports competitions but is a message, a statement, a voice and a rifle of world revolution blasted out by dancers, drag artists and transgender degenerates: "When Charline Van Snick flirted with another female athlete after winning the bronze medal in Judo in the 2012 London Olympic Games, she said her coach told her she needed to stay in the closet for the future of her career. 'It was a moment when I didn't feel like myself,' the 33 year old retired Belgian Olympian said. 'He said, Charline, you have to fit in the box. Everyone is looking at you and you have to be straight. I understood that it's not a place to be yourself, it's not a place to be LGBTQ+.' While the Olympic Games have made giant strides in the years since—the Paris 2024 Olympics set a record for the most athletes who are openly LGBTQ+—advocates and athletes say international athletics have a long way to go in opening up to the queer community. There has been outcry from religious groups and others to Friday's opening ceremony that showcased DJ and producer Barbara Butch—an LGBTQ+ icon—flanked by drag artists and dancers in a scene that critics interpreted as mocking Leonardo da Vinci's The Last Supper. Parisian officials kept up their push for inclusion Monday night with the opening of the Olympic Pride House, located on a boat floating on the city's famous Seine River. French sports minister Amelie Oudea-Castera told The Associated Press that they were 'sending a message of inclusion' in these Games. 'It's important to Paris, to keep fighting against all types of discrimination,' Oudea-Castera said. 'We need to drive this progress in society and the reason I am here today is because sport is a very powerful agent to do that.' " (Paris Olympics Set Record For Number Of Openly LGBTQ+ Athletes, But Some Say Progress Isn't Finished by Megan Janetsky). The Paris branch of the global Marxist movement is led by the city's communist, socialist mayor, Anne Hidalgo. On September 2, 2024, Mayor Hidalgo decreed that the five Olympic rings hanging on the Eiffel Tower during the games would stay there indefinitely as a sign of the successful invasion of the city by the global Marxist movement. Mayor Hidalgo issued a series of proclamations which celebrated the transformation of a free city into a satellite of the movement. She proclaimed that a progressive society defaces monuments to freedom in the name of gays, lesbians and transgenders. She proclaimed that a progressive society hangs the five interlaced rings of the Olympic Games in its public squares to symbolize the victory of Marxism across the five continents of the Earth. She proclaimed that a progressive society has fallen in love with Marxism and stages festivals of revolutionary violence. She proclaimed that the Olympic rings on the Eiffel Tower add the banners of race, gender and sexual orientation politics to the monument and bring it up to date in the twenty first century. She proclaimed that a progressive society is a city of Marxist hellfire extinguishing the noonday light of freedom which lit up the Enlightenment skies. She proclaimed that a progressive society smashes cultural icons by hanging Marxist flags on them. She proclaimed that a progressive society defaces famous memorials by splashing Marxist colors on them. She proclaimed that a progressive society bans rental electric scooters, sports utility vehicles, automobiles in downtown streets, and nonpolitical, nonpartisan sporting events, and is an onrushing, everflowing, torrential river of radical politics which is unfit for human habitation: "Paris Mayor Anne Hidalgo has triggered a heated debate by saying she wants to keep the Olympic rings on the Eiffel Tower after the summer Games are over. 'The decision is up to me, and I have the agreement of the IOC [International Olympic Committee],' she told the Ouest-France newspaper over the weekend. 'So yes, they [the rings] will stay on the Eiffel Tower,' she added. Some Parisians backed the move, but others--including heritage campaigners--said it was a bad idea and would 'defile' the French capital's iconic monument. The five rings--29m wide, 15m high and weighing 30 tonnes--were installed on the Eiffel Tower before the Paris Olympics opened on 26 July, and were expected to be taken down after the Paralympics' closing ceremony on 8 September. But Ms Hidalgo said she wanted to keep the interlaced rings of blue, yellow, black, green and red, symbolising the five continents. She added that the current rings--each one measuring 9m in diameter--were too heavy and would be replaced by a lighter version at some point. The Socialist mayor also claimed that 'the French have fallen in love with Paris again' during the Games, and she wanted 'this festive spirit to remain'. Some Parisians as well as visitors to the French capital supported the mayor. 'The Eiffel Tower is very beautiful, the rings add color. It's very nice to see it like this,' a young woman, who identified herself as Solene, told the France Bleu website. But Manon, a local resident, said this was 'a really bad idea. It's a historic monument, why defile it with rings? It was good for the Olympics but now it's over, we can move on, maybe we should remove them and return the Eiffel Tower to how it was before,' he told France Bleu. Social media user Christophe Robin said Ms Hidalgo should have consulted Parisians before going ahead with her plan. The wrought iron lattice tower was initially heavily criticised by Parisian artists and intellectuals--but is now seen by many as the symbol of the City of Light. Ms Hidalgo, who has been running Paris since 2014, is known for her bold--and sometimes controversial--reforms. Under her tenure, many city streets, including the banks of the river Seine, have been pedestrianised. Last year, she won convincingly a city referendum to ban rental electric scooters. However, fewer than 8% of those eligible turned out to vote. In February, Ms Hidalgo was again victorious after Parisians approved a steep rise in parking rates for sports utility vehicles. But both drivers' groups and opposition figures attacked the scheme, saying the SUV classification was misleading as many family size cars would be affected. France's Environment Minister Christophe Béchu said at the time that the surcharge amounted to 'punitive environmentalism.' And just before the Paris Olympics, Ms Hidalgo and other officials went into the Seine to prove the river was safe to swim." (Row Over Plan To Keep Olympic Rings On Eiffel Tower by Jaroslav Lukiv). The 2024 Paris Olympics ignited a rolling thunder of rage in the vanishing communities of civilized people. Civilized people saw an exhibition of moral pollution float down the bacterial pollution of the River Seine and surpass it in virulence and lethality, and reeled back in horror. They saw an exhibition of transgender activists, Muslim terrorists, black, feminist and gay and lesbian tribalists, and the ignominious suicide and collapse of civilization: "The opening ceremonies of the Paris Olympics, which featured a transgender parody of the Last Supper while highlighting a controversial Muslim performer, have been branded as a national 'suicide' by a former French government cabinet member. While the Olympics were supposedly set to mark a political truce in France, which remains in limbo following President Emmanuel Macron's snap elections that left the country without an actual government, the deeply divided country saw rage and elation—depending on political affiliation—over the opening ceremonies of the 2024 Summer Olympics in Paris on Saturday evening." (France Committed National 'Suicide' With Woke Olympic Opening Ceremonies, Says ExCabinet Minister by Kurt Zindulka). On June 23, 1940, one of the darkest photographs in history was taken. It was taken in Paris at noon and at noon its subject took away light from the city. It was a picture of Adolf Hitler standing in front of the Eiffel Tower, less than a month after his forces had invaded the city, contemplating his victory over a free nation. Less than a century after the liberation of Paris, the invaders of freedom have returned to the city. They have new names, new faces, and a new creed fashioned in the factory of Marx which gave the world Hitler. They are the peddlers of gender, race and class politics, and like Hitler they stand in front of the Eiffel Tower. On its storied wrought iron lattice work, they have placed a symbol of their victory. The five rings of the Olympic flag, which once symbolized a 3000 year old celebration of athleticism and the perfection of the human form, acquired a new meaning in the 2024 Paris Summer Olympics. Fixed forever in the Eiffel Tower on orders of the mob, the five rings are a sign of victory of the forces of world revolution.

WELFARE STATE TOPPLES THE WEST

Parasitism is a relationship between living species in which one organism, called the parasite, lives off another organism, called the host, deriving food and multiplying at the host's expense, and causing the host great harm. Parasites in nature include single celled organisms such as agents of malaria, fungus such as agents of ringworm, and animals such as lice. In human society, parasites have existed since time immemorial and are individuals who exploit others and give nothing in return. Civilized societies in the twilight stages of decline, when the virtues of work and self responsibility are denigrated and mobs clamor for the wealth produced by others, legalize parasitism and fashion it into a human right. Ancient Rome, during its centuries of decline, commencing in the late Republic and extending into the Empire, legalized parasitism in the form of the grain dole, which distributed free grain to the unskilled, the indolent, the unemployed and the unemployable, called the plebeians, and fashioned free grain into a human right. In the hands of Julius Caesar, who overthrew the Roman Republic, and Augustus, the first Roman emperor, the grain dole was institutionalized and became an entrenched system of public confiscation in which grain was collected from the provinces, stored in massive granaries, and distributed to the scum of society. In the twentieth century, the West entered into a stage of decline which saw it reenact the fearsome downward trajectory of ancient Rome. The mobs proclaimed that the individual is his brother's keeper, guardian and slave, clamored for the wealth produced by their neighbors, and demanded that the government establish a system of confiscation in which it robs Peter to pay Paul in the name of Paul's human right to receive the wealth earned by Peter. Thus was born in the twentieth century that which ancient Rome had established during its dying centuries. Thus was born the welfare state. The welfare state is not completely synonymous with socialism inasmuch as classic socialism enforces a duty to work on all members of society and reduces individuals to the status of slaves obligated to work for the sake of the collective. The welfare state does not enforce a duty to work and proclaims the right of the nonproducers to live off the wealth of the producers, and establishes a package of entitlements which it bestows upon the dirt and drags of subhuman existence from cradle to grave. The welfare state, called the New Deal, Social Security, National Health Insurance, the National Insurance Scheme, and called a myriad of other names, is the official religion of our time, and its enactment into law has been the most significant and far reaching political development in the past one hundred years. Rejecting the consensus among liberal nations in the West, prior to the twentieth century, that the individual is born free and not born in chains to his neighbor, and that the individual, as a free born agent, is responsible for himself and not responsible for others, the welfare state established the twentieth century as the first century of decline in the West, giving it the role the first century BC, which saw the rise of Julius Caesar, the last decades of the Roman Republic and start of the rule of the emperors, played in the decline and fall of Classical civilization. Born in the twentieth century, morally bankrupting the West, and ensuring that the twenty first century will be the final century of civilization, the doctrine of the welfare state has issued a series of proclamations which have sent the clock of history racing backward into the epochs before freedom existed and into the primordial jungle. The doctrine proclaims that a progressive society fights and never stops fighting for the rights of the mob to receive benefits from the producers of wealth. It proclaims that a progressive society affirms the right of the mob to receive subsidies for home mortgages, forgiveness of student loans and free universal preschool programs. It proclaims that a progressive society is an entitlement society which confers lifetime welfare benefits to the ne'er do well living next door, paid for by other people's money. It proclaims that a progressive society is a purveyor of free services to the failures and the incompetent. It proclaims that a progressive society is a social spending extravaganza lavished on those who have achieved nothing in life. It proclaims that a progressive society is a limitless fountain of government services for the lowest and most contemptible social strata. It proclaims that a progressive society is a benevolent thief of the producers' wealth for the good of the mob. It proclaims that a progressive society taxes the producers at a rate of one hundred percent to support those who refuse to work. It proclaims that a progressive society writes multimillion dollar welfare checks to the mob in the name of emergency expenditures and battling the covid pandemic. It proclaims that a progressive society is a culture of welfare spending and unlimited taxing and borrowing to finance the spending. It proclaims that a progressive society runs up a public debt greater than the value of the goods and services it produces in the name of protecting the mob's social rights. It proclaims that a progressive society makes every man, woman and child a beneficiary of endless welfare largesse. It proclaims that a progressive society is a maximum consumption and zero productivity society. It proclaims that a progressive society burdens future generations with a massive public debt incurred by massive welfare spending. It proclaims that a progressive society makes welfare overpayments to the mob in the name of the people's democracy. It proclaims that a progressive society gives lifetime welfare support to earthworms in human form in the name of fighting economic downturns, depressions and recessions. It proclaims that a progressive society is a New Deal, Medicare, state subsidized, budget breaking society whose ruling demographic is the moral sewer and gutter: "Kamala Harris in her nomination acceptance at the Democratic National Convention assured the roaring crowd that she would 'never stop fighting' for the American people and that she would 'blaze a new way forward.' The speech disclosed no details, but she appeared to have in mind merely adding to the benefits that the welfare state bestows on grateful voters. Subsidies for home mortgages, forgiveness of student loans and free universal preschool have been dangled as possibilities. However, Harris and the other purveyors of free stuff have a big problem. They are running out of other peoples' money to give away. It's not just America but the world's advanced economies who are seeing the bill come due for decades of social spending exceeding revenue. American leftists like to chide fiscal conservatives for fretting about high tax rates, but economists now note that some high tax European states are approaching the peak of the Laffer curve, the point at which raising tax rates fails to raise additional revenues. That means hitting the wall. Western politicians over the last century developed a different style of campaigning for office. Rather than emphasizing the common good and overall strength of the nation, they competed on the basis of what government services they could provide to individuals and groups. The responses to the Great Depression and the Covid crisis were especially harmful. The New Deal failed to end the depression. We have WWII to thank for that. But the traumatic experience convinced many Americans to think of the government as their benevolent caretaker. The economic deprivations caused by the Covid crisis were due to mostly self inflicted wounds like the economic and educational shutdowns. Worse, long after the crisis had passed, the checks kept coming to Americans who were not impoverished. The emergency expenditures morphed into entitlements. America has developed a culture of spending which caused the national debt in 2023 to exceed 120% of GDP while 100% has long been considered the outer limit of acceptable indebtedness. We also have hundreds of trillions more in future obligations to beneficiaries with no funding source available. Time and demographics are not on our side. In just the next 12 years, aging baby boomers will reduce the ratio of workers (25 to 64) to retirees (65 and older) from 3:1 to 2:1. The fastest growing demographic group is those 85 and older, who require extra funding. Moreover, increased security risks like war and terrorism will create additional budgetary stresses. There are fewer alternatives to reduced spending than ever available Tax increases are politically unpopular and often don't produce the hoped for outcomes because they reduce productivity. European countries have about 50% higher tax revenues than America, yet their real GDP per capita is lower, even factoring in the government services and subsidies they receive. We're hearing a lot about democracy lately. Both parties claim the other one is an existential threat. Advice to would be political leaders who are courageous enough to go beyond pontificating and do something that might actually preserve our democracy is simply this: cut the spending." (Americans Blissfully Drift Toward Financial Collapse by Tom Patterson). Seven hundred kilometers off the coast of Newfoundland, at a depth of 4000 meters, lies the wreck of the world famous Titanic, at the time the largest and most luxurious ship ever to sail, which sank in 1912 as a result of a collision with an iceberg. The wreck lies in two pieces, the bow and the stern, 600 meters apart, and is surrounded by a debris field containing hundreds of thousands of items which spilled from the ship as it sank. The field is decomposing by the second from the action of sea organisms. A little over a century after catastrophe struck the Titanic, the largest and most powerful civilization in the history of mankind has been reduced to ruins and its debris field encompasses the Earth. In the twenty first century, the West has imploded from the violent force of the mob demanding the right to consume without producing, to take without giving, to bleed the producers white, to consume the blood of honest toilers, to be subsidized and lavished with government spending from cradle to grave, and to lead a life without effort, initiative or purposeful action of any kind. In the twenty first century, the world spanning, universe spanning culture of the West has been felled by the avatars of mob rule which have consumed it as the sea organisms are consuming the Titanic.

REDS BLOW UP GERMAN NUCLEAR PLANTS

A phobia is an anxiety disorder defined as an irrational fear of an object. Individuals affected by phobias go to great lengths to avoid the object, and if they cannot, they exhibit distress and panic attacks which may lead to suicide. The most common phobias are fears of spiders, snakes and heights. In the early 1970s, Germany was stricken with a phobia and has not recovered. The phobia is a permanent part of the social, cultural and political landscape of the nation and is a tenet of the religion held dear by the mob. Fifty years ago, Germany, like all Western nations, fell under the grip of the radical left, which set off an antiindustrial revolution and a movement to halt the wheels of progress. In Germany, this movement was more extreme than in other nations due to Germany's recent virus attack of Hitler's national socialism. Declaring war on cities and civilizations, the national socialists exalted the currents of irrationalism, mysticism, oneness with nature, and the primitive simplicity and purity of the savage plains: "In the face of the very real dislocations brought on by the triumph of industrial capitalism and national unification, volkisch thinkers preached a return to the land, to the simplicity and wholeness of a life attuned to nature's purity. This movement refused to locate the sources of alienation, rootlessness and environmental destruction in social structures, laying the blame instead on rationalism, cosmopolitanism, and urban civilization. The stand in for all of these was the age old object of peasant hatred and middle class resentment: the Jews." (Fascist Ecology: The Green Wing Of The Nazi Party And Its Historical Antecedents by Peter Staudenmaier). This rejection of the Enlightenment beneath the darkness of the swastika left a residue of opposition to technological and industrial advancement which persisted after the fall of the Third Reich and has persisted up to the present day. This German national ethos of antiEnlightenment placed within its crosshairs the preeminent symbol of technological power and pulled the trigger. Before the rifle blasts of Germany's national socialist based environmentalist movement and green politics, nuclear energy was obliterated and the Germany was deprived of a source of energy vital to the survival and success of civilization. Germany in the twenty first century has been razed to the ground by the bulldozers of the environmentalist movement and is unable to sustain its modern industrial and technological life. The nation's nuclear power plants have been shut down by orders of the mob, and the Western lights of science and technology, the envy of the nonWestern world and lights which Germany helped to switch on, are being extinguished. Before the long shadow of the swastika, the environmentalist movement has issued a series of proclamations seeking to repeal the Industrial Revolution. Before the looming specter of national socialist fundamentalism, the environmentalist movement has turned back the clock and sent Germany racing into the year zero. The movement proclaims that a progressive society is a solar panel village and a wind farm hamlet. It proclaims that a progressive society has eliminated its safe, cheap, clean, carbon free nuclear power plants in favor of reversion to one thousand year old energy generation. It proclaims that a progressive society rejects an advanced economy and national power grid and generates power for miniature human settlements. It proclaims that a progressive society has phased out nuclear power, available round the clock, and phased in solar and wind power, available intermittently, when the Sun shines or when the wind blows, in obedience to the mob's party line. It proclaims that a progressive society is prepared to pay more for energy from solar panels and windmills than realize cost savings from nuclear energy because the latter is a capitalist, advanced civilizational, politically incorrect form of energy generation. It proclaims that a progressive society utilizes fossil fuels and accepts high carbon emissions rather than utilize the massive, miraculous power of the atom unlocked by the science, engineering and ingenuity of man, symbols par excellence of the oppressive, inorganic Age of Enlightenment: "At the dawn of the millennium, Germany launched an ambitious plan to transition to renewable energy. Die Energiewende initiated a massive expansion of solar and wind power, resulting in a commendable 25 percent reduction in carbon emissions by 2022 compared to 2002. But while Energiewende slashed pollution through building out renewable energy sources, it also phased out Germany's fleet of safe, carbon free nuclear power plants, a longtime goal of environmental activists afraid of nuclear's salient—but in actuality small—dangers. The result, according to a new analysis recently published to the International Journal Of Sustainable Energy, has been a boondoggle for consumers and for the environment. In 2002, nuclear power supplied about a fifth of Germany's electricity. Twenty one years later, it supplied none. A layperson might think that cheap wind and solar could simply fill the gap, but it isn't so simple. Once up and running, nuclear reactors provide reliable, affordable baseload power—electricity that's available all the time. Ephemeral renewables simply can't match nuclear's consistency. And since an advanced economy like Germany's requires a 100 percent reliable power grid, fossil fuel power plants burning coal and natural gas were brought online to pick up wind and solar's slack. The net result of German politicians' shortsightedness in phasing out nuclear power is a vastly pricier grid. The new analysis shows that if Germans simply maintained their 2002 fleet of reactors through 2022, they could have saved themselves roughly $600 billion Euros. Why so much? Well, in addition to their construction costs, renewables required expensive grid upgrades and subsidies. Moreover, in this hypothetical scenario where nuclear remained, Germany enjoyed nearly identical reductions in carbon emissions. Jan Emblemsvag, a Professor of Civil Engineering at Norway's NTNU and the architect of the analysis, imagined another scenario out of curiosity. What if the Germans had taken the money spent on expanding renewables and instead used it to construct new nuclear capacity? According to his calculations, they could have slashed carbon emissions a further 73% on top of their cuts in 2022, while simultaneously enjoying a savings of 330 billion Euros compared to the massive costs of Energiewende. Policymakers in other countries looking to decarbonize their grids should take note." (Why This Industrialized Nation Had To Return To Fossil Fuels When Wind, Solar Failed by Ross Pomeroy). Germany's environmentalist movement proclaims that a progressive society is a powerful, far left, antinuclear movement. It proclaims that a progressive society foments mob hysteria over the Chernobyl nuclear accident, the Fukushima nuclear accident and the possibility of nuclear world war and leads the mob to smash the safest form of large scale energy generation known to man, in obedience to its far left, anticivilizational agenda. It proclaims that a progressive society is a primitive, fanatical, national socialist, antinuclear society. It proclaims that a progressive society is a Greenpeace, antiprogress and atavistic wilderness society. It proclaims that a progressive society affirms that nuclear energy equals human achievement, cultural development, technological supremacy and an Apollonian world view, and as such is dangerous, costly and unsustainable and must be shut down: "Germany switched off its last three nuclear reactors on Saturday, exiting atomic power even as it seeks to wean itself off fossil fuels and manage an energy crisis caused by the war in Ukraine. While many Western countries are upping their investments in atomic energy to reduce their emissions, Germany brought an early end to its nuclear age. It's 'the end of an era,' the RWE energy firm said in a statement shortly after midnight confirming the three reactors had been disconnected from the electricity grid. Europe's largest economy has been looking to leave behind nuclear power since 2002, but the phase out was accelerated by former chancellor Angela Merkel in 2011 after the Fukushima nuclear disaster in Japan. The exit decision was popular in a country with a powerful antinuclear movement, stoked by lingering fears of a Cold War conflict and atomic disasters such as Chernobyl in Ukraine. 'The risks of nuclear power are ultimately unmanageable,' said Environment Minister Steffi Lemke, who this week made a pilgrimage to the ill fated Japanese plant ahead of a G7 meeting in the country. Antinuclear demonstrators took to the streets in several German cities to mark the closures. Greenpeace, at the heart of the antinuclear movement, organized a celebratory party at the Brandenburg Gate in Berlin. 'We are putting an end to a dangerous, unsustainable and costly technology,' said Green MP Juergen Trittin. In front of the Brandenburg Gate, activists symbolically slayed a model dinosaur." (Germany Ends Nuclear Era As Last Reactors Power Down, Agence France Presse, April 15, 2023). He lived at the limits of Earth and at the extremity of Heaven. He was the ancient Roman god of beginnings, endings, dualities and transitions. His name was Janus and he died 1500 years ago during the fall of Rome into the savage plains of Christianity and barbarism. In the twentieth century, he returned to life in the West and made his home in Germany. He was especially suited to the nation by virtue of its two faced attitude toward nuclear power. Germany: home of the world's most renowned nuclear physicists. The land of Albert Einstein, Otto Hahn, Lise Meitner, Leo Szilard and Fritz Strassmann. The land in which these scientific lights discovered nuclear fission, the submicroscopic kinetic energy which powers nuclear reactors. Germany: home to the largest and most powerful antinuclear movement in the world. A movement which foments mob hysteria over nuclear safety, concealing a safety record unmatched by any other form of mass power generation, in order to advance its far left, national socialist agenda of civilizational destruction. Germany: Janus: friend of progress and enemy of progress. In the twenty first century, the dark face of Janus, the enemy of progress, has assumed control and the light face has been banished forever.

IRON CURTAIN DESCENDS ON THE WEST

From Stettin in the Baltic to Trieste in the Adriatic an iron curtain has descended across the Continent. Behind that line lie all the capitals of the ancient states of Central and Eastern Europe. Warsaw, Berlin, Prague, Vienna, Budapest, Belgrade, Bucharest and Sofia, all these famous cities and the populations around them lie in what I must call the Soviet sphere, and all are subject in one form or another, not only to Soviet influence but to a very high and, in some cases, increasing measure of control from Moscow. Athens alone, with its immortal glories, is free to decide its future at an election under British, American and French observation. The Russian dominated Polish Government has been encouraged to make enormous and wrongful inroads upon Germany, and mass expulsions of millions of Germans on a scale grievous and undreamed of are now taking place. The communist parties, which were very small in all these Eastern States of Europe, have been raised to preeminence and power far beyond their numbers and are seeking everywhere to obtain totalitarian control. Police governments are prevailing in nearly every case, and so far, except in Czechoslovakia, there is no true democracy. This is certainly not the liberated Europe we fought to build up. Thus spoke Winston Churchill on March 5, 1946 in a speech delivered at Westminster College in Fulton, Missouri. In the ears of civilized people, the speech echoes as a clarion call to vigilance against the totalitarian enemies of freedom and a warning of the fate which befalls nations which ignore the threat posed by movements seeking to turn back the clock of history. The end of World War II did not bring the defeat of tyranny or the liberation of Europe but the victory of tyranny, the enslavement of Eastern Europe, and the shadow of slavery looming across the world before a movement of fear and control the likes of which mankind had never seen before. The end of World War II brought the triumph of a global movement called communism, born in Germany in the nineteenth century in the reading room of Karl Marx, headquartered in the Soviet Union from 1917 to 1991, and for seven decades the slave driver of 1.5 billion people or one third of the Earth's population, held captive in seventeen nations reaching from China to Cuba. The fall of the Soviet Union on December 25, 1991 did not betoken the fall of the communist movement, for the movement had captured the hearts and minds of the Western masses and had made inroads into liberal institutions since the dawn of the twentieth century. It had ascended to victory in the West under the names of progressivism and the Marxist mutations of race, gender, gay, lesbian, and environmentalist politics, which appeared in mid century, and in the twenty first century, it brought forth yet another mutation in the form of transgender politics. In the new millennium, this devil's universe of tribal politics, unleashed by Marx in the nineteenth century and expanding over the past one hundred years by the fearsome logic of tribalism, the logic which says first two tribes, the proletariat and the bourgeois, then three tribes, then an infinity of tribes, has been joined by an old enemy of freedom returned to life from the West's Dark Age. It has been joined by a resurgent Christianity, which agitates for prayer in public schools and the right of the government to declare that actual human personhood mystically begins at the moment of conception with the infusion of a supernatural soul, and that the destruction of this one celled zygote is an act of murder. It has been joined by a resurgent Orthodox Judaism, which has launched a culture war in Israel, seeking to make the Torah, the halakha, and the words of Moses on Mount Sinai the official religion of the state, and to abolish the nation's liberal secular constitution. It has been joined by a resurgent Islam, which had lain dormant for centuries and sprang into virulent action in the 1979 Islamic Revolution in Iran. Overthrowing the shah of Iran, Reza Pahlavi, and establishing the theocratic dictatorship of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini in his place, the revolution marked the end of freedom in the nation. In the twenty first century, two billion Muslims throughout the world have formed an army of terror, staging operations in every nation on Earth, and submerging civilization in rivers of flood cut open by a sword marked Allah, the Quran and the Prophet. Look at the twenty first century and listen to a series of proclamations made by the establishment and inscribed on the tombstone of the West. The establishment proclaims that a progressive society is ruled by psychotics who deny the existence of DNA, genes and sex chromosomes and pretend to be transgenders or people who have changed their gender. It proclaims that a progressive society is ruled by psychotics claiming that they can change their gender at will, dozens of times per hour, tens of thousands of times per year. It proclaims that a progressive society is ruled by transgender activists who train and indoctrinate the masses to reject biological reality and believe that gender is mutable. It proclaims that a progressive society promotes queer politics. It proclaims that a progressive society practices Marxist witchcraft, pronounces evil spells, and seeks to inflict harm on successful white males in the name of women, nonwhites and the poor. It proclaims that a progressive society affirms that people can consist of multiple, made up identities and can be both male and female at one and the same time, and neither male nor female. It proclaims that a progressive society promotes lesbian politics, gay politics and bisexual politics. It proclaims that a progressive society advises psychotic children are not allowed to act out their psychoses and pretend they are members of the opposite sex to kill themselves. It proclaims that a progressive society affirms the legal and moral right of psychotics who claim they are members of the opposite sex to be referred to in the pronouns of their choice. It proclaims that a progressive society prohibits heterosexual relations. It proclaims that a progressive society affirms that an individual's sex assigned at birth by genes is meaningless and irrelevant to his or her existence because gender identity and gender expression are determined by human will and action. It proclaims that a progressive society is ruled by two spirit psychotics who claim that they have masculine and feminine spirits living inside their body. It proclaims that a progressive society is ruled by intersex tribes, asexual tribes, nonbinary tribes, and tribes whose members claim to be transitioning from male to female or from female to male. It proclaims that a progressive society promotes blood rituals in which gay partners, lesbian partners and transgender partners cut themselves, cut each other, and drink each other's blood to produce mystical energy, healing and stimulus. It proclaims that a progressive society prohibits people from referring to psychotics suffering from gender dysphoria as psychotics suffering from gender dysphoria, prohibits people from using the psychotics' birth names indicating biological sex, and forces people to refer to the psychotics as normal, healthy, wholesome, well adjusted people. It proclaims that a progressive society enforces Marxist and neoMarxist curriculums and classrooms in every school in the land. It proclaims that a progressive society is a politically driven indoctrination machine turning flesh into steel and people into fanatical robots. It proclaims that a progressive society has abandoned the institution of education in favor of brainwashing and teaches students what to think and not how to think, and teaches them their obligation to parrot the people's far left party line. It proclaims that a progressive society is an ideological fever swamp blazing with gender, race and class agendas. It proclaims that a progressive society is a social justice echo chamber in which passions and prejudices are amplified, reinforced and directed against the ramparts of civilization, blasting them into the dustbin of history: "A school district in Colorado hired a self proclaimed 'genderqueer shapeshifter' and 'witch' to conduct staff training on transgender issues. According to a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request from Parents Defending Education (PDE), the Thompson School District hired Silen Wellington, a transgender activist, to conduct the training. While specific information on the presentation was not provided, as the district was 'not in possession of any materials,' it did include information on topics to be discussed. 'This training includes information about different identities, the importance of language, and how to be a better ally,' the agenda for the training states. 'If you're curious about LGBTQ+ topics, have some questions that you've always wanted to ask, or wish to learn what all the letters mean, this training is for you.' Language and statistics on 'LGBTQ+ youth suicides' were on the agenda, as well as 'ways to be inclusive of nonheterosexual orientations.' The training would also cover 'sex assigned at birth vs gender identity vs gender expression' and 'defining words such as: dysphoria, dead name, transitioning, intersex, asexual, aromantic, Two Spirit, queer, nonbinary,' as well as something called 'neopronouns.' According to the Epoch Times, Wellington practices witchcraft, blood rituals, 'magical activism,' and polyamorous relationships. 'Time and time again we continue to see ideological agendas permeating the curriculum in our schools,' PDE community engagement director Maily Salabarria. 'It is inconceivable and a gross misuse of taxpayer's monies that Thompson School District allowed a known transgender activist to train staff members on the implementation of politically driven social justice topics into everyday teachings throughout our children's classrooms.' " (Colorado School District Hires 'Genderqueer Shapeshifter,' 'Witch' For Staff Training by Breccan Thies). Today's establishment proclaims that a progressive society is a far left society which promotes critical race theory as part of its official religion. According to this, society must be critical of Enlightenment values and promote race war, race division, and the tenets of black tribalism, black nationalism, black Marxism and black Hitlerism, and launch a holocaust against whites in the name of antiracism: "The head researcher of a watershed report into the imposition of so-called antiracism training and Critical Race Theory (CRT) in British schools told Breitbart London that the movement is being heavily influenced by the far left in America, saying that children are being taught material 'peppered' with the work of CRT luminaries Ibram X. Kendi and Robin DiAngelo. This week, the campaign group Don't Divide Us (DDU) released research claiming that one in four (23 per cent) councils in England and Wales—the majority of which were controlled by the left wing Labor Party—are promoting a 'model of antiracism, based on division, in their education policies and guidance.' " ('Peppered With Ibram Kendi And Robin DiAngelo'—Study Finds One In Four UK Councils Pushing Critical Race Theory In Schools by Kurt Zindulka). The iron curtain: a notional barrier separating the former communist bloc from the free world. The iron curtain: a notional barrier separating the multifarious enemies of freedom in the present day from the vanishing voices of the opposition. Suspended by the Devil and fixed in hellfire, the iron curtain is inscribed with a list of the monsters stalking the Earth. They are all there, black Marxists, feminist Marxists, proletarian Marxists, gay Marxists, lesbian Marxists, bisexual Marxists, transgender Marxists, environmentalist Marxists, and activist Christians, Muslims and Orthodox Jews, all there, breathing the fires of antireason, antiEnlightenment and civilizational destruction.

THE AGE OF WELFARE

In the twentieth century, the wheel of history made a revolution and a new age dawned on the West.

Its antecedents went back to ancient Rome and the repetition of events spelled out the beginning of the end of civilization. This new age was the age of welfare, and as it had done in ancient Rome, it signaled the onset of a process of moral degeneration and rule by the animal mob. An ethos of consumption without production, receiving without giving, and life without work or effort, symptomatic of the decline of Classical civilization, took hold in the twentieth century and became symptomatic of the decline of the West. Look at the moral rot in ancient Rome and see the precursors of the present day. In the dying days of the Roman Republic in 123 BC, the voices of the new mob were ascending; they echoed in the politician Gaius Gracchus and in his Plebeian Council; and they enacted a new program, the grain dole, which distributed grain to hundreds of thousands of people. In the third century AD, Emperor Nerva established the Alimenta, which distributed food and cash and provided education to the people. In the same century, Emperor Septimius Severus replaced the grain dole by a bread dole and ordered the distribution of olive oil. Later in the century, Emperor Aurelian ordered the distribution of wine and pork. In addition to food, cash and education, Roman emperors provided free entertainment, free public games, to the people. The doles of bread, olive oil, wine, pork, education and entertainment continued right up to the dissolution of the Roman Empire in the fifth century AD and were the voices of that dissolution. In the twentieth century, the welfare ghosts of the Roman past were resurrected during the declining stages of the West. The names changed, while the story remained the same. It was the story of the masses rejecting what it means to lead a human life, a life marked by reason, virtue, self reliance and self responsibility, and descending into a swampland of social parasitism and nonresponsibility. The twentieth century saw the advent of new names for old decadent ways of thinking, prevalent during the eras of cultural collapse. The New Deal. Social Security. The National Assistance Act. The National Insurance Act. The twenty first century has seen the final expansion of the welfare state and the final extinction of human freedom in a jungle called social responsibility. Thunderous waves of communism, fueled by mass ovations, have felled the mightiest fortresses of freedom and reduced them to slave houses presided over by the mob. No nation on Earth has been spared by the relentless advance of the cancer of communism and its welfare state. Look at the welfare statisticians in charge of the United States of America today and see the former leader of the free world reduced to a bankrupt shadow of its former self. See the City Upon A Hill reduced to an anthill built from the barren soil of collectivism. The welfare statisticians in charge of America have issued a series of proclamations which have sounded the death knell of Enlightenment traditions and institutions in the West. They proclaim that a progressive society steals from Peter to pay Paul and calls the theft transfer payments. They proclaim that progressive society makes trillion dollar transfer payments from the producers of wealth to the nonproducers of wealth. They proclaim that a progressive society spends the lion's share of its taxes and budget in support of the scum on the streets. They proclaim that a progressive society creates its gross domestic product, the total value of its economic output, by income derived from welfare. They proclaim that a progressive society is a communist spending and transfer machine. They proclaim that a progressive society is a communist Food Stamp and Medicaid office. They proclaim that a progressive society steals from those who work and gives the plunder to those who do not work in the name of fighting a War on Poverty. They proclaim that a progressive society is a welfare relief roll whose recipients multiply like cancerous cells and reach into the ends of the Earth. They proclaim that a progressive society enslaves the producers of wealth from cradle to grave in order to support the shiftless dirt and froth from cradle to grave. They proclaim that a progressive society is a legalized theft society which through a massive, efficient and unrelenting redistribution of the wealth aspires to be the greatest welfare factory in history. They proclaim that a progressive society is a welfare payments press which confiscates billions of dollars from honest workers with which it supports the growing army of the dishonest work shy. They proclaim that a progressive society raids the coffers of decent, diligent, hardworking people and gives the proceeds to plague bacilli, and calls the payments by such names as Supplemental Security Income, Aid to Families with Dependent Children and

Temporary Assistance for Needy Families, Earned Income Tax Credits, Families First Coronavirus Response Act, Child Tax Credit Expansion, Government Child Care, Government Paid Family Leave, Government Preschool, Medicaid Home and Community Based Care Services, Double Pell Grants, Free Community College, and the Affordable Health Care Act. They proclaim that a progressive society is a national welfare feeding trough in which every man, woman and child is eligible for life. They proclaim that a progressive society consists of unemployed households, unemployed parents and unemployed children given lifetime government benefits without work requirements of any kind. They proclaim that a progressive society excuses able bodied people from the responsibility to work and support themselves. They proclaim that a progressive society is a limitless welfare entitlement program, a limitless loan giveaway program and a limitless source of subsidies for the subhuman forces which have declared war on civilization: "The federal government spent a total of 4.1 trillion dollars on transfer payments to individuals in FY 2022. This was 65 percent of the entire budget, absorbed 83 percent of all tax receipts, and equivalent to 16.3 percent of GDP. By comparison, the government spent 2.8 trillion dollars on these programs in 2019, 62 percent of the budget, 80 percent of revenues, and 13 percent of GDP. Transfer payments increased 46 percent from 2019 to 2022. Government spending on transfer payments to individuals has vastly grown in real terms: In 1945, the government spent just $15.6 billion (in 2019 inflation adjusted dollars) on these programs, 1.5 percent of the budget, equal to 0.6 of GDP. By 1969, spending on transfer payments to individuals totaled $263 billion (in 2019 inflation adjusted dollars), 26 percent of the budget, equal to 4.8 percent of GDP. By 1994, transfer payments to individuals grew to 50 percent of total spending. More people are receiving welfare benefits today than at any time in our nation's history. In 2022, 81 million people were enrolled in Medicaid (24.3 percent of the population) and 41 million received Food Stamps (12.4 percent of the population). This is even higher than at the height of the pandemic and government lockdowns. America's welfare rolls have grown since the War on Poverty was declared. The percent of the population enrolled in Medicaid grew from 9.3 percent in 1975 to 24.3 percent in 2022. Food Stamps grew from 7.9 percent in 1975 to 12.4 percent in 2022. The Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC) grew from 2.9 percent in 1975 to 9.3 percent in 2021. Supplemental Security Income (SSI) grew from 2 percent in 1975 to 2.3 percent in 2021. In contrast, the percent of the population on Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) shrank from 5.2 percent in 1975 to 0.9 percent on Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) in 2019 after welfare reform. Congress spent trillions creating new transfer payment programs (such as stimulus payments), expanding existing benefits (such as Food Stamp payments), and relaxing eligibility for welfare (such as preventing eligibility reviews for Medicaid). The new benefits (as well as many existing government benefits) are ignored or undercounted in determining eligibility for welfare programs. As Matt Weidinger of AEI has described the result, 'a household with two unemployed adults and two young children could have collected more than $67,000 in federal pandemic payments without a penny being counted in determining its eligibility for Medicaid. That's more than twice the federal poverty level for a family of four. Two thirds of that amount, or nearly $47,000, would have been similarly ignored when the family applied for food stamps.' The Families First Coronavirus Response Act waived the Food Stamp work requirements for able bodied adults during the public health emergency declaration. Since 2019, 5.5 million people have been added to the Food Stamp rolls. Congress also increased federal Medicaid funding and prohibited states from removing anyone from the program—even if they were ineligible. The Foundation for Government Accountability estimates that '90 percent of enrollment growth was a direct result of ineligible individuals,' and that 'an estimated 21 million individuals that do not meet Medicaid eligibility standards remained on the program in October 2022.' The FY 2023 Omnibus Appropriations law ends this requirement on March 31, 2023." (A Growing Culture Of Government Dependency, Budget Committee, United States House of Representatives, April 4, 2023). On July 15, 2020, scientists at the California Institute of Technology made a remarkable discovery. They discovered that bacteria can eat metal.

Scientists Jared Leadbetter and Hang Yu described their findings in the July 16 issue of Nature: "A wonderful aspect of microbes in nature is that they can metabolize seemingly unlikely materials, like metals, yielding energy useful to the cell." In the twenty first century, the largest and most powerful civilization in the history of mankind has been consumed by single cell microbial particles. Multiplying by the billions, they have struck a rotting and decaying metallic structure. Their names are legion, Medicaid, Medicare, Social Security, Disability Insurance, Unemployment Insurance, Health Insurance and Old Age Pensions, and they stand for the victory of the mob in the West in the age of welfare.

GERMANY'S COMMUNISTS OUTLAW CARS

It all began in Germany. In 1886, the world's first modern automobile appeared on the scene, when Carl Friedrich Benz produced a gasoline powered internal combustion vehicle and made copies of it. The progress continued in Germany, when Gottlieb Daimler and Wilhelm Maybach formed Daimler Motors in 1890. In 1926, the Daimler-Benz Corporation was formed and produced the world's first luxury automobile, the Mercedes-Benz. The progress continued in Germany with the formation of the Volkswagen Company in 1937. From 1938 to 2003, the company produced the most iconic automobile in history. The Beetle's production period of 65 years is the longest of any automobile, and the company's production of 22 million Beetles is the most of any automobile in history. In the twenty first century, the home of the automobile has fallen under attack and been forced to shut its factories. The nation which gave the world freedom of travel and mobility beyond the wildest dreams of mankind has ceased automotive operations before the relentless hammer blows of the communists in charge of the nation's cultural and political establishment. They were voted into office in Germany's postwar period in landslide after landslide and they represent the number religion of our times, which has assumed control over Western nations in landslide after landslide since the dawn of the twentieth century. Look at Germany in the twenty first century and see the nation's communists in its corporate boardrooms, its mass media channels and its government offices destroy the nation's largest, most important and most prestigious employer, the automotive industry. The communists in the boardrooms proclaim that Volkswagen has to do something it has never done in its near century old existence: shut down its factories. They proclaim it has to do this because it is not fair to expect that German workers increase their productivity in order to compete with Asian workers and bring down the price of German cars. The communists in the boardrooms proclaim that though fewer people buy automobiles today, it is not fair to expect German automobile manufacturers to reduce prices, because German workers are entitled to receive luxury wages for their half efforts on the factory floor. The communists in the government proclaim that a progressive society rejects nuclear energy in favor of small scale energy generation such as wind mills and solar panels, because it rejects advanced human achievement and civilization. Accordingly, it expects automakers to accept higher costs to make cars. The communists in the government proclaim that a progressive society imposes confiscatory taxes on the producers of wealth in the name of social responsibility, and it expects automakers to pay these taxes with eagerness and enthusiasm and not increase the price of cars. The communists in the government proclaim that a progressive society is ruled by a Byzantine bureaucracy which enforces the primacy of the state over the individual and the public sector over the private sector, and conscripts automakers to serve in the people's army. The communists in the government proclaim that a progressive society sacrifices its physical infrastructure on the altar of welfare support and allows its roads, bridges, trains, power lines and internet connections to crumble and decay in the name of subsidizing the scum of the Earth: "Volkswagen Group CEO Oliver Blume on Sunday defended plans for large scale cuts at the German automobile giant. Blume said the current economic situation was 'so serious that we can't simply continue as we were.' Volkswagen (VW) said it aims to save the company €4 billion ($4.25 billion) by moving ahead with the job cuts.

VW said earlier this week it could not rule out shutting factories in its home country—a first in its nearly 90 year history. The automotive sector is the important economic engine in Germany, VW's worker representatives argue. They say cuts could have a wider impact on communities. Volkswagen's shares have fallen by nearly a third in five years. Around 25,000 workers gathered at Volkswagen's headquarters in the northern city of Wolfsburg earlier in the week to hear VW management's plans to deepen cost cuts. 'Fewer cars are being sold in Europe and new competitors from Asia are pushing aggressively into the market,' Blume told the Bild am Sonntag newspaper this weekend. 'The cake has got smaller and we have more guests at the table.' Blume said the board was working on 'further measures' to survive a slump in car sales, without offering details. He said VW was still 'firmly committed' to Germany, as it has been for generations. 'We have employees whose grandfathers worked for Volkswagen. And I want their grandchildren to be able to work here, too.' In response to the turmoil at Volkswagen, the Federation of German Industries (BDI)—which represents more than 100,000 German companies employing around eight million people—has demanded better economic conditions for German industry. 'The problems in Germany are obvious,' BDI president Siegfried Russwurm told the Welt am Sonntag broadsheet by pointing at increasing energy prices, high taxes, sprawling bureaucracy and 'unreliable public infrastructure.' He said the issues effect 'large parts of industry, not just individual companies,' adding that Germany's politicians had 'not understood' the magnitude of the problem. (Volkswagen CEO Defends Job Cuts Citing Economic Pressures, Deutsche Welle, September 8, 2024). The communists in the government proclaim that a progressive society is a climate protest movement advocating stringent CO2 emissions limits in a campaign to destroy the car industry. They proclaim that a progressive society seeks to abolish private transport in the name of a transport revolution and to confine people to public trains, trams and buses. They proclaim that a progressive society forces people to drive electric cars, which they neither want nor need nor can afford to purchase, in order to avoid the incineration of the planet at the hands of greenhouse effect predicted by the green parties' Project Fear. They proclaim that a progressive society sacrifices petrol and diesel fuels on the altar of Environmental Doomsday. They proclaim that a progressive society sets carbon emissions targets for automobiles the real purpose of which is to promote the green politics of civilizational regression. They proclaim that a progressive society promotes the dismantling of modernity in the name of energy transition and a comprehensive climate strategy. They proclaim that a progressive society is run by environmental campaigners who seek to abolish the Industrial Revolution in the name of establishing renewable energy sources. They proclaim that a progressive society is a green movement, a primitive movement, a socialist movement and a totalitarian movement without supplies of energy, progress, freedom or humanity of any kind: "Green hysteria is on the verge of destroying Germany's car industry, the CEO of Volkswagen has warned. Since motor manufacturing is Germany's biggest industry sector, this effectively means: Auf Wiedersehen to the German economy. VW chief Herbert Diess has told Spiegel Online that the combination of climate protests against cars in general and stricter CO2 emission limits imposed by the EU are pushing Europe's car industry to the 'brink of collapse.' He said: 'The current campaign against individual mobility and thus against conventional cars is reaching existence threatening proportions.' Diess also called out the nonsense of trying to force everyone to shift from petrol driven cars to electric ones: the electricity that supplies them will still come largely from fossil fuels, so where will be the environmental benefit? 'Instead of using petrol or diesel, we'll basically use coal, even if we're electrically powered, and in the worst case we'll use even lignite. That drives the idea of electric mobility ad absurdum!' The VW boss's concerns are shared across the European car industry. According to Reuters, reporting on the eve of Frankfurt's biennial International Auto Show (IAA), which opens on Thursday: 'You have cars that cost an extra 10,000 euros to build, fleet emissions targets requiring a certain sales volume and consumers who may or may not want them,' said one PSA executive. [PSA: French holding group for brands including Peugeot, Citroen, Opel and Vauxhall] 'All the ingredients are there for a powerful explosive.' By next year, CO2 must be cut to 95 grams per kilometer for 95% of cars from the current 120.5 g average--a figure that has risen of late as consumers spurn fuel efficient diesels and embrace SUVs. All new cars in the EU must be compliant in 2021. Motor manufacturing is Germany's biggest industry. It employs around 830,000 people. But it now faces a perfect storm of disasters: from ever more stringent EU carbon emissions regulations; from Angela Merkel's ailing coalition government trying to appease greens with a new comprehensive climate strategy; from lack of consumer interest in all the electric cars it has built but appears unable to sell; from Germany's Energiewende—the replacement of fossil fuels with more expensive renewables; and from environmental campaigners calling for a 'transport revolution' which will lead to the phasing out of private cars altogether. No country in the world has pushed the green agenda harder than Germany. Now, just as it was in the last war—only with a differently couched, more virtue signalling political agenda—Germany is being destroyed by totalitarian ideology. 'Germany is self destructing and it really couldn't happen to a nicer country,' says the Global Warming Policy Foundation's Benny Peiser, himself a German. Peiser was originally a member of Germany's green movement, before seeing the light. To make matters worse for the struggling Germany economy, a report by McKinsey warns that Energiewende is increasingly jeopardizing Germany's energy supply." (Climate Hysteria Is Destroying Germany's Car Industry by James Delingpole). Assisted suicide is a procedure in which people take drugs to end their lives with the help of doctors. This physician assisted suicide has been ruled legal in Germany by the federal constitutional court. Civilized people see in it a metaphor for the plight of the German automotive industry. The industry which first sold freedom to the world over a century ago, and called this freedom a motorwagen, has killed itself with the help of the establishment. It has killed itself at the hands of its communist management, which refuses to increase labor productivity and meet the Asian competition, together with the assistance of the nation's green movement virus house, leviathan lash of taxation robbery, and Soviet style regime of state officials and administrative procedures. The corpse of the German automotive industry lies buried in the coffin of Western civilization.

WITCHES AND MARXISTS SPREAD MADNESS AT YALE

In seventeenth century England, a pamphlet fluttered across the land and could be found in streets, homes and shops far and wide. The pamphlet read as follows: Witches apprehended, examined and executed for notable villanies committed by them both by land and water. With a strange and most true trial to know whether a woman be a witch or not. In Europe from 1400 to 1775, 100,000 people were prosecuted for witchcraft and 60,000 were executed. They were burned at the stake in flames of ignorance and superstition which blackened the skies of the continent. In the twenty first century, the witches have returned in a new Dark Age into which the West has descended. Like the first Dark Age one thousand years before, this is an age of religion, but the actors on this inglorious stage have multiplied. The original Christian actors are now joined by Marxists and their offshoots, by the voices of Islamist terror, by Orthodox Jews subverting the secular state of Israel, and by the witches active in Europe's early modern period. They are all here, all the rejectionists of reason arising over the past one thousand years, all the dark symptoms of the fearsome and terrifying decline and fall of the West. At an Ivy League university in New Haven, Connecticut, at the third oldest university in America, at a university whose alumni include 65 Nobel laureates, 5 Fields medalists, 5 American presidents, 19 Supreme Court justices and 31 living billionaires, at a university whose motto is Light and Truth, the witches have returned and cast their black magic across the campus. In the twenty first century, Yale University has been taken over by witches and has disgraced its hallowed shield and motto, established when it was a colonial college, chartered way back in 1701 before the American Revolution. In the twenty first century, witchcraft at Yale has been amalgamated with Marxism, and a special fiery brew circulates among the students and staff. They have taken deep draughts of it, and intoxicated and frothing at the mouth, they have demanded the destruction of civilization. Listen to their words and see the return of primitivism dressed up in the flags of the Pentacle and the Hammer and Sickle. The words proclaim that a progressive university requires students to recite magical incantations composed by witches before their classes commence, on pain of stigmatization and exclusion. They proclaim that a progressive university is a magic circle in which students are restored to the bonds of mystical oneness with the universe which reason and science have severed. They proclaim that a progressive university requires that students suspend their rational faculties, become tolerant and open minded, and accept the most bizarre, outlandish, insane fantasies peddled by witchcraft. They proclaim that a progressive university is run by black, queer, communist witches, agents, activists, goddesses and community organizers for world revolution. They proclaim that a progressive university promotes singing, song writing and musical ceremonies in honor of witchcraft. They proclaim that a progressive university requires students to greet each other with salutations, seig heils, and prayers to the Antichrist. They proclaim that a progressive university requires students to study the great books of witchcraft in history, and learn how to read tarot cards and foretell the future. They proclaim that a progressive university is a campus wide witches' meeting peddling broomsticks, black cloaks and pointed hats at bargain basement prices. They proclaim that a progressive university is a Devil's divinity school engaging in brainwashing, programming and the unleashing of Manchurian candidates. They proclaim that a progressive university invades the minds of students, implants the dogmas of witchcraft spirituality and Marxist gender, race and class wars, and promotes the politics of the new little fuhrers in the name of diversity and inclusion: "Yale's Divinity School coerced students to read from a 'spell' written by a 'witch' as part of its Before the Fall Orientation. The three day orientation between August 21 to 23 saw a series of talks and activities preparing incoming students for the year ahead, interspersed with small group discussions. One of these small group periods was the first activity of orientation. Participating as an incoming student in one of these circles, I saw how the discussion opened with a set of Restorative Circle Rules. These rules boiled down to a warning to be open minded: all viewpoints were expected to be heard, that you only have to take what you want from the circle and participate as wanted--at least nominally. After this show of inclusion, we as students were led to read aloud, line by line and one by one, from Adrienne Brown's Radical Gratitude Spell. Brown has been described by Meeting of Minds as a 'mixed race black queer American writer, community organizer, facilitator, witch and--may I say--goddess.' Brown herself subscribes to witchcraft, and it informs her public work. Her website describes her as someone who 'grows healing ideas in public' through 'her writing, which includes short and long form fiction, nonfiction, spells, tarot' and 'her music, which includes songwriting, singing and immersive musical rituals.' This context of Brown, her work, and her particular spiritual inclinations was not given to students before participating in the reading. As such, the group reading of the spell took on an undeniable coven like feeling, with students unable to fully consent to the pseudoritual knowingly, despite the Circle Rules. A second year student, who requested to remain anonymous, expressed to me a deep concern over this act by the orientation staff. The student called the provided spell 'bizarre,' and 'gross,' especially for students to not be told of the author or intentions behind the spell before being led to participate. Another student participant told The Fix he felt he would have been punished for not participating. Other recent Yale College graduates and members of the campus Catholic community commented to me in conversation, in a simultaneously tongue in cheek, yet serious manner, that 'the very campus of the Divinity School needed prayer.' They were unsurprised at the inclusion of the spell into orientation. Apparently, it is a popularly known fact amongst more conservative and religious circles in the Yale community that there is little still divine about the Divinity School. As a student who experienced the Radical Gratitude Spell first hand, it was a deeply concerning experience for the state of higher education. Under the name of inclusion, acts of pagan spirituality are being blindly normalized in educational spaces, Yale Divinity School being a prime example of such. Conversely, the preference for diversity comes at the expense of the sanctity of other students' faith. While it was proclaimed that 'you only have to take what you want from this circle,' personally I did not feel safe to opt out of the spell, being all too aware of the power imbalance and the risk of social stigma against me in this completely new environment. I cannot imagine myself being the only one to feel this way. Diversity and nominal comfort come at a cost. Its inclusion in orientation raises deep concerns over the boundary that exists between said diversity and the religious rights of individual students. This worry is especially poignant in the nearly blind way which the spell was integrated into our first moments as students at Yale." (Yale Divinity Students Forced To Read From Witch's 'Spell' At Orientation by Raleigh Adams). Listen to the words of the witches and Marxists on control of Yale and hear them proclaim that a progressive university is a camp for communist comrades dedicated to the overthrow of progress and capitalism in the name of social justice, environmental justice and the liberation of the working class. They proclaim that a progressive society affirms that the highest form of morality consists in service to something larger and greater than ourselves. It consists in service to the people, the community, the nation and the state: "A spell to cast upon meeting a stranger, comrade or friend working for social and/or environmental justice and liberation: you are a miracle walking i greet you with wonder in a world which seeks to own your joy and your imagination you have chosen to be free, every day, as a practice. i can never know the struggles you went through to get here, but i know you have swum upstream and at times it has been lonely i want you to know i honor the choices you made in solitude and i honor the work you have done to belong i honor your commitment to that which is larger than yourself and your journey to love the particular container of life that is you you are enough your work is enough you are needed your work is sacred you are here and i am grateful." (Radical Gratitude Spell by Adrienne Marie Brown). Listen to the witches running Yale proclaim that a progressive university is a course of study in magical spells and mystical poems. Listen to them proclaim that a progressive university teaches students to reject reason, logic and the evidence of the senses, and view reality as mystical feeling, intuition, system, connection, complexity, relation, interaction, pattern, miracle, god, goddess, the Tao, the Way, and the whispering voices in the underground of nonexistence: "The world is full of beauty, magic, miracles, and patterns that induce wonder. This book is a collection of essays, speeches, spells, interviews, conversations, tools, profiles, and poems sharing my learning processes in the face of that wonder. You are basically holding a book of me saying, 'Wow, everything's so amazing!' Or, 'That's not wow. Why not go with the wow option?' Emergence is one of the best concepts I have learned for discussing this wow, this wonder. 'Emergence is the way complex systems and patterns arise out of a multiplicity of relatively simple interactions.' It is another way of speaking about the connective tissue of all that exists—the way, the Tao, the force, change, God/dess, life. Birds flocking, cells splitting, fungi whispering underground. Emergence emphasizes critical connections over critical mass, building authentic relationships, listening with all the senses of the body and the mind." (Emergent Strategy by Adrienne Marie Brown). When civilizations abandon reason, they refashion the march of time into a dismal, tragic wheel. The past fifteen centuries have seen a wheel make a revolution and bring back the dark flowing rivers which submerged ancient Rome and the bars which imprisoned the first age of the West. The twenty first century has brought back religion. The names have changed, while the story, the plot and the theme have remained the same. On the campus of the first university in America to award a PhD, the new voices of destruction have taken over the administration and faculty. Yale's shining motto, Lux et Veritas, has been reduced to a dead letter.

DEMOCRAT PARTY'S RED CHANNELS

In July 1925 in Berlin, Germany, a mass meeting was held, attended by thousands of people from across the nation. The leader of the German Communist Party, Ernst Thälmann, greeted the crowd with the communist clenched fist salute, and the Roter Frontkämpferbund, the League of Red Front Fighters, the military force of the Communist Party, was born. Thälmann's clenched fist salute became the symbol of the League, its registered trademark, a sign to rally behind communism, and an oath to defend the Soviet Union. The League moved threateningly through the streets of the nation attacking the police, attacking its brother movement, Hitler's national socialists, and attacking the institutions of the Weimar Republic which had established liberal democracy in Germany. After the national socialists assumed power in 1933, the League was dissolved. Its members fought with the communist International Brigades in the Spanish Civil War; they fought in the Soviet Red Army; and they founded the East German communist regime in 1949. In East Germany, the League received two new names and continued its tradition of violence. It was reconstituted as the Combat Groups of the Working Class and as the National People's Army. After the fall of East Germany in 1989, the League made yet another migration, this time to a land 8,000 kilometers away. Its spirit and soul entered the ranks of one of America's main political parties and was greeted there with open arms. This party had embraced communism in the 1930s under the administration of Franklin Roosevelt, and called its communism by such names as Progressivism, Social Security and the New Deal. In the 1960s, the party embraced a new triple headed Marxist monster stalking the land called gender, race and class politics. By the twenty first century, the transformation of America's Democrat Party was complete and it became the nation's premier communist political organization, absorbing the spirit of the German League root and branch, and dedicating itself to the destruction of liberal democracy and every last vestige of freedom existing in the nation. The Democrat Party is one of America's main political parties because it represents the communist half of the electorate. America, the former leader, arsenal and City Upon A Hill of the free world, eaten away by its masses stricken by the cancer of communism, and reduced to a rotted, decayed, bankrupt shipwreck. America, its destiny reflects the destiny of the West, and where it has descended, the West has descended, and all civilizations throughout history which abandoned reason have descended: into the savage jungle of mob politics. America, the most powerful voice of freedom in modern times after the British Empire, felled by a dagger thrust into its back by the American people and their Democrat Party. Look at the Democrat Party today and see the national voice of the communist mob, one half of the electorate, shred the nation's constitution and traditional commitment to liberal values. Listen to the party's proclamations and see a majority rule nation descend into totalitarian madness. The party proclaims that people who support individual rights and limited government are racist, right wing extremists. It proclaims that the Republican Party, the party of free soil, free people, antislavery and libertarian philosophy, is a lash of white power and national socialism. It proclaims that a progressive society is anticapitalist, antisemitic and antiIsrael. It proclaims that a progressive society promotes mass violence against innocent people in the name of fighting fascism and marching under Black Lives Matter. It proclaims that a progressive society is a communist regime called Antifa. It proclaims that a progressive society is ruled by communist universities and communist assassination brigades. It proclaims that a progressive society allows left wing extremists to tear up shops, squares, schools and streets. It proclaims that a progressive society indoctrinates the people through the communist channels of its mainstream media. It proclaims that a progressive society is a democratic communist society. It proclaims that a progressive society elects far left radicals as its president and in its parliament. It proclaims that a progressive society has abolished its borders, its police and its prisons and become a sanctuary and refuge for a global communist mob. It proclaims that a progressive society is a Marxist and Palestinian army of terror. It proclaims that a progressive society promotes universal socialist enslavement as the highest form of neighborliness. It proclaims that a progressive society promotes violence by the far left in the name of freedom for women, blacks and the poor. It proclaims that a progressive society is a theater of war for Marxists and Islamists in their united campaign to destroy civilization. It proclaims that a progressive society arrests and jails supporters of Donald Trump and his movement to make America free again and arrests and jails nobody else. It proclaims that a progressive society is run by communist media and computer corporations which suppress anticommunist information and deplatform anticommunist viewpoints. It proclaims that a progressive society is run by billionaire Marxists who get communist rioters, vandals, felons and bomb throwers out of jail. It proclaims that a progressive society is a communist incendiary society which sets fire to Jews, Israelis and whites, and seeks to abolish America and return the land to native savages. It proclaims that a progressive society is a radical society colored red, which enforces the Marxist creed of MeToo feminism, black power, gay politics, lesbian politics, Islamist politics, and transgenderist politics which denies the existence of sex chromosomes. It proclaims that a progressive society is a communist, fascist fever swamp blazing with the disease carriers of gender, race and class tribalism and burning up the constitution of liberty: "Lately, the Mainstream Media have developed an obsession with covering fringe extremists supposedly on the right—most of them have racist or borderline racist views, which aren't representative of the right—in an effort to pretend these characters represent the Republican Party. For example, no one would even know who Nick Fuentes is if it weren't for the MSM constantly promoting him. Turning Point USA kicked him out of their annual convention in Phoenix last December, but if you read the MSM, you would think he's the face of the right. Meanwhile, the MSM pretends that the face of the Democratic Party is beautiful minorities. The truth is, extremists on the left actually ARE becoming the face of the left. Radical antisemites violently protesting on college campuses, Antifa and BLM rioting in the streets and the Squad are now staples of the modern Democratic Party. Unlike the right, the left doesn't denounce its left wing extremists. In contrast, a video clip went viral compiling the many, many times that Trump, who used to have a black girlfriend, publicly denounced white supremacy. MSM reporters constantly ask him to condemn white supremacism, as if he has never done so and they are the first to cleverly think of it. The Squad has become the face of the Democratic Party in Congress, and even though a couple of their far left radicals were defeated for reelection this year in their primaries due to their extremism, the Squad is expanding. It went from the four original members to nine, although it will shrink a little due to Cori Bush and Jamaal Bowman losing their primaries. Two other names have been suggested to add to the Squad, Vermont's Becca Balint and Florida's Maxwell Frost. All but Ilhan Omar, Ayanna Pressley and Delia Ramirez are currently or formerly affiliated with the Democratic Socialists of America. In 2021, the DSA peaked at 95,000 members. It's credited with the rise of socialism among millennials. DSA calls for abolishing ICE and abolishing the police and prisons. DSA used to support Israel, until 2016 when it took on a proPalestinian stance. The organization bragged that it was partially responsible for convincing Kamala Harris to choose far left Minnesota Governor Tim Walz as her vice presidential running mate. Walz said last month, 'Don't ever shy away from our progressive values. One person's socialism is another person's neighborliness.' Violence on the left continues to increase. A 2021 study from SUNY Oswego found that within the US, 'the far left has a larger proportion of homicides with multiple fatalities and a slightly higher rate of homicides targeting law enforcement,' and 'far left extremist violence has increased over the last five years.' Unfortunately, the data from the study regarding far right extremist violence is based on claiming that offensive racist groups are on the right, so it's not trustworthy. This sadly taints most studies about violence on the right and left, making them unusable. Antifa rioted at the Trump presidential inauguration in 2017, injuring six police officers and resulting in the arrest of 217 people that day—far worse than the real situation on J6, where only 14 were arrested that day. BLM and Antifa rioting after the death of George Floyd caused destruction all over the country in major cities. Journalist Andy Ngo extensively documented this type of violence, especially in Portland, where he was seriously injured by the rioters." (The Extreme Left Fringe Now Represents The Democratic Party by Rachel Alexander). It was founded in the Soviet Union on March 2, 1919 by Lenin, Trotsky and Stalin. It was an international organization which advocated world communism and was controlled by the Soviet Communist Party. At its Second Congress in 1920, it set forth its mission to destroy freedom throughout the world: "We resolve to struggle by all available means, including armed force, for the overthrow of the international bourgeois and the creation of an international Soviet Republic." (The Communist Revolution: An Outline Of Strategy And Tactics by Harold Fisher). In 1943, the Communist International changed its name to the Communist Information Bureau, and in 1956, after the death of Stalin, it was dissolved. It was dissolved in form but not in spirit. From the time of the Russian Revolution up to the present day, an international communist movement has existed. In the twenty first century, it is alive and well and stronger than ever. It is the number one religion ruling the West today. Its main branch is located in America and is commanded by the Democrat Party.

THE ESTABLISHMENT DEBATES TRUMP

On September 10, 2024 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, at 9 PM Eastern Daylight Time, over the ABC television network, a debate commenced between Donald Trump and the American establishment. The voices of the establishment were Vice President Kamala Harris, running for president on the Democrat Party ticket, and the moderators, David Muir and Linsey Davis, who had abandoned their designated roles as impartial arbitrators and donned the mantles of partisans for Harris. They fact checked Trump five times during the debate while refusing to fact check Harris once. Their fact checking of Trump was unfounded on every occasion. For ninety minutes, the establishment via Harris, Muir and Davis condemned Trump whenever he stated fact and reality. The establishment had severe problems with Trump during the debate. It had severe problems with Trump's record of freedom and prosperity and his exposure of extremism and insanity. It condemned Trump over his record as president in seeking to make America free again and in standing up to Marxism. It condemned Trump for his record of low inflation brought about by his refusal to inject trillion dollar government stimulus payments into the economy. It condemned Trump for his Tax Cuts and Jobs Act. This act reduced taxes across the board for all Americans. It created hundreds of thousands of new and high paying jobs for Americans and increased the wealth of the poor and middle class. The establishment condemned Trump for exposing Kamala Harris's Marxist lineage. It condemned Trump for exposing Harris's father as a long time Marxist economist at Stanford University. It condemned Trump for exposing David Harris's advocacy of communist totalitarian dictatorship in the name of abolishing economic inequality, achieving equal income distribution, achieving equal economic development, abolishing private capital accumulation, and abolishing private profit, private property and individual rights. The establishment condemned Trump for his control of the nation's southern border. It condemned Trump for his successful fight against enemy aliens and criminal gangs seeking to enter the nation. It condemned Trump for his successful interdiction of fentanyl smuggled in from Mexico. It condemned Trump for his establishment of American border security. It condemned Trump for his condemnation of Haitian subhumanity settling in the nation by the tens of thousands. It condemned Trump for his condemnation of Haitians torturing geese and local wildlife and eating them alive in public view. It condemned Trump for his opposition to transgenderism. According to this doctrine, the scientifically established facts of DNA, genes and sex chromosomes do not in fact exist, and human gender can be changed by human belief or action. Individuals who have changed their gender are called transgender individuals, and a transgender female is as real as a biological female, and a transgender male is as real as a biological male. The establishment condemned Trump for his opposition to taxpayer dollars funding surgical treatment and hormone therapy for psychotic individuals in prison, or in detention centers for enemy aliens, who claim to be members of the opposite sex or to be both male and female at one and the same time. It condemned Trump for his opposition to requirements that border patrol authorities refer to psychotic enemy aliens who claim to be members of the opposite sex with the pronouns of their choice. It condemned Trump for his opposition to the legitimation of transgender psychosis in the name of gender affirming care, assisting Americans with disabilities, providing proper medical and mental health services, and the United States Constitution's guarantee of equal protection to all. It condemned Trump for his opposition to antiIsrael activism and the downplaying of Hamas terror. It condemned Trump for his opposition to affirmative action policies which enforce racism and sexism and discrimination against white males in the name of achieving diversity, equity and inclusion. It condemned Trump for his opposition to the establishment of workforces and student bodies selected, not on the basis of individual merit or ability, but tribalistically to reflect the race, gender and ethnic composition of society. It condemned Trump for his opposition to nationwide riots, looting and vandalism staged in the name of Black Lives Matter. It condemned Trump for his opposition to the nation of Islam and the nation of Marx which seek to abolish liberal traditions and institutions. It condemned Trump for his opposition to racist hate groups which seek to exterminate whites in the name of black proletarian liberation. It condemned Trump for his opposition to Palestinian solidarity movements which seek to kill all Jews. It condemned Trump for his opposition to communist insurrection and the call to arms proclaimed in the name of fighting fascism. It condemned Trump for his opposition to Antifa which conducts anticapitalist violence and seeks to reestablish the Soviet Union on American shores. It condemned Trump for his opposition to Marxist extremism, terror and encirclement of the nation: "Trump said he 'had no inflation' during his tenure in the White House. Prices overall rose 19% over the first 42 months of Biden's term compared with 6% during Trump's first 42 months, according to Forbes. Year over year inflation peaked under Biden at a four decade high of 9% in 2022. Harris said she is the only candidate promoting an opportunity economy, but Trump's Tax Cuts and Jobs Act gave the 82% of middle income earners a tax cut that averaged about one thousand and fifty dollars, according to FactCheck.org. 'I was raised in a middle class home,' Harris said, 'And I am actually the only person on the stage who has a plan to lift up the middle class and the working people, and when you look at his economic plan, it's all about tax breaks for the richest people.' But even the Biden-Harris administration's Treasury secretary, Janet Yellen, acknowledged that Trump's 2017 Tax Cuts and Jobs Act cut taxes for all. The year following the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act, new job openings surged, and about 83,000 more Americans voluntarily left their jobs for better opportunities at the end of 2019, compared with the trend before the reform. The claim that Harris' father is a Marxist was fact checked by Snopes as 'true' after a viral X post from political economist Maxine Fowe: 'Did you know that Kamala Harris' father, Donald J Harris, was a postKeynesian & Marxian economist? His research focused on economic inequality, uneven development & how the growth rate of an economy is fundamentally dependent on the class structure of society.' Donald Harris, a now retired professor of economics at Stanford University, was the author of a 1978 book, Capital Accumulation And Income Distribution. It features ideas on Karl Marx's theory of capital. 'His book, Capital Accumulation and Income Distribution, published in 1978 and dedicated to Kamala and her sister, examines the pitfalls of relying on profit seeking capitalists to direct an economy,' writes The Economist. The New Yorker wrote of Donald Harris being 'a renowned Marxist economist from Jamaica who taught at Stanford University for decades.' With the border and illegal immigration being one of the most important issues among voters in the 2024 presidential election, it's no surprise moderators raised the issue early on in the debate. Muir began by asking Harris why the Biden administration waited 'until six months before the election' to take action on the border, referring to Biden's recent executive order limiting illegal border crossings. Harris answered by touting her work prosecuting 'transnational criminal organizations,' before attacking Trump for opposing a controversial border bill that failed in the Senate twice. Harris said the failed bill 'would have allowed us to stem the flow of fentanyl' coming into the US, and would have provided 'more resources to prosecute transnational criminal organizations.' The failed bill directed the Department of Homeland Security to close the southern border 'during a period of seven consecutive calendar days, if there is an average of 5,000 or more aliens who are encountered each day.' Over 1.8 million illegal aliens a year still would have been permitted to enter the United States under the now twice failed legislation. Harris blamed Trump for the bill's failure, saying the former president 'got on the phone' and told Republican members of Congress to 'kill the bill.' Trump, and many GOP members of Congress, were clear about their opposition to the proposed border security bill, arguing it would enshrine harmful border policies into law. The Senate border bill 'codified Joe Biden's open border,' Senator Ted Cruz, R-Texas, said of the bill in February. Senator James Lankford, R-Okla., led the way in negotiating the terms of the bill with Democrats. Even if the Senate had successfully passed the bill, House Speaker Mike Johnson said the bill would have been 'dead on arrival' in the House. Trump claimed Haitian immigrants that have flocked by the thousands to Springfield, Ohio are 'eating the pets of the people that live there, and this is what's happening in our country, and it's a shame.' A recording of a police phone reveal(ed) a local resident reporting a group of Haitian migrants carrying four geese in Springfield two weeks ago, according to a Federalist report. 'A recording of a police phone call obtained by The Federalist reveals a local resident reporting a group of Haitian migrants carrying four geese in Springfield, Ohio two weeks ago. I'm sitting here, I'm riding on the trail, I'm going to my orientation for my job today, and I see a group of Haitian people, there was about four of them, they all had geese in their hand, the caller tells the public services dispatcher in the audio recording of the call. " (Fact Checking Claims Made In Trump-Harris Debate by Virginia Allen, Fred Lucas et al). A power hammer is a mechanical forging device using electric power to raise the hammer before striking and then accelerate it onto the metal being hammered. These powerful tools have been used by blacksmiths and metalworkers since the late nineteenth century. On September 10, 2024 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, at 9 PM Eastern Daylight Time, over the ABC television network, Donald Trump was hammered for ninety minutes by three power tools of the establishment. The America he sought to defend, the America predicated on constitutional rights and the ideals fought for on the battlefields of Lexington and Concord, has been hammered by the power tools of communist mobs since the dawn of the twentieth century. On September 10, 2024 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, 67 million viewers across the nation saw the hammering continue by three proxies of the mob. Half of these viewers gave standing ovations to the mob during the twilight stages of civilization.

DEATH OF A STATESMEN

The white horse has been mythologized throughout history in lands throughout the world. The Greek historian Herodotus says that the white horse was held to be a sacred animal by Persian Emperor Xerxes the Great. Down through the ages, the animal has symbolized purity, enlightenment, heroism, a sign of hope in times of difficulty, and the triumph of good over evil. It forms the basis of a well known phrase in the English language. A man on a white horse refers to a person who enters a field of battle to defeat the enemy and save his people. On April 8, 1990, a man on a white horse appeared on the scene in a South American nation mauled apart by the forces of civilizational destruction. On this day, Alberto Fujimori strode into a theater of war called Peru, a portion of space, a nation existing in name only, dominated by Marxists spreading economic slavery and terror in the streets, and saved his people. On September 11, 2024, Alberto Fujimori died, but his achievements and legacy live forever in the annals of public virtue compiled by decent, law abiding people. Alberto Fujimori: look at the man, the president and the savior of Peru and see a profile in courage Peru had never witnessed before. Alberto Fujimori: hated by Marxists as he was exalted by the defenders of Peruvian civilization. Alberto Fujimori: condemned by Marxists as an authoritarian strongman because he would not allow democratic institutions to vote tyranny into power and to sustain tyranny in power. Alberto Fujimori: he led an undemocratic government un beholden to the Marxist mob and committed to restoring constitutional rights to the people. Alberto Fujimori: sentenced by mob courts to twenty five years in jail for exterminating 69,000 Marxist lice with the people's fumigation squads. Alberto Fujimori: an unknown political candidate, appeared from nowhere, defeated a favored candidate, and dealt decisively with the Marxist danger which had engulfed the nation. Alberto Fujimori: in place of Marxist control over the economy, he established the right of free people to conduct private businesses. Alberto Fujimori: in place of Marxist economic collapse and Marxist political violence, he established the rule of free markets and private property and abolished state subsidies, state enterprises and invasive state regulations. Alberto Fujimori: he abolished rampant Marxist borrowing, spending and printing of money, and ended the Marxist hyperinflation which had bankrupted the nation. Alberto Fujimori: his austerity policies, known as Fujishock, influenced liberal reformers across South America. Alberto Fujimori: he dissolved the mob controlled Congress and courts which were blocking his war on Marxist terror. Alberto Fujimori: he defeated a ten year Marxist uprising which had claimed the lives of tens of thousand of people. Alberto Fujimori: he captured the leader of the Marxist Shining Path terror group, Abimael Guzman, in 1992. Alberto Fujimori: he displayed the captured leader in a cage wearing a prisoner's uniform, a befitting state for the criminal against humanity he was, to the grateful cheers of the public. After the capture of Guzman, the Shining Path dissolved, but in 2010, after the crackdown by Fujimori had ended, the group reassembled and began enslaving indigenous people. During its heyday before its defeat by Fujimori, the group had killed 12,500 people and was the largest and most powerful Marxist terror group in Peru's history. Alberto Fujimori: won standing ovations and landslide victories from the people due to his defeat of Marxism in the economy and on the streets. Alberto Fujimori: he sent commandos into the Japanese ambassador's residence to defeat the Marxist Tupac Amaru terrorists occupying the building, killed the fourteen terrorists, freed the seventy two hostages being held there, and garnered thunderous praise by the people as a resolute antiMarxist man of steel. Alberto Fujimori: he defeated Marxist guerrilla insurgencies poised to take over the nation. Alberto Fujimori: deployed the army and intelligence services to surveil and suppress Marxist politicians, judges and media figures leading a campaign of subversion against the nation. Alberto Fujimori: he deployed the power and resources of the government to finance an unprecedented third term as president in order to deal with the unprecedented emergency the nation had descended into under the hammer blows of Marxism. Alberto Fujimori: the establishment condemned his antiMarxist campaign as a symptom of moral incapacity, gained control of Congress and dismissed him, sought to arrest and imprison him on charges of human rights abuses in his campaign to defeat the inhuman enemies of freedom, and framed his antiMarxist intelligence chief, Vladimiro Montesinos, on charges of bribery. Alberto Fujimori: he was forced to flee to Japan and lived there for five years. Alberto Fujimori: he was arrested in Chile, extradited to Peru, framed on a variety of criminal charges, from embezzlement to electoral fraud to human rights abuses, all payback for his campaign, supported by the civilized half of the nation, to rid public life of the cancer of Marxism: "The controversial former Peruvian president, Alberto Fujimori has died aged 86. To his supporters, Fujimori was the president who saved Peru from the twin evils of terrorism and economic collapse. To his opponents, he was an authoritarian strongman who rode roughshod over the country's democratic institutions to preserve his hold on power. In 2009, he was sentenced to 25 years in jail for human rights abuses committed during his time in office--including authorizing killings carried out by death squads--but he was released from prison in December after a pardon on humanitarian grounds was reinstated. An agricultural engineer born of Japanese parents, Fujimori upset the odds when he won the Peruvian presidency in 1990 against Nobel Prize winning author Mario Vargas Llosa. Fujimori was a political unknown until weeks before the vote. Few knew what to expect from him when he inherited a country on the verge of economic collapse and racked by political violence. He implemented a radical program of free market reforms, removing subsidies, privatising state owned companies and reducing the role of the state in almost all spheres of the economy. Though this shock therapy brought great hardship for ordinary Peruvians, it ended rampant hyperinflation and paved the way for sustained economic growth in the second half of the 1990s. Fujimori also tackled the left wing rebels whose 10 year insurgency caused thousands of deaths. But he says he never approved a 'dirty war' against the rebels. In 1992, with the support of the military, the president dissolved the Peruvian congress and courts and seized dictatorial powers. He justified the measure by arguing that the legislative and judiciary had been hindering the security forces in their fight against the rebels. Opposition politicians said he was really seeking to escape democratic accountability. But that same year he was vindicated in the eyes of many Peruvians by the capture of the leader of the main rebel group, the Shining Path. In 1995, Fujimori stood for reelection and won an overwhelming victory.

Most voters cited his victories over left wing insurgents and hyperinflation as the reason for giving him their support. One of the key moments of his presidency was the hostage siege by Marxist MRTA rebels at the Japanese ambassador's residence in Lima in 1996-97. After a four month stand off, commandos were sent in to take the building. All 14 rebels were killed and nearly all the 72 hostages were rescued in an operation that at the time cemented Mr Fujimori's reputation of a man of action. In his second term though, a growing number of Peruvians began to voice concern that the methods used against the insurgency were also being employed against the president's democratic opponents. His critics accused him of using the intelligence service led by Vladimiro Montesinos to intimidate and spy on rivals. They said he exerted unfair control on the media and the judiciary, and used government resources to support his own campaigns. This criticism increased when he announced he was to stand for an unprecedented third successive term. Although he won the May 2000 elections, the victory marked the start of his downfall. A tape emerged showing Montesinos apparently bribing an opposition member of Congress. After the scandal broke, the opposition gained control of Congress for the first time in eight years and dismissed Fujimori on grounds of 'moral incapacity.' In November 2000, he fled to his parents' native Japan, where he lived for five years in self imposed exile. In an effort to resurrect his political career and launch a new bid for the presidency, he flew to Chile in November 2005, only to be arrested at the request of the Peruvian authorities." (Peruvian Strongman Alberto Fujimori's Death Leaves Divisive Legacy, BBC News, September 11, 2024). In the American Old West, a Texas Ranger fought outlaws with his Indian friend Tonto and his white horse. An shining icon of American culture, the Lone Ranger lived by a strict moral code, which stated: I believe in being prepared physically, mentally, and morally to fight when necessary for what is right. On September 11, 2024, weeping Peruvians gathered outside the home of Alberto Fujimori after his children had announced his death. They chanted Alberto Fujimori, national hero! They praised him for defeating the Shining Path and its Marxist invasion of the nation. They praised him for storming the Marxist Tupac Amaru, releasing the hostages it was holding, and killing the members of the group. They praised him for placing the economy back on the track of freedom and eliminating skyrocketing inflation. They praised him for draining the swampland called democracy because the mobs in Congress and the courts had prevented him from taking the measures necessary to eliminate Marxist terror. On the day of Fujimori's death, the Peruvian government declared three days of national mourning for the nation's Lone Ranger.

RED ARMY INVADES AMERICA

"There is only one way to prevent the restoration of the police, and that is to create a people's militia and to fuse it with the army. The standing army must be replaced by the arming of the entire people. Thus spoke Vladimir Lenin in September 1917 in The Tasks Of The Proletariat In Our Revolution. Thus were seeds planted in revolutionary Russia for the establishment of a Red Army to enforce communism. On January 28, 1918, the Council Of People's Commissars ordered the formation of such an army. Its task was to spread the new religion of Marx at home and abroad, under the principle today Russia, tomorrow the world: "The old army was a class instrument in the hands of the bourgeois for the oppression of the workers. The seizure of power by the workers and propertyless persons renders necessary the formation of a new army. The tasks of this new army will be the defense of the Soviet authority, the creation of a basis for the transformation of the standing army into a force deriving its strength from a nation in arms, and, furthermore, the creation of a basis for the support of the coming socialist revolution in Europe." (Scheme For A Socialist Army, Decree of the Council of People's Commissars, January 28, 1918). Acting under the slogan exhortation, organization and reprisals, the Red Army was the hammer of control in the nations under its occupation, and for seven decades it held Europe in the grip of fear. On May 7, 1992, following the dissolution of the Soviet Union, the Red Army ceased operations, and a new Russian Army took its place. The Red Army died in body but its soul migrated, and found a new home 9000 kilometers away in the nation which led the free world's struggle against communism during the Cold War. In a fact stranger than fiction, a fact which had to be seen to be believed, the Soviet Red Army found a new home in the United States of America, and carried on its task with new names and new slogans. In a fact which illustrated like nothing else the relentless advance of cultural decay when set into motion by the mass abandonment of reason, an advance sparing no nation or society great or small, America, the world's arsenal and lighthouse of freedom for one hundred years, fell to the enemies of freedom in the twenty first century when the resurrected ghost of the Soviet Red Army invaded its shores. The fall of America was high, fast and hard and the crash sent waves of thunder racing through the world signaling the decline and fall of the West itself. In the twenty first century, America's mobs have assumed control over the armed forces and transformed the world's mightiest military, whose trillion dollar budget is the largest military budget in the world, accounting for forty percent of the world's military expenditures, and whose deployment and power projection span the distant reaches of Earth and outer space, into a blazing fever swamp spewing out the gases of radical politics. The mission of America's military in the twenty first century is the renunciation of the founding mission of the Continental Army stated in 1775. That mission was to defend the cause of freedom, while the new millennium mission is to defend the cause of Marxism and its race and gender derivatives. In the twenty first century, after fighting world wars and regional wars in defense of freedom, after fighting the kaiser's tyranny, Hitler's tyranny, Marxist tyranny and Islamist tyranny, America's military in the twenty first century exists in name only and is in reality an army, not of America, but of an international movement which once was headquartered in the former Soviet Union. America's military in the twenty first century is a new updated Red Army and it has invaded the nation. Look at the mission statement of the new Red Army and hear the funeral march of the nation's constitution of freedom, a death bell tolled by the mob which stabbed its nation in the back. The mission statement proclaims that a progressive military is not a defense of the nation against the external enemies of freedom but is a research, teaching and experimentation station for the advancement of Marxism. It proclaims that a progressive military enforces the religious dogma of critical race theory. According to this, legitimate political theory is critical of Enlightenment values and rejects human essentialism and universality. It is a doctrine of race essentialism and black Hitlerite politics which condemns liberal democracy as a regime of white privilege and subconscious racism, and it advocates the overthrow of liberal democracy and the extermination of whites. The mission statement of the new Red Army proclaims that a progressive military enforces policies of race and gender discrimination, and calls its racism, sexism and exclusion of white males the achievement of diversity, inclusion, and the highest form of fairness and equity. It proclaims that a progressive military rejects the principle of merit and the equality of all before the law, and enforces affirmative action, the diversity, equity and inclusion policies of exclusion of white males, in every workplace, community, immediate family and extended family in the land. It proclaims that a progressive military affirms that capitalism equals systemic racism and the rejection of equal rights for minorities. It proclaims that a progressive military affirms that American constitutionalism and the capitalist system are regimes of white slaveholding. It proclaims that a progressive military requires all white personnel of all ranks and titles, including civilians, to undergo workplace sensitivity training which will order them to treat black personnel as members of a master race, and to bow down in submission to them as members of a subaltern white race. It proclaims that a progressive military is a politicized military and rolling tank fleet of Marxist imperialism. It proclaims that a progressive military rejects America's founding motto, Out of Many One, the motto of assimilation to a common set of liberal values and the cause of universal freedom transcending tribal differences, and rolls its tanks through the nation enforcing the Marxist motto, Universal Tribalism and Gender, Race and Class Politics: "The sole purpose of the U.S. Armed Forces is to defend the nation against its external enemies. The service academies train officers committed to fulfilling this mission. This mission—defense of the nation—makes the US Armed Forces arguably the most important institution in the United States. Without a nation, other institutions are meaningless because they would not exist. Given its importance, the US Armed Forces should not be a laboratory for social experimentation, especially one based on Critical Race Theory, a contentious and abstract social theory. Yet, as this Commission Report on Civic Education in the Military shows in great detail, Critical Race Theory is promoted within Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion (DEI) training throughout the military from the Pentagon through the ranks and in our service academies. Critical Race Theory is based on an assumption that no matter what progress is made on ensuring equal rights for minorities, 'white privilege' and 'subconscious' racism continues to prevail among whites, no matter their professed support for diversity and inclusion in their workplace, community, or immediate and extended families. Critical Race Theory assumes that racism is systemic from the very founding of the United States and that the US Constitution was drafted to ensure the white privilege of slaveholders. Whatever the appearance of progress—constitutional amendments and legislation to protect equal rights for racial minorities—is a facade that still preserves white privilege. Critical Race Theory is based on assumptions, not empirically derived evidence, and is by nature divisive. Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion programs, which rely on Critical Race Theory, should not be seen as workplace sensitivity training. The Commission on Civic Education in the Military began as a project to review civic education in the military. Our research team did not expect to find Critical Race Theory so embedded and pervasive. Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion programs are found throughout the US Armed Forces and our service academies. This year long study documents just how pervasive these training programs are in our Armed Forces and Service Academies and that DEI extends well beyond just formal training programs in the military and service academies. The Founders of our nation understood and feared a politicized military. History had shown them that a politicized army easily became the tool of tyranny. The Armed Forces of the United States has proudly upheld this long tradition of separating mission from politics. The commissioners for this project believe that military training for service men and women in all ranks needs to inculcate and reinforce pride in our nation, pride in service, and in our country's motto, E Pluribus Unum (Out of Many One)." (Civic Education In The Military, National Commission On Civic Education In The Military, Arizona State University). The mission statement of the new Red Army proclaims that a progressive military defends its nation against the enemies of Marxism in foreign lands. It proclaims that a progressive military rejects the liberal essence of America and the belief that freedom belongs to all persons, and promotes race, gender, ethnic, cultural differences. It proclaims that a progressive military rejects America's founding motto, Out of Many, One, which means, Out of Many Tribes and Backgrounds, a Liberal, Assimilated Nation, and promotes race and gender divisions, discrimination and the exclusion of white males in the name of achieving diversity, equity and inclusion. It proclaims that a progressive military rejects the liberal vocabulary of freedom and individual rights and teaches its recruits, officers and civilian personnel at all levels the Marxist vocabulary of gender, race and class dictatorship. It proclaims that a progressive military affirms that America's liberal thoughts, ideas, daily life and political institutions are the voices of racism, oppression and white supremacy and must be subverted by a diversity, equity and inclusion agitation vocabulary and a global Marxism revolution: "The American people hold our service men and women and their leaders, who defend this nation from foreign enemies, in the highest esteem. The men and women serving in our Armed Forces stand ready to sacrifice life and limb to protect this exceptional nation. E Pluribus Unum, (Out of Many, One), our country's motto, captures the essence of our nation. Ethnically, racially, religiously, and culturally diverse, we stand united in our belief that liberty binds us as a nation. Today our cadets and midshipmen in our military service academies are instructed through Diversity, Equity and Inclusion (DEI) training that belies—indeed, subverts—the concept E Pluribus Unum. In extensive and multiple DEI training programs that are implemented through every rank, our service men and women are instructed to believe that this nation was built on systematic racism embedded in the founding of our country and that that system underlies daily life in the country today. Racism is so endemic, these DEI programs declare, that people are not even aware of their racism. DEI training insists that white supremacy permeates every facet of American life, institutions, and individual thought and insists service members utilize the divisive vocabulary of oppressed vs oppressor." (Civic Education In The Military, National Commission On Civic Education In The Military, Arizona State University). Upon the ashes of the great war, the Bolsheviks created a new army. These facts demand no explanation for any one who has even the slightest knowledge of the language of history. The strongest cement in the new army was the ideas of the November revolution, and The Train supplied the front with this cement. Thus spoke Leon Trotsky in his autobiography My Life. This People's Commissar of Army and Navy Affairs, this first commander of the fearsome Red Army, had a successor one hundred years later in the New World in the new millennium. Worshiping at the altar of Trotsky's Communist Revolution and the infamous command and propaganda train he used during the revolution to travel between Red Army fronts, his successor was America's mob, founder and commander of the nation's own Red Army.

DEATH KNOCKS FROM HAITI

Three thousand years ago, in the Tian Shan mountains of Central Asia, a bacterium appeared in the world. Known as yersinia pestis, it was brought to the West by the Golden Horde of the Mongol Empire in 1347 via a Genoese trading port in Crimea. It was carried from Crimea by fleas living on rats, and it spread into North Africa, the Near East and Europe. This was the bubonic plague, the Black Death, and from 1347 to 1353, it killed 50,000,000 people in Europe, fifty percent of the continent's population, and was the deadliest pandemic in human history. One thousand years after this scourge from the East decimated the West, a plague has appeared in a land which led the fight of the free world against the enemies of civilization. It has appeared because it was unleashed at the borders of America by the nation's enemies within. It comes from the South, in a nation located on the island of Hispaniola in the Caribbean Sea, east of Cuba and Jamaica and south of The Bahamas. It comes from the third largest nation in the Caribbean, with a population of 11 million, the most populous nation in the Caribbean. One thousand years after the Black Death devastated Europe, it has returned in human form to a land called Haiti, migrated across the Caribbean Sea, and spread death and destruction across America. It was let into the nation by treasonous mobs enamored of multiculturalism, migration and madness packaged in the mob's ruling orthodoxy of Marxism. In the United States of America in the twenty first century, in the nation hallowed by a revolutionary war for the cause of freedom two hundred years ago, which blasted out rifle shots heard around the world, the mob has assumed control and dissolved the nation's borders. Look at the Haitian invasion of America and see a process of national self destruction brought about by landslide democratic votes, and see two hundred years of liberal order repealed by mob politics, far left populism, Marxist agitation and an establishment doing their bidding. See a Haitian plague create a shortage of homes for working people, and launch the prices of houses and apartments into the stratosphere. See it spread infectious diseases and cripple the nation with the discharges of demons. See it torture, kill and consume wildlife in public. See it smash up automobiles, render roads unsafe to drive on and make automobile insurance unaffordable. See it terrorize neighborhoods with rolling waves of crime. See the establishment ignore citizens' complaints and entreaties to stop the plague and see the establishment label such citizens as racist. See the establishment label those who want the Haitian plague stopped as the enemies of black excellence. See the establishment label those who want the Haitian plague stopped as violent criminals and enemies of democracy. See a Haitian plague brought by 20,000 human fleas subsidized by the state. See the establishment treat decent, law abiding people who support liberal order as second class citizens and subalterns of a Haitian master race. See a Haitian plague steal jobs from honest citizens by the plague's carriers agreeing to work at animal wages. See the establishment import Marxist voters from Haiti to maintain itself in power indefinitely. See the establishment silence the voices opposed to the Haitian corruption of society and the Marxist rigging of elections by means of Haitian votes. These voices are led by Donald Trump, the spearhead of a movement which seeks to make America free, safe and recognizable again, victim of two assassination attempts, one on July 13, 2024 and another on September 15, 2024, two days which will live forever in the annals of Marxist subversion of free societies: "Democrats are scoffing at the civic and economic damage federal migration policy has caused ordinary Americans in Springfield, Ohio, says Senator JD Vance (R-OH), former President Donald Trump's running mate. 'Housing costs skyrocketing. Communicable diseases on the rise. Car accidents, crime, and [auto] insurance premiums moving up. Citizens complaining for months (or longer) and mostly ignored.' Vance posted on X on Friday, adding: [The harm is] not just what's happening, it's the way our leadership responds to it. Confronted with many of their citizens begging for relief, our broken elites offer only scorn. It is racist, they tell us, to get angry at being unable to afford a home, or to complain about being unable to drive a car safely down the streets paved by your neighbors, or to call 911 because strangers are slaughtering geese in a public park. They have ignored this town's problems for years. Now, they pay attention—not to focus their considerable wealth and power on helping their fellow citizens. But to use their platform as a weapon against those who dare to notice that their lives have gotten worse. Some establishment media reports acknowledge some of the economic costs that the large scale, government funded arrival of perhaps 20,000 illegal immigrants in a small town of almost 60,000 Americans have imposed. However, very few media outlets admit how migration disadvantages Americans and aids migrants when seeking housing and jobs. 'For our government to totally throw aside national citizens, people that were born and raised here [is wrong]. They're treating us like we're the trash,' one American told a reporter. Instead, media outlets and Democrats portray citizens and Trump's campaign as threats to Haitian migrants even though citizens are protesting President Joe Biden's policy of importing migrant labor to fill low wage jobs that vast budget deficits have created. For example, on Friday, many media outlets spotlighted Biden blaming Trump after anonymous bomb threats forced the closure of schools and government buildings. The Washington Post wrote: 'I want to take a moment to say something [about the] Haitian American community that's under attack in our country right now,' Biden said during a White House event celebrating black excellence. 'It's simply wrong. There's no place in America. This has to stop, what he's [Trump's] doing. It has to stop!' Vance, however, pushed back: 'Nothing justifies violence or the threat of violence levied against Springfield or its residents. We condemn both. But the existence of threats doesn't justify silencing those who wish to petition their leadership for a better life. There is no heckler's veto in our country. Donald Trump was shot in the head, and yet they still call him a threat to democracy. Yet it is Kamala Harris who is a threat to democracy. It is Kamala Harris who would rather import new voters than persuade the ones who are already here. It is Kamala Harris who would rather ignore the citizens of Springfield than undo the policies that hurt them. It is Kamala Harris who would rather censor her fellow Americans than listen to them. What we are seeing from Kamala Harris and her enablers in the media is disgusting. And there is only one person who has consistently stood up to Kamala Harris and the entire corrupt system she represents. There is only one person who has consistently fought for the people Kamala Harris laughs at or ignores. Donald J. Trump for President, Vance concluded.' Since 2021, Biden and his deputies have imported almost ten million legal and illegal immigrants—around one immigrant for every American birth." (JD Vance: Democrats Scoff At Americans Harmed By Migration by Neil Munro). Look at America in the twenty first century and see a Haitian plague proliferate to infinity and overwhelm towns. See it turbocharge the crime rate and smash up roads and bridges with traffic accidents. See it attack people on the streets and steal their money and cars. See it invade schools and send students running for their lives before alien, incomprehensible speech and violent, disruptive behavior. See it bankrupt schools by forcing them to establish massive remedial English programs. See it confront parents, teachers and students with subhuman life forms incapable of acquiring knowledge or distinguishing between right and wrong, whose only language is the language of brute force:

"Charleroi, Pennsylvania, like Springfield, Ohio, is also experiencing a growing number of problems from a tidal wave of Haitian migrants flooding into their small town. While the media focuses on the woes of Springfield, Ohio, and its recent flood of Haitian migrants putting pressure on the small town, other small towns are experiencing similar problems. One of them is Charleroi, Pennsylvania, nestled on the banks of the Monongahela River south of Pittsburgh in the western part of the state. According to the activist group America-2100, the rural town has suffered a 2,000 percent increase in its population of Haitian migrants—and crime and traffic altercations have soared as a result. Residents have been flooding social media with reports that migrants are attacking people on the street and mugging them, stealing cars, and ending up in traffic accidents throughout the area. WPXI-TV reported in March that the rising number of immigrant children has stretched the local schools to the breaking point as administrators and teachers toil to educate migrant children, many of whom do not speak English, and some of whom have never gone to school in their entire young lives. One eleventh grade student told the station that a big problem is that many of these migrant students are really not learning anything despite being enrolled in free schools because they don't understand what is being said in class. 'The biggest challenge that every Haitian has is they don't know what you are saying. For them, it's like blah blah blah, you don't say nothing you are just sitting in the class listening and you just don't understand,' the child, who is also a Haitian migrant, said. Charleroi schools superintendent Dr Ed Zelich noted that the new students are costing his school hundreds of thousands of dollars spent to accommodate them. 'Just in the last year we had over $400,000, we had to add two ELL [English language learner] teachers, an ELL coach for our teachers, a registrar, an interpreter,' Zelich told WPIX." (Not Just Ohio: Small Pennsylvania Town Also Mired in Tidal Wave of Haitian Migrants by Warner Todd Huston). Night has fallen on America in the twenty first century. It was brought down by two forces implacably hostile to this child of the Enlightenment, for which its founding heroes fought and died on the battlefields of Lexington and Concord. It was brought down by an enemy within and an enemy without. The former enabled the latter to settle, multiply and expand across the length and breadth of this storied land. The latter is comprised of necromancers, sorcerers and voodoo priests risen from the twilight fields of Haiti. It is comprised of African demons risen from the Haitian marsh gases of raging insanity. The former is comprised of Marxist mobs forming the new American majority. The mobs have joined in an alliance with Haitian folklore and brought down upon the United States of America the night of the living dead.

ENDLESS ROUNDS AGAINST TRUMP

They occurred two months apart. The first occurred at a campaign rally near Butler, Pennsylvania on July 13, 2024, when Thomas Crooks fired eight rounds from an automatic rifle at Donald Trump, wounding Trump in his right ear, killing a member of the audience and critically injuring two others, before being killed himself by authorities. Thomas Crooks. Donated money to three communist political action organizations in America, ActBlue, the Progressive Turnout Project and the Democrat Party, and registered as a Republican to conceal his true identity: "When Crooks was 17 he made a $15 donation to ActBlue, a political action committee that raises money for left leaning and Democratic politicians, according to a 2021 Federal Election Commission filing seen by Reuters. The donation was earmarked for the Progressive Turnout Project, a national group that rallies Democrats to vote. At the time of the donation, Crooks was 17 years old. He registered to vote on turning 18 in September of that same year as a member of the GOP, records seen by the New York Post show." (What We Know About Trump Rally Shooter Thomas Matthew Crooks by Simon Kent). The second event occurred at the Trump International Golf Club in West Palm Beach Florida on September 15, 2024, when Ryan Routh aimed an SKS rifle at Trump, intending to kill him. He was fired on by authorities and was later captured. Ryan Routh. Donated money to ActBlue, the Democrat Party and Democrat candidates across the nation: "The suspect apprehended for reportedly attempting to kill former President Donald Trump on Sunday has a history of donating to Democrat political campaigns. Beginning in the 2020 election cycle in which ultimately Trump battled Joe Biden for the presidency, Ryan Routh of Hawaii made 19 donations to Democrats through ActBlue, the Democrats' fundraising platform, according to Federal Election Commission records reviewed by Breitbart News. Routh's 19 donations were small—the largest only $25 to Beto for America, a political action committee supporting Beto O'Rourke's ill Routh's donations shed more light on his motivations as media and Americans across the country scramble to learn more about the suspect. fated presidential run—and totaled $144.40. Those donations supported Democrat candidates as diverse as Elizabeth Warren, Andrew Yang, Tulsi Gabbard, and Tom Steyer." (Trump Assassination Suspect Donated 19 Times To Democrats by Bradley Jaye).

Ryan Routh. Supported communism, the Democrat Party and the assassination of Trump in the name of preserving freedom and democracy: "In an April post on X tagging President Biden's presidential account, he wrote that Biden's campaign should be: 'called something like KADAF. Keep America democratic and free. Trumps should be MASA: make Americans slaves again master. DEMOCRACY is on the ballot and we cannot lose. We cannot afford to fail. The world is counting on us to show the way.'" (CNN Politics, September 15, 2024). Two assassination attempts, sixty four days apart, staged by one half of the American electorate which no longer supported the founding ideals of the nation. Assassination attempts staged by communists have riddled the American political scene with bullet holes for over a century, commencing with the assassination of William McKinley in 1901 by Leon Czolgosz, mentored by communist doyenne Emma Goldman. While civilized people know the difference between freedom and tyranny, and advocate violence to remove tyranny, communists invert the difference. They identify freedom with tyranny and advocate violence to remove the voices of freedom, which they identify as tyrannical. For communists, the assassination of the voices of freedom is a moral and political necessity to liberate the people. After McKinley, communists assassinated John Kennedy in 1963, their comrades, the Islamists, assassinated Bobby Kennedy in 1968 over his support for Israel, and in 2024, they tried twice to assassinate Donald Trump, forty third president of the United States and running for reelection. Like the other assassination attempts, the attempts against Trump were staged by proxies of the mob, which began repealing freedom in state and national legislatures at the dawn of the twentieth century, and began hiring agents to remove the nation's executives. The assassination of McKinley was the opening shot of the mob's war to overthrow freedom in the nation which protected freedom throughout the world and was the strongest arsenal of freedom in the history of mankind. At the dawn of the twentieth century, the cancer of communism infected America via the dark portals of the mob, and the fall of the leader of the free world in the twenty first century illustrated like nothing else the iron law that this cancer spares no nation, great or small, in its relentless advance, and will make the mightiest tree of freedom rot away and decay, crash in the forest, and bury itself in opprobrium, in the blink of a historical eye. In the twenty first century, the mob recruited Thomas Crooks and Ryan Routh to kill Donald Trump because he is the latest national voice of freedom, the leader of a dying, minority movement, the death rattle of the American Revolution, within a blazing far left fever swamp known as America. Donald Trump has been targeted by two assassins because he is opposed to the mob's new religion of transgenderism. According to this, human genes, sex chromosomes and DNA do not exist and human gender is not fixed or immutable. Gender can be changed by human action or belief. A male can become a female and a female can become a male. A transgender male is as real as a biological male, and a transgender female is as real as a biological female. Transgender males and females are entitled to the same legal rights and recognition as biological males and females. Donald Trump has been targeted for assassination because he is opposed to state regulations mandating the placement of tampons in male bathrooms for use by transgender women. He has been targeted because he is opposed to a Marxist economy predicated on class war. He has been targeted because he is opposed to radical values which elevate the tribe above the individual and deny the existence of constitutional rights. He has been targeted because he believes that America's commander in chief should be the commander in chief of the cause of freedom and not the cause of gender, race and class politics. He has been ganged up on by the news media, falsely fact checked by television debate moderators who renounced all fairness and impartiality, and targeted for assassination because his cause promotes the substance and essence of freedom: "Former US Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich is now providing his perspective on the state of the 2024 presidential race, and says Democratic vice presidential nominee Tim Walz 'is legitimately called Tampon Tim because he's really so far to the left he's almost wacko.' The Republican from Georgia appeared on Sunday Morning Futures with Maria Bartiromo on the Fox News Channel, and called Tuesday night's debate between former President Trump and Democratic nominee Kamala Harris a 'tag team' with ABC News favoring Harris. 'It was three on one,' Gingrich said. 'I think she probably did well on style. She did terribly on substance. And every poll shows that.' 'Even CNN showed that President Trump was stronger on the economy after the debate than before the debate. And I think in that sense she did not gain any ground, she probably lost ground.' Gingrich says he believes the presidential contest is coming down to 'a very simple set of questions: Were you better off under Trump than you are under Biden? Do you believe that Harris is capable of being commander in chief? Do you think that her values are too radical? And when you meet Tim Walz, who is legitimately called Tampon Tim because he's really so far to the left he's almost wacko, and picking him, seemed to me, pushed her even further away from normal Americans.' Gingrich also thinks the race is Trump's to win: 'I think he has a real chance to win it. He came out of the debate stronger than when he went in, and it was ironic, I've written several columns now about the fact that the elites don't get it. Trump was winning.' 'They liked Kamala's style. The American people like Trump's substance, and substance beats style when you're picking a president.' " (Newt Gingrich: 'Tim Walz Is Legitimately Called Tampon Tim Because He's Really So Far To The Left He's Almost Wacko' by Joe Kovacs). Donald Trump has been targeted for assassination because he is opposed to the invasion of America by an unvetted, unassimilated, alien horde of locusts traveling under the name of Haitians. He has been targeted because he is opposed to this swarm and plague of migratory madness consuming towns across the nation. For his promotion of American freedom, the establishment has labeled him the voice of unfreedom, oppression, racism, dictatorship and autocracy, and recruited agents against him on a mission to kill: "The presidential race is too close for Democrats and the corporate media to take a chance. Sure, Kamala Harris is leading in the polls and appears to be enjoying a post debate polling bump. But the corporate media are still suffering PTSD from 2016 when Donald Trump was given a three percent chance of beating Hillary Clinton and then beat her. Nope, Orange Hitler must be taken down, which is why, even after Trump was shot in the head two months ago, the media went right back to inciting violence against him with their racist threat to democracy and dictator smears. Good heavens, Trump was shot in the head two months ago, and right before this second assassination attempt, you had CNN's Dana Bash smearing Trump and JD Vance as racists over their totally justified concerns about Kamala Harris dumping 20,000 Haitians into a small Ohio town of 58,000. Just two weeks ago and a mere six weeks after Trump was shot in the head, Joe Scarborough told his viewers that Trump is an 'autocrat,' a threat to democracy; and if reelected, he will yank TV networks off the air and put people in jail. Why wouldn't you assassinate someone like that?" (Corporate Media Won't Stop Until Trump Is Murdered by John Nolte). In the past it was called fusillading, from the French word fusil, meaning pistol. It is a method of execution in which the condemned person is killed by a group of shooters ordered to fire simultaneously. In America in the twenty first century, Donald Trump has been subjected on two occasions, occurring simultaneously in historical time, to assassinations attempts. A firing squad has been assembled by the establishment. The shooting will not cease until one of two things happens. It will not cease until either Trump is killed or the establishment is removed by the rifle shots of freedom.