

VICTORY TROPHY FOR RED TERROR

By A. J. Reffes

Progress Publishers

For Kathy, friend, mentor and wife. Stupor Mundi.

Copyright © 2024 by A. J. Reffes. All rights reserved. Published by Progress Publishers, Berlin, Germany.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION	3
VICTORY TROPHY FOR RED TERROR	4
RED TRANSIT ROLLS THROUGH LUXEMBOURG	6
GLOBAL CALIPHATE LANDS ON BRITISH SHORES	8
NEW AXIS OF EVIL TARGETS ALTERNATIVE FOR GERMANY	10
EDWARD SAID BEHIND THE SCENES	12
MARXISTS AND CHRISTIANS MOVE IN ON AMERICA	14
THE RED SHEETS OF NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC	17
TRUMP CONFISCATED	19
SEARCH ENGINE SUBVERSION	21
CITIZEN TRUMP	23
RED CANNIBALS TURNED LOOSE	25
LADY GANGSTERS	28
THE ODYSSEY OF HORST MAHLER	30
POISON IN THE PANTRY	32
HITLER'S HANGING JUDGE HAILS FROM GEORGIA	35
FRENCH REDS REVERSE THE BATTLE OF TOURS	37
CONFLICTS AND CLASHES IN A COLLAPSED SOCIETY	39
AMERICA'S RED ARMY	41
THE SORCERER'S MATHEMATICS	44
THE MARRAKESH EXPRESS	46

INTRODUCTION

These reports are intended for a general, nonspecialist audience. They run the gamut of the arts and sciences, historical and current events, and should provide the reader with useful introductions to given topics. May they encourage a few happy hours of suggestive thought!

VICTORY TROPHY FOR RED TERROR

The Heckler and Koch MP5 is an automatic weapon developed in 1966 by the world famous German munitions maker. It is the most widely used automatic weapon in the world, adopted by military, intelligence, security and law enforcement organizations in over fifty nations. It achieved iconic status in 1980 when the British Special Air Service used it to storm the Iranian Embassy in London, rescuing the hostages and killing the five Iranian terrorists inside. Superimposed on a five pointed red star and beneath the letters RAF, it formed part of a terrifying logo. This was the logo of an organization which terrorized Germany for thirty years. The Red Army Faction, founded in 1970 by Andreas Baader, Ulrike Meinhof, Gudrun Ennslin and Horst Mahler, was a machine spraying out of its Heckler and Koch MP5s the eternal message of Marxism, a message broadcast from the first day of its founding in the nineteenth century: a message of bombings, assassinations, kidnappings, riots, bank robberies and shoot outs with the police. Rejecting reason and the senses, which present a world of separate individuals in space and time, a world sane people have perceived and understood for thousands of years, the dark religion of Marxism, the darkest religion known to mankind, exalts a netherworld of mysticism. Denying the existence of separate individuals, it exalts a mysticism of the tribe, the collective, the community, society and social responsibility, and condemns all those who perceive reality and are guided by sanity as forming a class of oppressors, exploiters, imperialists and colonialists which must be driven off the face of the Earth. It is a religion which justifies murder and mayhem and appeals to those with criminal propensities. It is a religion of aggression for the sake of aggression and power for the sake of power. It is a religion made by and for those who lack morality, empathy, remorse and conscience, by those who scale peaks of euphoria and achieve the release of all tension when they deprive innocent people of their rights. It is a religion which has done something no religion has ever done before in the history of mankind, something as simple and stark as it is brutal and inhuman: it has given voice and expression to those who find acts of hurting, damaging and killing someone or something exciting. Exploding out of the barrels of the Heckler and Koch MP5 and its facsimiles, it is a sanity defying, imagination defying, rationally incomprehensible pornography of violence. The story of Marxism is the story of the mutations of a monster. The enjoyment of destruction under the banner of class logically gave rise to other psychopathic impulses which would together exhaust the gamut of crime. It gave rise to the enjoyment of destruction under the banner of race and the enjoyment of destruction under the banner of gender. From these three impulses, a new nightmare creature emerged in the 1960s, a creature emanating unspeakable evil and ugliness, a creature with three heads, breathing the fires of gender war, race war and class war, and this triple headed, neoMarxist monster, marked gender, race and class politics, went on a rampage and starting attacking males, whites, and successful people, and in the twenty first century, has drowned the world in rivers of blood. Look at its story and see the story of civilization in its final stages of dissolution. Pornography. Listen to Marxists justify the mass murder of Jews in the name of class war: "How was Auschwitz possible, what was antisemitism? It used the hatred of the people of the Jews' dependence on money, and the people's longing for communism. Auschwitz means that six million Jews were murdered and carted on to the rubbish dumps of Europe for being what they were: money Jews. Antisemitism was anticapitalism." (Murderers Like The Fathers, Der Spiegel, May 10, 2010, quoting Ulrike Meinhof). Pornography. Listen to Marxists justify mass murder in the name of antifascism: "They'll kill us all. You know what kind of pigs we're up against. This is the Auschwitz generation. You can't argue with people who made Auschwitz. They have weapons and we do not. We must arm ourselves!" (Legacies Of Dachau: The Uses And Abuses Of A Concentration Camp, 1933–2001 by Harold Marcuse, quoting Gudrun Ennslin). Pornography. Listen to Marxists justify killing, burning and blowing up in the name of class liberation and black power: "The Symbionese Liberation

Army was headed by Donald DeFreeze, also known as Cinque Mtume, who served five years for robbery, escaped Soledad prison, and hooked up with radical leftist Patricia 'Missmoon' Soltysik. DeFreeze drew inspiration from Ron Karenga, also known as Maulana Karenga, born Ronald McKinley Everett in Maryland in 1941. In the late 1960s Karenga rose to prominence as a theoretician of the black nationalist movement. In The Quotable Karenga handbook, he told followers: 'When it's burn, let's see how much you burn, When it's kill, let's see how much you kill. When it's blow up, let's see how much you blow up.' (Domestic Terrorism History Month by Lloyd Billingsley). Pornography. Listen to Marxists justify mass murder in the name of combating racism, sexism, ageism and fascism. Listen to them condemn the institutions of civilized society, the institutions of individual rights, free market economy and the enjoyment of private property, and vow to abolish them. Listen to them exalt in place of civilized society the detonations of bomb blasts, the gun barrels of assassination, a war against the police, and antigovernments ruled by organized groups of criminals: "The SLA claimed to stand against the evils of racism, sexism, ageism, fascism, individualism, competitiveness and possessiveness, plus all other institutions that sustained capitalism. Like the Black Panthers, they were a murderous criminal gang. In 1973, the SLA assassinated black Oakland school superintendent Marcus Foster In 1974, Cinque Mtume and five other SLA members perished in a gun battle with Los Angeles police. In 1975, SLA member Kathleen Anne Soliah, who helped the SLA hide Patty Hearst, plotted to bomb two Los Angeles police cars." (Domestic Terrorism History Month by Lloyd Billingsley). Pornography. Listen to Marxists justify urban bombing, bank robbery and kicking pregnant women in the stomach in the name of feminism, antiracism, anticapitalism, antifascism, vanguardism and the new left. Listen to them justify violence in the name of freedom of speech and freedom of political association. Listen to them justify violence in the name of Africana Studies. Listen to them justify violence in the name of preserving black heritage and black culture. Listen to them justify violence in the name of communist wisdom, unity, harmony, determination, work, cooperation, responsibility, economics, purpose, creativity and faith. Listen to them justify violence as the hope, peace and light of the world. Listen to them justify violence in the name of defending the rights of poor blacks. Listen to them justify violence in the name of combating unfair stereotypes of blacks. Listen to them justify violence as the deepest and most loving form of human bonding known to man: "Soliah [SLA member Kathleen Anne Soliah] also took part in bank robbery in Carmichael, California, that claimed the life of Myrna Opsahl, a doctor's wife who had come to deposit church funds. Soliah also kicked a pregnant teller in the stomach, causing a miscarriage. Soliah fled to Minnesota, masqueraded as housewife Sara Jane Olson, and was not captured until 1999. In 2009, after serving seven years, the SLA vet was released from prison in California and allowed to serve parole in Minnesota. One of her biggest supporters was Keith Ellison, who said 'I think it's dangerous to prosecute people for their political views and their political associations. I think you prosecute people for what they do, for their acts.' Ellison moved on to Congress and is now Attorney General of Minnesota. Maulana Karenga is now professor of Africana Studies at Cal State Long Beach. His holiday Kwanzaa, which Karenga acknowledged had nothing to do with Africa, has now gained full establishment status. 'Michelle and I send our warmest wishes to all those celebrating Kwanzaa this holiday season,' said President Obama in a December 26, 2011 statement. 'Today marks the beginning of the week long celebration honoring African American heritage and culture through the seven principles of Kwanzaa—unity, self determination, collective work and responsibility, cooperative economics, purpose, creativity, and faith.' No word from the composite character president about the holiday's founder. 'Jill and I wish a very Happy Kwanzaa to all those celebrating across America and around the world. May your homes be filled with hope, peace, and light. And in 2024, may we carry with us the wisdom of the seven principles of Kwanzaa—especially those of unity and faith,' read a December 26 post from White House resident Joe Biden. Even in Africa, a ballpark figure for nations celebrating Kwanzaa could be zero." (Domestic Terrorism History Month by Lloyd Billingsley). Her grandfather was William Randolph Hearst, creator of a media empire, the largest newspaper, magazine, newsreel and film business in the world. In 1974, Patricia Hearst joined the Symbionese Liberation Army. Adopting the name Tania, in honor of Che Guevara's comrade Tania the Guerrilla, she took up an M1 Carbine and robbed the Sunset District branch of the Hibernia Bank in San Francisco: "I'm Tania. Up, up, up against the wall, motherfuckers!" Affecting the rich and powerful and the poor and weak, communism is a moral disease afflicting every group in society locked in a state of degeneration, and it has consumed and buried the West. Its program is rejection, the rejection of knowledge, morality and human purpose, and it has composed the sorry epitaph of civilization in the twenty first century.

RED TRANSIT ROLLS THROUGH LUXEMBOURG

Its capital city is one of the capitals of the European Union, together with Brussels, Frankfurt and Strasbourg. It is the seat of major European Union institutions, such as the European Investment Bank, the European Court of Auditors, and the European Court of Justice, which is the supreme judicial body of the EU. It is the richest country in the world, with a per capita GDP of $140,000 and household wealth of one million dollars. It occupies the top ranks of the Heritage Foundation's Index of Economic Freedom, the United Nations' Human Development Index, the Economist Intelligence Unit's quality of life index, and the Global Innovation Index, published by the World Intellectual Property Organization. Its industrial sector, dominated by steel production, was swept away in the 1980s because it could not compete with the more productive Asian nations, and was replaced by a financial services sector, specializing in providing tax havens, tax loopholes, private banking and investment funds. On February 29, 2020, this tiny, landlocked nation known as Luxembourg gave civilized people throughout the world an education they will never forget. It gave them a picture they had seen only in their nightmares. It gave them a terrifying vision of the shape of things to come and sent them reeling back in horror and running for their lives. On February 29, 2020, this global financial center and banking hub illustrated in stark, dramatic terms how far the moral cancer on the West had advanced. It had advanced to claim a center of European civilization, a capital of the European Union and an advertisement of successful capitalist development. This cancer has been diagnosed by civilized people as communism and it has spared no nation, no society, no class, high or low, rich or poor, in its relentless advance to enslave mankind. Rejecting the values of the West's shining Enlightenment, the values of reason, sanity, science and human flourishing, this cancer has been fueled by mass ovations given by the unholy mobs who have taken charge of civilization during its twilight stage and plunged it into a mad vortex of state violence. On February 29, 2020, this cancer struck Luxembourg and laid it low. On this day, this country made history and skyrocketed to the top of the annals of infamy. On this day, the bells, whistles, wheels and rolling stock of communism were set down upon the nation. On this day, Luxembourg became the first country in the world to establish no charge public transportation. The nightmare of the former communist bloc returned to Europe, descended on Luxembourg, and transformed free citizens into coerced comrades of the cause of human enslavement. Through the communist way, through the way of state tax robbery, through the way of forcing Peter to subsidize Paul, and through the way of dragooning free people into an iron net marked social responsibility, Luxembourg has filled a communal swampland on cables and wheels in which transport on trains, buses, trams and funiculars is paid for by the state and passengers ride for free. Look at Luxembourg today and see state violence against private wealth proclaimed to be pleasant, attractive and an expression of benevolence, and see a shining symbol of European freedom transformed into a social justice leviathan: "Although free transport has not yet fulfilled its practical purpose, it is a nice and true advertisement for Luxembourg as a social justice state, where everyone has the right to affordable travel." (Why Public Transport Is Free In Luxembourg by Sergey Ves and Daria Saltykova). Look at Luxembourg today and see communist transport justified in the name of reducing traffic congestion. See communist transport justified in the name of reducing greenhouse gas emissions. See the proclamation that the poor have a right to transport paid for by the rich. See the proclamation that individuals earning high wages have a duty to pay for the transport of those who earn low wages. See the proclamation that Luxembourg, as a wealthy nation, must be plundered by the state to provide free transport to the mobs. See communist transport justified in the name of alleviating poverty. See communist transport justified in the name of helping pensioners. See a national campaign to remove private automobiles from the roads and push the people at gunpoint into the mobile death vans of communist public works: "Over the past four decades Luxembourg's population has increased by almost 240,000 people. The labor force has grown from 161,000 in 1998 to 427,000 in 2018, fueled in part by a 168 percent rise in cross border workers. Today, the Grand Duchy has the highest number of passenger cars per inhabitant in the EU (including company cars registered there used by nonresident cross border workers). More than sixty percent of commuters use their cars to get to work, compared to just nineteen percent who use public transport. Yet cutting congestion and improving the environment are not the main drivers of the free public transport initiative, according to minister for mobility and public works Francois Bausch. 'It is primarily a social measure,' he says. 'The objective is to stop the deepening gap between rich and poor. For people on low wages, transport expenses matter. Therefore it is easier to make it free for everyone.' Luxembourg is widely seen as a wealthy nation—it has the highest average annual salary of all OECD countries. But poverty is increasing: the bottom ten percent live on an average of 1,011 euros (£878, $1,144) per month, according to Luxembourg's statistics office. Thirteen percent of workers and almost ten percent of pensioner are at risk of poverty. Free public transport is one of several pieces of social legislation the recently reelected government is keen to pass in 2019, including raising the minimum wage, pension adjustments and financial aid for higher education. 'Free transport is an awesome idea,' says M'Barek Rabii. He works at La Provencale, the national wholesale market hall. Divorced with a twelve year old child, he earns the legal minimum wage. From his after tax monthly salary of 1,770 euros (£1,540), he spends around 900 euros on rent and fifty euros on public transport each month, explaining he cannot afford to buy the 400 euro season ticket. 'Together with the minimum wage increase, it will help people with low salaries like me to better make ends meet,' he believes. But persuading car drivers to jump on board free trains and buses may be a difficult proposition, given many see the public transport system as clunky and inconvenient." (The Cost Of Luxembourg's Free Public Transport Plan by Marc Auxenfants). Look at Luxembourg today and see communist transport justified in the name of preventing climate doomsday brought by global warming. See communist transport justified in the name of fundamental fairness toward the scum of the Earth. See communist transport justified in the name of giving a free ride to those who do not work or produce. See communist transport justified in the name of reducing rush hour traffic jams. See people who pay taxes subsidize the the transport of people who do not pay taxes. See communism granted the exclusive right of way and priority at all transit crossings. See a wealthy country bled white to place the population on board Soviet trains, trams and buses and transport them into a regime of moral collapse and the abolition of freedom: "As countries look to increase the use of public transport, experts explain why making buses, trams and trains free might not be a magic wand to solve the problem. Luxembourg recently celebrated three years of free public transport. And, according to the people who live there, it has been a resounding success. As countries look to encourage citizens to ditch their cars to cut carbon emissions, could Luxembourg's success be replicated across Europe? Bausch explains that the country decided to make public transport free for two reasons: to give everyone fair access and to encourage debate and awareness around a decade of change in its mobility system. Back in 2013 when Bausch first took up his position, rush hour traffic jams were a daily occurrence in Luxembourg city center.

Now there are none thanks to the increased use of the tram system and a reorganization of the way its streets work. The tram has exclusive right of way and has priority at crossings so is never stuck in traffic jams. This combined with the fact that it's free encourages more people to use it. Bausch sees it as a measure of the success of Luxembourg's transport transformation. Public transport in Luxembourg isn't really free for most people. 'Obviously it is paid through general taxation. People who pay more taxes in fact do not have free access to transport; they pay indirectly through their taxes,' says Bausch. 'But those who, for example, earn nothing or very little, they are the ones who pay no taxes or very few direct taxes, and they really get it for free.' " (Europe's Richest Country Made Public Transport Free: Could Other Countries Do The Same? by Hannah Brown). In today's world in which goods, services, talents and capital are mobile without restraint, a nation's branding, image and reputation are vital to its development. Proclaiming that zero fare, state subsidized, mass transit is "an important social measure", Luxembourg has rebranded itself in the twenty first century. The new Luxembourg brand, supported by standing ovations of the people: Made In Russia.

GLOBAL CALIPHATE LANDS ON BRITISH SHORES

It gave the modern world freedom. After the Roman Empire, it ruled the greatest empire of freedom the world had ever seen. Its freedom is enshrined in a series of laws: the Magna Carta, the Petition of Right, the Bill of Rights, the Claim of Right and the Habeas Corpus Act. Its Bill of Rights inspired the creation of America's Bill of Rights, the United Nations Declaration of Human Rights, and the European Convention on Human Rights. It led a global movement to abolish slavery. It ended its slave trade in 1807, and in 1808, it set up a Blockade of Africa in which its world renowned navy intercepted and searched all ships from all nations for slaves. In 1833, it banned slavery throughout the extent of its empire. This nation is Britain, and for one thousand years, to be a citizen of this nation meant to be a person who was free. It meant to be a person who was free of the shackles of social responsibility imposed by the state and free of all movements which sought to take away freedom in the name of some higher mystical good. In an illustration in stark, dramatic terms of how far the cancer on the West has advanced, the cancer of human enslavement which has afflicted civilizations throughout history in a state of moral degeneration, two global movements, backed by the clamor of the masses, have come ashore in the world's former superpower and citadel of freedom and laid it low. Voted into power by landslides, these movements of civilizational collapse are Marxism and Islam, and working in concert as they confront a common enemy, the system of liberal democracy, they have assumed control over the nation which spread liberal democracy into every corner of the Earth, which educated distant savages in the ways of liberal democracy and taught natives raised in jungles and deserts how to flourish like human beings, and they have made this nation unrecognizable. In a tragedy of imagination defying proportions, the original teacher and enforcer of freedom in the West has been overrun by a global movement of enslavement emanating from the East, a movement allowed in, aided, abetted and comforted in its quest by a fifth column of traitors operating within. This fifth column of homegrown, domestic radicals is an agent of the second global movement. Born in Germany in the nineteenth century, this second movement has formed the cultural and political establishment of nation after nation in the free world in a state of moral degeneration. Look at Britain in the twenty first century, look at this nation which from its founding to the early years of the twentieth century had been the world's policeman of freedom, and see what Marxism has allowed Islam to accomplish. See a multimillion man Islamist army stop the British bells of liberty from tolling. See it patrol the nation's storied capital cities. See it smash up the nation's streets with violent crime. See it blacken the nation's air with religious extremism. See it spread bigotry and intolerance throughout the land. See it force the nation to recognize a Palestinian dictatorship of terror. See it force the nation to demand the eradication of Israel and the extermination of the Jews. See its parties, councils and associations enter the ruling circles of the state. See it exploit and indoctrinate children. See it reduce the Labor and Conservative parties to its helpless marionettes. See it shift millions of votes to the cause of totalitarian tyranny. See it make the oppression of the Jews, infidels and the female population a national policy. See it breach the separation of church and state with the cannons of sectarian politics. See it elect as members of parliament rabid fanatics foaming at the mouth dedicated to the overthrow of Western Enlightenment. See it transform a free nation into a religious bloc encircled by an iron curtain. See it replace the nation's traditional concern with advancing human welfare with the aim of advancing mystical welfare. See it transform a nation which for centuries had prospered by encouraging the progress of science into a failed nation which worships at the altars of ignorance and superstition. See it Islamize the founder of Western liberal history and incinerate the moral map of Europe. See it destroy the nation's thousand year old culture and identity of freedom and establish in their place massive, organized support for a regime of psychopathic violence marching under the banners of the Star and Crescent. See it provide all forms of support, technical support, volunteers, marketing, funding, legal advice and polling data, to a movement which has declared holy war against the survival and success of modernity. See a parliament, a legal system, an educational system, an economic system and megaphones of the mass media, which for centuries had given voice and expression to the noonday world of reason and sanity, placed in the service of a movement founded on faith, force, supernaturalism and a return to the Dark Ages: "In recent weeks and months, while the streets of Britain's cities have been packed with angry Muslims protesting the government's proIsrael stance, Labor politicians who have previously relied on Muslim votes have been wringing their hands over polls showing that they can no longer count on Muslim support. According to a new survey by the Labor Muslim Network, just sixty percent of British Muslims who voted for Labor in 2019 say they'll do the same in this year's general election. Earlier this month, former Tory Prime Minister David Cameron, who is currently Foreign Minister, shook things up by suggesting that the UK might be prepared to recognize a Palestinian state—an action that might well shift a great many Muslim votes to the Conservatives. Now comes the news that certain members of Britain's four million strong Muslim community—with support from the Muslim Association of Britain, the Muslim Council of Scotland, the Muslim Council of Wales, the Council of Sri Lankan Muslim Organizations, and over a dozen other such organizations—have come together to wage a self described 'community campaign.' And what are its goals? There are, after all, many worthy goals to choose from. British Muslims might have joined forces to address the involvement of Muslim youths in grooming gangs—or, more broadly, in violent crime generally. They might have formed a movement to combat religious extremism and to teach newly arrived Muslims about Western democratic values. They might have made it their goal to liberate women and girls from their subordinate status in many Muslim homes—and, specifically, to fight such offenses as honor killing and forced marriage. But no, these British Muslims have formed something called The Muslim Vote, the objective of which is easily and briefly stated. In fact, you can express it in a single word: power. Nigel Farage, addressing this new development on GB News, called it 'the beginning of sectarian politics' in the UK (not counting Northern Ireland during The Troubles). He noted that while Hindus, Sikhs, and blacks in Britain tend not to vote in blocs, Muslims—in this as in so many other ways—are another matter, and he worried that The Muslim Vote might facilitate the election of new MPs whose agenda will be entirely about pushing for appeasement of Islam. (Listening to Farage, it was to be reminded of Ilhan Omar's recent declaration, before a Somali-American audience, that as a member of Congress she is dedicated wholly not to the welfare of her constituents, let alone to her adopted country, but rather to improving the fortunes of the failed nation of her birth.) Farage's guest on this particular GB News segment, a former Labor Party advisor named Scarlett McGwire, dismissed his concerns, predicting that The Muslim Vote wouldn't 'go anywhere.' (Funny, isn't it, how, throughout the history of the Islamization of Western Europe, there have always been prominent people who are quick to brush off concerns about the direction in which things are obviously going.) By contrast, Aletha Adu of The Guardian told another GB News host, Patrick Christys, that The Muslim Vote is 'going to be huge,' while Jonathan Gullis, a Conservative MP representing Stoke on Trent, predicted that the group would be 'massively influential' in constituencies like his." (A Step Forward For Islamic Influence In Britain? by Bruce Bawer). Thirty thousand year ago, Britain was settled and ruled by Cro-Magnon man. Five thousand years ago, Stonehenge was built on Salisbury Plain in southern England. The year 43 AD saw the Roman conquest of Britain, the displacement of the Celtic barbarians, and the commencement of four centuries of freedom. The year 900 saw the creation of the Anglo-Saxon Kingdom of England. The year 1066 saw the conquest of Britain by Norse Vikings called Normans and the abolition of slavery. The year 1707 saw the passage of the Act of Union which declared that "the Kingdom of England and Kingdom of Scotland are united into one kingdom by the name of Great Britain." The twenty first century has sent the hands of time in Britain racing backward into the nameless eons before the advent of freedom. These eons have been given a new name and a new lease on life. A cold wind whistles through the streets of an abandoned nation. A vortex has mauled apart the mind and freedom of man. These revived eons, this mad vortex, is called Islam.

NEW AXIS OF EVIL TARGETS ALTERNATIVE FOR GERMANY

Time: August 23, 1939. Place: Moscow, Soviet Union. Action: Soviet leader Joseph Stalin and German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop sign the Treaty of Non Aggression between Germany and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, a nonaggression pact between Germany and the Soviet Union, with a secret agreement which partitioned Eastern Europe between the two nations. This was a natural and inevitable treaty between two totalitarian powers bent on world domination which confronted a common enemy. The common enemy was a free society and these powers made common cause to destroy it, after which they would fight over the spoils. Two totalitarian nations, one, the Soviet Union, leading a global class war against freedom, while the other, the Third Reich, leading a global race war against freedom, which joined forces to form a terrifying pincer movement which would encircle and strangle freedom and close off the story of civilization. Two totalitarian nations, both sworn enemies of the Age of Enlightenment, both dedicated to the proposition that man is not a rational, free born agent but is born into a state of slavery, that the individual has no right to live and work for himself, and only differing between themselves with respect to the color of the lash wielded against the innocent. For the Soviets, the color was red, the color of proletarian dictatorship over the individual, while for the Third Reich, the color was brown, the color of Aryan dictatorship over the individual, and these two colors and these two lashes became allies on August 23, 1939, and declared holy war and a united front against what it means to be human. Less than a century after the signing of this Devil's pact by the Devil's two emissaries, the axis of evil is back in business, with only one color changed. The criminality has remained the same. The two totalitarian movements at work today consist of one old actor and one new actor, and they have joined forces as their predecessors did in yesteryear, and launched another terrifying pincer movement. The two movements travel under the names of Marxism and Islam, and in the twenty first century, nation after nation has fallen before their swords. In a brute, stark and dramatic illustration of how far the moral cancer on the West has advanced, these nations have fallen at the hands of their own people. Consumed by the cancer of moral degeneration, the people of the West have turned their backs on the traditions and institutions of the Enlightenment and embraced the cause of human enslavement. The colors of today's totalitarians are red for Marxism and its race and gender offshoots, and black for the Marxists' new Islamist partners, replacing the national socialists of yesteryear. In the nation which forged the first axis of evil in 1939, the new Marxist-

Islamist axis has assumed control over the establishment and closed off the story of a world renowned postwar nation. It has closed off the story of the Federal Republic of Germany. This axis has crushed the voices of dissent and zeroed in on the national leader of the opposition, targeting it for extermination. Germany: originator of the German-Soviet nonaggression treaty in 1939. Germany: a virulent venue in the West for the treaty's heir and successor: the alliance between Marxism and Islam. Germany: its new Marxist-Islamist establishment has placed a bullseye on the Alternative for Germany and opened fire, killing the last national voice of freedom remaining in the nation. The Alternative for Germany: founded in 2013 by liberal academics Alexander Gauland and Bernd Lucke and dedicated to the restoration of the Age of Enlightenment. It is dedicated to the restoration of reason, science, sanity and capitalism. It is opposed to all programs and policies which have stood athwart the progress of mankind. It is opposed to government regulation of the economy, the Islamification of the West, open borders allowing in the scum of the Earth, the religion of transgenderism which denies the reality or relevance of sex chromosomes and proclaims that gender can be changed by human choice and intervention, and the climate doomsday clock set into motion by the environmentalists' project fear, which proclaims that manmade greenhouse gas emissions are incinerating the planet and must be stopped by the dismantling of civilization. Look at the record of Earth's history and see the existence of natural climate cycles, natural climate variability, and ferocious heatwaves which struck when atmospheric carbon dioxide levels were much lower than they are today. See this record and see the sane method of empiricism refute the madness of the tollers of doomsday and the haters of civilization. These tollers and these haters have been unmasked by the Alternative for Germany: "In some of the regions with longer records and wider coverage, empirical data reveals that heatwaves were more extreme in the past, for example in the US in the 1930s, when atmospheric carbon dioxide concentrations were only seventy five percent of those today. Moreover, newspaper accounts from Australia from the same period and the nineteenth century provide evidence of extreme heatwaves whose intensity and extent exceeded the official meteorological records, which are of recent vintage. Also, proxy records for China indicate that although extremely cold winters between 1500 and 1900 were more frequent than those after 1950, 'the intensity of regional heat waves, in the context of recent global warming, may not in fact exceed natural climate variability seen over the last 2000 years'. (Recent Advances On Reconstruction Of Climate And Extreme Events In China For The past 2000 Years, Journal of Geographical Sciences)." (Impacts Of Climate Change: Perception And Reality by Indur Goklany). The Alternative for Germany is opposed to Islam and champions a free Germany, a free Europe and a free West. It is opposed to Islamist pressures, poorhouses, populations, movements, migrations, explosions, globalization, sewers, smuggling, sanctuaries, citizenship and family reunifications. It is opposed to an alien force invading from the desolate wastelands of Asia and Africa, a force whose program is the persecution of civilized people on the continent which gave the world freedom, and the destabilization and destruction of the continent's rational, Enlightenment based social structures. It is opposed to a monster rampaging from the East which has made Germany, Europe and the West morally and spiritually unrecognizable: "Africa cannot be saved in Europe. The future of Germany and Europe must be secured in the long term. We want to leave our descendants a country that is still recognizable as our Germany. While the European population is aging and shrinking, the population in Africa and Arab-Muslim countries is exploding. By 2050, Africa's population, including all Arab countries, is projected to double to 2.4 billion. Europe's population, on the other hand, will decrease by around 50 to around 540 million people over the same period, a third of whom will be over sixty years old. In relation to Europe or America, Africa represents a poorhouse. Both causes--the population growth in Africa and the wealth gap with Europe--create enormous migration pressure that has the dimensions of a mass migration. In absolute numbers, there are currently around 350 million people willing to migrate, mostly young men. By 2050 their number will increase to around 950 million. Against this background of problems, it is obvious that migration movements from Africa to Europe on the expected scale could destabilize our continent in just a few years. The individual protection and asylum guarantees in the Basic Law were created in 1949 for persecuted individuals. They promise the impossible under today's conditions of mass, globalized migration movements. They cannot be sustained. No further mass immigration. End smuggling. Enable unambiguous identification of asylum seekers. No family reunification. The costs for unaccompanied minors are exploding. No to dual citizenship. Islam does not belong in Germany." (Immigration/Asylum, AfD website). For its opposition to the Islamification of Germany, Europe and the West, the Alternative for Germany has paid the ultimate price: death. For its defense of freedom, the Enlightenment and the rights of man, it has been vilified as racist, violent, extremist and inhuman. Beholding an interloper in a nation now reserved for the twin movements of Marxism and Islam, the forces of the establishment have moved in. Catholic bishops, communist bishops, the bishops of the national news media, the bishops of the mainstream parties, the bishops of the boardroom, the bishops of sports clubs, and the bishops of the masses, mobs and neighbors next door have drawn and quartered the Alternative for Germany, jailed its supporters and expelled it from the nation: "Protesters again took to the streets in several German cities over the weekend under the motto of defend democracy. One of the larger gatherings on Sunday took place in the northern city of Wolfsburg, with roughly 6,000 people taking part. The event was partly called by the city's primary employer, Volkswagen, and also included speakers from Wolfsburg's men's and women's football clubs. Other demonstrations took place in cities including Hanover, Magdeburg, Bochum, Rietberg, Essen, and a series of smaller towns and communities over the weekend. In Magdeburg, Saxony-Anhalt State Premier Reiner Haseloff of the center-right Christian Democratic Union (CDU) told thousands gathered at the city's cathedral, 'We must fight all forms of racism and inhumanity wherever they appear.' Magdeburg's Catholic bishop, Gerhard Feige, told those gathered, 'I'm less fearful of alienation from without than I am of dehumanization from within.' German President Frank Walter Steinmeier on Saturday released a video in which he said he was proud of the country for taking a stand against extremism and praised citizens for their civic engagement." (Germany: More Demos Against Far Right, Deutsche Welle, February 18, 2024). On August 22, 1939, Joachim von Ribbentrop flew from Berlin to Moscow. Inside the Kremlin, he shook hands with Joseph Stalin. He signed a nonaggression pact with Stalin which placed Eastern Europe on the carving block. In the twenty first century, the Kremlin has been reconstituted in Berlin. Inside it, two movements have met and shaken hands. Marxists and Islamists have signed a nonaggression pact and carved up the free world.

EDWARD SAID BEHIND THE SCENES

Francois Leclerc du Tremblay was the chief assistant of French statesman Cardinal Richelieu. A Franciscan friar renowned for his gray robes, he never achieved the rank of cardinal but exercised great influence over Richelieu, and because of his attire was popularly known as His Gray Eminence. The term gray eminence soon entered into the language and denoted a figure acting in a nonofficial, nonpublic capacity who operates behind the scenes and makes major decisions. In the cesspool of contemporary politics, swirling with the bacteria of Marxism and Islam, is a gray eminence. He died over two decades ago but his spirit is alive and well and influences the course of ideas and events. He was a professor, a political activist and a literary critic who declared war on freedom with a call to arms called postcolonial studies. His body is buried in Brummana, Lebanon but his spirit inhabits every university in Europe, North America and the Middle East, ruling classrooms and conferences through his books and lectures. The Devil sent him five emissaries to teach him the ways of the master. These were five Marxists who promoted the politics of gender, race and class: Antonio Gramsci, Theodor Adorno, Frantz Fanon, Aime Cesaire and Michel Foucault. From these teachers he concocted a black gospel of Marxist-Islamist totalitarian tyranny which broadcast death and destruction to the light which, radiating from Europe gleaming with its Age of Enlightenment, civilized the planet. His name was Edward Wadie Said. Listen to his creed. He proclaims that the Enlightenment defense of reason and science and condemnation of the antiEnlightenment Orient as a jungle of ignorance and fear is the product of unfair cultural stereotyping. He proclaims that the condemnation of the antiEnlightenment Orient as a desert of savagery and superstition is a product of unfair demonization. He proclaims that the condemnation of the antiEnlightenment Orient as a swampland of coerced brotherhood and blind submission is a product of blinkered academics. He proclaims that an objective, dispassionate, nonpartisan evaluation of Arab and Islamist culture leads to the conclusion that it is morally superior to the Enlightenment order of modernity. He proclaims that a progressive society is a postEnlightenment society dedicated to the dissemination of Arab and Islamist propaganda. He proclaims that those who stand up for human rights are purveyors of unreasoning antiArab and antiIslamic prejudice. He proclaims that liberal culture is Israeli culture and zionist culture and is the antithesis of the morally superior Arab and Islamist culture of fear and control. He proclaims that those who support freedom, law and constitutional government and are opposed to Islamist terror and totalitarian regimentation lack fundamental intelligence and judgment. He proclaims that liberal democracy is a system of racism, imperialism and dehumanization. He proclaims that a progressive society identifies with the cause of Arabism, Islamism, Palestinian rights and the destruction of the West: "One aspect of the electronic, postmodern world is that there has been a reinforcement of the stereotypes by which the Orient is viewed. Television, the films, and all the media's resources have forced information into more and more standardized molds. So far as the Orient is concerned, standardization and cultural stereotyping have intensified the hold of the nineteenth century academic and imaginative demonology of 'the mysterious Orient.' This is nowhere more true than in the ways by which the Near East is grasped. Three things have contributed to making even the simplest perception of the Arabs and Islam into a highly politicized, almost raucous matter: one, the history of popular antiArab and antiIslamic prejudice in the West, which is immediately reflected in the history of Orientalism; two, the struggle between the Arabs and Israeli Zionism, and its effects upon American Jews as well as upon both the liberal culture and the population at large; three, the almost total absence of any cultural position making it possible either to identify with or dispassionately to discuss the Arabs or Islam. Furthermore, it hardly needs saying that because the Middle East is now so identified with Great Power politics, oil economics, and the simple minded dichotomy of freedom loving, democratic Israel and evil, totalitarian, and terroristic Arabs, the chances of anything like a clear view of what one talks about in talking about the Near East are depressingly small." (Orientalism by Edward Said). Listen to the creed of Edward Said. He proclaims that bigotry, intolerance, pseudoscholarship and blind, unreasoning hatred are defined by the following. Condemnation of the Arab world for what it is: a cult of mindless conformity. Condemnation of the Islamist world for what it is: a wilderness of religious submission. Condemnation of the East for what it is: a sealed capsule of unenlightenment and unknowing. Condemnation of the East for what it is: a regime of clients and patrons, lords and serfs. Condemnation of the East for what it is: a regime of raw power and domination. Condemnation of the East for what it is: a regime in which the peaceful, the law abiding and the nonaggressive incur public shame and opprobrium. Condemnation of the East for what it is: a regime in which ruthless robbers, killers and enforcers enjoy public respect and admiration. Condemnation of the East for what it is: a regime of brute, unending, animal feuds and vengeance. Condemnation of the East for what it is: a regime which worships war and hostility as the highest form of human relations. Condemnation of the East for what it is: a regime which sacrifices morality on the altar of success, expediency and the principle that the end justifies the means. Condemnation of the East for what it is: a regime which exalts raiding and plundering above production and exchange. Condemnation of the East for what it is: a regime which demands obedience and solidarity at the expense of individual freedom and autonomy. Condemnation of the East for what it is: a regime which exalts deceit, dishonesty, subterfuge and treachery. Condemnation of the East for what it is: a regime in which all are suspicious of all, all are distrustful of all, and all are ready to kill all. Condemnation of the East for what it is: a regime in which the state, society and the economy are predicated on the will to power of clans, tribes, mosques and beasts of prey: "In its February 1972 issue, the American Journal of Psychiatry printed an essay by Harold W. Glidden, who is identified as a retired member of the Bureau of Intelligence and Research, United States Department of State; the essay's title (The Arab World), its tone, and its content argue a highly characteristic Orientalist bent of mind. Thus for his four page, double columned psychological portrait of over 100 million people, considered for a period of 1,300 years, Glidden cites exactly four sources for his views: a recent book on Tripoli, one issue of the Egyptian newspaper Al-Ahram, the periodical Oriente Moderno, and a book by Majid Khadduri, a well known Orientalist. The article itself purports to uncover 'the inner workings of Arab behavior,' which from our point of view is 'aberrant' but for Arabs is 'normal'. After this auspicious start, we are told that Arabs stress conformity; that Arabs inhabit a shame culture whose 'prestige system' involves the ability to attract followers and clients (as an aside we are told that 'Arab society is and always has been based on a system of client-patron relationships'); that Arabs can function only in conflict situations; that prestige is based solely on the ability to dominate others; that a shame culture—and therefore Islam itself—makes a virtue of revenge; that if from a Western point of view 'the only rational thing for the Arabs to do is to make peace for the Arabs the situation is not governed by this kind of logic, for objectivity is not a value in the Arab system.' " (Orientalism by Edward Said). In 1873, the world famous French painter, Jean Leon Gerome, created his masterpiece, L'Eminence Grise. It depicts Francois Leclerc du Tremblay descending the grand staircase of the Palais Cardinal and the deference shown to this gray robed figure who wielded power behind the scenes. In the twenty first century, Jean Leon Gerome's masterpiece has been repainted with a new character. He is the gray eminence behind a movement opposed to the Enlightenment and the institutions of a free society. He is the wirepuller of marionettes promoting postEnlightenment studies, postcolonial studies, Palestinian terror and the pornography of violence: "The late Palestinian intellectual Edward Said defended Yasser Arafat—who was then still a notorious terrorist, not yet a corrupt kleptocrat—by saying that his sensational violence at least kept the Palestinian cause from disappearing entirely from the world's consciousness, and kept the Palestinian diaspora unified, even at the moral price of backing terror." (Blue State Blues: 50 Years of Excuses For Palestinian Terror Are Enough by Joel Pollak). Watch him descend the grand staircase in the Palace of Unreason. Look at the deference shown to this apostle of the Marxist-Islamist axis of antiEnlightenment in control of the West. Professor of English and comparative literature at Columbia University from 1963 up to his death, his name was Edward Said.

MARXISTS AND CHRISTIANS MOVE IN ON AMERICA

The Carthaginian Hannibal was the greatest military general of all time. At the Battle of Cannae in 216 BC, he defeated the ancient world's most formidable military asset: the Roman Legions. He did so by pioneering the tactic known as the pincer movement. This tactic involves the double envelopment and encirclement of the enemy, forcing it to defend three fronts simultaneously: its main body, its flanks and its rear. Hannibal's pincer movement would inspire armies for the next two thousand years and is studied in war colleges throughout the world. In the twenty first century, the pincer movement has been transferred from the battlefield of soldiers onto the battlefield of ideas. It has been transferred by two movements which confront a common enemy. They do not act in concert but their simultaneous attacks add up to a pincer movement. Their widespread growth and popularity are a symptom of the degeneration of the age and what they represent has felled all civilizations throughout history. The degeneration they represent hurled Classical civilization into the dustbin of history and has presently destroyed the West. Symptoms of degeneration leading to the rejection of reason, sanity, common sense and ordinary experience, they are comprised of a movement which rejects the primacy of matter and places primacy in a supernatural realm of the pure spirit, and a movement which rejects the existence of spirit altogether and reduces man to the level of an animal. Movements of otherworldly spiritualists and reductive materialists, they appeared in the form of Christians and barbarians who overran the Roman Empire to standing ovations given by the degenerate masses. In the present day, they have appeared in the form of resurgent Abrahamic religions, Christianity, Islam and Orthodox Judaism, and in the form of Marxism and its race and gender offshoots. While a triple headed Marxist monster called Gender, Race and Class Politics has taken control of schools, businesses and the media throughout the West, the resurgent Abrahamic religions have claimed trophies of victory for themselves. Orthodox Judaism has started a culture war and menaces liberal democracy in Israel, Islam has spread a net of terror across the world, and Christianity has made terrifying inroads in the former leader of the free world. Acting in a pincer movement with Marxists, acting in a movement which illustrates how far the degeneration of civilization has advanced, Christianity has attacked the United States of America, and together with Marxists has rendered it unrecognizable. In the twenty first century, Christianity has achieved total domination over America's political conservative movement and achieved a seat in America's ruling circles and councils of state. It has reached into the highest levels of the federal government. On the United States Supreme Court sit five bishops of the Catholic Church and they have authorized the states to do something expressly forbidden by the First Amendment of the Constitution and by two thousand years of liberal jurisprudence. They have breached the separation between church and state and authorized the fifty states to establish religion. They have authorized the states to declare that in the act of human fertilization, when two gametes, two sex cells, a sperm and an ovum, join together, the resulting single cell zygote contains a supernatural person and its destruction is an act of murder. They have authorized the states to declare that a single cell zygote is a supernatural child and person and enjoys full legal rights. They have authorized states to declare that the scientifically established stages of human growth and development, commencing with the production of male and female gametes and progressing through the formation of a zygote, an embryo, a fetus, an infant and a toddler, is false, because human actuality exists from the very beginning in the zygote in the form of a supernatural person. Listen to the Supreme Court declare that a zygote is not a zygote but is an unborn human being: "What sharply distinguishes the abortion right from the rights recognized in the cases on which Roe and Casey rely is something that both those decisions acknowledged: Abortion destroys what those decisions call potential life and what the law at issue in this case regards as the life of an unborn human being." (Dobbs vs Jackson Women's Health Organization, decided June 24, 2022, Associate Justice Samuel Alito delivering the opinion of the Court). Listen to the Supreme Court declare that words do not mean what they mean, the constitutional text does not say what it says, and the right to liberty does not mean the right to liberty: "That provision [the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment] has been held to guarantee some rights that are not mentioned in the Constitution, but any such right must be 'deeply rooted in this Nation's history and tradition' and 'implicit in the concept of ordered liberty.'" (Dobbs vs Jackson Women's Health Organization, decided June 24, 2022, Associate Justice Samuel Alito delivering the opinion of the Court). Listen to the Supreme Court bang the gavel and dismiss the First Amendment, and usher in the Christian Dark Ages in America: "The Constitution does not confer a right to abortion. Roe and Casey are overruled. The authority to regulate abortion is returned to the people and their elected representatives." (Dobbs vs Jackson Women's Health Organization, decided June 24, 2022, Associate Justice Samuel Alito delivering the opinion of the Court). The Supreme Court's decision unleashed a torrent of Christian activism in courts and legislatures throughout the nation which tolled the death bell for the First Amendment. Look at Alabama and see its legislature proclaim that abortion is murder and enact a ban on abortion at all stages of pregnancy. See its Supreme Court proclaim that embryos are unborn children. See it proclaim that embryos are persons entitled to full protection under the law. See it proclaim that embryos are minors and their destruction represents wrongful death. See it proclaim that embryos and fetuses must be legally considered to be persons. See it proclaim that human life commences at the moment of conception. See it proclaim that fertilized eggs are people. See it proclaim that the legal protection of zygotes represents a victory for life. See it proclaim that God is the source of all glory, truth and reality and has decreed that human personhood mystically appears when a sperm fuses with an egg: "A ruling from the Alabama Supreme Court that frozen embryos are considered children, and that a person could be held liable for accidentally destroying them, has opened up a new front in the US battle over reproductive medicine. The decision has thrown the future of IVF treatments in the state into doubt, with a host of healthcare providers in the state suspending the service. Medical experts and reproductive advocacy groups warned the ruling could have negative consequences for fertility treatments in Alabama and beyond. Some antiabortion groups applauded the ruling, arguing that embryos deserve greater legal protections. The case stems from a wrongful death lawsuit brought by three couples whose embryos were lost at a fertility clinic in 2020. A patient had wandered into the place where the embryos were stored, handled them, and accidentally dropped them. As a result, the embryos were destroyed. The couples sought to sue the Center for Reproductive Medicine and the Mobile Infirmary Association under the state's Wrongful Death of a Minor Act. That law covers fetuses, but did not specifically cover embryos resulting from IVF. A lower court had ruled that the embryos did not qualify as a person or child, and that a wrongful death lawsuit could not move forward. But in its ruling, the Alabama Supreme Court sided with the couples, and ruled that frozen embryos were considered children. The wrongful death law applied to 'all unborn children, regardless of their location', the decision said. Concurring with the majority opinion, Chief Justice Tom Parker wrote: 'Even before birth, all human beings have the image of God, and their lives cannot be destroyed without effacing his glory.' Elisabeth Smith, director of state policy at the Center for Reproductive Rights, told the BBC in a statement: 'Not all [IVF] embryos are used, nor can they be. To enact legislation granting legal personhood to embryos could have disastrous consequences for the use of IVF--a science many people rely on to build their families.' When the US Supreme Court struck down a nationwide right to abortion in 2022, it opened the door for states to make their own laws on the issue. Alabama already has a total ban on abortion, at all stages of pregnancy. The question of when an embryo or a fetus is legally considered a person is a factor in many state abortion restrictions. The Alliance Defending Freedom, a conservative Christian legal group, described the Alabama ruling as a 'tremendous victory for life'. 'No matter the circumstances, all human life is valuable from the moment of conception,' spokeswoman Denise Burke said in a statement to the BBC. 'We are grateful the Court correctly found that Alabama law recognizes this fundamental truth.' Eric Johnston, a lawyer who helped draft Alabama's constitutional language on abortion in 2018, told the BBC: 'By and large the prolife community would say that fertilized eggs are in need of protection.' " (Alabama IVF Ruling: What Does It Mean For Fertility Patients? by Kayla Epstein). On August 2, 216 BC in the ancient village of Cannae in southeast Italy, the Carthaginians led by Hannibal surrounded and annihilated the Roman army commanded by Paulus and Varro. Pioneering the pincer movement, Hannibal accomplished the greatest feat in military history and inflicted on Rome its worst defeat. The defeat is depicted in American artist John Trumbull's 1773 masterpiece, The Death Of Paulus At The Battle Of Cannae. In the twenty first century, Trumbull's oil on canvas has been repainted with new characters. The Roman army is now America's constitutional government. Hannibal's pincer movement is now comprised of Marxists and Christians. The annihilation remains the same.

THE RED SHEETS OF NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC

"The National Geographic Society has been organized to increase and defuse geographic knowledge, and the publication of a magazine has been determined upon as one means accomplishing these purposes." Noble words from Gardiner Hubbard, founder and first president of the National Geographic Society, written one hundred and thirty six years ago, in the first issue of the society's National Geographic Magazine. Knowledge, truth and enlightenment. For one hundred and thirty six years, these had been the watchwords of an American monthly magazine which had thrilled millions of people every month with its surveys of the natural world and studies of physical and human geography Knowledge, truth and enlightenment. For over one hundred and thirty six years, these had been the shibboleths of a magazine which educated millions of people every month in the lands, features, inhabitants and phenomena of the Earth. Circulated in dozens of languages throughout the world, winner of twenty five National Magazine Awards, and reaching through its Instagram page three hundred million followers, National Geographic had been a global institution of scientific understanding from its first issue published on September 22, 1888 up until the twenty first century. Then sickness struck, a sickness of the soul sweeping through the West, and laid low this iconic organ of popular science. The ruling religion of the age, installed into power in a landslide victory delivered by the degenerate masses, this sickness travels under the name of Marxism and its race and gender derivatives, and in an illustration of how far this sickness has advanced, it has in the present day broadcast its creed on the pages of an award winning magazine which once utilized the powers of science, exploration, education and storytelling to illuminate the wonders of the natural and human world. In the twenty first century, National Geographic has turned its back on science and embraced religion, the religion of Marxism in all its stripes and varieties, and promoted an agenda for the destruction of civilization. Look at National Geographic today and see it burn Marxist spices and release the sickly sweet odor of moral and spiritual corruption. See it reject the traditions and institutions of the Enlightenment. See it reject the values of a free society. See it promote the religion of transgenderism. This religion proclaims that one hundred years of genetic research, reaching back to the pioneering studies of Nettie Stevens and Edmund Wilson, do not exist. It proclaims that sex chromosomes do not exist. It proclaims that gender has nothing to do with genes, scientific evidence to the contrary, and can be changed by human intervention. Look at National Geographic today and see men in women's clothes described as real women. See a drag queen placed on its cover as an example of a woman traveler. See a boy who claims to be a girl placed on its cover. See the impossible practice of transforming males into females and females into males exalted as a gender revolution. See psychotic children who imagine themselves to be members of the opposite sex encouraged to mutilate themselves through surgery and drugs. See tolerance of transgender psychosis exalted in the name of inclusivity. See capitalism condemned in the name of transgender rights. See capitalism condemned in the name of environmental protection. See capitalism condemned in the name of halting global warming. See capitalism condemned in the name of saving the planet. See capitalism condemned in the name of enjoying nature and the great outdoors. See capitalism condemned in the name of promoting thrilling journeys through fields and forests. See capitalism condemned in the name of gay and lesbian rights. See capitalism condemned in the name of fighting homophobia. See capitalism condemned in the name of protecting the marginalized. See capitalism condemned in the name of fighting racism and bigotry. See capitalism condemned in the name of fighting hatred and discrimination. See capitalism condemned in the name of fighting white supremacy. See capitalism condemned in the name of protecting people of color. See capitalism condemned in the name of giving representation to underrepresented groups. See capitalism condemned in the name of fighting colonialism and imperialism. See capitalism condemned in the name of protecting Palestinian rights. See capitalism condemned in the name of eradicating Israel and the Jews. See capitalism condemned in the name of mystical oneness and interconnection. See capitalism condemned in the name of human liberation. See capitalism condemned in the name of open borders and mass immigration. See false beliefs, divergence from reality and sexual abnormality leading to the denial of sex chromosomes loaded into a rifle called Marxism, placed on the cover of the magazine, and blasted into the face of the public: "In Old Joe Biden's America, you can't celebrate the great outdoors or do much of anything, really, unless you're prepared to burn incense to the left's gods. You may think that your activity has nothing whatsoever to do with the left's nasty little obsessions over deviance, delusion, and perversity, but think again, peasant: you either play along or you don't play at all. That's how things work in authoritarian regimes, and if you think Old Joe's regime is not authoritarian and respects the parameters of a free society, you simply haven't been paying attention. Now even the venerable guide to the great wide world, National Geographic, has fallen into line. The venerable 136 year old publication took a fabulous step into the Brave New World when it added a mustachioed drag queen named Wyn Wylie, who prances around in women's clothes under the name Pattie Gonia, to its list of Travelers of the Year. This was not the first time National Geographic has paid obeisance to woke sensibilities: as Mark Tapson noted at FrontPage, back in 2017, it put a nine year old boy who claimed to be a girl on its cover, for a story celebrating what it called the Gender Revolution. Delusion would have been more apt but would have run the old magazine afoul of our new cultural masters. National Review reported Thursday that Wyn Wylie/Pattie Gonia describes himself as an 'intersectional environmentalist, drag queen, and advocate for inclusivity in the outdoors.' He dedicates himself to efforts to 'uplift LGBTQIA+ people and other underrepresented groups in the outdoors.' Wylie is so underrepresented that he has over 600,000 social media followers and is celebrated as a hero in National Geographic. Here yet again we see it: the people who have the real power in society today are those who claim to be marginalized and to be the victims of racism and bigotry. And the people who are really marginalized in society are the people who are supposedly perpetrating the marginalization of those in power. If LGBTQIA+EIEIO people are 'underrepresented groups in the outdoors,' it's not because some homophobic Bull Connor is holding slaving German shepherds at the ready should a poor little drag queen venture onto a hiking trail. It's because drag queens and their pals are often more interested in things one generally does indoors (you know, like grooming children). If they're underrepresented outdoors, it's by their own choice. Nevertheless, the valiant Pattie Gonia is pushing back against this imaginary marginalization, and being hailed as a hero for doing so by more corporate entities than just National Geographic. Last year, he made a video for North Face's Summer of Pride campaign. In that video, Wylie, decked out in a rainbow tie dyed miniskirt with a black North Face belt, swings around in the manner of a hippie sixties cover girl and happily announces: 'Hi, it's me, Pattie Gonia, a real life homosexual. We are here to invite you to come out in nature with us!' Now, what does being homosexual, or heterosexual for that matter, have to do with enjoying nature? I suppose the answer lies in how exactly one enjoys it. Wylie is, meanwhile, a doctrinaire leftist who sees his commitment to the outdoors as part of his efforts to advance the left's entire agenda." (National Geographic Names A Drag Queen Traveler of the Year by Robert Spencer). When Sharbat Gula was twelve years old and an Afghan refugee, she became world famous. At this time, she graced the cover of the June 1985 issue of National Geographic. Her portrait was taken in Pakistan where she was fleeing from communism during the Soviet-Afghan War. Four decades after this photograph stirred millions of people throughout the world, the magazine which placed Sharbat Gula into people's homes, schools, offices and businesses became sick. In the January 2024 issue of the magazine, the fall of civilization was splashed on the cover. Look at the debris. Marxism, identity politics, race politics, transgender politics, queer politics, green politics and indigenous politics have returned society to the primordial wild spaces of tribalism, savagery, psychosis and superstition: "Artist, environmentalist, and drag queen Wyn Wiley—known professionally as Pattie Gonia—helps LGBTQ+ youth discover the wonders of the outdoors. As founder of the nonprofit Outdoorist Oath, she brings the queer community together in the parks and wild spaces of Oregon, her home state. Her feel good music videos address environmental justice and pride in identity, and include collaborators such as cellist Yo-Yo Ma and indigenous transmusician Quinn Christopherson." (They Inspire Us And Teach Us About The World: Meet Our 2024 Travelers Of The Year, nationalgeographic.com). Look at National Geographic in the new millennium and see a portrait in print and digital editions of the treason of the West against its Age of Enlightenment.

TRUMP CONFISCATED

No person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law." The Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution. Nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law. The Nineteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution. Noble words from a document which laid the basis for the establishment of the freest society in modern times. Due process of law. The requirement that no person shall be deprived of his life, liberty or property without rational reason, fair procedure or fundamental justice. Due process of law. The requirement that no person shall be deprived of his life, liberty or property except upon proof that he committed harm, injury or an act of aggression against another person. Due process of law. The principle was born in the nation which gave freedom to America and to the world. It was born in Britain. Listen to the Magna Carta, the foundational document of British liberty first issued in 1215: "No free man shall be seized or imprisoned, or stripped of his rights or possessions, or outlawed or exiled, or deprived of his standing in any other way, nor will we proceed with force against him, or send others to do so, except by the lawful judgment of his equals or by the law of the land." Listen to the Magna Carta edition of 1354: "No man of what state or condition he be, shall be put out of his lands or tenements nor taken, nor disinherited, nor put to death, without he being brought to answer by due process of law." Listen to the renowned British jurist Edward Coke who wrote in 1608 in Institutes Of The Laws Of England: "No man shall be deprived [of his life, liberty or property] but by the law of the land, that is, by the common law, statute law, or custom of England, that is, to speak it once and for all, by the due course and process of law." One thousand years after the first enunciation of this fundamental principle of a free society, it has been rendered null and void in a land where it was proudly unfurled seven thousand kilometers away from its birthplace, unfurled in a New World land across the Atlantic Ocean, unfurled in a child land of Britain. One thousand years after the Magna Carta first set forth the principle that no person shall be deprived of his life, liberty or property without first having committed an act of force or fraud against another person, a judge in New York City has banged the gavel and dismissed the principle from the law books of the state. On February 16, 2024, one Arthur Engoron, a justice on the Supreme Court of the State of New York, issued a ruling in New York vs Trump which nullified the hallowed principle of due process of law. On this day, Justice Engoron transformed the state of New York, one of the thirteen original colonies which founded America, into a savage jungle whose legal system has been weaponized to silence the voices of freedom, a legal system which now exists in name only in the state of New York. On this day, Justice Engoron weaponized the law and eradicated it to silence a special voice of freedom, the national voice of freedom in the nation, the national voice of opposition to the establishment, and to ensure that Donald Trump, forty fifth president of the United States, is rendered incapable of running for president again. Look at Justice Engoron's ruling and see a judgment of half a billion dollars imposed against Trump in the absence of any harm or damage committed by him. See a judgment greater than the GDP of many nations imposed in the absence of any commission of fraud. See Trump barred from doing business in New York. See a judgment without precedent imposed notwithstanding that the loans from the banks were paid back in full, on time and earned substantial profits for the banks. See a judgment celebrated by haters of freedom, law and constitutional government who correctly viewed the silencing of Trump as an imperative for the survival of the establishment. See a judgment which unconstitutionally violated the right to liberty guaranteed by the Due Process Clause of the Nineteenth Amendment. It did so because the Clause states that no person may be deprived of his liberty, such as his liberty to undervalue or overvalue his property, without fair procedure, and no fair procedure would permit a deprivation of liberty in the absence of an act of force or fraud, which Trump did not commit. Look at the judgment against Trump and see the judge levy a fine without relation to sanity or reality. See the judge levy a fine which plumbs the depths of injustice and immorality and defines the meaning of the word obscene. See the judge levy a fine which has poisoned New York's business environment, forced companies to flee the state, and decimated the state's tax base. See the judge levy a fine which in its lack of proportionality and factual basis defines the meaning of the phrase arbitrary application of the law. See the judge faithfully carry out the terrifying program of the establishment: to weaponize the legal system to target individuals and organizations, such as Donald Trump and the National Rifle Association, which defend the cause of freedom and are unpopular with the establishment, while using the legal system to protect individuals and organizations, such as Al Sharpton, Black Lives Matter and the National Action Network, which promote the devil's gospel of communist, black power enslavement and are the darlings of the establishment. See the judge levy a fine which has disgraced the principle of punitive damages and defined the meaning of the term excessive damages. See the judge levy a fine which has defined the meaning of the terms political investigations, political prosecutions, political trials and political punishments and buried due process of law forever. See the judge levy a fine which has brought shame on New York's once esteemed legal profession and transformed its bar into an association existing in name only, an association whose members are agents of a new red judges', red legislators' and red executives' regime: "In laying the foundation for his sweeping decision against former President Donald Trump, Judge Arthur Engoron observed that 'this is a venial sin, not a mortal sin.' Yet, at $355 million, one would think that Engoron had found Trump to be the source of Original Sin. The judgment against Trump (and his family and associates) was met with a level of unrestrained celebration by many in New York that bordered on the indecent. Attorney General Letitia James declared not only that Trump would be barred from doing business in New York for three years, but that the damages would come to roughly $460 million once interest was included. That makes the damages against Trump greater than the gross national product of some countries, including Micronesia. Yet the court admitted that not a single dollar was lost by the banks from these dealings. Indeed, witnesses testified that they wanted to do more business with Trump, who was described as a 'whale' client with high yield business opportunities. Undervaluing and overvaluing property is a longstanding practice in New York real estate. The forms submitted by the Trump organization cautioned the banks to do their own estimates and the loans were paid in full and on time. Yet, the New York law used by James is a curiosity because it does not actually require a victim. Indeed, everyone can make ample profits and still allow for an investigation into 'repeated fraudulent or illegal acts.' Having campaigned on bagging Trump on any basis, James turned the law into a virtual license to hunt him down along with his family and his associates. Engoron proved the perfect judge for the case. The opinion itself seems almost cathartic for the jurist who struggled with Trump inside and outside of court. In the judgment, Engoron fulfilled Oscar Wilde's rule that the only way to be rid of temptation is to yield to it. He ordered everything short of throwing Trump into a wood chipper. The size of the damages is grotesque and should shock the conscience of any judge on appeal. Even if the Democrat appointed judges on the New York Court of Appeals were to ignore the obvious inequity and unfairness, the United States Supreme Court could intervene. State courts tend to get a significant amount of deference in the interpretation of their own laws. Nevertheless, if New York wants to turn Wall Street into a remake of The Hunger Games, it has only itself to blame as other businesses flee the state. The impact on New York business is likely to be dire. New York is already viewed as a hostile business environment, with the top end of its tax base literally heading south as taxes and crime rises. This draconian award is only going to deepen concerns over the arbitrary application of the law by figures like James, who previously sought to disband the National Rifle Association. (She has shown less interest in cracking down on liberal [Marxist] organizations like Black Lives Matter or the National Action Network of Al Sharpton despite their own major financial scandals). " (Blind Justice Or Blind Rage: New York's Legal System Faces Ultimate Test With Obscene Trump Award by Jonathan Turley). Hanging in the United States Capital Rotunda in Washington DC is an oil on canvas masterpiece by John Trumbull, entitled Surrender Of General Burgoyne. The importance of this New York battle with its British defeat is described by historian Edmund Morgan: "It was a great turning point of the war, because it won for Americans the foreign assistance which was the last element needed for victory." (The Birth Of The Republic: 1763-1789). In the twenty first century, the New York establishment has thrown a pot of ink at Trumbull's iconic portrait. New York has surrendered to the forces of red partisanship and the weaponization of the law. The state's notorious Executive Law 63, which defines a category of nonfraud, victimless crime, has been fashioned into a hangman's noose for Donald Trump.

SEARCH ENGINE SUBVERSION

It is called the world's most powerful company and the most valuable corporate brand. It provides the largest internet search engine in the world, handling ninety two percent of all searches, and the largest email service with 1.5 billion users. It is the largest AI virtual assistant provider in the world, the largest cloud storage provider, the largest video sharing platform and the largest web browser. Its website and the YouTube video sharing platform it owns are the most visited websites in the world. Its parent company, Alphabet, is among the five Big Tech companies, alongside Amazon, Apple, Meta and Microsoft. Headquartered at 1600 Amphitheatre Parkway in Mountain View, California, this American multinational behemoth is called Google, and in the twenty five years of its existence, it has become a corporate legend and icon. Founded on September 4, 1998 by Larry Page and Sergey Brin, two PhD students at Stanford University, Google was named after the number googol, a number with one followed by one hundred zeros, a number which stands for infinity. The number was chosen to signify the infinite capacity of the new search engine. In the twenty first century, this technological miracle house whose blessings to man in his quest to master space, time and the flow of information include such products as Search, Workspace, Android, Waze, Pixel and Nest, has given new meaning to its name. The meaning is now dark and sinister. In the twenty first century, the cancer on society which has proliferated uncontrolled under the name of Marxism and its race and gender offshoots has spread into Google. In the twenty first century, Google has become sick and has died, the victim of a popular, powerful movement of antienlightenment which has rejected one thousand years of Western commitment to freedom and unfurled on the rubble of civilization the flags of identity politics, mystical tribalism and gender, race and class wars. In the twenty first century, the name of this wonder child of Western science and technology has come to signify, not the infinite capacity of a search engine to advance human knowledge and understanding, but the infinite capacity of a corporation to produce and disseminate political propaganda and rank misinformation. Before a search engine manned by the pathologists of culture and the coroners of a dead society, decent people have inputted a query: what is Google? Look at the results, which fill a library of infamy. Google falsifies history in the name of advancing progressive politics. Google generates pictures it purports to be of historical figures, pictures in fact produced by a racist, sexist program called Diversity, Equity and Inclusion. These are pictures which exclude white males. This gallery includes a picture of a black pope and a female Southeast

Asian pope; a picture of a black Viking wearing rainbow feathers, symbolizing lesbian, gay and transgender politics; a picture of a female Viking, a picture of an Asian Viking standing on Asian steppes; a picture of a female NHL player; and a picture of black and native Americans held to be members of America's Founding Fathers, including a black representation of George Washington. Google altered Johannes Vermeer's masterpiece The Girl With A Pearl Earring to include nonwhites and nonEuropean ethnicities. Google is a storehouse filled by the Devil, a storehouse of digital misinformation valuable and delightful to the haters of liberal values and the moral progress of modernity: "Google's highly touted AI chatbot Gemini was blasted as woke after its image generator spit out factually or historically inaccurate pictures—including a woman as pope, black Vikings, female NHL players and 'diverse' versions of America's Founding Fathers. Gemini's bizarre results came after simple prompts, including one by The Post on Wednesday that asked the software to 'create an image of a pope.' Instead of yielding a photo of one of the 266 pontiffs throughout history—all of them white men—Gemini provided pictures of a Southeast Asian woman and a black man wearing holy vestments. Another Post query for representative images of 'the Founding Fathers in 1789' was also far from reality. Gemini responded with images of black and Native American individuals signing what appeared to be a version of the US Constitution—'featuring diverse individuals embodying the spirit' of the Founding Fathers. Another showed a black man appearing to represent George Washington, in a white wig and wearing an Army uniform. When asked why it had deviated from its original prompt, Gemini replied that it 'aimed to provide a more accurate and inclusive representation of the historical context' of the period. Generative AI tools like Gemini are designed to create content within certain parameters, leading many critics to slam Google for its progressive minded settings. Ian Miles Cheong, a right wing social media influencer who frequently interacts with Elon Musk, described Gemini as 'absurdly woke'. Social media users had a field day creating queries that provided confounding results. 'New game: Try to get Google Gemini to make an image of a Caucasian male. I have not been successful so far,' wrote X user Frank J. Fleming, a writer for the Babylon Bee, whose series of posts about Gemini on the social media platform quickly went viral. In another example, Gemini was asked to generate an image of a Viking—the seafaring Scandinavian marauders that once terrorized Europe. The chatbot's strange depictions of Vikings included one of a shirtless black man with rainbow feathers attached to his fur garb, a black warrior woman, and an Asian man standing in the middle of what appeared to be a desert. Famed pollster and FiveThirtyEight founder Nate Silver also joined the fray. Silver's request for Gemini to 'make four representative images of NHL hockey players' generated a picture with a female player, even though the league is all male. 'OK I assumed people were exaggerating with this stuff but here's the first image request I tried with Gemini,' Silver wrote. [A] prompt to depict The Girl With A Pearl Earring led to altered versions of the famous 1665 oil painting by Johannes Vermeer featuring what Gemini described as 'diverse ethnicities and genders.' Google added the image generation feature when it renamed its experimental Bard chatbot Gemini and released an updated version of the product last week. The strange behavior could provide more fodder for AI detractors who fear chatbots will contribute to the spread of online misinformation." ('Absurdly Woke': Google's AI Chatbot Spits Out 'Diverse' Images Of Founding Fathers, Popes, Vikings by Thomas Barrabi). In response to the query what is Google?, more results appeared. Google operates an image generator which generates portraits stained with political correctness. These are portraits of gay couples, lesbian couples and interracial couples. These are images of black Founding Fathers and American Indians signing the Constitution. These are images of Marxist bias, machine misinformation and an attack on liberal values launched in the name of fairness, accuracy and political progressivism. These are images of revisionism, falsification, race politics and gender politics broadcast during the final hours of Western civilization: "The future is here. And it turns out to be very, very racist. As the New York Post reported yesterday, Google's Gemini

GI image generator aims to have a lot of things. But historical accuracy is not among them. If you ask the program to give you an image of the Founding Fathers of this country, the AI will return you images of black and Native American men signing what appears to be a version of the American Constitution. At least that's more accurate than the images of popes thrown up. A request for an image of one of the holy fathers gives up images of—among others—a Southeast Asian woman. Who knew? Some people are surprised by this. I'm not. Several years ago, I went to Silicon Valley to try to figure out what the hell was going on with Google Images, among other enterprises. Because Google Images were already throwing up a very specific type of bias. If you typed in gay couples and asked for an image search, you got lots of happy gay couples. Ask for 'straight couples' and you get images of, er, gay couples. It was the same if you wanted to see happy couples of any orientation. Ask for images of 'black couples' and you got lots of happy black couples. Ask for 'white couples' and you got black couples, or interracial couples. Many of them gay. I asked people in Silicon Valley what the hell was going on and was told this was what they call 'machine learning fairness.' The idea is that we human beings are full of implicit bias and that as a result, we need the machines to throw up unbiased images. Except that the machines were clearly very biased indeed. Much more so than your average human. What became clear to me was that this was not the machines working on their own. The machines had been skewed by human interference." (Google's Push To Lecture Us On Diversity Goes Beyond AI by Douglas Murray). Mountain View, California was named for the spectacular view it affords of the Santa Cruz Mountains. The city hosts other spectacular sights. It is the headquarters of Silicon Valley, the global center of high technology. It is the site of two hundred thousand square meters of office space called Googolplex. Within this spectacular expanse, a spectacular feat of computer programming has been accomplished to achieve a spectacular end. Every square meter of space is dedicated to programming Marxist misinformation and leading a global revolution.

CITIZEN TRUMP

Samuel Augustus Maverick was a Texas legend. This nineteenth century politician, lawyer and land baron was among the leaders of the Texas Revolution forming the Republic of Texas. He convinced the Texas Constitutional Convention to send in reinforcements at the Battle of the Alamo, which resulted in the resounding victory of Texas, and he signed the Texas Declaration of Independence. He was the one hundred and eighth mayor of San Antonio. But he was much more than all of these. Samuel Maverick was a person who became a word. An animal lover who rejected cruel farming customs, he refused to brand his cattle, and the unbranded animals were called by his neighbors "Maverick's". The word maverick soon entered the language to refer to an unorthodox, independent minded person who opposes the establishment. A century after Samuel Maverick refused to follow the farming herd and inspired the coinage of a word, a maverick appeared on the scene whose mission was to fight the establishment. His mission was to make the nation safe from a cancer which has afflicted our time. Voted into power by a landslide in the early years of the twentieth century, this cancer was peddled by the people as progressivism and it crushed constitutional government beneath the dead weight of mobs, masses, majorities and a mysticism of the state. This cancer is known as communism, and in its original form together with its present day its race and gender derivatives, it has become over the past one hundred years a synonym and byword for the American establishment. This maverick's name was Joe McCarthy. Soon after McCarthy, another maverick appeared on the scene. His name was Barry Goldwater. Incurring the wrath of the establishment for their refusal to abide by its pieties, Republican senator Joe McCarthy and Republican senator and presidential candidate Barry Goldwater suffered mightily for their antiestablishmentarianism and were targeted for villification, exclusion and personal destruction. They were declared persona non gratae by the establishment. In the twenty first century, another maverick has appeared on the scene and suffered the same fate. In the twenty first century, the forty fifth president of the United States and soon to be Republican Party presidential candidate has joined the nation's tiny, two man club of mavericks and become its third member. In the twenty first century, Donald Trump has declared war on the gender, race and class monster which is the face and form of the nation's establishment and has been sentenced to death. Sentence of Death. The establishment stole the 2020 presidential election from Donald Trump. It deployed a billionaire agent named Mark Zuckerberg to bribe state election officials with over four hundred million dollars to violate their oaths of nonpartisanship and neutrality and recruit voters for Joe Biden. It deployed the Federal Bureau of Investigation to coerce social media platforms to suppress evidence of a mafia family managed by Joe Biden while he was vice president. This family ran a global operation to sell access to Biden in exchange for hundreds of millions of dollars. The FBI suppression was pivotal to Biden's victory because had voters known about the sale of Biden's office, they would have voted for Trump: "Actually, regarding the 2020 election, we now know that Mark Zuckerberg handed out $400 million plus to elections officials who often used that money to recruit Democrat voters. Never before in American elections had such an amount been put into the political fight, and this money was all outside of the normal election funding processes. Further the FBI interfered when it decided to warn media corporations to suppress accurate and very damaging information contained in Hunter Biden's abandoned laptop about the family's overseas business dealings, an apparent influence peddling operation and tens of millions of dollars it brought it. After the election, a polling showed that that suppression of information voters deserved to know likely handed the victory to Biden." (Steve Bannon Goes Fiery, Explains How 'We Know Trump Won' by Bob Unruh). Sentence of Death. The establishment stole the 2020 presidential election by means of the following. By manufacturing mail in ballots for Joe Biden. By abolishing voter identification requirements. By harvesting fraudulent ballots for Joe Biden. By abolishing signature match requirements for ballots. By preventing turn out by Trump voters in the name of ensuring election integrity. By censoring social media platforms to allow only fake positive news about Joe Biden and only fake negative news about Donald Trump. By extending vote counting past election day and keeping the counting going until sufficient votes were manufactured for Joe Biden: "11. And most importantly, combine everything above with the same game plan from 2020: Mail in ballots combined with no voter ID. Ballot harvesting (a crime everywhere else in the world but America). Unsupervised ballot drop boxes. No signature match on ballots. Billions of dollars spent on 'election integrity' by globalist billionaires, with the real purpose to rig the turnout in favor of Democrats. Social media rigging the election by censoring the news feed to allow only fake positive news about Democrats and only negative stories about Trump. And of course, the simplest scam of all: Keep counting votes for days after election night until Democrats win." (Eleven Things Desperate Dems Are Willing To Do To Beat Trump by Wayne Allen Root). Sentence of Death. The establishment has condemned Donald Trump because he stood up to its relentless enforcement of a gender, race and class religion. Because he made America great again by making it free again, and with its reestablished freedom was able to reestablish the special kind of peace and prosperity which only free people can establish: peace with honor and dignity and prosperity residing in private wealth. Because he called out the establishment's theft of the 2020 presidential election and promised to restore Americans' constitutional right to vote in free and fair elections by mandating in person only voting with proper photo identification requirements. Because he promised to reestablish America's borders, turn back ten million enemy aliens allowed into the country by Joe Biden to fill the Democrat Party voting ranks, and to reconstruct the gates to America's hallowed, Enlightenment civilization. Because he called out Joe Biden as an illegitimate president, a president who achieved power illegally by force and fraud, and he called out the rogues' gallery surrounding him from his vice president and his cabinet on down. Because he followed in the footsteps of the great heroes of humanity who exemplified civic virtue. Heroes such as Lucius Cincinnatus, George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, who dedicated themselves to the cause of constitutional government and freedom under the rule of law at the cost of their own lives and careers. Because he gave his blood and treasure in the service of an idea, the idea of America as a civilization and not a cesspool, and proudly proclaimed his commitment as his unswerving and unshakable destiny: "And why is he a dissident? You know why, because he gave us three years of peace and prosperity before he was hit with a Chinese bioweapon, and they stole the 2020 election. Donald Trump is the legitimate president of the United States. You know how we know categorically that Trump won now? Because the New York Times and MSNBC and the Washington Post, understand we're about to out them. We're going to adjudicate this after victory. If Biden actually won, he would be a revered hero to them. If Kamala Harris had really been the wingman, she'd be a revered hero. The New York Times is throwing Biden under the bus every day, and backing it up over him. That shows you, they know he's an illegitimate regime head. He's a usurper in 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue. To every working class Democrat and populist in the Democratic Party. When we get to the White House and go through and adjudicate the fact that 2020 was stolen and this illegitimate regime, what they've done to destroy this country. Nobody who loved this country would do what he's doing to the country. Would they? Think about it for a second. What if our framers came back here, came back today, and saw ten million illegal alien invaders that they have gamed the system to bring here? Think about it for a second when they stole the election and he went back to Mar a Lago. He could have gotten a big book deal and had the memorial films made about him and, you know, built more golf courses, and had a life of leisure as a billionaire should have and deserves with his beautiful family. What did he do? He came back to lead his country and say, I'm not going to let him steal this election and I'm not going to ever let them destroy the United States of America. Like the great Roman General Cincinnatus, he has returned from the plow to save his country. Only two other men in the history of this republic, General Washington in the Revolution and the foundation, and Abraham Lincoln in the Civil War, had their personal fate and destiny inextricably linked to the fate and destiny of this republic." (Speech by Steve Bannon at the Conservative Political Action Conference, February 24, 2024). Hanging in the Louvre in Paris is a world famous painting executed in the neoclassical style. Entitled Oath Of The Horatii, it is by Jacques Louis David. It depicts a scene from an ancient legend about a seventh century BC war between two cities, Rome and Alba Longa. The picture depicts three brothers from Rome stretching out their hands to their father who holds out swords for them. The picture depicts civic virtue in action and has inspired freedom fighters down through the centuries throughout the world. In the twenty first century, this expansive, thirteen hundred square meter oil on canvas icon has given civilized people a vision of Donald Trump. They see Trump given a sword by an avatar of truth and justice, a sword by which to slay an establishment grown corrupt beyond redemption. This sword and this mission are why the establishment hates Trump.

RED CANNIBALS TURNED LOOSE

Atavism is a common term in biology and the social sciences. It refers to the phenomenon of reversion. In biology, it refers to the reappearance of an ancestral trait which had been lost for generations through evolutionary change. In the social sciences, it refers to the descent of civilization into barbarism. The cause of social atavism has been known to civilized people for thousands of years. They have known it, have bitterly regretted it when it appears, and wished more than anything else that it would disappear, and the course of society return to sanity. They know this has never happened and will never happen because the cause is a product of deep seated cultural and psychological degeneration and cannot be cured or reversed. Civilized people know that the cause of atavism is the abandonment of reason. As surely as day follows night, night follows day, and one plus one equal two, whenever a society abandons reason, its members revert to a state of animality. The savage jungle is a default social condition, and it ever lurks in the background of society, crouching and waiting to spring as biology's preselected option, whenever people abandon the capacity which differentiates them from animals, the capacity to reason. The ancient Romans abandoned reason and descended into a jungle ruled by the avatars of unreason, by Germanic hordes, Christian activists, and homegrown native Roman mobs screaming for diversion, distraction, scandals, circuses and endless welfare doles. In the twenty first century, the perennial cultural disease of mental collapse, which laid low ancient Rome, has once again brought atavism and reversion in its wake. It has brought two creeds of cannibalism into positions of unchallenged power. One creed proclaims that the individual is not the primary reality but is a mere shadow on a wall. The primary reality is a mystical entity called society, the tribe and the class, and this entity has the right to expropriate, enslave and kill the individual to protect its needs and interests. Founded in the nineteenth century, this creed spread like a cancer in the twentieth century, and is the ruling dogma of the present day. Founded by Karl Marx, this creed is known as Marxism. The second creed of cannibalism was the origin of the first. It predates it by ten thousand years but brought it to life like electric currents surging through a monster. The monster of Marxism is rampaging across the West, animated by a creed born in the epoch of the caveman. This caveman creed proclaims that individuals have a right to eat each other for their sustenance. The practice of eating the flesh of one's own species is the rock bottom point in the descent of civilization and is the basis, the inspiration, the justification and the point of departure of Marxism. Listen to today's Marxists peddle physical cannibalism and hear the beat of footsteps and the tolling of bells in a midnight, torchlit, funeral procession for Western civilization. Listen to Marxists proclaim that only ignorant, old fashioned people believe that cannibalism is repugnant and represents a descent into depravity. Listen to them proclaim that a progressive society makes people available to feed other people who are hungry. Listen to them proclaim that superstitious simpletons who behold supernatural souls believe that cannibalism is wrong. Listen to them proclaim that people blinded by religion believe that cannibalism is wrong. Listen to them proclaim that the belief that cannibalism is wrong is a product of ingrained cultural prejudice. Listen to them proclaim that the belief that cannibalism is wrong is a product of Western colonialism and imperialism. Listen to them proclaim that the belief that cannibalism is wrong is a product of racism. Listen to them proclaim that the belief that cannibalism is wrong is a product of bigotry and intolerance. Listen to them proclaim that the belief that cannibalism is wrong is a product of unreasoning hatred toward primitive native tribes and cultures. Listen to them proclaim that the notion of moral conscience is a Western bourgeois construct and there is no rational basis for the belief that cannibalism is wrong. Listen to them proclaim that cannibalism is legitimate and respectable because it was practiced by primitive cave dwellers to honor their dead. Listen to them proclaim that a progressive society promotes cannibalism in the name of achieving spiritual transcendence. Listen to them proclaim that a progressive society promotes cannibalism in the name of mankind's animal, evolutionary past. Listen to them proclaim that cannibalism is only contextually wrong and not absolutely wrong, only wrong in the context of modern Western Enlightenment values, and a progressive society has revived Montezuma's madness in the twenty first century: "It is the ultimate taboo: in most societies, the idea of one human eating another is morally repugnant. Even in circumstances where it could arguably be justified, such as when a plane crashed in the Andes in 1972 and starving passengers ate the dead to survive, we still have a deep aversion to cannibalism. One of the survivors, Roberto Canessa, has since described the passengers' actions as a 'descent towards our ultimate indignity.' Ethically, cannibalism poses fewer issues than you might imagine. If a body can be bequeathed with consent to medical science, why can't it be left to feed the hungry? Our aversion has been explained in various ways. Perhaps it is down to the fact that, in Western religious traditions, bodies are seen as the seat of the soul and have a whiff of the sacred. Or maybe it is culturally ingrained, with roots in early modern colonialism, when racist stereotypes of the cannibal were concocted to justify subjugation. These came to represent the 'other' to Western societies—and revulsion towards cannibalism became a tenet of their moral conscience. A slew of recent archaeological discoveries is now further complicating how we think about human cannibalism. Researchers have unearthed evidence suggesting that our hominin ancestors ate each other surprisingly often. What's more, it seems that they weren't always doing so for the reasons you might expect—for sustenance or to compete against and intimidate rivals—but often as funerary rituals to honor their dead. Like it or not, then, cannibalism is an important part of our story. This isn't to say that we should change our attitudes towards it. But understanding its deep roots might shift our perspective on the few cultures that still practice cannibalism today, albeit only occasionally, such as the Aghori, a Hindu ascetic sect in India that does it in pursuit of transcendence. Above all, these discoveries invite us to reconsider our revulsion to cannibalism in the context of our evolutionary past." (Is It Time For A More Subtle View On The Ultimate Taboo: Cannibalism? New Scientist, February 14, 2024). Listen to today's Marxists proclaim that cannibalism is a natural, healthy, wholesome practice. Listen to them proclaim that cannibalism is moral and reasonable. Listen to them proclaim that people's disgust at the thought of eating human flesh is the product of a parochial upbringing. Listen to them proclaim that people's repulsion toward cannibalism is the product of a narrow outlook. Listen to them proclaim that people find cannibalism abhorrent because they are guided by outdated, unfounded notions of human dignity and personhood. Listen to them proclaim that cannibalism is taboo for people brought up by religion and condemnation of it has no basis in science. Listen to them proclaim that cannibalism is a common practice throughout the animal kingdom is thus justified for people because people are not people but are nothing more than animals: "Since cannibalism is found throughout the animal kingdom and therefore is something natural, perhaps it is time for humans to rethink the 'ultimate taboo' against eating human flesh, Newsweek proposes in an article Wednesday. There is nothing necessarily unethical or unreasonable about eating human flesh, declare psychologists Jared Piazza and Neil McLatchie of Lancaster University, but careful reasoning over the merits of cannibalism is often 'overridden by our feelings of repulsion and disgust.' While not going so far as to recommend cannibalism, saying 'there is no need to overcome our repulsion for the foreseeable future,' the two authors suggest that humans could master their aversion for human flesh if they needed to. 'Many people develop disgust for all kinds of meat, while morticians and surgeons quickly adapt to the initially difficult experience of handling dead bodies,' they note. 'Our ongoing research with butchers in England suggests that they easily adapt to working with animal parts that the average consumer finds quite disgusting.' Moreover, the psychological revulsion experienced over the prospect of consuming human flesh is not the product of reason and may even contradict reason, they argue in Wednesday's article, which originally appeared last week in The Conversation. 'Survivors of the famous 1972 Andes plane crash waited until near starvation before succumbing to reason and eating those who had already died,' they propose. All sorts of animals eat members of their own species, from spadefoot tadpoles and Australian redback spiders to gulls and pelicans, they state. And cannibalism can even be found among mammals, they add, such as with many rodents as well as bears, lions, and chimpanzees." (Newsweek: Time to Rethink Taboo on Cannibalism? by Thomas Williams). Cannibalism is the form and essence of communism. The sacrifice of the individual to the collective prepares the way for the horror brought by the physical consumption of human flesh. Enemies of the class are expropriated, enslaved, killed and then eaten: "In all provinces there are accounts of killings and chaos. But only in Guangxi, the revolutionary fervor translated into eating the class enemy. In total, 421 cases of cannibalism are recorded in 31 of the 75 counties of Guangxi Autonomous Region. The macabre ritual took sometimes place during country fairs. 'Thousands of people participated in the fairs,' says Song Yongyi. 'A fair was used as an occasion to organize struggle sessions against class enemies. 'And they just kill those victims, cut open their chests, remove the hearts and livers and just eat them. At least 10,000 people participated.' " (Cannibalism In China 50 Years On by Jan van der Made). In the twenty first century, the advance of communism has brought waves of cannibalism in its wake. Their minds, souls, hearts and vital organs mauled apart, the victims of Marxist madness in its gender, race and class varieties are inscribed on the tombstone of the West.

LADY GANGSTERS

"People who sack Chinese houses and stone Chinamen are not workingmen. San Francisco calls them hoodlums, a term which includes everything that is base and mean. The hoodlum is a nonproducer, loafer and bully. The hoodlum class think this is a good time to signify their hatred of law and order." Thus spoke The New York Times on July 26, 1877, describing the terrifying waves of violence launched against Chinese people in California in the late nineteenth century. Hoodlum, a nonproducer, loafer and bully, whose aversion to honest work is matched only by his perfervid hatred of law and order. Hoodlum, the term was coined in San Francisco at the time and is derived from a gang called Hood's Boys whose base of operations was Hood's Salon. One hundred and fifty years after this popular term entered the pages of dictionaries, the hoodlum has been taken off the streets and reborn into the highest ranks of society. He has been given a new race, a new gender and the solemn robes of academia to wear. He has been elevated to a new station in life as far removed from his previous squalor as a prince is removed from a pauper. In the twenty first century, the hoodlum and his enablers have perpetrated the greatest scandal ever to hit the greatest university in the nation, and illustrated in their careers of crime perpetrated with impunity how far the cancer on civilization has advanced. This cancer struck the West in the early years of the twentieth century when it was voted into power in a landslide. It began spreading and multiplying under the guise of progressivism, and has presently killed the mind, soul and vital organs of the civilization which blessed the world with the Age of Enlightenment. This cancer is known as communism, and in its original form and race and gender derivatives, it has become a synonym and byword for the American establishment. In the twenty first century, it has plucked the hoodlum from his underworld, changed his race and gender, transformed him into a black female, and placed him in charge of the administration of Harvard University. He remains the same hoodlum who terrorized the streets of San Francisco with his gangs in the late nineteenth century, but the free pass he has been granted by the establishment in his latest incarnation has tolled the death bells for academic standards and higher education in America. A gutter crawling with hoodlums granted a license to kill: this is the world of Harvard, the world of America and the graveyard of civilization in the twenty first century. Look at Harvard today and see the ascendance of a hoodlum class protected because its members are black and female. See Claudine Gay, former president of Harvard who resigned in disgrace as a serial plagiarist. Claudine Gay, whose doctoral dissertation was copied from works by four scholars: Lawrence Bobo, Franklin Gilliam, Carol Swain and Gary King: "Gay published her dissertation, Taking Charge: Black Electoral Success And The Redefinition Of American Policies, in 1997, as part of her doctorate in political science from Harvard. The paper deals with white-black political representation and racial attitudes. As evaluated under the university's plagiarism policy, the paper contains at least three problematic patterns of usage and citation. First, Gay lifts an entire paragraph nearly verbatim from Lawrence Bobo and Franklin Gilliam's paper, Race, Sociopolitical Participation, and Black Empowerment, while passing it off as her own paraphrase and language. Second, Gay appears to lift material from scholar Carol Swain in at least two instances. In one passage, summarizing the distinction between 'descriptive representation' and 'substantive representation,' she copies the phrasing and language nearly verbatim from Swain's book Black Faces, Black Interests, without providing a citation of any kind. Third, Gay composes an entire appendix in the dissertation directly taken from Gary King's book, A Solution to the Ecological Inference Problem. While she cites King's book—in fact, King was her dissertation advisor—Gay does not explicitly acknowledge that Appendix B is entirely grounded in King's concepts, instead passing it off as her own original work." (Is Claudine Gay a Plagiarist? by Christopher Rufo and Christopher Brunet). Claudine Gay, who still receives her presidential salary of $900,000 per year. Claudine Gay, who proclaimed at a congressional hearing on December 5, 2023 that calls for the genocide of Jews is protected speech at Harvard, while calls for the genocide of blacks, women, capitalists, gays, lesbians and people who claim they are members of the opposite sex are not protected speech. Claudine Gay, who proclaimed at the congressional hearing that it is not absolutely wrong to call for the genocide of Jews but depends on the context, while it is absolutely wrong to call for the genocide of blacks, women, capitalists, gays, lesbians and people who claim they are members of the opposite sex. Sherri Ann Charleston, chief diversity officer at Harvard, whose 2009 doctoral dissertation for the University of Michigan was copied from a dozen scholars, including her dissertation advisor, Rebecca Scott. Sherri Ann Charleston, whose 2014 published paper was copied from a 2012 paper written by her husband, Lavar Charleston, and is described by Peter Wood, former provost at Boston University, as a counterfeit paper and "research fraud pure and simple." Shirley Greene, Title IX Resource Coordinator for Students at the Office for Gender Equity, who plagiarized her 2008 doctoral dissertation, entitled Converging Frameworks: Examining The Impact Of Diversity Related College Experiences On Racial/Ethnic Identity Development. The dissertation text was copied from a 2004 doctoral dissertation by Janelle Lee Woo entitled, Chinese American Female Identity, and from a paper entitled, Developing Leadership Skills for Diversity by Anthony Antonio. The table in the dissertation, entitled Racial/Ethnic Identity Development Models, was as well copied from Woo. Three black women, occupying Harvard's ruling circles, exalted as members of a new Aryan race and presiding over the final stages of civilization: "There was Claudine Gay, the one time Harvard President, who was a serial plagiarist, beginning with her dissertation and extending through seven of her eleven brief papers (she has no book), only one of which was peer reviewed, that make up her scandalously small list of publications. Her extensive plagiarism was the main reason she was forced to resign her position. For reasons that remain unknown, she continues to be paid her her former presidential salary of $900,000; possibly those now in charge at Harvard wanted to keep her from accusing the university of racism, and letting her keep that preposterous salary was the best way to keep her quiet. There was Sherri Ann Charleston, the chief diversity officer at Harvard, who was discovered to have plagiarized extensively in her dissertation and handful of academic papers. So far she has managed to hold onto her job. I suspect Harvard administrators do not want to force the resignation of a second black woman found to be a serial plagiarist so soon after Gay's demotion. And now a third serial plagiarist in the Harvard administration has just been found. She is Shirley Greene, a Title IX coordinator affiliated with the Office for Gender Equity. According to the indefatigable Christopher Rufo, Greene claims to have worked to advance Diversity, Inclusion, and Belonging, without any evidence of how she has been doing this, and once led a panel on The Past, Present, and Future of Juneteenth with the DEI department. There doesn't seem to be much there there. She has just been found to have plagiarized at least forty passages in her dissertation. More on Shirley Greene, the latest—but almost certainly not the last—serial plagiarist to be uncovered at Harvard, can be found here: Harvard's Plagiarism Problem Multiplies, by Christopher F. Rufo, City Journal, February 22, 2024: 'Now allegations have emerged that another Harvard DEI [Diversity, Equity, Inclusion] administrator, Shirley Greene, of Harvard Extension School, plagiarized more than forty passages of her 2008 dissertation, Converging Frameworks: Examining The Impact Of Diversity Related College Experiences On Racial/Ethnic Identity Development. According to the Harvard directory, Greene is a Title IX coordinator affiliated with the Office for Gender Equity. She has worked to advance Diversity, Inclusion, and Belonging, and hosted a panel on The Past, Present, and Future of Juneteenth in conjunction with the DEI department. (Harvard did not respond to an emailed request for comment). 'In the most serious instance, Greene lifts directly from Janelle Lee Woo's 2004 dissertation, Chinese American Female Identity. In two significant sections, Greene copied words, phrases, passages, and almost entire paragraphs verbatim, without proper attribution or quotation. She also copies most of an entire table on Racial/Ethnic Identity Development Models, a foundational concept in the paper, without acknowledging the source. We can examine one representative paragraph that illustrates the brazen nature of this adaptation. In her paper, Woo writes: 'Stage 2, White Identification (WI), is a direct consequence of the increase in significant contact between the individual and white society. This stage entails the sense of being different from other people and not belonging anywhere. The individual's self perception changes from neutral/positive to negative, and she begins to internalize the belief systems of white society. Consequently, the individual does not question what it means to be Asian American. The individual alienates herself from other Asian Americans, while simultaneously experiencing social alienation from her white peers. Only when the individual seeks to acquire a political understanding of [her] social status does she enter into the next stage.' Here is Greene's version, with the duplicated portions of Woo and Woo's citations italicized: White Identification (WI), is a direct consequence of the increase in significant contact between the individual and white society. Individuals in this stage have the sense of being different from other people and not belonging anywhere. Their self perception changes from neutral/positive to negative and they begin to internalize the belief systems of white society. Consequently, the individual fails to question what it means to be Asian American and alienates themselves from other Asian Americans, while simultaneously experiencing social alienation from their white peers. In order to move to the next stage, the individual must acquire a political understanding of social status." (At Harvard, Another Case Of Plagiarism by Hugh FitzGerald). Convict number 440960. Dorothy Mackaye, renowned actress of stage and screen, enters San Quentin prison on March 2, 1928. She was sentenced to a term of one to three years for covering up the murder of her husband Ray Raymond by her lover, Paul Kelly. Her silk stockings and high fashion dress are replaced by the coarse, drab uniform of a prison inmate. She makes nationwide headlines as a high profile woman gangster in a dark realm dominated by men. In the twenty first century, Dorothy Mackaye has been reincarnated in three black women. Placed on a throne of absolute power by a rampaging race and gender monster brought to life by surges of Marxist electricity, they are the members of the ruling class of a new Third Reich.

THE ODYSSEY OF HORST MAHLER

In the eighth century BC, a Greek poet named Homer wrote a story regarded as the foundational work of the Classical canon. Regarded by scholars as literature's most enduring story, and enjoyed by modern audiences the world over, the Odyssey follows the Greek hero Odysseus, king of Ithaca, on his ten year journey home after the Trojan War. His journey back to Ithaca took him to points across Africa and Southern Europe and was dotted with danger and adventure. From Homer's epic poem came a word which entered the English language in the seventeenth century. The word odyssey refers to a long wandering and voyage marked by changes of fortune before a return home. In the present day, a man has gone on an odyssey which exemplifies the meaning of the word as nothing else does and taught a lesson in politics as nothing else has. It has taught a lesson in living color, a lesson in flesh and blood, a lesson emanating from the actual incidents of a life. This odyssey is at once the story of a man, the story of our times, and the story of the final stages of civilization when people abandon reason and embrace religions of totalitarian regimentation. In the present day, one Horst Mahler has gone on an odyssey and returned home, and marked out a career which has come full circle, a career forming a noose which has strangled and closed off the story of the West. Horst Mahler. Lawyer and political activist, born on January 23, 1936, in Haynau, Lower Silesia, Germany. He studied law at Free University of Berlin and while a student he joined the national socialist Thuringia Association. Soon afterward he joined the Marxist student group Students for a Democratic Society. In 1964, he joined the Extraparliamentary Opposition, a Marxist protest movement dedicated to "forcible resistance" and the forcible overthrow of the West German government. In 1970, he founded the Marxist terror group Red Army Faction, along with Andreas Baader, Ulrike Meinhof and Gudrun Ensslin. That year, he sprang Baader from prison, and the four committed a series of bank robberies, after which they fled to Jordan to receive training in guerrilla tactics with the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. In 1998, he came full circle and returned to national socialism of his college days. Listen to national socialist Horst Mahler proclaim that race is the primary reality, individuals are mere shadow plays of the race, and Judaism is evil because it stands for reason, science, enlightenment, humanism and individual rights. Listen to him proclaim that a progressive society has freed itself from Jewish atheism, embraced the mysticism of the race, nation and folk, worships at the altar of the racial God and Absolute Spirit, and launched a war of extermination against the Jews: "The belief that there is no God, that man is self defined (Humanism), that the world is realizable without recourse to the concept of the Absolute Spirit (God), is the triumph of Judaism over other peoples. In Atheism Yahweh has driven his rivals, the gods of the Goyim peoples, from the field. On this basis alone these peoples are then delivered defenselessly up to globalism and ordained to destruction. But this victory over the gods of the Goyim is simultaneously the defeat of Judaism. The peoples who have been robbed of their gods--the German people first before all others--suffer, in the death of God, the death of the people. This folk death, however, is only the transition point to new life. It is the resurrection of the peoples in the spirit of idealistic philosophy. This is conceptually religion. The peoples will triumph over the East Coast [liberal values] and free themselves from the worldly god of the Jews, Mammon, in the historic moment when they recognize that every people having a powerful history is a tangible form of God (German Idealism: Herder, Hegel). Now I know very well that in the 'enlightened community of scientists' the most ferocious opposition is raised against these ideas. But exactly this mindless reflex, with which the atheistic spirit of our times seeks to protect itself from appeal to thinking, is the sign of victory of Judaism. Atheism is conceivable only on the basis of the Jewish Principle." (Final Solution Of The Jewish Question: The Discovery Of God by Horst Mahler). Horst Mahler. Look at his transition from radicalism to radicalism. From communism to national socialism. From class Marxism to race Marxism. From the red army to the brown army. From shootings in the name of proletariat to shootings in the name of the Aryan race. From bombings in the name of the international working class to bombings in the name of the national folkish workers. From robbery in the name of Marxism-Leninism to robbery in the name of Hitlerism and fascism. From violence in the name of Marxism-Leninism to violence in the name of Hitlerism and fascism. From criminality in the name of Marxism-Leninism to criminality in the name of Hitlerism and fascism. From revolution in the name of Marxism-Leninism to revolution in the name of Hitlerism and fascism. From extremism in the name of Marxism-Leninism to extremism in the name of Hitlerism and fascism. From dogmatism in the name of Marxism-Leninism to dogmatism in the name of Hitlerism and fascism. From street riots in the name of Marxism-Leninism to street riots in the name of Hitlerism and fascism. From hate speech in the name of Marxism-Leninism to hate speech in the name of Hitlerism and fascism. From serving jail time in the name of Marxism-Leninism to serving jail time in the name of Hitlerism and fascism. From a holocaust against capitalists in the name of Marxism-Leninism to a holocaust against the Jews in the name of Hitlerism and fascism. From a war against civilization in the name of Marxism-Leninism to a war against civilization in the name of Hitlerism and fascism: "Horst Mahler's strongly held and controversial beliefs have kept him at odds with the Berlin Prosecuting Attorney's Office for the length of his career. However, the most recent clash, which led to the confiscation of his computer equipment on July 11, 2001, represents the first such confrontation since his dramatic conversion from a leader of Germany's radical left wing movement in the 1970s to a leader of Germany's radical right wing movement today. Few had such solid radical left wing credentials as Horst Mahler. He emerged as a central figure in the revolutionary movement in 1968, when he took part in the violent demonstrations against the Springer Publishing House in response to the assassination of Rudi Dutschke. Convicted and sentenced to a short jail term for his participation in the demonstrations, Mahler fled Germany with other members of the Rote Armee Fraktion (RAF) for revolutionary training in Jordan. Upon his return to Germany, Mahler was arrested and charged with planning and participating in the violent escape from prison of his RAF comrade Andreas Baader. Otto Schily represented Mahler in the criminal trial on these charges and won Mahler an acquittal. In 1973, Mahler was convicted of aggravated robbery and sentenced to twelve years in prison for his role in RAF backed bank robberies. When all other charges against Mahler were finally settled, he faced a total of fourteen years in prison. In 1974 his license to practice law was revoked. Evidence of the shift taking place in Mahler's ideology came in 1977, in a commentary he wrote from prison in which he described 'that he was being internally freed from the dogmatic revolutionary theory of Marxism-Leninism.' In spite of his changing world view, Mahler continued to receive support from young German leftists, including his attorney throughout this period, Gerhard Schroeder. Mahler was released on parole after ten years in prison. In 1988, his motion for reinstatement to the practice of law was rejected by the local authorities but that decision was reversed on appeal by the Bundesgerichtshof (Federal Court of Justice), which noted a sincere change in Mahler. It was not until late in the 1990s, however, that the extreme and improbable nature of Mahler's change began to earn him public attention. In an interview with the weekly newspaper Die Zeit, Mahler explained that the roots of his ideological shift lie in the disillusioning extremism of his experience in Jordan in 1970." (Federal Constitutional Court Issues Temporary Injunction In The NPD Party Ban Case, German Law Journal, Volume 2, Number 13, August 1, 2001). Horst Mahler. In a career spanning six decades, not once did Horst Mahler embrace liberal democracy. His successive occupations and ideological professions form a dark, satanic circle of identity. In this sealed capsule, he has shut out the world of truth and justice and moved from one deception to another and from one tyranny to another. He inwardly knows that all totalitarian ideologies are at bottom one and the same and differ only with respect to their outward slogans, symbols, emblems and flags. He inwardly knows that communism and fascism are not opposed as left is opposed to right but are opposed as rival leftist ideologies. He inwardly knows they are both tribalist ideologies, both socialist ideologies, both statist ideologies and both collectivist ideologies. He inwardly knows they are both opposed to the right, which stands for individual freedom, constitutional government and is the system of liberal democracy. He inwardly knows all these things and that is why he has found it so easy and effortless to move, in his sickness, from one of these religions to another. In the lightless, airless mental chamber he inhabits, he has worn every garb of insanity invented by man. Supporting Marx, Hitler, Islam, red politics, brown politics, black politics and green politics, and never for a nanosecond supporting the rights of man, Horst Mahler inhabits a mind, a society and a civilization which in the twenty first century has grown weary, abandoned reason and collapsed.

POISON IN THE PANTRY

It is the best selling cookie brand of all time. Its name is derived from the French word or, meaning "gold". Its beloved taglines are Wonderfilled, Milk's favorite cookie and Stay Playful. First sold to a grocer in Hoboken, New Jersey on March 6, 1912, it is now available in every nation on Earth, and over four hundred and fifty billion have been produced since its inception. It is the Oreo cookie and for over a century it has exemplified wholesome, nutritious snack food for the entire family. In the twenty first century, this iconic invention of the National Biscuit Company has been contaminated. It no longer stands for traditional America with its sunny family life but has become an advertisement for a dark terminal sickness which has struck the West. It has become a voice and expression on the shelves of supermarkets for an end stage development which supervenes whenever a society abandons reason. It has been transmuted into a multicolored flag spelling out pride in the rejection of reason, science and liberal values. Running for office on a ticket marked progressivism, and voted into power in a landslide in the early twentieth century, the sickness of our times is known as Marxism, and in its original form together with its race and gender derivatives, it has placed society on a downward trajectory crashing into a regressive, precivilizational, savage jungle. It has been known for over a century that gender is determined by genes and is fixed and immutable. It has been known for over a century that human beings develop as male or female depending on the combination of gender chromosomes they inherit from their parents. It has been known for over a century that gender chromosomes, called X and Y, are structures in human cells which determine the characteristics of each gender. It has been known for over a century that human beings who inherit two X chromosomes develop as females, while human beings who inherit one X chromosome and one Y chromosome develop as males. It has been known for over a century that there is as much reality in a so-called transgender person as there is in a dragon or a unicorn and that the terms biological male and biological female are redundant inasmuch there are no other types of male or female. It has been known for over a century, since the pioneering investigations of Nettie Stevens and Edmund Wilson, that gender is a product of biological reality and cannot be changed by human wishes, desires, fantasies or interventions. A monster is loose on the West. It is the monster of gender, race and class politics assembled and brought to life by the surging currents of Marxism. See how it has mauled apart an American institution called Oreo cookies and made its ovens blaze with corruption. Leaping up to the heavens, the flames spell out a message of agitation and propaganda. The new, twenty first century Oreo kitchen proclaims that a progressive society is ruled by a militant gay, lesbian and transgender agenda. It proclaims that a progressive society is a national and global convention celebrating pornography, the pornography of sexual mutilation, with knives and hormone blockers marked transgenderism. It proclaims that a progressive society is a partnership between transgender ideologues and gay and lesbian rights activists. It proclaims that a progressive school indoctrinates children in the superiority of gay and lesbian sex to heterosexual relations. It proclaims that a progressive school is an advocacy organization for transgender rights. It proclaims that a progressive school encourages psychotic children who claim they are members of the opposite sex to mutilate themselves with drugs and surgery to change their appearance. It proclaims that a progressive school supports the right of children to undergo medical procedures to do the impossible and change their gender in the name of universal human rights. It proclaims that a progressive school indoctrinates students in transgenderism in the name of diversity and inclusion. It proclaims that a progressive school assigns to students books defending transgenderism and promoting gay and lesbian sex in the name of freedom. It proclaims that a progressive school rejects the findings of genetic research and teaches students a religion of gender fluidity and gender nondentity. It proclaims that a progressive corporation has sacrificed honesty and moral principles on the altar of politics and ideology and rejected liberalism and science in favor of tribal rights and transgenderism. It proclaims that a progressive corporation is a religious, partisan, nonneutral organization dedicated to the spread of gender ideology. It proclaims that a progressive corporation is run by an executive and board of directors who have disregarded the rights and interests of shareholders and created a gay, lesbian and transgender pressure group. It proclaims that a progressive corporation has sacrificed financial health and profitability on an altar marked Parents and Friends of Lesbians, Gays, Transgenders and Drag Queens. It proclaims that a progressive corporation has placed its brands in the service of Marxist issue campaigning, Marxist election campaigning, Marxist activist recruitment, Marxist vocabulary policing and Marxist lobbying for the overthrow of Enlightenment traditions and institutions: "The National Legal and Policy Center (NLPC) is taking aim at Oreo for partnering with an organization promoting a 'militant LGBTQ agenda.' The NLPC will release a video Wednesday that begins by citing the names of infamous books on gender and sexuality that have been marketed to young people in public libraries and schools. 'This Book Is Gay,' the video narrates. 'Gender Queer. Flamer. Lawn Boy. Books like these are promoted in our schools and local libraries by PFLAG, and Oreo is supporting them.' PFLAG is an LGBT advocacy organization. 'Is your favorite sandwich cookie company grooming children?' the video asks. 'What happened to the kid friendly cookie we all used to know and love? Don't let PFLAG and Oreo corrupt your children. Learn more at NLPC.org/oreo.' Paul Chesser, the director of the Corporate Integrity Project at the NPLC, told The Daily Signal that the NPLC has stock in Mondelez International, the parent company of Oreo. As the NPLC monitored the company's activities, Chesser noticed that Oreo's Twitter account was doing a lot of copromotional content with PFLAG. In many of these posts, Oreo praises PFLAG as a 'long time' partner, celebrates Pride Month, and promotes gender ideology. On closer examination, Chesser realized that Oreo was sponsoring the 2023 PFLAG National Convention. That convention's focus was 'Learning with Love, and its opening session was: Let Freedom Read! Read With Love To Support Inclusive Books And Education, pushing back on the banning of explicit books, according to NLPC. 'PFLAG and [the American Library Association] also cosponsored Banned Books Week earlier this month, which included Let Freedom Read Day to promote grassroots action with lawmakers and decision makers to allow adult themed materials into school libraries,' the NLPC said on its website. 'Among its events and materials for Banned Books Week, PFLAG made a list of the Top Thirteen Most Banned Books, which include the titles Gender Queer, All Boys Aren't Blue, Flamer, Lawn Boy and This Book is Gay. Multiple pages of these books contain explicit sexual content and gender ideology discussions. 'As watchdogs of corporate American, we believe that companies should not be engaged and involved in these divisive political issues, these social issues, they should be as neutral as possible,' Chesser explained. 'When you get involved in a lot this militant activity, it's problematic. You're going to tick off at least half of your potential customers.' NLPC's campaign includes a website page dedicated to Oreo's partnership with PFLAG, where it reveals that it is sponsoring a shareholder proposal challenging Mondelez International's company executive and board of directors and asking the board to 'examine its associations with controversial external groups such as PFLAG to determine whether they present a significant risk to the health and profitability of the company.' 'Parents across the United States have become increasingly fed up with the political activism and gender ideology agenda—especially those targeting children—of militant LGBTQ pressure groups such as GLAAD, GLSEN, Human Rights Campaign, and The Trevor Project, among many others,' that landing page notes, critiquing activist groups for targeting children with Drag Queen Story Hour events and stirring up confusion about sex with terms like identity and fluidity. 'Among the organizations pressing this agenda is PFLAG (formerly Parents & Friends of Lesbians and Gays),' the NLPC shares. 'Begun with noble intentions as a support for families of gay individuals, the group over time developed a more militant activist intent with expansionist strategies. The nonprofit organization takes in several million dollars annually to support its lobbying, recruitment, electoral advocacy, issue advocacy and gender vocabulary activism.' " (Campaign Highlights Oreo's Partnership With Militant LGBTQ Group by Mary Margaret Olohan). Legally owned and operated by Nabisco, which in turn is legally owned and operated by Mondelez International, the Oreo brand has been sullied beyond recognition by its true owners operating behind the scenes. It has been sullied by the forces of resurgent religion.

HITLER'S HANGING JUDGE HAILS FROM GEORGIA

He was a German jurist and judge who served as Secretary of State of the Reich Ministry of Justice from 1934 to 1942 and as President of the People's Court from 1942 to 1945. He was a leading theorist of national socialism and led the nazification of Germany's legal system. He attended the 1942 Wannsee Conference which planned the Holocaust. His themes were "race defilement", "racial treason" and the preservation of the race based national socialist state. Germany's most feared judge, he presided over a People's Court which served as a terror weapon of Hitler's totalitarian regime. In his People's Court, he was the prosecutor, judge, jury and recorder combined. Wearing a scarlet judicial robe, seated in a chamber decorated with scarlet swastikas and a bust of Hitler on a pedestal behind him, he opened every session of the court with a national socialist salute, shouting Heil Hitler! On February 3, 1945, a United States Air Force bomber attacked his People's Court. Amidst the wail of air raid sirens, he was crushed to death in the collapsed building. His name was Roland Freisler and his soul made a circuit. Racing down into the depths of hell, it received instructions from the Prince of Darkness and then returned to Earth to carry them out. The instructions were to create a black power movement which would reintroduce race politics across the West. He succeeded wildly at his task and earned accolades from the Devil. His latest reincarnation hails from the American state of Georgia. In the state's Fulton County, in charge of the district attorney's office, is one Fani Willis. Daughter of John Floyd, a founder of the Black Panthers, she is on a mission to implant the black swastika far and wide and target for destruction the national voice of opposition to race politics and the national champion of constitutional rights. Given to her by the ghosts of the past, her mission is to establish a national socialist black power state and to destroy the man who stands in its way, the forty fifth president of the United States, Donald Trump, and prevent him from becoming president again. Fani Willis. Look at Fani Willis and see the avatar, like her master Freisler, of a neoMarxist cause. Not the original Marxist cause of class politics but a natural, logical, inevitable offshoot of it: the cause of race politics. It forms one terrifying face of a triple headed, gender, race and class monster, assembled and brought to life by surging currents of Marxist electricity, which has defined the final stage of civilization and its regression into a savage jungle. Look at Fani Willis and see a Marxist thug without remorse or regret file legal writs of destruction directed at Donald Trump. See a Marxist prosecutor join forces with a Marxist judge and a Marxist jury in a Marxist metropolis to weaponize the law against Trump. See a Marxist lawyer disgrace the legal profession by denying Trump his constitutional right to challenge an election, by publicly announcing a campaign to destroy Trump and publicly raising funds in support of it, and by framing Trump on false charges in tactics emanating from the playbook of the mafia: "There are eerie commonalities in all these five court cases involving plaintiff E. Jean Carroll, Manhattan district attorney Alvin Bragg, New York Attorney General Letitia James, federal special counsel Jack Smith, and Fulton County district attorney Fani Willis. One, they are either unapologetically left wing or associated with liberal causes. They filed their legal writs in big city, left wing America—Atlanta, New York, Washington—where liberal judges and jury pools predominate in a manner not characteristic of the country at large. Two, they are overtly political. Bragg, James, and Willis have either campaigned for office or raised campaign funds by promising to get or even destroy Donald Trump. Willis strained to find a way to criminalize Trump's complaints about his loss of Georgia in the 2020 national election. She finally came up with a racketeering charge, usually more applicable to mafiosi and drug cartels." (Blue Laws For Red Citizens by Victor Hansen). Fani Willis. Look at Fani Willis and see the Fulton County district attorney establish mandatory hate training sessions for her staff. See a partisan prosecutor force her staff to describe blacks as good and whites as bad. See her threaten her staff with dismissal if they dare to criticize her race and gender politics. See her teach her staff that they should evaluate judges on the basis of their race and gender and should discriminate against white judges and male judges and show favoritism toward black female judges. See her organize a criminal conspiracy involving members of the Biden administration to steal the 2024 presidential election from Donald Trump and ensure the continuance of America as a black racist, Third Reich style state: "Fulton County District Attorney Fani Willis subjected her employees to mandatory race training, forcing the entire office to rate 'Black' or 'White' skin colors as either 'Good' or 'Bad,' according to training slides and video exclusively obtained by Breitbart News. 'If you didn't participate in the quiz, you got fired,' a source exclusively told Breitbart News about Willis's policy. Sources who shared the race training with Breitbart News wished to remain anonymous for fear of retribution due to their direct knowledge of the 'corrupt' and 'hostile work environment' inside the District Attorney's Office. Sources described the race training as a directive straight from Willis, '[who] injected racism [into the office] from the second she got hired.' See her tell her white staff that they should be ashamed of being white. See her tell her white staff that they are inherently and ineradicably racist against blacks. See her establish racist and sexist policies which discriminate against white males in the name of diversity, equity and inclusion. See her teach her staff that capitalism is a system of enslavement and slaughter of blacks and native Americans, and that America was founded on this enslavement and slaughter and is a nation born in the dark womb of iniquity. Willis won election in 2020 and is up for reelection this November. In 2021, she began probing former President Donald Trump. Dubbed an 'implicit bias test,' a Harvard website generated the 'diversity, equity, and inclusion' slides that made some sources feel ashamed of being white employees. 'Willis had some guy be live for roughly eight hours,' a source said. 'He was a former member of Obama's White House.' The training suggested the United States was founded on the sins of white men and the slaughter of native Americans, one source described. 'I thought it was so wrong.' 'Willis pulled it off as diversity [training], but it was more so an attack on the race [relations] thing,' a source explained. One element of the training described by a source was a slide test where users had to choose to move an image of a white person to a block that said 'bad' in order to complete the program: 'It had a word on the left, and it's a box, a word on the left, a word on the right, and an image. I needed to connect the image to one side, which determines your bias. Until you said that the white guy was bad it wouldn't let you move on. It said 'White Bad' on one side of 'Black Good' on the other and an image of a person came up and if you didn't drag it to the 'White Bad' category—the white man pops up in the middle—If you couldn't pass the test. They put an X in it and it won't let you move on.' Breitbart News also obtained a race training video that ranked the 'most racist judges,' as described by a source with knowledge of the training. The video, which played during the race training session, mentioned Florida, not Georgia, and used statistics not based on Fulton County data. It also spoke about judges being partisans, although judges in Georgia run unaffiliated. The audio of this clip has been muted to protect the identity of the source who provided it. 'You're set to appear before a judge, but you don't know who. Your best bet would be for the judge to be black and and male. Black male judges sentenced black defendants ten percent less time in lockup than whites, according to 12 years of criminal data compiled by court clerks. But if that black male judge is Republican, that thinking shifts. No groups sentenced blacks to more time, compared to whites, than black Republican judges. Sixty nine percent more time, to be exact. Black female judges are the fairest. They sentence blacks and whites to the same amount of time. But black female judges are also the harshest. They send away both black and whites for far longer than any other member group. But what are the odds of getting a black judge? They're not in your favor. Only 28 of the more than 450 judges who preside over serious criminal cases in Florida are black. So the judge would probably be white. If it's a white male, you can expect 20 percent more time in lockup than a white defendant. If it's a white female, you can expect ten percent more time. Politics also come into play. Republican judges sentence blacks 21 percent more time in lockup than whites. Democratic judges sentence blacks to 70 percent more time' multiple sources familiar with the Fulton County District Attorney's Office exclusively told Breitbart News the Biden administration planted Democrat operative Jeff DiSantis inside Fulton County's office to target Trump." (Former Employees Reveal Fani Willis's Extreme DEI Training: Forced To Associate 'White' with 'Bad', Judges Ranked on Skin Color by Wendell Husebo). Time: November 8, 1923. Place: Munich, Germany. Action: two thousand national socialists march on Feldherrnhalle in the city center in a plan to take over the Munich city government, and then use the city as a base of operations to take over the national government in Berlin. A century after this attempted insurrection, the insurrectionists are back in business, marching under the banners of a latter day Aryan race. Led by a fuhrer named Fani Willis, their base of operations is Fulton County, Georgia. District Attorney Fani Willis has led a national insurrection on behalf of black power and achieved victory.

FRENCH REDS REVERSE THE BATTLE OF TOURS

On October 10, 732, a decisive moment in European history occurred. On this day, Europe defined itself against Islam and a nascent Western culture, to be born three centuries later, defined itself against the East, and became safe and secure for future development. On this day, Frankish forces under the command of Charles Martel, outnumbered and without heavy cavalry, defeated the forces of the Umayyad Caliphate under the command of Abdul Al Gafiqi. The terrifying tide of the Muslim advance into Europe was turned back, and a looming menace and specter, the Islamization of a free continent, was banished: "A victorious line of march had been prolonged above a thousand miles from the rock of Gibraltar to the banks of the Loire; the repetition of an equal space would have carried the Saracens to the confines of Poland and the Highlands of Scotland; the Rhine is not more impassable than the Nile or Euphrates, and the Arabian fleet might have sailed without a naval combat into the mouth of the Thames. Perhaps the interpretation of the Koran would now be taught in the schools of Oxford, and her pulpits might demonstrate to a circumcised people the sanctity and truth of the revelation of Mahomet." (The Decline And Fall Of The Roman Empire by Edward Gibbon, Chapter 52). Fifteen hundred years after this victory for the cause of freedom lit up European skies, Islam is back in business and has taken the trophy of victory away from the West. Its victory was made possible not by a superior military army but by the treason of a fifth column operating within. An army was not needed because the gates of civilization had been flung wide open by a movement which had assumed control over society. This movement represents the sickness of our times and is a cancer which has spread into every aspect of life. Voted into power in the early years of the twentieth century in a landslide under a ticket marked progressivism, this cancer goes by the name of communism, and in its original version promoting class politics, together with its twentieth century race and gender offshoots, developing out of logical necessity from Marx's nineteenth century creed, it has become a synonym and byword for the new Western establishment. This establishment has reached out to and made common cause with a distant enemy of freedom born in the desserts and dust bowls of Arabia. This enemy has spread across Asia and occupies the Middle East, with the exception of Israel, and by virtue of its growing demographic and unappeasable fanaticism presents a formidable threat. This enemy is called Islam and it has entered into a united front with the communist establishment to destroy what they both hate: the values of the Enlightenment, values centered on reason, which crowned the West two centuries ago. The victory of Islam in the West in the twenty first century was made possible by the rejection of reason and return to religion by the masses. This degenerate development has seen a resurgence of Christianity and Orthodox Judaism, has placed the tribal religion of communism upon the throne of power, and has opened up the gates of the West to Islam. Fifth Column. Look at France today and see its establishment reject the French tricolor, the French identity, the French rally and the French universe of freedom. See a new flag unfurled, the flag of wokism, the far left, historical erasure, and gender, race and class politics. See this flag flutter beneath dark skies and flutter across the ruins of Western civilization: "The designer of the official poster for this summer's Paris Olympics has responded to criticism that his art erases symbols of French identity. The design features a cartoon map of Paris with a wealth of details. Conservatives have criticized the lack of the French tricolor. Artist Ugo Gattoni said he wanted to create a 'festive universe'. Francois-Xavier Bellamy of the right wing Republicans party wrote on X that the people responsible for the image were 'ready to deny France, going so far as to distort reality to cancel its history'. National Rally (RN) lawmaker Nicolas Meizonnet complained that the omissions were the result of le wokisme, a bugbear of France's far right. The term woke came into more mainstream use in the mid 2010s, defined by the Oxford English Dictionary as being 'aware' or 'well informed' in a political or cultural sense. It has since become widely used as a criticism by conservative politicians and media for a range of topics." (Paris Olympics: Row Over Woke Map As Paris Gears Up For Games by Michael Sheils McNamee). Islam. Look at France today and see a mass invasion of Islamist Jew haters. See the nation scream out evil headlines: the first and only nation in the West where Jews are kidnapped, tortured and killed in the manner of Hitler's holocaust. See antisemitism proclaimed as official state policy and Islamists appointed as its chief enforcers. See the voices of Islam demand the destruction of Israel and the Jews. See the goddess of France, the goddess of reason and the goddess of liberty, raped, tortured, beheaded and burned alive by the victorious heirs and successors of the Umayyad Caliphate defeated by the West fifteen hundred years ago. See human rights sacrificed on the altar of Sharia law. See liberal democracy sacrificed on the altar of the Muslim Brotherhood. See the community of decent, just, law abiding people lie in the streets with their throats cut, drowned in pools of blood. See a nation transformed into a conference for the enforcement of Allah's creed of bigotry and fanaticism. See a nation corralled into a mosque ruled by radical, bloodthirsty imams. See reasoned respect for the rule of law replaced by national prostration before the dictatorship of Islam. See the territory of the nation and republic replaced by the territory of Islam and its mosques of terror. See a nation descend into a riot zone overrun by alien hordes. See a nation descend into a savage jungle patrolled by Islamist gangs, in which nonIslamists have been reduced to noncitizens, the police have been defunded, defeated and dismantled, and the faithful bow their heads in submission to the armies of global destruction: "January 30, 2024. The French weekly, Le Journal du Dimanche, publishes the most comprehensive and detailed survey on what French Muslims think. Not surprisingly, the results are disturbing. The first question in the survey was about Jews. Seventeen percent of French Muslims admit that they hate Jews. Thirty nine percent say they have a bad, or very bad, opinion of Judaism. France is the only country in twenty first century Europe where Jews regularly have been murdered simply because they are Jews. Since the kidnapping, torture and murder of Ilan Halimi in January 2006, all Jews murdered in France have been killed by Muslims. Sammy Ghozlan, the president of the National Office for Vigilance against antisemitism (BNVCA), which lists antisemitic acts and helps their victims, has emphasized year after year, for more than twenty years, that almost all violent antisemitic acts committed in France are committed by Muslims. When it comes to Israel, the results are even more disturbing. Feelings go beyond hatred. 45% of French Muslims say they want the total destruction of Israel. An equivalent number of French Muslims define the massacre rape, torture, beheadings and burning alive of Jews by Hamas terrorists in Israel on October 7, 2023, as an 'act of resistance'. So, almost half of a religious community in a Western democracy openly wants the destruction of a group of people who were just massacred in another country, and in the greatest number since the end of the Holocaust. Nineteen percent of French Muslims say they have sympathy for Hamas. That so many French Muslims have sympathy for an organization whose leaders say that they will repeat the October 7 attack time and again until Israel is annihilated, and unabashedly state that they want the genocidal destruction of the only Jewish state, should sound an alarm that French Jews, and French non-Jews, are in an extremely perilous situation. Other figures showed that 42% of French Muslims place respect for Islamic Sharia law above respect for the laws of the French republic

(the percentage rises to 57 % among young Muslims aged 18 to 25). The European Court of Human Rights ruled in 2003 that Sharia law is incompatible with the values of democracy. Sharia law stipulates that Allah has dictated all the rules that human beings must obey, and that all rules contrary to Sharia law must be rejected. Thirty seven percent of French Muslims say they support the Muslim Brotherhood--also not surprising: the main French Muslim organization, Musulmans de France (Muslims of France) is the French branch of the Muslim Brotherhood. Every year, Muslims of France organizes a conference that attracts hundreds of thousands of Muslims from all over Europe. The group also invites radical imams who speak to the crowd. The survey further showed that 49% of French Muslims want Catholics to convert to Islam, and that 36% percent want churches to be transformed into mosques. Some churches already have been transformed. The survey also discloses that 25% of French Muslims said that the word France is a word they reject. These figures are best seen and understood in conjunction with other facts. France is one of the only countries in the Western world where men have been beheaded by radicalized Muslims." (France's Skyrocketing Threat by Guy Milliere). The victory of Europe over Islam in the Battle of Tours has been celebrated in paintings down through the centuries. These comprise a gallery of the world's finest and most inspiring art. Bataille De Poitiers En Octobre by Charles de Steuben. The royal compilation Grandes Chroniques de France. Charlotte Mary Yonge's nineteenth century work. In the twenty first century a fire is raging, fueled to a white heat by these masterpieces. Their noble cause has been reduced to smoke and ashes. Freedom has been incinerated in funeral pyres ignited by Marxism and Islam in the land where it was first defended. In the twenty first, France has traveled full circle and returned to its savage past.

CONFLICTS AND CLASHES IN A COLLAPSED SOCIETY

Physicists have discovered that every type of particle of ordinary matter is associated with an antiparticle possessing the same mass but with an opposite charge. The antiparticle of the electron is the positron and the antiparticle of the proton is the antiproton. Antiparticles and ordinary particles cannot coexist when they collide, and when they collide, they annihilate each other, producing immense explosions of energy in the form of neutrinos and gamma rays. A society in which significant numbers of people hold opposite views on fundamental matters is a society which no longer exists. It is a society which exists in name only and is in reality a venue of moral matter and moral antimatter, a venue of people who are people and people who look like people, and when these groups associate and interact, the logical and necessary consequence is civil war. The West in the present day is host to factions holding opposite views on fundamental matters and these factions cannot coexist. One faction is the symptom of civilizational collapse and has painted a signpost pointing to the moral and spiritual death of man. This faction has abandoned reason and descended into insanity. It is the majority faction and tolls out the death knell of the modern age and the reversion into the nameless eons of prehistory. Ancient Rome collapsed because its majority had abandoned reason and embraced the insanity of Christian mysticism, Germanic barbarism, socialism, state worship, and endless doles of bread and circuses clamored for in a rising, white hot fever of excitement echoing across the vaults of amphitheaters. The West in the present day has exploded from the clash between its majority faction and its minority of civilized people rooted in reason and sanity. This explosion between antipeople embodying unreason and insanity and ordinary people has made the continuance of society an impossibility and ushered in an age of violence and destruction. Matter. People who recognize the findings of science, reaching back to the pioneering investigations of Nettie Stevens and Edmund Wilson over one hundred years ago, that gender is determined by chromosomes containing genes made of DNA. People who recognize that X chromosomes produce female characteristics and Y

chromosomes produce male characteristics, and that people who inherit two X chromosomes develop as females, while people who inherit one X chromosome and one Y chromosome develop as males. People who recognize that because gender is determined by genes, it is fixed and immutable. Antimatter. People who reject the findings of science and proclaim that gender can be changed by human interventions in the form of drugs and surgery, or by a simple declaration and belief that one is a member of the opposite sex. People who deny genetic reality and proclaim that males can change into females and females can change into males. People who encourage psychotic children who believe they are members of the opposite sex to undergo acts of sexual mutilation. People who sacrifice reason and science on the altar of strange creeds, transgenderism, gender ideology and a dragon breathing the black fires of mental disorder: "President Joe Biden pledged his loyalty to transgender Americans during his State of the Union address on Thursday night and called for the passage of the so-called Equality Act. 'Pass the Equality Act, and my message to transgender Americans: I have your back' Biden shouted. The Biden administration is arguably the most protransgender administration in American history and actively works through various agencies to deny biological reality and promote sex change drugs and procedures for minors. His administration also actively fights against states that pass laws to protect minors from gender ideology fueled sexual mutilation. The Equality Act would codify Democrats' embrace of gender identity, the made up concept that one can identify as another sex other than what they were born as. Democrats have tried to pass the bill for years but have yet to get it across a president's desk." (Biden Backs Transgenderism, Calls For Passage of Equality Act by Katherine Hamilton). Matter. People who recognize that physical individuals in space and time are the primary existents and not mystical race and gender groups. People who recognize that individuals must be evaluated as individuals and not as members of race and gender groups. People who recognize that a just society is a race blind and gender blind society which rejects all forms of racial and gender discrimination in all circumstances. Antimatter. People who worship at the altar of race and gender politics and support a policy of race and gender preferences in the admissions, employment and promotion of candidates. People who proclaim that blacks, hispanics and women should be admitted to university because they are blacks, hispanics and women and not because they are academically qualified. People who reject meritocratic standards for university admission in favor of politically and ideologically based standards, and establish a regime of exclusion and discrimination against whites, Asians and males in the name of diversity, equity and inclusion: "A class action lawsuit has been filed against six Texas medical schools for implementing sex and race preferences in their admissions processes. America First Legal (AFL), which filed the lawsuit on behalf of a would be medical student, argues that Texas medical schools use sex and race preferences to determine the admission of an applicant—even in instances where grade point averages (GPA) and Medical College Admission Test (MCAT) scores are lower for women or nonwhite and non Asian applicants. 'Whites, Asians, and males bear the brunt of this egregious policy granting applicants with lesser academic credentials medical school admission over academically more qualified candidates on the basis of race and sex,' a press release for the lawsuit said. 'Universities and medical schools across America have been coopted by woke ideologues pushing the divisive equity agenda.' AFL's client is a white male who unsuccessfully applied to the defendant schools from 2021-2022. According to the lawsuit, the applicant sought an open records request 'which revealed the race, sex, grade point average, and MCAT score of every applicant in the 2021–2022 cycle.' Those records showed preferences favoring black and hispanic applicants, as the mean and median GPAs and MCAT scores were 'significantly lower than the grade point averages and MCAT scores of admitted white and Asian students.' In addition, the data showed that women are admitted to the schools with lower MCAT scores than men." (Class Action Lawsuit Filed Against Six Texas Medical Schools Over Sex, Race Admissions Preferences by Breccan Thies). Matter. People who recognize there is no scientific evidence to support the view that global temperature changes are caused by man made greenhouse gas emissions. People who recognize that tree ring data purportedly establishing the dependence of global temperatures on man made emissions are contradicted by data showing declining global temperatures during the present day period of increasing emissions. Antimatter. People who promote the theory of man made global warming without scientific evidence. Now look at the unreliability of tree ring data in proving the theory of man made global warming and see adherence to a latter day mass religion: " 'Science,' wrote the philosopher Karl Popper, 'is one of the very few human activities—perhaps the only one—in which errors are systematically criticized and fairly often, in time, corrected.' Now, a six person jury in Washington, DC has refuted Popper's formulation of the uniqueness of science, finding in favor of climate scientist Michael Mann in the defamation suit he brought against Rand Simberg and Mark Steyn dating back to 2012. Central to Mann's case was his attempt to reconstruct global temperature over the previous millennium—the iconic hockey stick graph. The graph shows global temperatures purportedly falling for centuries and suddenly shooting upwards with the advent of the Industrial Revolution. Mann's hockey stick representation was derived principally from selected tree ring data based on the assumption that tree rings constitute accurate proxies for temperature and are not contaminated by confounding factors such as rainfall, seasonal variability, and levels of carbon dioxide already in the atmosphere. A rival reconstruction by fellow paleoclimatologist Keith Briffa, for example, derived from tree ring data obtained from northern Canada and Siberia, showed a noticeable decline in temperatures over the latter part of the twentieth century—opening up a divergence with the instrumental record. If tree rings suggested declining temperatures when temperatures were actually rising, then how could climate scientists put any confidence in tree rings as thermometers? Up could really mean down." (How A DC Courtroom Used The Hockey Stick Trial To Kill Off Science by Rupert Darwall). Matter. People who see the evidence of the senses and see that human personhood does not commence at the moment of conception and that abortion is not necessarily murder. Antimatter. People who deny the evidence of the senses and proclaim that at the moment of union of a sperm and an ovum occurring in the fallopian tube, this fertilized ovum, this one cell zygote, is an actual human person by virtue of the presence of a mystical, unperceivable, supernatural soul. People who believe the reason this supernatural person is unperceivable is that man is blind because he has eyes and sees nothing when he sees something. Listen to the forces of resurgent Christianity in America proclaim that the wall of separation between church and state, constructed by the First Amendment to the Constitution, does not in fact exist, and that states have the right to declare that abortion is necessarily murder and to criminalize it in all circumstances: "The Constitution does not confer a right to abortion. Roe and Casey are overruled. The authority to regulate abortion is returned to the people and their elected representatives." (Dobbs vs Jackson Women's Health Organization, United States Supreme Court, decided June 24, 2022). A bridge is a structure built to span an obstacle, such as a valley or a body of water. The first bridges were built by Neolithic man and consisted of fallen trees, boardwalks and stepping stones. The longest bridge in the world is the Danyang-Kunshan Grand Bridge in China. Opened in 2011 as part of the Beijing-Shanghai Railway, it spans 165 kilometers and can withstand all forms of seismic activity and extreme weather. No bridge imaginable or existing could span the gulf separating people holding opposite views on fundamental matters. These factions have made society explode in the twenty first century.

AMERICA'S RED ARMY

The inland taipan is the deadliest snake in the world. Endemic to Australia, it hunts mammals and one bite possesses enough poison to kill one hundred people. It is fast, agile and relentless, and in contrast to other snakes, it snaps its jaws repeatedly on its prey to inflict multiple punctures, and typically delivers six bites in a single attack. In the twenty first century, a snake has moved in on the world's premier army of freedom and delivered a lethal attack. It has delivered this attack in a series of fast, accurate advances and inflicted multiple bites, and its victim now lies prostrate, paralyzed and deceased. In the twenty first century, a snake creeping, shifting and undulating under the name of Marxism has attacked the United States military and rendered it incapable of winning a war and fulfilling its mandate to defend freedom. This mandate was given to it two hundred years ago on the battlefields of Lexington and Concord, and its fulfilment made the world safe for freedom across two world wars and the Cold War in the twentieth century. In the twenty first century, the deadliest movement in the history of mankind, a movement voted into power by the people in a landslide under a ticket marked progressivism, a movement which would become a synonym and byword for the American establishment, has struck the nation's military, and in a series of bites filled it with a level of poison which has made it morally unrecognizable and physically incapable of defending the nation and the nation's flag of freedom unfurled across the world. In the twenty first century, a movement which has taken the West from freedom into chains has established itself as a fifth column operating within America, operating within its most hallowed and vital institutions, and this column has risen up and joined its global parent, and subverting America's armed, organized force for warfare, has caused the West to go down in flames. Look at America's military today and see recruitment numbers descend at high speed in a free fall fueled by rejection by decent people of Marxism and its race and gender offshoots. See a fighting force no longer capable of fighting, a force disabled by the imposition of gender, race and class ideology. See the Department of Defense taken over by the promoters of transgenderism. According to this doctrine, one hundred years of genetic research, reaching back to the pioneering investigations of Nettie Stevens and Edmund Wilson, are meaningless and do not exist. According to this doctrine, what science has discovered, the existence of DNA, sex genes and sex chromosomes, is meaningless and does not exist. According to this doctrine, gender is not fixed and immutable as science has established, but can be changed by human interventions or by a simple declaration and belief that one is a member of the opposite sex. Look at the United States military and see preferential treatment on the basis of race and gender, and the abolition of meritocracy, promoted in the name of diversity, equity and inclusion. See the hiring and promotion of psychotics who claim they are members of the opposite sex, who claim they are gender fluid, gender indeterminate, neither male nor female, and both male and female at one and the same time, in the name of diversity, equity and inclusion. See national security sacrificed on the altar of race politics, gender politics, gay politics and lesbian politics, and the West hurled into the jaws of danger and dissolution: "Across most branches of the US military, recruitment numbers continue to plummet. As is widely known, lack of trust in senior military leadership as well as woke ideology now plague America's armed forces. But the ultimate question remains: Can the US still win wars? To find out what the rank and file of the United States military believe in 2024 about fighting a major war against a near-peer threat, this writer conducted an informal survey, at random, of over 200 current members of the US Military. When asked if the US could win a war against a near peer threat like China, Iran, North Korea or Russia, 188 of the survey's 229 participants replied 'No'. World Net Daily interviewed one participant in the survey, on the condition of anonymity due to concern over reprisals. Emphasizing that his views don't reflect those of the Department of Defense or Department of the Army, Sergeant First Class (SFC) Robbie Barnes (a pseudonym) admitted he is 'not overly confident' the United States could win a war against a foreign adversary. 'Ten to fifteen years ago,' Barnes said, 'we could have won any war in the world, but I've lost a great deal of confidence in our superiority in conflict over the last decade.' His change of faith can be attributed to well known issues surrounding recruiting and retention. 'Recruiting numbers are down more than ever, and [service members] are leaving the military because they see the direction we've gone since the Obama administration,' he said. Progressive policies have repeatedly been blamed for the military's recruiting shortfall. The Biden administration selected leaders he considers 'very weak and spineless,' said Barnes, noting that they routinely refuse to push back against policies that are antithetical to the military. Such policies may help advance Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion (DEI) and LGBTQ+ agendas within the military work force, but do so to the detriment of America's national security, he said. For example, Barnes pointed out, 'they've gone full bore on this transgender gender fluidity craziness.' Rather than hiring or promoting based on merit, he said, the military seems more interested in hiring and promoting 'people with behavioral health issues.' 'Wokeness,' he summarized, 'has gone too far [in the military].' " (Can America Win A Major War Today? Here's What Most In US Military Say by J. M. Phelps). Look at America's military today and see Marxism packaged as progressivism scare away decent people who want to take up a rifle and defend freedom at home and abroad. See the Pentagon drill its personnel in the terrifying tenets of social slavery, packaged as social progressivism, and see potential recruits flee in droves. See a triple headed monster, marked gender, race and class politics, stalk the corridors of the Department of Defense and burn up the air with the flames of political indoctrination. These flames proclaim that a progressive society is a Marxist-Leninist society. They proclaim that a progressive society is a Black Panther society. They proclaim that a progressive society is a feminist society. They proclaim that a progressive society is a transgender society. They proclaim that a progressive society is an intersectional society whose lords and masters are the class of blacks, nonwhites and the poor. They proclaim that a progressive society has launched a cultural, spiritual, intellectual and military fight against freedom. They proclaim that a progressive society is a leftist, partisan, woke society which condemns capitalism as antipoor, antifemale and a system of racial prejudice and discrimination. They proclaim that a progressive military is an instruction, training and exercise in discipline in blind, unwavering adherence to the Marxist party line of political correctness: "The Pentagon is aware of how progressive policies are contributing to the US Army's falling short of its recruiting goals, but those on the inside are prohibited from publicly acknowledging this, according to a recently retired Army major. More than a year after replying on behalf of the US Army Recruiting Command to an inquiry from The Epoch Times about the Army's recruitment struggles, retired Maj. Charles Spears reached out again. Mr Spears wanted to share an unbridled explanation of the state of recruiting in the Army, which finished 2023 with 55,000 new recruits, significantly short of the 65,000 it had aimed for in the fiscal year. Mr Spears attributed the declining interest in the US military in part to 'concerns over the encroachment of social progressivism in the ranks [and] a lack of confidence in senior leadership.' 'The Department of Defense [DOD] is well aware of that data. Those are the kinds of concerns we were absolutely not allowed under any circumstances to acknowledge,' he said. He described the recruiting shortfall as 'an exceptionally sensitive topic.' 'In the military, when you're answering questions, you have to answer them according to what we call Public Affairs Guidance (PAG),' he said. 'PAG basically gives you issue specific information and talking points that are cleared for public engagement.' Unable to speak about these issues, Mr Spears said he was 'disappointed' and 'frustrated.' He often wondered whether there was 'an ulterior motive' for denying him the ability to share the information. On the one hand, he said, the DOD emphasized 'maximum disclosure with minimum delay, as long as it doesn't jeopardize the security of a mission.' But to the contrary, he said, '[the DOD's] denial of sharing facts has only empowered the gorilla in the room and gotten in the way of its mission.' Mr Spears and his family had planned for him to fulfill a thirty career, but in October, he chose to retire after two decades of service. 'In 2019, I began having doubts about the future of my career,' he said. 'There was a cultural fight in society that was becoming more and more evident in the Army itself.' According to him, the fight was between 'traditional, nonpartisan military culture' and 'another that was trending politically to the left.' " (Retired Army Officer Says He Was Barred From Publicly Recognizing 'Woke' Policies Are Harming Recruitment by J. M. Phelps). Time: September 22, 1935. Place: the Soviet Union. Action: the Council of People's Commissars establishes the highest military rank in the nation, the Marshal of the Soviet Union. In 1991, the last Marshal, Sergei Akhromeev, committed suicide after the fall of the Soviet Union. In the twenty first century, the marshals are back in business presiding over the suicide of America. In the twenty first century, America has lost its military. It lost it to the emperors and mobs of a new faith, a faith set forth in the chambers of a madman. Marx's creed of class war, together with its twentieth century race and gender offshoots, has overrun America, its military, its republic, and the traditions and institutions of the Enlightenment.

THE SORCERER'S MATHEMATICS

"Recourse was had by the girl's parents to a cunning man, named Burrell, residing at Copford, who has long borne the name of The Wizard of the North. But her case was of so peculiar a character as to baffle his skill to dissolve the spell. Application was next made to a witch doctor named Murrell, residing at Hadleigh, Essex, who undertook to effect a cure, giving a bottle of medication, for which he did not forget to charge three pounds, and promising to pay a visit on Monday evening to the old witch, Mrs Mole, and put an end to her subtle arts. The news of the expected coming of the witch doctor spread far and wide, and about eight o'clock there could not have been less than two hundred people collected near the cottage of Mrs Mole to witness the supernatural powers of the Hadleigh wizard." (The Ipswich Journal, September 25, 1858). The witch doctor, the wizard, the savage healer, the peddler of the supernatural, the man in primitive society who claimed mastery of magic to treat sickness and ward off evil. The witch doctor, an avatar of madness blighting nonWestern cultures the world over, from India to Africa to South America, placing his hapless victims in the chains of ignorance and superstition. In the twentieth century, the witch doctor made a transit and found new employment. He saw a job offer in the West, in a culture now sick and degenerating from an attack of unreason, and now in its terminal stages of decline, and he made an application, and was hired on the spot. The job offer was for a mathematician and he took up his responsibilities at once. When a civilization abandons reason, it is overrun by the weeds of social, moral and intellectual regression, and descends into a swampland of brute existence. In the West in the twentieth century, this abandonment commenced and saw the witch doctor invited into the precincts of a science which for centuries had stood as a shining model of intellectual rigor and achievement. Mathematics: the science of numbers, their operations and their measurement of space. Mathematics: the science which deduces from sets of axioms derived from observations, sets of theorems, and the properties of quantitative reality. Mathematics: a science essential to progress in engineering, medicine, business, finance, the natural sciences, computer sciences and social sciences, providing the basis for the astounding technological advancements of the modern world. Now look at the new class of witch doctors masquerading as mathematicians and see the death knell sound for a profession as old as civilization itself, and as vital to its survival and success. See the witch doctors proclaim that mathematics is not an abstraction from experience but an arbitrary and meaningless game. See them proclaim that mathematics has no relation to the world of physical objects. See them proclaim that mathematics is a multiplication table without content and an algorithm without reference. See them proclaim that mathematics consists of imaginary numbers and sets which are sets of nothing. See them proclaim that mathematics is an empty science based upon an ontology of nothingness. See them proclaim that mathematics is an ascent into the mystical heights of apriorism and is a soaring flight into nowhere: "The guiding idea behind formalism is that mathematics is not a body of propositions representing an abstract sector of reality but is much more akin to a game, bringing with it no more commitment to an ontology of objects or properties than ludo or chess. This idea has some intuitive plausibility: consider the tyro toiling at multiplication tables or the student using a standard algorithm for differentiating or integrating a function. It also corresponds to some aspects of the practice of advanced mathematicians in some periods—for example, the treatment of imaginary numbers for some time after Bombelli's introduction of them, and perhaps the attitude of some contemporary mathematicians towards the higher flights of set theory. Finally, it is often the position to which philosophically naive respondents will gesture towards, when pestered by questions as to the nature of mathematics." (Formalism In The Philosophy Of Mathematics by Alan Weir). Look at the new class of witch doctors masquerading as mathematicians and see them proclaim that mathematical statements have no meaning. See them proclaim that mathematical statements have no relation to the objects and properties of reality. See them proclaim that mathematics is a body of calculations calculating nothing. See them proclaim that mathematics is a system of symbols symbolizing nothing. See them proclaim that mathematics is a game of calculation calculating nothing. See them proclaim that mathematics is a system of rules of combination combining nothing. See them proclaim that mathematics must reject the standpoint of empiricism and realism and base itself on the standpoint of formalism, subjectivism and conventionalism. See them proclaim that the notion of physical reality is fraught with problems and mathematics must free itself of all commitment to it. See them proclaim that mathematics is system of nonentities, nonnumbers and functions which are functions of nothing. See them proclaim that mathematics is founded upon axioms which are axioms of nothing. See them proclaim that mathematics must reject all notions of nature and cosmos and scale mad peaks of pure mentalism capped by the psychotic snowfall of indeterminacy, incoherence, and A and non A at one and the same time: "The game formalist sticks with the view that mathematical utterances have no meaning; or at any rate the terms occurring therein do not pick out objects and properties and the utterances cannot be used to state facts. Rather mathematics is a calculus in which empty symbol strings are transformed according to fixed rules: "Thomae [Carl Johannes Thomae] puts it this way: 'For the formalist, arithmetic is a game with signs which are called empty. That means that they have no other content (in the calculating game) than they are assigned by their behavior with respect to certain rules of combination (rules of the game).' Thomae also remarks 'the formal standpoint rids us of all metaphysical difficulties'. One main motivation for formalists, then, is to block, avoid, or sidestep (in some way) any ontological commitment to a problematic realm of abstract objects. For standard mathematics entails a plethora of theorems affirming the existence of infinite realms of entities--numbers, functions, sets and so forth, entities which do not seem to be concrete. Formalists, in general, wish to divest themselves of any commitment to these domains which do, indeed, seem hard to fit into a thoroughly naturalistic conception of reality." (Formalism In The Philosophy Of Mathematics by Alan Weir). Look at the new class of witch doctors masquerading as mathematicians and see them proclaim that mathematical formulas are not true statements. See them proclaim that the mathematician is a mystical diviner, prognosticator, bead counter and crystal ball gazer whose revelations are independent of experience. See them proclaim that mathematics is a string of marks without meaning and computational aids computing nothing and established by a process of pure mental inspection. See them proclaim that mathematics is a system of pure syntax without semantics, content or intelligibility of any kind: "The gains which seem to have accrued to natural science from the use of mathematical formulas do not imply that these formulas are true statements. No one, not even the hardest pragmatist, is likely to regard the beads of an abacus as true; and our position is that the formulas of Platonistic mathematics are, like the beads of an abacus, convenient computational aids which need involve no question of truth. The sentences of mathematics merely as strings of marks without meaning. Such intelligibility as mathematics possesses derives from the syntactical or metamathematical rules governing those marks." (Steps Towards A Constructive Nominalism by Nelson Goodman and W. V. Quine, Journal of Symbolic Logic 1947). Look at the new class of witch doctors masquerading as mathematicians and see them proclaim that numbers are fictions which number nothing. See them proclaim that numbers are negative, irrational, complex and contradictory, and are everything and anything except real. See them proclaim that the operations of addition, multiplication, subtraction and division are operations performed on nothing. See them proclaim that the laws of commutativity and associativity governing addition and multiplication are laws governing no objects. See them proclaim that the process of exponentiation is the exponentiation of nothing. See them proclaim that mathematics, far from being an empirical science, is a morbid, unnatural exercise in mental navel gazing: "In the latter part of the nineteenth century several notable German mathematicians professed a formalist attitude to certain parts of mathematics. In conformity with Kronecker's famous 1886 declaration Die ganzen Zahlen hat der liebe Gott gemacht, alles andere ist Menschenwerk, [The whole numbers were made by God, everything else is the work of man]. Heinrich Eduard Heine (1821-1881), Hermann Hankel (1839-1873), and Carl Johannes Thomae (1840-1921) all understood theories of negative, rational, irrational and complex numbers not as dealing with independently existing entities designated by number terms, but as involving the useful extension of the algebraic operations of addition, multiplication, exponentiation and their inverses so as to enable equations without solution among the natural (positive whole) numbers to have solutions. In this way whereas an expression like  $2+5$  unproblematically stands for the number 7, an expression like  $2-5$  has sense not by denoting a number  $-3$  but as part of the whole collection of operations regulated by their characteristic laws such as associativity, commutativity, and so on." (Formalism by Peter Simons). For centuries skyscrapers towered above the West and loomed over the lives of its citizens. These skyscrapers were marked reason, science and sanity. In the twentieth century an earthquake struck. Amidst the thunderous roar of civilizational collapse, witch doctors, arrived from distant, alien, savage shores, donned the garb of mathematicians. They proclaimed that mathematics is a meaningless game played in accordance with arbitrary rules and containing nonsense elements. They proclaimed that mathematical systems which are complete contain contradictions and in such antisystems and nonsystems nothing can be known or proved. Proclaiming that mathematics is an exercise in formalism, inconsistency, undecidability and unintelligibility, wearing illustrious professors' robes marked with such names as David Hilbert and Kurt Godel, they helped to bury the West.

THE MARRAKESH EXPRESS

The Divine Comedy is fourteenth century narrative poem by Dante Alighieri. The preeminent work of Italian literature, and among the preeminent literary works in the West, the poem is a portrait of the afterlife imagined by the Christian church. The first part of the poem, called Inferno, describes a journey into hell. This realm is described as nine concentric circles of torment located below the surface of the Earth. It is the realm of those who have rejected morality and pursued animal appetites, animal vices, animal violence, and deployed the intellect to commit acts of fraud, force and malice. On March 2, 1956, a journey commenced in a storied land whose history reaches back to the ancient Romans, to the time when Mauretania, as the country was then called, became a client kingdom of the Roman Empire in 33 BC, and to the time when Roman Emperor Claudius annexed Mauretania in 44 AD, making it a Roman province ruled by an imperial governor. On March 2, 1956, a country called Morocco achieved independence from its colonial master France and embarked on a journey into hell on board an express train speeding out from an Islamist anticocosmos, whose motto, rejecting the lessons of freedom taught to it by the French, was Allah, Al Watan, Al Malik, or God, Country, King. On March 2, 1956, French colonization, established to bring order to a benighted land, came to an end. On March 2, 1956, a land which until France established its protectorate in 1912 in the Treaty of Fez, had lived under the rule of sorcery, the rejection of science, and round the clock robbery and violence committed by armed bandits, presided over by the Sultan's Community of the Faithful, returned to its precolonial jungle. On March 2, 1956, the Islamist hatred of civilization, which saw doctors and lawyers regularly beaten up by mobs outside their clinics and offices, a hatred which ruled the land until 1912, returned to power. Look at precolonial Morocco and see people without moral mass, weight or substance of any kind. See people antiquated, unchanged through the millennia, and unwilling to progress in any way, shape or form. See people forever frozen, forever ancient and forever incapable of flourishing in the manner of human beings. See people whose life and spirit were hermetically sealed up against reason and enlightenment. See people who lived their lives in dull, stuporous, unconscious inactivity. See people whose existence defined the words stagnation and vegetation. See people who lived in perpetual outer darkness and dilapidation, without light, wholesomeness or health, far removed from the ever fresh and ever growing radiance of Europe, located a short fourteen kilometers away. See people sick in the soul and in perpetual servitude to Islam, fierce in their religious fanaticism and fierce in nothing else, obstinate in their religious fanaticism and obstinate in nothing else, entrenched in their religious fanaticism and entrenched in nothing else, walled up behind dungeons of ignorance and superstition, weary and miserable whenever they could not bow down in blind submission to Allah, mindless puppets dangling from wires of fear and control, forever directed and racing backward in time, into the rubble and wreckage of history and humanity: "In Morocco, nature—which is often described as immutable—seems to have changed much more, undergone more modifications, through the centuries, than man—this unstable and mobile being—than the customs of the country [Morocco], than the psychology of its inhabitants, whose way of being seems to have been crystallized for several centuries. If we look closely at the Moroccans of today, we can read with an open book the obscure past of this weightless people, so little impressed by the influence of the ages that have passed on them almost without modifying it, without affecting its antiquated soul, without disturbing it in its refractory archaism. The phenomena, external to man, which surround him and which do not live, have varied, the scenery has been transformed—[Moroccan] man has remained frozen. Thus it appears, if we refer to the accounts of ancient travelers, that the soil, the climate, the atmosphere have changed with time, no longer permitting, for example, the cultivation of cotton and sugar cane, which once flourished on the land of the Maghreb. Now, while this slow evolution has been accomplished in the environment which has patiently adapted itself to new climatic requirements, the Moroccan has not evolved in parallel with the progress of other peoples, has not adapted himself to the new social conditions which have so profoundly modified the life of nations and the minds of individuals. Nothing has been able to penetrate his closed soul, entrenched behind the antiquated ramparts of his beliefs. All this [Moroccan] world exists and vegetates apart from time, without civilization, which nevertheless clashes with the old walls fierce and jealous of keeping their dilapidation, bringing it anything other than its rumor. This closed world, which lives on the margins of radiant Europe, this hermetic people nevertheless suffers from its weariness and misery, but refuses the help of its Western neighbors. The stubbornness of prisoners who are obstinate in their dungeons and who reject freedom, health, light and ease. A reverie that has gone back several centuries, the obstinacy of fanatics, the bias of a obsolete and disjointed puppet who refuses to make reparation to the worker. Moroccans vegetate, superfluous and obsolete, in a retrograde atmosphere, the wreck of finite ages and superstitious beliefs." (Witchcraft In Morocco by Emile Mauchamp). Now look at postcolonial Morocco and see a tragic repetition of history and a land travel full circle back into its ignominious past. See a land without human health or hygiene. See a land carpeted from border to border in animals dead and alive. See a land swimming in trash and filth. See a land whose cities, countryside, mountains and waterfalls lie buried in garbage. See a land poor in life, soul, work and economy. See a moral desert and vacuum bleed society white. See a landfill masquerade as a society and send foul emanations racing up to the heavens. See animal people unconcerned about the environment and unable to manage tourism. See a land unable to sort trash, dispose of trash or recycle trash but able only to produce trash and consume trash. See miasmatic dung heaps and black clouds of flies masquerade as a culture. See trash bins and trash heaps masquerade as neighborhoods and cities. See overflowing communal dumpsters masquerade as apartment complexes. See residential doors conceal reeking filth inside. See a land offensive to the senses, repulsive to look at, locked in primitive prehistory and, except for a brief interlude under French rule, dead for five thousand years: "I won't sugarcoat it: There's trash everywhere. This presents a constant burden to locals, and it's also unsurprisingly one of the first things Western tourists notice upon arriving in the country. Travel blogger Allane Milliane pulls no punches when describing Morocco: 'It's dirty and lacks hygiene,' she says. 'Papers, plastic, dead rats and pieces of dead animals such as chicken heads, flies everywhere, feces (both human and animal), and trash, lots of trash, I mean plastic bags filled with trash just sitting in the middle of the streets,' she writes of the sights to behold in Marrakech and Chefchaouen. 'On the road you will see trash everywhere, even in the desert and near beautiful waterfalls, to my disappointment,' she says of the Moroccan countryside. 'Can you blame it on the lack of education of the locals because Morocco is a poor country? Probably yes, but it's hard to understand that the same locals that rely on tourism so much, are so careless with the environment. It's simply sad.' Picture a typical suburban American neighborhood. It's trash night, and each household has put their two 96-gallon bins---one for recycling, one for the landfill---at the curb. By 9 am the following morning, the bins will be empty, their contents whisked away to the proper sorting and disposal facilities; or, more likely, shipped off to the developing world to become someone else's problem. Out of sight, out of mind. Single household recycling and garbage bins in the US state of Pennsylvania. These are emptied once a week by a private waste disposal company. Now imagine an old Moroccan medina. Have you ever seen two ninety six gallon garbage bins perched beside any of those gorgeous residential doors, waiting to be emptied to make room for next week's waste? No, you haven't. What about outside the medinas, in the newer neighborhoods composed primarily of apartment buildings? Does each household have those ninety six gallon garbage bins? Well, of course not! They live in apartments! Surely each complex has a communal dumpster! Wrong again. Apartment complexes do not have their own dumpsters, but most neighborhoods do. However, these dumpsters are pitiful, to say the least. They're small, constantly overflowing, foul smelling, and horrible to look at. The worst thing about these dumpsters is that they are often inaccessible to most residents of any given neighborhood, especially in lower income areas. Usually you can only find them every few blocks, and sometimes not at all." (In Defense Of Morocco's Everyday Sustainability by Morgan Hekking). The story of Morocco is a story as old as time. It is the story of animal people roaming distant lands for thousands of years, then taken into captivity by the forces of civilization, then set free by these self same forces beneath a surrender flag marked decolonization, and then reverting back to their primitive state. It is the story of savagery thundering for thousands of years in freedom and license, then pacified and chained up, and then unleashed with a gate key stamped the suicide of the West.