INTRODUCTION

These reports are intended for a general, nonspecialist audience. They run the gamut of the arts and sciences, historical and current events, and should provide the reader with useful introductions to given topics. May they encourage a few happy hours of suggestive thought!

EUROPE'S REDS AND BLACKS ON THE MARCH

November 7, 1917. Red Guards storm a building. A wounded man, kneeling on the street, draws his last breath before the end and tells the Red Guards to continue their holy war against capitalism. The Red Guards climb the gate and break into the building. The revolution has arrived and the Red Guards' shouts of Hurray for communism! thunder through the air. An eyewitness to the revolution led by Vladimir Lenin describes the looting, smashing, ransacking and rapine brought by the new creed of violence called communism: "The Palace was pillaged and devastated from top to bottom by the Bolsheviks. Priceless pictures were ripped from their frames by bayonets. Packed boxes of rare plate and china were broken open and the contents smashed or carried off. The library was forced open and ransacked. The Czarina's salon, like all other rooms, was thrown into chaos. The colossal crystal luster, with its artfully concealed music, was smashed to atoms. Desks, pictures, ornaments—everything was destroyed." (How The Bolsheviks Took The Winter Palace, December 27, 1917, The Guardian). This was the storming of the Winter Palace in Saint Petersburg during the communist revolution which shook Russia and shook the world. It was the opening shot of a war which would attack the West on two fronts and usher in the fall of civilization. The second front opened up four years later in Rome, Italy. On October 28, 1922, the Blackshirts of the Fascist Party led by Benito Mussolini proclaimed to the Italian government: "Either the government will be given to us or we shall seize it by marching on Rome." Blackshirts from across the nation commenced a march which would end in the capital on the next day. When they arrived, King Victor Emmanuel III surrendered to them and Mussolini was sworn in as prime minister. Led by Mussolini, the Blackshirts marched in triumph through the city. In the early years of the twentieth century, two movements proceeding from the same source and commanded by the same general commenced a convergence on Europe. They were essentially the same and differed only in minor details and particularities. They proceeded from the greatest, most influential and most satanic religion of our times, a religion which captured the hearts and minds of the masses as no religion ever had in the history of mankind, a religion which in the twenty first century has brought the West to its final stop after a journey of one thousand years, a stop of infamy of a civilization which brought the world the glories of the Enlightenment. The religion is Marxism and its terrifying essence can be encapsulated in five words: the killing of unarmed civilians. In the history of the development and mutations of this religion, reaching from its founding by Karl Marx in the nineteenth century and continuing up to the present day, this killing, this murder, this terror, has been perpetrated under the cover of mythical entities. The first to be invented was Marx's original proletariat. Proclaimed to refer to the working class, it refers to nothing of the kind inasmuch as it excludes, in accordance with its materialistic conception of man, those who work with the use of their minds, skills and knowledge. It provides a cover for the murder of a universe of workers, ranging from entrepreneurs to executives to inventors to scientists, and appeals to those with the impulses of its founder: the impulse of the psychopath to kill innocent people and derive enjoyment from it. Other covers for murder include the Aryan race, which as well never existed inasmuch as Aryan is a linguistic and not a racial category. Utilized by Hitler's national socialists, this cover excused the mass murder of Jews, proclaimed to be enemies of the Aryan race. Other covers include killing innocent males in the name of feminist tribalism, killing innocent white people in the name of black tribalism, and killing industry and technology in the name of a neoproletarian, antiintellectual, antiprogress, radical environmentalism. Proceeding from the dark, underworld womb of Marxism, these excuses for the psychopathic, mass murder of unarmed civilians fall into two main categories: the Red Guard excuses and the Blackshirt excuses. The Red Guard excuses are championed by communists of all stripes and varieties, while the Blackshirt excuses are championed by fascists of all stripes and varieties. For purposes of political branding, the Red Guards and the Blackshirts have been engaged in a one hundred year public relations attempt to differentiate themselves from the opposition, and to sell political consumers on the proposition that they are fundamentally opposed to each other. They have been applying the first rule of advertising, which is to differentiate oneself from the competition. Civilized people have seen through the deception and seen that communism and fascism are brother religions, brother socialist religions, brother collectivist religions and brother statist religions, both peddling excuses to commit mass murder, and both occupying the left end of the political spectrum. In the twenty first century, Europe, the homeland of the West and beacon of its Enlightenment traditions, has been overrun by a pincer movement and a two front war waged by Marx's heirs and descendants, the Red Guards and the Blackshirts. Look at the advance of the Red Guards and see the formation of a Marxist-Muslim axis to overthrow the institutions which have been the envy of the world. See Europe rendered unrecognizable by an invasion of unvetted, unassimilated, Islamist migrants. See Europe rendered lifeless and prostrate before a stratospheric increase of the Community of the Faithful. See a movement of Labor Party communists and Conservative Party communists feed a leviathan of confiscatory taxation as they unleash alien hordes from the cesspools of the Earth and close off the story of free nations: "Reform UK has declared the July 4th general election 'the immigration election', and has gone on the attack against the two legacy parties which have seen 'More people come to this country in the past 25 years than in all of history before that'. Standing in front of a stylized time graph showing immigration to Britain as low and stable for all of British history from 1066 to 1997 before going into a massive vertical climb, Reform UK—formerly Nigel Farage's Brexit Party—launched its general election campaign on Thursday. Moving into the vacuum left by Labor and the Conservatives, neither of which have much to say about soaring levels of mass migration, the Reform speakers made clear they were going to make the campaign about precisely that. That highlighting the Conservatives' border control track record is deeply embarrassing to them is already clear, given the Party seems to have released almost as many attack ads against Reform as it has their main opponents Labor in the first 24 hours of the campaign. After all, The Conservatives won three consecutive elections on a promise to bring net migration down to the tens of thousands, but put it up to one million every 18 months instead. Campaign material revealed at the launch will tell the public: 'Who voted for mass migration? Who voted for hundreds of thousands more? Who promised to bring the numbers down to tens of thousands, but lied? The Tories have broken Britain and Labor will give us even more mass migration. But there is an alternative, only Reform UK will freeze immigration.' Party leader Richard Tice hammered home the well worn point that, on the fundamentals, there isn't a great deal of difference between the left wing Labor Party, which is polled to win the July 4th election, and the ostensibly right wing Conservatives, who in practice have governed as crypto left centrist globalists despite the rhetoric. He said: 'The choice for everybody is whether you vote Tory or if you vote Labor, you'll get the same form of socialism. You will get higher taxes, lower wages, and mass immigration that will make us all worse off, and our quality of life will diminish.' " (Reform UK Gears Up For 'The Immigration Election', Calls On Voters To Reject Socialism And Open Borders by Oliver JJ Lane). Look at the advance of the Blackshirts and see military formations of hate march through neighborhoods. See comrades in arms fight for national collectivism. See stiff arm salutes hail slavery to the state. See roll calls of racism vote away equality before the law. See troops trained in violence battle to overthrow the government. See leaders and their mobs roar out revolution to sweep away liberal democracy: "They line up in military like formation: a thousand strong, most dressed in black, some with tattoos on shaved scalps. At the spot in Milan where Sergio Ramelli was killed almost fifty years ago by antifascists, a leader summons his battalion of loyalists to attention. He shouts camerata, or 'brother in arms', and Ramelli's name, as if delivering a roll call. And then it comes: stiff right arms outstretched and raised, palms facing down, the fascist salute in the heart of Italy's second city, and the crowd reply on the dead man's behalf with a roar: 'Present! Present! Present!' It's 2024, but this has frightening echoes of a century ago. While it may seem extraordinary to an outsider—and it was staggering to me, watching it close up—it is not out of the ordinary in Italy, where commemorations of this type take place every year. Italy's current government is led by the Brothers of Italy party, which has roots in postwar fascism." (Italy's PM Says Fascism Is 'Consigned To History'. Not Everyone Is So Sure by Mark Lowen). An insect's mandibles are the most anterior part of the creature's mouth. Moving through a horizontal plane, they grasp, cut and crush the insect's food and kill rivals. In the twenty first century, two monsters are moving across the face of Europe, battling each other for supremacy and crushing freedom within their jaws. They are twin creatures born from the same nightmare moving through a plane of destruction. Peddling Marxism and mass murder, one wearing the colors of communism and the other wearing the colors of fascism, they have hurled Europe into the dustbin of history.

TRUMP ENTERS ROBBEN ISLAND

A person deprived of his or her personal liberty is to be regarded as a political prisoner: a. if the detention has been imposed in violation of one of the fundamental guarantees set out in the European Convention on Human Rights and its Protocols, in particular freedom of thought, conscience and religion, freedom of expression and information, freedom of assembly and association; b. if the detention has been imposed for purely political reasons without connection to any offense; c. if, for political motives, the length of the detention or its conditions are clearly out of proportion to the offense the person has been found guilty of or is suspected of; d. if, for political motives, he or she is detained in a discriminatory manner as compared to other persons; or, e. if the detention is the result of proceedings which were clearly unfair and this appears to be connected with political motives of the authorities. Thus speaks Resolution 1900 of the Council of Europe, 2012, titled The Definition of a Political Prisoner. Detention imposed in violation of the rights of free speech, free expression, free assembly, free association, freedom of thought and freedom of conscience. Detention imposed for political reasons. Detention as a result of an unfair trial staged in a judicial star chamber or a courtroom overrun by mob rule. The list of political prisoners in the history of mankind is as lengthy as it is demonstrative of the dangers of unrestrained state power and the necessity of unwavering vigilance to protect liberty. Whenever vigilance is relaxed or dissipates for a moment, the tides of state abuse rush in like sewage water breaking through a dam, and carry away political prisoners. On May 30, 2024, the forty third president of the United States joined the ranks of the world's political prisoners and became its most famous member, placed there by a legal system weaponized beyond recognition in a nation which once was the leader of the free world, and was now evicted from the free world and no longer a member of the West. The eviction of America from the West and its descent into the gallery of rogue states in consequence of taking Trump political prisoner illustrates as nothing else does the famous proverb the bigger they come, the harder they fall. This proverb says that nations which have been large, powerful and influential for the cause of freedom and fall from this state, effect a fall which is dramatic, spectacular and betokens the end of freedom throughout the world. Look at the taking of Donald Trump political prisoner and see the crash of the nation which did it into the bottom of the barrel of rogue states and the crash of the West down with it. Look at the process which deprived Trump of his freedom and see the workings of a legal system placed under the control of the mob's most popular religion. A legal system placed under the control of a religion voted into power in landslide after landslide, in local, state and federal elections reaching back over a century, under a ticket stamped progressivism. A legal system placed under the control of a religion of capitalist haters, white haters, male haters, haters of heterosexuals, haters of people who accept their biological gender, and haters of progress and civilization. This religion which control the nation's legal system is Marxism. Look at the new Marxist system of antilaw and law in name only which has gripped America and see what it did to Donald Trump. It impaneled a jury of Trump haters to convict him of crimes without due process of law. It convicted Trump of unspecified crimes in violation of the Sixth Amendment to the Constitution, which requires that people accused of crimes "be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation". It convicted Trump in a trial presided over by a judge who is a donor and activist of the Democrat Party as is his daughter. It convicted Trump in a trial presided over by a judge who issued gag orders against Trump in violation of the First Amendment guarantee of free speech. It convicted Trump in a trial whose goal was to silence and kill him for his political actions and beliefs. It convicted Trump in a trial presided over by a judge who refused to allow an election expert to testify that paying hush money and suppressing negative information about a candidate is not illegal. It convicted Trump without providing proof beyond a reasonable doubt of official wrongdoing and criminal intent. It convicted Trump based on the testimony of a disbarred, convicted perjurer. It convicted Trump in an unconstitutional, partisan political exercise which sent the nation descending in free fall from the Western community and crashing into the community of rogue states previously inhabited only by Asia, Africa and Latin America: "A jury of New Yorkers, where a massive majority of the population dislikes President Donald Trump, on Thursday said he was guilty of the 34 counts of business reporting violations claimed by DA Alvin Bragg. It's the first time a former president has been convicted of a felony crime. Bragg, a Democrat who revived dead misdemeanors to orchestrate the lawfare against Trump, claimed Trump called his legal expenses 'legal expenses' and that was an offense. He charged Trump with 34 counts of falsifying business records. He took misdemeanor violations that had been passed over by a multitude of other prosecutors, claimed they were in furtherance of another, unspecified, crime, and that made them felonies. The case, being run by Juan Merchan, a local New York judge, has been plagued with one scandal after another. Merchan first issued multiple gag orders against Trump, but refused to provide Trump with the same protection from wild statements made by others in the case. Merchan refused to recuse even though his daughter is a Democrat activist who has fund raised millions off of the decisions her father is making in the case. Merchan also has repeatedly ruled against Trump, building a solid case, according to multiple commentators, for reversal on appeal. According to Fox, 'Prosecutors needed to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Trump falsified business records to conceal a $130,000 payment to Stormy Daniels, a pornographic performer, in the lead up to the 2016 election to silence her about an alleged affair with Trump in 2006.' Merchan refused to allow an expert to testify that suppressing negative information was not illegal. It was Trump's former lawyer, a convicted perjurer, Michael Cohen, who was the star witness for the prosecution. Noted legal expert and Harvard professor Alan Dershowitz said it's clear the judge was insisting on a guilty verdict against Trump. The Daily Caller News Foundation revealed, 'Merchan has come under fire for a perceived bias against Trump in the case. He imposed an expanded gag order on April 1 after Trump criticized the judge's daughter in multiple posts on Truth Social, including one linking to a New York Post report on Loren Merchan's firm helping Democrats raise $93 million off the former president's indictment in the business records case.' The report noted, 'Merchan also made a $15 donation to Biden's presidential campaign in 2020 and two $10 donations to Democratic groups via ActBlue, one to a Stop Republicans group and another to a Progressive Turnout Project, according to Federal Election Commission (FEC) records.' Former Trump corporation payroll lawyer William J Brennan told America Reports, 'Shockingly, these payments on their face are not illegal. They have to show two things. They have to show there was malfeasance in the record keeping in the notations as to what the money was spent for. And then to make that huge leap to felony land, they have to show it was with the intent, not just the motive, but the intent to commit another crime--election fraud, election finance.' Fox News legal analyst Gregg Jarrett said he'd never before seen such an abuse of America's legal system as that orchestrated by Bragg and Merchan.

The jury, of seven men and five women, had deliberated for two days. The case is the first time a former US president has faced a criminal trial. But analysts have pointed out that now that the process has been established, future presidents can expect to be prosecuted for whatever their successors dislike about them after they leave office. Commentator Tucker Carlson said, 'Import the Third World, become the Third World. That's what we just saw. This won't stop Trump. He'll win the election if he's not killed first. But it does mark the end of the fairest justice system in the world. Anyone who defends this verdict is a danger to you and your family.' Polls have shown that voters who responded have said their support for Trump will not be affected by a guilty claim by a jury in the leftist New York. In fact, 15% said it would make them more likely to vote for him." (Jury In leftist NYC Trial Says Trump Guilty On All 34 Counts! by Bob Unruh). The geographical location of Donald Trump's trial was Manhattan, New York. The moral location was the Third World and the communist world. In this world, light years removed from the world America once was, Trump was convicted of a crime known only to the prosecution and never charged or explained. In this world, the judge told the jury it did not have to know or agree on what the crime was. In this world, the judge was a Biden donor and father to a Democrat Party consultant. In this world, Trump was not allowed to call expert witnesses in his favor. In this world, America lives in darkness and has ceased to exist.

ISLAMIST KNIFEMAN ATTACKS GERMANY

The knife is the oldest and most important tool used by man. It has been in use for over two million years helping to meet man's basic needs. It has helped to feed, shelter, defend and assure the survival of people. Today's chisel, lathe, saw, scythe and sword all evolved from the knife. Since man first walked the face of the Earth, the knife has also been used for nefarious purposes. It has been used to kill innocent people, and knife attacks have been an all too common occurrence when alien hordes are allowed to roam through free societies. Unable to obtain guns, aliens use knives to stab the freedom around them which they despise. On May 31, 2024, in the heart of Europe, in the city of Mannheim, Germany, a movement was attacked by an alien wielding a knife. Marching under the banners of the Enlightenment, it is a movement dedicated to halting the Islamification of Europe and the daily reversal on this glorious continent of the Battle of Tours. It is a movement opposed to Islamist terror. It is a movement opposed to Islamist fascism. It is a movement opposed to Islamist national socialism. It is a movement opposed to Hitler's imams and grand muftis. It is a movement opposed to Islamist swastika ideology. It is a movement opposed to the Islamist claim to possess absolute truth based upon blind faith and zero evidence. It is movement opposed to Islamist jihad and its struggle to destroy the voices of reason and sanity. It is a movement opposed to Islamist spiritualism and its war against matter and science. It is a movement opposed to the Islamist enforcement of political correctness. It is a movement opposed to Islamist programmed public opinion. It is a movement opposed to Islamist death sentences and Islamist intimidation. It is a movement opposed to Islamist fighting and Islamist screaming. It is a movement opposed to the Islamist haters of human freedom and human justice. It is a movement opposed to the Islamist People's Court placing civilization on the gallows. It is a movement opposed to Islamist neighborhood meetings and community organizing whipping up the faithful to a fever pitch. It is a movement opposed to the Islamist scourge against progress and enlightenment. It is a movement opposed to Islamist activism and grassroots violence. It is a movement opposed to Islamist districts, dioceses and churches of agitation and propaganda. It is a movement of resistance called Pax Europa and its mission is to defend and consolidate Europe's institutions whose torches have dispelled tyranny's darkness in the most distant reaches of the Earth: "Adams: You are now involved in PAX EUROPA in Germany. We understand this to be one of the more important anti-jihad organizations in Germany. What prompted you to get involved in the anti-Islamist movement? Zeller–Hirzel: I read many, many books on the subject; especially the books by Mark Gabriel (see Islam and Terrorism). So I realized that one must not simply accept these things passively but also do something about it. One must support this cause by necessity. Adams: Do you see similarities between Islam and nazism? If so, what are these similarities? Zeller–Hirzel: The fanaticism, the absolute claim of possessing the only truth and the spiritual simplicity are very similar between Islam and the Nazism. Adams: Do you view opposing Islamization as the same battle you were fighting when the White Rose fought nazism? Zeller–Hirzel: Critics of the nazi ideology were immediately arrested. We have not yet reached that point. But if we do nothing, it will come back to that. Then they might lock up the critics of Islam. Adams: In your view why is it so difficult to explain the threat of Islamization to the public? What is stopping us from getting our message across to the public? What can we do better? Zeller–Hirzel: The general indifference to religious matters make it difficult. The public believes we to have to be fair to everyone. That is counterproductive. Only education can help. Adams: What is the best way to approach a person who knows nothing about Islam? How do we build a base of support among people so that we are never in the desperate position that entrapped you, Sophie and the heroes of the White Rose resistance group? Zeller–Hirzel: As I said before: Education! We need to conduct neighborhood meetings, community and church events. The distress in the population is indeed there, but apparently not big enough. 'Hitler is the scourge of God,' once said Robert Scholl, Sophie's father. But he was then promptly convicted. Adams: When you and your colleagues of the White Rose were leafleting in Munich and elsewhere, did you believe that the population could be converted to antiHitlerism? Zeller–Hirzel: Yes, we really believed that. We actually thought we could move public opinion. Even if it happened to be in vain, we tried it before history. And yet we were afraid. The very few supporters we had were scared. We were afraid of death sentences, meted out by Freisler's People's Court, afraid of his screaming. But screaming is also a weakness." (The White Rose: An Interview With Mrs Susanna Zeller-Hirzel by D. L. Adams). On May 31, 2024, a twenty five year old Afghan national, emitting radioactive poison serving as an agent of Islam, committed a knife attack on German freedom. He committed a knife attack on the Enlightenment enemies of Eastern religion. He committed a knife attack on the enemies of Islamist terror. He committed a knife attack on the enemies of Islamist criminality. He committed a knife attack on the enemies of Islamist imperialism. He committed a knife attack on the enemies of Islamist subversion. He committed a knife attack on the enemies of Islamist anarchy. He committed a knife attack on the enemies of Islamist conspiracy. He committed a knife attack on the enemies of Islamist invasion. He committed a knife attack on the enemies of Islamist killing and maiming. He committed a knife attack on a movement whose eyes have seen what the masses' eyes have refused to see. This movement called Pax Europa has seen the lightning bolts of a storm sweep in from the gutters of the Earth and rain down revolution on Germany: "A German police officer who received life threatening injuries during a knife attack on Friday targeting a rally by the antiIslam group Pax Europa in the city of Mannheim remains in serious condition, police said on Saturday. Five participants in the rally were also wounded in the attack and taken to the hospital, with some having to undergo emergency surgery, authorities have said, while the suspected attacker was shot by police. Security sources told DPA news agency the assailant had suffered life threatening injuries, and a police spokesman said on Saturday that the suspect remained unresponsive following surgery and could not be interrogated as to his motive. 'What we are most concerned about is the question of the motive,' the criminal investigations office in the state of Baden-Wuerttemberg, where Mannheim is situated, said. An attempted homicide arrest warrant was issued against the man, identified as a 25 year old with Afghan citizenship who had been living in Germany since 2014, on Saturday afternoon, according to state prosecutors in Karlsruhe. Prosecutors said the suspect was married, with two children, and was most recently resident in the town of Heppenheim, just across the state border in the south of Hesse. Investigators searched his residence late on Friday. According to

German broadcaster SWR, the man has been in Germany since 2013. The case has now been taken over by antiterror investigators. The injured police officer was stabbed in the back of the head several times, according to authorities. Among the other wounded was leading Pax Europa member Michael Sturzenberger, his organization has said. The event was part of his Open Eyes tour, which organizers say aimed to warn of the dangers of political Islam. Sturzenberger is reportedly out of danger, with the Pax Europa website quoting him as saying that his operation had gone well and giving his best wishes to the injured police officer. It remains unclear whether other Pax Europa members were injured." (Mannheim Knife Attack: Police Officer In Serious Condition, Deutsche Welle, June 1, 2024). On May 31, 2024, a knifeman in the service of Allah committed an attack on the enemies of global Islam and its erasure of free institutions. He committed an attack on Islamist extremism. He committed an attack on Islamist expansionism. He committed an attack on the Islamist transformation of peaceful neighborhoods into crime scenes. He committed an attack on Islamist mosques sending out screaming rage and mental illness. He committed an attack on the enemies of the Islamist cancer on the West: "A campaign rally to 'stop political Islam' in Germany was ended before it even began after a knifeman attacked antiIslamification campaigner, and then stabbed an officer after police turned up and attempted to arrest the wrong man. Several people were slashed with a knife in Mannheim, Germany on Friday morning after a knifeman rushed the set up of a political demonstration by a counter extremist lobby group. The target of the attack appears to have been veteran Islam critic Michael Stürzenberger who was seriously injured with stab wounds to the face and leg, but is described as not being in danger of death. Sturzenberger is a veteran of several decades in the campaign to oppose political Islam in Germany, and is well known for having been active against the building of new mosques in the country." (German Police Shoot Knifeman Who Stabbed Anti Islamification Activist And Responding Officer by Oliver JJ Lane). In the twenty first century, a volcano has erupted in the West. Its lava, ash and gases were formed in the underworld chambers of Marxism and Islam. These religions of the masses made an alliance to defeat a common enemy: the institutions of the Enlightenment. The fiery contents of this volcanic eruption congealed into a knife, placed this knife into the hands of the masses and moved them to stab Germany in the back.

FREEDOM PUSHED INTO THE SEA

This new state will ensure complete equality of social and political rights to all its inhabitants irrespective of religion, race or sex. It will guarantee freedom of religion, conscience, language, education and culture. This new state was Israel and it was born on May 14, 1948. These are the words of its founder and first prime minister, David Ben Gurion. The day after this new state was born, it was attacked by five Arab states with the goal of killing Freedom and pushing it into the sea. For the past eighty years, this state has been the scene of a contest between Freedom and Tyranny, and in the present day, aided and abetted by a Marxist establishment in control of the West, Tyranny has emerged victorious. In the late nineteenth century, Freedom arrived in Israel from Europe, determined to plant the flag of the Enlightenment in a benighted desert. Freedom purchased land, worked hard and made the desert bloom. Freedom shared its modern, scientific, agricultural techniques with the local Arabs, who stagnated like animals in Tyranny's embrace for thousands of years, but they spurned the offer. On the day after Israel's achievement of independence, the Arab world launched an attack. After the attack, Freedom said that Arabs who sided with the invaders would be expelled from the new nation, while those who did not, would be allowed to remain in peace. The Arab invaders had previously ordered all Arabs to leave Israel so that they would be able to destroy the nation and kill all the Jews unhindered. Freedom founded Israel as a liberal, secular state. This free state, the only free state in the Middle East, faces enemies internal and external. The internal enemies are Orthodox Jews. They are opposed to liberal democracy, opposed to the ideals espoused by David Ben Gurion, and seek to transform Israel into a theocracy. They seek to establish a theocratic empire, extending into the West Bank and Gaza, which they call Judea and Samaria. The external enemies of Israel are a coalition which has taken control of the West and enjoys popular support among Arab states. It is an axis of Marxism and Islam, an axis which unites an Eastern movement with a Western movement, to defeat a common enemy: the ideals which founded Israel, the ideals of the Enlightenment. In the twenty first century, the enemies of the Enlightenment are legion and on the march. A sickroom called the West voted Marxism into power over a century ago and began peddling it as progressivism. In the present century, this nightmare creature has sprouted three heads, called them gender, race and class, and launched a war of extermination against groups comprised of whites, males, successful people, and people who accept their biological gender and do not pretend to be members of the opposite gender in defiance of their DNA. In the present century, this triple headed Gorgon called Marxism has reached out to Islam to destroy Jews and Israel, two hated symbols of the Enlightenment, just as its two predecessors did. Just as the race Marxists under Hitler reached out to Amin Al Hussein, the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, gave him wartime residence in Germany and furthered his antisemitic propaganda activities, and just as the Soviet Union reached out to Arab states. The Soviets condemned Israel on the grounds that it is a racist, chauvinist, capitalist, anticommunist state: "The main posits of modern zionism are militant chauvinism, racism, anticommunism, antisovietism, an overt and covert fight against freedom movements and the USSR." (The Great Soviet Encyclopedia, Third Edition). The Soviets condemned Israel on the grounds that it directs a global racist, imperialist, capitalist movement and conspiracy targeting the working class: "In late July 1967, Moscow launched an unprecedented propaganda campaign against zionism as a 'world threat.' Defeat was attributed not to tiny Israel alone, but to an 'all powerful international force.' In its flagrant vulgarity, the new propaganda assault soon achieved nazi era characteristics. The Soviet public was saturated with racist canards. Extracts from Trofim Kichko's notorious 1963 volume, Judaism Without Embellishment, were extensively republished in the Soviet media. Yuri Ivanov's Beware: Zionism, a book essentially replicated The Protocols Of The Elders Of Zion, was given nationwide coverage." (A History Of The Jews In The Modern World by Howard Sachar). In the twenty first century, the Marxist-Islamist axis has invaded Israel and kidnapped and tortured its citizens. It has blackened their lives with terror and hopelessness. It has committed mass murder and claimed the lives of thousands of innocent people. It has shocked the conscience of civilized people with its brazen acts of violence. It has proclaimed that a progressive society is a Hamas society whose creed is hatred and bigotry in the service of Islam. It has proclaimed that a progressive society is a Palestinian society whose creed is injustice and indecency in the service of Islam. It has proclaimed that a progressive society ignores, downplays and defends acts of terror committed against Israelis. It has a proclaimed that a progressive society has torn asunder the moral fabric of international law and replaced it with the law of the jungle. It has a proclaimed that a progressive society sanctions human rights violations against Jews. It has a proclaimed that a progressive society grants statehood to criminal organizations dedicated to the destruction of Israel. It has a proclaimed that a progressive society grants statehood to criminal organizations marked by extremism and committed to waging aggressive war. It has proclaimed that a progressive society derives thrills and excitement at the commission of criminal acts. It has a proclaimed that a progressive society grants diplomatic recognition to rogue nations. It has a proclaimed that a progressive society demands that Israel negotiate with Hamas, surrender to Hamas, unilaterally withdraw from Hamas controlled regions and unilaterally disarm itself. It has a proclaimed that a progressive society denies diplomatic recognition to Israel and denies its right to safety and security. It has a proclaimed that a progressive society seeks the abolition of Israel and replacement of the the Israel-Gaza-West Bank region with two states. One state called Palestine would be devoted to Islamist terror, and the other state called Hamas would be devoted to Islamist terror: "The fear in their eyes is palpable. In a video released by the Hostages and Missing Families Forum on Wednesday, footage from Hamas terrorists' body cameras captures the violent kidnapping of female IDF soldiers on October 7. The three minute video, censored for its graphic content, shows these young women being forcibly taken from their base, their faces etched with terror and despair. Their cries for help and the brutal treatment they endure are stark reminders of the inhumanity inflicted upon them. The families of the kidnapped soldiers released the video to highlight the ongoing nightmare of their loved ones. The footage shows the violent, humiliating treatment to which they have been subjected. Seven female soldiers were abducted; only two have returned, one rescued by the IDF and the other found dead. Fifteen others were murdered. This harrowing reality raises a fundamental question: Should such barbaric behavior earn Hamas and its followers a sovereign? The horrific events of October 7 remain etched in our collective memory. Hamas, a recognized terrorist organization, launched an unprecedented attack on Israel. In this brutal onslaught, 1,200 innocent people lost their lives, including women and children. Victims were not only killed and abducted; they were also subjected to heinous acts of violence. The images and reports of these atrocities have shocked the world, painting a grim picture of the true nature of Hamas and its affiliates. To respond to this carnage by recognizing Palestine as a state is an affront to justice and human decency. Recognition of statehood is not merely a diplomatic gesture; it carries profound symbolic and practical implications. By recognizing Palestine now, Ireland, Norway and Spain are effectively sending a message that the international community is willing to overlook or even excuse acts of terror when perpetrated against Israelis. This undermines the moral fabric of international law, which should hold all actors accountable for such egregious human rights violations. The leaders of these countries argue that this recognition is necessary to revive the two state solution and promote peace. However, this perspective is dangerously naive. A two state solution cannot be achieved by legitimizing entities that engage in and support terrorism. It can only be done through sincere and peaceful negotiations, which Hamas has repeatedly shown no interest in pursuing. The timing of this recognition is particularly troubling. It comes just months after Hamas's brutal invasion and during the ongoing war in Gaza, which has caused immense suffering to both Israelis and Palestinians. By recognizing Palestine now, these European nations are effectively rewarding the very tactics that led to such widespread devastation. This decision undermines the efforts of those genuinely committed to peace and strengthens the position of extremists who thrive on violence and discord. Israel has long argued that a unilateral recognition of Palestinian statehood without a final status agreement is counterproductive. It encourages those who believe that terror and violence are effective means by which to achieve political ends." (Hamas Should Not Be Rewarded For Terrorism With A Palestinian State, editorial, Jerusalem Post, May 23, 2024). Freedom in Israel today is under a three pronged attack. Marxism, Islam and Orthodox Judaism have declared war on Israel's Enlightenment constitution as they have formed a Devil's Pitchfork. They have impaled a Western outpost in the Middle East and hurled it into the dustbin of history.

MENTAL TWILIGHT AT THE AMERICAN PSYCHOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION

It is the largest professional association in the world, with over two hundred thousand members, ranging from scientists to educators to clinicians to students. Its fifty four divisions are supported by a total annual budget of one hundred and twenty five million dollars. Its proclaimed mission is to promote the advancement, communication and application of psychology to improve people's lives. Founded one hundred and thirty one years ago in Washington DC, the American Psychological Association has struck an iceberg in the twenty first century and descended into an abyss of ideological thought enforcement and political correctness. Straying light years away from its proclaimed mission to alleviate mental health problems, the association has transformed itself into an advocacy group for the cause of mental illness and the psychotic detachment from reality, and become a leading voice of the spirit of the times and the final stop of a train wreck called the West. The American Psychological Association. It rejects the existence of genes, chromosomes and DNA and proclaims that gender can be changed by human action or belief. It proclaims that people can be gender fluid, gender diverse, gender indeterminate, gender contradictory and gender nonbinary. It proclaims that a minority community of gender dysphoric psychotics is the vanguard of a progressive era of human freedom and enlightenment. It proclaims that people can be neither male nor female or both male and female at one and the same time. It proclaims that boys can be girls and girls can be boys. It proclaims that a father can be a mother and a mother can be a father, and a person can be both a mother and a father at one and the same time. It proclaims that the best kinds of parents are transgender individuals who have bid farewell to reality, descended into a maelstrom of disordered fantasies, and pretend to be members of the opposite sex: "APA's 2021 Rainbow Book List Top Ten Title for Young Readers. My Maddy by Gayle Pittman. A loving, affirming ode to parents who are gender fluid or gender nonbinary. My Maddy has hazel eyes which are not brown or green. And my Maddy likes sporks because they are not quite a spoon or a fork. Most mommies are girls. Most daddies are boys. But lots of parents are neither a boy nor a girl, My Maddy shows how some of the best things in the world are not one thing or the other. They are something in between and entirely their own. Randall Ehrbar, PsyD, offers an insightful note with more information about parents who are members of gender minority communities, including transgender, gender nonbinary, or otherwise gender diverse people." (APA.org). The American Psychological Association. It rejects the findings of science, reaching back over a century to the pioneering investigations of Nettie Stevens and Edmund Wilson, that gender is based on the instructions in cells for the development, functioning, growth and reproduction of organisms, and is thus fixed and immutable. It proclaims that gender identity is a product of gender expression and is unrestrained by biological facts. It proclaims that people who claim to be transgender must be allowed to act out their fantastic and disturbed conceptions of themselves. It proclaims that gender nonconforming individuals, or individuals who act like members of the opposite sex because they believe they are members of the opposite sex, make the best parents and should be celebrated in children's literature. It proclaims that every home, family and school should contain stories about gender dysphoric psychotics to inspire children and set examples for them to follow. It proclaims that people who suffer from mental illness and imagine they are members of the opposite sex should not apologize for or be ashamed of their illness but should flaunt it, parade it and put it in people's faces. It proclaims that parents who claim they are members of the opposite sex alone possess the warmth and affection children need to grow and develop. It proclaims that the best type of parents are rainbow parents painted in the colors of transgender psychosis. It proclaims that the happiest and most loving types of families are those headed by parents who impersonate members of the opposite sex and claim to possess arbitrary, subjective, nonbinary, in between nongenders. It proclaims that the highest type of gender reality is that which is beyond images, logic, concepts and categories and is a vast, dark, sunset space marked civilizational disease and degeneration: "The latest in Pitman's LGBTQ books for children introduces young readers to a parent whose gender identity and expression are 'entirely fantastically their own'—not a mommy or a daddy, but 'my Maddy'. Such positive images of gender nonconforming presentations are rare in children's literature, making this a valuable addition to any school, public, or personal library for its engaging art and accessible representation for a wide age range. Much needed in the landscape of family oriented picture books.—Kirkus Reviews. My Maddy is a heartfelt narrative that marries refreshingly unapologetic LGBTQ illustrations with text that many child readers will be able to relate to. This celebration of nonconforming parents is a nuanced and noteworthy addition to any home, classroom, or library.—Booklist Starred Review. Tobacco's crisp, richly detailed illustrations depict a parent and child moving through their days with warmth and love, snuggling and reading. Pitman's affirming text highlights the joy of in between things—hazel eyes, sporks, sunrises, motorcycles (It's not a car or a bicycle. It's kind of both, and it's something all its own') —gently illuminating the idea that people, too, can exist beyond categorization.—Publishers Weekly. Gayle Pitman has written a celebratory book about parenthood that is both heartwarming and informative. Look at that gorgeous cover filled with an abundance of love, joy, and rainbow pride. It is so inspiring, as is the text which is filled with positive images and concepts of one's family.—Children's Books Heal. I love the depiction of a nonbinary parent. It is a very nice celebration of the relationship between a parent and child, each of them being as they are.—Kiss the Book. A great story about a loving family and their unique look at the world of in between spaces and how many things are neither one thing or another if you look closely enough.—Lost in a Good Book." (APA.org). The American Psychological Association. It rejects the existence of units of heredity which encode the properties of an organism, and make gender as fixed and immutable as eye color. It proclaims that people's gender can be the product of their own choosing and can be fluid, fantastic and nonbinary. It proclaims that a he can be a she and a she can be a he and gender dysphoric psychotics should be described by the pronouns of their choice. It proclaims that the pronoun they should be used to describe gender dysphoric psychotics who claim to be members of the opposite gender or to be both male and female at one and the same time. It proclaims that there is a continuum of shades and hues of gender and recognition that a person can be both male and female at one and the same time furthers his self esteem, self respect and emotional development: "Jacob's School Play by Ian Hoffman. Introduces readers to nonbinary, gender fluid people and the use of pronouns of their own choosing while all along reinforcing that an individual is much more layered and unique than how others may see him, her or them. Jacob—star of one of the most banned books of the decade according to the American Library Association—is back in his third book and ready to put on a school play! While learning their lines and making their costumes, Jacob's class finds itself unexpectedly struggling with identity, and what it means to be he, she, or they. Jacob's School Play is an engaging way to introduce young readers to nonbinary people and the pronoun options available to us all. Learning that individuals are more nuanced than how others see them is a developmentally important milestone, and helps foster respect of one's self and one's peers." (APA.org). The American Psychological Association. It rejects the existence of cellular information which specifies the traits of an organism and makes its gender as fixed and immutable as any other trait. It proclaims that children in school should be taught to understand, accept and show tolerance toward those who claim to have changed their gender. It proclaims that teachers should tell students that calling a male a male, and calling a female a female, could result in misgendering a person and should be avoided, and people should be described with the pronoun they, which can refer to any gender or to no gender at all. It proclaims that a progressive classroom and happy classroom is a gender diverse classroom bathed in a dark rainbow spectrum of gender dysphoric psychosis: "Gentle and effective in showing one child eventually comprehending a classmate's nonbinary identity.—Publishers Weekly. It's great to see this series continuing to explore some of the many aspects of gender identity and expression, and to do so here through the eyes of someone whose gender expression isn't traditional, but who is still learning about gender identity. And even though the teacher does much of the explaining, Ari is also confident in who they are and in communicating this to Jacob.—Mombian. When Ari is misgendered by Jacob, Ari corrects him, but Jacob needs his teacher, Ms Reeves, to address his arguments against using the pronoun they: 'They is for two kids.' She models thoughtful explanations for adult and child readers. Case's joyful illustrations portray a colorful classroom filled with students from diverse backgrounds, in scenes filled with energy and laughter. In collections where Jacob's other stories do well, this is a worthwhile inclusion.—School Library Journal." (APA.org). It is a world black and twisted. A world of pointed forms, oblique lines, slanting landscapes, and strange shadows and streaks of light. Rejecting the reality of genetically determined gender, this is the office, the chamber and the mind of a madman. Its professional organization is the American Psychological Association.

HUMAN SANITY VERSUS FIELD THEORY

In their casual, informal communications, physicists refer to it as a "particle zoo." They mean the world of subatomic particles, for every year, the list of such particles is increased by laboratory discoveries, and the list paints a portrait of a vast variety of particle species as in an animal zoo. Every year, empirical investigations conducted in accelerators throughout the world confirm in bubble chambers, bright dots and lightning speed trajectories the truths discovered by common sense and human sanity thousands of years ago. They confirm the truth that outside the mind, in the world of physical reality, physical objects, separate, determinate things bounded in space and time, and physical objects alone, are the primary realities. They confirm the truth that all perception is the perception of objects or else there is no perception and man is unconscious. They confirm the truth that perception presupposes the existence of objects which are perceived, that there is a difference between an object and a property, that properties presuppose the existence of objects which have those properties, and there are no properties apart from the objects which have them. They confirm the truth that regions of space in which fields of forces are effective presuppose the existence of objects which make and mediate those fields or forces, and the notion of a field or force existing independently of objects is a contradiction in terms, and is the notion of a field which is a field of nothing. They confirm the truth that in the world outside the mind, everything is objects, whether those objects be electrons, photons, quarks, pianos, rivers or rocks, and nothing is fields, except insofar as the fields are made by particles and are fields of particles. They confirm the truth that there are no fields or forces or energies or strings or vibrations or waves existing as such but only fields and forces and energies and strings and vibrations and waves of particles. They confirm that everything in the universe is made out of particles. They confirm that the basis of all science and technology is the existence of particles. They confirm that atoms are systems of particles. They confirm that all structures are structures of particles. They confirm that nuclear decay is the decay of particles. They confirm that radioactivity is the radioactivity of particles. They confirm that all physics is the physics of particles. They confirm that all chemistry is the chemistry of particles. They confirm that atomic nuclei are nuclei of particles. They confirm that all flight paths are paths of particles. They confirm that physics laboratories study particles and their properties and study nothing else. They confirm that the fundamental forces of nature, the forces which hold matter together, are carried by particles and are particulate in character: "When the great American physicist Richard Feynman was asked to think of a single sentence that would convey the most important scientific knowledge we possess, he answered simply: 'Everything is made of atoms.' Today we take this statement for granted. So much of modern science is built upon this most fundamental of concepts, from nuclear physics and modern chemistry to everyday technology, that it is remarkable to think that everything we know about atoms was only discovered in the past hundred years. That knowledge has now advanced to the point where nuclear scientists are the threshold of a weird world filled with super heavy atoms and exotic nuclei, each existing for mere fractions of a second and holding the key to understanding how the universe is put together. Our understanding of atoms began with the great Ernest Rutherford. In 1907, he took up a professorship at Manchester University, having previously spent time working in the exciting new field of radioactivity in Canada. With his colleague Hans Geiger, Rutherford designed an experiment that laid bare the astonishing fact that the atom, until now thought to be a solid ball, had an internal structure--within the atomic he found a subatomic world. Rutherford's discovery--one of the most important in science--heralded the birth of nuclear physics. His experiment involved aiming alpha particles, one of the three types of radioactivity that pour out naturally from substances such as radium, at a thin sheet of metal. Most of the alpha particles passed right through the sheet of metal, a few with their flight path slightly deflected. But very occasionally one of the particles would bounce right back off an atom. The results led Rutherford to deduce that atoms must consist of a tiny dense nucleus (which the alpha particle was occasionally colliding with) surrounded by mostly empty space in which the electrons orbit. This idea, that one can discern the size, shape and structure of an atomic nucleus by firing a beam of tiny particles at it to see how they bounce off, get absorbed, knock pieces off or even break it apart, is still the basis of nuclear reaction research a hundred years later. But nowadays we do it with a twist. At a laboratory in Darmstadt, the Facility for Antiproton and Ion Research (FAIR) will take Rutherford's legacy into the twenty first century. It is the latest and largest of a new breed of particle collider that will probe the structure of the nuclei of very rare and exotic atoms. Instead of firing bullets at an atomic target, however, FAIR will fire the targets at the bullets. Atomic nuclei are made up of two types of particle: protons and neutrons. The number of positively charged protons in a nucleus is matched by the number of negative electrons orbiting outside it to define the element. But the neutrons are not just there to make up the numbers; they define the particular isotope of that element. Stable nuclei look to have an appropriate balance in the number of protons and neutrons they contain. But it is now possible to make nuclei in which this balance is upset by being over-abundant in neutrons or protons. These rare species, known as exotic nuclei, have very strange structures that are forcing us to rewrite physics textbooks. You might think that there are only so many ways that protons and neutrons can arrange themselves inside atomic nuclei. But it seems that with some exotic species, skins of neutron can develop, or even clouds of neutrons floating around the outside of the nucleus, a phenomenon dubbed the neutron halo. Examples of this are nuclei of certain isotopes of helium gas, called helium 6 and helium 8. The short lived exotic nuclei are formed in a particle accelerator and then immediately focused into a beam that is fired at the stationary bullets. Because of relativity theory, the end results are the same. These so-called radioactive beams allow us to study the thousands of types of nuclei that don't occur naturally (since they don't hang around long enough)." (Everything Is Made Of Atoms by Jim Al Khalili). The two fundamental theories of physics today are quantum theory and relativity theory. Their pictures of reality are diametrically opposed. The ontology of quantum theory is the empirical, common sense ontology of particles, while the ontology of relativity theory is the antiempirical, uncommon sense ontology of fields. The mathematical aspect of relativity theory and the predictions made by the theory are supported by observations but not theory's assertion that the primary existents are fields and not particles. The theory proclaims that matter causes space to curve and this curvature of space is gravitation, while observations and common sense recognize that matter emits gravitational particles and these particles carry the gravitational force. Observations and common sense recognize that the gravitational force, like all forces of nature, is quantized and particulate in character. In 2017, Rainer Weiss, Barry Barish and Kip Thorne were awarded the Nobel Prize in Physics for their discovery of gravitational waves which are carried by particles called gravitons. Denying the existence of separateness and multiplicity and projecting reality as the oneness of a field, relativity theory is a religious and ideological construct. Listen to its founder proclaim his inspiration from the mystical monism of Spinoza: "Our limited minds cannot grasp the mysterious force that sways the constellations. I am fascinated by Spinoza's pantheism. I admire even more his contributions to modern thought. Spinoza is the greatest of modern philosophers, because he is the first philosopher who deals with the soul and the body as one, not as two separate things." (Glimpses Of The Great by George Viereck, quoting Albert Einstein). The physics laboratory has discovered four types of particles which carry the four known forces of nature. It has discovered the photon which carries electromagnetism; the gluon which carries the force binding quarks in protons and neutrons, and binding neutrons and protons together; the W and Z bosons which carry the force effecting the radioactive decay of unstable atoms; and the graviton. The physics laboratory has discovered the Higgs particle, named after the physicist, Peter Higgs, who predicted it and won a Nobel Prize in Physics in 2013 for his prediction. This particle is the fundamental particle of existence which confirms that which common sense has understood for thousands of years: that everywhere there is something, nowhere is there nothing, and this something is particulate. With its eyes opened to reality and not blinded by religious or ideological constructs, the physics laboratory has provided the empirical research conditions for the vindication of human sanity and the common experience, common understanding, common intelligence and common sense of mankind.

COMMUNISTS AND FASCISTS NULLIFY NORMANDY

On June 6, 1944, Robert Sargent, chief photographer's assistant at the United States Coast Guard, took a photograph, the most famous photograph in history. Entitled Taxis To Hell And Back, Into The Jaws Of Death, it was a photograph of the troops of the United States Sixteenth Infantry Regiment wading ashore onto the coast of Normandy, France. June 6, 1944. The day of the largest seaborne invasion in history, an invasion which commenced the liberation of France and Western Europe from German forces and brought about the Allied Victory on the Western Front. Eighty years after Operation Overlord defeated a rampaging monster called national socialism, Europe has nothing to celebrate, for the hands of time have raced backward and taken the continent back into the tyranny which gripped it like a vice in the years before Normandy. Under the repeated hammer blows of the masses, the march of history has lost its linearity and been fashioned into a circle and resurrected the nightmares of the past. In the twenty first century, in a sickroom called the West, blackened by the stench of moral decay and degeneration, history has repeated itself and plunged the continent which brought the world the Enlightenment back into a battleground dominated by two armies of human enslavement. Their fountainhead is Marx and they represent two aspects of his thought, both designed to appeal to those driven by psychopathic impulses to kill. Proceeding from the Marxist philosophy of tribalism, one aspect is class war, while the other aspect is race war. One aspect promotes mass terror, the murder of unarmed civilians, in the name of the class, while the other aspect promotes mass terror, the murder of unarmed civilians, in the name of the race. One aspect promotes mass terror, the murder of unarmed civilians, in the name of international socialism, while the other aspect promotes mass terror, the murder of unarmed civilians, in the name of national socialism. In keeping with the first principle of branding, which is to differentiate one's product from the competition and to create differences if none exist in reality, these two camps have been engaged in a century long campaign to persuade people that class politics and race politics, international socialism and national socialism, occupy opposite ends of the political spectrum. They have been engaged in a century long campaign to persuade people that class politics resides on the left, while race politics resides on the right, and that these two movements are opposed to each other as daylight is opposed to darkness, and exhaust the political options open to man. Unbiased, nonpartisan, civilized observers of this scene understand that these are movements of class Marxism and race Marxism, and there is not a trace of essential difference between them. They understand that between communism and fascism, between totalitarian enslavement marching under the banners of class and totalitarian enslavement marching under the banners of race, there is an essential oneness, consanguinity and continuity, and that true right wing politics is the politics of liberty, individualism and limited government. They understand that this difference between right wing and left wing had been acknowledged and accepted by people prior to the 1930s, and that it was rejected after propagandists on both sides began a successful sales campaign to sell the myth that collectivism in the name of the class and collectivism in the name of the race are diametrically opposed ideologies. Communists describe themselves as progressives fighting against the reactionary right, while fascists seek to conceal their totalitarian core by peddling surface liberal capitalist principles.

Look at the two movements which have assumed control over Europe today and rendered the Normandy landings a dead letter. Communists. Look at the communists and see them forge an alliance with Islam as they together confront their common enemy of freedom. See them sharpen combat knives and place them into the hands of Islamists. See their Sulaiman agents place Europe under a pall of fear. See wild, uncontrolled Islamists stage fatal terror attacks across the continent. See the Islamist world set up shop in Europe and target activists for the cause of freedom for assassination. See Islamists assassinate the protectors of law and order. See Islamist bacteria multiply like a cancer throughout the cells of society. See aliens from Afghanistan granted asylum, citizenship, residency permits and immunity from deportation. See strange looking scum wearing beards and caftans rank with revolution and subversion. See preachers and commanders of hatred and violence declare jihad against the West online, offline and in the streets and gutters. See Islamist agitprop transmit video and audio messages to overthrow the government. See the gates of Europe open up to the powder kegs of political Islam. See Europe transformed into an Islamic State which has outlawed human rights forever. See Europe paralyzed and incapacitated by a mass invasion of Islamists from Africa and the Middle East. See Europe buried in the graveyard of failed civilizations with a tombstone marked Islamist migrants, Islamist motives, Islamist crises and an Islamist conflagration: "The migrant who stabbed a police officer to death and injured five others at an antiIslamification rally last week in Germany has been revealed to be a failed asylum seeker, sparking a national debate on migration ahead of the European Parliament elections. 'Sulaiman A', the suspected Islamist terrorist who launched a frenzied and fatal attack with combat style knife at a rally in Mannheim against the increased impacts of immigration from the Islamic world by activist Michael Sturzenberger, first came to the country from Afghanistan in 2013, German paper of record Welt reports. The paper claimed to have been provided with official documents which said that his request for asylum status was rejected in July of 2014. However, authorities failed to deport him. Nine years later the government granted the would be attacker a temporary residence permit under Section 28 of the Residence Act after he had a child with a woman with German citizenship. Welt also reports that starting in 2020, Sulainman changed his appearance 'significantly' and grew a full beard. Evidence also suggests that he had begun to post jihadist content online, including videos featuring the words of the late radical Islamist Afghan preacher and former Taliban commander Ahmad Zahir Aslamiyar, whose video clips and audio messages are reportedly widely shared by members of the Islamic State of Khorasan terrorist network. The attacker has since been incapacitated in hospital and therefore—despite being charged with murder—has not been interviewed by investigators so no official motive has been made available. However, authorities said this week that an Islamist motive is being assumed and that the Federal Prosecutor General is taking over the case, as is typical in cases of terrorism. 'Until now, we have seen such attacks mainly in France, where political Islam already dominates entire districts, Linnemann said [Carsten Linnemann, General Secretary of the Christian Democratic Union] but admitted that Germany now also has a 'massive' Islamist problem. The centrist politician also admitted that acknowledged that his party 'made mistakes' on immigration in a reference to the record of former CDU Chancellor Angela Merkel, who unilaterally opened the gates of Europe to mass migration from the Middle East and Africa, sparking the European Migrant Crisis in 2015." (Migration Debate Dominates Germany Ahead Of EU Elections As Migrant Knifeman Revealed To Have Been A Failed Asylum Seeker by Kurt Zindulka).

Fascists. Look at the fascists and see them reject human universality and all forms of globalism in the name of tribal nationalism. See them promote racial populism as the only alternative to class populism. See them promote racial socialism in the name of democracy. See them brand themselves as right wing when in fact they are a racist development of Marxism and reside on the far left. See them peddle this race Marxism beneath a veneer of promoting Western liberal values in halting Islamist mass migration, halting military adventurism, and establishing a free market in agriculture and the economy, when in fact their mission is to take Europe down the path of race war and into a terrifying resurgent swastika order: "Hungarian Prime Minister Viktor Orbán has called for Italian Prime Minister Giorgia Meloni turn away from her globalist bosom buddies in Brussels and forge a right-wing coalition with French National Rally leader Marine Le Pen in the European Parliament following the elections this week. Sensing that a potentially historic opportunity has presented itself to take on the globalist hegemony that has dominated discourse and decision making in Brussels, Prime Minister Orbán urged his longtime friend and ally to come home to her populist roots and form a grand right wing alliance in the European Parliament and end her budding ties with EU Chief Ursula von der Leyen. Speaking to the Italian Il Giornale newspaper at the Carmelite monastery in Budapest, the Hungarian Prime Minister said: 'This European Commission has failed on agriculture, on war, on immigration, on the economy, now they must leave. Strengthening democracy means electing a different Commission from the current one which has been the worst since government. At the same time we need a rebirth of the right in Europe, we have a historic opportunity to change the majority. The right wing parties must collaborate, we are in the hands of two women who must find an agreement.' " (Rebirth Of The Right—Orbán Urges Meloni To Forge Populist Coalition With Le Pen In EU Parliament by Kurt Zindulka). On June 6, 2024 in Normandy, on the eightieth anniversary of the D Day landings, Vanessa Foulon and her son queued up for hours to obtain a D Day commemorative hat signed by an American veteran of the landing. Bursting into tears, she exclaimed: Liberte! They gave us our freedom! Eighty years after the Allied landings to liberate Europe, the freedom given has been taken away. Emerging from the reading room of Marx, Europe's red and blacks, its communist and fascist legions, have landed and are on the march, and hurled freedom into the dustbin of history.

PHYSICS MADMAN DIES

He was born in the early twentieth century and died in the early twenty first century, and during his nearly century long life, he embarked upon a career in physics which exemplified, like no other career in the field, the philosophic degeneration of the age. He was a professor of physics at Princeton University and director of the Center for Theoretical Physics at the University of Texas at Austin. His illustrious awards were too numerous to count, and included the Albert Einstein Award, the J. Robert Oppenheimer Memorial Prize, and the National Medal of Science Award. The list of his doctoral students was almost endless, and included Nobel Prize laureates Richard Feynman and Kip Thorne. Lauded and feted by the physics establishment, John Archibald Wheeler exemplified the descent of the establishment into incoherence mirroring the state of the age. The descent commenced in the twentieth century and has reached rock bottom in the twenty first century, and Wheeler was its preeminent voice. From the heights achieved during the Scientific Revolution and Age of Enlightenment during the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, the collapse of physics commencing in the twentieth century has been dramatic and spectacular, and been greeted with utter disbelief by civilized people. They cannot believe that the science of matter in its fundamental aspects, the science which saw Copernicus, Galileo and Newton reject apriori methods and utilize empiricism to study nature, which affirmed that all perception is the perception of physical objects, and that an act of perception held to be purely subjective is a contradiction in terms and would render man unconscious, has collapsed into a state of psychosis rendering it a science in name only, and in reality the body of work of madmen. Reading it, civilized people have plunged into a nightmare and experience a chill feeling, and wonder if they themselves are going mad before the presence of a mental fever which seeks to pursue and possess them. This is a fever which seeks to strike them down, consume their spiritual life blood, set fire to their houses of knowledge, and burn their rational scientists alive. This is a fever which denies the possibility of knowledge and proclaims that reality is a mental construct, and that physics, understood during the Scientific Revolution and the Age of Enlightenment as the fundamental study of physical objects, is in reality the study of consciousness regarded as the consciousness of nothing. This is a fever whose contents have been recorded in the books, papers, speeches and letters of John Wheeler, as they have been recorded, with such virulence, rabidness and intensity, nowhere else. Read the pages of the late Professor Wheeler and see the symptoms of the collapse of the West, a general collapse which has taken physics, once the preserve of Isaac Newton and his ilk, now the preserve of John Wheeler and his ilk, down with it. Look at the thought of John Wheeler and read the diary of a madman, the notebook of an ideological partisan confined to a subjective world of nonmatter and nonphysics, a psychiatric world of hallucinations and nervous disorders, and dedicated to the destruction of thought. See him proclaim that there is no such thing as physical existence. See him proclaim that what are called physical objects, physical forces and physical spaces are in reality products of mental information and mental theories. See him proclaim that the source and explanation of existence is the human mind. See him proclaim that the human mind actively participates in and creates what is perceived and does not passively perceive it. See him proclaim that so-called physical objects are created by information gathering activities. See him proclaim that there are no such things as real objective observers but only the contradiction of observer-participants or observer-creators. See him proclaim that these hybrid, contradictory observer-creators create all of physics, all information, and the illusion the ignorant call matter. See him proclaim that reality is insubstantial, nonsolid, a dream, a phantasm, a ghost, and total nonexistence. See him proclaim that all perception is self perception, all reference is self reference, all meaning is self meaning, and all deduction is deduction from the arbitrary contents and axioms of consciousness. See him proclaim that the universe is not a physical machine but a mental organism. See him proclaim that there are no such sciences as physical mathematics and physical physics, and the belief that there are is a product of religion and theology, and there only the sciences of mental mathematics and mental physics. See him proclaim that so-called physical objects are nothing more than cultural posits, pragmatic fictions and convenient myths with no greater reality than Homer's gods. See him proclaim that space and time are purely subjective and reality is nowhere, a pure mind, a pure conceptual scheme, and a consciousness which is conscious of nothing: "It from bit. Otherwise put, every it—every particle, every field of force, even the spacetime continuum itself—derives its function, its meaning, its very existence entirely—even if in some contexts indirectly—from the apparatus elicited answers to yes or no questions, binary choices, bits. It from bit symbolizes the idea that every item of the physical world has at bottom—at a very deep bottom, in most instances—an immaterial source and explanation; that what we call reality arises in the last analysis from the posing of yes-no questions and the registering of equipment-evoked responses; in short, that all things physical are information-theoretic in origin and this is a participatory universe. To the question, 'How come the quantum?' we thus answer, 'Because what we call existence is an information-theoretic entity.' But how come existence? Its as bits, yes; and physics as information, yes; but whose information? How does the vision of one world arise out of the information gathering activities of many observer participants? In the consideration of these issues we adopt for guidelines four no's. First no: 'No tower of turtles,' advised William James. Existence is not a globe supported by an elephant, supported by a turtle, supported by yet another turtle, and so on. In other words, no infinite regress. No structure, no plan of organization, no framework of ideas underlaid by another structure or level of ideas, underlaid by yet another level, by yet another, ad infinitum, down to a bottomless night. To endlessness no alternative is evident but loop, such a loop as this: Physics gives rise to observer participancy; observer participancy gives rise to information; and information gives rise to physics. Existence thus built on 'insubstantial nothingness'? Rutherford and Bohr made a table no less solid when they told us it was 99.9. percent emptiness. Thomas Mann may exaggerate when he suggests that 'we are actually bringing about what seems to be happening to us,' but Leibniz reassures us, 'Although the whole of this life were said to be nothing but a dream and the physical world nothing but a phantasm, I should call this dream or phantasm real enough if, using reason well, we were never deceived by it.' Second no: No laws. 'So far as we can see today, the laws of physics cannot have existed from everlasting to everlasting. They must have come into being at the big bang. There were no gears and pinions, no Swiss watch makers to put things together, not even a preexisting plan. Only a principle of organization which is no organization at all would seem to offer itself. In all of mathematics, nothing of this kind more obviously offers itself than the principle that 'the boundary of a boundary is zero.' Moreover, all three great field theories of physics use this principle twice over. This circumstance would seem to give us some reassurance that we are talking sense when we think of physics being' as foundation free as a logic loop, the closed circuit of ideas in a self referential deductive axiomatic system. Universe as machine? This universe one among a great ensemble of machine universes, each differing from the others in the values of the dimensionless constants of physics? Our own selected from this ensemble by an anthropic principle of one or another form? We reject here the concept of universe as machine not least because it 'has to postulate explicitly or implicitly, a supermachine, a scheme, a device, a miracle, which will turn out universes in infinite variety and infinite number'. " (Information, Physics And The Quantum: The Search For Links by John Wheeler). The two key philosophers in the Age of Enlightenment were also its key destroyers. Officially championing the doctrine of perceptual realism, the doctrine that all perception is the perception of something and is never self perception, and thus that there are physical objects existing outside consciousness, the Enlightenment, at the hands of its key philosophers, contained the seeds of its own destruction. The first philosopher was Rene Descartes, who denied the self evident existence of physical objects establishing the existence of perception, by proclaiming the principle cogito, ergo sum, or I think, therefore I am, the principle that the existence of our own thinking and consciousness is the sole self evident certainty in the world. The second philosopher was Immanuel Kant, who banished philosophy from the realm of existence, proclaimed that it referred to nothing whatever, proclaimed that physical objects are mere "appearances" created by "subjective forms of perception", and proclaimed his antiphilosophical mission: "I have found it necessary to deny knowledge in order to make room for faith." When the Enlightenment collapsed beneath the weight of these philosophies, they became the specters which would haunt the West up to the present day. In the realm of contemporary physics, their wings of destruction were spread by John Archibald Wheeler.

DIVERSITY, EQUITY AND INCLUSION POLICE SPREAD GLOBAL NET

On September 7, 1923 in Vienna, the International Criminal Police Organization was founded with the motto, Connecting police for a safer world. In the one hundred years of its existence, Interpol became for a time the world's largest police organization, with 196 member states, seven regional bureaus and a National Central Bureau located at its headquarters in Lyon, France. Operating in four languages, English, French, Spanish and Arabic, with over one thousand employees and an annual budget of 155 million dollars, it provides support, expertise and training to police forces throughout the world and provides databases and communication networks to them. In the twenty first century, Interpol has been surpassed by the establishment of another global police organization. This organization is headquartered in every nation on Earth, has millions of employees, the largest database and communication network ever established, and operates on an unlimited budget. Its purpose is to provide support, expertise and training to governments in their efforts to control and regiment thought and speech by enforcing the principles of political correctness. It was established during the present twilight stage of civilization when mass popular religions assumed control over the establishment and directed the course of the arts and sciences into decay and degeneration. Rejecting the governance of reason which raised the West to heights of glory during the Scientific Revolution and the Age of

Enlightenment, these religions in the twenty first century are monsters on a rampage across the world. They appeal to the envy, hatred and frustrations of the masses and to psychopathic impulses to spread terror and murder unarmed civilians. The murders are committed in the name of politics. The politics is Marxism in its gender, race and class developments. The politics represents the spirit of the age and is a symptom of mass, popular civilizational implosion. The politics has established a global police force never before seen in the history of mankind to jail the voices of dissent and keep free, sane, rational thought under permanent lock and key. The politics has sworn in a Diversity, Equity and Inclusion Police and made its jurisdiction any and every place in which life exists, is in motion, and is or may be capable of thought. The twenty first century Diversity, Equity and Inclusion Police justify discrimination on the basis of race and gender, and discrimination in favor of women and nonwhites, in the name of achieving diversity at school and at the workplace, inclusion at school and at the workplace, and fairness and equity at school and at the workplace. They proclaim that the highest form of fairness and equity is the unfairness and inequity of not treating people as individuals but as members of groups and giving them preferential treatment on the basis of their race and gender. They proclaim that a progressive society rejects the validity of genetic research reaching back over the centuries, rejects the existence of heredity, chromosomes and DNA, and proclaims that gender can be changed by human action or belief. They proclaim that a progressive society affirms that gender can be changed, that people can transition to be members of the opposite gender, and people can be nonbinary in their gender and be both male and female at one and the same time. They proclaim that a school and workplace should have diverse constituents and contain gays, lesbians, women, nonwhites, and gender dysphoric psychotics, called transgenders, who imagine they are members of the opposite sex. They proclaim that a progressive university issues communications guides which mandate that all communications on campus be inclusive and avoid terms in any way suggesting fixed biological genders, terms which might cause offense to the transgender community, terms such as eggs and chicks. They proclaim that a progressive university issues communications guides and mandates that all communications on campus be inclusive and avoid terms in any way suggesting traditional Western holidays, terms which might cause offense to the Islamist community, terms such as Christmas trees and gifts. They proclaim that a progressive university issues communications guides and mandates that all communications on campus be inclusive and avoid terms in any way suggesting loyalty to free institutions, terms which might cause offense to people such as Marxists or Islamists who oppose free institutions, terms such as America. They proclaim that a progressive university provides equal educational access to all and admits and graduates with the highest honors the lowest, least qualified scum of the Earth provided they are colored black. They proclaim that a progressive university is policed by an omnipresent network of executives, directors, administrators, officers, coordinators, committees, bureaus, civil rights investigators and diversity researchers, and pays them billions of dollars each year, to ensure that every student and employee, in every place on Earth and at every time of the day or night, obeys his or her legal obligations and parrots the gender, race and class party line, and advocates for special privileges for gays, lesbians, bisexuals, transgenders, women, nonwhites and the poor: "Michigan State University currently has more than 140 employees working on 222 different diversity, equity, and inclusion, agenda items. The salaries for those employees, some of whom work on DEI full time, totals more than $18 million dollars according to a College Fix analysis. One of these goals included an 'inclusive language' guide that instructed university employees not to say America or use Easter and Christmas imagery. The Fix pulled the data from the latest Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion report for the public university in Lansing and used salary information from the school and government watchdog group Open the Books. In a few cases, The Fix estimated the salary for some employees based on the lowest salaries for personnel in comparable positions. Some action items are more specific than others, including the creation of an LGBTQIA2S+ Resource Guide, from the human resource department. The guide 'will feature crucial links to gender affirming and transition related care benefits, specifically catering to the needs of the trans and nonbinary community.' Others include 'fostering a team culture and building meaningful relationships with diverse constituents.' The university has not started on about twenty five percent of its goals, according to the latest report. Only 10 percent, 22 in total, have been fully implemented. MSU told The Fix it did not have a scorecard yet for this school year. However, in the 2022-23 school year the school broke down each item by status. One of the finished goals was the creation of 'an inclusive communications guide that highlights common terms that reflect culturally competent, empathetic and inclusive language.' That guide recommended against using words around Easter such as eggs and chicks and avoiding 'Christmas trees' and 'gifts,' during the winter. Yet the same section of the DEI agenda recommended '[providing] more inclusive recognition of holidays/commemorative dates.' The university disputed The Fix's numbers. The Fix provided MSU with a preliminary analysis of the data for review. 'Diversity, equity and inclusion are values that align with and enable our land grant mission of expanding educational access for all,' spokesman Mark Bullion told The Fix via email. 'No budget is dedicated to DEI. With more than 12,000 employees, diversity, equity and inclusion administrators are only a tiny fraction of personnel,' he said. 'With that said, many of the jobs listed are required operational roles that ensure compliance with legal obligations,' Bullion said. 'Others include executive leaders with broad divisional oversight and employees who serve on a committee or in an advisory capacity.' Some of those higher level leaders include Executive Vice President for Health Sciences Norman Beauchamp, who makes $729,994 per year, according to Open the Books. He is listed in The Fix report because Health Sciences is implementing some goals relating to community outreach. However, other high paid administrators appear to be focused on DEI. This includes Vice President and Chief Diversity Officer Jabbar Bennett who makes $363,511 per year, among other benefits, and Deborah Johnson, director of the Diversity Research Network. She makes $204,471 per year. The compliance headcount could include the 22 personnel in the Office of Institutional Equity, such as intake coordinators and civil rights investigators. A conservative Michigan think tank criticized the state's higher education spending. 'Taxpayers have been showering public universities with billions of dollars and asking nothing in return,' James Hohman with the Mackinac Center for Public Policy told The Fix via an emailed media statement. 'We should revisit that policy,' the center's fiscal policy director said. 'Lawmakers need to reassess how much money is being given to state universities to ensure that taxpayers are getting good returns for their investments.' " (Don't Say 'America': Michigan State Has 140+ Employees Working On 222 DEI Action Items by M. J. Cadman). The political police are a characteristic feature of Marxist regimes and their mission is to repress and eliminate the opponents of the regime. The dissidents are the voices of freedom. In the twenty first century, the KGBs and the Stasis of the former East Bloc have been brought back to life. They confront the voices of freedom with a new name. They are known as the Diversity, Equity and Inclusion Police and their remit is the world.

THE MARXIST-ISLAMIST OFFICE

Freedom of speech, on campuses and elsewhere, is rendered meaningless if speakers can be shouted down by those who disagree. The law is well established that the government can act to prevent a heckler's veto--to prevent the reaction of the audience from silencing the speaker. There is simply no 1st Amendment right to go into an auditorium and prevent a speaker from being heard, no matter who the speaker is or how strongly one disagrees with his or her message. (UC Irvine's Free Speech Debate, Los Angeles Times, November 20, 2020, quoting Erwin Chemerinsky). The heckler's veto: the disruption of a speech with the aim of silencing and canceling the speaker. The heckler's veto: the restriction of free speech by a third party in order to prevent a reacting party's behavior. The heckler's veto: the shutting down of a speaker due to the rowdy, hostile conduct of an audience or to the possibility of such conduct. The heckler's veto is the stock in trade of an axis in control of society today. It is the stock in trade of an axis running today's establishment. It is characteristic behavior of members of two religions which have joined forces in a campaign to overthrow free societies. It is a weapon sharpened on the grindstones of two religions, Marxism and Islam, to impale the voices of dissent, and it is pervasive, haunts every workplace in the West, and has inscribed on the tombstone of civilization: The death of civilization in electoral landslides peddled as victories of progressivism. The death of civilization by mass, popular implosion. Today's workplace is a hermetically sealed echo chamber pushing the Marxist-Islamist party line which interrupts and hisses at all forms of dissent. It is an airless, lightless space which reinforces the beliefs and opinions of the haters of freedom colored alien red for the hammer and sickle and the half crescent. It is a set of rooms whose commercial, professional and bureaucratic activities are guided by the requirement that workers comply with the dictates of political correctness, and overlaid with fear of reprisals in the form of dismissal for those who dissent. Today's workplace is a weapon of regimentation enforcing rules for the establishment of a force of partisans incapable of peaceful discussion. It is a theater of mob politics staging in white collar offices, during normal business hours, the Marxist-Islamist takeover of society, and enacting on quiet, carpeted floors the Marxist-Islamist policy of brutal prejudice and intolerance. The words of today's office workers, noisy, heated, angry and aggressive, are an organizational alarm bell notifying civilized people of the terminal stage of a free society. The director, manager, administrator and clerk have issued a series of proclamations abolishing freedom of speech at the workplace. They proclaim that a progressive office stages sit ins protesting against the only free society in the Middle East, Israel, and its war to defeat Islamist terror. They proclaim that a progressive office is rank with political bias sprouting from the weeds of Marxism and Islam. They proclaim that a progressive office enforces support for Hamas terror attacks launched from Gaza. They proclaim that a progressive office subordinates business matters to political matters and unfurls the red flags of Marxism and Islam on every desk. They proclaim that a progressive office prohibits political discourse which promotes the cause of freedom. They proclaim that a progressive office prohibits speech in support of reason, science and liberal values, and speech in opposition to Marxist race and gender politics and Islamist fanaticism, on the grounds that it is hurtful, harassing, incendiary and exclusionary. They proclaim that a progressive office promotes politically charged discussions demanding the transformation of society into a black power cesspool. They proclaim that a progressive office demands the overthrow of capitalism in the name of improving race relations. They proclaim that a progressive office is a platform for Marxist political views. They proclaim that a progressive office promotes discrimination against white males, and preferential treatment for black females, in the name of achieving diversity and inclusion. They proclaim that a progressive office exalts discrimination against white males as the highest form of fairness and equity. They proclaim that a progressive office is patrolled by diversity, equity and inclusion jackboots whose task is to ensure that white males stay relegated to the status of subalterns and second class citizens. They proclaim that a progressive office has opened its communication channels to Marxist-Islamist agitprop. They proclaim that a progressive office promotes political talk focused on the necessity of subversion. They proclaim that a progressive office promotes political discussions focused on the necessity of violence. They proclaim that a progressive office promotes conversations focused on the necessity of Marxist political activism. They proclaim that a progressive office prohibits its staff from holding opinions opposed to Marxism and Islam. They proclaim that a progressive office designs software programming its staff for Marxist-Islamist revolution. They proclaim that a progressive office builds management software for the Marxist-Islamist management of society. They proclaim that a progressive office issues employee handbooks allowing employees to stop their work to engage in Marxist-Islamist advocacy. They proclaim that a progressive office is a communication system for the propagation of Marxist-Islamist invectives, inveighing and name calling. They proclaim that a progressive office bans capitalist politics from the workplace but not communist politics. They proclaim that a progressive office issues job postings seeking people prepared to brawl in the streets on behalf of Marxism and Islam. They proclaim that a progressive office subordinates work on behalf of clients to work on behalf of Marxist-Islamist politics. They proclaim that a progressive office is a monoculture, a megaphone, a public address system and a political party whose platform demands the reversion of society to the swamplands of socialist politics and submission to Allah: "Amid polarization, some employers seek to prohibit or rein in political discourse on the clock. In mid April, dozens of employees at Google were sacked after staging a sit in style protest in the company's California offices, demanding an end to Google's contracts with the Israeli government. Earlier that month, National Public Radio (NPR) suspended senior editor Uri Berliner after he published an essay accusing the news outlet of political bias. (Berliner later resigned). The New York Times has launched an investigation into its own staff after information leaked pertaining to their coverage of the conflict in Gaza. Similar tensions are simmering in workplaces across the globe, splitting employees and putting pressure on companies to act. 'Politics is increasingly something that is not confined anymore to just the political arena,' says Edoardo Teso, associate professor of managerial economics and decision sciences at Northwestern University, US, adding that personal opinion can 'spill over' into the workplace. As elections take place in dozens of countries this year—including in the UK, the US, India, Pakistan and Belgium—political discussion may well crop up in workplaces around the world, leaving business leaders to determine how this will be handled, and what circumstances cross the line. In 2020, leaders at global software firm Intuit began looking for ways to help employees talk constructively about political matters. They noted an increase in politically charged discussions as covid-19 broke out, and workers disagreed about healthcare guidance and vaccinations. Following the murder of George Floyd, employees spoke heatedly about race relations. Intuit subsequently put in guardrails for how employees can talk about divisive topics on company channels. 'We want you to focus on how you're feeling and how things are affecting you as a person, and less on using our internal channels as a platform for your political views,' Intuit's chief diversity, equity and inclusion officer, Humera Shahid, tells the BBC of the company's approach. There are moderators, usually HR or people who lead employee resource groups, who monitor the company's messaging channels to flag 'language that could be hurtful or exclude', according to company policy. Posters are asked to take down content that might be incendiary. 'We find 99.9% of the time, the intent is very good,' says Shahid. 'They just don't recognize that they may be causing harm to another employee.' Some employers are altogether prohibiting political discussions at work. One of them is the tech company 37Signals, which owns the project management platform Basecamp. In 2021, CEO Jason Fried asked the company's employees to refrain from political talk in company communication channels. Roughly one third of Basecamp's employees quit as a result. 'It caused a lot of pain for people,' says Fried. 'I felt bad about that. We anticipated there would be some backlash internally and probably externally, but not quite as much. I think it destabilized the company for a short period of time.' Fried says he took the decision because many workers got tired of being pulled into political discussions on the clock. " (How Global Companies Handle Political Talk At Work by Emily McCrary-Ruiz-Esparza). The year 1989 brought the most famous scene in postwar history. On November 9, five days after a half a million people gathered in East Berlin demanding freedom, the Berlin Wall, dividing Marxist East Germany from West Germany, symbol of Marxist repression like no other, crumbled. The repression suffered a temporary defeat. It defines the times in which we live. Its victims are everywhere. In the twenty first century, Marxist tanks, guns and guard towers have rolled into the workplaces of the West by popular demand, and assisted by Islamist allies, resurrected the nightmares of the past.

ATOMIC BOMBS DROP ON BRITAIN

A mutation is a change in a gene. It can occur randomly in nature or as a result of ionizing radiation. This is radiation which is so powerful that it removes electrons from atoms or molecules and produces positively charged particles called ions. Ionizing radiation includes x rays, gamma rays and ultraviolet rays, and the greater the dose of ionizing radiation, the greater the chance of a mutation in a gene. A mutation can give cells faulty instructions to multiply uncontrolled and cause cancer, and vast, continuous doses of ionizing radiation can kill an organism in a short time. In a nation off the northwest coast of continental Europe, a nation consisting of England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, a nation brought together in 1707 in two Acts of Union passed by parliament, a nation called the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, vast, continuous doses of an ionizing radiation inflicted over decades have destroyed the nation's DNA of freedom, a set of instructions carried around the world on the warships of imperialism which liberated savage realms in the most distant corners of the Earth. In the DNA of this storied land is coded the following laws, principles and actions: the Magna Carta; the writ of Habeas Corpus, the safeguarding of individual freedom against unjust state detention; the Petition of Right; the proclamation by jurist Albert Venn Dicey that "English rights are embedded in the general English common law of personal liberty, and the institutions and manners of the nation" (Introduction To The Study Of The Law Of The Constitution); the Bill of Rights; the Glorious Revolution; the proclamation by jurist Edward Coke that "a man's house is his castle and his safest refuge (Institutes Of The Laws Of England); the proclamation by jurist William Blackstone that "It is better that ten guilty persons escape than that one innocent suffer" (Commentaries On The Law Of England); the proclamation by poet William Cowper that "We have no slaves at home. Then why abroad? Slaves cannot breathe in England; if their lungs receive our air, that moment they are free. They touch our country, and their shackles fall. That's noble, and bespeaks a nation proud. And jealous of the blessing. Spread it then, And let it circulate through every vein"; and the antislavery medallion created by Josiah Wedgwood, depicting a kneeling black slave in chains with his hands raised to the heavens, and inscribed with the words: Am I Not A Man And A Brother? In the twenty first century, this acclaimed DNA, which for centuries had coded for a blazing light shining in the darkness of tyranny, and coded for the leadership of Britain in the free world, has undergone a mutation and produced a cancer. In the twenty first century, the birthplace of freedom in the West and the mentor of freedom fighters for one thousand years has been subjected to ionizing radiation produced by a mass popular religion voted into power in successive landslides under a ticket stamped progressivism. It has been subjected to the death rays of a religion of the discontented known as Marxism. Its cancerous development has produced the excrescences of race politics, class politics, gender politics, and an excrescence so great that it has reversed the Battle of Tours of 732 AD. In the twenty first century, the religion and cancer of Marxism has unleashed a monster from the East and let it overrun the nation. Marxism has unleashed a monster called Islam and forged an axis with it to destroy freedom in the nation which gave freedom to the West and freedom to the world. In the twenty first century, Britain's genetic mutation has rendered the nation morally and spiritually unrecognizable. In the twenty first century, Britain has been blackened by popular demand and the blackness is called Islam. Look at its uncontrolled expansion into every sector of society. The blackness is the mayor of London. The blackness is the mayor of Birmingham. The blackness is the mayor of Leeds. The blackness is the mayor of Oxford. The blackness is the mayor of Blackburn. The blackness is the mayor of Luton. The blackness is the mayor of Sheffield. The blackness is the mayor of Oldham. The blackness is the mayor of Rochdale. The blackness is a new state supplanting freedom presided over by sharia councils and sharia courts. The blackness is a new state worshipping in mosques calling the faithful to revolution from their minarets. The blackness is schools across the nation indoctrinating students in the tenets of Islam. The blackness is Islamist families endlessly dividing and multiplying, relieved from the responsibility to work, provided with state funded housing and cradle to grave welfare support, and transforming streets and neighborhood into theaters of war: "The mayor of London is a Muslim. The mayor of Birmingham is a Muslim. The mayor of Leeds is Muslim. Mayor of Blackburn--Muslim. The mayor of Sheffield is a Muslim. The mayor of Oxford is a Muslim. The mayor of Luton is a Muslim. The mayor of Oldham is Muslim. The mayor of Rochdale is Muslim All this was achieved by only 4 million Muslims out of 66 million people in England: Today there are over 3,000 mosques in England. There are over 130 sharia courts. There are more than 50 Sharia Councils. 78 percent of Muslim women do not work, receive state support + free accommodation. 63 percent of Muslims do not work, receive state support + free housing. State supported Muslim families with an average of 6 to 8 children receive free accommodation. Now every school in the UK is required to teach lessons about Islam." (Laurence Fox, X, May 4, 2024). Look Britain today and see Islamists recreate national politics in their own image. See Islamists launch a mass invasion and render border control a thing of the past. See Islamists refuse to assimilate to Western liberal values promoting individual rights and prohibiting discrimination on the basis of gender. See Islamists set up communities brandishing flags of violence, radicalism and revolution. See Islamists forge alliances with Marxist parties and help them get elected. See Islamist populists form popular fronts with Marxist populists and sweep across the nation to mass ovations. See Islamists worshiped by the nation and see the nation beg them for their support. See Islamists force the nation to recognize Palestine and finance its missiles of terror. See Islamists and Marxists lead a national campaign of jihad, Jew hatred and the destruction of Israel. See alien hordes nonBritish, unBritish and antiBritish declare war on one thousand years of free institutions: "Border control campaigner and Brexit leader Nigel Farage has warned of a new wave of sectarian politics washing over Britain, pointing to the unedifying spectacle of a top Labor politician pleading with a 'group of Muslim leaders' to get her reelected in the summer general election. Speaking at a border control campaign event in Dover, England on Tuesday—the front line of the mass migration invasion playing out over Britain’s southern coast—Nigel Farage warned that a failure to integrate the huge numbers of new migrant arrivals was allowing communities at odds with the British mainstream to establish themselves. He said there are a 'small but worryingly growing number of young men adopting radical views, views that aren’t just unBritish, but which frankly are extremely antiBritish. We saw the recent local elections, candidates being elected in inner city districts in Leeds, Burney, and elsewhere.' Illustrating the point, Farage cited leaked footage from a Labor campaign event from the weekend, where not a single member of the audience is female and the speaking MP begs to keep her job, promising a new left wing government would recognize Palestine as a state in return for their votes. Farage said: 'We saw the aggressions. And you might have noticed that Angela Rayner yesterday was campaigning in her constituency begging, begging! A group of Muslim leaders to please vote Labor. You’ll have noticed not a single woman in the room. So we’re moving into an age, in our inner cities and towns, I’m afraid and worried to say, of sectarian politics with women completely excluded.' The Angela Rayner speech to what has been called a room full of 'Muslim leaders' and which British newspaper The Daily Mail says it believes was recorded on Sunday comes amid the context of left wing populist George Galloway winning a recent election by pandering to Muslim anger over Palestine, and a group of European countries recognizing Palestine as a state. In the footage, Rayner speaks first of the importance of the votes that can be brought in by the men in the room. She said, in what Farage characterized as begging, Rayner said slowly and with deliberately enunciated words: 'my voters were very upset with the Labor Party. I was with you, and you saw me over the line. You supported me. In seats that are similar to mine, people lost their seats. You were there for me and I don’t believe I could have done that without you.' The footage of Rayner so openly pleading for Muslim votes by leveraging Gaza may be seen as unhelpful internally, given present Labor leader Sir Keir Starmer has focused so keenly since taking over the party on putting distance between themselves and the previous leadership of hard left populist Jeremy Corbyn. Corbyn's Labor era was beset with antisemitism scandals and obsessed with old school, hard left preoccupations, not least among them Palestine, rendering it unelectable." (Nigel Farage: Left Is 'Begging' Muslims For Votes in UK General Election With Promises To Recognize Palestine by Oliver JJ Lane). A brilliant flash of light appears, followed by a thunderous booming sound. People are thrown across rooms, windows are smashed and buildings are crushed. Survivors emerge from the ruins and wander through the city with no place to go. Dust and darkness settle over everything. Hundreds of thousands of people are killed by blast, firestorms and radiation effects. This is Hiroshima, August 6, 1945 on the day an atomic bomb was dropped on the city by American forces. In Britain in the twenty first century, the devastation suffered by Hiroshima has been dwarfed by an invasion and settlement of Islamists. The moral blast, firestorms and radiation sickness produced have hurled this ancient nation into the dustbin of history.

MARX'S PROPHET MARCUSE

Scene: the prophet Isaiah depicted in a fresco on the Sistine Chapel ceiling by Michelangelo. Scene: the prophet Zoroaster in a third century AD Roman depiction, found in Syria by the archeologist Franz Cumont. Scene: the prophet John the Baptist, depicted in a 1665 oil painting by Mattia Preti. A prophet: an individual held to be in contact with a god and to speak on behalf of that god, delivering the god's teachings and messages to humanity. In the mid twentieth century, a prophet arose and spoke on behalf of a mass popular religion which had assumed control over the establishment. He spoke on behalf of his master who had died a century before. He spoke on behalf of a system of beliefs born in the gutters of a mind which had transcribed its mental violence safely ensconced in the Reading Room of the British Museum. He spoke on behalf of Karl Marx, who peddled envy and hate to the discontented and advocated world revolution to overthrow free societies. The prophet's name was Herbert Marcuse and he developed the logic of Marxism, the logic of tribalism, the logic which rejects human universality and divides mankind into warring tribes, into a new cancerous multiplicity of tribes. From the division of mankind into the warring tribes of the proletariat and the bourgeois, it was a short logical step in the mind of Marx's prophet Marcuse to divide mankind into warring tribes based on race, gender, age, sexual orientation and a host of other characteristics. Marcuse's motivations in doing so were wrong but his promotion of identity Marxism was a permanent contribution to the Marxist hate universe, a contribution which followed in the footsteps of another twentieth century prophet of Marxism. This first prophet arose in the early decades of the twentieth century and promoted his own brand of neoMarxist identity politics thirty years before Marcuse. Thirty years before Marcuse, German chancellor, fuhrer and political party leader Adolf Hitler invented national socialist Marxism, Aryan Marxism, swastika Marxism and race Marxism, and led his nation in a neoMarxist war of racial extermination which saw a holocaust against Jews. Look at Marx's second prophet after Hitler and see the promotion of an ever expanding plethora of identitarian creeds. Marcuse's motivation for his creation was based on panic unrelated to political reality. He thought that the proletariat cannot be relied upon to bring about communist revolution because it has become affluent and capitalist, and that other tribes are needed to accomplish this task. The reality of twentieth century political developments refutes Marcuse's negative assessment of the majority. Communism has achieved power in the West through ballots and not the bullets envisioned by Marx, but it has arrived. It has arrived packaged as progressivism, the Square Deal, the New Deal, Social Security, the Fair Deal, the invention of a bogeyman called the "military industrial complex", the New Frontier, the Great Society, Centrism, the Third Way, the "radical center", the social market, "a kinder, gentler nation", "compassionate conservatism", Hope and Change, "yes, we can", the Affordable Care Act and Build Back Better, but it has arrived. It has arrived at a slower speed, in a longer time frame, and through peaceful democratic means, but it has arrived. It has taken a century to arrive, and has arrived through successive elections in place of successive acts of violence, but it has arrived. Marx did not predict this development, and Marcuse refused to see this development happening right before his eyes, but it realized an iron law of society, a law which ancient philosophers recognized thousands of years ago. This is the law that any system of democracy will eventually enact communism. It is the law that it is the nature of masses to reject individual freedom and self responsibility and to enact a system of state control and social responsibility. Look at Marx's second prophet after Hitler and see the substitution of class Marxism by identity Marxism. See the substitution of economic Marxism by noneconomic Marxism. See the substitution of Soviet style Marxism by Hitler style Marxism. See the promotion of the Frankfurt school of critical theory, which is so named because it is critical of the Enlightenment and its ideals of reason, freedom and human universality. See the supplementation of Marx's proletariat with other tribes, such as university students, university professors, fugitives from justice, urban hoodlums, illegal aliens, peasants, farmers, women, blacks, hispanics, gays, lesbians, gender dysphoric psychotics who imagine they are members of the opposite sex, the unemployed and unemployable, and savages from undeveloped nations, who will form a grand coalition in a campaign to overthrow free institutions. See a faulty interpretation of contemporary history, an interpretation which refused to acknowledge that the majority supported communism and was slowly but surely voting it into power, combined with the creation of a multiheaded, new left, gender, race, class and culture monster, which would assume a life of its own and rampage into every sector of society: "I recently read a document released by the CIA in 2005 that describes the New Left and Herbert Marcuse's influence on college campuses. What it reveals is extremely relevant to what's happening on college campuses today. In June of 1968, the Current Digest of the Soviet Press released a scathing article, calling University of California San Diego professor Herbert Marcuse a 'false prophet.' As a Soviet entity, the Current Digest set out to annihilate Marcuse's 'decommunized Marxism,' for obvious reasons. Marcuse had abandoned 'vulgar' Marxism and the USSR's bureaucratic and administrative terror in favor of his personal flavor of faith: Identity Marxism. Marcuse's theory goes like this: Free market economies stabilize the working class. Marx predicted the working class would necessarily enter open revolt against the system once their economic and material conditions became too brutal to bear. This, Marx argued, was a scientific prediction, predicated on what activists now call the 'immortal science of Marxism.' In other words, just as you can predict that the apple will fall if you let go of it, Marxists predicted capitalism would inevitably fall after running its course in advanced industrial societies—it was only a matter of time. But free market economies adjusted, and by the 1950s and 60s it was clear that free market economies improved the lives of workers. Marxists admitted this, reluctantly. For them, it was a crisis of faith. The 'immortal science of Marxism' was clearly wrong, both on a moral level, as revealed by all of the starving and dead people, and on an economic level, as revealed by workers buying nice cars and taking their families on nice holidays. Marcuse theorized that the working class must mostly be abandoned as first movers in a communist revolution. The working class was too stable, and revolutions require instability to work. So, he argued, Marxists must place their energy in college kids, 'ghetto populations,' criminal aliens (illegal immigrants), and anyone else who might feel marginalized by society, such as gays and lesbians, the unemployed, and war veterans. If you can radicalize these groups and centralize their grievances, Marcuse thought, then you can build a coalition that can break the working class from the inside. As the New York Times would publish in the wake of Marcuse's death in 1979: 'Dr. Marcuse had little belief that the working class would, in affluent, highly technological societies, incite revolution. Rather, he believed, a new coalition of student radicals, small numbers of intellectuals, urban blacks and people from underdeveloped nations could overthrow forces that he saw as keeping workers from an awareness of their oppression.' The Current Digest was responding to the meteoric rise of Marcuse and his new theory of Marxism when it published Marcuse: False Prophet of Decommunized Marxism in June of 1968. Marcuse and his 'vociferous disciples' scared the USSR because they had been converted to a new faith; a new interpretation of Marxism that '[has] special gods' and challenged the USSR's stranglehold. 'Marcuse, Marcuse, Marcuse--the name of this seventy year old German-American philosopher, which has emerged from the darkness of obscurity, has been endlessly repeated in the Western press. In Bonn the name is pronounced Markoozeh; in New York, Markyooz; in Paris, Markyooss. The California resident who has undertaken to disprove Marxism is being publicized as if he were a movie star, and his books as if they were the latest brand of toothpaste or razor blades. A clever publicity formula has even been thought up: 'the three M's—Marx, the god; Marcuse, his prophet; and Mao, his sword.' Marx remained the god, but Marcuse was his latest prophet, and the USSR hated his interpretations of their shared doctrine. If Marcuse spent his life in 'dark obscurity,' his prophecy—identity based Marxism rather than economic Marxism as the lever of revolution—wouldn't have bothered the USSR. But Marcuse had reached astronomical popularity in the tumultuous 60s, and, worst of all, he had adopted the revolutionary strategies of Chairman Mao Tse-tung, founder of the People's Republic of China. Mao's formula of Cultural Revolution proved to be incredibly successful in a gigantic, mostly agrarian society that was the last place Marx would have predicted communist revolution to take hold. His strategy was straightforward: radicalize the easily brainwashed students and use them as a lever to bulldoze everything and consolidate his own power." (Marx, The God. Marcuse, His Prophet. Mao, His Sword by Logan Lancing). Identity politics, the politics of tribes, the politics of class, culture, race, religion, nationality, ethnicity, gender and sexual orientation. Prophesied by Herbert Marcuse, it is the final stage of Marxism and the wreckage of the West.

NIGHT GALLERY

A nightmare is a dream which causes strong negative emotions such as fear, anxiety, despair and sadness. It contains situations of terror, panic and discomfort. After a nightmare, a person awakens in a state of distress and for a time is unable to return to sleep. Nightmares figure prominently in the world's folklore. In Iranian mythology, demons called divs created nightmares, while in Germanic and Slavic mythologies, the demons who created nightmares were called mare. In the twenty first century, a nightmare has been brought to life by the mandate of the majority. This is a nightmare civilized people have had for thousands of years and has caused them to wake up screaming and feel terror in the night. This is the nightmare of totalitarian state control over the mind, body and property of the individual. This is the nightmare of freedom sent permanently into chains and buried forever in a dungeon. Civilized people have experienced this nightmare because they have understood for thousands of years an iron law of society, a law which admits of no exceptions, qualifications or restrictions of any kind because it springs from the innate character of the majority. This law states that any system of democracy anywhere in the world, at any time and in any nation or culture, will eventually repeal individual freedom and self responsibility, and enact socialism, statism and social responsibility in their place. This law is as ineradicable as the disturbed psychology of the masses from which it proceeds, a psychology warped by the demons of maladjustment, incompetence, failure and frustration which drive the masses to seek submergence and annihilation in the arms of the totalitarian state. In the twenty first century, the totalitarian nightmare has arrived in full force after one hundred years of development, arrived after one hundred years of landslide electoral support given to socialism of various stripes and varieties, arrived after a resurgence of old time religion seeking to bring back the Dark Ages, arrived with a frontal assault on reason, truth and the legacies of the Enlightenment by a pincer movement comprised of Marxists and old time religionists, arrived and hurled civilization into the dustbin of history. Marxism. Look at the new totalitarian nightmare and see censors examine the channels of communication and suppress ideas and opinions deemed politically unacceptable. See airships carry the devil's cargo of Marxist propaganda and unload at airstrips throughout the world. See reality declared to be whatever the gender, race and class party line decrees it to be. See facts, records, books and documents falsified and rewritten in the interests of achieving political correctness. See words created, redefined or removed from the pages of dictionaries and encyclopedias by the decrees of Marxist theologians. See truth proclaimed to be unprovable, unknowable and nonexistent. See people kept under round the clock surveillance to ensure loyalty to the Marxist state. See a new kind of crime defined, called a thought crime, which is the crime of thinking antiMarxist thoughts and ideas. See television, computer and motion picture screens transmit messages demanding mass conformity to Marxist ideologies. See language changed to reflect changes in politics. See Soviet style regimentation of thought and behavior and the abolition of private spheres of existence. See the establishment of a one party state, the Marxist party, along with the illusion of different parties having names such as Labor, Conservative, Liberal, Republican and Democrat. See the Marxist party assume control over government bureaucracies, corporate offices, college campuses and social media platforms. See the voices of reason and truth disinvented, canceled and made to disappear. See mob pressure and peer pressure create an epidemic of mass compliance with Marxist party pronouncements. See a religion proclaiming that DNA does not exist, sex chromosomes do not exist, and gender can be changed by human action or belief enforced as an official state religion. See this religion of transgenderism prohibit words which refer to biological realities, words such as cervix, vagina and breast feeding, and replace them by words such as front hole and chest feeding. See males redescribed as females and females redescribed as males on orders from the transgenderist thought police. See films and novels altered on orders from the mob, the government, publishers and copyright holders to comply with Marxist political sensitivities. See human resources departments transform corporations into ideological echo chambers. See news reports replaced by political propaganda which paints glowing pictures of economies bankrupted by government induced inflation. See every sector of society, from homes to schools to businesses to the media to nonprofit organizations, become branch offices of a global ministry of Marxism whose mission is the construction of dystopia and the destruction of the free world: "Americans still read George Orwell's Nineteen Eighty Four, seventy five years after it was first published on June 8, 1949. At the time, the year 1984 was far in the future; now it's forty years in the past. Yet our present feels more than ever like Orwell's dystopia. The novel is set on Airstrip One, a totalitarian version of what is today Britain. Its protagonist is Winston Smith, a censor working in the Ministry of Truth. His job is to alter historical records to conform to whatever the ruling party now decrees. He rewrites history and the very documents on which historians rely. Reality is whatever the Party says it is; who could prove otherwise? Surveillance is inescapable: every screen watches the people who watch it. Even thinking the wrong thoughts is a crime, though the authorities do everything in their power to prevent thought crime before it happens by mutilating language itself. 'We're destroying words--scores of them, hundreds of them, every day,' boasts one of Winston's colleagues who's working on the latest Newspeak dictionary. There will be no more words like excellent or bad, only doubleplusgood or ungood, variations on a single base term. The 1984 of Orwell's imagination resembled the Soviet Union of his lifetime in many ways. But he intended the book as a warning about what could happen in the West, too. The Soviet Union is long gone, yet much of what Orwell feared is coming to pass in the free world today; not under a totalitarian dictatorship, but through the pervasive power of politically correct ideology. Nineteen Eighty Four presents a simple picture of a state run by one party. We have competing parties in government, but in effect one ideological party dominates our schools, our media and the federal bureaucracy, as well as much of corporate America--particularly Human Resources departments. And what does the party do? It destroys words, alters books and documents, surveils us all and polices opinion. When a dissenter is made to disappear in Nineteen Eighty Four, he's vaporized. Our Newspeak word for that today is canceled. If we're better off because the Thought Police of 2024 don't employ torture, as the Ministry of Love does in Nineteen Eighty Four, we're also worse off in one way: We have no excuse. We aren't violently coerced into obedience; we're simply nudged, nagged and incentivized into going along with insanity. A Supreme Court nominee doesn't know what the word woman means; well, how could she, if the Newspeak dictionary hasn't been perfected yet? The Canadian Cancer Society can't use the terms cervix or vagina; instead it's front hole. When someone like Bruce Jenner changes sex, a Winston Smith in 2024 amends birth certificates and encyclopedias to say Jenner was always a woman. The modern Winston also rewrites novels by Roald Dahl and Ian Fleming to reflect today's political sensitivities--not under orders from the government but in compliance with self censoring publishers and copyright holders. In the novel, the Ministry of Plenty proclaims nothing but good news about the economy, even as chocolate rations are reduced. Here and now, economists in step with the party flock to op-ed pages and social media to insist that America is prospering, even as inflation reduces what every shopper can buy at the grocery stores." (1984 In 2024: Orwell Was Right by Daniel McCarthy). Look at the new totalitarian nightmare and see race Marxists promote national socialism under the guise of "identity and democracy" and win landslide victories in the European Union parliamentary elections held on June 6-9, 2024. See the triumph of what the establishment calls the far right, which is in actual fact a brand of the far left because it peddles tribalism and rejects individual rights, and merely replaces class war by race war. See the triumph of a neoMarxist movement which pretends to be antiMarxist but is in fact an engine of Marxist revolution seeking to overthrow the norms of civilized society: "In eastern Germany, where the AfD is particularly extreme but often leads in the polls, the far right won the most votes. And the party managed to up its share among young voters, who possibly enjoyed rebelling against mainstream German norms of acceptability." (Germany: Far Right Celebrate Beating Scholz's Party by Damien McGuinness). Old Time Religions. Look at the new totalitarian nightmare and see a resurgence of Islam throughout the world. See Islamist migrants in the West launch terror attacks against the antiIslamification voices of liberal dissent. See a mass invading army from the East set up bases of operations in the West and stab freedom, law and civilization to death: "Four days after an Afghan migrant suspect attacked an antiIslamification rally in Germany, police have decided there was a religious extremist motive. A police officer was killed and five other people, including a veteran right wing political campaigner, were stabbed in the German city of Mannheim last week. A twenty five year old Afghan migrant is accused of having charged the setup of a political rally event in the town square with a knife in an apparent terror attack." (Mass Stabbing Against AntiIslamic Extremism Rally May Have Been Islamic Extremism, Police Say by Oliver JJ Lane). See a resurgence of Christianity which has seen the placement of the Conference of Catholic Bishops on the United States Supreme Court. See the Court obey the orders of the Catholic Church and breach the wall of separation between religion and the state established by the First Amendment to the Constitution. See the Court obey the orders of the Catholic Church and authorize states to declare that a fertilized ovum at the moment of fertilization is an actual human person the destruction of which is an act of murder. See the Court obey the orders of the Catholic Church and authorize states to declare that at the moment of fertilization a supernatural person appears and the reason we cannot see this person is that we are blind because we have eyes, and we cannot see this highest reality by virtue of the fact that we have a working, functioning visual system. See the Court obey the orders of the Catholic Church and find rationales to sanction the imposition of religion by the states. The rationale is that the word abortion does not appear in the Constitution. The rationale is that the right to liberty enumerated in the Due Process Clause of the Constitution does not mean what it means, that A does not mean A, and that liberty does not mean liberty: "We hold that Roe and Casey must be overruled. The Constitution makes no reference to abortion, and no such right is implicitly protected by any constitutional provision, including the one on which the defenders of Roe and Casey now chiefly rely—the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment." (Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization, 2022). See a resurgence of Orthodox Judaism in Israel and see a movement to overthrow the nation's liberal secular constitution. See a movement to impose religious prejudice on the people and make a five thousand year old creed of ignorance and superstition official government policy: "Although they live in the same small country and share many traditions, highly religious and secular Jews inhabit largely separate social worlds, with relatively few close friends and little intermarriage outside their own groups. In fact, the survey finds that secular Jews in Israel are more uncomfortable with the notion that a child of theirs might someday marry an ultra Orthodox Jew than they are with the prospect of their child marrying a Christian. Moreover, these divisions are reflected in starkly contrasting positions on many public policy questions, including marriage, divorce, religious conversion, military conscription, gender segregation and public transportation. Overwhelmingly, Haredi and Dati Jews (both generally considered Orthodox) express the view that Israel's government should promote religious beliefs and values, while secular Jews strongly favor separation of religion from government policy." (Israel's Religiously Divided Society, Pew Research, March 8, 2016). The Nightmare is a 1781 oil painting by Swiss artist Henry Fuseli. It is his magnum opus. It depicts a woman in deep sleep, her arms thrown down, being penetrated by an incubus. In the twenty first century, this nightmare has come alive in the penetration of the West by the enemies of the Enlightenment, marching under the banners of Marx and his coreligionists.

EARTHQUAKE DESTROYS CALIFORNIA

One hundred and seventy three years ago, it was admitted to the United States as the thirty first state and was admitted as a free state. It is the most populous state in the nation, with a population of thirty nine million. It has the largest economy of any state in the nation, with a gross state product of 3.6 trillion dollars. It has the largest subnational economy in the world. Its agricultural production is the highest in the nation. Its port in Los Angeles is the busiest port in the nation and receives forty percent of the goods imported by the nation. It is the global center of technology and the film industry, being the home of the internet, the personal computer and Hollywood. This storied state scaling peaks of fame and achievement is California. In the twenty first century, tragedy has struck the state and reduced it to a ruin. It has been taken over, ransacked and rendered unrecognizable by the mob and lies wrecked on the Barbary Coast of failed political entities. In the twenty first century, California has fallen victim to a movement which has swept across the West, and mirroring the state of the culture, it has collapsed. Admitted to America as a free state, California has died in the twenty first century as a slave state, enslaved to the passions of the number one political and religious movement of our time. In the twenty first century, a giant called California has been felled by a movement of the discontented without equal in the history of mankind, a movement which has felled a giant called the West and a giant called the free world, and scattered the fragments. In the twenty first century, California has been felled by Marxism, voted into power in a century of electoral landslides under tickets stamped progressivism, and the crashes have dwarfed by orders of magnitude the seismic intensity produced by crashes of the state's giant sequoias, and sent shock waves coursing through America and the West, crashes heard around the world heralding the crash of civilization. Look at California today and see a company of Marxist acrobats set up shop and parade moral freaks to the world. See insanity, rank, brazen, luxuriant, gender, race and class insanity, crowned dictator of the state. See blacks receive multibillion dollar reparations for slavery which never existed in the state, and make whites pay for crimes committed over a century ago, crimes which their ancestors in the state never committed. See thieves and murderers exempted from punishment on the grounds that the things they stole and killed for were easy to steal. See Marxist tribalism placed on display, bathed in the colors of the rainbow. See the rainbow colors of gender dysphoria psychosis, possessed by those who believe they are members of the opposite sex and claim, in defiance of the DNA contained in every cell in their body, that they have in fact changed into members of the opposite sex. See a public procession of Marxist voices, Marxist gays, Marxist lesbians, Marxist indigenous tribes and Marxist transgender psychotics, dressed in the colors of red subversion and revolution. See a procession of Marxist voices wave Palestinian flags and launch missiles of Hamas terror. See discrimination on the basis of race and sex justified in the name of achieving diversity, inclusion, representation of "underrepresented" groups, and the highest form of fairness and equity in schools and offices. See diversity, equity and inclusion jackboots force schools and offices to discriminate against whites and males, in violation of the law mandating equal protection for all, and give preferential treatment to blacks and women. See diversity, equity and inclusion jackboots graduate unqualified blacks and women from medical schools, graduate pseudodoctors who failed standardized tests and are ignorant of the fields of emergency medicine, family medicine, internal medicine and pediatrics. See diversity, equity and inclusion jackboots set up a regime of affirmative action for blacks and women in medical schools and send the state's schools crashing to the bottom of national academic rankings. See diversity, equity and inclusion jackboots set up a regime of affirmative action for corporations and order corporate boards to hire a Marxist rainbow universe of blacks, hispanics, Asians, Pacific Islanders, Native Americans, Native Hawaiians, Alaska Natives, gays, lesbians, bisexuals and transgenders. See Marxist bureaucrats violate freedom of enterprise, work and contract and smash into the businesses of the state. See them raise the minimum wage and force companies to raise prices, close branches, dismiss employees en masse and file for bankruptcy. See them transform California into a statist, socialist, gender, race and class swampland unfit for human habitation: "The circus came to California a long time ago, and there are no signs it's packing up any time soon. Some recent examples: California lawmakers set up a reparations panel for 'black descendants of slaves' even though California was never a slave state. California has a budget deficit of close to $50 billion, and some put the price tag of the panel's reparations recommendations at $800 billion. A former soap opera actor recently was shot and killed in downtown Los Angeles. He interrupted thieves attempting to steal the catalytic converter from his car. In response, a Democrat Los Angeles City Council member—there are no Republicans—blamed the automaker for failing to make the catalytic converters harder to steal. Councilwoman Nithya Raman said: 'In this case, I think one of the things that infuriates me, is that we have a company—whatever, Toyota—who makes the Prius, that essentially has a device on their cars which is super easy to remove. It's the value of a MacBook, right?' At a gay pride parade in West Hollywood, some 'indigenous queer people' marched waving a Mexican flag with a Palestinian flag on the bumper of their truck. A gay man in Gaza told i24News: 'If you are gay, you should be hiding. It's so hard. I was so scared. Scared of everything you know? Scared of getting hit, of getting kidnapped. I was so afraid. I was afraid Hamas would find out I was gay.' California voters in 1996 banned the use of race and gender in government hiring, government contracts, and admission to state colleges and universities. Yet, the University of California, Los Angeles medical school dean of admissions, Jennifer Lucero, a proponent of 'diversity, equity and inclusion,' ignores the law and lowers standards to admit 'underrepresented' students. According to The Washington Free Beacon: 'Within three years of Lucero's hiring in 2020, UCLA dropped from 6th the 18th place in US News & World Report's rankings for medical research. And more than 50 percent of students failed standardized tests on emergency medicine, family medicine, internal medicine, and pediatrics.' In 2018, California lawmakers passed and the governor, a Democrat—there are no Republicans holding any statewide office—signed a law requiring publicly traded corporations headquartered in California to have at least one woman on their boards of directors. In 2020, lawmakers passed a law requiring publicly traded corporations headquartered in California to have one member from an 'underrepresented community,' defined as 'individuals who self identify as Black, African-American, Hispanic, Latino, Asian, Pacific Islander, Native American, Native Hawaiian, or Alaska Native, or who self identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual or transgender.' California courts struck down both laws as violations of the equal protection clause of the California Constitution. In April, California's $20 hourly minimum wage went into effect for fast food workers. UCLA economist Lee Ohanian estimates the law, so far, has cost the state 10,000 fast food jobs. The law also incentivizes the use of automation. California last year had the lowest job growth of any state. As of April 2024, California, at 5.3%, had the highest rate of unemployment of any state. When the governor signed the fast-food law, two major California Pizza Hut franchisees promptly let go more than 1,200 delivery workers. Rubio's Coastal Grill, a fish taco chain, just closed all 48 California locations. The company said: 'The closings were brought about by the rising cost of doing business in California.' Note that most franchise operators are mom and pop owners, with just one location running on thin profit margins. So, this 25% hike in the minimum wage bites hard. As for the law's sticker shock, Wendy's increased its prices 8%, Chipotle 7.5% and Starbucks 7%. But things could have been worse. Democrat US Senate candidate Barbara Lee advocates a $50 hourly minimum wage." (California: Where Common Sense Goes To Die by Larry Elder). Look at California today and see Marxism elected to power as head of a coalition government. Its coalition partners are Islam, Hamas and Palestinian Action, and its methods of governance are firebombing and terror attacks in the name of progressivism and the Community of the Faithful: "Pro Palestinian protesters firebombed 'the side of a building' on the University of California Berkeley (UCB) campus and claimed that students had been 'attacked' on another campus. In a post on Instagram on Thursday, Palestine Action in the United States shared a post from an anonymous user who claimed responsibility for firebombing the side of Koshland Hall, a building at UCB that houses 'labs from the Department of Molecular & Cell Biology.' " (Pro Palestinian Protesters Reportedly Firebombed a Building at University Of California by Elizabeth Weibel). On Mount Lee in the Santa Monica Mountains is an American landmark and icon. It is a sign spelling out Hollywood in fourteen meter tall, bright white letters. In the twenty first century, it has become the most recognizable artifact representing the new culture in power across the state, the nation and the West. In the twenty first century, the sign is a shorthand for the Marxist reversal of freedom which has stricken civilization.

RAINBOW KILLER RUNS AMOK

Gunpowder is the earliest known explosive. One of the Four Great Inventions of China, after papermaking, printmaking and the compass, gunpowder was first used in warfare around 1000 AD. It is in wide use today, used as a propellant in firearms, artillery, rocketry and pyrotechnics, and as a blasting agent for explosives in quarrying, mining and the construction of roads, tunnels and pipelines. In the thirteenth century, the Mongols deployed gunpowder against the West during their invasion of Hungary and it spread rapidly across Europe. Gunpowder, black powder, deployed over the centuries for purposes benign and nefarious, deployed to defend civilization and to combat it, deployed to defend the innocent against the killers in the world and to aid the killers in their murderous rampages. Gunpowder, black powder, has descended as a mist and cloud across the twenty first century, a fearsome symbol of the age of violence. It permeates every sector of society and has exploded in every home, school and office in the West. It has been loaded into rounds of ammunition stamped with the number one religious and political movement of our time. A global movement elected to power in successive landslides reaching back over a century, landslides peddling human enslavement and the revolt against reason in the name of progressivism. Gunpowder, black powder, has been loaded into the bullets of a movement called Marxism and sent people running for their lives. The movement is a terrorist, a monster, a madman with a thousand eyes, arms and heads, killing people in the name of a gender, a race, a culture or a class or combinations and intersections thereof, a movement committing murder under rainbow colors representing tribes, crime families dividing and multiplying like a cancer, reducing the West to a failed civilization. On March 27, 2023, at the Covenant School in the Green Hills neighborhood of Nashville, Tennessee, a child of one of these families went on a rampage and buried the school in gunpowder. On that day, at 10:11 in the morning, one Audrey Elizabeth Hale, a twenty eight year old woman who claimed she was a man, entered the school armed with a rifle, a carbine and a pistol, and shortly thereafter committed the deadliest mass shooting in Tennessee history, killing three nine year old children and three adults, before she was killed by police. In the gunpowder she exploded across the school was a story, the story of psychopathic impulses justified by the most psychopathic movement in the history of mankind, a movement which satisfies impulses to commit thrill killing, excitement killing and rage killing as no movement has ever done, a movement which has unleashed the forces of evil as they have never been unleashed before, and allowed them to take over the Earth. Listen to her story. She proclaims that people can transition into members of the opposite sex in defiance of the DNA present in every cell in their body, which encodes their gender and makes it fixed and immutable. She proclaims that mass murder can effect gender transition. She proclaims that a progressive society is run by gender dysphoric psychotics called transgenders. She proclaims that heaven awaits her where she can exist as a male for all eternity and receive the love of the brown skinned women she desires. She proclaims that she wants to become a male in order find girlfriends and fulfill her lesbian fantasies. She proclaims that a progressive society is an extremist society which worships at the altars of violence and illegality. She proclaims that a progressive society enforces the tenets of critical race theory. This theory is called such because it is critical of the Enlightenment notions of reason, individual rights and human universality, and advocates a regime of black power, black racism, black Aryanism and black Hitlerism in their place. She proclaims that whites form a subhuman race while brown skinned people form a master race and have a natural right to exterminate whites. She proclaims that she has a right to kill people because she hates her father. She proclaims that she has a right to kill people because she is depressed. She proclaims that she has a right to kill people because Jesus was evil. She proclaims that she has a right to kill people because she has fantasized about killing people since she was very young. She proclaims that she has a right to kill people because she has experienced frustrations in finding lesbian lovers. She proclaims that she has a right to kill people because she is an angry boy, the angriest boy alive. She proclaims that she has a right to kill people because she has psychological problems. She proclaims that she has a right to kill people because she has experienced negative side effects of taking medical drugs. She proclaims that she has a right to kill people because her childhood was plagued with sorrow and torment. She proclaims that all she has to do to become a male is to check in to a hospital, get hormone injections and undergo surgery. She proclaims that she possesses male genitals because she wants to possess them and she imagines she possesses them. She proclaims that she possesses an alternate personality which is the real person inside her, and is a male called Aiden. She proclaims that she is a male because she hates her female gender. She proclaims that her body, her genes and her chromosomes do not make her female because she believes she is male and wishes possess primacy over facts: "Nashville Christian school shooter Audrey Hale believed dying in a mass murder would allow her to experience an eternal gender transition, receiving a male body that would receive the erotic affection of brown skinned females in Heaven, new documents reveal. The handwritten entries, which deeply reflect transgender ideology and critical race theory, show the trans identifying mass child murderer intensely hated her father, referred to Jesus with a curse word, and had fantasized school shootings since she was in middle school. Officials close to the case say police appear to justify denying the public access to these documents by citing a stalled investigation into whether members of the psychological community—from whom Hale received treatment since childhood—suppressed information that could have prevented the tragedy. Last March 27, Audrey Elizabeth Hale entered Nashville's Covenant School, a church run Christian private school, killing six people: three third graders and three staff members. She told others that she had left behind voluminous materials that would explain her motivation, and police reportedly uncovered more than 20 journals from the 28 year old's home, dating back to her adolescence. Yet more than a year later, officials have refused to release the writings, citing an 'ongoing investigation.' A conservative website, the Tennessee Star, has obtained 80 pages of a journal which police recovered from Hale's vehicle on the day of the Covenant School massacre. Hale wrote less of a full blown manifesto than an ongoing diary, slowly exposing the growing hold depression and extremism exerted over her as she expounded her plans and intentions for the assault over several years. The writings disclose layers of motives including frustrated lesbian affairs, lifelong psychological problems, pharmaceutical side effects, an irrational hatred of her father, and the profound influence of cultural and political tropes associated with critical theory. Hale's spiral into mass murder appears to have begun, in part, due to unrequited same sex attraction and the failure of a subsequent lesbian relationship. Hale idolized a former middle and high school classmate named Sydney Sims, who died in a 2022 car accident. Although Sims seems never to have returned Hale's interests, Hale made regular posts about Sims's death on social media until the shooting. In her journal, she lashes out at her father when he encouraged her to move on. In another journal entry, Hale writes to Sims that 'maybe, just maybe you'll give a kiss to me in heaven. God knows I can't get it down here.' Those close to Hale say she began to identify as a transgender male after a girlfriend broke up with her. 'She had been openly grieving about that on social media, and during the grieving is when she announced that she wanted to be addressed as a male,' Maria Colomy, a former teacher who instructed Hale at the Nossi College of Art & Design, told The New York Times. Hale's father, Ronald Hale, revealed how deeply she accepted the popular yet false notion that gender transition is an easy process with few if any drawbacks. In reality, the 'gender transition' process involves a lifetime of cross sex hormone injections and, frequently, multiple expensive surgeries. In fact, Dr Shayne Taylor convinced Hale's hospital to adopt transgender surgeries, because 'they require a lot of follow ups. They require a lot of time, and they make money—they make money for the hospital.' Hale apparently had been misled about the extent of the process. 'She didn't know what was involved in it,' Mr Hale told investigators, saying she 'had a childlike view' of the issue. 'She figured she could go to the hospital and just get it done. She thought she could have an operation.' A three page entry from shortly before the assault, titled 'My Imaginary Penis,' discloses how deeply Hale had imbibed extreme gender ideology. 'My penis exists in my head,' wrote Hale, illustrating her journal with a crude image." (Nashville Shooter's Manifesto Released by Ben Johnson). Fifteen minutes after Audrey Hale commence her rampage, she lay dead and one hundred and fifty two cartridges lay scattered across the school. The cartridges spelled out a message to the world she hated. The cartridges spelled out the words transgenderism, nonbinary gender, gay politics, lesbian politics, critical race theory and antiEnlightenment. The message was Marxism at the sunset of civilization.

MALICE PURSUES TRUMP

The year is 1661. The place is the town of Tedworth in the West Country of England. A local landowner named John Mompesson sues an unlicensed drummer named William Drury for fraud in collecting money from him under false pretenses. He wins the lawsuit and receives the drum as damages from the court. Mompesson then creates a hoax which travels far and wide. He alleges that his house is plagued by drumming noises in the night produced by a poltergeist conjured by witchcraft, perpetrated by Drury and a band of gypsies. The Drummer of Tedworth is the first recorded hoax in the history of the West. Over the centuries, hoaxes, widely publicized falsehoods, have been recurrent features of political propaganda and have gulled millions of people in campaigns to destroy the opposition. The perpetration of hoaxes is a stock in trade of Marxists in their campaign to subvert free societies. They have stopped at nothing, perpetrated the most brazen falsehoods, and sought to give them the widest possible currency in their campaign to protect the power of their religion. In the twenty first century, America's national voice of the antiMarxist opposition has been the number one target of hoaxes perpetrated by the establishment. In the twenty first century, the forty third president of the United States, running for reelection in 2024, has been vilified by more hoaxes than any other political figure in the nation's history, in an illustration of what befalls an antiestablishment maverick with a national following who seeks to roll back the latter day excrescences of Marxism. Look at the hoaxes perpetrated by the establishment against Donald Trump and see the operations of a movement whose ruthlessness is beyond repair and without reprieve. The Russian Collusion Hoax. The establishment weaponized the FBI and proclaimed that Donald Trump was a Russian agent. It launched a witch hunt against Trump and proclaimed he colluded with the Russians. It utilized a dossier of unproven allegations invented by the Hillary Clinton campaign to obtain secret surveillance warrants on the 2016 Trump campaign. It published the dossier in the media, spread the hoax of Russian collusion for six years, harassed and interrogated Trump, his family and associates, and garnered Pulitzer Prizes for its false reportage: "Special Counsel John Durham's final report—while it did not recommend any new charges—exonerated former President Donald Trump of any Russian collusion and vindicated his claims of being targeted by a politicized federal law enforcement agency. 'It's a great vindication and it feels good, and the report has been wildly praised, I wish it would have come faster, but the detail that he went into—308 pages—the detail is extraordinary, and all of these people, I guess you could call it treason, you could call it a lot of different things, but this should never be allowed to happen in our country,' Trump said in a recent interview with Newsmax. Durham's report confirmed that the FBI launched a politically motivated witch hunt against Trump, using the flimsiest of pretexts to 'swiftly' launch an investigation into him while ignoring intelligence that Clinton's campaign planned to accuse Trump of colluding with Russia to distract from her private server woes. In fact, the report revealed intelligence on the Clinton plan was so significant, then CIA Director John Brennan had briefed then President Obama and then Vice President Joe Biden, both of whom did nothing to discourage the collusion hoax. Biden even perpetuated it on the campaign trail in 2019. The report also confirmed that the FBI was spying on Trump, as he once alleged. According to the report, the FBI relied on an unverified 'dossier' paid for by the Clinton campaign to obtain four secret surveillance warrants on the Trump campaign, even after not being able to corroborate any of its substantive claims. Meanwhile, the media published the dossier and for the next six years ran rampant with stories suggesting Trump had colluded with Russia, relying on anonymous sources and even winning Pulitzer Prizes for it. And the whole time, the FBI hid from FISA courts and the public any evidence favorable to Trump, while he, his family, and associates were subjected to interrogation by Democrat lawmakers, public harassment, and constant smears." (Durham Report Exonerates Trump, Vindicating Him On Russian Collusion Hoax Seven Years Later by Kristina Wong). The 2020 Free and Fair Election Hoax. The establishment perpetrated the hoax that the 2020 presidential election was free and fair and not rigged to instal Joe Biden into power. In point of fact, the nation's intelligence agencies together with the FBI forced social media platforms to censor news reports exposing the global influence peddling operation run by Joe Biden while he was vice president. The platforms were ordered to censor the information on the grounds that it was Russian disinformation. Had this information been known to the American people, they would not have voted for Biden. In the 2020 presidential election campaign, the federal government and Big Tech colluded to deprive the American people of their right to vote in a free and fair election: "Seventy one percent of Americans believe accurate reporting of Hunter Biden's Laptop from Hell could have altered the 2020 presidential election, TIPP Insights polling revealed Monday.

Leading up to the election, many in the establishment median falsely claimed Hunter's laptop was Russian disinformation. Those false claims were pushed by many in the intelligence community, who suggested in a now debunked Politico story from 2020 that Hunter's laptop was 'Russian disinfo.' The poll found over two thirds of Americans believe the intelligence community intentionally lied to voters about the laptop by pushing big tech to censor the first report of Hunter's laptop by Breitbart News's Emma-Jo Morris. The recent release of the Twitter Files confirms law enforcement colluded with Twitter to censor Hunter's laptop story. Meta's CEO Mark Zuckerberg has admitted the FBI warned Facebook in 2020 ahead of the story's publication about imminent Russian disinformation." (Poll: 71% Say Accurate Reporting Of Hunter's Laptop Could Have Altered 2020 Election by Wendell Husebo). The Very Fine People Hoax. The establishment perpetrated the hoax that Donald Trump praised white supremacists and neonazis as "very fine people" at a press conference held on August 15, 2017. At the conference, Trump stated that some of the people protesting against the removal of a statue of Robert E. Lee in Charlottesville, Virginia were "very fine people", but he specifically excluded from that group white supremacists and neonazis: "Breitbart News Senior Editor at Large Joel Pollak dismantled the lie that President Donald Trump described white supremacists and neonazis as 'very fine people' following 2017's demonstrations and riots in Charlottesville, VA. He offered his analysis during an introductory monologue on Monday's edition of SiriusXM's Breitbart News Tonight with cohost Rebecca Mansour. 'I want to play to you what Trump actually said, because what you're going to hear is he was talking about protesters around the issue of the removal of the statue of Confederate General Robert E. Lee, and you're also going to hear him say that the neonazis and white supremacists are not the people he's talking about when he says 'very fine people.' ' [Trump's words] You had some very bad people in that group, but you also had people that were very fine people, on both sides. You had people in that group that were there to protest the taking down of,—to them—a very, very important statute and the renaming of a park from Robert E. Lee to another name. George Washington was a slave owner. So will George Washington now lose his status? Are we going to take down statutes to George Washington? How about Thomas Jefferson? What do you think about Thomas Jefferson? Do you like him? Are we going to take down his statute? Because he was a major slave owner. Now are we going to take down his statute? You're changing history. You're changing culture, and you had people—and I'm not talking about the neo-Nazis and the white nationalists, because they should be condemned totally—but you had many people in that group other than neonazis and white nationalists. And the press has treated them absolutely unfairly." (Breitbart News's Joel Pollak: The Definitive Takedown of the Charlottesville 'Very Fine People' Hoax by Robert Kraychik). The Bloodbath Hoax. The establishment perpetrated the hoax that Donald Trump threatened his opponents with mass violence if he was not elected president. At a campaign rally in Ohio, Trump was crystal clear in his reference to a financial bloodbath inflicted on the automobile industry and the nation if he was not able to establish a fair trade agreement with China as president and force the Chinese to hire American workers in their Mexican factories. Fallacious editing, interpretation and manipulation of words is the typical behavior of Marxists when they encounter an enemy with a national following who fights for freedom: "Former President Donald Trump on Saturday night forecast a financial 'bloodbath' awaits the US motor industry if he is not elected and China is enabled to swamp the country with their products. The comments came at an Ohio rally hosted by the Buckeye Values PAC where he discussed the possibility of an increasing trade war with China over auto manufacturing in general and electric vehicle types in particular. Trump said: 'If you're listening, President Xi, and you and I are friends—but he understands the way I deal—those big monster car manufacturing plants that you're building in Mexico right now, you're going to not hire Americans and you're going to sell the cars to us, no. We're going to put a 100 percent tariff on every single car that comes across the line, and you're not going to be able to sell those cars if I get elected. Now if I don't get elected, it's going to be a bloodbath for the whole industry—that's going to be the least of it. It's going to be a bloodbath for the country. That will be the least of it. But they're not going to sell those cars. They're building massive factories.' Critics in the political arena and the general media were quick to wilfully manipulate Trump's words and infer intentions on his behalf even after Trump campaign spokesman Steven Cheung made clear Trump had clearly been talking about the impact of offshoring on the country's auto industry and his own plans to increase tariffs on foreign made cars. 'Crooked Joe Biden and his campaign are engaging in deceptively, out of context editing,' he said." (Biden Campaign, Establishment Media Attack Trump With Fake Interpretation Of 'Bloodbath' Comments in Ohio Rally by Simon Kent). Philip Dawe was a world famous, eighteenth century British engraver and artist. His best known work is the 1774 print The Bostonians Paying the Excise Man, which depicts the tarring and feathering of British Boston Commissioner of Customs John Malcolm. Two and a half centuries after this uprising against British tyranny, the American establishment has become an engine of tyranny. In the twenty first century, the number one national enemy of Marxism has been tarred and feathered with the greatest political hoaxes invented in the past one hundred years.

RACE MARXISTS SWEEP EU ELECTIONS

A species is the most basic unit of biological classification. It is expressed in a two part name, called a binomial. The first part of the binomial is the genus or general type to which the species belongs, while the second part is the specific name or distinguishing characteristic of the species. For example, the modern human species homo sapiens consists of the great ape genus homo together with the specific name sapiens, standing for rational. Political classifications involve the determination of species. In the twentieth century, three species emerged of the most popular religion in modern times. The first species was the original, nineteenth century form of the religion and was the only one of its kind, while the other two emerged in the twentieth century and represented actual speciation. This religion is Marxism and, appealing to those discontented and disenchanting with freedom, it captured the imagination of the masses as no other religion ever had outside of Christianity and Islam. The original form of the religion proclaimed that human individuals are shadowy half realities and the highest human reality is that of a mystical tribe called an economic class. The religion proclaimed that human universalism is a myth and mankind is divided into two warring economic tribes, called the proletariat and the bourgeois. The proletariat is the tribe of unskilled animal laborers, while the bourgeois is the tribe of skilled knowledge laborers, and the bourgeois is the oppressor and exploiter of the proletariat. The culmination of human history will bring about world revolution, the overthrow of liberal democracy, and the extermination of the bourgeois by the proletarian master tribe. In the twentieth century, the logic of tribalism, the logic of separatism, the logic of antiuniversalism, was a form of radioactive disintegration and caused Marxism to undergo mutations and divide uncontrollably. The original form of Marxism now became a species called class Marxism, to which were added race Marxism, gender Marxism, and sexual orientation Marxisms such as gay Marxism and lesbian Marxism. The twenty first century has seen the formation of yet another species of Marxism, called transgenderist Marxism, composed of those who deny the existence of DNA and claim that gender can be changed by human action or belief. In the twenty first century, the family of Marxisms comprises the dominant religion of the West. It has assumed control over every home, school and office, over every sector of society, and runs the establishment. Members of the family engage in internecine war. They fight each other, seek to differentiate themselves from each other, and seek to annihilate each other. Class Marxists call race Marxists members of the racist, reactionary right, while they call themselves members of the progressive left fighting for freedom. Race Marxists call class Marxists totalitarian communists, which is what they are, but call themselves anticommunists fighting for freedom, which is what they are not.

Both groups, promoting tribalism and opposed to individual rights, are located at the left wing of the political spectrum, while the right wing is defined by liberal democracy and hostility to government. So-called right wing extremists and rechtsradikale are in point of fact a species of far left extremists and linksradikale. The class Marxist designation of race Marxism as right wing is a product of political propaganda and the imperatives of political branding and advertising, which demand differentiation from the competition. It has been adopted by an establishment under the control of class Marxism. The establishment condemns all those who uncompromisingly champion individual rights as right wing, racist, reactionary national socialists, ignoring the fact that the concern for individual rights and treating people as individuals is as opposed to racism and national socialism as daylight is opposed to darkness. Race Marxists and class Marxists battle each other in the streets and make neighborhoods flow with rivers of blood. They form alliances to defeat their common enemy: liberal democracy. Hitler's race Marxists and Stalin's class Marxists convulsed the Weimar Republic in Germany; they formed a tactical united front to overthrow Weimar liberal democracy; under Hitler's reign, class Marxists were killed or imprisoned; the Hitler-Stalin nonaggression pact formed a united front against European liberal democracy; and Hitler's Operation Barbarossa was a campaign of annihilation of class Marxists by race Marxists. Both Hitler's Germany and the Soviet Union formed an alliance with Islam to annihilate Jews, Israel and the West. Hitler's race Marxists were defeated in 1945, but in the twenty first century, his brownshirts are back in business, for Marxism, its species and its subspecies, is a religion which will never die, answering as it does popular psychopathic impulses to kill innocent people and destroy free institutions. On June 6-9, 2024, in elections for the European Parliament, race Marxists won huge victories and saw a surge of support. Called the "far right" by the class Marxist establishment, by an establishment which calls both its brother tribalists and the antiribalist freedom opposition "far right", Hitler's race Marxists expanded by the ballot box across Europe. They peddled their neoMarxist brownshirt creed under such names as National Rally, Freedom Party, Alternative for Germany and Brothers of Italy, and together with the class Marxists resurrected the nightmare competitions between the communists and the fascists in Europe's yesteryear: "France's President Emmanuel Macron has called a bombshell snap parliamentary election after being defeated by the far right in the European elections--in a night of drama that overall saw the center right tighten their grip on the EU Parliament. Mr Macron made the announcement after losing to his rivals Marine Le Pen and Jordan Bardella and their National Rally party. France's result was one of the big gains that Europe's far right parties had expected, and confirmation came with all the exit polls giving National Rally more than 30% of the vote, double that of Mr Macron's centrist Renaissance party. 'The center is holding, but it is also true that the extremes on the left and on the right have gained support,' said Ursula von der Leyen, the center right head of the European Commission, now on course for a second term. Germany's opposition conservatives were always going to come out on top, and they scored an impressive 30% of the vote. But for Chancellor Olaf Scholz's SPD party, this was the worst ever result in a European election, coming third behind the far right Alternative for Germany (AfD). The victorious head of the conservative CDU, Friedrich Merz, said it was a disaster for the three-party ruling coalition and he called for a change of tack: 'They're damaging our country with the kind of politics they do.' The AfD has endured a slew of scandals involving espionage, foreign interference and allegations of nazi sympathies, and yet its support still held up. 'After all the prophecies of doom, after the barrage of the last few weeks, we are the second strongest force. And I'm telling you, the only way is up,' said coleader Alice Weidel. Meanwhile, in Italy, Giorgia Meloni's dominance of her country's politics continued. Her far right Brothers of Italy polled 29% of the vote, defeating the center left Democratic Party of Elly Schlein by almost five points. 'Thank you to the Italians who are continuing to choose us. I am proud of the result tonight,' she told her supporters. And in Austria, the far right Freedom Party FPO was on course for a narrow but unprecedented victory in the European vote. In just five years, Ms

Meloni has more than doubled her party's seats in the European Parliament." (Europe's Night Of Election Drama Capped By Macron Bombshell by Paul Kirby and Laura Gozzi). Look at the European Union parliamentary elections and see Hitler's children seek to overthrow freedom and resurrect the Third Reich. See them package their sinister program in boxes marked Euroskepticism and nationalism. See them peddle their fascism under banners freedom parties also promote. These banners are marked opposition to Islamist migration, opposition to government induced inflation and opposition to anticivilizational environmental regulations. The difference in the promotions is that for freedom parties, opposition to these policies is an integral part of their program to protect free societies, while for the neoMarxist brownshirts, opposition to these policies is a ruse to dupe voters into supporting their underlying program to overthrow free societies. For the neoMarxist brownshirts, opposition to these policies serves as a screen to construct an external image and conceal the true aims of the movement: "In Brussels, at past EU leaders' summits, Emmanuel Macron has at times been accused of trying to steal the limelight. He certainly managed that on Sunday night. Although probably not in the way he'd have liked. As votes for the European Parliament were still being counted, Mr Macron dominated the headlines. His drubbing in the poll by French hard right nationalists had been expected. His decision to dissolve France's national parliament as a result, came as a shock. He had played with the idea last year, after getting trounced in France's last general election but few expected this move now. It's a huge gamble. From a position of weakness. Emmanuel Macron describes himself as a centrist and a passionate European. This snap general election, taking place in two rounds on 30 June and 7 July, could result in him having to work alongside a French prime minister from the Euroskeptic far right. Marine Le Pen, regularly portrayed as his political nemesis, declared on Sunday that her party was ready to govern. It's happened before in France that the president, who is the country's most powerful politician, and the prime minister, hail from different political parties. But if the new prime minister were to come from the far right, that would be a first for France. Marine Le Pen has worked hard in recent years to try to broaden the appeal of her political movement and to soften its extremist image. She and her supporters hope this significant victory at EU level (her National Rally party garnered more than double the number of votes of President Macron's Renaissance party) will translate into huge wins in the snap election back home. Her dream would be that those successes would then bring her, or her hugely popular protege, the 28 year old Jordan Bardella, a big stride closer to eventually becoming French president--something she's attempted and failed to achieve a number of times before. The next presidential vote in France is scheduled for 2027. Staying with this election for the European Parliament, the hard right and nationalist right made gains in many parts of the EU, with voters worried about migration, inflation and the cost of environmental reforms." (Far Right Makes Gains In EU Election But It Could Struggle To Unite by Katya Adler). In Europe in the twenty first century, Marx's legions are on the march and have assumed control over society. Race Marxists have swept into the European Union Parliament and confront the class Marxists occupying the European Commission and the Speaker's chair. Two legions battle each other for supremacy; one conducts a class war against freedom while the other conducts a race war against freedom; together they have ground European civilization into dust.

A COMMITTEE AND ITS REGIME

Louis Rhead was a late nineteenth century American painter. Born in Britain, he emigrated to America at the age of twenty four and became world famous. His best known work is Robin Shoots With Sir Guy. This depicts Guy of Gisborne serving as the Sheriff of Nottingham's henchman in the sheriff's campaign against Robin Hood. Henchman: a loyal supporter of a criminal enterprise. History is replete with henchmen aiding forces seeking to destroy free societies. In the twentieth century, the most notorious henchman in the world was Vasily Blokhin. Stalin's executioner in chief, he murdered those condemned as "enemies of the people" by the tens of thousands. In 1954, after the death of Stalin, he was stripped of his rank of major general and died, and was buried at Moscow's Donskyoe Cemetery next to his manifold victims in a mass grave. In the twenty first century, eight thousand kilometers away from Moscow, in the United States of America, in the nation's capital Washington DC, Vasily Blokhin returned to life and resumed his campaign to destroy freedom. He returned in the form of a committee whose mission was to consolidate Joe Biden's new power as president elect and suppress the voices of dissent led by Donald Trump. Blokhin's reappearance was called the United States House Select Committee to Investigate the January 6th Attack on the United States Capitol, and it was formed on July 1, 2021. The committee and the new administration it sought to protect defined illegality and illegitimacy as nothing else had in the nation's two centuries of existence, and plunged the nation into a banana republic regime which disgraced the free soil on which it had been founded, the soil on which its martyrs had fallen, the soil on which a liberty bell had rung out and inspired the world. The committee was chosen by House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, in violation of the House resolution creating the committee requiring that five members be chosen by Republicans with the advice and consent of the Republican House leader. The committee had no ranking member from the Republican Party, in violation of House Rules. The committee refused to give equal time to Republican members, in violation of House rules. The committee defended an election which had been rigged by the establishment. It was rigged by Mark Zuckerberg, who gave four hundred million dollars to Democrat election officials to recruit Joe Biden voters. It was rigged by the FBI and the intelligence community, which ordered the press to suppress information on a global influence peddling operation run by Joe Biden when he was vice president, information contained in the laptop of his son Hunter, on the false grounds that it was Russian disinformation. The committee resurrected the Moscow Show Trials for a twenty first century encore performance demanded by the Marxist half of the nation. The committee served as a partisan political weapon to destroy Trump through the suppression and fabrication of evidence and without facts, fairness or due process of law. The committee's subpoenas of Trump officials and its findings that they were in contempt of Congress by refusing to testify were as illegal and illegitimate as the establishment the committee sought protect: "Republican members of the US House are moving to nullify the entirety of ex House Speaker Nancy Pelosi's partisan committee that 'investigated' the January 6, 2021 protest at the US Capitol, where a few hundred of people rioted. The Gateway Pundit reports some two dozen members are sponsoring a resolution that would designate the committee and its work illegitimate and cancel the subpoenas it issued during its time in the spotlight. It explains that's significant because it would be, 'Rescinding the subpoenas issued by the January 6th Select Committee on September 23, 2021, October 6, 2021, and February 9, 2022, and withdrawing the recommendations finding Stephen K. Bannon, Mark Randall Meadows, Daniel Scavino, Jr, and Peter K. Navarro in contempt of Congress,' the resolution reads. Navarro already is serving jail time on the basis of that committee's demands, and Bannon is ordered to report within weeks. The committee was partisan because Pelosi allowed only committee members she wanted to be a part. The nominees from the then GOP minority were refused. [The opponents of the rigged election] rallied in Washington, and a few thousand went to the Capitol, where Congress was formalizing Joe Biden as the presidential race winner. A few hundred rioted, breaking windows and vandalizing. They were protesting a faulty election. What is known is that the results were under undue influence from two significant factors, the first being Mark Zuckerberg's handouts of $400 million plus to election officials who largely used the windfall to recruit voters in Democrat districts. The other was the FBI's election interference when it warned publications to suppress information about the Biden family scandals contained in the laptop computer abandoned by Hunter Biden at a repair shop. The FBI, and a long list of former intel officers, falsely claimed it was 'Russian disinformation', when in fact it contained reams of accurately details about the Bidens. A survey later showed that influence cost President Trump the victory. [The Democrats] tried to keep Trump off the 2024 ballot on the basis of their claims. The events actually were a protest that got out of hand. The report explains Representatives Thomas Massie, R-Ky, Andy Biggs, R-Ariz, and Eric Burlison, R-Mo, have introduced a resolution 'aimed at rescinding the congressional subpoenas issued to Steve Bannon and Peter Navarro. This proposal also seeks to officially repudiate the actions of the January 6 committee, which Massie and other Republicans have labeled as wholly illegitimate.' Massie suggested on social media that House Speaker Mike Johnson call for a vote and Republicans could reverse the political warfare decisions made by Pelosi. Massie pointed out the plan needs no approval from the Democrat majority Senate, since the original subpoenas were issued only on the authority of the House. Biggs charged, 'The illegitimately constructed and biased January 6th Committee must be held accountable for its pursuit of political opponents.' Burlison explained the move would withdraw Democrat 'recommendations' finding the Trump associates in contempt of Congress. The plan points out that Pelosi refused to follow the resolution creating the committee, and never appointed the five members required 'after consulting the minority leader.' Further, the committee had no 'ranking member' from the GOP, another violation of House rules. And the committee also ignored House rules requiring committees provide equal time for majority and minority members asking questions. His statement explained, the committee 'spent hours rehearsing ahead of time so they could put on Stalinist show [trials] for the American people. Bottom line: The committee was used as a political weapon with a singular focus on taking down Trump and his advisors through the intentional manipulation of facts and the silencing of the minority party. It was procedurally flawed from the start.' " (US House Moves To Declare Pelosi's Partisan January 6 Committee Illegitimate by Bob Unruh). The 2020 presidential election was rigged by mail in ballots. It was rigged by the completion of ballots by friends and family members of voters, in violation of federal law. It was rigged by voters who cast ballots in states in which they were not permanent residents, in violation of federal law. It was rigged by people who signed ballots on behalf of others. It was rigged in an election as illegal and illegitimate as the establishment which staged it, and reflective of a new dark reality resurrecting the ghosts of Europe's totalitarian regimes, a new darkness called America: "In the 2020 election, more than 1 in 5 voters who submitted ballots by mail say they did so fraudulently, a survey from Rasmussen Reports and the Heartland Institute reveals. The survey asked those who voted by mail in the 2020 election if they filled out a ballot 'in part or in full, on behalf of a friend or family member, such as a spouse or child?' to which 21 percent said they had done so. Though many states allow voters to receive assistance while voting, the Heartland Institute notes, filling out ballots on behalf of another person is illegal across the United States. In addition, 17 percent of mail in voters in the 2020 election said they cast a ballot in a state where they were no longer a permanent resident—a violation of federal election law. Another 17 percent of mail in voters said they signed a ballot on behalf of someone else, also a violation of election law. 'The results of this survey are nothing short of stunning,' Justin Haskins with the Heartland Institute said in a statement: 'For the past three years, Americans have repeatedly been told that the 2020 election was the most secure in history. But if this poll's findings are reflective of reality, the exact opposite is true. This conclusion isn't based on conspiracy theories or suspect evidence, but rather from the responses made directly by the voters themselves.' Another 10 percent of all voters said they know someone who admitted to casting a mail in ballot in a state where they are not a permanent resident and 11 percent said they know someone who admitted to signing a mail in ballot on behalf of someone else in the 2020 election. " (Survey: More Than 1 in 5 Mail In Voters Admit To Cheating in 2020 Election by John Binder). Civilized people have known for thousands of years that when peaceful means of redress of grievances against the state are not available, violent insurrection becomes a right and a duty. Confronted with a rigged presidential election which deprived the people of their right to vote in a free and fair election, Donald Trump led an effort and left a legacy. He led an effort to overturn a rigged election and prevent an illegal transfer of power. He was the first person in the history of the nation to have stopped the operations of the federal government, a government which through a rigged election and an illegal transfer of power had become an illegal and illegitimate regime. He left a legacy of freedom fighting the likes of which the nation had never seen before, a legacy of an attempted insurrection which has inspired patriotic citizens to stage a second American Revolution.

KILLER LOOSE AT BERKELEY

Fiat Lux. "Let There Be Light." Thus speaks the motto of an American academic icon. Founded in 1868, it is California's first land grant institution, granted land by the federal government to establish a school, and is the founding campus of the University of California system. For the past half century, this university, one of the eight Public Ivy universities in the nation and housing the nation's sixth largest research library, has been the scene of anything but light. For the past half century, this university, whose alumni, faculty and researchers include twenty one Nobel Prize laureates and Rhodes Scholars, Fulbright Scholars and Marshall Scholars, has been the scene of a nonstop agitation and propaganda campaign conducted on behalf of the number one religion of our times. For the past half century, the University of California at Berkeley has been the national academic center of Marxism and conducted campus crusades for revolution stirring up every sewer and street corner in the nation. The university commenced its career as an academic megaphone for Marxism in 1964 with the formation of the Free Speech Movement. Founded by New Left activist Mario Savio, the Free Speech Movement advocated Marxism in the name of academic freedom, civil rights and opposition to the war in Vietnam. In the twenty first century, the university's agitprop for Marxism has plumbed new depths of violence and unleashed a killer on campus. He is a killer wielding weapons forged in a munitions factory called Marxism and Islam. This factory was built by Marxists in partnership with a fellow hate movement against liberal democracy. It made its first appearance during the Cold War when the Soviet Union formed an alliance with Arab states and declared war against Israel and Jews. Its predecessor was an alliance between a neoMarxist regime of race Marxism called the Third Reich, which formed an alliance with the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, Haj Amin Al Husseini, to spread the Holocaust into Muslim lands. In the twenty first century, Berkeley's campus Marxists have given weapons to an Islamist fellow traveler with orders to shoot to kill Israel and Jews. In the twenty first century, an Islamist killer is on the loose at Berkeley, given aid, comfort and immunity from the law by a Marxist administration, as he sprays his rounds of terror. His name is Hatem Bazian; he is a professor in the Departments of Near Eastern, Asian American and Asian Diaspora Studies; and he has continued the program of Jew hatred and Jew killing begun by Hitler's Germany and continued by the Soviet Union. Look at the professor's hatred and killing committed helter skelter and see blood scrawled across the walls of Berkeley, America and the West. The professor proclaims that Islamists will never go to Heaven on the Day of Judgment if they do not first kill all the Jews on Earth. He proclaims that Islamists have a duty under the Hadith to kill Jews wherever they find them and wherever they are hiding. He proclaims that Jews must be killed in the name of students for justice in Palestine. He proclaims that Jews must be killed in the name of American Muslims for Palestine. He proclaims that a progressive university is the scene of perpetual explosions of antiIsrael violence. He proclaims that a progressive university is carpeted with huts and tents housing Hamas supporters. He proclaims that a progressive university has woven a dark net across the nation, a net spelling out the message: hunt down, attack, take captive and slaughter Jews. He proclaims that what Hamas did to Jews in Israel, commit mass murder against them, Islamists must do to Jews in America, and do it from coast to coast. He proclaims that a progressive society has launched a campaign of genocide against Jews, organized by university administrators and national political leaders. He proclaims that a progressive society fills the press, the internet and the airwaves with poison poured into vials marked hatred, anger and violence toward Jews. He proclaims that a progressive society is a movement of antisemitism which seeks to overthrow the Israeli government and kill all Jews. He proclaims that a progressive university radicalizes its students against Jews and encourages words and deeds of violence against them. He proclaims that a progressive university is an institution of antisemitic learning which seeks to legitimize acts of terror. He proclaims that a progressive society promotes Jew hatred and opposition to liberal democracy as its mainstream ideas. He proclaims that a progressive society outlaws all opposition to Islamist terror on grounds of combating Islamophobia. He proclaims that a progressive society coordinates violent anti-Israel protests at universities. He proclaims that a progressive society is a Palestinian solidarity organization which seeks to kill Jews and overthrow Israel. He proclaims that a progressive university is an outpost and branch office of a global Islamist movement dedicated to the overthrow of free institutions. He proclaims that a progressive university is a Gaza solidarity camp which demands the withdrawal and surrender of Israel in Gaza, effects divestment from Israel on the grounds that it is a free society which fights Islamist terror, and trains students in the arts of subversion and war. He proclaims that a progressive university hosts Marxist lectures, Marxist discussions, Marxist tables and forests of Marxist flyers and placards portraying freedom, Israel and the Jews as evil and threatening, and advocating Islamist totalitarian dictatorship: "Echoing the Muslim prophet Muhammad, Professor Hatem Bazian, a tenured University of California, Berkeley professor, told his fellow Muslims: 'The Day of Judgment will never happen until you fight the Jews.' At the Santa Clara conference sponsored by the American Muslim Alliance, Bazian exhorted the crowd: 'They are on the west side of the river, which is the Jordan River, and you're on the east side, but the trees and the stones will say, Oh Muslim, there is a Jew hiding behind me. Come and kill him! And that's in the Hadith [the sayings and deeds of Muhammad] about this. This is a future battle before the Day of Judgment.' Bazian's threatening prophecy from 1999 might be lost to history but for the central role he has been playing in the anti-Israel protests that have erupted at college campuses. Two groups he helped create, Students for Justice in Palestine and American Muslims for Palestine, have been instrumental in organizing the demonstrations. In recent months he has visited the encampments from coast to coast, exhorting students to condemn Israel for launching counterstrikes in Gaza after marauding Hamas terrorists attacked and slaughtered more than 1,200 Israelis in October and took hundreds of others captive, including several Americans. Bazian has urged students to call on administrators and national leaders to protect Palestinian civilians in Gaza, whom he claims are victims of a 'genocide' carried out by the Israeli government. Although many opponents of Israel's war against Hamas deny that their movement is tied to antisemitism, critics say Bazian's deep involvement in the protests and his long history of inflammatory rhetoric against the Jewish people puts that claim in doubt. 'The campus unrest is being driven by people with a very troubling past,' said Jon Schanzer, a former US Treasury counterterrorism official. 'They're trying to legitimize Hamas.' Drawing on a wide array of public records, RealClearInvestigations found that Bazian has been agitating against Jews and Israel on college campuses for decades. His 1999 exhortation of Holy War between Muslims and Jews was part of a larger pattern of words and deeds in which he sought to radicalize young Americans against the Jewish people. Bazian's history—and the top place he holds in the ongoing turmoil—also reveal the key role he's long planned for America's institutions of higher learning to play in mainstreaming and spreading ideas that many people consider hateful. A Palestinian immigrant, Bazian was born in the West Bank town of Nablus and attended high school in Jordan. He graduated from San Francisco State University and then moved to Berkeley, where he chairs the Islamophobia Research and Documentation Project. Upon arriving at Berkeley in 1993, Bazian helped start the first college chapter of Students for Justice in Palestine—whose national organization says it supports more than 350

Palestinian solidarity organizations.' In 2006, he cofounded its umbrella organization, American Muslims for Palestine. 'We support campus activism through Students for Justice in Palestine,' AMP states on its website. 'AMP is directly involved in the campus chaos,' Schanzer said, by helping coordinate protests at colleges where its SJP outposts operate. AMP provides funding and guidance for the chapters for, among other things, holding anti-Israel 'teach ins,' erecting pro-Palestinian tables, crafting media 'talking points,' and creating flyers and placards for the campus encampments and occupations that demonize Israel and sanitize Hamas atrocities as 'resistance.' As AMP's chairman, Bazian has visited several encampments, including at the University of Pennsylvania, San Diego State University, UC-San Diego, University of San Francisco and UC-Berkeley, where his acolytes have set up a 'Gaza Solidarity Camp.' RCI's review of videos posted on social media of his encampment talks reveals he's instructed students not to be 'nice' while protesting, because he said being polite won't get the attention of college administrators or President Biden, whom he demands divest from Israel and pressure Israel to withdraw from Gaza." (War College: How A Berkeley Prof Inspired And Engineered Anti Israel Protests by Paul Sperry). Ten million people killed by Joseph Stalin "enemies of the class." Six million Jews killed by Adolf Hitler as "enemies of the race." Twenty million people killed by Mao Zedong as "enemies the class." Three million people killed by Pol Pot as "enemies of the class." Three thousand people killed by Al Qaeda on September 11, 2001 in New York City as "enemies of Allah." Beginning in the twentieth century, the West has been the scene of thrill and excitement motivated mass murders sanctioned by Marxism and Islam. In the twenty first century, in the United States of America, at the University of California at Berkeley, a killer is on the loose spreading panic and fear. He kills on behalf of Marxism and Islam. Dressed in sartorial elegance, he serves as a professor in three departments. His outward professorial manner is belied by his actional reality. Professor Hatem Bazian kills and his serial killing has spread darkness over Berkeley.

He is wanted by both the police and the criminal underworld. While planning and thinking about his crimes, he whistles Edvard Grieg's In The Hall Of The Mountain King. His name is Hans Beckert and he is a serial killer of children. The story of his crimes and his capture is told in Fritz Lang's classic 1931 film M. In the twenty first century, something unthinkable has happened. Lang's tragic tale has been brought to life by the leader of a nation which once led the free world. It has been brought to life after a century of preparation in the United States of America. It has been brought to life after a century of agitation, propaganda and policy making by a movement representing the number one religion of our times. Voted into power and sustained in successive landslides by the masses of the disenchanting and the discontented, by people who hate freedom, personal achievement and self responsibility as they hate nothing else, this religion and movement is Marxism, and it has constructed the final stop of our civilization as it hurtles into the abyss. In the early years of the twenty first century, this religion assumed control over the West and reshaped the American national character. It declared war against the Enlightenment values which had given birth to America, and over the decades it has done everything in its power to overthrow them. It has unleashed the sewers and cesspools of society in its war to overthrow them. It has dissolved the nation's borders and allowed black tides to rush in and flood the land in its war to overthrow them. In the twenty first century, it has achieved the pinnacle of its efforts and achieved final victory over the free institutions of the nation. It has succeeded beyond its wildest dreams. It has elected an M character to the White House and let him gratify his psychopathic impulses. Given the keys to power by this movement and a green light to commit his crimes, President Joe Biden has gone on a rampage and killed children with a knife he has sharpened to a gleam. This knife, sharpened from a whetstone called open borders and mass migration, has been used by Marxists for decades. Look at it in the hands of Joe Biden and see it achieve a level of effectiveness it has never achieved before. Joe Biden is Johan Jose Martinez-Rangel and Franklin Pena, two illegal Venezuelan migrants let in and released into the nation. On June 17, 2024, the two lured a twelve year old girl named Jocelyn Nungaray to a place under a bridge, removed her pants, tied her up, strangled her, and threw her body into a marsh. These two are part of a seven million person army of murderers invading from Central and South America which Joe Biden has refused to apprehend and has allowed to settle across the nation. These murderers are released on the day they are caught and are allowed to evade and make a mockery of immigration judges and deportation hearings. Southern borders, homeland security, safe neighborhoods and the lives of innocent children have been dissolved in the acid of alien settlement in Joe Biden's America: "A pair of illegal aliens—now accused of murdering 12 year old Jocelyn Nungaray in Houston, Texas—were released into the United States by President Joe Biden's Department of Homeland Security (DHS) after they crossed the southern border, reports indicate. As Breitbart News reported, Venezuelan nationals 22 year old Johan Jose Martinez-Rangel and 26 year old Franklin Pena were arrested and charged by the Houston Police Department with murdering Jocelyn Nungaray in the early morning of June 17. A spokesperson with Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) has since told Fox News's Bill Melugin that Martinez-Rangel and Pena are 'illegally present Venezuelan nationals.' According to ICE officials, Martinez-Rangel was apprehended at the border near El Paso, Texas, by Border Patrol agents. The same day, he was released into the US interior on an order of recognizance with a Notice to Appear (NTA) at a later date before a federal immigration judge. Pena was apprehended by Border Patrol agents near El Paso on May 28 and released into the US interior that day on an order of recognizance with an NTA—just 20 days before Houston police say he helped murder Jocelyn. Martinez-Rangel and Pena are among 7.4 million migrants who are known to be living in communities across America after being released from DHS custody while awaiting their deportation hearings. On the night of June 16, Jocelyn sneaked out of her apartment building after her mother went to sleep. The mother's friend is reportedly the last person to have spoken to the girl. Shortly after midnight, Jocelyn can be seen on surveillance cameras at a 7/11 convenience store alongside Martinez-Rangel and Pena. Police said Jocelyn, Martinez-Rangel, and Pena ended up at a nearby bridge after leaving the 7/11 store. Police allege that some time between 1:00 am and 2:00 am Martinez-Rangel and Pena strangled Jocelyn to death and left her body in a creek at the bridge. Jocelyn's body was found in the creek later that day. 'In this case, the defendant[s] lured a 12 year old under a bridge, took her pants off, tied her up and killed her, then threw her body into the bayou,' prosecutors allege. Martinez-Rangel and Pena remain in Harris County Jail while prosecutors request bail of $1 million for each. ICE agents have placed a detainer on both illegal aliens, requesting custody of them should they get released from jail at any time." (Reports: Biden's DHS Freed Illegal Aliens Into US Who Are Now Accused Of Murdering Jocelyn Nungaray by John Binder). Joe Biden is the migrant invasion of America. He has granted residence to alien hordes and stabbed the nation in the back. He is grisly murders committed by migrants. He is a migrant mass murderer of women and children. He is a Salvadoran monster who raped and murdered Rachel Morin. He is an Ecuadorian monster who raped and kidnapped a thirteen year old girl and filmed the attack. He is a Salvadoran monster who assaulted a nine year old girl and her mother. He is the Venezuelan monsters who raped, tortured and murdered a twelve year old girl. He is the MS-13 criminal gang from El Salvador. He is an open spigot of migrant murderers invading from Venezuela, Cuba, Haiti, Mexico and Honduras, a spigot who has released more than one million of them at the southern border, transported them across the nation on commercial flights, and created a national bloodbath submerging civilization: "Representative Marjorie Taylor Greene (R-GA) sounded the alarm on Friday following more headlines highlighting gruesome migrant crime taking place in the US, declaring that the American people 'must stop tolerating the Democrat controlled invasion of America!' Greene shared a screenshot showing headlines related to migrant crime. The headlines include a Salvadoran illegal alien charged with the rape and murder of Rachel Morin, a Ecuadorian migrant charged with the rape and kidnapping of a 13 year old girl in New York City, and two Venezuelan migrants charged with murdering 12 year old Jocelyn Nungaray in Houston, Texas. 'Joe Biden has filled our country with murderers, rapists, child rapists, and every kind of monster foreign countries do not want,' she wrote. 'And now they are KILLING WOMEN AND CHILDREN! No it's not Russian aggression or Israel and Gaza or China or North Korea or Iran or fictional climate change that is murdering them! It is illegal criminals that our pathetic traitorous government LET IN!' she exclaimed. The American people must stop tolerating the Democrat controlled invasion of America! Indeed, these stories have made national headlines in recent days. The Angel Family of Rachel Morin recently said they were 'deeply touched' after former President Donald Trump reached out to them, offering his condolences. Morin was raped and murdered by an illegal alien linked to the MS-13 gang who crossed the United States-Mexico border in 2023. As Breitbart News reported: 'On August 5, 2023, Rachel Morin, a 37-year-old mother of five children, was last seen heading out for a walk at the Ma & Pa Heritage Trail in Bel Air, Maryland. When Morin did not return home, her boyfriend, Richard Tobin, reported her missing. The following day, her body was found on the side of the trail. On June 15, the Tulsa Police Department announced the arrest of 23 year old Victor Antonio Martinez Hernandez, an illegal alien from El Salvador with ties to the MS-13 gang, in connection with Morin's rape and murder as well as a violent assault of a nine year old girl and her mother in Los Angeles, California.' Christian Inga, a 25 year old migrant from Ecuador, is also in the news, as having been accused of raping a 13 year old girl at knifepoint in broad daylight in Queens, New York. Prosecutors claim he reportedly filmed the attack. Further, this week, two men from Venezuela—Johan Jose Rangel Martinez, 21 years old, and Franklin Jose Pena Ramos, 26 years old—were accused of murdering 12 year old Jocelyn Nungaray. Allegedly, 'the defendant lured a 12 year old under a bridge where he and his codefendant remained with her for over two hours, took her pants off, tied her up and killed her, then threw her body into the bayou.' Both men face capital murder charges, and a sexual assault investigation is ongoing. Meanwhile, the Biden administration's parole pipeline has brought more than a million foreign nationals to the United States since its inception in January 2023." (MTG Sounds Alarm After More Migrant Crime: 'Stop Tolerating The Democrat Controlled Invasion Of America' by Hannah Knudsen). Across America, mothers in their homes set tables for lunch, waiting for their children to return from school. The children will not return. There is a monster loose preying upon them. His name is Joe Biden.
