Source: Autographs: MGL, №1448-1450; №1967-1975; №1936; №8372; №5839; №5601-5602; №5307; №6792-6793; №1820; №8094-95; №3430; №6024-26.; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 27.

Note: The poem is found in sources untitled and under the titles: "March of Nations"; "Nations"; "March"; "October and the National Issue"; "National March"; "Nations".

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1932

Until April 23

He makes up a plan for celebrating the 25th anniversary of his literary career. According too the plan, the Georgian Federation of Soviet Writers should assist in bringing writers from Armenia, Azerbaijan, Abkhazia, Adjara, and cities across Georgia to Tbilisi. Announcements about the poet's literary and revolutionary activities over the past 25 years will be broadcast throughout the Soviet Union and worldwide via telephone, telegraph, and radio. Writers and critics will read reports about the jubilarian, and articles, poems, and memories dedicated to him will be published in periodicals. Artists, sculptors, and actors will participate in the jubilee events. The jubilee days will be captured on film. A scholarship in the jubilarian's name will be established at the university. Evening events and exhibitions dedicated to the jubilarian will be organized in various districts. A request will be sent to the Tbilisi council to name one of the city's best streets after the jubilarian. The state publishing house will print a large one-volume collection of the poet's works and begin working on a complete collection. The jubilarian will be awarded the title of "People's Poet of the Socialist Federative Soviet Republic of Transcaucasia". Collections of the poet's works will be published in Russian.

Source: MGL, d-472, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 293-296;

1932

Until April 23

In anticipation of the 25th anniversary of his literary career, he writes a text in the third person in Russian, highlighting his contributions to Soviet literature. The text states that the jubilee celebrates a poet who has always opposed literary vulgarity, lyrical languor, the tedium of everyday life, and the neutral poetry of landscape poets. He is a living symbol of the victory of Soviet poetry over symbolist mysticism and the false romanticism of the past. From the very first day of the proletarian revolution, he became its ally. His poetic journey is one of increasingly aligning with the revolution. His works – "Epoch", "Pacifism", "Revolutionary Georgia", "John Reed", "The East", and post-revolutionary poems – are prime examples of poetic growth. He is one of the greatest representatives of proletarian poetry, securing his place in the history of world revolutionary poetry.

Source: MGL, d-472, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 296-298;

1932

April 23

He is very happy that he has finally managed to buy a new suit.

Source: Olya Okujava's note in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 62; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 332.

1932

After April 23

At a poetry evening in the Writers' Union hall, he enters with a paper bag and sits down in a beautiful armless armchair that is usually occupied by Konstantine Gamsakhurdia. Konstantine doesn't react and takes a seat on a simple chair beside him. After a short while, Galaktion takes a fragrant red peach from the bag and offers it to Konstantine affectionately. Gamsakhurdia looks at him sternly, says nothing, and changes his seat.

Source: A. Ratiani, Recollections about Galaktion, Magazine Mnatobi, 1996, № 9-10, p. 128.

Dating: It is dated according to the time of the establishment of the Writers' Union of the Georgian SSR.

1932

April 27

He makes a note about the Central Committee of the Communist Party's resolution from April 25, which dissolves the Association of Proletarian Writers and establishes a unified union of Soviet writers. He notes that this resolution made an extraordinary impression due to its unexpectedness. He believes it will have significant consequences: it will broaden the narrow confines of proletarian literature that restricted the possibilities for expansive artistic creation; it will overcome narrow group ambitions; random individuals will be expelled from the circle of proletarian writers; literature will better fulfil its agitational tasks; and this decision will quell the mass discontent caused by the existence of the Association of Proletarian Writers, as even the majority of party members did not believe in them. They failed to gain the goodwill of the intelligentsia and the working class. Proletarian writers, caught in a powerless situation, were forced to fight with methods that stripped them of their moral integrity. In Galaktion's view, the party's decision will put an end to many misunderstandings, although no one knows what the transitional stage will be like.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-629, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 310-312.

1932

April

The magazine Sabtchota Mtserloba published the poem "October Symphony" ("In the streets, orators thunder...").

Source: Magazine Sabtchota Mtserloba, 1932, №3-4, p. 3-14.

1932

April

An article titled "October and Literature" by Alexandre Sulava is published in the magazine Sabtchota Mtserloba. The critic reviews works written after the October Revolution, specifically highlighting Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Epoch".

Source: Magazine Sabtchota Mtserloba, 1932, №3-4, p. 117-130.

May

1932

Until May 1

He is in Chkvishi, getting accustomed to drinking vodka and getting as disgustingly drunk as he does in Tbilisi. His mother sends him away from the village with curses.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 15-16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 303.

1932

May 16

He submits a request to the State Publishing House, asking for 300 roubles to be deducted from the royalties of his Book "Epoch".

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-118; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 98.

1932

May 22

At 7:40 in the evening, he writes an untitled poem, "The Sun Set in Your Trial...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №70-a, 1775; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 119.

1932

Until May 24

For the preparation of "October Symphony" for the 15th anniversary of October, the Radio's Artistic-Literary Section gives him an advance of 300 roubles, but he quickly spends it.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 303;

1932

May 24

He submits a statement to the Radio's Artistic-Literary Section, explaining that, according to the signed contract, he was supposed to prepare the Book "October Symphony" for the 15th anniversary of October. However, the 10-day deadline specified in the contract was not sufficient for this purpose. He requests an extension of two months, with the condition that if the Book is not ready within this time, he will personally pay the amount specified in the contract.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-119; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 98.

June

1932

June 1

Olya Okujava writes to Galaktion Tabidze in his diary, saying that she has all the portraits of him in a bouquet before her eyes. The memories of the days they spent together are frozen in magical dreams. The portraits change one after another in the rhythm of a fast-paced era, under the storms of the world's oceans and fiery epochs, accompanied by attacks, retreats, renewed offensives, and victories. She urges him to build giants and overcome all barriers.

Source: MGL, d-65, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 241.

1932

Until June 12

The magazine Mnatobi publishes the poem “March of the Nations”.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1932, №3-4, p. 1-2.

1932

June 12

In the newspaper Saliteruro Gazeti, under the collective title “Let’s Give Books to the Village”, statements from writers are published. The authors specify the number of books they personally intend to donate to village reading rooms and simultaneously urge other public figures to contribute books as well. In Ali Arsenishvili’s statement, he mentions that he is taking up this initiative at the challenge of Simon Chikovani and will donate twenty books to the village reading rooms. Additionally, the critic officially invites Galaktion Tabidze, Shalva Alkhazishvili, and Platon Keshelava to join this noble cause.

Source: Newspaper Saliteruro Gazeti, 1932, №14, p. 2.

1932

June 12

In newspaper Saliteruro Gazeti, a “Literary Chronology” is published, stating that a new issue of the magazine Mnatobi, the third and fourth numbers, has been released, featuring Galaktion Tabidze’s poems alongside works by other authors.

Source: Magazine Sabtchota Mtserloba, 1932, №14, p. 2.

Note: In the third and fourth issues of the magazine Mnatobi, Galaktion’s poem “The March of Nations” is published.

1932

Until June 25

He writes a poem “Let It Go, O Wind from Above”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-68, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 274-275;

Note: The poem has been published under the title “Applause” since 1966.

1932

Until June 25

He writes the untitled poem “Today, a meeting flashed by...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-68, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 275.

Note: The poem is part of the poem “I Want to Begin a Song,” dated 1934.

1932

June 25

In his diary, he writes that the first extraordinary congress of Georgian writers was supposed to take place that day but, after numerous postponements, was finally scheduled for June 27. This fact, he notes, indicates how unprepared they are for the April 23 resolution, through which the Party dissolved individual writers' organizations. He wonders who is responsible for this deliberately created anarchy, aimed at allowing free action amidst general confusion. He believes that the consequences of such a poorly veiled policy will soon become evident, as he can perceive from his long experience and familiarity with the workings of writers' organizations. He emphasizes the need for a sincere approach to writers, rather than mocking them. After April 23, three months of preparation for the congress amounted to only a few insignificant articles in Saliteruro Gazeti, trips to the provinces, and several meetings of the organizational committee. No one attempted to involve the entire active literary community in resolving serious issues. Instead, attention was focused solely on securing the positions of the chairman and deputy chairs.
Source: MGL, d-68, 11-12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 275-277;

1932

After June 25

In his diary, he writes about how a school library Book should be published. For this purpose, he plans to use the first Book edited by Shalva Radiani as a basis and add many more poems to reach a total of 256 pages. The previous Book was 84 pages long, so an additional 172 pages need to be filled. He drafts a list of poems to be included.

Source: MGL, d-68, 16-18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 278-279.

1932

June 27

At the special congress of Soviet writers of Georgia, Central Committee Secretary Giorgi Qurulashvili reads a report titled "The Resolution of the CEC of the Communist Party (Bolsheviks) dated 23/IV and the Tasks of the Georgian Soviet Writers", discussing the advancement of Georgian literature. According to the speaker, the achievements in the field of literature are reflected in a series of works published by such contributing authors as Galaktion Tabidze, Simon Chikovani, Razhden Gvetadze, and Sergo Kldiashvili.

Source: G. Qurulashvili, "The Resolution of the CEC of the Communist Party (Bolsheviks) dated 23/IV and the Tasks of the Georgian Soviet Writers", Magazine Mnatobi, 1932, №5-6, p. 276-302.

1932

June 27

At 9 PM, an extraordinary congress of Soviet writers of Georgia is held at the writers' club named after Egnate Ninoshvili. The event is opened by Panteliemon Chkhikvadze, a representative of the organizing committee. Following this, Galaktion is elected to the 17-member presidium of the Writers' Union of Georgia.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1932, №149, 28 June, p. 2; Magazine Mnatobi, 1932, №5-6, p. 325-326.

Note: According to newspaper information, the following were elected to the presidium of the congress: “G. Kurulashvili, M. Toroshelidze, S. Euli, S. Todria, A. Mashashvili, P. Samsonidze, N. Zomleteli, P. Chkhikvadze, A. Akopian, N. Mitsishvili, N. Lortkipanidze, S. Chikovani, L. Kiachali, G. Tabidze, T. Tabidze, M. Javakhishvili, and S. Shanshiashvili”.

1932

June 28

He attends the extraordinary congress of the Soviet writers of Georgia held at the Egnate Ninoshvili Writers' Club.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1932, №5-6, p. 325-326.

1932

June 29

The extraordinary congress of the writers of Georgia concludes its work. In the final stage of the event, they elect a council of the writers' union consisting of 47 members. Among the members of the council is Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1932, №152, July 02, p. 4.

1932

Until June 30

On the occasion of the tenth anniversary of the establishment of the Socialist Soviet Republic of Transcaucasia, and in recognition of their fruitful work on the literary front and their significant contributions to the rapprochement of the cultures of the working people of Transcaucasia, the Central Executive Committee awards honorary certificates to the following writers: Guguli Bukhnikashvili, Noe Zomleteli, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Alio Mashashvili, Petre Samsonidze, Galaktion Tabidze, Pantelimon Chkhikvadze, and Sandro Euli.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1932, №151, June 30, p. 2; Magazine Mnatobi, 1932, №5-6, p. 330.

July

1932

July 1

At the first session of the Council of the Union of Soviet Writers held at the Writers' Club named after Egnate Ninoshvili, he is elected in a 47-member council.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1932, №5-6, p. 327.

1932

July 1

He submits a statement to the State Publishing House requesting that 300 roubles be deducted from the account of his poem “Epoch”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-120; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 98.

1932

July 7

An extended session of the Presidium of the Union of Soviet Writers is held at the Writers' Club named after Egnate Ninoshvili, chaired by Malakia Toroshelidze, during which editorial boards for publishing organs are elected. Galaktion is elected as a member of the editorial board of the magazine Mnatobi, alongside Simon Chikovani, Sandro Euli, Titsian Tabidze, Panteliemon Chkikvadze, and other writers.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1932, №5-6, p. 328.

1932

After July 20

The magazine Mnatobi publishes a article by Giorgi Kurulashvili titled “The Resolution of the Central Committee of the Communist Party (Bolsheviks) of 23/IV and the Tasks of the Soviet Writers”. Among other topics, it discusses achievements in the field of literature. According to the critic, this progress is clearly evidenced by the works of prominent authors such as Galaktion Tabidze, Simon Chikovani, Razhden Gvetadze, and Sergo Kldiashvili.

Source: G. Kurulashvili, “The Resolution of the Central Committee of the Communist Party (Bolsheviks) of 23/IV and the Tasks of the Soviet Writers”, magazine Mnatobi, 1932, №5-6, p. 276-302; For dating: N. Sikharulidze, “Researches”, Tbilisi, 2025, p. 136.

Note: Giorgi Kurulashvili's same article was published in the magazine Sabtchota Mtserlobai, 1932, No. 1-2, p. 88-121.

1932

July 30

An announcement is published in the Saliteruro Gazeti, stating that on July 30, the Writers' Union and the Georgian Council of Trade Unions will hold a meeting together with the activists of the trade unions in Tbilisi. At the event, Galaktion Tabidze will read his own works alongside other writers.

Source: Newspaper Saliteruro Gazeti, 1932, №17, p. 4.

August

1932

August 5

The newspaper Komunisti publishes an article titled “Our Tasks on the Literary Front”, which is an excerpt from a report made by Giorgi Kurulashvili at a special meeting of writers. The author discusses the recent achievements of Georgian writers and highlights the contributions of Galaktion Tabidze, Simon Chikovani, Razhden Gvetadze, and Sergo Kldiashvili against the backdrop of ongoing literary processes. In his view, the artistic output of these writers demonstrates their efforts to align closely with the Soviet authorities and to embrace the tasks set forth by the party for literature.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1932, №181, August 5, p. 2.

1932

August 6

The newspaper Saliteraturo Gazeti publishes an article titled “For the 15th Anniversary of October”, which states that the State Publishing House of Artistic Literature plans to release a collection titled “Writers and Poets of the Great October” in Russian. The publication is scheduled to be in two volumes, and in the second volume, alongside works by other Soviet writers, poems by two Georgian authors - Galaktion Tabidze and Simon Chikovani – will be included.

Source: Newspaper Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1932, №18, p. 1.

1932

August

He writes an untitled poem “Georgia is like this...”.

Source: MGL, a-1718, AE in 25 books, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 329;

1932

August

He plans to travel abroad, either by joining an expedition to the North Pole aboard the ship “Shaligin”, traveling through Central Asia, or relaxing at a resort. However, he is unable to leave Tbilisi and is assigned to travel to Guria, Adjara, and Samegrelo to document Georgia’s tea plantations. He believes he has no other choice and must traverse the malarial swamps to avoid starving to death.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-496-11. G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 478-479.

September

1932

September 18

The newspaper Saliteraturo Gazeti publishes an informational text titled “On Creative Assignment”, which states that in connection with the 15th anniversary of the October Revolution, the Writers’ Union has sent writers to the main districts of the republic to write essays, poems, and short stories about the socialist construction taking place in Georgia, including Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Newspaper Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1932, №20, p. 4.

1932

September 25

He travels to South Ossetia with a delegation of writers, where he stays for several days and participates in meetings organized by the local population.

Source: Newspaper Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1932, №23, p. 4.

1932

September 27

He receives a letter from Sandro Euli, informing him that the writers' delegation will gather at the "Federation" publishing house at 1 PM on the current day to depart for Ossetia.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-453; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 263.

1932

Until October

He writes a poem titled "Where the Waves Are Now Sleeping".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №70-a, p. 1794; №2511; №2589; №3313; №547; №170 d., p. 2; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 31; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 241-242.

Note: The poem is also found in sources untitled ("Where the Waves Are Now Sleeping...").

October

1932

October 10

Olya Okujava visits the house. The door is open, as it is during the time of laying a loved one to rest. She enters carefully, trying not to disturb anyone, but Galaktion is not home. Dust covers everything. The manuscripts look mournful, and the pen seems to mourn its old, active life. It's as if a storm has passed, leaving only the wreckage of life behind. Olya gazes at the photo of herself hanging on the wall; she wants to take it down but hesitates to touch it, fearing it might groan. A poisonous pain stabs at her soul; she transfers her feelings to a letter and leaves it for Galaktion.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-374-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203.

1932

October 11

He receives a letter from Aleksander Chichikov, reminding him that the Transcaucasian Book Publishing House had notified him via telegram to visit and provide the promised poems for the jubilee collection. Chichikov writes that everyone else's material is ready, and they are waiting only for Galaktion, as publishing the collection of Transcaucasian poets without his poems would be unjustifiable. He also informs him that Nemchinov has arrived from Moscow and is very eager to obtain Galaktion's "Epoch". Nemchinov will wait for him at the Transcaucasian Book Publishing House on October 13, between 11 AM and 12 PM.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-453-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 263.

Note: Nemchinov's first name is not specified and cannot be identified. The collection in question is likely the one published in 1933 "Поэты Закавказья".

1932

October 11

He waits Olya Okujava at home, but she can't go because she waits for the tram for two hours and then returns empty-handed.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-374; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203-204.

Dating: This is mentioned in a letter dated October 12, 1932.

1932

October 11

Galaktion and Olya Okujava, who had a tense relationship, reconcile and celebrate this event at a restaurant, after which they make entries about it in Galaktion's diary. Galaktion promises Olya that he will dedicate the next volume of his works to her as his "companion of wanderers".

Source: Galaktion's and Olya Okujava's records, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 283-284.

1932

October 11

He writes a poem "There Is a Certain Fate".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-69, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 284.

1932

After October 11

He writes two versions of the untitled poem "That October Erected a Wall...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-69, 5, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 282, 285;

1932

After October 11

He writes the untitled poem "From the Garden, Where Dill and Coriander...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-69, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 286.

1932

After October 11

Olya Okujava writes a long letter, sharing that she had seen Galaktion with another woman before, but hadn't commented on it. This time, however, someone at the table began discussing his romantic intrigues in front of her mother. She had hoped Galaktion would admit his mistakes and remove his mask, but since that didn't happen, she feels compelled to expose him herself. She mentions that she will be leaving on Tuesday and asks Galaktion to come to her house while she is away to collect his belongings. She also requests the return of her photograph and pleads with him not to deceive her by claiming he intends to dedicate a Book to her.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-404; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 204-205.

Dating: Galaktion promised to dedicate his volume to Olya Okujava on October 11, 1932.

1932

October 12

Olya Okujava visits and leaves a letter with the curtains she intends to take for cleaning. She writes that the next day, she and her sister Mania will be leaving Tbilisi. Therefore, she won't be able to meet that day and will only come the following day, after saying goodbye to her sister. She promises to bring a cleaning lady on October 14 to tidy up their apartment well. She expresses concern about finding many things while searching for her Book that she would have preferred not to see.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-374; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203-204.

October 16

He submits a statement to the Pension Office, writing that his mother is seriously ill, he is experiencing severe financial difficulties, and he requests to receive his November pension in advance.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-120; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 98.

1932

October 16

Due to illness, he writes a power of attorney for Olya Okujava, authorizing her to collect his November pension and a 200-ruble honorarium from the magazine Sabtchota Mtserloba.

Source: V. Javakhadze, "Unknown: An Apology for Galaktion Tabidze", Tbilisi, 2020, p. 153.

November

1932 or earlier

November 9

He writes a poem titled "Idea".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5352. №5655; №28897-50, p. 138; №3411; №5545; №5669; №4781; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 29.

Note: The poem is found in sources untitled and under the titles: "November 9"; "Smolny, 1917"; "From the Ark, 1917"; "Smolny, 1917".

Dating: The autograph is dated November 9, and the poem was already published in December 1932.

1932

November 9

He receives an official request from the Writers' Federation to report on what he accomplished during his assignment. He is compelled to respond formally, stating that while working in the tea industry, he gathered and nearly completed processing materials, which now need to be rewritten and published in a magazine. This approach is necessary to fend off accusations at the Writers' Plenum. He also needs to address the issue concerning "Epoch". He has taken money but has not submitted the book. To justify himself, he can argue that it would not have been published anyway due to a lack of paper.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 296.

1932

November 15

In the newspaper Saliteraturo Gazeti, an article by Besarion Zhghenti titled "Fifteenth of October and Georgian Literature" is published. The critic provides a general overview of Georgian literature in the period following 1921, briefly discussing the most important authors, including Galaktion Tabidze. He notes that in recent years, the poet has broken the circle of mysticism and hopelessness, making the practice of socialist construction the central theme of his work.

Source: Newspaper Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1932, №24, p. 2.

1932

Until November 16

He writes an untitled poem "But Adjara Grew Tired of Having..."

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-72, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 310.

1932

Until November 16

He writes a poem "My Noon".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-72, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 311-312.

1932

Until November 16

He writes a poem "By Airplane".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-72, 5-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 313-317.

1932

November 16

He writes a poem "Winter".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-72, 9-10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 317-318.

1932

Until November 19

He writes an untitled poem "Winter days".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 288;

1932

November 19

In his diary, he writes that creating greatness requires focusing all one's energy on a single idea. If intuition enables a person to perceive a second greatness and firmly connect with it, this will be their first opportunity to create a dyad. Galaktion wishes to use his diary to capture the details abundantly provided by the grand contemporary era. Greater achievements will further illuminate the path that leads the strong will of an individual toward a single point. He reflects that the idea of an individual merging into the collective ideal is the most beautiful and worth living and fighting for.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 288-289.

1932

Until November 20

At the Writers' Palace, a closed distribution centre for writers is being opened. He reflects that this event does not change the gloom of the house, which has been a silent witness to the literary battles that have unfolded there over the past ten years.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

1932

November 20

At the Writers' Palace, he meets the editor of Saliteraturo Gazeti, Davit Demetradze, who reproaches him for ignoring the newspaper. Galaktion thinks this is merely a manoeuvre and that, in reality, it is they who are avoiding him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

Note: Davit Demetradze is mentioned in the source as the editor of Saliteraturo Gazeti.

1932

November 20

At the Writers' Palace, he attends various conversations: Iona Vakeli, Akaki Beliashvili, and Levan Metreveli discuss the crisis in cinema; Noe Zomleteli, Kote Pirtskhalava, and Polio Abramia talk about the comedic aspects of the collective farmers' market; while Ali Arsenishvili and others debate over coats and literary circles. He notes that all the housemaids and writers' wives are always in the closed distribution centre, as they have no other occupation, and this is where gossip begins. He wonders who will be the first victim of it.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

Note: The writers are referred to by their last names in the source

1932

November 20

At the Writers' Palace, he meets Nikolo Mitsishvili, who tells him that he has increased the writers' honorariums, reopened the distribution centre, and plans to open a canteen. Mitsishvili adds that once this task is completed, he intends to step aside. He praises him for these efforts.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

1932

November 20

At the Writers' Palace, he meets Simon Chikovani, who laments that his poem has been poorly translated. Galaktion, however, has a different opinion.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

1932

November 20

At the Writers' Palace, he meets Vano Tsulukidze and Theodore Chudetsky, who are looking for money.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

Note: In the source, Vano Tsulukidze and Theodore Chudetsky are referred to by their first names.

1932

November 20

At the Writers' Palace, he meets Grigol Meskhi, who is looking for a position at the Academy of Arts and asks him to intercede with Davit Kakabadze on his behalf.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

Note: In the source, Davit Kakabadze is referred to by the initials of his first and last names.

1932

November 20

At the Writers' Palace, he meets Davit Kasradze, who tells him that he shouldn't spend all his time in the office and needs to engage with practical life. However, Kasradze admits that he himself is impractical and doesn't even have proper shoes. Galaktion thinks he is a good man.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

Note: In the source, Davit Kasradze is referred to by his last name only.

1932

November 20

At the Writers' Palace, during a conversation about Ivane Machabeli, he disapproves of an inappropriate remark made by the proletarian poet Aleksi Gomiashvili about Akaki Tsereteli.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

1932

November 20

In his diary, he writes that the opinion expressed about him in Besarion Zhghenti's article "The Fifteenth of October and Georgian Literature," published in Saliteraturo Gazeti on November 15, is formulaic and that a better article about him needs to be written.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

1932

November 20

Late at night, he is visited by Kote Ratishvili, whom he thinks is a very good person.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289.

1932

November 20

In his diary, he reflects on the day and feels dissatisfied. He notes that at the Writers' Palace, the petty fussing, the desperate and unserious struggles between each other and with life, the quiet snickering instead of heartfelt laughter, are entirely incomprehensible to him. However, he does not blame anyone, as he understands the causes and origins of it all. To create something grand, it is necessary to sift through these people and find the best kindred spirits.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

1932

November 20

Olya Okujava's vacation comes to an end, and she returns to work, where her name is displayed on the red board.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289.

1932

November 20

Until 2 PM, he reads Charles Norris's novel "For a piece of Bread". The novel's protagonist, a woman named Jeanette, struggles for survival. New York is full of women like her, who throw themselves into their work and love what they do. Jeanette leaves her husband, refuses motherhood, and makes mistakes. She is a strong personality, but the sacrifices she makes lead her to terrible loneliness. Galaktion concludes that the novel is realistic, but like many other foreign writers, Norris does not point toward a solution. The novel reflects little of America's specificity; in this regard, Theodore Dreiser, Upton Sinclair, and Sinclair Lewis are far more distinctly American.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289.

1932

November 20

At 2 PM, he goes to the Palace of Arts. He learns that starting in December, "Evenings of Creativity" will begin, which will open with a presentation about him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289.

1932

November 20

In the evening, he reads Leonard Frank's novel "The Quartet of Men from Oxenfurt" with Olya Okujava. He doesn't write anything all day but still considers it a good day.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289.

1932

November 21

At 12 o'clock, braving the wind and frost, he leaves the house. A tram full of passengers breaks down near Zemeli, and he continues on foot along Rustaveli Avenue, where the freshly laid asphalt glistens. He hands over books for the Red Corner to Taras Makharadze, a social welfare worker, collects his pension of 180 roubles from the savings bank, and buys tobacco.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 291.

1932

November 21

On Rustaveli Avenue, he meets actor Vaso Arabidze, who has just returned from a film shoot in Batumi. Arabidze is upset with Saliteraturo Gazeti because they did not publish his memoir about Maxim Gorky, who personally mentioned him alongside Kamo. Galaktion comforts him, thinking that Arabidze is a very lively artist whose age is completely unnoticeable – he looks youthful.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 291.

1932

November 21

On Rustaveli Avenue, he meets artist Nikoloz Mariashvili, who has just returned from Kobuleti. He is amazed by Mariashvili's energy and gentlemanly demeanour, which he has retained despite facing many hardships.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 291.

Note: In the source, Nikoloz Mariashvili is referred to by his last name only.

1932

November 21

He dines at a restaurant, takes wine home, and fixes a broken electric stove. Olya Okujava returns late, and they set the table together, sharing their impressions of the day.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 291.

1932

After November 21

In his diary, he writes that a journey could begin in April, last through September, and cover Tusheti, Pshavi, Khevsureti, Racha, Lechkhumi, Svaneti, and the Akhaltsikhe region (Samtskhe-Saatabago).

Source: MGL, d-53, 41; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 126.

1932

November 22

Olya Okujava brings him tea in bed before heading to work. He reads Romain Rolland's novel "Annette" and is drawn to the words describing it as a history of inner life – honest, filled with joy and sorrow, contradictions and missteps, striving for unattainable truth and harmony of the soul. Stepping into a warm, sunny gallery, he feels a profound joy, similar to what he experienced only in childhood. The colours of a rainbow seem to envelop his future and the entire world. He reflects that to create something grand, he will need many such days.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 291-292.

1932

November 22

He is fined 3 roubles for boarding the tram from the front platform.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 292.

1932

November 22

In the evening, he apologetically returns his borrowed lamp to Domenti Aronishidze, leaving himself in darkness since his electric lamp has long been burned out. When Olya Okujava returns from work, she brings home a seventy-five cd/qm bulb, and they light up the room. Galaktion reflects that creating something grand requires a lot of light. He spends the evening reading Ivan Bunin's poems.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 292.

Note: In the source, Domenti Aronishidze is referred to by his first name.

1932

November 23

It is a sunny day, and he is in good spirits. Wednesday is his favoured day, as a fortune teller once told him. However, the day turns out to be filled with unexpected nightmares: he loses his scarf, galoshes, and money

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 292.

1932

November 25

It's freezing, and he has no coat, no shoes, and no hat. The phone doesn't work due to unpaid bills, and the rent for the apartment is also overdue. He couldn't reclaim a valuable item he left for repair – it will likely be sold. He can't collect his honorarium. After seven months away, the dreadful neighbours, whose absence was my only relief, are returning.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 292.

1932

November 25

He goes to Giorgi Kuchishvili's place, where he meets Shalva Radiani, who talks extensively about his hardships. He realizes that they are in even worse circumstances than he is.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 292.

Note: In the source, Giorgi Kuchishvili and Shalva Radiani are referred to by their first names.

1932

November 25

In his notebook, he writes that at the Palace of Arts, a person freezes both physically and spiritually, and there is no prospect of creating anything grand there.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 292.

1932

November 25

At the Writers' Palace, he meets Platon Keshelava, who reproaches him for having referred to him as a cynic two months earlier.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 292.

Note: In the source, Platon Keshelava is referred to by his first name.

1932

November 25

On the tram, he meets Panteleimon Chkhikvadze, who informs him that on December 10, the first plenum of the Council of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia will be held at the Writers' Palace. Chkhikvadze was summoned to the Central Committee to express his opinion about the event. He told them that the situation in the Federation is dire, and that Sandro Euli is not capable of managing such a significant undertaking. Chkhikvadze is attempting to rally the Tsisperkantselis to eliminate other factions, while the Tsisperkantselis, as usual, continue their opposition to Galaktion. Chkhikvadze claims he will prove to them that all of them stem from Galaktion and that a few of Galaktion's poems could overshadow them all. The poet reflects that Panteleimon Chkhikvadze seems to be planning an attack on Sandro Euli and is trying to win over some writers for this purpose. He resolves not to be fooled and not to let them exploit his conflict with the Tsisperkantselis for their own agenda.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 5-6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 292-293.

1932

November 25

At the Writers' Palace, he meets Vasil Barnovi, Apolon Tsuladze, Valerian Gaprindashvili, Grigol Tsetskhladze, Shalva Kashmadze, Elizbar Polumordvinov, along with editors and secretaries. He greets everyone politely but secretly despises them all. This makes him dissatisfied with himself.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 293.

1932

November 25

Due to financial hardship, he sells his trousers.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 293.

1932

November 27

In Saliteraturo Gazeti, a caricature drawn by Davit Natsvlishvili ("Don") is published, featuring the writers participating in Literaturis Gazeti. In the caricature, Galaktion Tabidze is shown standing arm-in-arm with Giorgi Kuchishvili.

Source: Newspaper Saliteraturo Gazeti, November 27, 1932, №25, p. 2.

1932

November 27

In Saliteraturo Gazeti, an article by Ali Arsenishvili titled “Under the Sign of Transformation” is published, which reviews the problems of Georgian literature following the victory of the October Revolution. It is noted that the adoption of Leninist ideology did not occur instantaneously. The task of eradicating the influences of ideologies alien to the working class stands before writers who are competing with the mastery of Soviet literature and possess such potential as Galaktion Tabidze, Simon Chikovani, and Sergo Kldiashvili.

Source: Newspaper Saliteraturo Gazeti, November 27, 1932, №25, p. 2.

1932

November

The Moscow literary-social and popular science illustrated magazine 30 Dghe publishes a translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Press”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-71, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

1932

After November

He writes an untitled poem, “Someone Split Open My Skull...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №70-a, p. 1795; №5666; №763; №5511; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 126; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 559.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Hallucination,” “By the House Destroyed by the Germans in Sokhumi,” “Destroyed House in Sokhumi,” “Like a Tumour,” and untitled (with the openings: “Like a Swift-Footed Marvel...” and “Like a Marvelous Tumour...”).

December

1932

Until December

Under the leadership of the Military Commission of the Soviet Writers’ Union, a Central Artistic-Literary Circle is established, with Galaktion Tabidze elected as its chair. This information is published in the magazine Mnatobi.

Source: “The Chronology of Culture”, Magazine Mnatobi, 1932, №10-12, p. 274.

1932

December 3

In the morning, he receives a letter from Grigol Tsetskhladze, informing him that the Writers’ Club administration has decided to organize an evening dedicated to his work. He is requested to visit the Writers’ House immediately upon receiving the letter to discuss the matter.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 6; Autograph, MGL, 24551-481; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 263. G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 293.

1932

December 3

He goes to the Writers' House to discuss the evening with Grigol Tsetskhladze but arrives late and misses him. From Razhden Gvetadze, the head of the Mass Sector, he learns that the event is organized by the Mass Sector, and Giorgi Natroshvili has been chosen as the speaker. Natroshvili is expected to present his theses in advance for distribution to the participants. According to Gvetadze, Natroshvili will be more objective than Ali Arsenishvili, who is in opposition. Galaktion also learns that a special issue of Saliteraturo Gazeti, featuring a poem, an article, and a photograph, will be published on December 16. The evening will be held before the first plenum of the Council of Soviet Writers of Georgia, as an evening dedicated to Niko Lortkipanidze is scheduled for after the plenum. Gvetadze promises to organize the evening well.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 293-294.

Note: In the source, Razhden Gvetadze and Ali Arsenishvili are referred to by their last names, while Giorgi Natroshvili is mentioned by his last name and the initial "D" for his first name, which is an error.

1932

December 3

At the Writers' House, he leaves an application with Nino Kldiashvili requesting a three-room apartment. He learns that Ivane Kipiani is gravely ill.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 294.

Note: In the source, Nino Kldiashvili is referred to by her initial and last name, while Ivane Kipiani is mentioned by the name "Ivika".

1932

December 3

He has lunch with Olya Okujava at the restaurant Palace.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 294.

1932

December 3

In the evening, he goes to the reading room and browses through newspapers. He reflects that organizing a creative evening is no trivial matter; it requires great wisdom and tactics.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 294.

1932

December 6

In his diary, he writes that in Besarion Zhghenti's article "October 15 and Georgian Literature" published in Saliteraturo Gazeti, as well as in Ali Arsenishvili's article "Under the Sign of Transformation" in the same newspaper, there were remarks about him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 294.

1932

December 6

In his diary, he writes that in an article published in the Moscow magazine Rost, Benito Buachidze once again repeats the same praiseworthy words about Galaktion that he wrote 5–6 years ago. The same issue also features the cover of his Book "Epoch".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 294.

1932

December 6

A creative evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze's work is scheduled for December 16 at the Writers' House, with Shalva Radiani invited as the speaker. Galaktion reflects that great energy and tactics will be necessary for the event.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 294.

1932

December 6

He is elected to the military commission associated with Sabtchota Mtserloba.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 294.

1932

December 6

Due to the carelessness of the previous day, he spends the entire day and night lying in bed. He has no money, coat, or shoes.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 294.

1932

December 6

He finishes reading the sixth volume of Romain Rolland and begins reading Ponanski's monograph on Mikhail Bakunin.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 294.

1932

December 6

At the headquarters of the Red Army, he attends the founding meeting of the Central Military Literary Circle. The charter and a calendar plan are approved. A decision is made to publish a decadal military literary newspaper and a monthly magazine. Galaktion is elected to the main leadership and as the chairman of the bureau for actively working Red Army writers. He has a deputy and a secretary. The circle will maintain connections with the peripheries and the entire Red Army of Georgia. He finds this work very interesting and views it with great enthusiasm and sympathy.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 294-295.

1932

December 6

At the founding meeting of the Central Military Literary Circle held at the Red Army headquarters, Irakli Abashidze tells him that a Book on Georgian literature by Mikheil Zandukeli has been published, which speaks favourably about him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 295.

1932

December 8

In his diary, he writes the list of members of the Military Commission associated with the Writers' Union: Kale Bobokhidze, Simon Chikovani, Erasti Torotadze, Nikoloz Bluashvili, Ioseb Buachidze, Giorgi Jibladze, Grigol Tsetskhladze, Davit Suliashvili, Alexandre Kancheli, and Karlo Kaladze. He notes that that evening's meeting will be attended by all writers from the Soviet Writers' Union working on military themes, as well as aspiring military writers from the army units. He considers the selection of people and the proper utilization of the situation as the key factors for achieving success.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-69, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 286.

Note: In the source, the writers are referred to by their last names, while Davit Suliashvili is mentioned by the pseudonym "Likheli".

1932

Until December 9

"Georgian Tea" provides him with 500 roubles for a creative assignment, but he spends it within five days and is unable to travel to the tea plantations.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 303.

1932

December 9

He goes to the Palace of Arts, where preparations are underway for the first plenum of the Council of Soviet Writers of Georgia. The atmosphere is primarily marked by backbiting and mutual ridicule. He reflects that the Central Committee of the Party will play the most decisive role, and those with friendly or familial ties to the Central Committee will prevail and take leadership positions, even though the writers do not trust them. He is uncertain whether Giorgi Kurulashvili, who works in the Central Committee and is supported by the Blue Horns and others, will back him unless he provides proof of his work. However, they themselves should already know that he was not given the opportunity to work and was forcibly distanced from other writers.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 295-296.

1932

December 9

He writes in his diary that the issue of Saliteraturo Gazeti is delayed, and the next issue, which was supposed to be dedicated to his creative evening, will not be ready by December 16, so the evening will also not take place. Therefore, he must direct all his energy and attention towards the military circle and the plenum, towards the mass of writers and the Central Committee. There, the question of his physical and moral existence must be decided. He plans to contact the authorities to unmask his opponents and make the "Soviet writers" pay dearly for their inhuman treatment of him. From long experience, he knows who the enemy is and who is an ally. He also has chances, and his supporters must raise their voices because the time for neutrality is over.

Source: MGL, d-71, 8-9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 295-296.

1932

December 9

Grigol Tsetskhladze tells him that there are six literary circles in Tbilisi, including those near the tramlines, Stalin's club, the leather traders, and the silk factory. Galaktion thinks of utilizing all these circles for the anniversary.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 296.

1932

December 9

He writes in his diary about the plenum manoeuvres. Titsian Tabidze insults everyone, saying that Simon Chikovani agrees to work with Kale Bobokhidze. Banquets are arranged where writers meet each other. The organization of a dining hall will serve as a justifiable excuse for Nikolo Mitsishvili regarding the question of why books are not being published. Paolo Iashvili reads poems in workers' clubs. Galaktion concludes that everything is shrouded in a veil of secrecy.

Source: MGL, d-71, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 296-297.

1932

December 9

He writes in his diary that the military literary circle is immediately told to be dismantled. Otherwise, the absence of writers – Simon Chikovani, Titsian Tabidze, Karlo Kaladze, Alio Mashashvili, Pridon Naroushvili, Giorgi Kachakhidze, Alexandre Sulava, Varlam Zhuruli, Grigol Tsetskhladze, Alio Adamia, Viktor Gabeskiria, Karlo Meladze, Boris Chkheidze, and Mikheil Chikovani – from the founding meeting of the circle at the Red Army Headquarters can only be explained as an unprecedented boycott.

Source: MGL, d-71, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 297.

1932

December 9

In his diary, he writes that it is appalling how Simon Chikovani stated at the Writers' Meeting that he would not work with Kale Bobokhidze. He is puzzled as to why Simon Chikovani would refuse to work with Bobokhidze, who is a promising young writer, capable of both working and leading, modest in his self-perception, and possessing analytical skills. He believes they desire authority but cannot work in an environment where Galaktion Tabidze is present, whose long-standing reputation intimidates them. He considers this a mistake, as Galaktion does not hinder anyone, yet they are afraid of his non-existent arrogance. He suggests that this could be overcome with solidarity, but they lack that sentiment, and a struggle is necessary. Kale Bobokhidze values him highly and places him above all other writers, promoting him to the position of bureau chairman. However, they aim to obstruct his path before the plenum and push him into a deadlock. He does not desire the chairmanship; he merely wishes to discourage certain cynics from their mockery. He concludes that to create something grand, one must not fear the future but instead focus on effective promotion.

Source: MGL, d-71, 9-11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 297-299.

1932

December 9

In his diary, he writes that the Federalists have become active. The next day, at the Palace of Arts, Konstantine Chichinadze will read a translation of the epic "The Song of the Nibelungs," and prior to that, Petre Mirianashvili read a translation of the "Iliad and the Odyssey". He is very curious about who will attend the event, who is supporting the Federalists within the Writers' Union, and who was part of the screening bureau of the Writers' Union at the previous plenum. However, he himself will not be able to attend the evening as he will be at a meeting.

Source: MGL, d-71, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299.

1932

December 10

In the newspaper Tsitel-Armieli, a notice is published about Galaktion Tabidze being appointed as the chairman of the “Central Military Literary Circle”.

Source: Newspaper Tsistel-Armieli, December 10, 1932, №284.

1932

December 11

In the new issue of Saliteruro Gazeti, he reads that his evening event is scheduled to take place at the Writers’ Palace on December 16. He thinks that no one there knows who is doing what – Grigol Tsetskhladze postponed the evening, while Razhden Gvetadze announced the event in the newspaper, even though they are separated by just one room. Since Razhden Gvetadze is a member of the Tsisperkantselis, he concludes that the Kantselis are plotting against him and trying to provoke him.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-71, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299.

1932

December 11

In his diary, he writes that the Military Literary Circle is gradually solidifying, but it lacks proper organization – there has been no broad campaign to register military writers, there is no funding, confusion prevails, and the writers’ attitudes remain unchanged. He believes that this must come to an end.

Source: MGL, d-71, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299.

1932

December 11

He attends a meeting with the head of the Political Department of the Second Division, Platon Mirotadze, where the issue of publishing a magazine is being decided. Funding will be provided by the People’s Commissariat of Education. At the military evening to be held at the Palace of Arts, the division’s commander, Nikoloz Bluashvili, will deliver a report.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-71, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

Note: Platon Mirotadze and Nikoloz Bluashvili are referred to by their last names only in the source.

1932

December 11

He takes an untitled poem, “Walk, Walk, Walk with Faith...,” to Tsitelarmieli for publication. He meets a young poet from Kutaisi, Ekvtime Tchanishvili, who brings an extensive poem and defends the phrase: “The night descended on the mountains like a peasant”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-71, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

Note: Ekvtime Tchanishvili is referred to by his last name only in the source.

1932

December 11

At the Writers' Palace, Alexandre Kutateli tells yet another lie, claiming that the magazine Sabtchota Mtserloba, from which Galaktion is expecting his honorarium, will be published on December 13. However, at the printing house, they inform him that this is not true.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

Note: Ekvtime Tchanishvili is referred to by his last name only in the source.

1932

December 11

There are conflicts at the Writers' Palace. Kale Bobokhidze accuses the Komsomol member, Aleksii Gomiashvili, of being overly ambitious, to which he responds, "How long will you hide in someone else's shadow?" Simon Chikovani, a member of the Military Literary Circle, tells Kale Bobokhidze, "Who dares to write categorical statements?" to which Bobokhidze replies, "If you don't want to work, they will send someone else". Galaktion observes these interactions, trying to discern each person's character and motivations.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

Note: Kale Bobokhidze and Aleksii Gomiashvili are referred to by their last names only in the source.

1932

December 11

Razhden Gvetadze tells him, "I should post you on the red board," while simultaneously submitting an announcement to Saliteraturo Gazeti about the planned evening for Galaktion Tabidze at the Writers' Palace. To Kale Bobokhidze, however, he supposedly said that Galaktion would not be able to work. The poet thinks he should not trust such a person who makes countless promises but does nothing.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

1932

December 11

In his diary, he writes that he very much wants to understand whether he might be mistaken in his assessment of Kale Bobokhidze.

Source: MGL, d-71, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

1932

December 11

At the Writers' Palace, Sandro Euli asks him about being without a coat.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

1932

December 11

At the Writers' Palace, he learns that Ali Arsenishvili has 40 members in the military writers' circle.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

Note: Ali Arsenishvili is referred to by his first name only in the source.

1932

December 11

At the Writers' Palace, Platon Mirotadze tells him that organizing his creative evening would take only one day.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

Note: Platon Mirotadze is referred to by his first name only in the source.

1932

December 11

At the Writers' Palace, Kale Bobokhidze tells him that his creative evening must definitely take place and that he should have informed Sandro Euli about it. Galaktion thinks that he has nothing to beg from anyone.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

1932

December 11

In his diary, he writes that he senses intrigues around him due to the approaching first plenum of Soviet Literature, as he is a significant force, and various groups are trying to win him over. Therefore, he must prepare steadfastly for his creative evening, as he feels great dishonesty from the Federation and wants to make them regret it.

Source: MGL, d-71, 12-13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

1932

December 11

He goes to the printing house where the newspaper Tsitelarmieli is being printed, featuring his poem "Walk, Walk, Walk with Faith...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

1932

December 12

He publishes an untitled poem, “Walk, Walk, Walk with Faith...”, in the newspaper Tsitelarmieli.

Source: Newspaper Tsistelarmieli, December 12, 1932, №286, p. 4.

1932

December 12

He sees his poem, “Walk, Walk, Walk with Faith...”, placed in the first position across two columns in the newspaper Tsitelarmieli. However, the first lines are faint and barely visible. He wants to find out why this happened – whether it is due to the printing house lacking quality ink or personal negligence.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-71, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300-301.

1932

December 12

In his diary, he writes that the day went wonderfully; his inner “self” was calm and bright.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-71, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301.

1932

December 12

The newspaper Tsitelarmieli publishes an untitled poem “Walk, walk, walk with faith...”

Source: Newspaper Tsistelarmieli, December 12, 1932, №286, p. 4.

1932

December 14

At the Palace of Arts, he attends Karlo Kaladze’s presentation on contemporary Georgian literature. Kaladze speaks about everyone, including Galaktion. He describes him as a great modern poet, an ally, and a companion, but mentions that sometimes he says whatever comes to his mind. Kale Bobokhidze reads one of Galaktion’s poems and discusses defensive literature. Simon Chikovani attempts to form a faction. Gamkrelidze keeps to himself, while Simon Chikovani references some essay he claims plays a leading role in Georgian literature. He names Konstantine Lortkipanidze, Karlo Kaladze, and Pridon Naroushvili as his associates, leading Galaktion to think of him as a typical factionalist. They also meet with critics. The poet concludes that the gathering revealed the group dynamics among the writers more clearly than ever before and sees all these manoeuvres as preparations for the first plenum of Soviet Literature in Georgia.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-71, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301.

1932

December 6-15

He borrows one hundred roubles from Baron Bibineishvili to organize his creative evening.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 303;

Note: Baron Bibineishvili is referred to by his first name only in the source.

1932

December 15

Kale Bobokhidze, in an arrogant tone, tells him that the materials must be ready today, even though he himself has not done what he was supposed to. Galaktion thinks that Bobokhidze is under the influence of Sandro Euli and imitates him in certain ways. This attitude strengthens Galaktion's resolve to fight and reinforces his belief in victory.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 14-15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301-302.

Dating: It is evident from the December 16 entry that this occurred the day before.

1932

Until December 16

He attends Sandro Euli's evening event, which is conducted very indifferently. He thinks that people are saving their energy for the first plenum of Soviet Literature in Georgia.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301.

Note: Sandro Euli is referred to by his first name only in the source.

1932

December 16

At the Writers' Presidium meeting at the Palace of Arts, Shalva Radiani is under attack. The state publishing house relies on influential members of the Writers' Federation, and Radiani is treated very poorly. He is so intimidated that, when discussing materials for the second issue of Sabtchota Mtserloba, he barely mentions Galaktion Tabidze. Galaktion understands this, as there is frequent talk about "red" and "white" mediocrity. They want to associate him with the first label, but they will not succeed. Saliteraturo Gazeti must be attacked head-on. He is also targeted by those writers who wish to exploit the Communist Party Central Committee's April 23 resolution and the dissolution of certain writers' organizations for their own benefit.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301.

Note: Shalva Radiani is referred to by his first name only in the source.

1932

December 16

At the Palace of Arts, he presides over the military writers' meeting.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301.

1932

December 16

In his diary, he writes that he made a significant mistake by addressing the head of the Second Division's Political Department, Platon Mirotadze, with a request for a military overcoat due to his lack of a coat. He believes he should not have taken this step just yet. He also notes that the head of the Military Literary Circle, Kale Bobokhidze, is more interested in personal matters than military work. Bobokhidze does nothing to establish circles among the Red Army members and frequently interferes with Galaktion's duties as chairman. Bobokhidze has unjustifiably attacked Davit Demetradze, opposes Aleksi Gomiashvili and Simon Chikovani, and accuses Giorgi Natroshvili of stealing the preface to his book, among other things. With such behaviour, Kale Bobokhidze places Galaktion in an uncomfortable position, as many assume he supports Bobokhidze. Bobokhidze, relying on Sandro Euli, feels emboldened but is unaware that Euli aligns with the right-wing faction.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 14-15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301-302.

1932

December 16

At the Palace of Arts, he attends the Writers' Presidium meeting. During the meeting, Aleksi Gomiashvili briefly mentions Galaktion's creative evening, while Varlam Zhuruli questions why Galaktion is always placed in the first position.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301.

Note: Aleksi Gomiashvili and Varlam Zhuruli are referred to by their last names only in the source.

1932

December 16

At the Writers' Presidium meeting at the Palace of Arts, Titsian Tabidze comments on Galaktion Tabidze's creative evening, noting that Davit Demetradze suggested, "Let us know in a timely manner, and we will publish materials about the literary evening in the newspaper".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 13-14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301.

Note: Davit Demetradze is referred to by his last name only in the source.

1932

Until December 16

He submits a statement to the head of the Second Division's Political Department, Platon Mirotadze, informing him, as the chairman of the Central Circle of Military Writers, that he does not have a winter coat or shoes and requests to be provided with a greatcoat and boots.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-238; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 99;

1932

December 24-28

He is ill, lying in bed, starving, and in despair over being without a coat, with no one inquiring about his condition. He laments that even Olya Okujava disappears precisely when he is unwell and has no one to bring him water.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 303.

1932

Until December 31

He is robbed multiple times – losing his coat, a jacket with documents, shoes, galoshes, three hats, and two new scarves.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 303.

1932

Until December 31

Throughout the year, he eats very poorly and loses interest in everything.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 303.

1932

Until December 31

He becomes resentful, distances himself from many good friends, and grows closer to those who had robbed him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 15-16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 303.

1932

Until December 31

He always takes his pension money in advance, but it only lasts for two days.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 303.

1932

Until December 31

He receives his honorarium for publishing “Epoch” in instalments, but it is spent almost immediately.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-71, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 303.

1932

Until December 31

He borrows one hundred roubles from the Central Executive Committee of Adjara and is unable to repay it.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-71, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 303.

1932

Until December 31

He borrows one hundred roubles from some organization, the name of which he cannot remember.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-71, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 303.

1932

Until December 31

His brother, Abesalom Tabidze, comes to visit him in Tbilisi, trying to convince him to change his lifestyle, but Galaktion does not listen, and Abesalom returns home.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-71, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 303.

1932

December 17-31

The creative evening for Galaktion Tabidze, scheduled for December 16 at the Georgian Club, does not take place because no one helps him with its organization.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-71, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 302;

1932

December 17-31

Everyone criticizes him for something; he has no money, walks around in torn shoes, and during this terrible crisis, no one offers him a helping hand.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-71, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 302-303.

1932

December 17-31

His only accomplishment is that he manages to obtain a coat.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 303.

1932

December 17-31

He contemplates suicide, a thought he believed he had banished forever.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 303.

1932

December 25-31

At the first plenum of the Council of the Soviet Writers' Union of Georgia, he delivers such a critical speech that he offends all the writers.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 302;

1932

December 27-31

He attends the first plenum of the Georgian Writers' Union held at the Egnate Ninoshvili Writers' Club, listens to the reports, and participates in the discussions surrounding them.

Source: "Chronology of Culture", Magazine Mnatobi, 1932, №10-12, p. 277.

1932

December 31

In his diary, he reflects on the events of the past year. Since he made many mistakes, there were very few positives – his cycle of poems, "Revolutionary Georgia," was published as a book, and he travelled. As for the negatives, he endured so much that he does not even want to recall them. No friend has visited him in the past five years. He contemplates the misfortune of dying alone in his room and being discovered only 15 days later, when the smell of decay reaches the courtyard.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 14-16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 302-303.

1932

December 31

He sets the clock precisely to midnight so its chime will announce the arrival of the New Year. He cleans the room and turns on the electric lights. He wants to greet the New Year cheerfully and forget the nightmares of the past few days.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-71, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 302.

1932

December or after

He reads Karlo Kaladze's poem "Uchardioni" in the magazine Mnatobi and writes notes on the first page.

Source: MGL, t-554, magazine Mnatobi, 1932, №10-12, p. 3.

1932

While crossing the street in front of the Marjanishvili Theatre, two unknown young men help Galaktion, who invites them to a restaurant. When he intends to pay, he realizes he doesn't have enough money and becomes quite embarrassed. The waiter tells him that it's not necessary since he left double the amount during his last meal. Galaktion thanks him and invites the young men, one of whom is Irodion Kharchilava, a poetry enthusiast from Tsalenjikha, to his place the next day.

Source: I. Kharchilava, Terenti Graneli, my life is only poetry, Tbilisi, Nakaduli 1984, p. 211-214.

1932

Irodion Kharchilava and his friend visit Galaktion, and they have a warm conversation. When the guests mention Terenti Graneli, Galaktion says that Terenti is his spiritual friend, praises his brilliant and raw talent, and expresses concern over his incurable illness.

Source: I. Kharchilava, Terenti Graneli, my life is only poetry, Tbilisi, Nakaduli 1984, p. 211-214.

1932

He writes a poem titled "The Murderers' Café".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №70-a, p. 1791; №4456; №122 d., p. 4; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 32. G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 242.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the titles: "Legend"; "Archaeologist Giorgi Nioradze in the Devil's Hole"; "Archaeologist"; and "Peter and Paul Fortress".

1932

He is elected as a member of the Central Executive Committee of Georgia.

Source: G. Tabidze's autobiography, MGL, d-659, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 461.

1932

In the poetry collection "Ertkhmad", dedicated to the 15th anniversary of the October Revolution, Galaktion Tabidze's poem "The Poet and October" is published.

Source: MGL, t-50, collection "Ertkhmad", Tbilisi, 1932, p. 62-63.

1932

In the poetry collection "Ertkhmad", dedicated to the 15th anniversary of the October Revolution, he underlines lines from the poems of Irakli Abashidze, Alexandre Abasheli, Valerian Gaprindashvili, Razhden Gvetadze, Vasil Gorgadze, Sandro Euli, Noe Zomletveli, Paolo Iashvili, Karlo Kaladze, Giorgi Kachakhidze, Giorgi Leonidze, Konstantine Lortkipanidze, Alio Mashashvili, Ilo Mosashvili, Titsian Tabidze, Giorgi Kuchishvili, and Grigol Tsetskhladze.

Source: MGL, t-50, poetry collection “Ertkhmad”, Tbilisi, 1932, p. 5, 7-19, 21, 23-27, 31-35, 38, 40-45, 56, 65-68, 70, 72-73, 79-80.

1932

He writes a poem “To N” (“What Do You Resemble? Deceitful...”).

Source: Autograph, MGL, №70-a, 1776; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 118.

1932

In the booklet of the Commission on Language and Terminology and the State Publishing House’s course-conference “On Establishing the Norms of the Georgian Literary Language”, he makes annotations and writes comments, particularly regarding “Goethe – Gote”. He notes that other forms exist: Giote (used by Ilia Chavchavadze), Giothe and Goethe (by Grigol Robakidze), Gete (by Titsian Tabidze), Goete (by Konstantine Gamsakhurdia), and Gote (by Simon Janashia). On the representation of the Ct complex as Qt instead of Kt, he remarks that this requires study, as it contradicts Silovan Khundadze’s correct view: Kt (hard with hard sounds) and Qt (soft with soft sounds). He reflects that transitioning to excessive softness depersonalizes the language, a tendency he attributes to Megrelians, who, in his view, “lisp like children”. While the author of this particular text, Simon Kaukhchishvili, is not Megrelian, Galaktion believes he aligns himself with the Megrelian Simon Janashia.

Source: MGL, t-63, “On Establishing the Norms of the Georgian Literary Language”, Tbilisi, 1932, p. 3, 10, 14.

1933

1933 or earlier

He translates the introductory part of the German philosopher Friedrich Nietzsche’s work “The Case of Wagner” (Der Fall Wagner).

Source: MGL, d-648, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 207-212;

February

1933

February 3

An announcement titled “Military Literary Radio Broadcast” is published in the newspaper Komunisti stating that a military literary radio broadcast will take place that evening at 9 PM, featuring participants such as Galaktion Tabidze, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Ilia Mosashvili, Kale Bobokhidze, and others.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1933, №28, February 3, p. 4.

1933

February 17

An announcement titled “Military Literary Radio Broadcast” is published in the newspaper Komunisti, stating that a military literary radio broadcast will take place that evening at 8 PM, featuring participants such as Galaktion Tabidze, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Kale Bobokhidze, Alexandre Shanidze, Razhden Gvetadze, Irakli Abashidze, and other authors, as well as novice writers from the Red Army units.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1933, №40, February 17, p. 4.

1933

February 21

In the “Chronology” section of the newspaper Komunisti, an announcement titled “Literary Evening to Celebrate the 15th Anniversary of the Red Army” is published, stating that a literary evening will take place today at 8 PM in the sixth military unit, featuring writers such as Galaktion Tabidze, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Titsian Tabidze, Valerian Gaprindashvili, Kale Bobokhidze, Giorgi Kachakhidze, Ekvtime Tchanishvili, and others.

Source: “For Galaktion Tabidze’s 25 Years of Literary Work”, Komunisti, 1933, №43 (3599), p. 4.

Note: Among the published contributors, the following are also named: M. Pkhaladze, Sh. Esebuia, Gognava, Chitaishvili, and Chitadze, whose identification could not be determined.

1933

February 21

In the newspaper Komunisti, a Chronology is published stating that, to mark the 15th anniversary of the Red Army, a literary evening will be held that day in the 6th Legion, featuring Galaktion Tabidze, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Titsian Tabidze, Valerian Gaprindashvili, and other writers.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, February 21, 1933, №45, p. 4. Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 22-23; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 324.

1933

February 21

At the Writers’ Club, a literary evening is held to celebrate the 15th anniversary of the Red Army, featuring Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-73, 28; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 325.

1933

February 21

He writes an untitled poem, “Is It Oghly or Zade...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-73, 29; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 326.

1933

Until February 23

He writes a poem “Our Army Leads the Way to the Sun”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №68; №2717; №2718; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 38; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 255.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the titles: “As They Load a Bullet into a Cartridge”; “Bullet-Bullet. On the Manoeuvres. Sniper”; “Military Horse”.

March

1933

March 1

Saliteraturo Gazeti under the heading “Let’s create a strong defence literature” publishes the letter of Aleksandre Sulava “Georgian Army and Writing”, in which it is stated that Galaktion Tabidze is in the leading ranks of the creators of defense literature. Among the poems dedicated to topics related to the army are: “Let all Red Army men stand like lions...”, “Pacifism”, “Go with faith!” and “Revolutionary Georgia”. The article includes a photo of “Georgia’s Defence Fiction and Literary Commission” with Galaktion Tabidze and Nikoloz Bluashvili, Platon Mirotadze, Kale Bobokhidze, Vladimir Dididze, and Giorgi Kuchishvili.

Source: Alexandre Sulava, “Red Army and Writing”, Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №5 (32), p. 2.

1933

March 1

In the Saliteraturo Gazeti, under the rubric “What We Are Working On”, an article by Karlo Meladze is published. The author notes that he has ready for publication “Letters on Georgian Literature”, which contains “specific” critiques of the works of Georgian writers. Among other writers mentioned is Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №5 (32), p. 3.

Note: Galaktion Tabidze is mentioned in the source by his initials and last name.

1933

March 1

New neighbours move in next to him.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-73, 37; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 327.

1933

March 1

He is unable to attend the literary evening at the Palace of Arts.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-73, 37; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 327.

1933

March 1

He is unable to submit his poem to the military anthology for publication and feels regretful.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-73, 37; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 327.

1933

March 2

At the Writers' Palace, the mass sector continues its work under the leadership of Razhden Gvetadze by convening meetings, but he is neither invited nor sent notifications.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-73, 39; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 327.

1933

March 2

He hears news on the radio about the Reichstag building fire in Berlin.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-73, 39; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 327.

1933

March 2

In his diary, he writes that salaries were not distributed anywhere that day, and everyone around is complaining about the lack of kerosene, bread, and wine. Nikoloz Lortkipanidze is searching for money because he has only 70 kopeks in his pocket.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-73, 39; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 327.

1933

March 2

Lado Tsagareli tells an interesting story about the Battle of Krtsanisi. He is surprised by how much this old military man knows, as the man says, "The heart thinks one thing, and the pen writes another".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-73, 39; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 327.

1933

March 2

Olya Okujava gives him a cigarette, bread, and one rouble.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-73, 39; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 327.

1933

March 2

In his diary, he writes that he must not forget the new method of defence – strengthening internally rather than attacking. New themes must be discovered. One of them has already been found: the 25th anniversary of his literary activity, for which he needs loyal correspondents.

Source: MGL, d-73, 41; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 328.

1933

March 2

In his diary, he writes that Ioseb Grishashvili will hold an event on the evening of March 7, because March 8 is International Women's Day, and in preparation for this day, women will promote him with domestic advertisements. It is possible that they themselves are the initiators of the evening. He considers it necessary to find a ticket.

Source: MGL, d-73, 41; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 328.

1933

After March 3

He makes a note about the disorder in Tbilisi. He mentions that outside the house adorned with a memorial plaque indicating that Pushkin lived there, fish have been brought for sale, creating an unbearable commotion.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-495, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 460.

1933

After March 3

He makes a note about Ioseb Grishashvili's literary evening. He mentions that Grishashvili has cleverly designed the event's poster, using Kote Marjanishvili's name for his purpose. The poster also states that the event is charitable and aims to support the poet. Galaktion is curious about the impression this poster leaves on other writers.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-495, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 461.

1933

After March 3

He makes a note that he won't give the hairdresser more than a kopeck, even if it breaks his heart, because he has no money.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-495, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 461.

1933

After March 3

He makes a note that for now he only needs Besarion Zhghenti and also new recruits, tough iron-chewing boys.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-495, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 461.

1933

After March 3

He makes a note that he recently encountered Ioseb Grishashvili in the street, who avoided him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-495, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 461.

1933

After March 3

He makes a note that the tone of Soviet periodicals regarding the Reichstag fire is optimistic and somewhat ironic. He thinks this is good.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-495, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 461.

1933

After March 3

He makes a note that he has very few friends, but he takes great care of them and will never abandon them.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-495, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 461.

1933

After March 3

He makes a note that he met Mikheil Javakhishvili, Baron Bibineishvili, and Konstantine Gamsakhurdia at the state publishing house. According to Galaktion, Javakhishvili answered questions indifferently and didn't even want to nod his head in greeting to his colleagues. He thinks this arrogance may be due to the fact that "Arsen Marabdeli" was staged in Russia. From Javakhishvili, Galaktion learns that Titsian Tabidze is ill and stayed in Moscow. In the note, the poet also mentions a young critic named Akaki, who was warmly greeted by Mikheil Javakhishvili. He thinks this Akaki is a rather insipid person and treats all writers the same way, believing that this young man will be of no use to anyone.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-495, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 462.

Note: The young critic Akaki may refer to Akaki Gatsserelia.

1931

March 6

He receives the mandate and the badge of membership for the Central Executive Committee.

Source: MGL, d-73, 44; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 329.

1931

March 6

He receives a travel ticket for the entire Transcaucasus by railway and by ship.

Source: MGL, d-73, 44; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 329.

1931

March 20

He writes an untitled poem, “The morning shines like a mirror...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-73, 50; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 330.

1933

March 20

He gives the poem “The East” in rough translation to Aleksander Nemchinov and Boris Brik. He thinks there is no need to rush, but the pace should be increased so that the selected translations of poems for printing by the Transcaucasian State Publishing House will be ready by April 12.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-77, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 364.

1933

March 21

He creates a plan for the collection of selected translations of poems to be published by the Transcaucasian State Publishing House, deciding which poems should be included from which books: 4 poems from the 1914 publication, 4 poems from “Artistic Flowers”, poems from the 1927 book, “Epoch”, “Pacifism”, “Revolutionary Georgia”, verses from the poems “Press” and “October Symphony”, some of which have already been translated, while others still need translation. He considers it necessary to include a good preface, a portrait, a high-quality cover and paper, and a bibliography of works at the end of the book.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-77, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 364.

1933

March 21

He likes the poem “The East” translated by Boris Brik, but he thinks it feels too cold in a Leningrad way and fails to convey the originality of the poem. However, some of Brik’s references, such as the mention of Aspasia, Pericles’ lover in ancient Greek mythology, are commendable. He believes that the four-line stanzas should be united.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-77, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 365.

1933

March 21

He gives Boris Brik the poem “To The Poet” for translation.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-77, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 365.

1931

March 22

In his diary, he notes that in the morning there is a Mnatobi editorial board meeting, and in the evening, a Writers’ Federation Presidium meeting.

Source: MGL, d-73, 51; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 331.

1933

March 22

He does not like the poem “To The Poet” translated by Boris Brik, and it needs to be corrected. He gives him another poem “The Eagle Attack on the Airplane” for translation.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-77, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 365.

1933

March 24

An informational article titled “The Work of the Defensive Artistic-Literary Commission” is published in the Saliteraturo Gazeti. The article reviews and summarizes the work of the commission, of which Galaktion was elected a member on October 7 of the previous year.

Source: Newspaper Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №7, p. 3.

1931

March 29

He notes in the diary that the Red Army’s evening is in Avlabari.

Source: MGL, d-73, 54; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 331.

April

1933

April 3

The editorial board of the magazine Mnatobi appeals to the Presidium of the Writers’ Union to plan a celebration for the 25th anniversary of the literary activities of the magazine’s former collaborator, poet Galaktion Tabidze. The Presidium of the Writers’ Union adopts a resolution to hold the anniversary celebration. A special organizational committee is formed, consisting of Pavle Sakvarelidze, Sandro Euli, Davit Demetradze, and Shalva Duduchava.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1933, №4, p. 157-158; G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-593, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 500.

1933

April 15

He writes a statement, noting that he is ill and requests the right to redeem the 120 roubles worth of bonds that were given to him.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-122; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 99.

1933

Until April 19

He receives a letter from Nikolo Mitsishvili, congratulating him on the 25th anniversary of his literary activity. The letter informs him that Giorgi is being sent to discuss his book, and afterward, Giorgi will relay Galaktion's opinion to the publishing house.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-452. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 276.

1933

Until April 19

The State Publishing House of Transcaucasia decides to publish a Book of Galaktion's poems and poems in Russian. Translators involved in the project include Boris Brik, Elene Sheri, Valerian Gaprindashvili, and Aleksandre Kancheli. The design of the Book is assigned to artists Ioseb Charlemagne and Davit Kakabadze, while Besarion Zhghenti is responsible for preparing the preface.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-593, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 501.

1933

Until April 19

The editorial boards of the magazine Mnatobi and Saliteraturo Gazeti decide to dedicate one issue each to Galaktion's anniversary.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-593, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 501.

1933

Until April 19

The composer Ivane Gokieli writes a march titled "Legions" based on Galaktion's poem.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-593, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 501.

1933

Until April 19

Petre Mirianashvili, who really likes Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Shoulder to Shoulder!" suggests composer Tamar Shaverzashvili write music for it, believing she can't find a better text for a song.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 190;

1933

Until April 19

Tamara Shaverzashvili writes a song based on Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Shoulder to Shoulder!"

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 190;

1933

19 April

He receives a short letter from the artist Aleksei Nemchinov, informing him that he is expecting the promised poems from him. Iosif Charlemagne is also waiting to paint his portrait on April 21, from 11 AM to 12 PM.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-401; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 264.

1933

After April 19

The magazine Pioneri publishes the sheet music for Tamar Shaverzashvili's composition based on Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Shoulder to Shoulder!"

Source: Magazine Pioneri, 1933, February, №2, p. 1 (0);

1933

After April 20

He receives a letter from his brother, Abesalom Tabidze. In it, Abesalom writes that first their mother fell ill, and then he did, but they are both well now. He expresses concern that they have not heard anything about Galaktion. Abesalom is worried about the rising prices but believes Galaktion should not have problems in this regard, as he is a member of the Central Executive Committee and a renowned poet. He advises him to somehow overcome his dependence on wine and asks him to take care, as typhus is spreading. He writes that the whole family is waiting for him, and even little Vasiko often asks why Galaktion hasn't come yet.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, h-24551-322; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 163, 164.

1933

April 23

The newspaper Komunisti publishes an announcement stating that on the current day at 8 PM, a celebratory evening will be held at the Writers' Palace to mark the anniversary of the "April 23 Historical Resolution" of the Soviet Central Committee. New works will be read by: Irakli Abashidze, Alexandre Gomiashvili, Konstantine Gamsakhurdia, Karlo Kaladze, Galaktion Tabidze, Titsian Tabidze, Mikheil Javakhishvili, Giorgi Leonidze, Simon Chikovani, Giorgi Kuchishvili, and other writers.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1933, №94, April 23, p. 4.

1933

April 26

The General Secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia, and editor of the magazine Mnatobi, Giorgi Kurulashvili, sends a letter to the staff of the magazine informing them that the next issue of Mnatobi will be dedicated to the 25th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's literary activity. He requests that they submit materials (poems, letters, memoirs) about the jubilee figure by May 5.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-593, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 501.

1933

April 26

He writes a poem titled "The First of May".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1248; №3265; №5552. №4763; №5381; №2725; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 37; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 250-251.

Note: The poem is also found in sources untitled ("May First...").

1933

April 28

He submits a statement to the publishing house Federatsia, requesting that 300 roubles be issued in the honorarium account for the Book "October Symphony", which was submitted for publication.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-123; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 99.

1933

April 29

The article "On the Year of the Historical Resolution" in the Saliteraturo Gazeti talks about the achievements that Georgia has achieved after the 1932 resolution of the Central Committee in the transformation of literary and artistic organizations. Among the builders of the country, who created important artistic productions in one year, the following are named: Simon Chikovani, Galaktion Tabidze, Mikheil Javakhishvili, Razhden Gvetadze, Aleksandre Shanshiashvili, Titsian Tabidze, Nikolo Mitsishvili, Leo Kiacheli, Davit Suliashvili, Sergo Kldiashvili, Ilo Mosashvili, Valerian Gaprindashvili and Aleksandre Kutateli.

Source: "At the end of the year of the historical resolution", Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №10 (36), p. 1.

1933

April 29

Beso Zhghenti's review of the publications of the magazine Mnatobi is published in the Saliteraturo Gazeti. It says that last year, one of the important forces of Soviet poetic culture - Galaktion Tabidze - was published in Mnatobi. His "March of Nationalities" and other poems are performed with the usual sincerity and expression of the poet.

Source: Newspaper Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №10, p. 2.

1933

April 29

Galaktion Tabidze's photo and brief information under the title "G. Tabidze's Anniversary", in which it is stated that the Presidium of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia and the editors of the magazine Mnatobi have decided to celebrate the 25th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's writing career, is being published. For this, a special commission was set up, which was tasked with planning the necessary jubilee events.

Source: "G. Tabidze's Anniversary", 1933, №10 (36), p. 4.

1933

April 29

In the Saliteraturo Gazeti, a review of works published in the magazine Mnatobi in 1932 is printed. The author of the review, Besarion Zhghenti, discusses Galaktion's works alongside those of other writers. He states that Galaktion is one of the significant poets of Soviet poetry, noting that his poem "March of Nations" and other works published in Mnatobi last year are characterized by the sincerity and expressiveness typical of the poet.

Source: Newspaper Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №10, p. 2.

1933

April 29

A general rehearsal for the jubilee evening celebrating Galaktion Tabidze's 25 years on the literary stage is held at the Palace of Arts. The event is opened by Malakia Toroshelidze, the chairman of the Writers' Union, who states that Galaktion Tabidze is the literary Everest of his era, and new masterpieces are expected from him. Next, critic Shalva Radiani speaks, linking Galaktion's early period of pessimism to the defeat of the 1905 Revolution. However, he notes that this pessimism is not one of complete despair; rather, hope always existed, waiting for a new revolution while feeling the weight of its delay. The critic emphasizes that Galaktion celebrates socialist construction in his works, but this theme does not encompass all the depths of his poetry. Other poets and critics, mostly from the new generation, follow, reading their own poems dedicated to him or reciting his verses. Throughout the evening, Galaktion remains pale and modest, as if seated in the dock for judgment.

Source: O. Okujava's diary, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 486-487.

1933

After April 29

Olya Okujava writes a lengthy article in Russian dedicated to the 25th anniversary of Galaktion's creative work. She states that numerous articles have been written on this occasion, but none of them reflect the poet's oeuvre as needed. Instead of analysis, they offer merely flattering words.

Source: O. Okujava's diary, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 485-486.

1933

After April 29

The publication of poems and articles about Galaktion Tabidze continues in journals and newspapers, but everything remains superficial. Leading up to the main anniversary evening, Galaktion becomes increasingly anxious. He is constantly called to clarify details related to the celebration, with inquiries coming from publishers, radio stations, and the film department. Some even come to him for translations of poems. Olya Okujava is sometimes forced to lie and say that he is not home to spare him from unnecessary stress. The poet does not even have a suit or shoes for the anniversary evening, nor does he have money to have them made.

Source: O. Okujava's diary, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 487-488.

1933

April

He is in Kutaisi and goes to Bagrati Cathedral.

Source: Sh. Chubinidze, Only This and the Fortress of Gori, newspaper Gori, №144, December 12, p. 4.

1933

April

The magazine Mnatobi publishes an announcement that the upcoming issue will feature a special section dedicated to the 25th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's literary activity and the 10th anniversary of his work in the journal. In connection with the jubilee date, the journal will include the poet's works, critical articles dedicated to his creativity, poems, memories, and a questionnaire about the jubilarian from other writers.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1933, №4, p. 157-158.

May

1933

Until May

He writes a poem "The first of May" ("First of May, first of May...").

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book V, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 21;

1933

May 7

Giorgi Kuchishvili writes the article "Galaktion Tabidze" ("I rarely try to write a publicity letter..."). It says that Galaktion is the greatest representative of Georgian literature of the twentieth century, which even his opponents cannot deny. Not only young people but also famous poets are influenced by his highly musical poetry.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1933, №5, p. 130-135.

1933

May 9

The artist Ioseb Charlemagne completes the painting of Galaktion's portrait.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-593, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 502.

1933

May 9

The Georgian Radio decides to organize a creative evening dedicated to Galaktion.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-593, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 502.

1933

May 14

The Tbilisi City Council passes a resolution to name one of the city's streets after Galaktion.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-593, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 502.

1933

May 14

The Union of Georgian Writers petitions the Council of People's Commissars and the Central Executive Committee of all Georgia to grant Galaktion Tabidze the title of People's Poet of the Republic.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-593, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 502.

1933

May

The portrait of Galaktion Tabidze is published in the magazine Mnatobi and under the rubric "Twenty-five years of Gal. Tabidze's poetic work", his poems "First May" are published, with the inscription "Poem delivered at an illegal evening in 1908, the first of May" and "Idea" ("Go, go, go!..." with faith).

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1933, №5, p. 112-113, 126-127.

Note: It says "Galaktion Tabidze" both on the photo and in the poem.

1933

May

Giorgi Natroshvili's article "Galaktion Tabidze" is published in the magazine Mnatobi. It reviews the work of the poet before the socialist revolution and after the revolution. It is said that in the first period of his work he was characterized by pessimism and fascination with French decadence but also had romantic motives. Therefore, the critic believes that he was a follower of romantic symbolism. The revolution reached him when only bohemia dominated his work. Therefore, he perceived the revolution as an eternal upheaval, destruction and whirlwind. He was wrong in this, but still he stood on the right side and, like Heine, exchanged the blue flower of romanticism for a revolutionary song. After that, the "ideal essence" of his poems grows in an upward line, and he is already in the position of an advanced Soviet writer. He overcame the vacillation of the petty-bourgeois intelligentsia and went through a difficult creative path. The revolution cured him of the pessimistic wounds and the pains of mystical fantasy and made him ideologically healthy. The theme of his poems today is not the “blue flower” and “the moon of Mtatsminda”, but the shock-brigade worker and the advanced worker.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1933, №5, p. 114-125.

1933

May

In the magazine Mnatobi, articles from the literary bulletin “Galaktion” of 1927 are published under the heading “Writers About Gal. Tabidze”: Davit Kldiashvili’s “Galaktion Tabidze” (“He was so sad in his youth...”) and Vasil Barnov’s “Galaktion Tabidze” (“A collection of poems with a heavy body...”). Giorgi Kuchishvili’s letter “Galaktion Tabidze” dated May 7, 1933 (“I rarely tried to write a publicist letter...”) is published here, and Tengiz Zhghenti’s recollection published in the 1928 issue of “Chronology of Revolutions” under the title “Galaktion Tabidze in the period of reaction” is reprinted. At the bottom is a friendly cartoon by Lado Gudiashvili, with the title “With a quick thunder / The blue horses are rushing...”.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1933, №5, p. 128-134.

June

1933

June 8

He submits a statement requesting that 300 roubles be issued from the amount allocated for his benefit.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-125; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 100.

1933

June 10

He submits a statement to the publishing house Federatsia, requesting that 300 roubles be issued in the honorarium account for the Book “October Symphony”, which was submitted for publication.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-124; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 99.

1933

June 15

He submits a statement to the publishing house Federatsia, requesting that 200 roubles be issued in the honorarium account for the Book “October Symphony”, which was submitted for publication.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-125; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 100.

1933

June 16

Galaktion Tabidze's photo and Levan Asatiani's article "Galaktion Tabidze" are published in the column "Writer's Tribune" of the Saliteraturo Gazeti. The author talks about Galaktion Tabidze's mastery of words and form, which has not yet been properly studied. Asatiani refers to the poet as an innovator of Georgian poetry, who had a great influence on modern Georgian poetry. The article draws a parallel between the poetry of Galaktion and Alexander Blok and shows the difference between Galaktion and the decadents. It is said that the pathos of the revolution completely changed his poetic perception.

Source: "Let us create a high-quality defensive literature", Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №13 (39), p. 2.

1933

June 18

In the newspaper Komunisti, an informative letter "Galaktion Tabidze's Jubilee" is published. It states that the board of the People's Commissariat of Education approved the petition of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia to organize the 25th anniversary of the creative work of the poet Galaktion Tabidze and filed a petition before the Central Executive Committee of Georgia to grant the title of People's Poet of the Republic to the jubilee. Philipe Makharadze is the honorary chairman of the jubilee committee and Ermilo Bedia is the chairman. The first meeting of the committee will be held on June 19, at which the date of the anniversary will be determined. On June 23, the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia is organizing a creative evening of Galaktion Tabidze in the Writers' Palace.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's Anniversary", Komunisti, 1933, №139 (3695), p. 4.

1933

June 19

The session of the Central Executive Committee of Georgia is being held, at which July 5 was determined as the day of celebration of Galaktion Tabidze's anniversary.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's Anniversary", Komunisti, 1933, №139 (3695), p. 4.

1933

June 20

The first meeting of the Galaktion Tabidze anniversary committee is held in the People's Committee of Education, at which it is decided that on June 29, an evening of creativity of Galaktion Tabidze will be held at the Soviet Writers' Club. Shalva Radiani will make a report on it; poets will perform poems and the jubilee himself will participate. On July 5, an anniversary evening will be held in the theatre, where representatives of the government, party, Soviet trade union and public organizations will make speeches, actors will read poems by Galaktion Tabidze, and there will be a musical section.

Source: "For the 25th Anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's Literary Work", Komunisti, 1933, №142 (3698), p. 4.

1933

June 21

The Central Executive Committee of Georgia adopts a resolution according to which: 1. Galaktion Tabidze is awarded the title of People's Poet, 2. The Commissariat of Social Security is instructed to appoint a personal pension for him, 3. The People's Commissariat of Supply is instructed to provide him with special supplies, 4. The Commissariat of Health is instructed to send him to the resort for the whole season, 5. The state publishing house is responsible for publishing a complete academic collection of his writings. The resolution is signed by the chairman of the committee, Philippe Makharadze, and the secretary of the committee, Tengiz Zhghenti.

Source: "For the 25th Anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's Literary Work", Komunisti, 1933, №153 (3709), p. 3.

1933

June 20

The newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes a notice that a petition has been raised regarding the awarding of the title of People's Poet to Galaktion Tabidze in connection with the 25th anniversary of his literary career. A jubilee committee has also been established to organize a creative evening dedicated to the poet's works.

Source: "Заря Востока", 1933, №140, p. 4.

1933

June 22

In the newspaper Komunisti, an information letter is published "for the 25th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's writing work", which states that a public committee has been elected to celebrate the anniversary, whose honorary chairman is Philippe Makharadze, chairman - Ermilo Bedia, deputy - Chichiko Imadedze, and members: Sandro Akhmeteli, Dimitri Arakishvili, Rafiel Aghamalian, Vasil Antidze, representative of the Turkish section "Askeri" of Writers' Union, Levan Aghniashvili, Baron Bibineishvili, Zhora Giorgobiani, Giorgi Grebenschikov, Lado Gudiashvili, Shura Duduchava, Davit Demetradze, Mateos Darbinian, Ambrosi Titberidze, Niko Kiknadze, Platon Mirotadze, Niko Lortkipanidze, Shalva Radiani, Karlo Oragvelidze, Pavle Sakvarelidze, Toma Sikharulidze, Petre Samsonidze, Besarion Zhghenti, Malakia Toroshelidze, Ushangi Chkheidze, Kandid Charkviani, Giorgi Kurashvili, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Mikheil Javakhishvili, Simon Khundadze and Korneli Katsarava, and the secretary of the committee is Levan Asatiani.

Source: "For the 25th Anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's Literary Work", Komunisti, 1933, №142 (3698), p. 4.

1933

June 22

The newspaper Komunisti publishes an informational announcement stating that a meeting will be held on June 23 at 6 PM in the editorial office of the same newspaper. The meeting is expected to be attended by writers including Galaktion Tabidze, Titsian Tabidze, Niko Lortkipanidze, Mikheil Javakhishvili, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Irakli Abashidze, and others.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1933, №142, June 22, p. 4.

1933

June 23

Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia organizes a creative evening of Galaktion Tabidze in the Palace of Writers.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's Anniversary", Komunisti, 1933, №139 (3695), p. 4.

1933

June 24

The newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes a notice that on June 29, a jubilee evening for Galaktion Tabidze will be held at the Writers' Palace, featuring participation from writers and representatives of various artistic fields.

Source: Галактион Табидзе – 25 лет творческой деятельности, “Заря Востока”, 1933, №144, p. 3.

1933

June 29

The Saliteraturo Gazeti publishes the letter of Eremia Astvatsaturov “An advanced Soviet writer”, in which he talks about the pessimism in the work of Galaktion Tabidze before the February Revolution, the transformation that occurred during the revolutions and the changes in the Soviet period.

Source: Eremia Astvatsaturov, “An advanced Soviet writer”, Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №14 (40), p. 1.

1933

June 29

The newspaper Komunisti publishes the announcement “Galaktion Tabidze's creativity evening”, which states that this evening will be held at 8 o'clock today in the Writers' Palace, organized by the Union of Writers, and entry is free. Malakia Toroshelidze will make an introductory speech, Shalva Radiani will read a report, writers will take part, and at the end Galaktion Tabidze will read new poems.

Source: “Galaktion Tabidze's creativity evening”, Komunisti, 1933, №148 (3704), p. 2.

1933

June 29

In the Saliteraturo Gazeti under the title “Galaktion Tabidze's Jubilee”, information is published about what events are being held in connection with the 25th anniversary of the poet's creative work. It is said that the jubilee committee was elected, whose honorary chairman is Philippe Makharadze, chairman - Ermilo Bedia, deputy - Chichiko Imadedze, and members: Sandro Akhmeteli, Dimitri Arakishvili, Levan Asatiani, Rafiel Aghamalian, Vasil Antidze, representative of the Turkish section “Askeri” of the Union of Writers, Levan Aghniashvili, Baron Bibineishvili, Zhora Giorgobiani, Giorgiy Grebenshikob, Lado Gudiashvili, Shura Duduchava, Davit Demetradze, Mateos Darbiniani, Ambrosi Titberidze, Niko Kiknadze, Iakinte Lisashvili, Platon Mirotadze, Niko Lortkipanidze, Shalva Radiani, Karlo Oragvelidze, Pavle Sakvarelidze, Toma Sikharulidze, Petre Samsonidze, Besarion Zhghenti, Malakia Toroshelidze, Ushangi Chkheidze, Kandid Charkviani, Giorgi Kurashvili, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Mikheil Javakhishvili, Simon Khundadze, and Korneli Katsarava. Then there is information about the evenings planned for July 5 at the Opera Theatre and today at the Writers' Palace, where Shalva Radiani will give a talk. It is also said that the Jubilee Committee will raise a petition before the government to give Galaktion Tabidze the name of People's Poet, to appoint a personal pension and to send him to summer house for the whole season.

There is also information about the jubilee evening planned for June 29 at the House of Writers, at which Shalva Radiani will read a report. According to the committee's resolution, the state publishing house is tasked with printing the complete academic edition of the jubilee works in several volumes and publishing the first volume this year. The literary newspaper is tasked with preparing a massive brochure with the portrait of the poet, biography and critical letters, which will be published by "Federation". The magazine Mnatobi is instructed to dedicate an entire section to Galaktion Tabidze in the next issue. The Union of Trade Unions and the Union of Soviet Writers are tasked with holding Galaktion Tabidze's creative evenings in workers' clubs in July-August.

Source: "Galaktion Tabidze's Anniversary", Saliteruro Gazeti, 1933, №14 (40), p. 2.

1933

June 29

Saliteruro Gazeti publishes information under the title "Armenian Art House" about the decision to dedicate the evening to the discussion of Galaktion Tabidze's work.

Source: "Armenian Art House", Saliteruro Gazeti, 1933, №14 (40), p. 2.

1933

June 29

Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia is holding a creative evening of Galaktion Tabidze in the Palace of Writers, during which Malakia Toroshelidze makes an introductory speech, Shalva Radiani reads a report, Pridon Naroushvili and Armenian writer Georg Grigorian make speeches, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Kale Bobokhidze, Boris Brik read poems, and finally, poems are read by the jubilee himself, to whom the public gives a long standing ovation.

Source: "Because of Galaktion Tabidze's Anniversary", Komunisti, 1933, №151 (3707), p. 4.

1933

June 30

In the Palace of Artists of Armenia, the Armenian fraction of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia is holding a creative evening of Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's creative evening, Saliteruro Gazeti, 1933, №15 (41), p. 2.

1933

June 30

The newspaper Komunisti publishes an article titled “Galaktion Tabidze’s 25th Anniversary”, noting that the poet’s anniversary event will be held on July 5 at the Opera Theatre. The organizing committee requests that organizations wishing to participate notify the committee no later than July 3. It also states that on June 30, the Armenian faction of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia will hold a creative evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze at the Palace of Armenian Artists. Suren Avchyan will present a report titled “Galaktion Tabidze and His Work”.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1933, №149, p. 4.

1934

Second half of June

Olga Baratashvili, living in Moscow, goes to the Writers’ Pantheon at Volkovo Cemetery with her mother to visit the grave of the poet Grigol Abashidze, who died in 1903. Tears fill her eyes as she addresses the deceased, lamenting, “Who left you here? Your place is in Didube. Many poets would have signed their names to your ‘Song of Despair.’”

Source: I. Megrelidze, Again recollection, newspaper, Tbilisi, December 3, 1982, N 277, p. 2.

July

1933

July 2

The newspaper Musha publishes a resolution from the Central Executive Committee of All Georgia regarding the granting of the title of People’s Writer to Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Newspaper Musha, 1933, №150, p. 3.

1933

July 3

The newspaper Komunisti publishes an informational letter “On the occasion of G. Tabidze’s anniversary”, in which it is stated that in connection with the 25th anniversary of the poet’s writing activity, the Presidium of the Council of Trade Unions of Georgia has developed a series of events: holding evenings in all workers’ clubs of Tbilisi, organizing meetings of the reader-activists with the poet in the main workers’ libraries, taking Galaktion’s work as a theme by workers’ literary circles. The publication states that the jubilee evenings will be held by the Kutaisi, Adjara, Abkhazia and South Ossetia branches of Soviet Writers of Georgia, where speakers will be sent by the Presidium’s resolution. For the anniversary, the editors of the Saliteraturo Gazeti will publish a special collection with the biography of the poet and critical letters about his work.

Source: “Because of Galaktion Tabidze’s Anniversary”, Komunisti, 1933, №151 (3707), p. 4.

1933

July 4

The newspaper Komunisti publishes Tengiz Zhghenti's memoir titled "On Galaktion Tabidze's Jubilee". The author recalls the poet's youth, particularly the period following 1905, and reflects on the hardships young Galaktion faced. He also remembers how members of the Bolshevik party disguised a literary event as a "Galaktion Tabidze Evening" and later distributed the proceeds to the poet.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1933, №152, July 4, p. 3.

1933

July 4

The newspaper Komunisti publishes an announcement stating that on July 5, a jubilee evening will be held at the State Opera Theatre to commemorate the 25th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's literary career.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1933, №152, July 4, p. 4.

1933

Until July 5

In the notebook, he writes about the Writers' Union's intercession to the telephone station, asking them to reconnect Galaktion Tabidze's phone in connection with the 25th anniversary of his literary debut. He states that payment will be made after the anniversary evening is held.

Source: MGL, d-77, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 367.

1933

Until July 5

An informational leaflet is printed with a circulation of 1000 copies to mark the 25th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's literary activity. After the brief biographical information, it is noted that his first two books express the deep social sorrow and hopelessness caused by the defeat of the 1905 revolution. The proletarian revolution of 1917 awakened the poet, and since then, he has dedicated himself to the education of workers, combining a high artistic culture and an unparalleled skill, creating magnificent poetic canvases. Therefore, the proletarian society celebrates the 25th anniversary of his work with a grand celebration, the Soviet government of Georgia recognizes his contributions to Georgian literature and awards him the title of People's Poet of the Republic.

Source: "Galaktion Tabidze 1908-XXV-1933".

Dating: The 25th anniversary of Galaktion's literary activity was celebrated at the Tbilisi Opera and Ballet Theatre on July 5, 1933.

1933

Until July 5

He writes a list of issues to be resolved for the anniversary celebration at the Tbilisi Opera and Ballet Theatre: including the entire cast – singers, directors, artists, pianists, orchestra, and choir; a one-act performance of the opera "Abesalom and Eteri"; performances by actors from the Marjanishvili Theatre; arrangements for placing announcements with the editorial staff of the Komunisti newspaper at a low cost; preparation of tickets and posters; a celebratory meeting in the morning and an evening performance with a full house. He believes that the event organizers do not feel accountable to anyone and will praise themselves if the evening succeeds or blame others if it fails. Therefore, he thinks he must act quickly, or the event will be doomed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-77, 18-20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 368.

1933

Until July 5

On the cover of his notebook, under the Russian printed inscription: "There are no bad or good factories, plants, institutions. There are bad and good leaders," he writes the untitled poem "Who said a factory is bad or good...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-78, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 368,

Note: The inscription in Russian reads: "Нет плохих и хороших заводов, фабрик и учреждений - есть плохие и хорошие руководители!"

1933

Until July 5

He writes a poem "The Peter and Paul Fortress".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-78, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 370.

Note: The poem, after its first publication in the third volume of works in 1940, was later published under the title "The Café of Murderers".

1933

Until July 5

He writes an untitled poem, "Nina had a little Blackbird...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-78, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 371.

1933

Until July 5

Ietim Gurji dedicates four poems: "To the Poet G. T"., "To Galaktion Tabidze", "Song", and "To the Precious Poet G. Tabidze".

Source: Ietim Gurji's record in G. Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-75, 3-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 350-352.

1933

Until July 5

He prepares a speech for his 25th anniversary of literary activity at the Tbilisi Opera and Ballet Theatre. He thanks everyone who considers this day not only his own but also the day of all his comrades and a celebration of Soviet literature. He emphasizes that all of Georgia knows that a writer is truly valued only in the Soviet Union, and it is here that literature has the opportunity to flourish.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-75, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 352.

1933

Until July 5

The publishing house Federation is releasing a special collection dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze's literary career titled "Galaktion Tabidze 1908-XXV-1933", which includes the poet's biography and articles about his work by Georgian critics Levan Asatiani, Simon Khundadze, Shalva Radiani, and Giorgi Natroshvili.

Source: "Galaktion Tabidze 1908-XXV-1933", Tbilisi, 1933, p. 3-106.

Dating: The notice published in the newspaper Komunisti states that a collection of articles dedicated to the poet's work will be printed for July 5 (Newspaper Komunisti, 1933, No. 151, p. 4).

1933

Until July 5

In the article published in the collection dedicated to the 25th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's literary career, Levan Asatiani expresses the view that Galaktion is a great innovator of Georgian poetry, whose contribution will become even clearer when his work is studied from a metrical and rhythmic perspective. The article states that Galaktion is one of the first representatives of Georgian symbolism. His early lyrics were characterized by individualism, pessimism, religious ecstasy, indifference to social motives, and obscurity. The poet adhered to the principle of "art for art's sake". The critic emphasizes that Galaktion's symbolist poetry differed from that of other Georgian authors of the same movement, the "Tsisperkantselis", due to its expressed indifference to the cult of ugliness, bohemia, and eroticism. According to the critic, for Galaktion, as for Alexander Blok, revolution is primarily a "cataclysm of grand destruction". Levan Asatiani also points out the similarities between Galaktion's and Blok's lyrical themes, highlighting the closeness of motifs and thematic thought in Blok's "The Unknown Lady" and Galaktion's "Mary" and "Snow". When discussing the poet's relationship with literary tradition, the critic notes that Galaktion revived the tradition of Georgian romantic poetry, and the distant echoes of "Merani" resonate with "Blue Horses". The critic briefly discusses Galaktion's poetic epic. He states that Galaktion's poems are characterized by pathos, and the variety of narratives does not allow the author to shape these works into a solid compositional whole. According to Levan Asatiani, Galaktion's early lyrics also demonstrate poems with social and revolutionary content, though these do not constitute the essential aspect of his early period's work. Among his contemporaries, Galaktion was the first to stand on the side of the revolution. Although primarily a lyric poet, he does not remain confined to the narrow realm of personal feelings and imbues his lyrics with social significance. His influence on young poets is natural and entirely logical.

Source: "Galaktion Tabidze 1908-XXV-1933", Tbilisi, 1933, p. 58-77.

Dating: The notice published in the newspaper Komunisti states that a collection of articles dedicated to the poet's work will be printed for July 5 (Newspaper Komunisti, 1933, No. 151, p. 4).

1933

Until July 5

He makes a note that the 25th anniversary of his literary debut has come to an end. He notes that each year of his creative activity was a challenge for him to become the true child of his era. He mentions that this aspiration in his being fought against fatigue and the rejection of life, and it was necessary to demonstrate resilience to declare a struggle against everything that was unhealthy in his essence. He states that the revolution gave him this opportunity. Now, pessimism is his past illness.

Source: MGL, d-648, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 212-213;

1933

Until July 5

In the essay published in the collection dedicated to the 25th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's literary career, Simon Khundadze initially reviews the poet's early lyrics. The critic notes that in the very first illegal poem, "May Day" (1908), the poet's aspiration for struggle is revealed. Early Galaktion, as a symbolist, listens to his inner world and is interested in the processes occurring within his own soul. Khundadze observes a symbolist perspective in Galaktion's early lyrics regarding the limitations of human language, suggesting that everyday, ordinary language cannot express the depth of the processes taking place in the spiritual realm. According to the critic, since traditional, everyday language was inadequate for this purpose, Galaktion faced the task of developing a new poetic language. For Khundadze, the poet's symbolist thought is evidenced by mysterious figures and symbols that point to something extraordinary. He states that Galaktion's mastery of versification was largely determined by his grasp of the theoretical principles of symbolism. From Khundadze's perspective, Galaktion's symbolism was relatively healthier and differed from that of the "Tsisperkantselis". Many elements connect Galaktion to the traditions of classical romanticism. This connection is evident not only in artistic thought and poetic vocabulary but also in the level of moods. Although Galaktion's worldview differs somewhat from that of Nikoloz Baratashvili, the "mystical melancholy of lost 'sweet childhood'" and the metaphysical desire to overcome the "border of fate" bind these two poets in a unique connection. The critic believes that Baratashvili's "soul of the wicked" echoes in Galaktion's "Elegy". For both Baratashvili and Galaktion, love serves more as a source of tragic feelings than as one of joy and tranquillity.

Source: "Galaktion Tabidze 1908-XXV-1933", Tbilisi, 1933, p. 12-36.

Dating: The notice published in the newspaper Komunisti states that a collection of articles dedicated to the poet's work will be printed for July 5 (Newspaper Komunisti, 1933, No. 151, p. 4).

1933

Until July 5

In the essay published in the collection dedicated to the 25th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's literary career, Shalva Radiani presents the path of the poet's creative evolution. The critic notes that Galaktion was one of the first representatives of symbolism in Georgian literature. After a traditional characterization of the poet's early work, Radiani points out that the Bolshevik takeover provided excellent conditions for the poet's creative growth. The poems "Epoch" and "Revolutionary Georgia" stand out for their high ideological-political pathos and realistic simplicity. Galaktion's poetic style changed, transitioning from idealism to the method of socialist realism. The critic also emphasizes how the understanding of the poet and the purpose of poetry shifts in Galaktion's post-revolutionary lyrics. While previously he viewed the artist as a somewhat distanced, divine creator from the masses, in the socialist reality, the poet acquires a realistic understanding of literature's purpose. He now perceives poetry as a weapon of class struggle. This is natural, as the social composition of the poet's audience has changed. Galaktion's poetry gained simplicity and a conversational tone. The acceptance of revolutionary reality distanced his lyrics from "romantic stability".

Source: "Galaktion Tabidze 1908-XXV-1933", Tbilisi, 1933, p. 37-57.

Dating: The notice published in the newspaper Komunisti states that a collection of articles dedicated to the poet's work will be printed for July 5 (Newspaper Komunisti, 1933, No. 151, p. 4).

1933

Until July 5

In the article published in the collection dedicated to the 25th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's literary career, Giorgi Natroshvili reiterates the assertions that formed around Galaktion's work in Soviet criticism of the 1930s. Like others, he divides Galaktion's poetry into two stages: the pre-revolutionary and post-revolutionary periods. According to the critic, despite following the mystical traditions of symbolism in his early stage, Galaktion Tabidze still remained a national poet, as he was deeply connected to the healthy traditions of national literature. Giorgi Natroshvili states that although European poetry influenced him, it did not sever his ties with his native literature, and the spiritual breadth of Georgian Romanticism continued to be the driving force behind his poetry.

Source: "Galaktion Tabidze 1908-XXV-1933", Tbilisi, 1933, p. 78-106.

Dating: The notice published in the newspaper Komunisti states that a collection of articles dedicated to the poet's work will be printed for July 5 (Newspaper Komunisti, 1933, No. 151, p. 4).

1933

Until July 5

In the period leading up to Galaktion's 25th literary anniversary, everyone approaches him with questions. Translators, newspapers, and the radio visit him. Olya Okujava becomes frustrated, unable to understand why the poet is being bothered with every little matter. She wonders what the anniversary committee is doing and why no one is asking whether Galaktion even has a suit and shoes, as it would be good for them to know that both are torn.

Source: O. Okujava's diary, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 488-492.

1933

July 5

Galaktion only manages to gather the money to redeem his new suit from the tailor in the afternoon. He heads home, rests for half an hour, and then rushes to the opera theatre, where the celebration of his 25th anniversary since debuting on the literary scene is taking place. Upon arrival, he discovers that some of the tickets were not delivered to the organizations on time and remained unsold. He grows frustrated because the anniversary committee, against his wishes, made some of the tickets paid. Just before the event starts, the theatre fills up. Olya enters the backstage and brings books to Galaktion. His hands tremble from nervousness.

The evening begins, with representatives from various party and Soviet organizations taking the stage, reciting his poems, and promising to start preparing an academic edition of his works, to translate his poems into various languages, and to name a street after Galaktion Tabidze. They note that no one at his age has had such an anniversary, but Galaktion is exceptional. Toward the end of the evening, the stage decorations shift, uniting the stage and the audience, and the event reaches its climax.

Source: O. Okujava's diary, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 489-490.

1933

July 5

On the 25th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's literary activity, the Transcaucasian State Publishing House, under the initiative of the responsible editor Paruir Folyan, presents the poet with a silver cigarette case adorned with ornaments and inscriptions.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 103; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 340.

Note: Paruir Folyan is referred to by his last name only in the source.

1933

July 5

A telegram is sent to the address of the Tbilisi Opera House on the day of the celebration of Galaktion's 25th anniversary of literary activity, in which his mother, Makrine Adeishvili, congratulates him on this significant date and wishes him good health.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-299-2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 94, 144.

1933

July 5

After the evening event, a grand anniversary banquet is held at the Palace Hotel. At the table, Galaktion speaks passionately about music, comparing Bizet and Wagner, ultimately expressing a preference for Bizet.

Source: O. Okujava's diary, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 489-490; A. Gatsserelia, Reeds and Gobelin, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 44.

1933

July 5

A decree granting Galaktion Tabidze the title of People's Writer is published in the newspaper Sabtchota Khelovneba.

Source: Newspaper Sabtchota Khelovneba, 1933, №8, p. 1.

1933

July 5

A report is published in the newspaper Sabtchota Khelovneba, stating that on June 29, a creative evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze took place at the Writers' Palace. Malakia Toroshelidze delivered the opening speech, Shalva Radiani presented a critical address, and the celebrant read new poems to the audience.

Source: Newspaper Sabtchota Khelovneba, 1933, №8, p. 1.

1933

July 5

A jubilee greeting from the editorial board to Galaktion Tabidze is published in the newspaper Sabtchota Khelovneba. It expresses the belief that the great honour – the title of People's Writer – bestowed upon him by the Soviet government will serve as a strong impetus for the poet to energetically contribute to socialist development.

Source: Newspaper Sabtchota Khelovneba, 1933, №8, p. 1.

1933

July 5

In the newspaper Sabtchota Khelovneba, Simon Khundadze's article "G. Tabidze and Modernity" is published. The author develops the idea that Galaktion Tabidze is the greatest figure in 20th-century Georgian literature. He underwent an interesting journey from symbolism to revolutionary romanticism. Like other Soviet critics, Simon Khundadze also divides the poet's work into two periods. When discussing Galaktion's symbolism, the critic notes that his symbolism was relatively healthier and differed from that of the "Tsisperkantseli" group. Khundadze emphasizes that Galaktion's mastery of versification was largely shaped by his study of the theoretical principles of symbolism. According to Simon Khundadze, Galaktion transformed not only the content of his poetry but also its form, achieving significant success in this process. The poet overcame abstraction and presented concrete images of socialist construction.

Source: Newspaper Sabtchota Khelovneba, 1933, №8, p. 1.

1933

July 5

In the newspaper Musha, the Georgian Trade Unions Council publishes a congratulatory message to Galaktion Tabidze on the 25th anniversary of his literary career. The message declares Galaktion as one of the greatest masters of Soviet literature, noting that he stood on the side of the revolution from the very beginning and created such high-quality works as “Epoch” and “Revolutionary Georgia”.

Source: Newspaper Musha, 1933, №153, p. 3.

1933

July 5

In the newspaper Musha, a brief biography of Galaktion Tabidze is published.

Source: Newspaper Musha, 1933, №153, p. 3.

1933

July 5

In the newspaper Musha, a letter by Beso Zhghenti titled “The Creative Path of Galaktion Tabidze” is published, in which the poet is declared a primary representative of artistic word. According to the author, Galaktion belongs to a group of creators who shape the stages of literary history. In the early stages of his work, the poet was characterized by scepticism and hopeless moods, but after the victory of the revolution, he became a singer of socialist reality. His poetic transformation was not a painless process, and he faced some setbacks, yet ultimately he created remarkable works such as “Epoch”, “Pacifism”, and “Revolutionary Georgia”.

Source: Newspaper Musha, 1933, №153, p. 3.

1933

July 5

The newspaper Musha publishes an announcement that on July 5, a celebration dedicated to the 25th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s literary activities will take place at the State Opera Theater. Party leaders and figures from the culture and arts sectors will participate in the event.

Source: Newspaper Musha, 1933, №153, p. 3.

1933

July 5

The newspaper Musha publishes a letter by Tengiz Zhghenti titled “On the Occasion of Galaktion Tabidze’s Jubilee”, in which the author recalls how the Bolsheviks organized a literary evening for Galaktion Tabidze in Kutaisi to increase the party’s budget. A portion of the proceeds was given to the poet, while the rest was allocated for printing proclamations and other party matters.

Source: Newspaper Musha, 1933, №153, p. 3.

1933

July 5

The newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti publishes an article by Giorgi Lomidze titled “The Great Poet of the Epoch”, which reviews Galaktion’s creative evolution. According to the critic, the poet's early works were a battleground of two forces: pessimism and revolutionary optimism. After the defeat of the 1905-1907 revolutions, Galaktion seemed to be overwhelmed by old traditions, and his poetic voice became more melancholic. However, during this same period, he wrote the poem "The First of May". Galaktion was awakened by the revolution, yet like Blok, he did not delve deeply into the revolutionary processes. Both poets "embraced the revolution as a wild symphony, as a storm of destruction and ruin". The author believes that "Menshevik Georgia constrained the poet". His true potential was fully revealed after the establishment of Soviet power. Now, Galaktion sings of the renewed village, construction, and the Red Army. "Epoch", "Pacifism", and "Revolutionary Georgia" are exemplary works created using the methods of socialist realism.

Source: G. Lomidze, "The Great Poet of the Epoch", newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, 1933, №153 (July 5), p. 3.

1933

July 5

The newspaper Tsistelarmieli publishes an article by Platon Keshlelava under the pseudonym "Tomas Boreli" titled "Galaktion Tabidze", which develops the perspective established in Soviet criticism regarding the two periods of the poet's work. According to the author, the previously individualistic Galaktion gained a sense of struggle from the revolution, and alongside his delicate poems, he created examples of "defensive poetry", linking them to the interests of the revolution.

Source: Tomas Boreli, "Galaktion Tabidze", Newspaper Tsistelarmieli, 1933, №153, p. 3.

1933

July 5

The newspaper Tsistelarmieli publishes a greeting from the fighters of the Second Division of the Frunze- Georgian Riflemen to Galaktion Tabidze. The fighters wish the beloved poet of Georgia, author of "Revolutionary Georgia" and "Pacifism", an inexhaustible creative energy in his service to the socialist homeland through the art of words.

Source: Greetings from the fighters and personnel of the Frunze Division, Newspaper Tsistelarmieli, 1933, №153, p. 3.

1933

July 5

The newspaper Tsistelarmieli publishes a greeting from the Commission for the Defence of Artistic Literature of Georgia to Galaktion Tabidze, in which the poet is referred to as a devoted fighter for the creation of defence literature, a grave digger of the past, and an enthusiast of the revolutionary era.

Source: Greetings from the Defence of Artistic Literature of Georgia to Galaktion Tabidze, Newspaper Tsistelarmieli, 1933, №153, p. 3.

1933

July 5

The newspaper Tsitelarmieli publishes a jubilee address from the editorial team to Galaktion Tabidze, describing him as “the greatest poet of Soviet Georgia”, the author of outstanding poems and verses. It also notes that among the poets of the old generation, he was the first to sense the revolution and actively engage in the process of building socialism.

Source: “Greetings from the editorial office of the newspaper Tsitelarmieli, Newspaper Tsistelarmieli, 1933, №153, p. 3.

1933

July 5

In the newspaper Tsitelarmieli, Vera Shubladze’s poem “To the Renowned Jubilarian”, dedicated to Galaktion, is published.

Source: V. Shubladze, To the Distinguished Jubilarian, Newspaper Tsistelarmieli, 1933, №153, p. 3.

1933

July 5

In the newspaper Tsitelarmieli, Vaniyon Daraselia’s “Open Letter to Galaktion Tabidze” is published, describing how a commander read Galaktion’s poem “Let Every Red Army Soldier Stand Like a Lion” to a military unit during a training break, prompting unanimous excitement and applause from the soldiers.

Source: Vaniyon Daraselia, Open Letter to Galaktion Tabidze, Newspaper Tsistelarmieli, 1933, №153, p. 3.

1933

July 5

In the newspaper Zarya Vostoka Shalva Radiani’s letter “Galaktion Tabidze - for the 25th anniversary of his literary work” is published, in which the creative evolution of the poet is discussed. Radiani notes that Galaktion is one of the first representatives of symbolism in Georgian literature. He was initially an exponent of petty-bourgeois ideology, and after 1917 he became a romanticist of the revolution. The Menshevik “democracy” did not give him a creative rise, and the Sovietization of Georgia created excellent conditions for the poet’s creative growth. Galaktion overcame petty-bourgeois individualism and became a singer of socialist construction. The poems “Epoch” and “Revolutionary Georgia” are distinguished by high ideological-political pathos and realistic plausibility. Galaktion’s poetic style has changed. From idealism, he came to the method of socialist realism. A critic of Galaktion’s work believes that it is difficult for the poet to present concrete images of socialist construction, although the reader hopes for extensive canvases suitable for the socialist era from Galaktion.

Source: III-ни, Галактион Табидзе – к 25-летию литературной деятельности, “Заря Востока”, 1933, №153, p. 4.

1933

July 5

The newspaper Komunisti under the column “25 years of G. Tabidze’s writing activity” publishes the speech under the title “Galaktion Tabidze” delivered by Malakia Toroshelidze at the Writers’ Club on June 26. It states that our era has added another peak to Georgian poetry in the form of Galaktion Tabidze’s work and that the poet was able to direct his greatest talent in the right way for the benefit of the people. He left behind the stage of literary companionship with the proletariat and became more organically involved in the construction of the artistic culture of the working class. Toroshelidze expresses his hope that Georgian Soviet writers will be able to give a worthy evaluation of Galaktion Tabidze’s work.

Source: “For the 25th Anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s Literary Work”, Komunisti, 1933, №153 (3709), p. 3.

1933

July 5

The newspaper Komunisti under the column “25 years of G. Tabidze’s writing activity” publishes Beso Zhghenti’s article “Celebration of Soviet Writing”, in which the author considers the support of the best poet such as Galaktion Tabidze to be an achievement of proletarian writing. He writes that Galaktion Tabidze’s arsenal of poetic methods is amazingly rich, he is a great master of rhyme and assonance, the poet found new impulses in the revolutionary changes and his creativity was motivated by healthy enthusiasm.

Source: “For the 25th Anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s Literary Work”, Komunisti, 1933, №153 (3709), p. 3.

1933

July 5

The newspaper Komunisti under the column “25 years of G. Tabidze’s writing activity” publishes Shalva Radiani’s article “Galaktion Tabidze”, in which Galaktion Tabidze’s work is divided into two periods, before the revolution and after it. In the first period, the motifs characteristic of decadent poetry were heard in his work, and in the second period, a turning point occurred, but there are still shortcomings from an ideological point of view. In his poems, there is no struggle for the deep development of the theme, and more general words. Nevertheless, from a pessimistic poet, he became a poet allied to the proletarian revolution.

Source: “For the 25th Anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s Literary Work”, Komunisti, 1933, №153 (3709), p. 3.

1933

July 5

The newspaper Komunisti under the column “25 years of G. Tabidze’s writing activity” publishes his photo and poems dedicated to the anniversary: “To Galaktion Tabidze” by Sapho Mgeladze (“If there was a white swan...”) and “To Galaktion Tabidze” by Giorgi Kuchishvili (“Not from the mountains of the Parnassus of the gods...”).

Source: “For the 25th Anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s Literary Work”, Komunisti, 1933, №153 (3709), p. 3.

1933

July 5

The newspaper Komunisti under the column “25 years of G. Tabidze’s writing activity” publishes the resolution of the Central Executive Committee of Georgia dated June 21, 1933 regarding the anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: “For the 25th Anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s Literary Work”, Komunisti, 1933, №153 (3709), p. 3.

1933

July 5

The newspaper Komunisti under the column “25 years of G. Tabidze’s writing activity” publishes a greeting from the Union Writers’ Organizing Committee and the Autonomous Department of Playwrights, signed by Alexander Fadeev, Valery Kirpotin, Vladimir Stavsky, Sergey Amaghlobeli and Lev Subotsky.

Source: “For the 25th Anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s Literary Work”, Komunisti, 1933, №153 (3709), p. 3.

1933

July 5

The newspaper Komunisti under the column “25 years of G. Tabidze’s writing activity” publishes the greeting of the Georgian Trade Union Council, which talks about how the poet overcame hopelessness, came to terms with the proletariat and joined the ranks of the fighters.

Source: “For the 25th Anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s Literary Work”, Komunisti, 1933, №153 (3709), p. 3.

1933

July 5

The newspaper Komunisti under the column “25 years of G. Tabidze’s writing activity” publishes an excerpt from Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Revolutionary Georgia” (“If not years...”).

Source: “For the 25th Anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s Literary Work”, Komunisti, 1933, №153 (3709), p. 3.

1933

July 5

The newspaper Komunisti under the column “25 years of G. Tabidze’s writing activity” publishes biographical notices of the poet. At the end of the text there is information that the poet is a member of the Central Executive Committee of Georgia of the Sixth Convocation and has been awarded the title of People’s Poet.

Source: “For the 25th Anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s Literary Work”, Komunisti, 1933, №153 (3709), p. 3.

1933

July 5

Saliteraturo Gazeti publishes Simon Khundadze's article "Galaktion Tabidze's Creative Ways" with the inscription "From Mystical Symbolism to Revolutionary Romanticism". The author chronologically reviews the poet's creative path, talks about the external form of Galaktion's poem, the forms, rhyme, rhythm and abundance of assonances, the influence of Russian symbolists, the changes experienced in the Soviet period, and says that he can do a lot more to enrich socialist poetry.

Source: Simon Khundadze, "Galaktion Tabidze's Creative Ways", Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №15 (41), p. 2.

1933

July 5

Saliteraturo Gazeti publishes the speech under the title "Galaktion Tabidze" given by Malakia Toroshelidze at the creative evening dedicated to the 25th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's work on June 29. According to the speaker, Galaktion Tabidze's work was extremely individualistic and pessimistic in a certain period, reached the highest forms of decadent poetry and fell into the danger of being empty of idealism, but during the period of the Soviet government, he was established as a great artist who reflects the powerful processes of socialist construction.

Source: Malakia Toroshelidze, "Galaktion Tabidze", Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №15 (41), p. 1.

1933

July 5

A poem dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze by Giorgi Kuchishvili is published in Saliteraturo Gazeti under the title "To a fellow poet" ("You have ascended among us...").

Source: Giorgi Kuchishvili, "To a fellow poet", Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №15 (41), p. 1.

1933

July 5

Davit Kakabadze's portrait "Galaktion Tabidze" is published in Saliteraturo Gazeti.

Source: Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №15 (41), p. 1.

1933

July 5

Shalva Radian's article "For twenty-five years" is published in the Saliteraturo Gazeti, which reviews the works of Galaktion from his first poems to the last period. The publication states that the struggle for the style of socialist realism is an urgent task for the poet. If earlier he had focused all his attention on musical verse, now he started writing with white verse as well.

Source: Shalva Radiani, "For twenty-five years", Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №15 (41), p. 1.

1933

July 5

Kale Bobokhidze's poem "To Galaktion Tabidze" ("Follow the paces with giant strength"...) is published in the Saliteraturo Gazeti.

Source: Kale Bobokhidze, "To Galaktion Tabidze", Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №15 (41), p. 2.

1933

July 5

The article "Galaktion Tabidze: biographical information" is published in the Saliteraturo Gazeti under the signature "L".

Source: L., "Galaktion Tabidze: biographical information", Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №15 (41), p. 2.

1933

July 5

Ioseb Grishashvili's article "My memory of Galaktion" is published in the Saliteraturo Gazeti, in which he recalls how, while working in the magazine Sakartvelo, he shortened and modified one poem sent to Galaktion for publication and how he invented the pseudonym "Tabi". Then he tells how, while working in the newspaper Eri, he attributed Titsian Tabidze's poem to Galaktion, because he did not know that another Tabidze also wrote poems. Grishashvili also invents the period of close relationship between him and Galaktion and the two poems dedicated to him by Galaktion, and at the end he mentions one feature of the great poet, Galaktion does not find it difficult to say good things about other poets, but he always manages to show his greatness along and cites Valery Bryusov's poetic quote for comparison: "He is the president of the poets and I give him my royal vote".

Source: L., "Galaktion Tabidze: biographical information", Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №15 (41), p. 2.

Note: The quote in Russian sounds as follows: "Он президент среди поэтов / Мой царский голос за него!".

1933

July 5

The poster of Galaktion Tabidze's jubilee evening planned at the Opera Theater is published in the Saliteraturo Gazeti.

Source: G. Tabidze's Anniversary: A Creative Evening, Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №15 (41), p. 2.

1933

July 5

A creative evening dedicated to the 25th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's creative work is being held in the State Opera Theater. The head of the literary department is Shalva Dadiani, the directors are Mikheil Chiaureli and Nikoloz Shengelaia, and the artist is Lado Gudiashvili. Malakia Toroshelidze, the chairman of the Union of Writers, gives a report on the creativity of Galaktion Tabidze, representatives of the state, party, professional and cultural-social organizations welcome the jubilee; Galaktion Tabidze's poems are read by actors: Veriko Anjaparidze, Khatuna Tchitchinadze, Dimitri Gagua, writers and poets: Shalva Dadiani, Niko Lortkipanidze, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Pridon Naroushvili, Sapho Mgeladze, Ilo Mosashvili, Grigol Tsetskhladze, Vaso Gorgadze, Giorgi Katchakhidze and Kale Bobokhidze; Participants: singers: Davit Andghuladze, Davit Badridze, Shalva Tsirghiladze, Ana Kolomeitseva, Petre Amiranashvili, Ekaterine Sokhadze, Nadezhda Tsomaia, Elisabeth Gastenina and a vocal quartet led by Grigol Kokeladze, with the participation of Shota Tsirghiladze, Boris Korinteli, Giorgi Gogichadze and Vladimir Germesashvili. Galaktion Tabidze reads his new poems, while M. Rogovskaya and I. Baratashvili provide piano accompaniment.

Source: G. Tabidze's Anniversary: A Creative Evening, Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №15 (41), p. 2.

1933

July 5

Saliteraturo Gazeti publishes information about Galaktion Tabidze's evening held at Writers' Club on June 29. It is written that the evening was opened by Malakia Toroshelidze, Shalva Radiani gave a report on the work of Galaktion Tabidze, Pridon Naroushvili and Giorgi Kuchishvili came out with greetings and words.

Source: Creative evening, Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №15 (41), p. 2.

1933

July 5

Saliteraturo Gazeti publishes information that on June 30, the Armenian fraction of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia held a creative evening of Galaktion Tabidze in the Palace of Artists of Armenia.

Source: Creative evening, Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №15 (41), p. 2.

1933

July 5

A short biography of Galaktion, excerpts from the poem "Revolutionary Georgia", and a greeting from the editorial board of the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti are published in the newspaper, in connection with the 25th anniversary of his creative activity. They wish him long life and new creative achievements in strengthening the positions of socialist literature.

Source: Newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, 1933, №153 (5 July), p. 3.

1933

After July 5

Olya Okujava writes in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook the list of books presented to the poet at the celebratory evening marking the 25th anniversary of his literary debut, held on July 5, 1933, at the Opera and Ballet Theatre by the Transcaucasian State Publishing House.

Source: MGL, d-78, 11-12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 379-380.

1933

After July 5

He writes an untitled poem “The theatre shines, the light is dazzling...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-75, 9-10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 354-355.

Note: The following poem was published under the title “Henry Barbusse at the Congress”.

1933

After July 5

He writes an untitled poem “As the sailor on an old boat...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №28897-50, p. 140; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 93. G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-75, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353-354.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the title “As the Sailor on an Old Boat”.

1933

After July 5

He writes a poem “Asphalt”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-75, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1933

After July 5

Along with the poem to be published in the manuscript magazine, he sends a letter to the seventh-grade students of the №4 Women’s School of the Railway. He writes that their letter reminded him of his student days when he also published a manuscript magazine. At that time, they faced many obstacles, but now they have the opportunity to arm themselves with more knowledge and contribute to the building of their homeland. He signs the letter as the National Poet of Georgia.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-245; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 87-88.

Dating: We date the information based on the time when Galaktion was awarded the title of National Poet.

1933

After July 5

Olya Okujava writes in her diary that ever since Galaktion Tabidze made his debut on the literary scene, he was constantly engaged in a struggle, and his nerves were always on edge. In the week leading up to the celebration of the 25th anniversary of his career, magazines and newspapers debated his work, but not a single in-depth analysis emerged. Olya is surprised that no critic in Georgia has been found who would not simply heap praise on the poet but would analyse his work in a cultured manner. Olya believes that the event at the Art Palace went well, but she regrets that no literary scholar has yet emerged to properly evaluate Galaktion’s poetry.

Source: O. Okujava’s diary, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 485-486.

1933

July 6

An article titled “Galaktion Tabidze” presents the main biographical details of the poet in the newspaper Kolektivizatsia, under the pseudonym “A. B-li”.

Source: A. B-li, Galaktion Tabidze, newspaper Kolektivizatsia, 1933, №89 (July 6), p. 3.

1933

July 6

In the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, an article by Eremia Astvatsaturov titled “Galaktion Tabidze” is published. According to the author, Galaktion is a classical representative of symbolism in our literature, and his poetry is a living stream of the current literary process. In the critic’s view, symbolism is characterized by indifference to socio-political issues, individualism, mysticism, and thinking in abstract symbols and artistic images. Galaktion’s early poetry is also marked by these features. Astvatsaturov believes that what set Galaktion apart from other symbolists was the fact that he did not possess a “complete worldview”; his creed was contradictory, with healthy impulses appearing alongside unhealthy tendencies. The October Revolution, which he witnessed firsthand, brought a shift in Galaktion’s consciousness. According to the author, after returning to Menshevik Georgia, the poet once again succumbed to pessimism, which was overcome after Sovietization. From that point on, he replaced the principle of “poetry above all” with a more utilitarian understanding of art. His conceptual thinking also became free of the symbolic obscurity. Galaktion Tabidze did everything he could to become a leading Soviet writer.

Source: E. Astvatsaturov, Galaktion Tabidze, newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, 1933, №154 (July 6), p. 3-4.

1933

July 6

The newspaper Komunisti publishes an informational letter with the title “The anniversary evening of G. Tabidze’s 25-year writing career”, which states that this evening was held the previous day at the State Opera Theatre. It was opened by the Chairman of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia, Malakia Toroshelidze, Rafiel Aghamaliani, Valerian Imadedze, Beso Zhghenti, Davit Dumbadze spoke with welcoming words. The public applauded the awarding of the title of People’s Poet to Galaktion Tabidze. Giorgi Kuchishvili, Vasil Gorgadze, Sapho Mgeladze, Kale Bobokhidze, Ushangi Chkheidze, Dimitri Gagua, Khatuna Tchitchinadze, and others read Galaktion Tabidze’s and their own poems.

Source: “The anniversary evening of G. Tabidze’s 25-year writing career”, Komunisti, 1933, №154 (3710), p. 2.

1933

July 6

In the newspaper Tifliskii Rabochii, an article is published that presents a short biography of Galaktion and the key dates of his literary and public activity.

Source: 25 лет творческой деятельности поэта Галактиона Табидзе, newspaper “Тифлисский Рабочий”, 1933, №153, p. 2.

1933

July 6

He writes in the diary that the 25th anniversary of his literary career was magnificently celebrated the day before at the State Opera and Ballet Theatre.

Source: MGL, d-71, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 304.

1933

After July 6

He reads the first volume of Ilia Chavchavadze’s works, published in 1914 by Mikheil Gedevanishvili. From the poems: “Bazaleti Lake”, “To the Mountains of Kvareli”, “Candle”, “Voice from the Tomb”, “Song, The Mother of the Plough”, “Prayer”, “I Too To Black Eyes”, “Man, Love...” and “The Moon”, he writes individual words, phrases, and makes notes. He marks the places where “the language is clumsy” or the caesuras are broken.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-71, 17-19; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 304-308.

1933

July 8

In the newspaper Kolektivizatsia, an article titled “G. Tabidze’s Jubilee Evening” is published, noting that on July 5, a ceremony was held at the Tbilisi Opera Theatre to celebrate the 25th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s literary career. The event was opened by Malakia Toroshelidze, the chairman of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia, who concluded his speech by reading the resolution from the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia granting Galaktion Tabidze the title of People’s Poet. The head of the Culture and Propaganda Department of the Regional Committee, Agamalian, stated that he would personally ensure the publication of Galaktion’s books in Armenian and Azerbaijani. A representative of the Tbilisi Council noted that Galaktion Tabidze’s name would be given to Tbilisi’s 12th school and one of the city’s streets. A scholarship named after Galaktion Tabidze would also be established. The jubilarian received monetary gifts from the Central Committee and professional councils.

Source: Newspaper Kolektivizatsia, 1933, №90, p. 3.

1933

July 8

In the newspaper Zarya Vostoka, an article titled “Galaktion Tabidze’s Creative Activity: 25th Anniversary” is published, recounting how the poet’s jubilee event took place at the Tbilisi Opera Theater on July 5.

Source: 25 лет творческой деятельности Галактиона Табидзе, “Заря Востока”, 1933, №155, p. 4.

1933

July 8

In the newspaper Tifliskii Rabochii, an announcement is published stating that on July 5, an evening dedicated to the 25th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's creative activity was held at the Tbilisi Opera Theatre. It is noted that the State Publishing House of Georgia will begin the publication of a complete collection of the poet's works. The Georgian film studio has decided to make a film based on one of Galaktion's poems. A scholarship named after Galaktion Tabidze will be established at the Faculty of Literature at Tbilisi State University. According to the decision of representatives from Adjara organizations, one of the schools in Adjara will be named after Galaktion Tabidze, and five scholarships in the poet's name will be created.

Source: 25 лет творческой деятельности поэта Галактиона Табидзе, newspaper "Тифлисский Рабочий", 1933, №155, p. 2.

1933

July 9

In the newspaper Molodoi Rabochii, an announcement is published stating that on July 5, an evening dedicated to the 25th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's creative activity was held at the Tbilisi Opera Theatre. Malakia Toroshelidze, the chairman of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia, delivered an introductory speech and read the resolution from the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia granting Galaktion Tabidze the title of People's Writer. Besarion Zhghenti provided a report on the jubilarian's creative work. Rafael Agamalian, head of the Culture and Propaganda Department of the Regional Committee, stated that he would personally ensure the publication of Galaktion's books in the languages of fraternal republics. The poet received congratulatory messages from writers' organizations in Russia, Armenia, and other fraternal republics. The final part of the event was dedicated to a musical section.

Source: Чествование Галактиона Табидзе, newspaper "Молодой Рабочий", 1933, №156, p. 4.

1933

July 9

In the newspaper Komunisti, an article by Benito Buachidze titled "Galaktion Tabidze" is published. The author reviews the poet's creative journey, discussing his early lyrics and works from his later period. He argues that Galaktion Tabidze refined Georgian poetry, enriching it both in terms of content and form. The critic highlights the thematic diversity of the poet's works and the artistic persuasiveness of his poems. He believes that Galaktion's greatest virtue as a poet lies in his acute sense of the leading ideas of his era and his heightened awareness of the times. Buachidze asserts that these qualities made Galaktion the beloved poet of the working class in Georgia. The fact that he is the first poet in Georgia to be granted the title of People's Writer, according to the critic, attests to how much the Soviet authorities value the writer.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1933, №156, July 9, p. 3.

1933

July 10

In the newspaper Komunisturi Ganatleba, an article titled “Galaktion Tabidze” is published under the pseudonym “G. M”, presenting the poet’s key biographical details.

Source: Newspaper Komunisturi Ganatleba, 1933, №53 (July 10), p. 3.

1933

July 11

He submits a statement to the director of the State Publishing House, Baron Bibineishvili, requesting that a 50-ruble honorarium of the magazine Mnatobi to be issued to him.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-240; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 135;

1933

July 11

Galaktion Tabidze’s creative evening is held on the open stage of the Orjonikidze club, which is opened by the mechanic Solomon Dolidze. Beso Zhghenti gives a speech, Vaso Gorgadze and Kirile Lortkipanidze read their own poems, and actors: Ushangi Chkheidze, Khatuna Tchitchinadze and Veriko Anjaparidze read poems dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze. On the same day, the literary circle at the club is given the name of Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: “In the Workers’ Clubs”, Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №16 (42), p. 1; “National Poet Galaktion Tabidze’s Evening”, Komunisti, 1933, №160 (3716), p. 4.

1933

July 14

The newspaper Komunisti publishes an information letter titled “People’s writer Galaktion Tabidze’s evening”, in which it is stated that the evening dedicated to the 25th anniversary of the poet’s writing activity was held on July 11 in the club named after Orjonikidze, opening speech was given by Beso Zhghenti and Siko Dolidze, G. Charkhishvili welcomed the poet on behalf of the reading club, poems were read by actors Ushangi Chkheidze, Khatuna Tchitchinadze and Veriko Anjaparidze, writers Vasil Gorgadze and Konstantine Lortkipanidze took part as well, and finally the jubilee himself read poems.

Source: “National Poet Galaktion Tabidze’s Evening”, Komunisti, 1933, №160 (3716), p. 4.

1933

July 15

Benito Buachidze’s article “The great creator of the revolution” is published in the magazine Drosha. It reviews the historical situation during which Galaktion Tabidze appeared on the literary scene. According to Buachidze, he is the greatest lyricist, whose thoughts and feelings are expressed in the most beautiful artistic form. His work is characterized by the romance of the revolution and contains elements of socialist realism. The author cites the poet’s greatest merit as the profound sense of the advanced ideas of the era and time. This explains why he was the first Georgian writer to be awarded the title of People’s Poet.

Source: Benito Buachidze, “The great creator of the revolution”, magazine Drosha, 1933, №13, p. 5-8.

1933

July 15

The magazine Drosha publishes biographical information of the poet under the title “G. Tabidze’s anniversary”, as well as Davit Kakabadze’s portrait of the poet.

Source: “G. Tabidze’s Anniversary”, magazine Drosha, 1933, №13, p. 5-8.

1933

July 18

A meeting with Soviet writers takes place in the Tbilisi silk factory, during which the foundation of the literary circle is laid. Galaktion Tabidze, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Shalva Dadiani and others read their own works.

Source: “Writers in the Silk Factory”, Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №16 (42), p. 4.

1933

July 21

Information under the title “G. Tabidze’s evening” is published in the column “Chronology” of the newspaper Komunisti, stating that today, on July 21, an evening celebrating the 25th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s writing career will be held in the club named after Plekhanov, which will be organized by the literary circle together with the library at the club.

Source: “G. Tabidze’s evening”, Komunisti, 1933, №166 (3721), p. 4.

1933

July 21

An evening dedicated to the 25th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s literary work is being held in the Plekhanov club, where Beso Zhghenti makes a speech and Galaktion Tabidze is greeted by representatives of workers’ organizations.

Source: “In the Workers’ Clubs”, Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №16 (42), p. 1; “G. Tabidze’s evening”, Komunisti, 1933, №166 (3721), p. 4.

1933

July 21

The meeting is held with the workers of the Stalin Steamship Repair Plant in Tbilisi. Besarion Zhghenti reads a report on Galaktion’s poetry at the event, and the factory workers also deliver speeches.

Source: D. Jgharkava, Galaktion Tabidze’s anniversary evening with us, newspaper Chveni Sakviri, 1933, №168 (July 23), p. 3.

1933

July 23

In the newspaper Chveni Sakviri, an article by D. Jgharkava titled “G. Tabidze’s Jubilee Evening with Us” is published, discussing the meeting held with People’s Poet Galaktion Tabidze at the Stalin Steamship Repair Plant in Tbilisi on July 21.

Source: D. Jgharkava, Galaktion Tabidze’s anniversary evening with us, newspaper Chveni Sakviri, 1933, №168 (July 23), p. 3.

1933

July 24

An article by Vano Tzulukidze titled “Galaktion Tabidze’s Anniversary” is published in Saliteraturo Gazeti. The author notes that the anniversary evening, held at the Opera House on July 5, dedicated to the 25th anniversary of his literary activity, is an evaluation of the writer’s journey. According to the chairperson of the anniversary evening, Malakia Toroshelidze, Galaktion Tabidze truly deserved the recognition from the Communist Party and the working class as their poet.

Source: Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, 24 July, №16, p. 1.

Note: The author signs the article with the initials V. Ts.-dze.

1933

July 24

In Saliteraturo Gazeti, the speech delivered by Galaktion Tabidze at the anniversary evening held on July 5 at the Opera House, dedicated to the 25th anniversary of his literary activity, is published, along with a friendly caricature by Davit Natsvlishvili (Doni). The poet notes that he is moved by the great love and recognition shown to him, which gives him strength and energy for his intensive work. He ends his speech with the poem “To Revolutionary Georgia” (“Revolutionary, unspoken, unpronounced...”).

Source: Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, July 24, №16, p. 1.

1933

July 24

In the newspaper Molodoi Rabochii, an article titled “Galaktion Tabidze’s 25 Years of Creativity” is published under the pseudonym “G”. The article reviews the poet’s path of evolution. Galaktion’s early lyrics are characterized as expressions of petty-bourgeois decadence. According to the author, after the victory of the October Revolution, Galaktion frees himself from his previous moods and aligns himself with the circles of those building socialism, after which he creates his best poems. He is recognized as a member of the intelligentsia that unhesitatingly embraced the revolution and stood alongside the working class. The article notes that the State Publishing House will soon publish the poet’s poems in Russian.

Source: Г., XXV лет творчества Галактиона Табидзе, newspaper “Молодой Рабочий”, 1933, №144, p. 3.

1933

July 24

In the newspaper Molodoi Rabochi, a translation of Galaktion's poem "Abkhazia" by Boris Brik is published.

Source: Newspaper "Молодой Рабочий", 1933, №144, p. 3.

1933

July 24

Saliteraturo Gazeti publishes an informational article "Writers in the Silk Factory", which talks about the meeting with Galaktion Tabidze and other writers at the Tbilisi Silk Factory on July 18 of this year.

Source: "Writers in the Silk Factory", Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №16 (42), p. 4.

1933

July 24

An announcement is published in the Saliteraturo Gazeti that the Union of Soviet Writers of All Georgia will hold a debate on "Creative issues of Soviet poetry" on July 29 at 7 o'clock in the Palace of Writers, at which Shalva Radiani will read a report, and the following are invited to participate in the debate: Galaktion Tabidze, Sandro Shanshiashvili, Sandro Euli, Titsian Tabidze, Paolo Iashvili and others.

Source: Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №16 (42), p. 4.

1933

July 24

The article "Let's create high-quality defence literature" is published in Saliteraturo Gazeti, in which it is stated that the Military Literary Commission has engaged writers: Galaktion Tabidze, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Irakli Abashidze and Valerian Gaprindashvili in their daily activities, who are already creating high-quality defence literary production.

Source: "Let's create high-quality defence literature", Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №16 (42), p. 4.

1933

July 24

An informative article entitled "Workers' Clubs" is published in the Saliteraturo Gazeti, which talks about the evenings dedicated to the 25th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's literary work on July 11 in the garden named after Orjonikidze and on July 21 in the club named after Plekhanov.

Source: "In the workers' Clubs", Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №16 (42), p. 1.

1933

July 24

The information under the title "G. Tabidze's evening" is published in the column "Chronology" of the newspaper Komunisti, stating that on July 25, at 8 o'clock in the evening, an evening celebrating the 25th anniversary of the writing activity of the people's writer, Galaktion Tabidze, will be held in the Navtlughi railway workers' club under the leadership of the board of the same club and the literary circle. It is also said that the mentioned literary circle is named after Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: “G. Tabidze’s evening”, Komunisti, 1933, №169 (3725), p. 4.

1933

July 24

The speech of Malakia Toroshelidze, delivered on July 5 at the anniversary evening of Galaktion Tabidze, held at the Opera Theatre, is published in the Saliteraturo Gazeti under the title “The Great Poet of Modernity”. It reviews the work of the poet from his appearance on the public arena to the last period. In the poet’s poem “Mountains of Guria”, the speaker sees a desire to escape from reality, from the reaction reigning in the country. Then he mentions how the poet came to terms with the Russian revolution with the poem “Flags quickly” and how he got involved in the reconstruction of the country after the establishment of the Soviet government in Georgia. Toroshelidze ends his speech with the words: “Long live the great contemporary poet Galaktion Tabidze”, which the public meets with loud applause.

Source: Malakia Toroshelidze, “The Great Poet of Modernity”, Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №16 (42), p. 1.

1933

July 24

Saliteraturo Gazeti publishes Vano Tsulukidze’s article “Not a crown, but a report” under the pseudonym “V. Ts-dze”, in which he talks about how the proletariat and the Soviet government appreciated the poet’s twenty-five years of service, how the advanced workers of various factories came to the opera theatre on his anniversary evening and asked for a contribution in raising young people. At the evening, a desire was expressed to translate Galaktion’s work into the languages of the peoples of Transcaucasia. The author of the article considers such attitude and appreciation as the reward that the poet received for his 25 years of dedicated work.

Source: “Not a crown, but a report”, Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №16 (42), p. 1.

1933

July 24

Saliteraturo Gazeti publishes the speech under the title “G. Tabidze’s speech” delivered by Galaktion Tabidze on July 5 at the anniversary evening dedicated to the 25th anniversary of his work in the Opera Theatre. He thanks everyone for such appreciation of him and Georgian literature in general and ends his speech with the poem “Revolutionary Georgia”. Davit Natsvlishvili’s friendly caricature “Galaktion Tabidze” is included in the publication.

Source: “G. Tabidze’s speech”, Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №16 (42), p. 1.

1933

July 25

At 8 o’clock in the evening, in the Navtlughi Railway Workers’ Club, under the leadership of the same club’s board and the literary circle, an evening celebrating the 25th anniversary of the writing activity of the people's writer Galaktion Tabidze is held, and the said literary circle is named after Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: "G. Tabidze's Evening", Komunisti, 1933, №169 (3725), p. 4.

1933

July 26

Ilo Tereladze gifts Galaktion his Book of poems with the inscription: "To the esteemed People's Poet Galaktion Tabidze, from the author. 1933, 11/VII. Tiflis".

Source: MGL, t-705, Ilo Tereladze, "Blood and Celebration" (Poem), Book I, Tbilisi, 1933.

1933

July 26

Ilo Tereladze presents his Book of poems with the inscription: "Dedicated to the esteemed National Poet Galaktion Tabidze, from the author". 1933. 26/VII. Tbilisi".

Source: MGL, t-705, Ilo Tereladze, "Blood and Celebration" (poem), Book I, Tbilisi, 1933.

1933

July 26 or later

In the Book of poems gifted by Ilo Tereladze, he highlights the line - "The wind blows, the wind, the walls play the panduri" - and next to it writes an untitled poem beginning with "I remember: the wind was stirring...".

Source: MGL, t-705, Ilo Tereladze, "Blood and Celebration" (poem), Book I, Tbilisi, 1933.

1933

July 26 or later

In the hastily published Book of poems by Ilo Tereladze, he underlines the line "The wind blows, the wind, the walls ..." and writes alongside it an untitled poem beginning with "I remember: the wind stirred...".

Source: MGL, t-705, Ilo Tereladze, "Blood and Celebration" (Poem), Book I, Tbilisi, 1933.

1933

July 29

He takes part in a debate on "Creativity Issues of Soviet Poetry" held at the Palace of Writers at 7 o'clock.

Source: Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №16 (42), p. 4.

August

1933

August 15

The magazine Drosha publishes Shalva Radian's letter "In Defence of Lyric", which is headed by a stanza from Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Forward, comrade, forward!" ("A poet is a fighter..."). The article talks about the fact that lyric cannot be reduced to a pure chamber genre and that even the era of socialist construction has its own lyric.

Source: “In Defence of Lyric”, magazine Drosha, 1933, №15-16, p. 16.

September

1933

Until September 15

He intends to find out who makes up the State Cinematography Art-Political Council, who is the author of the statement regarding the signing of contracts with writers, and why he himself has been excluded. He believes that he needs to be more active in terms of cinematography.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-79, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 384-385;

1933

Until September 15

He is in Kutaisi and tries to pass by Isidore Kvitcharidze’s house unnoticed. However, they see him and invite him in, but they do not offer him hospitality. He thinks that Isidore is a fool from Imereti, not an intellectual, and that he has spent his whole life fighting for personal well-being. The host talks about Galaktion’s poetry and tells the poet that, supposedly, Kiril Lortkipanidze had told him that Galaktion has a magnificent Georgian language. The poet believes he is being deceived, as he has had no contact with Kiril Lortkipanidze.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-79, 7-8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 386.

1933

September 15

In Kutaisi, he attends a meeting of the Writers’ Presidium. It is noted that the Tbilisi Writers’ Union does not pay attention to them when they need houses, money, and many other things.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-79, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 386.

1933

September 15

At the local Writers’ Presidium meeting in Kutaisi, they discuss the upcoming anniversary evening marking Galaktion Tabidze’s 25th anniversary of literary activity, but no date has been set. On the other hand, Sharukh Charkviani requests funds for Kosta Tavberidze’s anniversary celebration. Galaktion thinks that Sharukh is a provocateur and decides not to meet with him again. The local writers are also of no help and are merely clinging on without purpose.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-79, 10-13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 387.

Note: Shalva Charkviani is referred to by the pseudonym “Sharukh” in the source.

1933

September 15

In his diary, he reviews the thought-provoking lapses in various articles published in the day's Saliteraturo Gazeti (No. 19). The author of "Soviet Literature and Cinema", Titsian Tabidze, does not include himself among the unacceptable screenwriters. In the beginning of an article about Sandro Euli, the artistic quality of his poem is denied, only to be later acknowledged. Giorgi Leonidze's article "The Writers' Museum of Mtatsminda" is considered anti-Marxist, as he believes that literary and cultural heritage is being lost, and only he is trying to preserve this heritage. Platon Kikodze's article softens the overall opinion on Karlo Kaladze's poem "Uchardioni". Galaktion particularly focuses on Ali Arsenishvili's article "Pilnyak Among Writers" and concludes that he himself is undermining his "dialectical materialism" by clearly expressing sympathy for Boris Pilnyak. This marks the beginning of Ali Arsenishvili's retreat or sitting on two chairs. He fails to understand the significance of Pilnyak's opinion on the South-Caucasian Literary Museum or why such an important museum should be opened in Kazbegi. He believes Ali Arsenishvili is helping Titsian Tabidze, whose idea is to open this museum. He concludes that the issue of the newspaper is filled with such falsities.

Source: MGL, d-79, 14-16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 387-388.

1933

September 15

At a meeting of the Writers' Presidium in Kutaisi, the honoured actor of the Georgian theatre, Grigol Charkviani, enters wearing neither a shirt nor shoes. He hands over a letter accompanied by a "list of aid" and asks for assistance as a conscientious and kind-hearted person. He informs them that the actors of the Marjanishvili Theatre have raised nine roubles to buy him trousers. Galaktion takes the letter and promises to intervene with the Central Executive Committee regarding an increase in his pension.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-79, 9-10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 386-387.

1933

September 20

In his diary, he writes that if all men were like him, there would be no need for police in the world.

Source: MGL, d-77, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 365.

1933

After September 20

In his diary, he writes that if he were to be exiled to Svaneti, Kirovabad, or Donbas, he would never become one of them.

Source: MGL, d-77, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 366.

1933

After September 20

In his diary, he writes that Georgia is historically advanced in poetry.

Source: MGL, d-77, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 366.

1933

After September 24

He receives another letter from the Kutaisi actor Grigol Charkviani. He asks him to intervene with people who can help him and promises that he will thank everyone through the press.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-401-8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 264.

1933

September 30

The editor of the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, Evdokime Ehlukidze, invites Galaktion Tabidze to the editorial office and asks him to write a poem about the Komsomol. Galaktion responds impromptu: "I've carried the weight of many poems, but I must admit, I have yet to write anything about the Komsomol".

Source: A. Soselia, Akhalgazrda Komunisti and G. Tabidze, newspaper Gantiadi (Vani), March 23, 1982, N 35, p. 3.

October

1933

Until October 1

In his diary, he writes that his anniversary evening is planned to take place in Kutaisi between October 1 and 10, but he does not know the exact date. Therefore, he intends to use the time beforehand to organize an unexpected evening at the Stalin Club in Tbilisi. Everything, from the posters to the program, must be done with great artistry. He believes the event will be organized splendidly.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-79, 17-18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 389.

1933

October 5

He writes a poem titled "The Sun is So Passionate".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №28897-50, p. 136; №174 d., p. 23; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 34.

Note: The poem can also be found under the titles: "The Roof of the New House"; "The Roof".

1933

After October 5

He writes an untitled poem "Tree, I can't cut you...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-79, 23; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 391.

Note: The poem was later published untitled: "Reed, I Can't Cut You....".

1933

October 6

In the newspaper Zarya Vostoka, an announcement is published stating that starting in October, a new magazine titled Literaturnoe Zakavkazie will be issued in Russian, dedicated to the arts and literature of the peoples of Transcaucasia. Among the members of the editorial board is Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: “Заря Востока”, 1933, №231, p. 4.

1933

October 7

A commission for defensive artistic literature is being established within the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia, and Galaktion Tabidze is elected as a member alongside other writers.

Source: Newspaper Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №7, p. 3.

1933

October 10

Olya Okujava writes in his notebook that the wind carries the crimson-red leaves in a storm, symbolizing the grandiose construction and transformation of the world during the last days of 1933. This year coincided with the greatest recognition of his work, and thus, he must draw his bow strongly and create new masterpieces.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-81, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 397.

1933

October 11

He meets Nikolai Tikhonov to discuss the Book of Russian translations to be published in Moscow, and, as always, Tikhonov is very polite toward him.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-81, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 397.

Note: The Book was published later, in 1937.

1933

After October 11

He writes an untitled poem “He returned from that war...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-81, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 399.

Note: The poem was later published under the title “He Comes”.

1933

After October 11

For the Book “Selected Poems” to be published in Moscow, he compiles a list of people who can translate the poems: Olya Okujava, Domenti Aronishidze, Ali Arsenishvili, Shalva Kartvelishvili, Alexandre Sulava, Shakro Busurashvili, Galaktion Tabidze, Gobron Agareli, and Vasil Gorgadze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-81, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 399.

Note: The Book was published later, in 1937. Domenti Aronishidze and Shakro Busurashvili are referred to by their last names in the source, Ali Arsenishvili by his first name, and Gobron Agareli and Vasil Gorgadze by the initials of their first names and their last names.

1933

After October 11

For the Book "Selected Poems" to be published in Moscow, he compiles a list of translators: Boris Pasternak, Vladimir Elsner, Boris Brik, Valerian Gaprindashvili, Panteleimon Petrenko, Nikolai Tikhonov, Konstantin Bogdanovsky, Sandro Kancheli, and Elena Sherri. He believes that Boris Pasternak should translate the poems "Mtatsminda Moon", "The Forest Took Me", "May Day", and "Paris".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-81, 13-14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 400.

Note: The Book was published later, in 1937. The translators are referred to in the source by their initials and last names.

1933

After October 11

In his diary, he writes that by January 1, he must prepare approximately 5-6 poems, totaling 500 lines, for Pavle Dadvadze to take to Moscow, where his major Book is planned for publication.

Source: MGL, d-81, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 400.

Note: The Book was published later, in 1937.

1933

After October 11

He writes an untitled poem "My heart, you are restless...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-81, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 400.

1933

After October 11

He writes an untitled poem "He is not just yours...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-81, 19; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 401.

1933

October 12

In the newspaper Zarya Vostoka, an announcement is published stating that the magazine Literaturnoe Zakavkazie is starting to be issued, featuring the best Russian translations of works by Transcaucasian creators. The magazine will have a diverse editorial board consisting of representatives from various fields of art, with Galaktion Tabidze listed as one of the members.

Source: “Заря Востока”, 1933, №234, p. 4.

1933

October 12

He makes a note in his diary about the recently deceased Ia Ekaladze. He points out that the one is happy who, like her, dies a sudden death and not from a long illness.

Source: MGL, d-630, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 343;

1933

October 22

He writes an untitled poem “What torrents is Vesuvius hurling?”

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-80, 2; Autographs: MGL, №5396; №28897-50, p. 142; 79 d., p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 395.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the titles: “A Song for the Great, World-Genius Harmony. Ten Years”; “For the Great, World-Genius Harmony”; and “10 Years for the World, Genius Harmony”.

1933

October 16

Olya Okujava dedicates a notebook to the vivid, shining poem filled with living faces, for writing even dramas and poems. He is confident that Galaktion will soar and create masterpieces.

Source: Olya Okujava’s inscription in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-82, 1-2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 406.

1933

After October 16

In the notebook, under the title “Laboratory”, he writes down quotes from the translation of “Karamaniani” in bullet points.

Source: MGL, d-82, 3-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 406-413.

1933

After October 16

He writes an untitled poem “This Georgia...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-82, 8-12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 413-416.

Note: The version of the poem, after its first publication in the third volume of the works in 1940, was published under the title “Ioveliada”.

1933

October 12-19

He writes an untitled poem “I, too, was in that battle...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-80, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 395-396.

1933

October 12-19

He writes in the diary that the diversity of the poem, both thematically and in form, requires a deep study of the works of contemporary Russian poets, such as Ilya Selvinsky. He notes that what is new in Selvinsky’s poetry is what distinguishes or characterizes only him.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-80, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 396.

1933

October 12-19

He writes the untitled poem “The train disappeared from sight...” and draws a train and a sunburned worker.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-80, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 396.

1933

October 23

Boris Pasternak writes to Titsian Tabidze expressing his desire to translate Galaktion Tabidze’s poems along with those of other poets. He requests the delivery of the texts by the end of November, otherwise, according to the terms of the contract, he will no longer be able to translate them.

Source: Tsisperkantselis’ correspondence, Book II, Tbilisi, 2018, p. 59.

November

1933

November 3

He addresses the Presidium of the Trade Unions Council with a statement. He explains that for his evening held on July 5 at the State Opera Theatre, the trade unions allocated 3,000 roubles. He has received only 1,300 roubles from this amount, while the remaining 1,700 roubles is still owed by the trade unions. Due to financial difficulties, he requests that this amount be transferred to him promptly.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-127; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 100.

1933

November 20

In the newspaper Zarya Vostoka, an article titled “Delegation of the Organizational Committee of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics Writers in Tbilisi” is published. It mentions that Petr Pavlenko, a member of the Organizational Committee, spoke about the involvement of Georgian writers in the work of the Union Writers' Congress scheduled for 1934. Pavlenko informed his Georgian colleagues that Boris Pasternak had begun working on translations of the poems of Georgian poets, including Galaktion Tabidze, Ioseb Grishashvili, Simon Chikovani, Paolo Iashvili, and others.

Source: "Заря Востока", 1933, №266, p. 4.

1933

November 28

He receives a brief letter from the Russian writer Nikolai Tikhonov, who is in Tbilisi. He writes that he will be very happy to meet him the next day in room 9 of the hotel from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. He also informs him that Boris Pasternak and Viktor Goltsev are very disappointed that their meeting with him on November 17th was cancelled, and therefore, they will also come to the hotel on the 29th.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-401-cc; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 265.

1933

November 28

He leaves a short note at the hotel for Nikolai Tikhonov, who is in Tbilisi, requesting that he somehow arrange a meeting with him the following day. He suggests leaving a note with the meeting time at the front desk.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-131; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 62.

1933

November 28

He receives a short note left for him by the Russian writer Nikolai Tikhonov at the hotel's front desk. Tikhonov writes that he would be delighted to meet him the following day in room nine of the hotel between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. He also informs him that Boris Pasternak and Viktor Goltsev were very disappointed that their meeting with him on November 27th fell through and, as a result, they will also come to the hotel on the 29th.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-401-d; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 265.

1933

November 30

Viktor Goltszev writes to Titsian Tabidze, claiming that Benito Buachidze is plotting against him in Moscow. He told Arkadi Sitkovskiy that there is interest in Titsian Tabidze's poetry in Moscow, but that the great poet is Galaktion Tabidze, not him.

Source: Tsisperkantselis correspondence, Book II, Tbilisi, 2018, p. 245.

December

1933

December 4

Ekaterine Gabashvili writes in her notebook that Galaktion has seen and felt the Great Russian Revolution, and his talent enables him to serve it. As a Georgian woman, she admires and takes joy in his talent. She wishes him a long life, success, and offers her gratitude. She notes that he is recognized as an ideal poet because his message has reached the hearts of the people, which is why the literary community and educated readers revere him.

Source: MGL, d-81, 22-27; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 401-402.

1933

After December 4

He compiles a list of poems translated by Panteleimon Petrenko in 1933: “Blue Horses,” “Snow,” “Mary,” “The Mountains of Guria,” “May Day,” and “Two Shores”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-81, 32; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

1933

After December 4

Panteleimon Petrenko writes the translation of the poem “Snow” in his notebook.

Source: MGL, d-81, 33-34; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403-404.

1933

After December 4

He writes an untitled poem, “With my notebook s...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-81, 38; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1933

After December 9

He receives another letter from Grigol Charkviani, an actor from Kutaisi. Charkviani congratulates him on the 25th anniversary of his literary career and expresses surprise that this is the fourth letter he has sent without receiving any response from Galaktion. He writes that he met Lado Bzvaneli in Kutaisi, who mentioned that Galaktion is embarrassed to collect money for the addressee. Charkviani asks that if this is the case, he return the list to him.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-401-8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 264.

1933

December 7-11

He participates in the debate held in the Palace of Writers around Platon Kikodze’s report “Georgia is a country of revolutionary romanticism”.

Source: “The Problem of Revolutionary Romanticism”, Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №27 (54), p. 1.

1933

December 15

The Russian newspaper Na Rubezhe Vostoka publishes a conversation with Boris Pasternak, in which it is noted that the Moscow Writers' Society has a contract with him to translate Vazha-Pshavela's "The Snake-Eater" and a selected volume of Galaktion Tabidze's poems. It is also mentioned that his translations of poems by Galaktion Tabidze, Paolo Iashvili, Simon Chikovani, Titsian Tabidze, Aleksi Gomiashvili, Karlo Kaladze, Pridon Naroushvili, and other Georgian poets will be included in a major anthology of Georgian poetry to be published in 1934.

Source: Беседа с Б. Пастернаком, newspaper "На Рубеже Востока", December 15, 1933, №3, p. 1.

1933

December 25

He addresses a statement to the Chairman of the Tbilisi Council, Valerian Bakradze. He writes that, according to an order from the Chairman of the Central Executive Committee, Philip Makharadze, the addressee allocated him an apartment on the third floor of the new Communal Bank building. However, due to his heart condition, living on a high floor would be difficult for him and would hinder his ability to work. Therefore, he requests that an apartment be allocated to him on the second floor. He attaches a certificate from the commission under the Transcaucasian Council of People's Commissars and the People's Commissariat of Health to his statement.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-128; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 101.

1933

December 27

He receives a letter from Ipolite Vartagava, who informs him that he has been visiting the Palace of Artists since the 25th but has not been able to meet him to read through the completed translation together. He writes that he will be at the Palace of Artists the following day as well, from 12 to 1 p.m., and hopes they can meet.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-456-d; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 266.

1933

December 29

Saliteraturo Gazeti publishes a review of Platon Kikodze's report "Georgia is a country of revolutionary romanticism" under the title "Problem of Revolutionary Romanticism", held on December 7-11 in the Palace of Writers. It summarizes the views of the speaker. For example, it is said that during the last 12 years, Galaktion Tabidze's work was developing through revolutionary romanticism. Davit Demetradze and Besarion Zhghenti, who appeared in the debate, did not agree with this opinion. According to them, the literary trend in which Soviet writing is developing is socialist realism, not revolutionary romanticism.

Source: "The Problem of Revolutionary Romanticism", Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1933, №27 (54), p. 1.

1933

December

For a Russian Book to be published in Moscow, he drafts a plan and lists the authors of the verses: Olya Okujava, Galaktion Tabidze, Valerian Gaprindashvili, Ali Arsenishvili, Gobron Agareli, S. Kvizhinadze, Vasil Gorgadze, Pavle Dadvadze, and Akaki Gatsserelia. He also compiles a list of translators: Valerian Gaprindashvili, Boris Brik, Panteleimon Petrenko, Boris Pasternak, Nikolai Tikhonov, Mikhail Svetlov, Osip Mandelstam, Kolau Cherniavsky, Konstantin Bogdanovsky, and Ryurik Ivnev.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-83, 2-3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 421.

Note: The source mistakenly lists "V". as the initial for Mikhail Svetlov.

1933

December

For a Russian Book to be published in Moscow, he compiles a list of translators, each to be assigned 500 lines: Valerian Gaprindashvili, Boris Brik, Panteleimon Petrenko, Boris Pasternak, Nikolai Tikhonov, Mikhail Svetlov, Osip Mandelstam, Kolau Cherniavsky, Konstantin Bogdanovsky, and Ryurik Ivnev. He also lists the poems to be translated and the number of lines from the 1927 Book and the cycles "Epoch" and "Pacifism".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-83, 2; 4-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 421-423.

Note: The translators are mentioned in the source by their initials and surnames. For Svetlov, the initial is given as "V," but it should be understood as referring to Mikhail Svetlov.

1933

He sends a short letter from Moscow, stating that he is there for a week. He mentions that the lack of a signed contract with the state publishing house will not deter him and advises the addressee not to worry either.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 5331; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 61-62.

Note: The recipient of the letter is unknown.

1933

A collection of Russian translations of Galaktion Tabidze's poems titled "Selected Poems" is published, featuring an introductory article by Shalva Radiani.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1934, №180, p. 3.

Note: Табидзе, Г. "Избранные стихи", Тифлис, "Закгиз", 1933.

1933

In Tbilisi, the collection "Poets of Transcaucasia" is published in Russian, in which Galaktion's poems are released along with the works of Sandro Euli, Alio Mashashvili, Valerian Gaprindashvili, Titsian Tabidze and others.

Source: Поэты Закавказья, Сборник стихов, Тбилиси, Закгиз, 1933.

1933

On his way to Tchomi with his friend, engineer Vladimir Jikia, Galaktion notices the spring and tells his companion, who is in charge of the construction of the Rioni HPP at that time, that it takes hundreds of bricks and two bags of cement to improve this place, if you do it, a Georgian man will pass by, quench his thirst and bless you. Vladimir Jikia promises that he will definitely do it.

Source: L. Nutsbidze, Seen and Heard, magazine Gantiadi, 1993, № 3-4, p. 112-113.

1933

He is resting with Olya Okujava in Tzagheri.

Source: G. Zarnadze, a rare photograph of Galaktion, newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1992, №45, November 20, p. 13.

1933

He has his photo taken with Maxime Kikvadze, Shalva, Olya and Mariam Okujava.

Source: G. Zarnadze, a rare photograph of Galaktion, newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1992, №45, November 20, p. 13.

1933

Shalva Radiani's Book "Creativity and Criticism" is published, which includes an essay dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze. The critic develops his earlier views on Galaktion's poetry, noting that initially the poet was captivated by revolution as an abstract movement, while now his primary inclination is towards "revolutionary romanticism". The poems "Epoch" and "Revolutionary Georgia" serve as hymns of socialist construction and struggle. According to Shalva Radiani, counter-revolutionary critics attempt to cast doubt on Galaktion's creative crisis and idealize the poet's decadent lyricism. Galaktion has managed to rid himself of decadent motifs. The critic states that while the poet once placed decisive importance on the musicality of poetry, he has now begun writing in white verse and is an active advocate for the establishment of free verse in Soviet poetry.

Source: Sh. Radiani, "Creativity and Criticism", 1933, p. 124-156.

1933

He writes a poem "Light Cloud of the Highest Peaks".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №70-a, p. 1791; №122 d., p. 9; №6498-6499; №5000, №6459; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 39; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 256.

Note: The poem appears in sources both untitled and under the title "Light Cloud".

1933

Korneli Sanadze paints a portrait of Galaktion Tabidze using oil paints.

Source: O. Egadze, The Poet's Image in the Artist's Work, magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba, 1965, №11, p. 70.

1933

He addresses a statement to Paruir Folyan, the responsible editor of the Transcaucasian State Publishing House, presenting the plan for the Russian translation Book "Selected Poems" consisting of poems from 1908 to 1933. Alongside the titles, he specifies which works have been fully translated and which have line-by-line translations. The collection includes 12 poems and 120 poems, totalling approximately 12,000 lines. He names Boris Brik and Pavel Petrenko as translators and suggests involving others if necessary. Since it is important for the Book to be ready before the Writers' Congress, he requests that contracts with him and the translators be signed promptly.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-28; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 101.

1933

In his diary, he writes about the conditions necessary for an artist to live a culturally fulfilling life. He mentions that he currently has one room but, if possible, it would be preferable to have two. His apartment, located at 10 Krylov Street, has electric lighting, water, and a bathroom, but it also has many shortcomings that could be addressed.

Source: MGL, d-74, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 346.

1933

In his diary, he writes that having water in the apartment is essential for physical existence and hygiene. It allows for washing small loads of laundry, cleaning the floors daily and the windows twice a week, washing dishes every evening, cleaning furniture and items with a damp cloth, washing his hair and body twice a week, moisturizing, taking daily baths, cleaning teeth and nails, preparing tea morning and evening, always drinking boiled water, changing water for flowers daily, and washing fruit.

Source: MGL, d-74, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 346-347.

1933

In his diary, he writes that he has a 50-watt bulb and two switches for lighting to work in the evenings. Besides this, electricity in the apartment is also necessary for an iron, a kettle, a fan in the summer, and a hair dryer.

Source: MGL, d-74, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 347.

1933

In his diary, he writes that he lives on the third floor in a 6-square-meter room, where there is insufficient air. When the windows are opened, dust enters from the balcony, creating an unhygienic condition. Dust is the most harmful factor for his lungs. Fresh and sufficient air will only be possible if the balcony is enclosed. Enclosing the balcony would improve the cleanliness of the room, the comfort of the apartment, allow the windows to remain open day and night, ensure healthier air, and make it possible to air out bedding and clothing regularly.

Source: MGL, d-74, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 347.

1933

In his diary, he writes that his bookshelf is extremely disorganized, making it nearly impossible to use his manuscripts and books effectively. For him, books are equivalent to water, electricity, and air in importance. He believes books should be organized by category: Georgian and Russian poetry, novels and stories, Georgian and Russian magazines and collections, and political and economic books. A general catalogue of these books should be created, divided into categories such as poems, stories and novels, critical essays, and articles from collections and magazines. Newspapers in the lower part of the cabinet should be folded, but since newspapers should not be stored in the bookcase, interesting material should be cut out and placed in separate folders. Manuscripts should be sorted into poetry, prose, letters, diaries, and notes. The cabinet should not contain food, linens, or small items. He should be able to immediately locate any necessary book, and the most essential books should be bound. The desk should not be cluttered with unnecessary books or objects, as this disrupts work; everything should have its place. He also notes that he needs more books.

Source: MGL, d-74, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 347-348.

1933

In his diary, he writes that he needs to buy a watch because it is essential for accurately organizing his work time – allocating how much time to spend in institutions, resting, sleeping, going to the theatre, or staying at the club. For him, a watch is a necessary attribute of a cultured life and extremely beneficial for health, morality, ethics, and using every second of life with mathematical precision and purposefulness in the age of technology and science. The phrase “What time is it?” is a call to action and struggle. A person should dedicate every moment of their life to learning, fighting, and progressing.

Source: MGL, d-74, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 348.

1933

In his diary, he writes that cigarettes are a critical issue for his room. Nicotine is harmful to the lungs, poisons and stifles the air, litters the room with ash and cigarette butts, permeates objects with a specific odour, causes unnecessary material expenses, reduces appetite, disrupts sleep, and makes a person nervous. He emphasizes the need to regulate cigarette smoking, keep the windows open at all times, and avoid leaving cigarette butts in the room for long periods.

Source: MGL, d-74, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 348.

1933

In his diary, he lists the furniture and items needed for his room: a couch, chairs, a linen lounge chair, a small piano, a dressing table, a paper wastebasket, a radio, a telephone, a rug near the bed, curtains for the balcony, a dust cloth, daily newspapers, a few magazines, folders for newspaper clippings and manuscripts, pictures, slippers, a house robe, and a servant. He estimates that the total cost would be 230 roubles. Additionally, he considers the following items necessary: a bookshelf, a table, a mirror, a wall clock, a fan, a foot mat, window curtains, lightbulbs, and switches.

Source: MGL, d-74, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 348-349.

1933

In his diary, he writes that during his childhood, America was associated with its depiction on a globe. He knew about the great rivers like the Mississippi, the Orinoco, and others. America also interested him because it was once home to the people described in James Fenimore Cooper's novel "The Last of the Mohicans". His perception of America was further shaped by Harriet Beecher Stowe's novel "Uncle Tom's Cabin". In a Georgian calendar published in 1880, he saw pictures of pavilions from a world exhibition held in America. In the magazine Kvali, he read articles about the construction of the Panama Canal and Giorgi Tsereteli's piece about the great inventor Thomas Edison. Later, his understanding of America was enriched by Edgar Allan Poe's immortal poem "The Raven" and the poems of Walt Whitman. He also read an article in Kvali about Christopher Columbus's voyages and the discovery of America. He learned why America was named after Amerigo Vespucci and not Columbus and shed tears over the tragic fate of the discoverer. He reflects that this is the fate of all inventors, even today in America. He mentions how Radium's discoverer was not provided with enough of the substance to continue their research. For the bourgeoisie, scientists are less valuable than money. The phrase "People perish for metal" finds its truest expression in America. He contemplates that if he were an inventor, he would put all his energy into concealing a discovery that billionaires might later exploit.

Source: MGL, d-74, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 349-350.

Note: It seems Galaktion might have had incorrect information. Radium was discovered in France, not in America, and, in general, by 1933, American scientists had not discovered any chemical elements.

After 1933

He creates an excerpt from Abram Efros's Book "Drawings of the Poet", which is dedicated to the paintings of Alexander Pushkin.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-606, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 40-41.

Dating: The Book was published in 1933.

After 1933

He makes a note about Rustaveli Avenue, emphasizing that it should become a model street and that the issue of erecting a monument to the author of "The Knight in the Panther's Skin" must finally be resolved. He suggests that next to the opera house, a group monument to Vano Sarajishvili, Zakaria Paliashvili, and Kote Marjanishvili should also be erected. He proposes replacing Akaki's monument with a larger marble figure and transforming the garden where Egnate Ninoshvili's monument stands into a garden dedicated to Georgian writers.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-509, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 66-67;

1933

He writes an untitled poem, “Remember My Advice, Olya...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №415; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 117; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 781.

1933

He writes a poem “The Imeretian’s Monologue” (“What Am I Now...”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3269; №5392; №70-a, 1778; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 120.

Note: The poem also appears untitled (with different opening lines “What Am I Now...”; “Clustered Together...”).

1933

He writes an untitled poem, “The Day Is Not Far Away...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №70-a, 1791; №5270; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 122.

Note: The poem is also found untitled with different opening lines: “What Am I Now...”; “Clustered Together...”).

1933 or later

He writes an untitled poem “Glory to the people, standing as the leader of peace...” (“Not long ago, this place...”).

Source: MGL, d-a-1773, AE in 25 books, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 346;

1934

January

1934

January 1

He celebrates the New Year with Olya and Vasil Okujava in their room. Despite having little money, their table is set with bread, cheese, fruit, and two bottles of wine. He leads the toasts, and they drink to health. They talk extensively about literature, international affairs, and the state of the Soviet Union. He remarks that 1933 was a good year for him personally. At midnight, they toast to the New Year.

Source: Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 320.

1934

January 7

While visiting someone, his coat is stolen, along with the books, manuscripts, and money in its pockets. He has no money to buy a new coat and is deeply distressed by the incident.

Source: Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 320.

1934

January 8

Together with Olya, he buys the Russian newspaper Na Rubezhe, which contains an interview with Boris Pasternak. The interview mentions the plan to translate a collection of Galaktion Tabidze's poems into Russian. The poet is pleased but fears that the poems might not be translated well and could be distorted. However, he decides that he should agree to the translation for now, believing that better translators will emerge in the future.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 320.

1934

January 9

Without a coat, he is forced to sit in a cold room, reading newspapers, magazines, and books. He cannot imagine life without newspapers. Visiting Olya Okujava's home brings him joy, akin to that of a prisoner who hasn't seen light or loved ones for a long time.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 7-8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 321.

1934

January 10

In the Saliteruro Gazeti, Shalva Radiani's article "Poetry at the Height of New Challenges" is published, reviewing poetic collections released in recent years. The critic highlights Galaktion Tabidze among the authors intensively working on the poetry front, noting that he has published several poems as separate books recently. Radiani believes that the search for forms suitable for new content in literature is still insufficient, a flaw that affects all contemporary authors equally. At the end of the article, the critic reminds poets of their obligation to the party: they must elevate Soviet poetry to the level of new challenges.

Source: Newspaper Saliteruro Gazeti, 1934, №1-3, p. 2.

1934

January 10

Abesalom Tabidze brings Literaturuli Gazeti to Galaktion and Olya, which features portraits of forgotten writers. They read it aloud, criticize each portrait, and laugh. They are pleased that Galaktion's portrait is not among them.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 321.

1934

January 10

Together with Olya Okujava, he organizes materials related to the 25th anniversary of his literary career, celebrated in 1933 at the Opera Theatre. He compiles a list of articles and dedicated poems. Despite the heartfelt letters and poems dedicated to him by the finest artists, they still failed to adequately capture the grandeur and power of Galaktion's poetry – poetry imbued with the spirit of the era and enriched with highly artistic forms.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 9-10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 321.

1934

January 11

Unable to leave the house due to not having a coat, he learns that coats have been brought to a restricted distribution centre. Since he is assigned to special provisioning by the Central Executive Committee, he requests a coat to be given or sold to him. However, his request is denied.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-130; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 103.

Dating: The incident is mentioned in the statement dated January 11, 1934.

1934

January 11

Panteleimon Petrenko visits, but Galaktion is not in the mood to receive him. While Petrenko and Olya Okujava argue, the guest leaves the house and angrily slips a letter through the keyhole, which makes Galaktion laugh but also troubles him deeply.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 11-12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 322.

1934

January 11

Together with Olya Okujava, he sees her brother off to the village. In the evening, he reads to his wife about the execution of Ban de Liubet in Fascist Germany.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 322.

1934

January 11

He writes a statement addressed to the People's Commissariat of Supply, requesting that they issue the appropriate order to sell him a coat from the restricted distribution centre.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-130; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 103.

1934

January 12

Without a coat and amidst severe frost, he decides to approach the head of the restricted distribution centre the same day to request the purchase of a coat. He feels very uncomfortable wearing his brother's worn-out coat but is forced to take action. Despite finding the price high, he buys a coat with a fur collar for 167 roubles.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 13-14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 322.

1934

January 12

In the evening, he returns from the cinema with an inspired look, resembling a fighter of a great era. Together with his wife, he drinks wine and discusses Ernst Meiman's "Aesthetics". He reads Ivan Bunin's poem "Evening" and immediately recites it from memory, remarking that it is an optimistic poem. He repeats the lines: "Happiness is everywhere if you find it".

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 322.

1934

January 15

He begins translating Alexander Blok's poem "Pushkin's House" without a title, starting with the line: "The name of Pushkin's House...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-82, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 417-418.

1934

January 22

He goes to the circus and is particularly delighted by dogs disguised as horses, monkeys, and dancing piglets. After returning home, he laughs with Olya Okujava about the impressions from the circus.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 20-21; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 323.

1934

January 23

Olya Okujava waits all night, terribly anxious. She searches the streets, but he is nowhere to be found. She wonders if he might be injured, caught by criminals trying to rob and torture him, or perhaps hit by a car. Based on her mood, she selects his poems and, with astonishing speed, prepares their Russian translations, as if having an imaginary conversation with him.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 22-23; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 324.

1934

January 23

He realizes that wine will ruin him. Together with Olya Okujava, he organizes newspapers, magazines, and manuscripts.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 20-21; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 323.

February

1934

February 21

In the newspaper Komunisti, an informational article titled “Preparation for the Writers’ Union Congress” is published, stating that the “Leningrad Writers’ Publishing House” plans to release collections of poems by Galaktion Tabidze and Paolo Iashvili.

Source: titled “Preparation for the Writers’ Union Congress”, Newspaper Komunisti, 1934, №44, p. 4.

1934

February 24

Late into the night, he has an open and friendly conversation about literature with Olya Okujava and Panteleimon Petrenko.

Source: Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 30; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 326.

Note: Panteleimon Petrenko is referred to by the nickname “Tosia” in the source.

1934

February 25

He travels to Yerevan for literary matters and barely makes it to the train on time.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-76, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 357.

Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 31-32; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 326;

1934

February 25

Olya Okujava is distressed that Galaktion looked as helpless as a child when he left for Yerevan alone. She tries to finish the line-by-line translation of the poem “Pacifism” before his return.

Source: Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 32; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 326.

1934

February 26

Olya Okujava learns that the train heading to Yerevan on the day of Galaktion’s departure was involved in an accident. She imagines that her husband might have been harmed and rushes to the station. There, she discovers that it was not the passenger train but a freight train that had the accident, and Galaktion, along with many others, was unharmed.

Source: Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 33-34; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 326.

1934

February 26-28

He wishes to travel to Nakhichevan and goes to the Central Executive Committee and the State Political Directorate, but they do not grant him permission.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-76, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 357.

1934

February 26-28

While in Yerevan, his poem "Press" is translated into Armenian, and he receives a fee of 400 roubles.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-76, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 357.

March

1934

March 1

He returns to Tbilisi from Yerevan in an international train car.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-76, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 357.

1934

March 1

He travels to Samtredia, Batumi, and Sokhumi. Before the trip, he buys a raspberry-coloured beret, a silk sweater, and a belt for Olya Okujava, and a suitcase for himself. Together with his wife, he dines at the Stalin Club.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 35-36; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 326.

1934

March 2

He arrives in Batumi and stays at the "Adjartistan" hotel.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-76, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 357.

1934

March 2-4

He meets Davit Dumbadze, who informs him that his jubilee evening will be held in Batumi between April 20-24. The jubilee campaign in the press will begin on April 5. Promises are made to assist financially through the Central Executive Committee and the State Political Directorate, to open a street in Batumi named after Galaktion Tabidze, and to provide a house in Kobuleti. To handle these matters, someone from Tbilisi will need to travel there.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-76, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 357.

1934

March 2-4

While in Batumi, he writes an untitled poem “From the Green-Covered Peaks...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5565; №4415; №1867; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 129.

Note: The poem is also found with the titles: “From the Tall Tower” and “From Udzo”.

1934

March 4

He travels to Sokhumi by the ship “Sakartvelo” (Georgia).

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-76, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 357.

1934

After March 4

He writes a letter to journalist Davit Dumbadze, inquiring whether the materials he left behind have been published. He expresses his wish for them to be published in the newspaper Sabtchota Adjaristani and under no circumstances in any other publication.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. XII, Tbilisi, 1975, p. 557;

1934

March 6

He travels from Sokhumi by the ship “Lenin” and writes an untitled poem, “Adjaristan, the day from which...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-76, 18, 22-23; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 358-359.

Note: The poem was first published under the title “Look!” in the second volume of his works in 1935.

1934

March 6

While traveling from Sokhumi on the ship “Lenin”, he writes an untitled poem, “The waves tear one another...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-76, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 359-360.

1934

March 6

In Sokhumi, he meets Ryurik Ivnev, Panteleimon Petrenko, and L. Khrameli. By the seaside, they recite poems and drink wine.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-76, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 357.

Note: Panteleimon Petrenko is referred to in the source by the initial of his nickname, "T". (Tosia), and by his surname. L. Khrameli is likely a pseudonym, which has not yet been identified.

1934

March 6

Olya Okujava visits him at home, waiting for his return from a trip, and returns to her mother late at night.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-375; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 207-208.

1934

March 6

Galaktion is away on the Black Sea coast, and Olya Okujava, who lives with her sick mother, doesn't know when he will return. She waits every day for Galaktion to come back, visits his house, organizes some of his manuscripts, and translates his poem "Pacifism" into Russian. She waits until 8 PM, then leaves a note on the table and goes to her mother. In the note, she writes that she loves him dearly, can't stand being without him, and asks him to stop by if he returns and it's not too late so they can go home together. She hopes that after being on the Black Sea coast and in his native village, he will have good impressions.

Source: Olya Okujava's letter, G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 207.

1934

March 7

Olya Okujava visits him at home again and adds to the note she wrote the previous day that Galaktion still hasn't returned.

Source: Olya Okujava's letter, G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 207.

1934

March 7

He arrives in Samtredia, meets his brother, borrows money, and returns to Tbilisi on the night train.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-76, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 358.

1934

March 7

On the train from Samtredia to Tbilisi, he writes an untitled poem "The faces reflect those of travellers...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-76, 25; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 360.

1934

March 7

On the train from Samtredia to Tbilisi, he writes an untitled poem, “The Mingrelian hut, the Gurian oda...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-76, 27; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 361.

1934

March 7 or later

He writes an untitled poem “I am Galaktion Tabidze...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-76, 28; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 362.

1934

March 8

He returns to Tbilisi and sends cream butter, soap, and other provisions to Olya Okujava, who is ill and bedridden at her mother’s house.

Source: Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 47; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 330.

1934

March 11

The article “Defensive Literary Work” by Kale Bobokhidze is published in the Saliteraturo Gazeti, stating that in Georgia, as well as in some other republics, less attention was paid to the development of military artistic literature until 1932. After the resolution of April 23, 1932, a commission for defensive artistic literature was established with the Union of Writers, which has been working productively since then. This is confirmed by the fact that well-known writers, including Galaktion Tabidze, Mikheil Javakhishvili, Niko Lortkipanidze, Irakli Abashidze, and others, actively participated in around thirty events organized by this commission.

Source: Newspaper Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1934, №6, p. 4.

1934

After March 19

Olya Okujava receives artistic sketches written in Russian that reflect the bitter reality of existence. She asks whether Galaktion sees a shore strewn with flowers of a new world, populated by geniuses and talents. Their faces are marked by thought and joy. Olya raises a toast to the upcoming October Revolution and the beautiful life to come, and she passes the toast to Galaktion.

Source: O. Okujava’s letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-376; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 208-209.

1934

After March 20

Olya Okujava sends a letter written in Russian, which is compiled on the artistic images of Galaktion's poems. At the end of the letter, we read that the native winds whisper to the peach blossoms in fairy-tale lands, the peach branches sway, flowers fall, and Galaktion, covered in these pink flakes, conjures a new prelude like a magician.

Source: Olya Okujava's letter, G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 208-209.

1934

March 29

For the Book of Russian translations to be published in Leningrad, he writes a dedication to Olya Okujava: "With all my soul and heart!!! To my Olya: a person in the truest sense of the word, a companion in my wanderings".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-84, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 421-424.

1934

March 21

He receives a letter from I. V. Khaskin, the director of the Literary Repository of Leningrad Writers, requesting the submission of translations and word-for-word translations of Galaktion's poems.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-131, 24551-281; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 62.

Dating: The time is indicated in Galaktion's reply letter of April 3.

1934

March

Galaktion arrives in his native village of Chkvishi from the Black Sea coast.

Source: Olya Okujava's letter, G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 207.

April

1934

April 3

Along with the signed contract, he sends a letter written in Russian to I. V. Khaskin, the director of the Literary Repository of Leningrad Writers. He informs them that he will send the Russian translations and word-for-word translations of his poems on April 20 and that he will personally visit Leningrad soon to directly participate in the preparation of the translations of his poems.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-131, 24551-281; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 62.

1934

Until April 4

In the afternoon, he meets Olya Okujava and promises that he will return home soon. Olya waits for him at home for a long time, then leaves him a letter and goes away. She laments that he did not keep his word, writing that she has already grown accustomed to his room over the past two weeks. She asks him to drop by in the evening or the following day.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-358; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 214-215.

1934

April 6

An informational article titled "Georgian Artistic Literature in Russian" is published in the Saliteruro Gazeti, featuring excerpts from a report read by Nikolo Mitsishvili at a special commission meeting on March 7, 1934. The article states that the publishing houses of Moscow and Leningrad (now St. Petersburg) have received applications for the publication of books by Georgian writers, including Galaktion Tabidze, Mikheil Javakhishvili, Niko Lortkipanidze, Titsian Tabidze, Leo Kiacheli, Paolo Iashvili, and others in Russian. These publishing houses have taken on the responsibility for publishing these books, and now their representatives are requesting that the Georgian authors urgently send Russian translations of their works so that the publishers can fulfil their obligations and release the collections within the established deadlines.

Source: Newspaper Saliteruro Gazeti, 1934, №7, p. 2.

1934

April 11

The newspaper Komunisti publishes an announcement stating that a meeting of writers and critics will be held the next day at 2 PM in the same newspaper's editorial office. The announcement includes a list of authors who are expected to attend the meeting. Among other writers, Galaktion Tabidze is named on the list.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1934, №85, p. 4.

1934

April 15

The newspaper Komunisti publishes a collective piece titled "A Warm Greeting from Georgian Soviet Writers to the Heroes of the Arctic", featuring welcoming words from Galaktion Tabidze, Shalva Dadiani, Mikheil Javakhishvili, Niko Lortkipanidze, Nikolo Mitsishvili, and Leo Kiacheli. The writers address the Chelyuskins - the surviving passengers of the ship that disappeared in the Arctic ice two months ago. Galaktion is filled with admiration for the resilience of the Chelyuskins, stating that the history of humanity has seen few victories as brilliant as theirs, and only a country building socialism could produce a people as courageous as lions, who have defied the forces of nature.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1934, №88, p. 2.

1934

April 17

A review by Viktor Goltsev titled "A New Book on Georgian Literature" is published, discussing Benito Buachidze's collection of critical articles titled "Paths of Modern Georgian Literature", released in Russian in 1930. Along with other materials, the reviewer addresses two articles dedicated to Galaktion included in the book. Goltsev believes that Benito Buachidze attempts to embellish the path of Galaktion's creative evolution, which results in a tone more akin to praise and panegyric than to critical analysis. Goltsev finds the section of Buachidze's work that seeks to prove that Galaktion was never a true symbolist unconvincing and unsuccessful. He argues that it would have been better for the critic to demonstrate the significant influence that the best representatives of symbolist culture had on the proletarian revolution and how these writers adapted their direction, aligning themselves with the socialist-building proletariat. Goltsev contends that Buachidze should have noted some shortcomings in Galaktion's poems – specifically their rhetorical nature and superficiality – especially since the national poet of Georgia is expected to reflect the modern era more profoundly.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1934, №90, p. 3.

Note: The review concerns Benito Buachidze's 1930 book: Буачидзе Б., “Пути современной грузинской литературы” (Buachidze B., “The Paths of Modern Georgian Literature”), Tiflis, “Zakniga”, 1930.

1934

April 19

Together with Olya Okujava, he cuts the poem Pacifism into separate verses and pastes them onto sheets of paper to prepare materials for the academic publication.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 58; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 332.

1934

April 20

Together with Olya Okujava, he cuts “Epoch” into separate verses and pastes them onto sheets of paper to prepare materials for the academic publication.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 59; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 332.

1934

April 20

He goes to the Palace of Arts for a meeting.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 59; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 332.

1934

April 20

Along with Mikheil Javakhishvili, Titsian Tabidze, Niko Lortkipanidze, Besarion Zhghenti, and other writers, they elect Sandro Euli as a member of the jubilee committee. The committee members are tasked with organizing an event on May 20 to celebrate the 25th anniversary of Sandro Euli's creative work.

Source: Newspaper Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1934, №8, p. 1.

1934

April 23

The newspaper Komunisti publishes an article by Shalva Radiani titled “Artistic Literature Over Two Years”, which reviews the current literary process and states that Galaktion Tabidze’s poems are a positive achievement of Soviet literature. Additionally, the critic lists the active creative figures of Soviet literature, placing Galaktion Tabidze at the top of the list.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1934, №95, p. 3.

1934

April 30

At the request of the Leningrad State Publishing House, for the publication of Russian translations of his poems, he urgently travels to Leningrad without prior planning. There, he presents a document brought from Georgia to the Georgian Writers’ Section of the Leningrad Writers’ House.

Source: Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 63; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 333.

1934

April

He receives a letter from Maxim Gorky, stating that a meeting of the jubilee committee to plan events for the approaching 100th anniversary of Alexander Pushkin’s death is necessary. However, since this cannot be arranged and the work is urgent, Gorky asks Galaktion, as a future member of the committee, to determine the composition of the local working commission to present to the central commission for consideration in a month and a half. He requests that Galaktion inform him if he has any differing opinions on these matters or any suggestions regarding the formation of the committee.

Source: S. Lekishvili, Gorky writes to Galaktion, newspaper Zarya Vostoka, February 6, №30, p. 4.

May

1934

After May 4

He takes up residence at the “Hermes” Hotel in Leningrad.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-87, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 441.

Dating: From the entry dated May 24, 1934, it appears that he has been living in this hotel for almost 20 days.

1934

After May 10

In Sandro Euli's book "The Poet of Steel", the first stanza of the poem "Thoughts at the Machine" is annotated with a note: "See my poem "From the Museum of Revolution". Regarding the illustration accompanying the poem "Meeting in the Kremlin", he observes that the drawing does not resemble the Kremlin and must have been created by Beno Gordeziani. He wonders why the protagonist of the poem is called the "poet of the era" and speculates whether the poem is about him, as he himself is the author of "Epoch". However, he ironically adds that he was mistaken, and the book is titled "The Poet of Steel". He is astonished that the protagonist of the poem – Stalin – despite having written poetry in his youth, does not consider himself a poet. Stalin now has more important matters to attend to and places his hopes for poetry in the younger generation. Meanwhile, Sandro Euli insists that Stalin is the "poet of steel," and no one else compares to him. He finds the Book interesting as a document and wonders whether there truly was a meeting of poets in the Kremlin, when it might have occurred, and if Stalin really addressed Euli with such words. He notes that the author exhibits a mania for grandeur, a trait he attributes to other writers of that generation, such as Alio Mashashvili, Petre Samsonidze, Irakli Abashidze, Ioseb Noneshvili, and Revaz Margiani. He concludes that this reflects a manifestation of pathological symbolism, individualism, futurism, and an imitation of Vladimir Mayakovsky.

Source: MGL, t-49, Sandro Euli, "The Poet of Steel", Tbilisi, 1934, p. 7, 49, 58.

1934

May 12

He reads the newspaper Komunisti and writes down a list of articles, poems, and illustrations dedicated to the 40th anniversary of the death of Egnate Ninoshvili published in it.

Source: MGL, t-658, newspaper Komunisti, May 12, 1934, №109, p. 1.

1934

May 24

For the publication of the Book in Leningrad, he notes the addresses of local writers, translators, and editorial staff, including Vsevolod Rozhdestvensky, Nikolai Tikhonov, Alexander Prokofiev, Shota Dzidziguri, Mikhail Kuzmin, Varlam Dundua, Konstantine Kavtaradze, Olga Forsh, Alexandra Brik, Elena Brik-Iradova, and Ivan Rudolf.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-87, 1-2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 440-441.

1934

May 24

He calls Shota Dzidziguri and agrees to meet the next day.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-87, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 441.

1934

May 24

He meets with Varlam Dundua, with whom he plans to move in, as he has been staying at the “Hermes” Hotel in Leningrad for nearly twenty days, which has become very expensive.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-87, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 441.

1934

May 25

He writes in his diary that he will have to spend the summer in Leningrad, but as the poets will soon go on vacation, he has to finish his work before that. This includes preparation of a Book for publication and organization of a meeting at the Academy of Sciences. He is waiting for Nikolai Tikhonov to arrive in Leningrad from Moscow to agree on the layout of the poems in the Book and the distribution of the poems to the translators. He wants the poems to be included in the Book to be printed in newspapers before publication. He thinks of using his evening to attract press attention.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 441.

1934

After May 27

He moves to Leningrad to live in the family of Karpez and Varlam Dondua.

Source: I. Megrelidze, Galaktion’s Anniversary in Leningrad, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 234.

1934

After May 27

Ioseb Megrelidze, who comes to meet Galaktion in the Karpez and Varlam Dondua’s family, notices that they live cooped up in the apartment and offers Galaktion to move in with him. The poet agrees.

Source: I. Megrelidze, Galaktion’s Anniversary in Leningrad, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 234-235.

1934

After May 27

In Leningrad, he is engaged in publishing the collection. Publishers resent the translation of some poems, others are clarified by him personally and he works hard. He himself makes close translations of his own poems for other poets and asks Ioseb Megrelidze, Elene Virsaladze, Varlam Dondua, Shota Dzidziguri and Valerian Urushadze as translators to help them understand the meaning of these close word for word translations correctly.

Source: I. Megrelidze, Galaktion’s Anniversary in Leningrad, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 236.

Note: This collection was not finally published, but separate translations made for it were published.

June

1934

June 1

He addresses the Presidium of the Leningrad City Council with a statement. He informs that he has arrived from Georgia and has material problems. Since his Book has already been sent to print, he asks them to approach the publishing house to give him the royalties in advance.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 442.

1934

June 5

In the Russian magazine Ogonyok (No. 11), Valerian Gaprindashvili's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "We, Poets of Georgia" is published as "Мы, поэты Грузии".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-85, 25; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 430.

1934

After June 11

Valerian Urushadze and Ioseb Megreliдзе, with the support of the members of the Georgian section of the Leningrad House of Writers, decided to celebrate Galaktion Tabidze's 25th anniversary of his work. They prepare posters, invitations, and in order to get permission to hold the event more easily, they call it a creative evening, not an anniversary. The organizers receive a refusal from the authorities on the grounds that temperamental Caucasian youths will gather at the meeting and no one knows what will happen. Their advice is that Galaktion should meet Russian poets in Georgia. The poet suspects that someone from Georgia is interfering and has lost hope, but the initiators manage to involve the Leningrad district committee of the party in the case and get permission. Thanks to the name of Niko Marr, it is also possible to hold the evening in the hall of the Academy of Art History on Isaak's Cathedral Square. Galaktion wants to celebrate this meeting under the auspices of collaboration between writers and scientists, he draws up a plan and calculates the necessary expenses for holding the concert. He wants to make a shorthand notes of the speeches delivered at the evening and after the anniversary to print the letters in the name of the Academy in the newspapers: Leningradskaya Pravda, Literaturniy Leningrad, Krasnaya Gazeta, Yuniy Proletariy, magazine Rezets, and others. They are going to deliver the plan to the People's Commissariat of Education of Georgia.

Source: I. Megreliдзе, Galaktion's Anniversary in Leningrad, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 236;

June 14

A special session is held at the People's Commissariat of Education in connection with the 25th anniversary of Galaktion's creative work. Besarion Zhghenti reads the report. The composition of the jubilee committee and the list of events to be held are approved.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-593, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 504.

1934

Until June 15

He is in Leningrad and learns that Olya Okujava, who is in Tbilisi, is unwell.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 49.

Dating: This is mentioned in a letter sent to Olya Okujava on June 15, 1934.

1934

June 15

He sends a short letter to Olya Okujava from Leningrad along with his power of attorney for collecting his pension and a telegram. He asks her to take care of herself and assures her that he will return as soon as the conference is over.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 49.

1934

June 15

From Leningrad, he sends a telegram to Davit Demetradze and Besarion Zhghenti, asking them to confirm whether he is included in the list of delegates for the First Congress of Soviet Writers.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-88; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 63-64;

1934

Until June 16

He receives a telegram sent by Olya Okujava from Tbilisi to Leningrad, expressing her concern for his health.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-456; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 210.

Dating: We date it according to the letter, which bears a stamp indicating June 16 in Tbilisi.

1934

Until June 17

Ioseb Megrelidze and Valerian Urushadze apply to the Leningrad Academy of Art History with a request to allocate the necessary amount. Initially, they receive a promise to allocate 1000 roubles, but in the end they receive only 500 roubles. Galaktion is satisfied with that too.

Source: I. Megrelidze, Galaktion's Anniversary in Leningrad, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 236-237.

1934

Until June 17

He writes a fragment of his autobiography in Russian, noting that his poem was first published in 1908 in the social-democratic journal Chveni Kvali, edited by Vladimir Darchiashvili. He was published in all revolutionary journals. In 1913, the revolutionary poem "The Mountains of Guria" was published in the social-democratic newspaper Azri, which led to the confiscation of the newspaper issue and a ban on its publication. This highly popular poem references the heroic struggle of Guria against autocracy in 1905 and mentions Nasakirali, a well-known battleground between the rebellious Gurians and the tsarist officials.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-85, 2-3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 425-426;

Note: The poem "The Mountains of Guria" was published in Azzi in 1914 (No. 43), not in 1913.

1934

June 17

At an evening held in his honour at the State Academy of Art Studies in Leningrad, he is presented with Nikoloz (Niko) Marr's Book "Japhetic Seminars". The Book begins with an analysis of ancient samples of the Georgian language and concludes with poems by Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-85, 25; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 430.

1934

June 17

A large number of Georgians are present in Leningrad that evening: Olga Baratashvili with her mother, Tebrone Makashvili-Natslishvili, printer Aleksandre Arabidze, Akaki Bokhua, Elene (Lolita) and Tinatin Virsaladze, Varlam and Karpez Dondua, Kita Megrelidze, Avlip Zurabashvili, Grigol and Elene Chkhikvadze, and others. There are also Russian, Armenian, Dagestani and Ossetian writers. Elene Virsaladze gives a report on Galaktion's work, Pavle Khuchua greets the public on behalf of the composers and promises that the Georgian composers working at the Leningrad Conservatory will create hymns based on Galaktion's poems. Alexander Prokofiev delivers the address on behalf of the Leningrad writers, and the beautifully designed and signed address is delivered by the Georgian graduate students. Anton Schwartz reads the translations of Galaktion, the romances performed by Tamar Davitashvili and Elene Gachechiladze-Virsaladze deserve a standing ovation. A group of Georgian folk song lovers under the leadership of Davit Dolidze participates in the evening, Mikheil Chkhaidze performs Krimanchuli. In his speech, the poet thanks the audience, recites the poems in Georgian: "Mary", "The moon of Mtatsminda", "Daland Ship", "Gravedigger" and "Blue Horses", and then the orators come out again and compete with each other in praise of Galaktion and Georgia.

Source: A. Vasadze, With Life and Death, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 216-217. I. Megrelidze, Galaktion's Anniversary in Leningrad, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 238-239;

Note: The names of Schwartz and Prokofiev are not mentioned in the recollection.

1934

June 17

After finishing the festive part of Galaktion's creative evening, they go by bus and cars from Isaac's Cathedral Square to Decabrists Street to a banquet arranged for 70 people in Olga Baratashvili's apartment. Georgian music and dance combine with each other with such skill that an enthusiastic employee of the Institute of Literature invites them to the Academy and promises to organize a radio program. Joyful Galaktion gives impromptu tributes to the host and the ladies performing the musical numbers of the concert. The feast continues until the morning. The poet is surprised how the jubilee organizers managed to lay such an excellent Georgian table in Leningrad.

Source: I. Megreliдзе, Galaktion's Anniversary in Leningrad, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 239-240.

1934

June 17

In his diary, he writes about the program of the evening held in his honour at the State Academy of Art Studies in Leningrad: the introductory speech was delivered by Grigol Nutsubidze, representing the Party Committee of the Academy; a presentation was made by Elene (Lolita) Virsaladze-Khidasheli, a postgraduate student at the State Institute of Literary History; addresses were given on behalf of Leningrad admirers by Varlam Dundua, on behalf of the Academy by Associate Professor Tchkonია, on behalf of research workers by Alexandre Kobakhidze, on behalf of the Academy of Russian Literature by Kamsar Grigoryan, and on behalf of the Soviet Writers' Organizational Committee by Alexander Prokofiev. Greetings were also conveyed from the State Conservatory and the Presidium of the Academy of Art Studies. Poems were recited by Anton Schwarz, and romances were performed by Tamar Davitashvili and others. At the end, he delivered a speech of gratitude and read his poems.

Source: MGL, d-85, 17-18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 428-429.

1933

June 17

Information about Galaktion's jubilee event is broadcast on Georgian radio.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-593, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 504.

1934

June 17

The receiving commission at the Union of Georgian Writers completes its work, deciding to reapprove 94 individuals as members of the union. The newspaper Komunisti publishes a list of those accepted into the Union of Georgian Writers, which includes, among other writers, the national poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1934, №139, June 17, p. 4.

1934

June 17 or later

Filled with impressions of the anniversary of Leningrad, He writes a poem "My evening is thundering in the heart of the Academy...".

Source: I. Megreliдзе, Galaktion's Anniversary in Leningrad, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 241-242.

1934

After June 17

In his diary, he writes that he is profoundly grateful to the pride of world science, Academician Niko Marr, who concluded his magnificent Book on the Georgian language, “Japhetic Seminars”, with an analysis of his poems.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-85, 25; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 430.

1934

After June 17

He writes an untitled poem beginning with the line “Where Steed stands by Peter the Great’s...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-85, 20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 429.

Note: A version of the poem was first published in 1940 under the title “Upon Returning” in the third volume of his works.

1934

After June 17

He writes an untitled poem “With what measure would you weigh my fate...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-85, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 430.

1934

After June 17

Together with Ioseb Megrelidze, he goes to visit Niko Marr; There he gives Niko’s wife a one-volume Book dedicated to the great scientist and a letter.

Source: I. Megrelidze, Galaktion’s Anniversary in Leningrad, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 242

1934

After June 17

Ioseb Megrelidze introduces artist N. Shvederadlova to Galaktion. The artist tells him that she knows Titsian Tabidze, who really looks like a poet, while Galaktion looks more like a sage. Megrelidze answers that Galaktion is not a simple poet, but the king of poets.

Source: I. Megrelidze, Galaktion’s Anniversary in Leningrad, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 242.

1934

After June 17

He makes a note about the evening held in his honour at the State Academy of Art Studies in Leningrad and summarizes the event.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-530, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 150-151.

1934

June 18

Olgha Baratashvili calls Ioseb Megrelidze and asks him to bring Galaktion from Kazan Cathedral Square back to her family. Megrelidze takes Galaktion in a chariot. On the way, seeing the statue of the "Bronze Horseman", Galaktion says that he has been delighted to see it several times. Ioseb tells that he and Shota Dzidziguri used to compete in reciting Galaktion poems in the yard of the nearby temple. Delighted, Galaktion hugs Ioseb warmly.

Source: I. Megrelidze, Galaktion's Anniversary in Leningrad, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 240-241.

1934

Until June 20

At the plenum of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia, Shalva Radiani reads a report titled "Creative Issues of Soviet Poetry". The speaker discusses the creative work of contemporary poets and examines the changes in their output since the historic resolution of April 23, 1932, which prohibited the existence of specialized groups of writers and laid the groundwork for the establishment of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia. In addition to other authors, the speaker also addresses the poetry of Galaktion Tabidze, the national poet of Georgia.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1934, №141, June 20, p. 3.

1934

After June 23

He is in Leningrad and receives a letter sent by Olya Okujava on June 16. Olya expresses her surprise that Galaktion hasn't even written a few words to ask how she is. She mentions that she is in Mikheil Hospital and is preparing for surgery. She hints that one should never lose their humanity.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-456; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 210.

Dating: We date it according to the stamp on the letter.

1934

June 28

In Leningrad, Varlam Dundua gifts him the Pushkin House almanac Rainbow, inscribed with the dedication "To Galaktion".

Source: MGL, t-400, "Радуга", Альманахъ Пушкинскаго Дома, Петербургъ, 1922.

1934

June 30

The newspaper Saliteruro Gazeti publishes a list of members who have been reaccepted into the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia, which includes Mikheil Javakhishvili, Titsian Tabidze, Paolo Iashvili, Giorgi Leonidze, and other writers, along with Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Newspaper Saliteruro Gazeti, 1934, №13, p. 4.

July

1934

June 11 - July 2

He is in the city of Leningrad and writes a poem “In Leningrad”.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 431;

Note: The original title of the poem in the autograph was “White Nights”.

1934

July 12

In the Russian-language publication Literaturnaya Gazeta, an article titled “From the Book ‘Epoch’” is published. It features Nikolai Tikhonov’s translation of Galaktion’s poem “To You, with Steel-Cold Eyes...”.

Source: “Литературная Газета”, 1934, №87, p. 2.

1934

May 4 – July 14

In Leningrad, Varlam Dondua gifts Nikoloz Marr’s Book “The 11th Archaeological Campaign of Anisi” with the inscription “To Galaktion”.

Source: MGL, t-354, H. Marr, “XI Анийская археологическая кампания”, Saint-Petersburg, 1913.

1934

July 14

He returns from Leningrad as dark as a black man and resembling a traveller of five years. The materials for publication by the Leningrad State Publishing House are nearly complete. He brings part of Nikolai Tikhonov’s translations for the Transcaucasian State Publishing House, while some are lost.

Source: Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 83-84; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 336.

1934

July 15

The newspaper Komunisti publishes an article by Shalva Radiani titled “Poetry at the Height of New Challenges”, in which the author discusses the recent achievements of contemporary lyric poetry. The critic notes that poets such as Aleksandre Shanshiashvili, Galaktion Tabidze, Simon Chikovani, and Ilo Mosashvili are creating examples of ideological transformation and ascending to a higher creative level.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1934, №162, p. 3.

1934

July 20

He writes the current date on the title page of Silovan Khundadze's Book "The Basic Principles of Georgian Orthography and Correct Usage".

Source: MGL, t-228, Silovan Khundadze, "The Basic Principles of Georgian Orthography and Correct Usage", Kutaisi, 1927.

1934

July 13-23

In his diary, he records information about the poet and journalist Petre Shalikashvili from various sources. He discusses in detail the epigrams of Denis Davydov and Petre Shalikashvili, concluding that Shalikashvili had significant influence in 19th-century Russia, as he dared to challenge such a revered figure as Davydov in literary disputes. He reflects that Nikolai Gogol's remarks on Shalikov in "Dead Souls" are valuable for exploring this individual's character. He notes that he needs to search for records regarding the relationship between Alexander Pushkin and Petre Shalikashvili. From Abram Efros's Book "The Poet's Drawings", he cites the description of Pushkin's drawing "Prince Shalikov with a Lorgnette".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-88, 1-14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 443-452.

1934

July 29

He receives an invitation from Vladimir Jikia to the event scheduled for the next day in Kutaisi – the opening of the Stalin Rioni Hydropower Plant.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-87, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 442-443.

1934

After July 29

He writes an untitled poem beginning with the line "Three brothers walk along the ridge...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-87, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 443.

1934

July 31

In his notebook, he writes that for five days, he must stop thinking about poetry and focus entirely on the upcoming First Congress of Soviet Writers. He believes he has a chance to attend the congress, as Davit Demetradze and Besarion Zhghenti have promised to resolve the matter, and Malakia Toroshelidze will raise the issue again.

Source: MGL, d-82, 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 418.

Note: Davit Demetradze is mentioned in the source by his last name, while Besarion Zhghenti and Malakia Toroshelidze are referred to by the initials of their first names and their last names.

1934

After July 31

Regarding the academic publication of his works, Olya Okujava writes in his notebook that the editors should rely on authoritative sources such as the volumes of Lenin's works. For poetic interpretations of sonnets, ghazals, and other poetic forms, they should refer to the works of classical authors, such as Valery Bryusov's books.

Source: MGL, d-82, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 418-419.

August

1934

August 5

The newspaper Komunisti publishes an informational text titled "For the Congress", listing the books released in connection with the Union of Writers' congress, including a collection of Russian translations of Galaktion Tabidze's poems titled "Selected Poems".

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1934, №180, p. 3.

Note: It refers to the collection of Russian translations of Galaktion's poems titled "Selected Poems", published in 1933, with an introductory article by Shalva Radiani: Табидзе, Г. "Избранные стихи", Тифлис, "Закгиз", 1933.

1934

August 7

By the resolution of the Presidium of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia, he is accepted as a member of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia based on his personal application.

Source: MGL, WUF №23.

1934

August 7

In his diary, he begins recording the number of hours he spends at home from August 7 to August 15 and the total number of poems he manages to review for the Russian edition. He concludes that he reviews 4 poems per hour and, over 140 hours, has reviewed 550 poems.

Source: MGL, d-73, 89; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 336.

1934

August 7

For the second Russian Book "Verses and Poems" to be published by the Transcaucasian State Publishing House in 1935, he compiles a list of translators living in Tbilisi: Valerian Gaprindashvili, Konstantine Bogdanovsky, Panteleimon Petrenko, Sandro Kantcheli, and P. Shaligin.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-73, 89; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 337.

Note: Valerian Gaprindashvili, Konstantine Bogdanovsky, Panteleimon Petrenko, and P. Shaligin are mentioned in the source by their last names.

1934

August 8

For the Russian Book by the Transcaucasian State Publishing House, he plans to select poems from the cycle "Epoch", include poems from the 1927 book, rewrite the poems "The Press" and "Lenin", transcribe new poems, list their titles, number them, and prepare a table of contents.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-73, 91-92; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 337.

1934

August 20

Malakia Toroshelidze reads a report on Georgian literature at the Union of Writers' congress. Among other topics, he discusses 20th-century Georgian literature, emphasizing that Galaktion Tabidze stands out among the representatives of pre-revolutionary poetic culture who managed to break away from past traditions and take a leading position in Soviet poetry. He reflects on Galaktion's pre-revolutionary work, noting that themes of sadness and sorrow predominated in the poet's early pieces. However, after the October Revolution of 1917, the poet broke free from the mystical-decadent circle of his creativity and responded with enthusiasm to social changes. Toroshelidze also points out that Galaktion was unable to fully rid himself of the remnants of past poetic traditions and could not develop equally deep and refined forms for contemporary themes, as he had done in writing poems like "The Moon of Mtatsminda" and "Blue Horses". In the speaker's opinion, overcoming this difficulty is now the poet's main challenge.

Source: "Comrade Malakia Toroshelidze's report at the Union Writers' Congress on August 20", Newspaper Komunisti, 1934, №199, p. 3.

1934

After August 20

The magazine Mnatobi publishes an article by Malakia Toroshelidze titled "Georgian Literature". In this overview, the author discusses the history of Georgian literature and devotes a separate section to Galaktion's work. He argues that Galaktion Tabidze has yet to develop poetic forms suitable for contemporary themes. Therefore, the poet's main challenge at present is to overcome this difficulty.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1934, №7-8, July-August, p. 286-287.

1934

August 21

The newspaper Komunisti publishes a resolution from the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia regarding the celebrations for the 750th anniversary of Shota Rustaveli's birth in October 1937. According to the resolution, a committee is established to organize the anniversary festivities and conduct a selection competition for a statue of Rustaveli. Among the members of this committee, alongside representatives from various fields of science and art, is Georgia's National Poet Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1934, №193, p. 1.

1934

August 21

The Russian newspaper Tifliskiy Rabochiy publishes a resolution of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Republic of Georgia to celebrate the 750th anniversary of Shota Rustaveli's birth as a nationwide holiday throughout Georgia in 1937. Galaktion Tabidze is elected to the organizing committee for the jubilee events. Olya Okujava reflects that in the centuries to come, Galaktion's jubilees will also be celebrated and fears that time might destroy or distort his unpublished beautiful manuscripts.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 99-100; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 339.

1934

August 22

Olya Okujava writes that it is disgraceful to see in the Russian newspaper Na Rubezhe Vostoka an announcement by the Transcaucasian State Publishing House about the forthcoming Russian edition of Galaktion Tabidze's poems in the fall, as the Book was supposed to be completed in time for the First Congress of Soviet Writers, which took place in Moscow from August 17 to September 1, 1934.

Source: MGL, d-73, 101; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 339.

1934

August 23

They ask him about the announcement regarding his election as a member of the organizing committee for the 750th anniversary events of Rustaveli's birth, drawing his attention to it. They also steal the precious cigar case dedicated by the Transcaucasian State Publishing House to mark his 25th anniversary in literary activity.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 102-104; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 339-340.

1934

August 28

The newspaper Komunisti publishes a segment of Malakia Toroshelidze's report delivered at the Union of Writers' conference on August 20, which dedicates a portion to Galaktion Tabidze. Toroshelidze notes that Galaktion has not yet completely freed himself from the remnants of past poetic traditions and has struggled to develop deep and refined forms suitable for contemporary themes, similar to those he employed in poems like "The Moon of Mtatsminda" and "Blue Horses”. According to the speaker, overcoming this challenge and seeking new, perfected forms for contemporary topics should be the poet’s task.

Source: “Comrade Malakia Toroshelidze’s report at the Union Writers’ Congress on August 20”, Newspaper Komunisti, 1934, №199, p. 3.

1934

August 29

He meets with Filipe Makharadze, who welcomes him warmly, and they talk about literature for a long time. Galaktion returns home feeling satisfied.

Source: Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 106; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 340.

1934

August 30

The Central Executive Committee of the Transcaucasian Federation awards him an honorary certificate “For the Strengthening of the Transcaucasian Federation”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s autobiography, MGL, d-659, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 461; G. Tabidze’s autobiography, MGL, d-659, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 466.

1934

After August

In his notebook, he makes entries about socialist realism in Russian. He questions whether socialist realism is merely a method of Soviet literature or if it represents a broader method of revolutionary literature worldwide. He notes that Soviet literature establishes the image of the “new man”, the builder, and the fighter. Galaktion records Maxim Gorky’s assertion that the primary purpose of art is to elevate reality and view it from the perspective of the working class’s ideals. He emphasizes Gorky’s view on revolutionary romanticism, stating that this method must reveal the contradictions of life. He points out that socialist romanticism is an integral part of socialist realism.

Source: MGL, d-424, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 78;

September

1934

August 17 – September 1

The First All-Union Congress of Soviet Writers is held in Moscow, with 30 Georgian delegates sent, but Galaktion Tabidze is not among them.

Source: “The First All-Union Congress of Soviet Writers”, Moscow, 1934. p. 690-698.

1934

September 4

Under the title “Blood-Sucking Writers,” he writes a quote from an article by Alexandre Mindadze titled “The Fight Against Tropical Diseases in Our Country,” published in issue No. 205 of the newspaper Komunisti. The article states that a large portion of tropical diseases spreads through the bites of blood-sucking insects.

Source: MGL, d-73, 98; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 339.

1934

September 4

At the State Publishing House, he attends a debate surrounding Nikolai Bukharin’s speech at the First All-Union Congress of Soviet Writers. Vasil Gorgadze remarks that if Bukharin had known about Galaktion Tabidze, he should have spoken about him rather than Pavlo Tychyna. Giorgi Kachakhidze mentions that many colourless writers were sent from Georgia, and no one could have imagined that Galaktion wouldn’t be there. Nikoloz Kavzharadze agrees. In Vasil Maskhulia’s view, there is no better poet in Russia than Galaktion. Shalva Radiani and Benito Buachidze are outraged by this great dishonesty, stating that it should not have happened. Levan Asatiani tells them that there was a lot of discussion at the congress about Galaktion, and Nikolai Tikhonov read translations of his poems.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-71, 20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 309.

1934

September 4

In his diary, he writes that all of Tbilisi is outraged that he was not sent to the First All-Union Congress of Soviet Writers and that everyone is on his side. Discontent is gradually growing. He thinks they will try to stop the matter, but they won’t be able to and will be forced to apologize. He concludes that he must move higher and forward.

Source: MGL, d-71, 20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 309.

1934

September 4

He writes an untitled poem beginning with the line “While it had, the wind carried it away...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-71, 21-22; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 309-310.

1934

September 4

Under the title “Higher and Forward,” he writes in his diary that on September 1, in connection with the XX International Youth Day held in Tbilisi, an article titled “The Radiance and Joy of Progress” was published in the newspaper Komunisti. The article begins with lines from his famous poem: “I do not remember a sky so calm, so quiet...” and notes that that day, indeed, the evening was unusually calm and quiet, bringing joy to the workers. He believes these lines are significant for those who consider “The Moon Over Mtatsminda” to be a pessimistic poem. The newspaper, however, emphasizes the day of international youth, a day of brilliance and joy. He expresses gratitude to the editorial board of Komunisti.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-71, 20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 308-309.

1934

September 4

The resolution of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia dated August 20, 1934 on the 750th anniversary of Shota Rustaveli’s birth is published in Saliteraturo Gazeti, which lists the members of the commission created by the Council of People’s Commissars to resolve issues related to the anniversary, and among them is the people’s writer Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: “The resolution of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia dated August 20, 1934 on the 750th anniversary of Shota Rustaveli’s birth”, Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1934, №16 (70), p. 2.

1934

After September 5

In Malakia Toroshelidze’s Book “Georgian Literature”, Galaktion Tabidze is recognized as a poet who successfully distanced himself from the literary past in the new reality and took a leading position in Soviet poetry. The author notes that from the very first days of the October Revolution, Galaktion rejected mystical and decadent concepts. However, Toroshelidze believes that the poet has not yet fully liberated himself from the remnants of the literary past and has not developed deep and appropriate forms to reflect contemporary reality. This, he argues, is the main challenge currently facing Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: М. Торошелидзе, Грузинская литература, “Художественная литература”, 1934, p. 77-78.

Dating: The Book was signed for publication on September 5, 1934.

1934

September 23

He receives a letter from Beso Zhghenti, informing him that the next day at 9 PM, a Georgian poetry evening will be held at the “Arto” garden on Plekhanov Avenue, and Galaktion’s participation is not just desirable, but necessary. The event has already been included in the posters. The honorarium is 200 roubles. The sender expresses hope that the addressee will attend and read a poem.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-454; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 267.

1934

September 24

The newspaper Komunisti publishes Besarion Zhghenti’s article “Georgian Literature at the Congress”, which states that a poetry evening held at the Writers’ House during the congress, featuring Galaktion Tabidze, Paolo Iashvili, Ioseb Grishashvili, Simon Chikovani, Titsian Tabidze, and other poets, generated great interest.

Source: B. Zhghenti, “Georgian Literature at the Congress”, Newspaper Komunisti, 1934, №222, p. 3.

1934

Until September 26

The Writers’ House receives an official letter from Maxim Gorky. The famous Russian writer informs them that he has been selected as a member of the committee established by the Central Executive Committee of the Soviet Union to commemorate the 100th anniversary of Alexander Pushkin’s death. Since it has not been possible to assemble the full committee, the addressee requests confirmation from each member to immediately form a working commission, which will pre-discuss the desired events and then present them to the plenary session of the committee. Lev Kamenev is named as the chairman of the commission. A list of the members is included, and Maxim Gorky, as the chairman of the Pushkin Committee of the Central Executive Committee, requests to be notified if anyone has objections to the approval of the commission in its current composition.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-456-b; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 267;

1934

September 26

He hands over the second volume of his collected works in eight volumes to the State Publishing House for printing.

Source: Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 116; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 342.

1934

September 26

In the Russian newspaper Literaturnaya Gazeta, Nikolai Tikhonov’s translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “And the straws rustled, and the straws rustled...” is published under the title “Осень в траншеях”.

Source: Newspaper “Литературная Газета”, September 26, 1934, №129, p. 3.

1934

After September 26

The typographer Maisuradze gifts his poetry collection with the inscription, which includes a poem dedicated to Galaktion. He is happy because he loves typographers very much.

Source: Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 120; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 342.

1934

September

The magazine Mnatobi publishes an announcement listing the authors whose texts are scheduled for publication in 1935. Among the listed works are poems by Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1934, №10, September, p. 225.

1934

September

He writes an untitled poem “I Built a Palace High Up in the Mountains...”

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2537; №2538; №2539; №28897-50, p. 156; №6174; №5805; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 44; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 259.

Note: The poem appears in sources untitled and under the titles: “I Built a Monument. Epilogue”; “I Built a Monument”.

1934

Early Autumn

He writes an untitled poem “From Tskaltubo to Kutaisi...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2745; №6526; №8424; №8799; №174 d., p. 25; №183 d., p. 15; №70-a, p. 1798; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 33; For dating: Murtaz Kankadze, “Which does not settle with forgetfulness (Galaktion and Tskaltubo)”, Mtserlis Gazeti, 2017, October 1-31, №7, p. 9; Grigol Yaralov, newspaper Tskaltubo, January 07, 1986.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the titles: “Songs for the Team. For the Lutenists. For Soloists”; “The Highest Freedom”; “My Kutaisi”; and “From Tskaltubo to Kutaisi”.

1934

Early Autumn

He is sitting on a stone near the ruins of the Bagrat temple in Kutaisi, when Grigol Yaralov, the head of the State Committee for the Printed Word, and his companions catch his eye. Galaktion offers himself as their guide and shows them around Ukimerioni Hill. When he learns that Yaralov is resting in Tskaltubo, he promises to visit him the next day and fulfils his promise. During the meeting with Yaralov, the famous cavalryman and binge drinker Simon Pkhakadze is with him. Galaktion and Yaralov discuss the second volume of Galaktion’s writings, which has been submitted for printing. There, near the Tskaltubo baths, they meet Catholicos Patriarch Kalistrate Tsintsadze, who is in Tskaltubo for treatment and is very satisfied. Galaktion and the patriarch talk for a long time about the history of Georgia. When the patriarch is called to the baths, Yaralov, left alone, asks Galaktion, if he loves Tskaltubo so much, why didn’t he write any poems about it. Galaktion smiles, writes something in his notebook, then tears out the page and hands it to Yaralov. This is the poem “From Tskaltubo to Kutaisi...” Yaralov likes the poem so much that he soon shows it to the talented musician Bidzina Ghoghoberidze, who writes music to this text.

Source: Murtaz Kankadze, “Which does not settle with forgetfulness (Galaktion and Tskaltubo)”, Mtserlis Gazeti, 2017, October 1-31, №7, p. 9. Grigol Yaralov, newspaper Tskaltubo, January 7, 1986.

Note: The number of the volume of Galaktion's works is not indicated, but in the fall of 1934, the second volume, which was published in 1935, would have been given to the "State Publishing house".

October

1934

October 5

In the newspaper Na Rubezhe Vostoka, an article titled "Overview of Literature" published under the pseudonym "G. B". briefly reviews the history of the publication of literary works in the Soviet state. It notes that books by such writers as Davit Kldiashvili, Galaktion Tabidze, Mikheil Javakhishvili, Leo Kiacheli, and others have been published at a high level.

Source: Г. Б., Смотр литературы, "На рубеже Востока", 1934, №17, p. 4.

1934

October 6

He reads Literaturuli Gazeti, underlining lines from the poems of Paolo Iashvili and Nikolo Mitsishvili, as well as an article by Besarion Zhghenti.

Source: MGL, t-672, Literaturuli Gazeti, 1934, 56 October, №18, p. 1, 3.

1934

October 9

Due to illness, he writes a power of attorney for Olya Okujava to collect his honorarium of 100 roubles.

Source: V. Javakhadze, "Unknown. Apology of Galaktion Tabidze", Tbilisi, 2020, p. 154.

1934

Until October 10

Terenti Graneli dedicates him the poem "This Day Will Go Far Away, This Day Will Die..."

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1969, April 25.

Dating: We date it according to the time of Terenti Graneli's death.

1934

Until October 10

Together with Terenti Graneli and Geno Kelbakiani he visits the artist and poet Korneli Sanadze. The host's mother sets the table, and when Galaktion learns about the hostess's Gurian background, he recites the poem "To the Mountains of Guria".

Source: K. Sanadze, Terenti Graneli, My Life is Only a Poem, Tbilisi, Nakaduli, 1984, p. 259-262.

Dating: We date it according to the time of Terenti Graneli's death.

1934

Until October 10

He often goes with Geno Kelbakiani to visit the sick Terenti Graneli, who is residing in the basement of the building opposite the main post office on Plekhanov Street.

Source: Gr. Orakhelashvili, Recollections about Terenti Graneli, from the Book “My Life is only a Poem”, 1984, p. 205.

Dating: We date it according to the time of Terenti Graneli’s death.

1934

October 10

He participates in the transfer of Terenti Graneli’s body from the first (Aramiants) hospital in Tbilisi, along with 30 other poets.

Source: V. Gorgadze, Terenti Graneli, My Life is Only a Poem, Tbilisi, Nakaduli, 1984, p. 108.

1934

After October 15

At the end of Simon Chikovani’s first Book of poems and verses, as a postscript, he writes a celebratory poem: “Chachava and Chikovani / I couldn’t make them stop writing poems... / That’s why these two rogues / Have it over their heads...! N”.

Source: MGL, t-217, Simon Chikovani, Verses and Poems, Book One, Tbilisi, 1933, p. 333.

1934

October 18

An article titled “On Measures to Improve the Work of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia” is published in the Literaturuli Gazeti. The article outlines specific tasks that must be addressed in order for literature to fulfil its obligations to the party and the country. For its part, the state takes on the responsibility of improving the material conditions of writers and declares that the following deserving authors will be attached to the Ministry of State Supply of Georgia: Vasily Barnov, Ekaterine Gabashvili, Shio Mghvimele, Dutu Megreli, Mikheil Javakhishvili, Niko Lortkipanidze, Panteleimon Chkhikvadze, Giorgi Kuchishvili, and Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Gazeti, 1934, №21, p. 1.

1934

October 23

He receives a letter from Platon Kikodze, the editor of Literaturnaya Gazeta. Kikodze reproaches him for promising to submit a poem but waiting in vain for his arrival at the palace. He writes that he will wait until 4 PM the next day. He reminds him that the theme is the issues of the socialist homeland and that, if necessary, he can provide additional material.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-454-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 267.

November

1934

Until November 20

He arrives in Mtskheta and meets Doctor Diasami.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-162, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 365; For dating: T. Tvalavadze, "Researches", Tbilisi, 2025, 1934

Until November 20

He receives a letter from Doctor Diasami, in which the author notes that folk medicine in Georgia is very diverse. It is rare to find a citizen who does not know how to heal. Almost every village has preserved many medicinal remedies and skills, passed down from ancient times through folk traditions or oral storytelling. The great historical heritage in the field of medicine is reflected in the practices originating from pagan times, such as herbalism, divination, incantations, and the tradition of preaching, which belong to the Georgian people and should be returned to the community through modern scientific study.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-162, 4-6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 366;

1934

Until November 20

He is very ill and sends a letter to Doctor Diasami in the form of a poem: "Though I am alive..."

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-162, 6-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 366-367;

1934

Until November 20

As soon as Doctor Diasami receives the poem "Though I am alive...", he travels from Mtskheta to Tbilisi to provide treatment.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-162, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 367;

1934

November 20

The second volume of Galaktion Tabidze's eight-volume works is submitted for production with the approval of the state publishing house, and the editing of the Book begins.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in eight volumes, vol. II, 1935, p. 616.

1934

November 24

The Literaturuli Gazeti publishes information that the second volume of Galaktion Tabidze's works is already being printed and will be released shortly.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Gazeti, 1934, №26, p. 4.

December

1934

December 1

Due to illness, he writes a power of attorney for Olya Okujava to collect his honorarium of 1000 rubles.

Source: V. Javakhadze, “Unknown. Apology of Galaktion Tabidze”, Tbilisi, 2020, p. 154.

1934

December 2

The newspaper Komunisti publishes an informational announcement stating that on December 2, at 7 PM, a meeting of the Defense Literary Commission will be held at the Writers’ House, which must be attended by: Pavle Mirotadze, Galaktion Tabidze, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Paolo Iashvili, and other writers.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1934, №277, p. 4.

1934

December 6

The Literaturuli Gazeti publishes a notice that, along with works by other Georgian writers, Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Press” has been translated into Armenian.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Gazeti, 1934, №28, p. 6.

1934

December 15

Under the title “Folk”, He writes a poem “Early in the morning, I would go...”.

Source: MGL, d-40; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 461.

1934

After December 15

In his diary, he writes that many years have passed since he was first chosen as the King of Pots. Those who chose him are no longer alive, and the term they set has expired. He requests that, if his line was incorrect and they are dissatisfied, they should, according to tradition, choose someone else. He bitterly recalls how the authorities fought against him with isolation, hunger, thirst, persecution, homelessness, and the lack of newspapers and magazines.

Source: MGL, d-43-44; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 460.

1934

After December 15

He writes an untitled poem “That I am so doomed...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-48; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 459.

1934

After December 15

He writes an untitled humorous poem “The greatest misfortune...”.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-45; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 459.

1934

December 18

The Literaturuli Gazeti publishes an informational article titled "Georgian Writers in Russian", stating that the "Ogonek" library has released a collection called "Poets of Soviet Georgia". The Book includes works translated by Boris Brik. Along with texts by other Georgian authors, the collection also features translations of Galaktion's poems.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Gazeti, 1934, №30, p. 6

Note: The title of the collection published in Russian is: "Поэты Советской Грузии, Авториз. пер. Бориса Брика", Moscow, Library "Ogonek", 1934; № 60.

1934

Until December 22

The "Ogonek" publishing house releases a collection titled "Poets of Soviet Georgia in Boris Brik's Translations", which includes Russian translations of the poems by Galaktion Tabidze, Titsian Tabidze, Giorgi Leonidze, Kolau Nadiradze, Razhden Gvetadze, Sandro Euli, Simon Chikovani, Konstantine Chichinadze, Alexandre Gomiashvili, Irakli Abashidze, and Varlam Zhuruli. From Galaktion's poems, two are included: "Peaks of New Mountains" ("То была в старину") and "Abkhazia" ("Абхазия").

Source: "Поэты советской Грузии в переводах Бориса Брика", "Библиотека "Огонька", 1934, p. 23-26.

Note: The titles of the poems in the translations are: "То была в старину" and "Абхазия".

1934

December 22

The newspaper Komunisti publishes a notice that the publishing house "Ogonek" has released a collection titled "Poets of Soviet Georgia", which includes works by Galaktion Tabidze along with poems by other authors translated into Russian by Boris Brik.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1934, №294, p. 4.

Note: The reference is to the collection published in 1934: "Поэты советской Грузии в переводах Бориса Брика", Library "Ogonek", 1934.

1934

Until December 23

At 10 Krilov Street, Galaktion's neighbour is a military man, a member of the Communist Party named Shonia, who cannot accept the fact that the shared toilet is inside Galaktion's apartment. Because of this, he organizes provocations, makes noise, and terribly insults both Galaktion and Olya Okujava, trying to intimidate them. He shouts, "Galaktion Tabidze, we Bolsheviks lifted you up, and now we will bring you down again".

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-132; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 103-105.

Dating: The fact is mentioned in the statement dated December 23, 1934.

1934

December 23

He addresses a detailed statement to the Chairman of the Central Executive Committee of the Georgian Soviet Socialist Republic, Filipe Makharadze. He describes how his neighbour, a military man and party member named Shonia, is harassing him. He requests that appropriate measures be taken.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-132; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 103-105.

1934

December 30

The Literaturuli Gazeti publishes an informational article titled “What Writers Are Working On”, stating that on January 4, a meeting of writers with the leadership of the Lenin District Committee (now the Nadzaladevi District) is planned. The meeting will have a consultative nature, and the authors will present details about their current creative activities to the audience. The event will begin at 7 PM and will include participation from: Paolo Iashvili, Sandro Euli, Konstantine Lortkipanidze, Alio Mashashvili, Galaktion Tabidze, Demna Shengelaia, Simon Chikovani, Panteleimon Chkhikvadze, and Mikheil Javakhishvili.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Gazeti, 1934, №32, p. 6.

Note: The writers mentioned in the source are referred to by their initials and last names.

1934

Until December

He writes a poem titled “The Great Struggle for World Genius Harmony”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5396; №28897-50, p. 142; 79 d., p. 1; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 35.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the titles: “The Idea of Genius Harmony”, “A Song for the Great, World Genius Harmony”, “Ten Years”, “For the Great, World Genius Harmony”, and “10 Years for World, for the Genius of Harmony”.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1934

November or December

He travels to Batumi wearing new shoes, silk stockings, two handkerchiefs, with a cigarette box in his pocket and 3 roubles.

Source: Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 133; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 346.

1934

December

The magazine Mnatobi publishes the poem “The World, for Genius Harmony”.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1934, №11-12, p. 7-8.

1934

December

The magazine Mnatobi publishes a critical article by Giorgi Leonidze titled “Defence Artistic-Literary Collection – Edited by Platon Mirotadze”. After general critical remarks about the book, the author adds: “It cannot be criticized for including Galaktion Tabidze, who is represented here by a poem of average quality”. According to Leonidze, the poet has written better poems on this theme, and publishing them would have enhanced the collection.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1934, November-December, №11-12, p. 228-229.

1933-1934

He writes an untitled poem, “On Hammers and Anvils...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4487; №5619; №294 d., p. 4; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 40; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 257.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the titles: “Everything for War”; “Symphony of the Factory”; “Preparation for a New Day”.

1934

He writes a poem titled “A Poem Written During Illness”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №d-162, p. 6821-22; №7314; №167 d., p. 9; №28897-50, p. 150; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 42; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 259.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and under the titles: “A Letter to a Doctor Friend”; “A Poem Written to a Doctor During Illness”.

1934

He writes an untitled poem, “Beyond the Gates of Georgia...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №6784; №7306; №28897-50, p. 147; №5328; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 46.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the titles: “The Antiquities of Georgia”; “The Battle”.

1934

He presents Shalva Radiani with a picture and inscription “To my brother, our golden Shalva”.

Source: M. Gomarteli-Radiani, Brief Recollections of Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 281.

1934

In the notebook, he writes a poem “Azure sea and azure sky”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №2555; №6521; №305-d., p. 46-48; №6196-6197; №28897-50, p. 17; №2074; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 162.

Note: The work is also found under the title “Homeland”.

1934

Shalva Radiani’s Book “Literary Portraits” is being published, which includes an essay dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze. For Shalva Radiani, Galaktion is “one of the greatest representatives of contemporary Georgian literature”. According to the critic, his early lyrics are rooted in symbolism. The aestheticization of death characterizes early Galaktion’s work. Just as for Novalis and Giacomo Leopardi, death was for him a means of escaping suffering. According to Shalva Radiani, Galaktion’s poetry reflects a belief in the existence of two worlds – the real and the ideal. The poet perceived nature in a romantic-symbolist manner, seeing it as “a means of symbolizing his inner state”. Radiani believes that Galaktion, by his creative nature, is a lyric poet, and epic poetry remained unattainable for him, as it is for a typical Impressionist. According to the critic, even after the revolution, the poet experienced individual downfalls, as evidenced by his “Hundred Poems”, in which “alongside healthy dispositions, Galaktion Tabidze also responded to his old feelings of degradation”. Shalva Radiani states that Galaktion’s revolutionary lyricism is not perfect. Beside highly artistic poems, the poet has “weak, rhetorical, and inferior verses”. In some cases, he provides a primitive understanding of class struggle.

Source: Sh. Radiani, Literary Portraits, 1934, p. 40-61.

1934

Along with Alio Mirtskhalava and Gigla Mebuke, he visits the director of the Gurjaani school, Ieremia Karelshvili, at his home in Tbilisi. They drink excellent Kakhetian wine and become quite intoxicated. The tipsy Alio and Gigla sneak away from the table. The host offers Galaktion to stay with him for the night, but the poet declines, as he is not accustomed to staying elsewhere in Tbilisi. Ieremia, after having a drink with his guest, sees him off in a carriage to his home on Melikishvili Street. He proposes to Galaktion to arrange a meeting at the Gurjaani school and receives his agreement.

Source: A. Mirianashvili, Galaktion and Ioseb Grishashvili, newspaper Sabtchota Oseti, 1973, November 3, N 215, p. 3.

1934

He writes an untitled poem, “The Ring Follows the Ring...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №875; №2463; №2536; №28897-50, p. 85; №5269; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 47; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 26.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the title “The Pushkin Generation”.

1934

On behalf of the literary circles and readers of Leningrad, a letter is sent by Alexander Prokofiev, a member of the Proletarian Writers’ Association. He congratulates Galaktion on the 25th anniversary of his literary career, praises his revolutionary enthusiasm, and his efforts in bringing Georgian poetry to the world stage. He writes that Galaktion is an innovator, continuing the path of Georgian luminaries, and enriches Georgian poetry with new, international themes.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-454-d; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 268.

1934

He receives a letter from the Directorate of the Institute of Literature of the State Academy of Art Studies. They write that they recognize the immense significance of his art and wish him even greater success in creating socialist poetry, both in form and in content, with national characteristics. As a sign of great respect, they send him a dedication and one of the academy's precious publications.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-454-b; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 268.

1934 or later

Thoughtful Galaktion, standing on Lenin, the present-day Freedom Square, is greeted by Akaki Gatsserelia who interrupts his thinking process. Galaktion points to the two small trees in front of the council and says that they stand like brothers with umbrellas.

Source: A. Gatsserelia, Reeds and Gobelin, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 46.

Dating: Dated according to the time of Akaki Gatsserelia's appearance in the official arena.

Until 1935

He writes a poem "To the Perished – From Confinement" ("Steadily, He Carves His Path...").

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4724; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 151; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 791.

1935

1935 or earlier

Varlam Zhuruli visits him at home, who, introducing himself to the poet's wife, says that he is the poet Varlam Zhuruli. Galaktion adds with a smile: what communists won't think of next, the poet and Varlam Zhuruli? When he notices that the guest is upset, he tells him that writing one or two poems is not enough to be a poet. Poetry requires divine talent.

Source: K. Khoperia, The First Meeting with Galaktion, Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1997, №10, May, p. 8.

Dating: Varlam Zhuruli has been publishing poems in the periodical press since 1924 and he published the first collection "Rose's coming into leaf" in 1935. It is logical that this fact happened before the publication of his collection.

January

1935

Until January 6

He writes a poem "Dream by the Adjara River".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2548; №5311; №5346; №5619; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 48; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 268.

Note: The poem is also found in sources untitled (“Nope, He Did Not Feel...”).

1935

6 January

The poem “Dream by the Adjara River” is published in the newspaper Literaturuli Atcharistani.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Atcharistani, 1935, №1, p. 1.

1935

Until January 8

He writes untitled humorous poems: “Where did Robakidze go?”, “Where did Grishashvili go?”, “Where did Abashvili go?”, and “How did this Paolo leave?”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-89, 6-8, 22, 26, 28; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 453-455.

1935

After January 8

He writes an untitled poem: “Transformed only by agility”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-89, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 464.

1935

After January 8

He writes a poem “An Epitaph for Natalia”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-89, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 464.

1935

January 9

He writes a poem titled “The Eye and Thought of Today”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1170; №2763; №3258; №3260; №4741; №5368; №5369; №28897-50, p. 3; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 53.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and under the titles: “A Poem Due to the Assembly”; “A Poem Due to One of the Assemblies”; “The Eye and Thought of Today”; “The Song of the Victorious Struggle”.

1935

Until January 10

The secretariat of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia approves the bureau of the section for defensive literature, consisting of Platon Mirotadze, Galaktion Tabidze, Paolo Iashvili, Archil Chachibaia, and Alexandre Gomiashvili.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1935, №9, January 10, p. 4.

1935

Until January 12

He writes a poem titled “Gas”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №28897-50, p. 131; №d-101, p. 6; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 89.

Note: The poem is also found in sources untitled.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1935

Until January 12

He writes a poem titled “I Want to Begin a Song”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №221; №5416; №7740; №28889-50, p. 30; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 84.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and under the title “Two Generations”.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1935

Until January 12

He writes a poem titled “Today, This Black Sea is My Heart”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4719; №4721; №4722; №28897-50, p. 151; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 85.

Note: The poem is also found in sources untitled.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1935

Until January 12

He writes an untitled poem, “In the Evening, Mountains, During the Day, the Seaside...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №907; №5397; №28897-50, p. 153; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 86.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the title “Resorts”.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1935

Until January 12

He writes a poem titled “Invincible”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5399; №28897-50, p. 154; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 87.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and under the title “Invincible”.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1935

Until January 12

He writes a poem titled “The Army of White Was Marching”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №205; №206; №28897-50, p. 130; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 88.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and under the titles: “The Raid of the Whites”; “The Raid”; “War by the Black Sea”; “On the Mountain”.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1935

Until January 12

He writes a poem titled “Relieved”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №64; №7722; №28897-50, p. 132; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 90.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and under the title “Danama, Danama, Danama”.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1935

Until January 12

He writes a poem titled “I Am a Soldier”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №69; №28895-50, p. 135; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 91.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and under the title “To the Old Grandfather”.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1935

Until January 12

He writes a poem titled “Until They Are Shattered”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3472; №70-a, p. 1792; №328 d., p. 1; №28897-50, p. 137; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 92.

Note: The poem is also found in sources untitled.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1935

Until January 12

He writes an untitled poem, “This Old Musset is Like a Cunning Snake...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3949; №8192; №4672; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 94.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and under the titles: “After Musset, No One Dreams”; “The Old Cunning Muse “; “The Sentimental Muse “; “Muses in the Gardens of Peterhof”; “Old, Cunning Muse”.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1935

Until January 12

He writes a poem titled “Eyes to Eye”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №28897-50, p. 128; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 95.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1935

January 12

He publishes the poem “The Eye and Thought of Today” in the Literaturuli Gazeti.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Gazeti, 1935, №2, January 12, p. 1.

1935

January 12

The list of authors whose books will soon be published by the State Publishing House is printed in the Literaturuli Gazeti. Included in the list is the second volume of Galaktion Tabidze’s works.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Gazeti, 1935, №2, p. 4.

1935

January 14

A lengthy text titled “Greeting of the Cultural Workers Army of Georgia to the Central Committee of the Communist Party (B) – Comrade Stalin!” is published in the newspaper Komunisti. Representatives from various fields of culture and art address the leader of the world proletariat – Joseph Stalin – expressing their gratitude for the achievements brought about by the great socialist construction. The text of the greeting is signed not only by scientists, directors, artists, sculptors, architects, and engineers, but also by writers: Niko Lortkipanidze, Leo Kiacheli, Sandro Shanshiashvili, Titsian Tabidze, Galaktion Tabidze, Valerian Gaprindashvili, Nikolo Mitsishvili, Paolo Iashvili, Alexandre Abasheli, Razhden Gvetadze, Alexandre Kutateli, Giorgi Leonidze, Besarion Zhghenti, Simon Chikovani, Irakli Abashidze, and Davit Demetradze.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1935, №13, January 14, p. 1.

1935

January 16

The last part of a lengthy report titled “On the Work of the People’s Commissariat of Education” by Akaki Tatarashvili, the People’s Commissar of Education of Georgia, is published in the newspaper Komunisti. One section of the report is dedicated to artistic literature. The speaker notes that among the forces of the artistic intelligentsia that managed to transition to the leading positions in Soviet literature, Galaktion Tabidze must be named first. Although in the early years of the revolution, the poet expressed reality in the form of abstract schemes and perceived the revolution as a force of destruction and chaos, in recent times, Galaktion has approached socialist reality more organically, and his lyricism has begun to reflect the specific content of this reality. The author believes that the poem “Revolutionary Georgia” clearly expresses Galaktion’s position.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1935, №15, January 16, p. 1.

1935

January 16

An article by Shalva Radiani titled “Mnatobi” is published in the newspaper Komunisti. The critic discusses the significance of this magazine and names Galaktion Tabidze among the authors who have published important materials in this periodical over the years.

Source: Sh. Radiani, Mnatobi, Newspaper Komunisti, 1935, №22, January 26, p. 3.

1935

January 18

He writes an untitled poem “Sometimes it is bitter...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,0; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 463.

Note: The poem was later published under the title “Uncertainty”.

1935

Until January 22

He writes a poem titled “Look!”

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4713; №28897-50, p. 152. №294 d., p. 23; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 45.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and under the title “Evening in the Tea Thickets”.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1935

January 22

The poem “Evening in the Tea Thickets” is published in the newspaper Sabtchota Atcharistani.

Source: Newspaper Sabtchota Atcharistani, 1935, №19, January 22, p. 3.

1935

Until January 24

He writes a poem “At the Communist International Congress”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, 468, 1074, 5574; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 54.

Note: The poem is found in sources untitled as “There is a Crossroads...” and under the titles: “Peterhof”, “On the Asphalt Road”, “The Last Omnibus”, and “Asphalt”.

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1935

January 24

The poem “Asphalt” is published in the newspaper Sabtchota Atcharistani.

Source: Sabtchota Atcharistani, January 24, 1935, №20.

1935

January 24

On the front page of the Literaturuli Gazeti, there is a notice that Galaktion Tabidze has been elected as a member of the Central Executive Committee. The poet’s photo is also printed here.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Gazeti, 1935, №4, p. 1.

1935

January 24

Literaturuli Gazeti publishes a photo of Galaktion Tabidze with the caption that the National Poet has been elected as a member of the Central Executive Committee of Georgia (CEC).

Source: newspaper Literaturuli Gazeti, January 24, 1935, №4, p. 1.

1935

January 25

The poem “Evening in the Tea Thickets” is published in the newspaper Literaturuli Atcharistani.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Atcharistani, 1935, №2, p. 3.

1935

January 25

He writes an untitled poem “Let us mark this place...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4485; №37 d., p. 76; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 55.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the title “Vanity of Vanities”.

February

1935

February 7

He writes a poem “Colourful”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №912; №5404; №6680; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 172.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“I am someone else...”).

1935

February 7

He receives a letter from the editor of Literaturnaya Gazeta, instructing him to write to Mr. Smirnov with his address for the transfer of the honorarium, and he follows through with this.
Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-134; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 64.

1935

February 9

At a literary evening held in Leningrad (now St. Petersburg) for a delegation of Georgian writers, Boris Pasternak, Nikolai Tikhonov, Osip Brik, Aron Erlikh, and Vladimir Lugavskiy read translations of works by Georgian poets. Although Galaktion is not present with the delegation in Leningrad, his poems are also read.

Source: “An Evening of Georgian Poetry in Moscow and Leningrad”, Newspaper Komunisti, 1935, №41, February 17, p. 4.

1935

February 11

The newspaper Komunisti publishes Besarion Zhghenti’s article “Ten Years of Mnatobi”. The critic reviews the history of this magazine, which is of great importance to Georgian literature, and among the authors who have collaborated with “Mnatobi” since its founding, he primarily names Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: B. Zhghenti, Ten Years of Mnatobi, Newspaper Komunisti, 1935, №36, February 11, p. 2.

1935

February 11

He participates in the celebratory evening held at the Palace of Artists to mark the tenth anniversary of Mnatobi, alongside other writers, and reads excerpts from the poem “Revolutionary Georgia”.

Source: Ten Years of Mnatobi, Newspaper Komunisti, 1935, №38, February 14, p. 4.

1935

February 14

He writes a poem “From the Train Window”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №325; №70-a, p. 1801; №4406; №329-ღ, p. 2; №1395; №3323; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 28.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “In the Train”, “Trains”, “Trivialities”, “We Depart the Train”, and untitled (“Covered in Snow, It Chases the Journey...”).

1935

February 20

He writes a letter to the publishing house that he is urgently leaving for the village due to his mother’s illness and asks them not to stop the printing of the second volume of his works. In case of uncertainty, he offers to remove a line, a typo, maybe a whole poem, but not to stop the printing of the book, and when he returns, he will solve everything.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-135; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 64.

1935

February 26

He receives a telegram sent from Chkhorotsku regarding his mother's illness.

Source: Simon Tabidze, "Recollection of Galaktion Tabidze", Collection "Galaktionology", IX, Tbilisi, 2022, p. 343.

Dating: In Simon Tabidze's memoir, it is mentioned that Galaktion arrived in Chkhorotsku the day after receiving the telegram.

1935

February 26

He buys the newspaper Komunisti, in which his cousin Titsian Tabidze's article is printed "The bound vein of Georgia has been opened (Georgian decade in Moscow and Leningrad)" and decides to read it to Titsian's mother.

Source: Simon Tabidze, "Recollection of Galaktion Tabidze", Collection "Galaktionology", IX, Tbilisi, 2022, p. 343;

1935

February 27

He arrives in his native village Chkvishi. Mother is very happy and does not let him leave the room. Galaktion reassures her that he will not leave her and sits by the bed. Titsian Tabidze's mother – Elizabeth comes to visit them, they talk for a long time and Galaktion hands her Titsian's letter dedicated to the 14th anniversary of the Sovietization of Georgia, published on February 25 in the newspaper Komunisti, to which Elizabeth happily tells them that writing is the job of poets. Elizabeth remembers that in her childhood, Galaktion was their first visitor at every New Year, he brought luck, and even during New Year, when she was pregnant, the grandmother brought Galaktion with the words: He brings good luck.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-90; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 11;

1935

End of February or later

The doctor prescribes drugs for his mother - Makrine Adeishvili, which are not sold locally, and Galaktion is forced to go to Tbilisi to get them.

Source: Simon Tabidze, "Recollection of Galaktion Tabidze", Collection "Galaktionology", IX, Tbilisi, 2022, p. 343;

March

1935

Until Mid-March

He writes on a piece of paper about matters related to his native village. The list includes writing a statement, re-roofing the house, hiring a servant, and buying clothes for his mother.

Source: Record, GTDA, №296.

Dating: It is seen from the record that Galaktion's mother is alive.

1935

Beginning of March or later

He finds medicine for his mother in Tbilisi and returns to Chkvishi but finds his mother dead. He cannot enter the room of the deceased for a long time and cries bitter tears.

Source: Simon Tabidze, "Recollection of Galaktion Tabidze", Collection "Galaktionology", IX, Tbilisi, 2022, p. 343-344;

1935

Mid-March or later

Galaktion Tabidze's mother - Makrine Adeishvili - is buried in the village of Chkvishi. After his mother's funeral, the poet gets up at dawn for several days, goes to his mother's grave and sometimes writes something.

Source: Simon Tabidze, "Recollection of Galaktion Tabidze", Collection "Galaktionology", IX, Tbilisi, 2022, p. 343-344. P. Nishnianidze, From Galaktion's Life, Tbilisi, 1964, p. 63-68;

1935

Until March 5

Under the note (from Abkhazia), He writes a poem "Two Horsemen" ("Here is the mountain, there is the gorge...").

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №595, p. 1.

Note: As a result of revisions, the poem's beginning in the same autograph is "Mountain-mountain, vine-vine..." The text is included in the cycle "Epoch".

1935

March 5

The Main Department of Literature and Publishing, "Mtavlit'i", signs off on the transfer for the printing of the second volume of Galaktion Tabidze's collected works, and the necessary printing preparations for the Book begin.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in eight volumes, vol. II, 1935, p. 616.

1935

After March 5

He reads the second volume of his works, correcting lines, and marking translated poems.

Source: MGL, t-709, Galaktion Tabidze, works, vol. II, Tbilisi, 1935.

1935

After March 5

The second volume of Galaktion Tabidze's collected works is being published, which includes 336 poems. These are the works: "Flags Quickly!", "He Was Drunk With The Sorrow Of

People”, “Prologue Of 500 Poems”, “We, Poets Of Georgia”, “Storm”, “Cosmic Orchestra”, “I Want To Start A Song”, “Planets Collide With Each Other”, “What Calmness”, “Smoke Of Gunpowder And Shot”, “Feeling And Simplicity Have Returned”, “We Went To The Roads”, “If There Is No Fight”, “Wind In Roses”, From Daily Prose”, “When They Didn’t Offer You A Hand In Those Moments”, “In Memory Of A Revolutionary”, “The Most Peaceful”, “He Closed The Door”, “In Countless Flags”, “There Are Days”, “Nine Hundred And Eighteen”, “It Was”, “The Wind Is Blowing, The Wind Is Blowing, The Wind Is Blowing”, “With Chemical Subjects”, “Wind Lifting The Curtain”, “The Wind Makes The Italian Christmas Tree In Tripoli Sway”, “This Poem”, “Gusty Wind”, “Her Eyes Remained Open”, “How The Bells Fought Against The Bells”, “A Few Days In Petrograd”, “What’s The Use Of Words? I Believe!”, “John Reed”, “Lenin”,  (“One Ring Follows Another, Like This: Equal To Equal...”), “Our Light Is The Colour Of Fire”, “It Is A War”, “East”, “An Era Was Born And Grew”, “When In The Evening, Mist Covers Mtatsminda”, “That’s Why A Revolution Happens”, “Have You Observed Revolving Doors?”, “By Day And By Night”, “There Is Much Poison In This Life”, “Stage – A Quickened Breath”, “The Workshops Of The Railway Are Awakening”, “Of A Huge Reservoir”, “Coloured Glasses”, “Industrial Lullaby”, “Two Songs”, “He Who Barely Survived”, “A Wheel Collides With A Wheel”, “At The Oil Terminal”, “Sailors”, “The Great Army”, “Blacksmiths’ Street”, “Here Lies The Secret Of A Small Hut – The Secret Of Humanity”, “The Projector Was Searching For The Enemy”, “Revolutionary Posters”, “Again The Poet And The Mass”, “Thoughts In The Roar Of The Ration”, “Bitter Separation Between Dreams And Reality”, “Real And Artificial Flowers”, “Stronger Than Reality”, “After The Feuilletons”, “Inscription On The Book”, “Recollection”, “How Enchanting You Are, How Magnificent”, “They Were Waiting For The Revolution”, “Far At The Source Of The Alps, Pure, Greatest In The Southern Sun”, “To Conquer New Peaks”, “Song”, “Thinking By The Sea”, “A Shadow Clung Close To The Pavement”, “My Boatman”, “Don’t Hide Your Wounds From The People”, “Give Your Heart A Soul, And The Yearning For Song Will Thunder Titanic”, “On The Other Side Of Metekhi, The Sky Is Being Blessed”, “What Is Forgotten Does Not Take Root”, “From May Songs”, “In The Blossoming Evening”, “Portraits”, “A Good Play”, “Matter”, “Demonic”, “Lines”, “Everyone Was There!”, “What Was Your Childhood Like?”, “Do You Remember That Snowstorm?”, “They Are Breaking The Rocks”, “Joy Spreads Over”, “One Face And One Colour”, “The Song Is Good Only For The Mass”, “By Evening Time, Again With That Lullaby”, “My Song, Up High, All The Way Up!”, “Other Lines”, “You Are Once Again Standing On The Path Like An Orphan”, “The Future’s Lyre Sang To A Strong Future”, “Don’t Hold Back Your Soul In The Restless Voices”, “The Day’s Greeting Is Met With Joy”, “The Incursion Of Diesels”, “The Power Station In The Forest”, “A Rainbow”, “Bourgeois Heart”, “The Knight Is Coming By New Paths”, “Be Sincere, Hear The Glowing Voice”, “It Quivers – Hues”, “Who Does Not Reflect Or Feel Agitated?”, “Gigantic World Lyre”, “Artificial And Natural Light”, “From Adulthood”, “The Whole Transitional Generation”, “That Time Could Not Be Expressed By Words”, “You, Shadows Of The Past!”, “Time Has Furrowed The Forehead”, “So That The Great Longing Does Not Get Overshadowed”, “The Leader Of The Eras’ Vanishings”, “The Arch Of Suns From So Much Fire”, “You, Area Of The Lights”, “I Am With Her The Same Way Again”, “Go Ahead, Walk!”, “The Distant Icy Area”, “By The Black Sea”, “From The Gigantic Light”, “Harsh At This Time”, “Is This Silence?”, “At Dawn, Indeed...”

"The Ecstasy Of Hope And The World's Victory", "With Unwavering Voices", "Tbilisi Speaks In Different Melodies", "With New Hope", "The Shadow Has Rolled Away", "The Waves Of The Mtkvari Are Rolling", "The Enfeebled Beacon", "You Are Leaving", "In The Train", "Exactly As I Was Twenty Years Ago", "Sky, Sea, And Earth", "A Free And Strong Person", "The Peak Has Bowed", "The Historic Ship", "My Homeland Is Manhattan", "A Joyful Flutter", "The Flame In The Furnace Tests The Iron", "Clusters Of Life", "On The Road", "Only This Heart", "Stanzas", "The Word – Radio", "The Storm", "The Streets Will Be Covered With Flowers", "With Life, With All Creation", "On Every Line", "Greetings To The Newly United Georgia!", "The Great Winter", "A Beautiful Book", "We, Us", "By The Order Of Victorious Battles", "In The City And In The Village", "Eternal Hope", "There Was The Radiance Of Hope", "I Am The Host, And You Are The Guest", "With The Crown Of Labour", "Theme", "The Storm Has Passed", "A Flock Of Flying Ravens", "So, Toast To", ("Sometimes, When Springs..."), "Rocking The Cradle Of New Life", "A Toast", "The Argonauts Of A New Age", "Play, Orchestra!", "Merging With The Waves", "The Cup Of Battles", "Thought Lifts The Eye", "The Day Has Passed", "We Want, We Seek, We Thirst!", "Everywhere The Conductor Is An Engineer", "There Is A House Beyond The Water", "Flashing", "The Path Of Ever-New Crossings", "Follow, Listen To The Wheels", "It Covered Many Voices", "A Great Reserve", "The Age Of The Electron", "Golden Fleeces", "With Eternal Golden Pens", "In The Mines", "Many Kin", "In The Sunlight's Brilliance", "The Engine Sings", "Different Hearts", "The Gleam In The Waves", "Lines", "Is It Really Such A Time Now?", "Along The Shimmering Path", "Fragment", "The Shadow Of The World", "The Torrent Of Scarcity", "Straight Into The Wind, Straight Into The Wind!", "Calm Destiny", "Tomorrow Is May", "The Epoch Brings New Embellishment", "Equal", ("Roar, My Heart's Desire! My Soul Is Restless..."), ("What Was Not – Is..."), "We Love It", "Yet He Believed In Victory!", "Only The Idea", "We Went Up The Gallows", "How Many Nights Came To An End", "Calm Down, O Wind!", "The Sun's Greeting", "The Wind Stirs The Ashes", "Saw, Plane", "Like A Cavalry Troop", "Dream, Make Up", "That Time Passed Like A Dream", "You Cannot Take Your Eyes Off The Lightning", ("Hill-Hill, Vine-Vine"), "Oh, My Lyre!", "The Tireless Sail", "Many Alleys, Many Twists", "Wrapped On The Morning Shore", "He Does Not Lose Anything But Shackles", "Revolution Is A Hurricane", "Strike", "Smile", "March Eighth", "When We Bid Farewell To The Villages", "From Fragments: The Fire Is Pensive!", "The Eagles' Attack On The Airplane", "The Veils On The Brambles", "He Sees Everything", "Father And Son", "Now The Heart Has Turned Into Iron", "They Await A New Michelangelo", "When In Tbilisi The Forest Stirred", "The Argonauts Of A New Age", "Returned From The Penal Servitude", "Science Stands Against Hard Work", "In The Heart – There Is Fire", "I Dream Of A New Georgia", "Ah, It Is Dawning", "Long Live The Fighting Generation", ("If The Whole Country Were To Burn..."), "Let's Extend Our Hands To Each Other", "Fire In Kutaisi", "Drama – Of One Apartment", "From A Children's Magazine", "Bravery", "The International", "The Passenger Waited For The Tram By The Pole", "The City Underwater", "You, With Eyes As Cold As Steel", "Eye To Eye", "19-?", "Meet The Pacifist", "Parisians Complain Of Boredom", "A Man With Glasses", "The Old Woman", "She Came Out Of The Opera Late", "Uncle, Who Are You Looking For", "Give Shelter To The Storm", "Willow Standing In Front Of Geneva!" ("Thunder, We Are Waiting For You!"..), "Bohemia", "Time Looked At That Heart Too", "And Reeds Where Whistling”, “No One Is Better Than The Mtieli In Digging The Soil”, “How Much More Will The Passing Of Time Say?”, “How Can You Not Remember The Child In Delight!”, “We, Many Edges Of Life”, “Clash”, “Down With Pacifism”, “Hit The Pickaxe!”, “Revolutionary Georgia”, “Little By Little, Little By Little, Little By Little A New Country Is Being Built”, “The Rhythm Of History’s Wheels Drives Us Towards Rioni Power Plant”, “The Modern Gigantic Voice Dictates To The Centuries!”, “In The Feeling Of Freedom”, “With Rioni Power Plant, Georgia Has Found New Voices And Faces”, “For A Wonderful And Strong Person!”, “The Etude Of Collective Hands”, “By New Paths”, “From Every Side”, “The Streams Of The Revolution”, “A Strong Group Of Artists Waits For Us At The Doors”, “The Car And The Cart”, “Song”, “From The Pages Of Revolutionary Georgia’s Life”, “A Thousand Perspectives, A Thousand Hues!”, “So What Is This?”, “The Blizzard Of Musical Sounds”, “Rhythm – The Beginning Of Labour”, “If Anything Comes Ashore”, “Shoulder To Shoulder, Shoulder To Shoulder!”, “For The First Time”, “The New ‘Nikora’”, “Thunder To Thunder, Wind To Wind, Let Us Give Support To One Another!”, “Labour Is Noisy – Poetry Is Noisy!”, “The Sun Will Drip Into Your Eyes, And Light Will Increase In Sight”, “Loud! Loud! Loud!”, “Class Struggle”, “A Journey Along The Silver Path”, “The Peaks Of New Mountains”, “On The Plains Of Colchis”, “My Heart Is This Black Sea Today”, “Look!”,  (“The Evening Of The Mountains, The Day Of The Sea”), “Insurmountable”, “Every Poet Is Now An Engineer”, “What Do We Need To Be Alive For”, “We Do Not Want To Trample On Others, We Do Not Want War”, “Our Army Is Strong, But With Another Strength”, “The Builder Is Coming, Bringing Bricks”, “The Old And New Bridge”, “About The Homeless Children”, “The Pioneer Was Worthy Of A New Way Of Life”, “The Seventy-Year-Old Poet Walks In The Street”, “Legions Are Coming!”, “Fiery Sparkle”, “Do Not Abandon The Poem Outside Of Time, Epoch, And Space”, “The Press”, “The Poet And October”, “The October Symphony”, “Our Army Leads The Way To The Sunny One”, “Every Red Army Soldier Stands Like A Lion”, “The White Army Was Going”, “Gas”, “Relieved”, “Idea”, “To Old Grandpa”, “The Sun Is So Passionate”, “Until They Are Shattered”,  (“It Has Passed Beyond The Gates Of Georgia...”), “Light Clouds Of The Highest Peaks”,  (“Like The Captain Of The Old Ship...”), “A Poem Written During Illness”,  (“This Old Muse Is Like A Cunning Snake”), “What Streams Is Vesuvio Shooting?” And “I Built A Palace High Above The Mountains”.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in eight volumes, vol. II, p. 1935.

Note: The volume of the Book is edited by Shalva Radiani. The total volume of the Book is 616 pages, and the print run is 4,000 copies; the Book was sent for production on November 20, 1934, and was signed for printing on March 5, 1935. The volume contains 336 poems, of which 22 works are published for the first time, while other texts have already been published in periodicals or the poet’s collections.

1935

March 11

In his notebook he makes a note: “Akaki Gatsserelia will defeat the formalists”.

Source: MGL, d-92, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 19.

1935

March 11

He writes an untitled poem “What will happen to me”.

Source: MGL, d-92, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 19;

1935March 11

He writes a poem titled “Recollections”.

Source: MGL, d-92, 3-4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 20.

1935March 11

He recalls a story from long ago when he sat in a tavern with Vano Sarajishvili, listening to his singing from a gramophone, while the wind “danced” with the fish hanging for drying.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-92, 23; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 24;

1935After March 11

He writes untitled poems “Give me, Chanakhi...” and “They Say That Grishashvili...”

Source: MGL, d-92, 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 20-21;

1935After March 11

He makes a note in his notebook, in which he recalls how a young girl took him for a walk in the garden of Kutaisi as a child and how he picked up a rose lying on the ground, and the girl giggled telling him: throw it away, who knows which Armenian was sniffing it.

Source: MGL, d-92, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 21;

1935After March 11

In the notebook, he writes lines from Akaki Tsereteli’s satirical poem “Changed Times”: “The Armenian took the sword, while the Georgian - the Armenian account book”.

Source: MGL, d-92, 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 21;

1935After March 11

In the notebook, he makes a humorous note about the battle of people from Samegrelo and Guria. The Megrelians captured a small boy from Guria, for which they were reprimanded by the leader, why should such a small boy be captured, and they were forced to let him go. The boy did not leave and when they asked him the reason why he did not go, he replied: Shame on me, the Megrelians captured me.

Source: MGL, d-92, 7-8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 21;

1935

After March 11

He writes untitled humorous poems “You are Russian...”, “What can I do, what will happen to me...”, “Before that, on Sunday...”.

Source: MGL, d-92, 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 21-22;

1935

After March 11

He makes a humorous note about one man from Guria, who caught a catfish, shared it with everyone on the way and brought home only the head. His wife scolded him, you should have kept the tail, how could you not know that fish tail is tastier. The second time he caught a carp, he again shared it with a lot of people on the way and brought home only the tail of the fish. His wife scolded him again, you didn’t know that the head of the carp is delicious, but you brought the tail. The man got angry, I can’t understand our women and distinguish between the head and tail of these fish.

Source: MGL, d-92, 13-14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 23;

1935

After March 15

He writes a poem titled “Order-Bearing Georgia”.

Source: MGL, d-105; 1-6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 380-382;

1935

Mid-March or later

He writes an untitled poem “I was choking back tears. My heart is sad...”.

Source: MGL, d-90, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 7;

1935

March 23

Olya Okujava catches sight of Galaktion in the street, wearing dusty clothing.

Source: O. Okujava’s letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-73; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 211;

1935

March 28

Olya Okujava, who is living with her sick mother and is also unwell, visits Galaktion, bringing him bread and eggs. When she arrives, the poet is not home. Olya knits socks and hangs up laundry, leaving him tram fare and a note suggesting he bring his clothes to exchange the next day and visit her mother. She promises him a blanket, soap, and money for a bath, so he can clean up properly. Olya expresses her concern, stating that a cultured person shouldn’t have to live in such conditions. She assures him that she will bring a helper in two days to clean his apartment thoroughly.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-73; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 211;

1935

March or later

Writes untitled poems "The one who I love..." and "The life is a gratuitous mirror..."

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-91, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 13;

1935

March or later

He makes a note in his notebook that it is a year of terrible illness and death. He thinks that the activity of the government, people and public organizations is needed to solve this problem.

Source: MGL, d-91, 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 14;

1935

March or later

He makes a note in his notebook, in which it is described that the crazy people cut off the head of the hospital superintendent, buried it some distance away, and giggles if a superintendent can find himself.

Source: MGL, d-91, 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 14;

1935

March or later

He makes a note in his notebook in which he expresses his dissatisfaction with the atmosphere prevailing in Tbilisi restaurants. He notes that these institutions are full of uncultured, shameless, dirty-looking publicans, who are characterized by vulgar behaviour and insolent conversations. He laments the fact that Georgian politeness has been lost, which you can no longer meet even in the university and the palace of writers, and if polite and cultured families still exist somewhere, they are full of tragedy. He indicates that he has never sang to a vile, uncultured society, and his idea revolved around a completely different people.

Source: MGL, d-91, 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 15;

1935

March or later

He writes a poem "Victory of roses".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-91, 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 16;

April

1935

April 4

His mother-in-law – Elizabeth Peremusheva-Okujava dies.

Source: Марат Гизатулин, Булат Окуджава: «...От бабушки Елизаветы к прабабушке Элисабет», 2020, <https://maxima-library.com/new-books-2/b/516722>

1935

After April 4

He attends the funeral of Olya Okujava's mother, Elizabeth Peremusheva-Okujava, at the Vake cemetery.

Source: Марат Гизатулин, Булат Окуджава: «...От бабушки Елизаветы к прабабушке Элисабет», 2020, <https://maxima-library.com/new-books-2/b/516722>

1935

April 12

An announcement is published in the newspaper Komunisti, stating that the next day at 8 PM, a meeting of writers and critics will be held at the editorial office of Komunisti. A list of authors who are required to attend the event is also published, which includes Galaktion Tabidze among other writers.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1935, №87, April 12, p. 4.

1935

April 14

He writes a poem titled "Demonstration Against War".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4490; №5274; №70-a, p. 1779; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 56.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the titles: "Demonstration on Zhores Street", "Zhores Street", and "Jean Jaurès".

1935

April 17

In Alexandrov's Garden, he meets Pavle Akobia, who is gnawing on a crust of black bread. Upon seeing Galaktion, he politely stands up and greets him. When the poet tells him that he must be an elderly man and should be on a pension, Akobia replies, "They've been begging me to take it for five years, but I won't, because I still haven't lost my ability to work". Galaktion interprets this response through his interlocutor's Mingrelian pride.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-92, 25-27; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 24-25.

1935

After April 20

He writes down the technical data of his apartment in the notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-93, 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 31; For dating: L. Beburishvili, "Researches", 2025, p. 588.

1935

April 21

He writes a untitled poem beginning with the lines “The colour of the setting sun again...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4351; №66-a, p. 1543; №616 d., p. 1; №144 d., p. 15; №625-d., p. 7; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 57.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the title “For the Fire to Truly Ignite?”

1935

April 21

He writes a poem titled “Seville”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4434; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 58; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 284.

Note: The poem was initially integrated with two other poems, “I’ll Tell You: Like This Gale...” and “Rhine”, under the common title “The Creation of Dreams”, and it is also found in sources under the title “Gamen”.

1935

April 21

He writes an untitled poem beginning with the lines “I’ll tell you: like this gale...”

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4438; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 59; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 284.

Note: The poem was initially integrated with two other poems, “Seville” and “Rhine”, under the common title “The Creation of Dreams”, and it is also found in sources under the title “Dunaeli”.

1935

April 21

He writes a poem titled “Rhine”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4501; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 60; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 284.

Note: The poem was initially integrated with two other poems, “I’ll Tell You: Like This Gale...” and “Seville”, under the common title “The Creation of Dreams”.

1935

21 April

While in Tbilisi, he writes an untitled poem “I Remember the Winter Dusk...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №5820; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 130.

1935

Until April 22

He writes down excerpts from the Book “Rudolph Diesel, Life and Work” by Lev Gumilevsky. He writes the quote that all inventors should be optimists.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-93, 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 26; For dating: L. Beburishvili, “Researches”, 2025, p. 588.

1935

April 22

In his notebook, he makes a note about the illness of his father-in-law, Stephane Okujava. He notes that he is in the same dire straits as Despina, the landlady of Galaktion, was in 1907. Even the doctor cannot give a promising prognosis. Olya Okujava's brother, Vasili, says in tears that it is better that the patient's suffering ends soon, and others rest, and Olya replies that they should not be selfish.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-93, 5-6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 27; For identification of persons: L. Beburishvili, "Researches", 2025, p. 588.

1935

April 22

He writes a poem titled "André Malraux".

Source: MGL, d-94, 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 34-35.

1935

April 22

He writes a poem titled "The 16th Rifle Division" about Vasil Kikvidze.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №122 d., p. 11-12, №228; №28897-50;;G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 127.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the titles: "The 16th Rifle Division Named After Kikvidze", "The 16th Rifle Division (Named After Kikvidze)", "The 16th Rifle Division", "The Sixteenth Division", "Foreign Poet", "André Malraux", and "French Poet".

1935

April 22

He writes a poem titled "André Gide and André Malraux".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5400; №123 d, p. 3; №37 d., p. 4; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 163.

Note: The poem is also found in the sources untitled.

1935

April 22

He writes an untitled poem "An old man's hat is pulled down over his eyebrows...".

Source: MGL, d-94, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 35.

Note: The work is a version of the poem "André Gide and André Malraux".

1935

Until April 23

In his notebook, he writes an anecdote about a Tatar who was eating meat, almost finished eating, and then asked the seller what kind of meat it was, to which he received the following answer: You eat meat and you ask me?

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-93, 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 28; For dating: L. Beburishvili, "Researches", 2025, p. 588.

1935

April 23

Irakli Abashidze informs about Nikolai Aseev's arrival and conveys his statement that he can't wait to meet Galaktion. He believes that Aseev sincerely loves him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-93, 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 27.

1935

After April 23

He writes an untitled poem beginning with the lines "I have a different intention..."

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-93, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 28; For dating: L. Beburishvili, "Researches", 2025, p. 422.

Note: The work is a version of the poem "The Youth..."

1935

After April 23

He writes in his notebook that the writer Jaju Jorjikia cried to his dead wife on the day of her burial, that he would never marry again and got married two weeks later.

Source: MGL, d-93, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 28; For dating: L. Beburishvili, "Researches", 2025, p. 422.

1935

After April 23

He makes a note about the military doctor Mikheil Iashvili, who in his high school graduation class wanted to become a surgeon, but his comrades told him that he had a weak heart and would not be able to do it. To prove his valour, Iashvili took excrement in his hand.

Source: MGL, d-93, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 29; For dating: L. Beburishvili, "Researches", 2025, p. 422.

1935

After April 23

In his notebook, he notes to find out who wrote the statement that adorns the exhibition of Georgian artists in the National Gallery. He thinks that he can apply such a statement to his own events.

Source: MGL, d-93, 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 29; For dating: L. Beburishvili, "Researches", 2025, p. 422.

1935

After April 23

He writes a funny story in his notebook about one Megrelian, who threw a cigarette butt into the street and the policeman intended to fine him. Sharp-witted Megrelian excused himself, saying that he had put the cigarette here for a while, then he took a cigarette and left the place.

Source: MGL, d-93, 16; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 29; For dating: L. Beburishvili, “Researches”, 2025, p. 422.

1935

After April 23

In his notebook, he writes a dialogue between a Megrelian deacon and a Gurian peasant. The peasant asks the deacon if someone comes and constantly repeats: “Father Utu, Father Utu”, what would he do? The deacon told him that he would scold him well. The Gurian man then replied why he would insistently repeat “Oh, Lord, have mercy on us”.

Source: MGL, d-93, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 30; For dating: L. Beburishvili, “Researches”, 2025, p. 422.

1935

After April 23

He writes one stanza of an untitled poem, “The Fierce Dragon, Tabes dorsalis...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-93, 21; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 30.

Dating: The autograph of the poem in the notebook is written later than the April 23 entry.

Note: Tabes dorsalis is the Latin term for a complicated form of neurosyphilis, characterized by degeneration of the neuronal system in the spine, accompanied by pain.

1935

April 24

He writes an untitled poem “The colour of the sun and the wind...”.

Source: MGL, d-94, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 32.

1935

After April 24

He continues work on the untitled poem “The colour of the sun and the wind...”.

Dating: The original, dated version of the poem is written in violet ink. Corrections are made in blue ink.

Source: MGL, d-94, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 32.

1935

April 27

He writes an untitled poem “The colour of the setting sun is still...”.

Source: MGL, d-93, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 25.

1935

April 30

He writes a poem "In Naples".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №70-a, p. 1786; №37 d., p. 7; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 61.

Note: The poem is found in sources untitled and under the title "To the Abyssinian".

1935

April 30

He writes a poem "Vesuvius".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №8195; №70-a, p. 1785; №37 d., p. 6; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 62.

Note: The poem is found in sources untitled and under the title "Heart of Stone".

May

1935

May 1

He writes a poem "Heart of Stone".

Source: MGL, d-94, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 36.

Note: The work is a variant of the poem "Vesuvius".

1935

May 1

He writes an untitled poem, "I Will Not Be Afraid of Death...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-94, 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 37.

Note: The work is a variant of the poem "In Naples".

1935

May 1 or later

He continues to work on the untitled poem, "I Will Not Be Afraid of Death...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-94, 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 37.

Dating: The original, dated version of the poem was written in pencil, with corrections made in violet ink.

1935

May 1 or later

He continues to work on the poem "Heart of Stone".

Source: MGL, d-94, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 36.

Dating: The original, dated version of the poem was written in pencil, with corrections made in violet ink.

Note: The work is a variant of the poem "Vesuvius".

1935

After May 6

He writes in his notebook that he liked Stalin's speech at the graduation of academicians of the Red Army very much. He characterizes this speech as being brief, laconic and exhaustive.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-93, 19; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 30; For dating: L. Beburishvili, "Researches", 2025, p. 587.

1935

May 9

In the notebook, he makes a note about the second volume of works sent to the printing house. He notes that the Book has 600 pages (instead of 900), many verses have been removed, and there are no the last verses. Also missing are the originals of the poems, which the printing house should have. The editors are making it difficult, and they haven't given him a single page of the Book to look at. He thinks that they are trying their best to make the Book not the author's, but the editors'.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-94, 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 39.

1935

May 9

He makes a note in the notebook, aiming to find out what is the current situation of the "Tsisperkantselis", what is the situation in the magazine Mnatobi, what is the new chairman of the Writers' Union doing, what is Beso Zhghenti doing. He thinks that the silence in the writers' organization is better for him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-94, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 40.

1935

May 9

In his notebook, he makes a humorous entry describing a certain Mingrelian's attempt to have his poem published somewhere. When asked which poem he intends to publish, the Mingrelian replies that he will publish "The Khevsurian Cow".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-94, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 41.

Note: "The Mingrelian" refers to Simon Chikovani, who is the author of the poem "The Khevsurian Cow".

1935

May 14

He writes a poem "There is a Monument by the Garden".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4357; №70-a, p. 1789; №d. 329, p. 1; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 63.

Note: The poem is found in sources untitled and under the titles "Monument" and "The Age of Electronics".

1935

May 14

He writes a poem “I Have Parted from the Sick Side”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №70-a, p. 1787; №4364; №5260; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 65.

Note: The poem is found in sources untitled and under the title “Heinrich Mann”.

1935

May 21

He is invited to a meeting with Lavrentiy Beria, who greets him amicably, offers compliments, and informs him that he is to travel to the Anti-Fascist Congress of Writers and Artists in Paris on behalf of the Georgian writers. There, Galaktion meets the Armenian writer Vahram Gabuzian, the same Vahram Alazani, and learns that they are both being sent to Paris together. Beria gives “comradely” advice to the writers regarding discipline. Galaktion tries to determine why the choice fell on him and Vahram Alazani.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-481, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 350.

1935

May 22

He fills out a form to obtain a visa for traveling to Paris and sends it to Moscow.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-481, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 350.

1935

May 22

He begins preparing the text for his speech at the Anti-Fascist Congress of Writers and Artists in Paris.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-481, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 350.

1935

After May 22

He prepares the text for his speech at the Anti-Fascist Congress of Writers and Artists in Paris, in which he reviews the development of Georgian literature from the Middle Ages to the poet’s contemporary period. The ideological aspects of the text are monitored by the party’s ideologists.

Source: MGL, d-660, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 506-510.

Note: From another note by the poet, it appears that the party’s ideologists were also involved in preparing the text of his speech.

1935

May 28

He sends the structure of the selected poems for the Russian-language publication to Giorgi Bebutov, an employee of the Zarya Vostoka publishing house. His wish is for the Book to be divided into 10 sections: from 1908-1912, selected from the 1914 book, artistic flowers, those published in Mnatobi, from “John Reed”, from the 1927 collection, from the books “Epoch”, “Pacifism”, “Revolutionary Georgia”, from the press, and others. On the back of the page, he writes a note that he urgently needs the original portrait of himself, drawn by the artist Nikolai Chernishkov, for the new Georgian collection, and asks Giorgi Bebutov to pass it on to the artist.
Source: Autograph, MGL, 28745-10-11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 64.

1935

May

He writes a poem “Mother”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4446; 37-d., p. 11; №70-a., p. 1775; №4437. G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 239.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Jungfrau” and untitled (“I Thought: The Night Holds Jungfrau...”).

1935

May

He writes a poem “The Unemployed”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4426; №5263; 70-a, p. 1788; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 67.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and titled “To Klosar”.

1935

May

He writes a poem “The Wind”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №70-a, p. 1788; №4347; №5262; №5769; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 68.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and under the title “In the Turmoil of the Journey”.

1935

Spring

He knocks on the door of the writer Mariam Garikuli (Ratiani), who lives next door to him on Zhores (now Marjanishvili) Street №4. Only children are at home, who invite him to the room and make him sit in the armchair. Being crapulent, he falls asleep as soon as he sits down. After a while, a coachman knocks on the same door and explains to the surprised children that their guest hired his coach in the morning, drove around Tbilisi and did not pay. When the children tell him that his passenger was Galaktion, he apologizes and leaves. When he wakes up, the poet seems to be upset about something, he says in his heart what they want from me, he did not write “Barashkajan”, I wrote “Mary” and soon leaves. While going down the stairs, he mumbles the words from Grishashvili’s poem “The fate of geniuses in the Tbilisi bazaar”.

Source: A. Ratiani, Recollections about Galaktion, Magazine Mnatobi, 1996, № 9-10, p. 123-124.

Note: “Don’t get cold, Barashkajan” is a humorous poem by Ioseb Grishashvili.

June

1935

June 4

He is the only one selected from Georgia and travels to Paris for the Anti-Fascist Congress of Writers and Artists to raise his voice against the war. This is his first trip abroad.

Source: Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 66-67; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 334.

1935

June 6

In the notebook, he makes a note about the young poet and prose writer Vahram Gabuzian, whom he describes as a mild-mannered, sober, prudent person who knows everything about the Congress.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-95, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 92; For identification of persons: L. Beburishvili, “Researches”, 2025, p. 300.

1935

June 6

After her mother’s funeral, Olya Okujava, who has arrived in Borjomi, remembers Galaktion, whose mother has also passed away, and who experienced great pain from her loss. She thinks that fate has smiled upon him, giving him the opportunity to go to Paris, and now he is completely alone in Tbilisi amidst all this preparation.

Source: O. Okujava’s diary, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 485-490.

1935

June 6

Olya Okujava, while in Borjomi, addresses Galaktion in her diary. She writes that they have had difficult moments, but in memory of their recently deceased mothers, they must always move forward.

Source: O. Okujava’s diary, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 496.

1935

Until June 7

He writes a new revision of the poem “The Death of the Unemployed”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, 70-a, p. 1793; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 51;

1935

June 7

He travels by train to Moscow. At midnight, the train stops in the forest. He listens to and delights in the song of the nightingales.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-95, 3-4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 92.

1935

After June 13

In the notebook, he writes about the explosion of a military factory in the German village of Reinsdorf, which caused a lot of casualties. He notes that the Nazis are raising the German youth with military exaltation, and the beginning of a new war will be a real triumph of death. He describes how honourably Hitler's government buried the dead, with the participation of high officials and clergy.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 147-148.

Dating: A munitions factory in the German village of Reinsdorf exploded on June 13, 1935. The entry must also be made after this date.

1935

June 16

From the settlement of Negoreloe in Belarus, he sends a telegram to Olya Okujava. He writes that he will arrive in Paris via Berlin by June 18.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. XII, Tbilisi, 1975, p. 536.

1935

June 17 or earlier

Upon arriving in Paris, the organizers of the congress hand him the program of events.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 522; For dating: L. Beburishvili, "Researches", 2025, p. 140.

1935

June 17

He visits Notre Dame. Near the cathedral, he watches the Catholic mystery performed based on the works of the medieval French theologian Arnoul Greban.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 161.

Dating: The date of his stay at Notre Dame is indicated by the autograph of the poem "Mystery in the rain".

1935

After June 17

In the notebook, he makes a note "A bit about medieval humanism, mystery in the rain". It describes a Catholic mystery held near Notre-Dame that was disrupted by torrential rain.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 161.

Dating: The note mentions that the performance took place on June 17.

1935

After June 17

In the notebook he makes an entry “Modern Humanism (Mines)”, which describes the brutal confrontation between the prisoners and the police in a Kansas prison.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-98, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 161.

Dating: The entry immediately follows the entry “A bit about Medieval Humanism, Mystery in the rain”, dated after June 17, 1935.

1935

After June 18

He writes Ilya Ehrenburg’s statement in his notebook about the French writer René Crevel that he first tried to shoot himself and still survived, gassed himself the next day, because he was not allowed to give a speech at the anti-fascist congress. Nevertheless, Congress participants honoured Crevel’s memory by standing up and reading his letter about the May Day celebration.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-96, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 94.

Dating: René Crevel committed suicide on June 18, 1935. Therefore, Galaktion should have made the entry after this day.

1935

June 19

He is in France at the anti-fascist congress and writes a poem titled “Prologue” (“A short, distant sound...”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №544; №3987; №7637; №8422; №4328; №66-a, p. 1623-1624; №4164-4165; №1396-1399; №5237-5240; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. I, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 356; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 638.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “The Distant Sound of the Locomotive”, “Europe”, “Europe”, “Prologue”, and untitled poems beginning with “A short, distant sound of the locomotive...” and “The farthest sound of the locomotive...”.

1935

June 19

He is in the hotel in Paris. He wakes up early in the morning. He is irritated because Vahram Gabuziani has not come out of the bathroom for a whole two hours, while he himself only needs one hour.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-509, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 64.

1935

June 19

He is in Paris. He buys books by Charles Baudelaire, Arthur Rimbaud, and Théophile Gautier. On the cover of Gautier's book, he writes that he asked the bookseller to wrap the Book in paper, but the bookseller removed the cover from another Book and put it on Gautier's.

Source: V. Javakhadze, "Unknown. Apology of Galaktion Tabidze", Tbilisi, 2020, p. 169.

1935

Until June 21

In his diary, he writes about the unchanging parts of speech. He notes that the conjunction "და" (and) is frequent and necessary in Georgian, but it is rarely encountered as a rhyme in poetry. He suggests that it will become a rhyme of the future, as it is a highly lively part of spoken language: "The leaf on the lake is good, and / The velvet-coloured cover of the shores". The unchanging part "და" (and), which was previously only found in the line, now transitions into a rhyme, occupying an extremely important place in the poem's technique. For the first time, he gave this unchanging part the form of alliteration for technical purposes in his poem "New Year's Eve", published in the 1912 issue of the newspaper Temi. He writes that imitators have reduced his initiative, which was born out of goodwill, to absurdity and criticizes bad imitation. He believes that the conjunction "ბ" (ბ), also provides a great opportunity for rhyme, citing an example from Ilia Chavchavadze's "Kako Kachgha": "Everyone is silent, what burns by day / The earth and the sky have calmed down".

Source: MGL, d-67, 1-2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 258-260;

1935

Until June 21

In his diary, he writes about the practical importance of advertising, noting that in America, it plays a huge role and millions are spent on it. In the Soviet Union, it is called agitation-propaganda through the press, and its necessity is acknowledged. However, poets do not have the opportunity to use advertising according to their own desires. He points out that the techniques of advertising and new achievements, still unknown to the broad masses, need to be studied, as well-used advertising leads a poet to full success. He believes that bas-reliefs and sculptures also hold advertising value, citing the sculptor Giorgi Sesiashvili as an example.

Source: MGL, d-67, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 260.

1935

Until June 21

In his diary, he describes the annotations, cover, and dimensions of the Book "The Teachings of the Spiritual Virtue and Blessedness of Our Father John the Confessor, Leader of the Stodiel Monks, to His Disciples", which belonged to his father, Vasil Tabidze. He notes the number of pages and words, mentioning that he is unsure whether the text is original or translated. The text is copied by the best calligrapher in small letters, so much so that it resembles printed text. It does not contain decorative lettering, illustrations, or numbering.

Source: MGL, d-67, 6, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 261-262.

1935

Until June 21

In his diary, he writes that 1908 is a particularly significant year in the history of Georgian poetry. That year, Georgia celebrated the 50th anniversary of Akaki Tsereteli's literary career, and the young poet Galaktion Tabidze emerged on the literary scene, attracting attention with his extraordinary temperament and new technique in poetry.

Source: MGL, d-67, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 262.

1935

After June 21

He outlines a plan for the Russian editions of his poems: reviewing the 1933 edition for the Book to be published by the Transcaucasian State Publishing House in 1935, compiling a complete list of poems, organizing the translated poems, selecting poems to be translated for Moscow and local translators, choosing titles; for the Transcaucasian State Publishing House, preparing three to four thousand lines, and the same amount for the Book to be published in 1937 by the Leningrad State Publishing House and in Moscow; finalizing the agreement with the Georgian State Publishing House, selecting poems about Stalin, and preparing for the grand evening.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-67, 18-19; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 267-268.

1935

After June 21

For the Russian editions of his poems, he selects translators and counts the number of lines each translator is to handle: Panteleimon Petrenko – 200, Valerian Gaprindashvili from Epoch – 500, Rurik Ivnev – 500, Vladimir Elsner – 500, Georgy Kreytan – 200, Konstantine Bogdanovsky – 200, Sandro Qantcheli – 100. He has already handed over 1,000 lines to the Moscow translators. He needs to coordinate with Gobron Agareli regarding the Georgian State Publishing House. Paper and a portrait are also needed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-67, 19; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 267-268.

Note: In the source, Panteleimon Petrenko, Valerian Gaprindashvili, Rurik Ivnev, Vladimir Elsner, Georgy Kreytan, Konstantine Bogdanovsky, and Sandro Kantcheli are mentioned by their initials and last names, while Gobron Tsitskishvili is referred to by the pseudonym "Agareli".

1935

June 23

He speaks at the Anti-Fascist Congress of Writers and Artists in Paris.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 522. G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. XII, Tbilisi, 1975, p. 182-186.

1935

June 24

He attends a session of the congress, where Henri Barbusse delivers a lengthy speech, along with several representatives of the Soviet delegation.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 536-537;

1935

June 24 or later

In the notebook, he writes down the names of the speakers at the anti-fascist congress of writers in Paris.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 7-9, 13-15. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 96-97.

Dating: The entry concludes with the list of speakers on June 24.

1935

June 25

Olya Okujava writes in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook that all the newspapers have printed a notice about the poet's speech at the Anti-Fascist Congress of Writers and Artists held in Paris. She expresses regret that she is not by his side during such an eventful time, as she would have been able to keep a diary in Europe, collecting material about what she saw and heard at the congress, and lighten her husband's workload, as he wouldn't even have time to make notes himself.

Source: MGL, d-73, 77-78; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 335.

1935

June 21-26

In Paris, He writes a poem "Two Worlds".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №924; №66-a, p. 1628; №2195; №4328; №5660; №7635; №1396-1399; №5237;

G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 225.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "Who dares to cross our border?"; "What is today's day?"; "Europe"; "Prologue"; and untitled ("This was the space...").

Dating: It is dated based on G. Tabidze's presence at the Anti-Fascist Congress in Paris.

1935

June 21-26

On the instructions of the Bureau of the Social-Democratic Party, Galaktion Tabidze, who was visiting Paris, meets with Davit Sharashidze, who conveys an offer from Noe Ramishvili regarding emigration. Galaktion refuses, citing that he will be able to do more for his country in Georgia.

Source: E. Nizharadze, "Grigol Robakidze", 2014, p. 42-43.

Dating: It is dated based on the time of Galaktion Tabidze's stay in Paris.

1935

June 21-26

At the Anti-Fascist Congress in Paris, Galaktion Tabidze meets Alexei Tolstoy and reminds him of his article published in 1915 about Akaki Tsereteli, which displeases the Russian poet. Later, the unpleasant mood passes, and they become friends.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 7; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 283.

Note: The source does not specify what Alexei Tolstoy wrote about Akaki Tsereteli that made the reminder unpleasant for him.

Dating: It is dated based on the time of Galaktion Tabidze's stay at the Paris Congress.

1935

June 21-26

At the Anti-Fascist Congress of Writers and Artists held in Paris, Ilya Ehrenburg presents his Book "Виза Времени" ("Visa of Time") to the poet Galaktion Tabidze with the inscription: "To poet Galaktion Tabidze, with all my heart, in memory of our meeting in Paris. Ilya Ehrenburg. 1935".

Source: MGL, t-471, Илья Эренбург, "Виза Времени", Берлин: Петрополис, 1930.

1935

17-26 June

He visits the "Petit Palais" Museum of Art in Paris and views an exhibition of Italian artists. He notices that the museum is selling photos and books of Benito Mussolini.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 529.

Dating: It is dated based on Galaktion's stay in Paris.

1935

June 17-26

Alexey Tolstoy asks if he knows the French language, to which Galaktion answers: - It is possible that the Frenchman himself does not know the French language well. Tolstoy answers: - Well, but the French don't like it when you speak bad French.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 95.

Dating: We date according to Galaktion's being in Paris.

1935

June 17-26

In the hotel in Paris, Ilya Zdanevich visits twice but cannot find Galaktion and leaves a short note. He writes that he was unable to see him at the Congress or in his room and informs him that he will stop by again the next day before 10 o'clock.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-463-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 269.

Dating: We date according to Galaktion's being in Paris.

1935

June 17-26

Ilya Zdanevich leaves a note and a ticket at the hotel in Paris, asking Galaktion to make sure to come to the Trocadéro Palace at 9:30 in the evening.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-463-b; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 269.

Dating: We date according to Galaktion's being in Paris.

1935

June 17-26

Ilya Zdanevich leaves a note, mentioning that he tried to visit several times but was unable to meet with Galaktion. He wishes him a happy journey and sends his regards to their friends.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-463-g; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 270.

Dating: We date according to Galaktion's being in Paris.

1935

June 17-26

While at an anti-fascist convention in Paris, tipsy Galaktion is forced into a barber shop by a poet with long hair and gets his hair chopped off, much to his chagrin.

Source: G. Chikobava, Next to Galaktion, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 6.

Dating: We date according to Galaktion's being in Paris.

1935

June 17-26

He writes a poem "Mystery in the Rain".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №66-a, p. 1504; №4338; G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 12; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 72.

Dating: We date according to Galaktion's being in Paris.

1935

June 17-26

He writes a poem "To Ilya Ehrenburg".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-67, 9-11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 262-264.

Note: The poem was published after 1966 under the title "Sea-Sea, Mountain and Mountain".

Dating: We date according to Galaktion's being in Paris.

1935

June 17-26

He writes a poem "To Malraux".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-67, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 264.

Note: The poem was later published under the title "Lyre, a Lot of Good Time".

Dating: We date according to Galaktion's being in Paris.

1935

June 21-26

While attending the World Anti-Fascist Congress in Paris, he buys an ornamental cast-iron oval souvenir to hang on the wall, featuring an image of the Paris Notre-Dame Cathedral in the centre.

Source: L. Kheladze, Everyone has something as a souvenir, newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, August 10, 1983, N 33, p. 3.

Dating: We date according to Galaktion's being in Paris.

1935

After June 26

He rests in Tskaltubo.

Source: M. Alavidze, Galaktion's Life and Poetry, magazine Gantiadi, 1992, № 11-12, p. 123.

Dating: According to the author of the recollection, Galaktion went to Tskaltubo shortly after his return from Paris. The Paris Congress ended on June 26.

1935

After June 26

He is going to the funeral of an acquaintance in Kutaisi.

Source: M. Alavidze, Galaktion's Life and Poetry, magazine Gantiadi, 1992, № 11-12, p. 123.

Dating: According to the author of the recollection, the fact happened shortly after Galaktion's return from Paris. The Paris Congress ended on June 26.

1935

After June 26

In Kutaisi, he has a photo taken with Yuza Zardalishvili, Giorgi Jibladze, Parmen Shelegia, Mamia Asatiani, Bondo Keshelava, Mikheil Davitashvili, Irodion Khantadze, Nika Agiashvili.

Source: M. Alavidze, Galaktion's Life and Poetry, magazine Gantiadi, 1992, № 11-12, p. 123.

Dating: According to the author of the recollection, the fact happened shortly after Galaktion's return from Paris. The Paris Congress ended on June 26.

After June 26

He makes a note titled "Congress Delegates", in which he describes how the Writers' Anti-Fascist Congress took place.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 522-526;

1935

After June 26

He makes a note titled "Academy", in which he quotes the opinion of a Times staff member, who states that the French Academy is a tool of state power and an executor of its will. He points out that historically, the Academy has been hostile to innovations and that its members were unable to become great writers like Molière, Diderot, Balzac, Flaubert, and others.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 526-527; For dating: L. Beburishvili, “Researches”, 2025,

1935

After June 26

He makes a note titled “Against Neutrality”, in which he opposes the opinion that a writer should not interfere in politics. He points out that some of the congress delegates’ speeches reminded him of the words of Ivane Gomarteli, a member of the State Assembly in 1906, who stated that the army should not interfere in politics.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 528-530;

1935

After June 26

He makes a note titled “André Malraux”, in which he quotes Henri Barbusse’s opinion that André Malraux’s “The Age of Disgust” is one of the best novels of modern times. According to Galaktion, Malraux is already a globally recognized writer.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 533;

1935

After June 26

He makes a note about Heinrich Mann, a participant of the Anti-Fascist Congress, mentioning that in his speech, there was no longer the previous ambiguity. The German writer stated that the fascists could not diminish Marxism, which would ultimately bring an end to their rule.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 533-534;

1935

After June 26

He makes a note about German Anti-Fascist literature, mentioning that they sent a representative to the congress, and his speech made a tremendous impression on the attendees.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 534-535;

1935

After June 26

He makes a note about the English writer Aldous Huxley, mentioning that Huxley brilliantly reflects the condition of the English intelligentsia and gradually becomes more left-wing.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 535-536;

After June 26

He makes a note about the speech of the French writer and philosopher, and participant of the Anti-Fascist Congress, Julien Benda. He points out that Benda raised the idea that communist ethics replace the primacy of the soul with the primacy of economics.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 536;

1935

After June 26

He makes a note “The Writer and Society”, in which he quotes Heinrich Mann’s opinion that the Soviet Union has created excellent conditions for a writer’s creative work.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 538;

1935

After June 26

He makes a note “Surrealism”, in which he characterizes this aesthetic movement as a pathological doctrine indifferent to life and in love with death.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 538-539;

1935

After June 26

He makes a note “Freedom of the Individual”, in which he presents the main ideas from the speech of Alexei Tolstoy, a participant in the Anti-Fascist Congress, regarding the fate of the writer in bourgeois society.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 539-540;

1935

After June 26

He makes a note about the speech of Mikhail Koltsov, a Russian writer and participant of the Anti-Fascist Congress. He points out that Koltsov mentioned the congress held in Paris in 1872, chaired by Victor Hugo, where the Russian writer Ivan Turgenev also gave a speech. According to Galaktion, Koltsov focused on the changing social role of the writer in the Soviet reality.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 540-542;

1935

After June 26

He makes a note “Common Opinion”, in which he states that the participants of the Paris Anti-Fascist Congress came to the conclusion that in Europe, the masses are alienated from high culture, and the true creator is isolated from the masses.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 541-542;

1935

After June 26

He makes a note “The Profitability of Poetry”, in which he points out that writers in Europe can no longer support themselves solely through their work. The only exception is Paul Valéry. The other authors are forced to take on other professions to make a living.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 543;

1935

After June 26

He makes a note “Detective Novels”, in which he mentions that there is a club of detective novel writers in London, who are working to improve the quality of works in this genre.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 543;

1935

After June 26

He makes a note about the River Seine, mentioning that many despairing individuals have drowned in it. Overcoming human despair is impossible without realizing that spiritual life is inseparable from the material.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 543-544;

1935

After June 26

He makes a note “The Story of the Poster”, in which he mentions that during his stay in Paris, a terrible storm occurred, causing considerable damage. According to Galaktion, it was on that day that he noticed two White Guards tearing down a poster on a Paris street, which people were looking at with great interest. It turned out to be a poster for the Anti-Fascist Congress, and the poet took it with him to his homeland. Galaktion cites materials from the Russian émigré press to illustrate how hostile the Russian emigration is toward the Soviet state.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 544-547;

1935

After June 26

He makes a note “Foreign Press”, mentioning that Europe’s authoritative press ignored the Paris Anti-Fascist Congress. However, the event was not left unreported, as there were magazines and newspapers that took an interest in it.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 547;

1935

After June 26

He makes a note about the resolution adopted by the International Congress for the Protection of Culture, summarizing the common goals and tasks of the participants.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 548;

1935

After June 26

He makes a note “Ilya Ehrenburg”, in which he describes how the Russian writer shared with the public the story of his creative journey, filled with obstacles and challenges.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 549;

1935

After June 26

He makes a note "Stalin", in which he quotes a recollection by Romain Rolland about how Joseph Stalin explained to the renowned writer Herbert Wells, who was visiting Russia, the essence of the relationship between the individual and society.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 549-550;

1935

After June 26

He makes a note "Vian Couturier", in which he outlines the main points of the speech by Paul Vian Couturier, a communist French writer and participant in the Paris Writers' and Artists' Anti-Fascist Congress.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 550;

1935

After June 26

He makes a note about the speeches of writers William Ellis and Michael Gold, participants in the Paris Writers' and Artists' Anti-Fascist Congress. They noted that serious literary works in the West are being persecuted by "bourgeois mediocrity," while fascism is attempting to constrain literature within nationalist frameworks.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 550-551;

1935

After June 26

He makes a note about the French writer André Malraux, pointing out that he has an excellent understanding of the aspirations of the masses and feels the grandeur of brotherhood among people. To confirm this, Galaktion considers the Book that Malraux gifted him with a heartfelt inscription. According to the poet, Malraux told him that, of all the participants in the congress, Galaktion Tabidze made the greatest impression on him.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 551;

1935

After June 26

He makes brief notes about the speeches of writers Paul Éluard, André Chanson, Ernst Bloch, and others at the Paris Writers' and Artists' Anti-Fascist Congress.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 552-553;

1935

After June 26

He writes down a phrase expressed by Thomas Mann at the Paris Writers' and Artists' Congress, stating that if he were offered a choice between fascism and communism, he would choose communism.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 552.

1935

Until June 27

He makes a note about the Paris Writers' and Artists' Anti-Fascist Congress, mentioning that during his stay in Europe, he witnessed the severe exploitation of people, anarchy, and both material and spiritual crises. He points out that Europe faces a great danger in the form of fascism, with the threat of a world war and the destruction of the cultural heritage built by humanity over centuries.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 518-521;

1935

June

Russian writer Vsevold Ivanov promises Galaktion his Book "Alexander Pushkin and his time".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 99.

Dating: Vsevold Ivanov was a member of the Soviet delegation sent to the anti-fascist congress of writers in Paris. The congress took place on June 21-25, 1935. The conversation between Galaktion and Ivanov should have taken place in June.

1935

June

He visits the Louvre Museum. He looks at the exhibits, the statue of Venus de Milo, the works of Botticelli and Veronese.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 99.

Dating: Galaktion was in Paris in June 1935.

1935

June

"While in Paris, he hears the French orchestra performing 'Suliko,' astonished and filled with joy by this".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-97, 24; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 132.

Dating: Galaktion was in Paris in June 1935.

1935

June

He writes a poem "Willow".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №70-a, p. 1789; №4408; №5269; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 74.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the titles: "Willow, Planted by the Grave of Alfred de Musset at Père Lachaise"; and "Willow, Planted by the Grave of Alfred de Musset".

1935

June

He writes a poem titled “On That Day”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4348; №37 d., p. 14-15; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 75.

Note: The poem appears in sources both untitled and titled “That Day in Paris”.

1935

June

He visits the French Academy and writes his impressions in a notebook. He notes that members of the French Academy are referred to as “immortals,” but such great writers as Molière, Balzac, Flaubert, and others were not among them. In contrast, a member of the Academy was the Duke of Richelieu, a descendant of the great cardinal, who couldn’t even write a letter properly.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-98, 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 158.

Dating: Galaktion was in Paris in June 1935.

After June

1935

After June

He writes a text of address in Russian titled “To the Poets of France – Participants of the Congress for the Protection of Culture”, in which he recalls the Anti-Fascist Congress held in Paris and urges the French writers who participated in it not to forget the promise they made to each other – to fight against war and for the establishment of peace.

Source: “Поэтам Франции _ участникам конгресса в защиту культуры”, G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. XII, Tbilisi, 1975, p. 185-186.

1935

June or later

He writes a poem “Guadalquivir”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3450; №4467; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 97.

Note: The poem is also found untitled in the sources.

Dating: It is dated based on the time of Galaktion’s stay at the Paris Congress.

1935

June or later

He writes an untitled poem “From Foreign Roads to the Path...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №66-a, p. 1536; №3273; №4360; №327 d., p. 29; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 99.

Note: The poem is also found in the sources under the titles: “From Warsaw to Berlin”; “Post”; “It Moves on Your Spread”.

Dating: It is dated based on the time of Galaktion’s stay at the Paris Congress.

1935

June or later

In his notebook, he makes a note “The Condition of Georgian Emigrants”. It includes an article published in the Russian émigré newspaper Vozrozhdeniye, in which Georgian émigré doctor A. Khuntsaria states that he is forced to leave Paris and return to his homeland because the French authorities have banned him from practicing medicine. Galaktion comments on this fact, calling it a clear example of the conditions faced by emigrants. He also notes that the Georgian émigrants plan to mark the fifth anniversary of the death of “national hero” Kakutsa Cholokashvili and hold a memorial service in his honour.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-98, 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 157.

Dating: The poem clearly reflects the influence of Parisian impressions, and Galaktion was in Paris in June 1935.

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “On Our Stay, to the French Academy...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 159.

Dating: The poem refers to Galaktion’s past stay in France. He was in Paris in June 1935.

Note: After editing, the poet included the poem in “A Conversation About Lyric Poetry”.

1935

After June

He writes a poem “Victor Hugo”.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 306;

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “The Poppy Has Blossomed...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-94, 13; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 41;

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “On the Day When There Was a Hut and the Forest...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-94, 14; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 41-42; For dating: L. Beburishvili, “Researches”, 2025, 1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “You Were Resting, Witness to Many...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-94, 18; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 44; 1935

After June

He writes a poem “Poor Pierre”.

Source: MGL, d-94, 83. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 86.

Dating: The poem clearly reflects the influence of Parisian impressions. Galaktion was in Paris in June 1935 for the Writers’ Anti-Fascist Congress.

1935

After June

He returns from the Paris Congress dressed in fine clothing. He brings back some items, including the best camera, which he gives as a gift to his cousin, Ioseb Tabidze.

Source: Simon Tabidze, “Recollection of Galaktion Tabidze”, Collection “Galaktionology”, IX, Tbilisi, 2022, p. 345.

Dating: He was at the Paris Congress until June 25, and this event occurred after his return from there.

1935

After June

Upon his return from Paris, Galaktion is confronted by robbers at night who try to steal his clothes. However, he resists and shouts for help. Hearing his cries, a policeman begins to whistle, and the robbers flee.

Source: Simon Tabidze, “Recollection of Galaktion Tabidze”, Collection “Galaktionology”, IX, Tbilisi, 2022, p. 345.

Dating: He was at the Paris Congress until June 25, and this event occurred after his return from there.

1935

After June

As members of the Soviet delegation, Aleksandr Shcherbakov and Boris Pasternak, were heading home from the Writers’ Anti-Fascist Congress in Paris, the famous Ukrainian poet Pavlo Tychyna recited Galaktion’s poems, which he had translated. Galaktion noticed Pasternak’s astonishment during the recitation.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-97, 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 127;

1935

After June

He writes a poem “An inscription on the book”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-98, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 144.

Note: In the same autograph, the poem was previously called “Old Orthography” and “Grammar”.

Dating: In the poem, the echo of Parisian impressions is visible, and Galaktion was in Paris in June 1935.

1935

After June

In the notebook, he asks a rhetorical question whether God should count this terrible year in the years of his life.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 2 G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 94;

1935

After June

He writes a poem "Loneliness of a Parisian poet", then corrects the text and writes "Garcia Lorca" as the title.

Source: MGL, d-98, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 148-151.

Dating: The poem echoes Parisian impressions. Galaktion was in Paris in June 1935.

Note: After editing, Galaktion included the text in the poem "A Talk About Lyric".

1935

After June

He continues to work on the text "Garcia Lorca", thinks about turning it into a poem and writes the part of the text, made into a fair copy as the title: "Introduction" ("Your name, drinker of blood, is capital...").

Source: MGL, d-98, 21-23; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 167-170;

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem "The tram still at the daybreak...".

Source: MGL, d-98, 22,24; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 170-172;

1935

After June

He writes a poem "Extra number".

Source: MGL, d-98, 25-26; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 172-173;

1935

After June

He writes a poem "Getting out of the crisis".

Source: MGL, d-98, 28; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 181-182;

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem "Indescribable depravity and luxury...".

Source: MGL, d-98, 30; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 183-184;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem "Its Nature".

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “Now, dear friends, I want to tell you...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 32; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 184;

Note: The work is a variant of the poem “Now, dear recollection...”.

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “We’ll come drunk together again...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 33; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 184;

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “The morning is shining...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 35; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 187-188;

Note: The work is a variant of the poem “Once in the morning”.

1935

After June

He writes a poem “Homeland” (“Three huge oceans...”).

Source: MGL, d-98, 35-36; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 188-190;

Note The piece is a black variant of the beginning of the poem “My native land”.

1935

After June

He writes a poem “Versailles in gold”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 37; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 191-192;

Note: The work is an analogue of the poem “Gold”.

1935

After June

He writes a completely new version of the untitled verse “The Fierce Dragon, Tabes dorsalis...”, titled “Tabes Dorsalis”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 38; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 192;

Note: Tabes dorsalis is the Latin term for a complicated form of neurosyphilis, characterized by degeneration of the neuronal system in the spine, accompanied by pain.

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “The sun brandishes its arrows...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 39; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 193;

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem "Paris is like..."

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4482; 66-a, p. 1532; №1020; №4782; №238-d., p. 57; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 219;

Note: The work is a variant of the poem "Big City".

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem "Notre Dame, my heart could not accommodate in the chest..."

Source: MGL, d-98, 41; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 194;

Note: The piece is a variant of the poem "Now, dear, recollection..."

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem "By the Black Sea..."

Source: Autographs: MGL, Nd-98, 41; №920-921; №7624-7625; №1299, №2023; №28897-50, p. 70-73; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 194;

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "Sails Are Seen in the Distance..." and "On the Shores of the Black Sea", as well as untitled (beginning with: "The clouds of Kartli's fantastic..." and "The hem of this beautiful garden...").

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem "Today there is a whirlwind and wind in the distant mountains..."

Source: MGL, d-98, 42; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 195;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem "Lake in the Alpine zone".

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem "I was walking along the Champs Élysées...", then corrects the manuscript and titles the poem: "Alpine Zone".

Source: MGL, d-98, 43; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 195-196;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem "Lake in the Alpine zone".

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem "From Paris to Berlin..."

Source: MGL, d-98, 44; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 196;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem "It comes and goes on your spread".

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “Brotherly greetings to France...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 45; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 197;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem “Down with sponger”.

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “There is a song in my heart...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 45; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 197;

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “I was avoiding wine...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 46; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 197;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem “Sleepless nights”.

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “Down with sponger...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №66-a, p. 1537-38; №4442; №5774; works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 237;

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Down with the Invader!” and “Lines”.

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “They yell in the market from dawn...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 47; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198;

1935

After June

He writes an untitled one-stanza poem “I have seen many monuments in the world...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 48; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 199;

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “How much more, how much more...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 48; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 199;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem “How much more will the scope of time say”.

1935

After June

He writes an untitled satirical poem “To our poets in the spring...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 49; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 199;

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem "Victory, Paris...".

Source: MGL, d-98, 50; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 199-200;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem "This feeling of malice...".

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem "The colour of the setting sun is still...".

Source: MGL, d-98, 51; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 200-201;

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem "The sorrow in the heart...".

Source: MGL, d-98, 51; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 201;

1935

After June

He begins to write a poem under the title "Citroen" ("When I was young, I walked in a rich garden..."), then he edits the text and titles it: "Owner of the millions".

Source: Autographs: MGL, Nd-98, 52. №745; №66-a, p. 1544; №76-ღ, p. 19; №144-ღ, p. 16; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 28;

Note: The poem is also found under the title "The Death of Citroën" and untitled (beginning with: "In the rich garden of dreams, I awaited..."; "In my childhood, I awaited in the rich garden...").

1935

After June

He begins to write an untitled poem "To create order out of chaos..." and soon stops.

Source: MGL, d-98, 52. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 202;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem "By plane...".

1935

After June

He writes a poem "Evening in Paris...", and later - a new version of it, entitled "Disconnect between culture and masses".

Source: MGL, d-98, 53, 58; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 202;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem "From air or iron...".

1935

After June

He writes a poem “In the abyss of Paris”, then deletes the first word and the title remains “In the abyss”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 54-55; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203-205;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem “Forty years ago...”

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “Meeting on the ship...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 57; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 212-215;

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “It was like the backstage of the Congress...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 59-61; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 216-220;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem “The Writer in make-up”.

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “And our Communist Party intends...”, and later - a new version of it under the title “Meeting in Berlin”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №66-a, p. 1554; №4358; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 170;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem “The youth” and “New Man”.

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “It’s like Eden as the moon...”. After correcting, he titles the poem first as “Teziko” and then as “Little Dariko”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 65; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 225-226;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem “Labour and rest”.

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “Laziness... Laziness...”.

Source: MGL, №7803; 624-d., p. 3038; №5902-5903; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 221;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem “I will go to people with joy” and untitled (“As soon as it rose from the mountain...”).

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “Who is used to jumping like a tiger...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 66; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 226;

Note: The poet then titled the poem as “Day of receiving the Order of Lenin. 1936”.

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “Adorned with flowers...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №746; №1559; №2028; №5495; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 122;

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Brook, Brook” and untitled (“Brook, Brook...”).

1935

After June

He writes in Russian that some poets do not produce their voices freely, as if they sing with their mouths closed, and sometimes they do not even shy away from sharp, high, piercing sounds. He notes that all the notes of a chord should sound at once, and that poetry should sound quieter, slower, and grander.

Source: MGL, d-98, 67; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 227-228.

1935

After June

In the notebook, he writes about his poem “Mary” (“You were getting married...”). At first, he recalls one curiosity: once, young people read this poem to Zakaria Chichinadze, to which the famous scribe replied that this poem is also very common in Samtskhe-Javakheti. When Chichinadze recited one part of this poem: “If I die, what would I do for the alien Mary?” it became clear that he was talking about a completely different poem. In the note, Galaktion notes that he did not invent the name “Mary”, but he introduced it as the object of the poem in Georgian reality for the first time. This name can be found in the lyrics of Byron, Shelley, Pushkin, Lermontov, as well as in English and French novels, although no two poets’ Maries are alike. Galaktion believes that Block’s Mary is a symbolic face, and his Mary is a romantic one. That’s why they go wrong when they try to see Block’s influence on Galaktion. In the same recording, the poet recalls that once “Mary” was staged in the opera theatre as a living image, and the actress Nino Davitashvili played Mary. She stood on a pedestal, with Galaktion below, reciting a poem amid lit sparklers. According to the poet, “Mary” was printed for the first time without asking him in the magazine Teatri da Tskhovreba and very soon it became popular. When the author published it in Artistuli Kvavilebi with a slight change, the public, who knew the poem by heart, did not like it and said that the old one was better.

Source: MGL, d-98, 68; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 228-229;

1935

After June

He writes a poem “Shota Rustaveli”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 72; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 231;

1935

After June

He translates Phaedrus's fable "The Wolf and the Lamb" and adds his own two stanzas at the end, connecting it with modernity.

Source: MGL, d-98, 73; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 231-231;

1935

After June

He writes short spell texts in his diary.

Source: MGL, d-98, 74; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 232.

1935

After June

In his diary, he writes children's poems under the general title "From the leaves of the walnut tree".

Source: MGL, d-98, 75-76; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 233-236.

1935

After June

He writes a poem under the title "On the Eiffel Tower".

Source: MGL, d-98, 77; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 236;

1935

After June

In Russian, he writes two phrases about the port of May Day.

Source: MGL, d-98, 78; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 237.

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem "You notice many equal alphabets...".

Source: MGL, d-98, 79; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 237.

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem "It's six o'clock, it's azure sky...".

Source: MGL, d-98, 79; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 237.

1935

After June

Inspired by Friedrich Schiller's "Wilhelm Tell" He writes a poem "Wilhelm Tell, Act Four" ("What terrible waves..."), and then crosses out the title.

Source: MGL, d-98, 80; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 237-238;

Note: The poem can also be found under the title “Bad weather”.

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “Life is a phonofilm...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 82; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 238;

1935

After June

He writes in his notebook his own poem “Akaki’s ghost” and corrects individual lines.

Source: MGL, d-98, 139; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 303-304;

1935

After June

He writes a one-stanza untitled poem “Inexhaustible, countless...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 149; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 313; 1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “While sucking lips...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, Nd-101, p. 6; №4444; №2048; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 70;

Note: The poem originally began with the words: “He grasped the living mouth...”. The poem is also found under the titles: “Fighting with Him”, “Fighting with Him, Only Fighting”, and “Against Fascism”.

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “The time that was is gone...”.

Source: MGL, d-101; 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 328;

Note: The work is a version of the poem “Memory of the Native Land”.

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “The new road clings to...”.

Source: MGL, d-101; 7-8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 329-330;

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “Days, Comrade Stalin...”.

Source: MGL, d-101; 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 327;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem “Stockholm has been left somewhere far away...”.

1935

After June

He writes in the notebook that Giorgi Kvelashvili, the locksmith of the Orjonikidze factory, makes the details of the tea machine in 7-8 minutes instead of 2-3 hours.

Source: MGL, d-101; 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 331;

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “Kvelashvili mastered...”.

Source: MGL, d-101; 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 331-332;

1935

After June

He writes in the notebook that Grigol Giorgadze, a worker of the mine named after Stalin, completed 296 percent of the monthly task in the coal mines of Tkibuli.

Source: MGL, d-101; 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 332;

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “Giorgadze Grigol, the labour...”.

Source: MGL, d-101; 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 332;

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “Day and night with dedication...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4389; №123-d., p. 1; №2119; №6418; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 259;

Note: The poem is also found under the titles “Every Day”, “Near the Cathedral of Cologne”, and untitled (beginning with: “The day-night proceeds with dedication...”; “Every day dates...”).

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “The old man has his hat pull down over the brow...”.

Source: MGL, d-101; 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 333-334;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem “He writes victory equally”.

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “The many-coloured road of Georgia...”.

Source: MGL, d-101; 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 334;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem “He writes victory equally”.

1935

After June

In the notebook, he writes an appeal to Joseph Stalin, in which he notes that Stalin’s words about the gentle treatment of cadres were deeply imprinted in his heart. It indicates that it was Stalin’s care that raised tens of thousands of advanced fighters for socialist construction, the Stakhanovite movement is growing and expanding. Every day is marked by Stakhanovite records and victories.

Source: MGL, d-101; 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 334-335;

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “The enemy thought our door...”.

Source: MGL, d-101; 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 335;

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “Great Stalin houses us...”.

Source: MGL, d-101; 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 335-336;

1935

After June

He writes in his notebook that Chiatura manganese ore worker Vasil Samkharadze fulfilled the monthly norm by 268 percent.

Source: MGL, d-101; 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 336;

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “He is familiar with Chiatura hills...”.

Source: MGL, d-101; 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 336;

1935

After June

He writes a notice in his notebook that Domenti Salukvadze, a worker of the Batumi oil refining plant, exceeds the norm of cleaning oil and provides 2,100 tons of gasoline per year.

Source: MGL, d-101; 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 337; 1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “Salukvadze, the desire for work...”.

Source: MGL, d-101; 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 337; 1935

After June

He writes in the notebook that the highest level of productivity of socialist labour was achieved by Stakhanovite workers of the Stalin steam repair factory: Getsadze, Rukhadze, Janverdashvili, Mamulashvili, as well as by the Stakhanovite workers of the Beria wagon repair factory: Ekaladze, Khaliapin and Jagaev.

Source: MGL, d-101; 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 337; 1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “They showed us the greatest...”.

Source: MGL, d-101; 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 337; 1935

After June

He writes in his notebook that the river Rioni, which swamped the city of Poti and the lands useful for valuable crops, will now flow with a new bed.

Source: MGL, d-101; 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 338; 1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem, “The Sun Raised Its Arrows...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №66-a,1531; №4378; 123-d, p. 15. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 137; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 787.

Note: The poem is also found untitled with a different opening line (“It Suits the Young...”).

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “The Ones We Sent to Europe...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №429; №2792; 625-d, 3207; t-396; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 138; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 787.

Note: The poem is also found untitled with different opening lines (“The One Who Travelled Abroad...”; “The Ones We Sent to Europe...”).

1935

After June

In the notebook, he makes an entry in Russian, “Tenth century literary language”, in which he formulates instructions on what to focus on when studying the ancient Georgian language. He plans to observe the style of the ancient Georgian language, word agreements, punctuation marks, apostrophes, conjunctions and the grammar of the tenth century Georgian language in relation to the grammar of modern Georgian.

Source: MGL, d-101; 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 340-341;

1935

After June

In the notebook, he writes down the archaic forms of individual Georgian words and indicates the Russian equivalents next to them.

Source: MGL, d-101; 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 341;

1935

After June

He writes down a list of Georgian artists and composers in his notebook.

Source: MGL, d-101; 23; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 342;

1935

After June

He writes in his notebook that he is going to buy a piano.

Source: MGL, d-101; 23; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 342;

1935

After June

He writes an untitled humorous poem "Glory of Georgia...".

Source: MGL, d-101; 22; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 342;

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem "Covered with a heavy cloud, you were attacked by an eternal swarm of midges...".

Source: MGL, d-101, p. 27; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 345;

1935

After June

He writes a poem "Evening in Paris...".

Source: MGL, d-101, p. 28-29; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 345-346;

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem "A stranger tells if Germany's...".

Source: MGL, d-101, p. 30; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 346;

Note: Later the poet included the mentioned text in the poem "I left the sick side".

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem "Then, Chimera, there is no other way...".

Source: MGL, d-101, p. 30; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 346;

Note: The text represents the last stanza of one of the variants of the poem - “Vesuvius”.

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “Rocks and clods lie around...”.

Source: MGL, d-101, p. 34; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 347-348;

Note: The text is a variant of the verse “Who Said?”

1935

After June

He writes an untitled poem “With yellowness and mould...”.

Source: MGL, d-101; 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 338-339;

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Thoughts on the Homeland”; later, Galaktion included one stanza from this poem (“The New Time with Malaria...”) in his poem “From the Moon’s Narrative”.

1935

After June

He rewrites the poem dedicated to Vasil Kikvidze, titled “The 16th Rifle Division” (“The Younger One Than Me...”), and dedicates it to the French poet André Malraux.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4361; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 127;

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the following titles: “The 16th Rifle Division Named After Kikiidze”; “The 16th Rifle Division (Named After Kikvidze)”; “The 16th Rifle Division”; “The Sixteenth Division”; “Foreign Poet”; “André Malraux”; “French Poet”; “Foreign Poet”.

1935

After June

He arrives in Borjomi, but there are no available rooms at the hotel, and he faces the danger of spending the night on the street. One of his companions asks the administrator to find a room for Galaktion Tabidze. Upon hearing the poet’s name, a young man named Giorgi Mania standing nearby pretends to change his mind about staying in Borjomi and offers his room to Galaktion. The poet initially refuses, but after the young man’s persistent request, he agrees, gets to know him, and asks if he is familiar with his poetry and which poems he likes. Mania spends the night in the city park and, in the morning, unexpectedly encounters Galaktion again, who immediately recognizes his benefactor, thanks him once more, and reproaches him for the deception. He shares stories from his youth and his participation in the Paris Congress. He then gives his address and requests that Galaktion visit him in Tbilisi.

Source: G. Mania, Pages of Recollections, newspaper Zarya Vostoka, February 6, 1968, N 30, p. 4.

Dating: The memoir mentions the Paris Congress, and accordingly, the events described must have taken place after returning from this congress.

1935

After June

He talks to Pati Didia, who is curious about who the prototype for Mary was. Galaktion initially refrains from discussing it, but then responds that the poem was not written under anyone's influence and that a poet cannot create such a work without personal feelings. When asked if it could be that the prototype for Mary was someone conditionally named Tamro, he says yes. When Pati Didia presses on and wants to know whether the poems about Mary are connected to Mary Shervashidze, Galaktion confirms that they are, and also related to the poem written in Paris. He adds that immediately after the poem "Mary" was published, he was bombarded with questions about who it referred to, to which he replied that Mary was a product of his imagination. With a smile, he adds that some familiar women still insist that the poem was dedicated to them, and he feels obliged to agree out of awkwardness.

Source: P. Didia, "The Inspiration for One of Galaktion's Poems", magazine Sakartvelos Kali, 1961, №4, p. 88.

Dating: The memoir mentions the Paris Congress, and therefore, this conversation could not have taken place before returning from it.

1935

After June

He receives a letter from Anatoly Kruinov, asking him to write his impressions of the Paris Congress for the Russian newspapers Sovetskoe Iskustvo and Literaturnaya Pravda. They are interested in his observations on the films, performances, and exhibitions he saw there. The letter mentions that he is expected the next morning at 10 o'clock.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-463-d; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 270.

July

1935

July 6

In the notebook, he makes a note that the Russian writer Anna Karavaeva tries to seduce him in various ways and leaves the impression of a very evil, provocateur woman. Galaktion plans to deal with her according to the Russian proverb: until you beat a Russian, he will not be your friend.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 95.

1935

Until July 8

He is in Berlin and writes a poem titled "Somewhere...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №178; №748; №5505; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 70.

Note: The poem appears in sources both untitled and under the titles: “Goethe’s Dream”; “Gretchen”; and “Somewhere...”.

Dating: We date it based on the approximate time of his stay in Berlin.

1935

July 8

While traveling from Paris to Georgia, he stops in the Belarusian settlement of Negoreloe, when the writer Vsevolod Ivanov was brought into his room by the representative of the State Political Department of the People’s Commissariat of Internal Affairs of the Soviet Union in Berlin, Major Boris Gordon. The latter tells about Grigol Robakidze’s wife - Elene Phialkina’s visit to him. Phialkina said that Grigol knew about Galaktion’s participation in the congress and hoped that he would see him while passing through Berlin. Gordon replied that Galaktion has nothing to do with Robakidze’s political position and that is probably why he did not meet him. Elene Phialkina also told Gordon that her husband really wanted to return to Georgia and insisted on giving him a Soviet passport. She also said that he had been carried away by mysticism and was going to be ordained as a monk on January 1, 1936. They were in a lot of trouble financially, Grigol received a meager income from books, and Elene had to sew underwear to at least have something to eat. Gordon also talks to Galaktion Tabidze about Grigol Lortkipanidze, whom he still knows from Siberia and says that he is a real Soviet person.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-96, 37-42. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 105-107.

1935

July 8 or later

He writes a poem “Negoreloe”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №193; №4428; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 77.

Note: The poem is also found in sources without a title.

Dating: We date it based on the time spent in Negoreloe.

1935

July 8-12

He is in Moscow and is satisfied with the welcoming him by the locals.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-96, 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 95.

1935

July 15

He makes a note in his notebook that, God have mercy on someone who will walk through the suburbs of Moscow in a well-dressed manner. People will immediately start shouting: “Poet, poet!” This is due to the influence of Russian bohemians, who seek refuge in the suburbs.

Source: MGL, d-97, 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 126.

1935

After July 15

He writes an untitled poem “The man who will lay down his weapon...”.

Source: MGL, d-97, 68; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 138;

1935

After July 15

He writes an untitled poem “I wish to make up an illness...”.

Source: MGL, d-97, 76; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 139;

1935

After July 15

He writes an untitled poem “I have already been here, I have already seen it...”.

Source: MGL, d-97, 77; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 140;

1935

After July 15

He writes an untitled poem “Twenty years ago in this garden...”

Source: MGL, d-97, 78; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 140;

1935

After July 15

In the notebook, he writes the words of Alexander Shcherbakov about the essence and significance of the Paris anti-fascist congress.

Source: MGL, d-97, 81; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 140-141;

1935

After July 15

He writes an untitled poem “You go but how...”

Source: MGL, d-97, 84; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 141; 1935

After July 15

He writes an untitled poem “I do not know myself...”.

Source: MGL, d-97, 87; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 142;

1935

After July 15

He makes notes on the Paris Anti-Fascist Congress of Writers.

Source: MGL, d-97, 13-27; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 128-130;

1935

After July 15

He writes an untitled one-stanza poem “I was some alien warrior”.

Source: d-97, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 131;

1935

After July 15

He writes an untitled one-stanza poem “How he won’t abandon”.

Source: d-97, 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 131;

1935

After July 15

He writes a one-stanza untitled poem “An owl calling up loudly at midnight”.

Source: MGL, d-97, 28; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 132;

1935

After July 15

He writes in the notebook a poem about Tbilisi by the Russian poet Vitaliy Lazarev.

Source: MGL, d-97, 32; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 133;

1935

Until July 18

In Moscow, he delivers a speech about the Culture Protection Congress held in Paris. At the beginning, he briefly reviews the history of Georgian literature and discusses contemporary literature. Additionally, he emphasizes how impressively the Soviet delegation was represented at the Anti-Fascist Congress. He also notes that during his time in France, he met several foreign writers. The poet shares his impressions from Paris with the audience and tells them that he is writing a Book about these experiences, which will be published soon.

Source: “Culture Protection Congress”, Newspaper Komunisti, 1935, №166, July 18, p. 3.

1935

July 21

He writes in the notebook that the congregation approved the activities of the Soviet delegation at the congress.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-97, 84; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 141.

1935

July 21

He is in Moscow and notes in his Book that Ilya Zdanevich has an income of five hundred francs, and it is not enough for him.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-97, 84; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 141-142.

1935

July 30

In the newspaper Komunisti he publishes a poem entitled “For Order-bearer homeland”.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, July 30, №177, p. 3.

August

1935

August 4

After traveling to Paris and Moscow, he returns to Tbilisi, neatly and elegantly dressed. He unpacks books from his suitcase, including those with inscriptions from Ilya Ehrenburg and André Malraux, a splendid watch bought for Olya Okujava, and their little typewriter. He shares many new stories.

Source: Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 87-88; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 336.

1935

After August 4

Back in Tbilisi, Galaktion fulfils Avetik Isahakyan’s request, goes to the Central Committee of the Party, delivers his appeal, and expresses his support. The Armenian poet himself does everything he can to return, and in the end, he truly does come back. At first, he has a good relationship with Galaktion, but later, he begins to distance himself and act with a sense of self-importance.

Source: Nodar Tabidze’s record, GTDA, №1438, p. 2.

Dating: We date it based on the time of his return from Paris.

1935

August 11

Olya Okujava leaves a note stating that she has gone to Telasi to deal with the issue of the meter and to buy light bulbs. She asks him to start preparing for the speech as soon as she gets home and promises that she will return soon.

Source: O. Okujava’s letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-378; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 211.

1935

August 16

In the notebook, he makes a note about someone Iashvili, who unceremoniously sat next to him and told him that his wife is a relative of the Okujavas and Olya Okujava was raised by him, and he is the financial inspector of the district and at the same time a relative of Paolo Iashvili. This so-called relative forgets the name of Galaktion in the conversation, and the poet thinks that he is “the type of a person lit grace by force”.

Source: MGL, d-97, 34; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 133-134.

September

1935

September 4

In the notebook, he writes that living on Zhores Street is not like living in a house, but like living in a railroad car, and working here is like working in a ship's cabin. You can relax on this street just like in Dante's Inferno. Anyone who sleeps on this street will surely have anxious dreams and wriggle while sleeping in the noise of the street.

Source: MGL, d-95, 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 93.

1935

September 5

He writes an untitled poem "I still do not understand Paris! I did not get it...".

Source: MGL, d-94, 16; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 42.

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem "Paris".

1935

September 5-6

He looks out the window into the yard and sees that a large table is set up with Demna Shengelaia. Among the guests, he notices Irakli Abashidze, Alio Mirtskhulava, Simon Chikovani, Mykola Bazhan, Titsian Tabidze, as well as some unfamiliar women. He observes that a brawl starts at the table and writes in his diary that "a dirty crowd" has gathered.

Source: MGL, d-628, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 270-271.

1935

September 5-6

He is awakened by loud shouting from the street in the middle of the night. Someone drunk is shouting loudly that he does not recognize Galaktion. Galaktion gets out of bed and looks out the window. He sees a man dressed in a white jacket and trousers, who is soon joined by another person dressed in black. The poet hears the same voice say: "The street man is a scoundrel... and so is Galaktion... oh, genius... I do not recognize him". Galaktion concludes that the stranger is very agitated. The shouting continues: "Galaktion and the street man break into others' homes, yet they themselves do not open the door for anyone". Galaktion realizes that the unknown individuals must not be from the intelligentsia. He suspects that they are either messengers or that Giorgi Kuchishvili has encountered some trouble somewhere, and now they are seeking revenge. The poet is troubled by the fact that his name is associated with Kuchishvili's. He is surprised by the stranger's words, as they do not align with his character of breaking into homes forcefully. He does not rule out the possibility that this trouble may have been orchestrated by the neighbours. He is anxious that this incident will spread suddenly.

Source: MGL, d-628, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 270-271.

1935

September 6

He writes a poem "Henri Barbusse at Congress".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4333; №5361; №5402; №37 d., p. 17; №2588; №6321; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 78; MGL, d-94, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 43-44.

Note: The poem appears in sources both untitled and under the titles: “Towards the World Tribune”; “Henry Barbusse”; “To Henry Barbusse”; “A Poem Written in Order – During a Current Literary Evening”.

1935

September 6

In the morning, he speaks with the guard of the storage room, who, in his opinion, witnessed the incident at midnight when unknown individuals were insulting Galaktion and Giorgi Kuchishvili. He asks where they came from, to which the guard replies that he did not see anyone. Galaktion thinks that the guard is shamelessly lying and that he actually saw everything.

Source: MGL, d-628, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 272.

1935

After September 6

He writes a poem “Checking dreams”.

Source: MGL, d-92, 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 45;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem “From the tale of the moon”.

1935

After September 6

He writes a poem “Lines”.

Source: MGL, d-92, 26; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 48-49;

1935

After September 6

He writes an untitled poem “When white lambs come out of the sheep-fold...”.

Source: MGL, d-92, 27; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 49;

1935

After September 6

He writes an untitled poem “On Montmartre, where the ailing...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4444; Nd-92, 28; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 225;

Note: The poem is also found titled “On Montmartre”.

1935

After September 6

He writes an untitled poem “My apartment is sounding...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4465; №37-d., p. 29; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 185;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem “Road of Barcelona and Valencia”.

1935

September 8

He receives a letter from Giorgi Bebutov, who sends a list of the poems’ translations in his possession. He asks to be informed of the writing dates and gives permission to arrange the material in chronological order in the book. He also requests that the translations of Elena Shreisuli be sent to him. He informs that the Book will be handed over to the typesetter on September 15.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-456-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 266;

1935

After September 9

A Book titled “Poets of Georgia” is published in Russian, which includes excerpts from Galaktion’s poetic cycles “Epoch” and “Revolutionary Georgia”, translated by Nikolai Tikhonov. In the preface of the same collection, Nikolo Mtsivlishvili, while discussing contemporary Georgian poetry, notes that a significant portion of Georgian poets came from petty-bourgeois and nationalist sentiments and later aligned themselves with October and subsequently stood at the forefront of Soviet literature. Galaktion Tabidze is mentioned as an example.

Source: Поэты Грузии, Антология МСМXXXV, p. XIV, 117-123.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on September 9, 1935.

1935

September 10

Olya Okujava writes in her diary that Galaktion’s report on the Paris Anti-Fascist Congress, read at the Writers’ Palace, was a triumph for the poet. He spoke for more than an hour, brilliantly, profoundly, artistically, and vividly. The audience listened with love and admiration.

Source: Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 108-109; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 340-341.

1935

September 10

The newspaper Komunisti publishes an informational announcement stating that on September 10, at 8 PM, the National Poet of Georgia and delegate to the International Congress in Paris, Galaktion Tabidze, will deliver a speech on the topic “International Congress for the Protection of Culture in Paris” at the Writers’ Palace.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1935, №211, p. 4.

1935

September 10

After returning from the Anti-Fascist Congress in Paris, he delivers a speech at the Writers' Palace about his impressions. He announces that he has begun writing a cycle of poems inspired by his travels. When asked by the writers which Georgian writer he mentioned at the congress, he replies, "I mentioned all of you who are here".

Source: Sh. Radiani, Our Galaktion, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 260; For dating: Newspaper Komunisti, 1935, №211, p. 4.

1935

September 12

The newspaper Komunisti publishes an announcement stating that a meeting of Soviet writers with Red Army soldiers is to be held in Avchala on September 13 at 6 PM. The following participants will take part in the meeting: Galaktion Tabidze, Alio Mashashvili, Noe Zomleteli, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Vasil Gorgadze, Irakli Abashidze, Archil Chachibaia, Viktor Gabeskiria, and Besarion Zhghenti.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1935, №213, p. 4.

1935

September 13

He writes a poem titled "Lute, a Lot of Good Time".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №654; №4369; №4696; №5353; №5383; №5403; №6144; №144 d., p. 12; №4706; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 81.

Note: The poem appears in sources both untitled and under the titles: "100, 100, and Another 100 Poems"; "Song"; "Song Due to the Release of the Book"; "Malraux"; and "Lute".

1935

September 13

The Writers' Union organizes a meeting of writers with the Frunze Division. The participating writers—Galaktion Tabidze, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Alio Mashashvili, Noe Zomleteli, Besarion Zhghenti, Vasil Gorgadze, and Archil Chachibaia – tour the exhibition tents and library with the head of the division's political department, Platon Mirotadze. Following this, a meeting with the fighters is held. Besarion Zhghenti delivers a speech at the event, and the poets read their own works, including Galaktion Tabidze. At the end of the meeting, the writers commit to creating defensive artistic literature and establishing closer ties with the Red Army.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1935, №217, September 17, p. 4.

October

1935

October 17

Due to illness, he writes a power of attorney for Olya Okujava, authorizing her to collect the amount owed to him from his honorarium.

Source: V. Javakhadze, "Unknown. Apology of Galaktion Tabidze", Tbilisi, 2020, p. 154.

1935

October 22

He writes an impromptu song to Vika Mariashi in the album “My dear Vika...”.

Source: T. Jangulashvili, “A Jump Toward the East”, magazine Tsiskari, 1992, №8, p. 108.

1935

October 30

Together with Olya Okujava, he pays the janitor and water fees – 7 roubles and 60 kopecks, and they are left with no money for bread.

Source: Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 131; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 345.

1935

October 30

He provides written answers for an interview to a staff member of the Soviet Union’s Telegraph Agency (TASS) regarding Georgian poetry in general and his past, present, and future activities.

Source: Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 130; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 345.

1935

October 30

Together with Olya Okujava, he meets Shamshe Lezhava on the way, who eagerly asks to participate in the event for opening the Racha road and promises to send a car.

Source: Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 131; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 345.

1935

October 30

He is invited to an evening planned in his honour in Gurjaani on November 2.

Source: Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 131; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 345.

1935

October 30

In Gurjaani, where an evening in his honour is scheduled for November 2, he sends a telegram.

Source: Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 131; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 345.

1935

October

The magazine Mnatobi publishes a list titled “New Books”, which includes the second volume of Galaktion Tabidze’s eight-volume collected works.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1935, №10, October, p. 224.

November

1935

November 2

An evening dedicated to Galaktion is held in Sagarejo.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 166.

1935

November 3

The newspaper Komunisti publishes an article under the common title "What Our Writers Are Working On", featuring conversations with Mikheil Javakhishvili, Galaktion Tabidze, Paolo Iashvili, Konstantine Lortkipanidze, Shalva Dadiani, and Titsian Tabidze. The writers discuss their creative achievements and future plans. Galaktion states that he is working on three new books. According to the poet, the first book, a 600-page collection, will be dedicated to the 18th anniversary of the October Revolution and will reflect the hardships and colossal achievements of the Soviet people's great struggle. The second Book will commemorate the 15th anniversary of the annexation of Georgia and will compile poems created by Galaktion over the past 15 years, including "Transcaucasian HPS" and "Rioni HPS". The third book, which the poet is currently working on, will encompass his impressions as a delegate to the Paris Congress.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1935, №256, p. 2.

1935

November 3

An announcement is published in the newspaper Komunisti, stating that on November 4th, a Writers' Conference will be held at the newspaper's editorial office. Among the authors who are required to attend the conference is Georgia's National Poet, Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1935, №256, p. 2.

1935

November 5

An announcement is published in the newspaper Komunisti, stating that on November 6th at 8:00 PM, a meeting of the Defence Literature Section of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia will be held at the Writers' House. Those required to attend include: Platon Mirotadze, Paolo Iashvili, Archil Chachibaia, Alexandre Gomiashvili, Galaktion Tabidze, Alio Mashashvili, Noe Zomleteli, and Giorgi Kuchishvili.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1935, №258, p. 4.

1935

November 14

In the Saliteraturo Gazeti, a cycle of poems is published under the title "The Locomotive Greets October 14th from the Rail Assembly, Casting, and Forging Workshop".

Source: Newspaper Saliteruro Gazeti, November 14, 1935, №2, p. 3.

1935

November 16

He receives 245 roubles as a fee from the state publishing house.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-99; 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 315.

1935

November 16 or later

He writes down an extract from an article published in the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti about how they fight against noise in New York.

Source: MGL, d-100; 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 324.

Dating: The article was published in the November 16, 1935 issue of the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti (No. 261). Entry must be made on or after this date.

1935

November 17

He pays 215 roubles for firewood to Georgia Supply, buys cigarettes and products. 275 roubles are spent in total.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-99; 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 315.

1935

November 17

His brother-in-law Vasil Okujava visits him from morning to midnight.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-99; 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 316.

1935

November 18

His brother-in-law Vasil Okujava visits from morning to midnight. Galaktion is disturbed by the behaviour of Vasili, his companions Margarita and Olya, and the fact that he cannot leave the house because of the guests.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-99; 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 316.

1935

November 20

The second volume of Galaktion's writings is being published. 10 copies of the Book are brought to Valerian Luarsamidze in the Main Literary Board. Galaktion is told by the publisher that author's copies will be delivered on November 23.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-100; 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 322.

1935

November 21

Giorgi Kuchishvili and Petre Samsonadze look through the second volume of Galaktion's writings in the publishing house, and Galaktion notices their interest in the new edition.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-100; 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 322.

Note: Giorgi Kuchishvili is mentioned in the record with the initials "G. K". In this form, he appears in other records of the poet. Petre Samsonadze is mentioned only by his last name.

1935

November 21

He receives a brief note from Lavrenti Dzidziguri, in which he writes that due to the delay in his salary and honorarium, he is forced to ask for a loan of 50 roubles.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-234; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 270.

1935

November 24

Part of the circulation of the second volume of Galaktion's works is being transferred from the printing house to the warehouse, and the poet is waiting for news from the Main Literary Board.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-100; 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 322.

1935

November 25

He writes a note in Russian about the symphony orchestra. He points out that it is strange when, during a concert, a singer of average talent receives a standing ovation, while the musicians who brilliantly fulfill their duties in the symphony orchestra go unnoticed. He thinks that it shouldn't be this way. He believes that there is no place for singers at a symphony concert, as when a singer begins to perform, there is a noticeable decline in the musicians' enthusiasm for their own work.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-556, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 308.

December

1935

Until December 3

He writes a poems and epitaphs on the tombstones in the notebook.

Source: MGL, d-100; 2,4,6,8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 319-321;

Note: It is not known from where Galaktion copied the poems, whether he himself was in some cemetery or used a written source.

1935

December 3

Beso Zhghenti reads a report on the current year's literary harvest at the writers' meeting and does not mention Galaktion, which is why the writers scold him. Zhghenti excuses himself by saying that Galaktion did not write anything this year. They answer that those who did are not very good, besides, the Book of Galaktion has been published this year. Zhghenti says that he has not seen the Book yet.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-100; 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 322-323.

1935

After December 3

He makes a note in his notebook about the fact that there was a conversation between Kolau Nadiradze, Simon Chikovani, Konstantine Gamsakhurdia, Giorgi Kuchishvili and Davit Gachechiladze in the state publishing house, during which Gachechiladze asked if Akaki Tsereteli or Galaktion Tabidze was better and they answered that Galaktion.

Source: MGL, d-100; 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 323;

1935

After December 3

He writes an untitled poem "Where it goes, it goes..."

Source: MGL, d-100; 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 323;

1935

December 4

He writes the outline of the statement to be submitted to the publishing house "Federation" in the notebook. He requests that his new Book of about 500 pages be included in the 1936 plan.

Source: MGL, d-100; 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 324.

1935

December 6

An unknown person writes a verse from the poem of Innokentiy Omulevsky "Light up, my friend!" in Galaktion's notebook.

Source: MGL, d-100; 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 323.

1935

December 16

He is elected, along with Mikheil Javakhishvili, as a member of the All-Union Jubilee Committee dedicated to the 100th anniversary of Pushkin, chaired by Maxim Gorky.

Source: S. Lekishvili, Gorky writes to Galaktion, newspaper Zarya Vostoka, February 6, N 30, p. 4.

1935

After December 16

He frequently participates in the meetings of the All-Union Jubilee Committee dedicated to Pushkin's 100th anniversary, organizes events, and promotes the works of the great Russian poet. For this, the committee awards him a bronze medal.

Source: S. Lekishvili, Gorky writes to Galaktion, newspaper Zarya Vostoka, February 6, N 30, p. 4.

1935

Until December 20

In the second issue of the French magazine La Literature Internationale, a letter about him is printed, under the title “Poet of Georgia”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-98, 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 166.

1935

December 20

To organize events dedicated to the 100th anniversary of Alexander Pushkin’s death, the Central Executive Committee of the Soviet Union establishes the All-Union Pushkin Committee, which includes writers from various Soviet republics. From Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze and Mikheil Javakhishvili are appointed as members of the committee.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1935, №293, p. 1.

1935

December 20

He obtains the French magazine La Literature Internationale, in which a letter about him is published.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-98, 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 166.

1935

December 20

He makes a note in his notebook that the second volume of his writings has been taken from the printing house to the main department of literature and publishing and he will soon receive the author’s copies.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-98, 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 166.

1935 or earlier

December 21

Olya Okujava writes him a lengthy letter, reproaching him for delighting his enemies with his fallen way of life. She thinks it would be a good idea to film him while he is drunk and show it to him once he sobers up. He would see how he loses his human dignity, what he says, and how he gives in to animal instincts. Olya writes that she fought for a long time to restore his humanity, but now she has lost all hope. She laments that her prolonged suffering and efforts have been in vain. She suggests it would be best if her brother took him in to live with him, so that one day he wouldn’t die shamefully on the street.

Source: O. Okujava’s letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-406; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 205-206.

Dating: The letter was written on December 21st, just before Olya Okujava’s arrest.

1935

December 22

In the notebook, he makes a note about the loneliness of poets. He notes that Mayakovsky was left alone, he could not find support in the people who surrounded him. Not even one good Book has been written about it, there are only newspaper and print articles. So was Pushkin. None of the poets could be among friends.

Source: MGL, d-97, 61; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 137.

1935

December 22

He is in the city of Orlov.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-97, 61; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 137.

1935

December 23

He writes a poem "Evening with a calm, cloudless face...".

Source: MGL, d-94, 30-31; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 51.

1935

December 23

He writes a poem titled "Sound Cinema".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4341; №4483; №2392; №37 d., p. 30; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 82.

Note: The poem appears in sources either untitled or under the title "Cinema".

1935

After December 23

He writes a poem "Ship".

Source: MGL, d-92, 31; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 51;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem "Colourless day of Europe".

1935

After December 23

He continues to work on the poems "Evening with a calm, cloudless face..." and "Ship".

Dating: The original, dated versions of the verses are inscribed in pencil. Corrections are made in ink.

Source: MGL, d-94, 30-31; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 51.

1935

December 24

In his notebook, he makes a note about someone, that they are not really friends, but traitors, so today's story should be the last. He plans to change the key.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-94, 32; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 52.

1935

December 25

He writes the plan of action in his notebook. He notes that the release of his Book should be emphasized once again.

Source: MGL, d-100; 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 324.

1935 or earlier

December 25

In the evening, Olya Okujava visits the house and waits, then leaves her warm coat on the windowsill for him to put on under his clothes.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-434; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 199.

Dating: The date is mentioned in the letter dated December 26th.

1935 or earlier

December 26

Olya Okujava visits again during the day, but she cannot find him and leaves a note. She inquires about what he did with his coat, shoes, and galoshes.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-434; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 199.

Dating: The note is dated December 26th and was written before Olya Okujava's arrest.

1935

December 27

He is being treated in the hospital.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-94, 35; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 53.

1935

After December 27

He writes an untitled poem "Poor Verlaine's innocent poison...".

Source: MGL, d-92, 35; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 53;

1935

After December 27

He writes an untitled poem "I was in Svaneti... I'm having fun...".

Source: MGL, d-92, 36; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 53;

1935

After December 27

He writes a poem "L'Humanite...".

Source: MGL, d-92, 37; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 54;

1935

November-December

The magazine Mnatobi publishes Alexandre Abasheli's memoir "Akaki's Crown". The author recalls how on February 3, 1915, a delegation of one hundred people gathered to transfer Akaki Tsereteli to Tbilisi. Among those who arrived from Tbilisi were Sandro Shanshiashvili, Ioseb Grishashvili, Giorgi Kuchishvili, and Alexandre Abasheli, while Varlam Rukhadze, Paolo Iashvili, and Galaktion Tabidze came from Kutaisi.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1935, №2, p. 97.

1935

November-December

The magazine Mnatobi publishes Shalva Radiani's article "For the Poetry of Socialist Realism". The critic discusses the current literary process and reviews, alongside texts by other authors, the recently published second volume of Galaktion Tabidze's collected works. According to the critic, this volume allows us to trace what Galaktion did in the post-revolutionary period, how his poetic journey unfolded, and what place his works hold in Soviet poetry. The author argues that in Galaktion's work, decadent moods have almost entirely disappeared in recent years, replaced by an abundance of texts reflecting socialist construction. The critic believes that Galaktion Tabidze's attempt to work on an epic has not been particularly successful. He supports this view by pointing out that the poems "Epoch" and "Revolutionary Georgia" are, in fact, collections of lyrical poems. Shalva Radiani expresses hope that Galaktion's poetic "resources" have not yet been exhausted and that he will write many more masterpieces.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1935, №11-12, October, p. 204-205.

1931-1935

He writes a poem "Let's cry out thunderously".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3984; №4144; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 52. For dating: G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 274.

1935

Galaktion Tabidze's "Verses and Poems" is published as a Book in Russian in Tbilisi.

Source: Табидзе Г.В., Стихи и поэмы, 2-е изд. – Тифлис, Закгиз, 1935.

1935

The state publishing house publishes the second volume of Galaktion Tabidze's works.

Source: Galaktion Tabidzem works, vol. 2, "State Publishing House", 1935.

1935

In the notebook, he notes that it is necessary to find out what new words and artistic forms appeared in Pushkin's work after his trip to Georgia.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-97, 54; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 136;

1935

He writes a poem “Mon-Parnassus”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4365; №5596; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 157;

Note: The poem is also found in sources without a title.

1935

He writes an untitled poem that begins with “In the Evening...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4411; №170 d., p. 6; №d-153, p. 1794; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 83; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 304.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the titles: “Cinema”, “In the Evening”, “Utility”, and “Garold Lloyd”.

1935

He writes an untitled poem that begins with “Somewhere far away, Stockholm...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4466; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 158;

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the title “Somewhere Far Away, Stockholm”.

1935

He writes a poem titled “Inscription on the Portrait of Anatole France”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №992; №4364; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 160;

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the title “Anatole France”.

1935

He writes a poem titled “Little Pierre”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4349; №37 d., p. 85-86; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 161;

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the titles: “Cranky” and “Poor Pierre”.

1935

He writes a poem titled “Abyssinian”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4120; №4480; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 100.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the title “From Italy”.

1935

He writes a poem “Writer in Disguise at the Paris Congress”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4330-4332; №d-98, p. 1551_1553; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 101.

Note: The poem is found in sources untitled as well as under the titles “Writer in Disguise” and “Writer with Disguise”.

1935

He writes a poem titled “It is approaching”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1896; №4424; №70-a, p. 1784; №128 d., p. 10; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 112.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and under the title “He Came Back from That War”.

1935

He writes a poem titled “Lumanite”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4380; №37 d., p. 37; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 113.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the title “Lumanity”.

1935

He writes an untitled poem “In Lancashire...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4463; №5344; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 114.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the title “In Lancashire”.

1935

He writes a poem “On the Eiffel Tower”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1569; №4337; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 115.

1935

He writes a poem “The Colourless Day of Europe”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1569; №4337; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 117.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and under the title “The Ship”.

1935

He writes a poem “Ruhr”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4394; №7613; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 118.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the title “Ruhr Basin”.

1935

He writes a poem “European Diplomat”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4379; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 120.

1935

He writes a poem “Bananas”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4474; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 121.

1935

He writes a poem “Foreign Child”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4464; №5325; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 122.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and under the title “To the Foreign Child”.

1935

He writes a poem “Mother Without a Home”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4462; №d. 90, p. 1; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 123.

Note: The poem is also found in sources without a title.

1935

He writes a poem “Reims”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4504; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 124.

1935

He writes a poem “Unforgiving, Unaccountable”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №77; №66-a, p. 1637; №2533; №3273; №6135; 70-a, 1795; №325 d., p. 51; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 125.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and under the titles: “What Will Make Us Love?”, “With the Sphinxes”, “Paris”, and “You, Paris”.

1935

He writes a poem “The Worker’s Word”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4491; №5563; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 126.

Note: The poem is also found in sources without a title.

1935

He writes a poem titled “By Airplane”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4439; №334 d., p. 2; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 128.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the title “Take-off”.

1935

He writes a poem titled “Let Us Wish for Spain”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4362; №5620; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 129.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and under the titles: “In the Café of the Spaniards” and “Café of the Spaniards in Paris”.

1935

He writes a poem titled “Abyssinian Soldier”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4383; №7777; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 131.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and under the titles: “Two Sisters”, “A Poem of Three Brothers”, “The Tale of Two Ordinary Brothers”, and “The Japanese and Chinese Soldier”.

1935

He writes a poem titled “The Wolf and the Sheep”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4372; №66-a, p. 1565; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 133.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the title “Fedra’s Fables”.

1935

He writes a poem titled “What Will You Find Here, Abroad?”

Source: Autographs: MGL, №7812; №4500; №5568; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 135.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the titles: “Traveler’s Song” and “Between Us and Them”.

1935

He writes a poem titled “Lake in the Alpine Zone”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №66-a, p. 1534; №66-a, p. 1535; №2497; №4350; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 136.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and under the title “Alpine Zone”.

1935

He writes a poem titled “Once in the Morning”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4445; №2504; №66-a, p. 1527; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 137.

Note: The poem is also found in sources without a title.

1935

He writes an untitled poem “The cloud of vanity covered the Paris sky...”

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3274; №4469; №5582; №37 d., p. 18; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 138.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the titles “You Were Resting” and “The Cloud of Vanity”.

1935

He writes a poem “TABES D’ORSALIS”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4366; №66-a, p. 1530; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 139.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1935

He writes a poem titled “Overcoming the Crisis”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4359; №66-a, p. 1520; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 140.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the title “Escaping the Crisis”.

1935

He writes a poem titled “Parisian Season”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4387s; №5374; №3289-3290; №2015; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 142.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and under the title “Ballad: About the Summer Season”.

1935

He writes a poem titled “The Giant of All Times”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №487; №3818; №6928; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 143.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and under the title “The Forest of Boulogne”.

1935

He writes a poem titled “Because of Heine’s Line”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4446; №ᄁ. 34, p. 11; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 144.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and under the title “Lines”.

1935

He writes a poem titled “Lumpen”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4496; №7811; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 164.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and under the title “Street Singer”.

1935

He writes an untitled poem that begins with “The poppy has bloomed...”

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4404; №37 d., p. 13; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 164.

1935

The artist Nikolai Chernyshkov creates a portrait of Galaktion (a gravure) specifically for a Russian collection, which the poet greatly admires.

Source: Бебутов Г., Галактион, “Вечерный Тбилиси”, 1970, 13 Мая, №110, 3.

1935

When planning a collection to be published in Russian, he highlights the section “Poems from 1927”. In response to Giorgi Bebutov’s question about why he emphasizes one particular year from the past, Galaktion explains that these poems capture the essence of feelings and reflections experienced during the first decade following the October Revolution. For comparison, he cites the case of Vladimir Mayakovsky, who wrote that his poem “Good!” dedicated to the 10th anniversary of the revolution would retain its significance even 20 or 40 years later.

Source: Бебутов Г., Галактион, “Вечерный Тбилиси”, 1970, 13 Мая, №110, 3.

1935 or later

He goes out on the balcony of his apartment and with his hands in his pockets he stares at one point. First a passerby from the street notices him and stops, then others. At the sight of the gathered people, the cars gradually stop and the buzzing of the sirens is heard; Galaktion continues to look at one point again, then suddenly turns, enters the room, and the street returns to its original rhythm.

Source: N. Agiashvili, Let the toast be for him and his honourable mention, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 176.

Dating: From the recollection, it appears that Galaktion lived at that time on the street of Zhores, now Marjanishvili, and he settled there in 1935.

After 1935

He writes a poem “Kobuleti”.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 352.

After 1935

He is filmed in the study of his house.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 270, p. 68; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 197.

After 1935

He makes notes regarding his poetic cycles - “Epoch”, “Pacifism”, and “Where Revolutionary Georgia Is Heading”. He points out that a significant part of this “Epoch” is not included in the second volume of his works. He notes that this poetic cycle was published in the magazine

Mnatobi, whose editorial staff removed several poems from the poet's manuscript, some of which were lost in the printing house where the journal was produced. According to Galaktion, in total, "Epoch" was almost twice as extensive. The poet considers it impossible to restore the lost poems. He also indicates that the separately published "Epoch" is full of technical errors and proofreading mistakes. The second volume of his works contains significant errors in the printing of "Pacifism" and "Revolutionary Georgia", parts of which were also lost in the printing house.

Source: MGL, d-426, 5-6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 95-96;

After 1935

He makes a note about the poet and translator Grigol Tsetskhladze, mentioning that he is not a poet of great talent or intellect. According to Galaktion, his lyricism is a superficial imitation of the motifs of the romantics. Tsetskhladze's attempt to create his own school ended in failure. Galaktion notes that Tsetskhladze spoke out in defence of the young poets at a critics' meeting, those who are disconnected from contemporary life. The note points out that Tsetskhladze's poetry almost never touches on contemporary themes. In Galaktion's view, Grigol Tsetskhladze attempts to hide behind a translation of "Eugene Onegin", a field in which no one challenges him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-640, 105; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 74-75;

1935 or later

In the street, he encounters an elderly Georgian woman dressed in black, for whom a young man had taken a stick from her hand and fled. The elderly woman cries so bitterly that it reminds Galaktion of his mother's tears when she reproached him for not seeing her for four years.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №557, p. 1.

Dating: The tone suggests that Galaktion's mother must have passed away.

1935 or later

On the paper, he writes quotes from the German expressionist Jakob van Hoddis.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №557, p. 2.

Dating: The text written on the other side of the paper dates from 1935 or later.

After 1935

He makes a record about old friends. He notes that the voices of old friends, who once encouraged and supported him, are no longer heard. The time when they fought the waves of life together is gone, and the happiest days have vanished. According to Galaktion, there was no envy among friends, only sincere admiration for art and artists, along with youthful enthusiasm. But now, when he calls out to his friends, his call remains unanswered.

Source: MGL, d-626, 30; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 231-232;

1935

He writes a poem “The Ear Still Longs for the Roar of the Waves” (“The Ear Still Longs for the Roar of the Waves...”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5498; №2492; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 136; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 786.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“The Ear Still Longs for the Roar of the Waves...”).

1935

He reads the Russian Book “The Russian Museum of Emperor Alexander III”, making underlines and comments. In the paragraph discussing how the paintings displayed on the first floor show the influence of foreign countries, as their authors were sent for studies in Italy and France, he writes the first verse of the untitled poem “Those of us who travelled to Europe...”.

Source: MGL, t-396, “Русский Музей Императора Александра III”, сост.: Ольга Кулибина, Saint-Petersburg, 1906, p. 1.

Dating: The poem is written in a 1935 diary, in which Galaktion’s impressions of his participation in the anti-fascist writers’ and artists’ congress in Paris are conveyed.

1935 or later

He familiarizes himself with a foreign musical terminology dictionary, making underlines and numbering the terms. He notes as if the era of Mozart and Beethoven has been revived. He writes his impressions of Paris.

Source: GTSM, 249, И. Цадик, Словарь иностранных музыкальных терминов, Moscow, 1935.

1935 or later

He reads the Russian-translated Book by Anatole France “Crainquebille”, making underlines and comments.

Source: GTSM, 226, Анатолий Франс, “Крэнкебиль”, Moscow, 1935.

1935 or later

He writes an untitled poem “I will not let the merriment go...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №7307; №353-d, p. 12; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 286. For dating and clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 685.

Note: The poem is also found untitled with different beginning lines: “The dark merriment has faded...” and “That we may cut through the darkness sharply...”.

1935 or after

He writes a poem “Spain” (“The Squadron Roars...”).

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4505; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 158.

1936

January

1936

January 1

He is in the hospital.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 320.

1936

January 1

The second volume of Galaktion Tabidze's works is being printed.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 320.

1936

January 1

The newspaper Komunisti publishes the 1936 plan of the "Federation" publishing house, which includes the publication of a new collection of poems by Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1936, №1, p. 4.

1936

January 4

The newspaper Komunisti publishes an informative article titled "Discussion on Poetry Issues", which provides a brief summary of a discussion held at the Writers' House. The article states that Galaktion Tabidze has published a Book of poems, which represents a literary phenomenon as it allows us to fully consider how much Galaktion has done for the revolution. It also notes that the poet conveys reality solely through lyrical images.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1936, №3, p. 4.

1936

January 7

In the hospital, Galaktion talks to an elderly teacher from Kartli, the daughter of a prince, the mother of one of the patients, who informs him that Dr. Eliozishvili, who lives in Gori, has information about the ancient manuscript "The Knight in the Panther's Skin" preserved in the village of Nikozi. According to the woman, the doctor received a letter from Tbilisi asking him to somehow get hold of the manuscript, after which he went to the family where "The Knight in the Panther's Skin" was preserved. The sisters of the deceased owner of the manuscript said that "The Knight in the Panther's Skin" was burned in the oven together with the old manuscripts, because after the Bolsheviks came, there were rumors that they would create problems for the families having old manuscripts.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-94, 41-42; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 56-57.

Note: Galaktion's interlocutor named Doctor Eliozishvili mentions "Niko", but he is probably mistaken, because the doctor was Kote Eliozishvili.

1936

After January 7

In the notebook, he makes a note about the Taktakishvili people living near Nikozi, who were known for hypnotizing snakes and treating snake bites with saliva.

Source: MGL, d-94, 42; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 56-57.

Dating: The entry follows the note and is thematically related to the entry about the “The Knight in the Panther’s Skin” of Nikozi, dated January 7.

1936

After January 7

He keeps thinking about “The Knight in the Panther’s Skin” from Nikozi. He notes in his notebook that a man can go to the place for a few days and find out the story of the disappearance of the manuscript. He suspects that the Book might be hidden. He indicates that Nikozi is Shindisi district. The poetess Nino Karagozishvili lived in Shindisi, whose beautiful poem “To Shindisi Platans” he had read earlier.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-94, 42; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 56-57; For noting: L. Beburishvili, “Two Plane Trees – Galaktion’s “Shindisi Plane Trees” and Nino Karagozishvili’s “Zindisi Plane Trees”, magazine of the Gelati Academy of Sciences, 2016, №7-8, p. 32-39.

Note: The poet is distracted. Nino Karagozishvili lived in the village of Shindisi, Shida Kartli, and his poem was also called “To Shindisi Platans”.

Dating: The record is thematically related to the issue of the “The Knight in the Panther’s Skin” from Nikozi. The poet starts thinking about it on January 7.

1936

January 8

He writes poems: “The fate gives so much hopes...” and “Light from the West”.

Source: MGL, d-94, 43-44; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 58-59.

1936

January 8

He writes a poem titled “Symphony of Plants”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2312; №ᄁ. 37, p. 42; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 145.

Note: The poem is also found in sources without a title.

1936

After January 8

He continues to work on an untitled poem, “The fate gives so much hope...” and titles it as “Because of the celebration”.

Source: MGL, d-94, 43; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 58.

Dating: The original, dated version of the poem is written in violet ink. Corrections are made in blue ink.

1936

After January 8

He continues to work on the poem “Light from the West” and titles it as “Light from the West and East”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-94, 44; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 59.

Dating: The original, dated version of the poem is written in violet ink. Corrections are made in blue ink.

1936

After January 8

He writes a poem “Napareuli in Berlin at Suritz’s”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-94, 45; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 59;

1936

January 9

He writes a poem “Berlin”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3272; №4447; №37 d., p. 47; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 146.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the titles: “Mauve-coloured Madness” and “Hitler”.

1936

January 9

In his notebook, he makes a note about the employee of the “Gastronome” store on the bridge of Chelyuskin, named Arto, and his brother. Arto’s brother became engaged to a woman in Senaki, and family members do not allow the bride to stay in the capital for more than five days, to which Arto’s brother bitterly exclaims that five days will not be enough for a newly married couple.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-94, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 40.

1936

January 9

Being in the hospital ward he talks to the patient, the niece of the actress Nato Gabunia, who tells him about the famous playwright Avksenti Tsagareli, recalls how Ilya praised the latter for his dramaturgical skills, and how Nato Gabunia jokingly told Valerian Gunia, who was the master of ceremonies at his anniversary, that he would also have to be the master of ceremonies at her funeral and how ironically, this prophecy came true for Gunia a year later.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-94, 46-47; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 60-61.

1936

January 9

He writes a poem "Hitler".

Source: MGL, d-94, 48; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 61-62.

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem "Berlin".

1936

January 10

He is in the hospital and writes an untitled poem "Painters', dandy's, writer's, artist's...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, Nd-94, p. 50-51; №4427; №6374; №2014; №2093; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 7.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "About the Book", "How Many in the World", and "Books", as well as untitled (beginning with "How many books are published in the world..." and "Whoever is a poet, artist, or...").

1936 or earlier

January 13

At one o'clock in the afternoon, Olya Okujava visits Galaktion at his home and leaves a note stating that she will come again in the evening. She also asks whether he liked the pictures.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-435; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 212.

Dating: The letter is dated January 13 and was written before Olya's arrest.

1936

After January 10

He continues to work on an untitled poem "Painters', dandy's, writer's, artist's...".

Source: MGL, d-94, 51; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 63-64.

Dating: The original, dated version of the poem is written in violet ink. Corrections are made with a black pencil.

1936

After January 10

He writes a poem "Poetry".

Source: MGL, d-94, 52. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 64;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem "Work and Rest".

1936

After January 10

He continues work on the poem "Poetry" and titles it as "Spring Rivers".

Source: MGL, d-94, 51; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 64;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem "Work and Rest".

1936

January 11

In the newspaper Komunisti, a review of Galaktion's four-volume collection's second volume by Mose Gvasalia is published under the title "Bibliography". The author of the article believes that this Book offers an insight into the difficult path the poet has traversed from the revolution to the present day. According to the reviewer, in terms of his attitude towards the revolution, Galaktion reminds one of Alexander Blok. He notes that "Epoch" and "Revolutionary Georgia", which were previously published as independent poems, are printed in this Book as individual poems. Mose Gvasalia considers this fact to be a correct decision made by Galaktion. He views the absence of an introductory article and notes as a certain flaw in the publication. The reviewer points out that the technical aspect of the publication is satisfactory; it is printed on good paper, has a coloured cover, and costs 12 roubles.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1936, №7, p. 4.

1936

January 12

He makes an ironic note in his notebook, in which the words of some reader are conveyed: I had named my child Lia before I read Ioseb Grishashvili's poem, and when the poet met me and heard my child's name, he hugged me with joy. The recording ends with the taps: "ლია, ლია, ლია, ლია, გაზაფხულის შროიალია" ("Lia, Lia, Lia, Lia, spring is rustling").

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-94, 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 38.

Note: The record does not say that it is about Ioseb Grishashvili and his poem "Lia".

1936

January 19

In the notebook, he makes a note about the conversation between Armenian Vartana and Niko himself. Vartana says that the Georgians squandered their property in the feast, but they still chose to feast, and the Armenians have been robbed of everything.

Source: MGL, d-94, 53; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 65.

1936

January 20

In the notebook, he makes a note about the old patient of the hospital, Giga Kizikeli, who recalls how the son of the famous merchant Mikael Aramiants was kidnapped for ransom and how he was released for 100,000 roubles.

Source: MGL, d-94, 62-63; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 70-71.

1936

January 20

In the notebook, he writes an outline for a letter to be sent to Dr. Konstantine Eliazishvili in Gori. He notes that for him, as a member of the Rustaveli Committee, all the information surrounding "The Knight in the Panther's Skin" is most valuable and asks him, if he can, to provide information about the manuscript of the "The Knight in the Panther's Skin" in Nikozi - in whose family and under what conditions it has been kept, how it looks, under what circumstances it has been destroyed, etc.

Source: MGL, d-94, 64-65; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 71-72.

Note: Eliozishvili's name is not mentioned in the source.

1936

After January 20

He writes an untitled poem "A poet who is honest in heart...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, Nd-94, 66; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 233;

1936

After January 20

He writes an untitled poem "Do you remember a distant road...".

Source: MGL, d-94, 67; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 74;

1936

After January 20

He writes a poem "To a new life".

Source: MGL, d-94, 67; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 73;

1936

January 23

In the notebook, he writes a quote in Russian from the review published by Valentin Asmus about the Russian translation of Aristotle's "Metaphysics".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-94, 68; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 75.

1936

January 23

He is in the hospital, and Olya Okujava brings him 15 author copies of the well-published second volume of Galaktion Tabidze's works from the printing house.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 324.

1936 or earlier

January 24

Olya Okujava visits at 11 PM, but Galaktion is not there, so she begins to create Russian notes for his poems. At 4 AM, she stops working, leaves him a letter, and goes out to look for Galaktion.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-377; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 207.

Dating: The letter is dated January 24 and was written before Olya Okujava's arrest.

1936

January 24

He writes an untitled poem “I am not an alien...”.

Source: ზ. MGL, d-94, 69; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 75.

1936

January 24

Benito Buachidze visits him in the hospital, who informs that another union congress of writers will be held in Minsk, where Dimitri Mirsky and other friends of Tsisperkantselis will speak about Georgian poetry. Valerian Gaprindashvili is entrusted with the editorship of the Russian-language Book of Galaktion. Buachidze tells him that Shalva Radiani or Lida Gasviani is better as an editor than Gaprindashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-94, 71; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 76-77.

1936

January 24

Translator Giorgi Bebutov visits him in the hospital and asks him to deliver a letter about Pushkin.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-94, 71; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 76-77.

1936

January 24

In the hospital, he receives a letter from the artist Teodor Chudetsky, in which Galaktion is referred to as “the marshal of poetry”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-94, 71; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 76-77.

1936

January 25

He writes a untitled poem, “The colour brings the sun and the wind...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2397; №4210; №37 d., p. 1; №d., p. 3; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 147.

Note: The poem is found in sources both untitled and under the title “Grisette”.

1936

January 25

He writes an untitled poem starting with “It’s spring...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №37 d., p. 70; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 148.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the title “It’s Spring”.

1936

January 25

He writes a poem “On this terrain”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №37 d., p. 37; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 149.

Note: The poem is also found in sources without a title.

1936

January 25

He writes a poem titled “Ipati”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №37 d., p. 74; №3962-63; №4121-22; №4488; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 150.

Note: “The poem is also found in sources under the titles: ‘Russian Emigrant in Paris’; ‘From the Ipatiev Monastery to Engineer Ipatiev’s House.’”

1936

January 25

He writes a poem “Etching”.

Source: MGL, d-94, 72. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 77-78.

Note: Works are a variant of the poem “It’s spring”.

1936

After January 25

He continues to work on the poem “Etching”.

Source: MGL, d-94, 72. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 77-78.

Note: Works are a variant of the poem “It’s spring”.

Dating: The original, dated version of the poem is written in red ink, with corrections in blue.

1936

January 25

He writes rhyming pairs in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-94, 74. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 79.

1936

January 25

In the notebook, he writes a Russian-language quote by Alexander Troyanovsky about Lenin, how the “great leader” loved painting, in particular, the work of Rubens.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-94, 74. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 79.

1936

January 25

He writes a poem “From Ipatiev Monastery to Engineer Ipatiev’s House”.

Source: MGL, d-94, 76. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 80-81.

1936

After January 25

He continues to work on the poem “From Ipatiev Monastery to Engineer Ipatiev’s House” and titles it as “Russian Emigrant in Paris”.

Source: MGL, d-94, 76. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 80-81.

Dating: The original, dated version of the poem is written in purple ink, with corrections in blue.

1936

January 25

He writes a poem “It’s good to break with flame the...”

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4492; Nd-94, p. 77; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 230.

Note: “The poem is also found untitled (“I am ready forever...”)”.

1936

January 25

He writes a poem “Let us designate this place...”

Source: MGL, d-94, 79. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 82-83.

1936

After January 25

He continues to work on the poem “Let us designate this place...”.

Source: MGL, d-94, 79. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 82-83.

Dating: The version of the poem, dated January 25, is written in purple ink, with corrections in blue.

1936 or earlier

January 26

Olya Okujava finds Galaktion gone in the morning and thinks that the clock has deceived her. She leaves a letter asking him to stop by at work.

Source: O. Okujava’s letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-433; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 212.

Dating: The letter is dated January 26 and was written before Olya’s arrest”.

1936

January 26

He writes a poem “In the suburbs, where the voice is raised...”.

Source: MGL, d-94, 80. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 84.

1936

January 27

In the notebook, he makes a note about doctor Grinov, who worked in Gori and then moved to Borjomi, because he divorced his wife and married her sister.

Source: MGL, d-94, 80. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 84.

1936

January 27

Doctor Kote Eliozishvili, who came from Gori, enters Galaktion's ward, and when the poet asks about the manuscript of "The Knight in the Panther's Skin" in Nikozi, he answers that he received a letter from Akaki Shanidze based on Platon Ioseliani's report, as if he had seen the 14th century manuscript of Rustveli's poem at some Eliozishvili's house. Shanidze asked to find out if this manuscript still existed. Eliozishvili went to Nikozi to fulfil the scientist's request, but he failed to find anything.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-94, 82. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 84-85.

1936

January 26

He writes a poem "Now is the time...".

Source: MGL, d-94, 83. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 85.

1936

January 30

Benito Buachidze publishes the literary portrait "Galaktion Tabidze" in the newspaper Komunisti. The critic develops the opinion that the connection with the revolutionary reality made the poet, previously limited to individualistic lyrics, a great creator of the Soviet era. Buachidze responds to the release of the second volume of Galaktion's works and considers it a brilliant victory of Soviet poetry. The critic especially points out that in the early period Galaktion was a great master of poetry and could not fit into the "narrow and artificial framework of symbolism", and after the establishment of the Soviet government, he got rid of mysticism and absorbed revolutionary enthusiasm. B. Buachidze considers the poem "Press" to be one of the best works of Soviet poetry, positively evaluates the poems "Epoch" and "Revolutionary Georgia". At the same time, he notes that the poet will need more specificity in the future in the artistic reflection of the new reality.

Source: B. Buachidze, "Galaktion Tabidze", newspaper Komunisti, 1936, №24, January 30, p. 3.

1936

January 30

The newspaper Komunisti publishes a photo of Galaktion Tabidze along with the poem "The Poet and October", with a note indicating that it has been extracted from the poet's recently released second volume of works.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1936, №24, January 30, p. 3.

1936

After January 31

He writes in the notebook that he must buy the newspaper Na Rubezhe Vostoka dated January 15, 1936 and the following two issues.

Source: MGL, d-101; 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 341.

1936

January or after

He writes an untitled poem “Once again, we’ll go together, drunk...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record comes after Mikheil Javakhishvili’s novel “A Woman’s Burden”, MGL, t-539, magazine Mnatobi, 1936, №1, p. 45.

1936

January

He writes a poem ‘Long Live the New Life’.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4375; №37 d., p. 65; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 151.

Note: The poem is also found in sources without a title.

February

1936

Until February

He writes a poem titled “The Vistula is Murmuring” (“Murmuring Here is the Vistula...”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4390; №123-d., p. 3; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 109.

Note: The poem is found in sources without a title and under the titles: “Homeland”; “A Poem About the Renewed Country”; “Writing Equally to Victory”; “Memories of the Native Land”; and “Thoughts About the Homeland”.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1936

Until February

He writes a poem titled “Thoughts About the Homeland”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4396; №7613; №101-d., p. 13; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 110.

Note: The poem is found in sources without a title and under the titles: “Marseille” and “A Poem About the Renewed Country”.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1936

Until February

He writes a poem titled “Memories of the Native Land”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4391; №7614; №101-d., p. 7; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 111.

Note: The poem is found in sources without a title and under the titles: “Given to Sleep in Brittany” and “A Poem about the Renewed Country”.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1936

February 2

Benito Buachidze visits him in the hospital.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-94, 71; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 77.

1936

Until February 3

He writes a poem without a title, "Down below lies stone and snowball...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №70-a, p. 1776; №4707; №123 d., p. 32; №6149; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 153.

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the titles: "The Colour is Brought by the Sun and the Wind"; "Who Said?!"; and "To Him - Stalin is Powerful and Stalin is a Mass".

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1936

February 3

The newspaper Komunisti publishes the poem "To Him - Stalin is Powerful and Stalin is a Mass" ("Down Below Lies Stone and snowball...").

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1936, №46, February 3, p. 8.

1936

February 3

The newspaper Komunisti publishes a lengthy article titled "The Letter from the Workers of Soviet Georgia to the Leader of the Peoples, Great Stalin", at the end of which the names of the writers who serve the cause of the struggle for new life through artistic word are listed, with Galaktion Tabidze being named for the first time.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1936, №46, February 3, p. 1-2.

1936

February 3

Vasil Gorgadze goes to visit Galaktion in the hospital.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-94, 71; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 77.

1936

February 7

He makes a note in his notebook that he had a dream about faithful dogs guarding his new apartment.

Source: MGL, d-94, 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 35.

1936

February 12

In the diary, he notes the possible themes of the poems.

Source: MGL, d-101; 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 326.

1936

February 12 or later

He writes a poem “Like avalanches and glaciers...”.

Source: MGL, d-101; 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 326;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem “Where the Alps Are, as fields”.

1936

February 14

He measures the temperature several times during the day and records the data in the notebook; at 7 o'clock in the morning - 37.4; at 10 o'clock - 37.4; in the evening - 38.3; at 9 o'clock in the evening - 38.3.

Source: MGL, d-101; 33; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 348.

1936

February 15

He measures the temperature several times during the day and records the data in the notebook. In the morning - 36.9; at 7 pm - 38.3, at 10 pm - 38.2.

Source: MGL, d-101; 33; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 348.

1936

February 16

He measures the temperature several times during the day and records the data in the notebook. In the morning - 37; In the afternoon - 37.3, at 6 o'clock in the evening - 38.3.

Source: MGL, d-101; 33; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 348.

1936

After February 19

He reads the Russian-translated anthology of Negritic poetry, making underlines and notes.

Source: GTSM, 359, Антология негритянской поэзии, Moscow, 1936.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on February 19, 1936.

1936

February 20

The newspaper Musha publishes Beso Zhghenti's letter “Georgian Writing after the Historical Congress”, in which the state of Georgian writing is discussed in the period after the Union Congress of Soviet Writers. The critic refers to the poetry of Alexandre Abasheli, Ioseb Grishashvili, Galaktion Tabidze. Of Galaktion, it is indicated that he shows no signs of painful reconciliation with his past and that he has been “transformed with joy”. B. Zhghenti examines the poet's poems: "Flags quickly", "A city under the water" and points out that Galaktion is not able to describe concrete images of reality.

Source: B. Zhghenti, "Georgian Writing after the Historical Congress", Newspaper Musha, 1936, №41, p. 2-4.

1936

February 20

During the day, he measures the temperature and records the data in the notebook. At 5-6 in the afternoon - 37.5; at 8-9 in the evening - 37.

Source: MGL, d-101; 33; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 349.

1936

February 21

During the day, he measures the temperature and records the data in the notebook. In the morning - 37; at 5-6 o'clock - 37.3.

Source: MGL, d-101; 33; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 349.

1936

February 22 or later

In the notebook, he writes notes about Beso Zhghenti's letter - "Georgian writing after the historical congress". He does not agree with the critic in his assessment of the work of Paolo Iashvili and Simon Chikovani. He believes that it is not correct to claim that Paolo Iashvili was distinguished from other decadents by more realism, lack of mysticism, bright colours, and that is why it was easy for him to transform creatively, to assimilate revolutionary themes. On the contrary, Galaktion thinks that Georgian poetry "began to stink" under the leadership of Paolo Iashvili, and its entire past is a struggle with realists. Iashvili is an expression of morbid scepticism and mysticism. "Elene Dariani's pornography" is also unacceptable for Galaktion.

Source: MGL, d-99; 5-6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 316.

Dating: Beso Zhghenti's letter was printed in the February 22, 1936 issue of the newspaper Musha. Galaktion's entry should also be made on or after this day.

1936

February 23

He sends Alexandre Abasheli, along with a short letter, the Russian translation of the poem "Who Said?" ("The stone is thrown below, and Gunda...") and grants permission to shorten it as he sees fit for publication in the newspaper. He writes that he trusts his professionalism but adds that lately, he has been signing his poems only with the name "Galaktion" and thinks it would be good to establish this principle in the Russian translations as well.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 23737; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 85-86;

1936

Until February 25

He writes a poem titled “Great, People’s!”

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1078; №5569; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 152.

Note: The poem is also found in sources without a title.

1936

February 25

The poem “Great, People’s!” is published in the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1936, №1, February 25, p. 3.

1936

February 25

Translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Who Said? (“He threw down a stone and a clod...”) is published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka.

Source: Я славлю новь (Стихотворение) Галактион Табидзе, Заря Востока, 1936. февраля, №46, с.7.

1936

February 25

On the balcony of his house, he finds a piece of paper with the word “happiness” written in Russian. This fact makes him ponder what happiness truly is. According to Galaktion, mere contentment with what exists is not happiness. A person must always strive forward, towards new achievements. Happiness is the tranquillity earned through labour, spiritual balance, hope, and faith in the future.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-637, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 444-445.

1936

February 29

A brief letter is brought to him from Irakli Abashidze. It states that for the second issue of Mnatobi, they need the poem Galaktion wrote on the 15th anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution. He asks that the bearer of the letter either be given the poem or that Galaktion personally deliver it in the evening.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-451; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 273.

Note: It is likely referring to the poem “Poem for the Renewed Country”, which was indeed published in the second issue of Mnatobi.

1936

February

Georgy Kreytan’s translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Happy Holiday” is published in the Russian magazine Na Rubezhe Vostoka.

Source: Радостный праздник (Стихотворение) Галактион Табидзе, Перевел с грузинского Г. Крейтан, На рубеже Востока, 1936, февраля. №5, с.2.

1936

February

The poem “Mass - Stalin is powerful and Stalin is a mass” is published in the newspaper Komunisti.

Source: G. Tabidze, “Mass - Stalin is powerful and Stalin is a mass”, Komunisti, 1936, №46, p. 8.

1936

February

An article by Akaki Tatarishvili “Georgian Soviet Literature” is published in the magazine Mnatobi. The critic discusses contemporary writers and, along with other authors’ works, reviews Galaktion’s creations as well. He argues that Galaktion Tabidze’s work is a clear example of the ideological and creative transformation of an artist from the pre-revolutionary intellectual class. He also expresses the opinion that during the years of the proletarian revolution, the poet overcame mysticism, which had previously characterized his work, and became the singer of a renewed Georgia.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1936, №2, February, p. 47.

1936

February

“A Poem about a Renewed Country” is published in the magazine Mnatobi.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1936, №2, February, p. 69-70.

Note: The extended version of the poem later split into separate poems: “Homeland”, “Memories of the Native Land”, and “Thoughts on the Homeland”.

1936

February

In the magazine Mnatobi, an article by Akaki Tatarashvili titled “Georgian Soviet Literature” is published. It states that the creative work of Galaktion Tabidze is a clear example of the ideological and creative transformation of the best representatives of the pre-revolutionary artistic intelligentsia. During the years of the proletarian revolution, he decisively overcame mysticism and decadent moods, becoming “the true inspired singer of the renewed Georgia”.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1936, №2, February, p. 69-70.

March

1936

March 6

He writes the list of bridges in Tbilisi in the notebook.

Source: MGL, d-99; 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 317.

1936

March 7

In the notebook, he makes a note about Dutu Megreli, who diligently reads the newspaper Izvestia in the hospital queue.

Source: MGL, d-99; 8-9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 317.

1936

March 12 or later

He makes a note in his diary about the second issue of Literaturuli Sakartvelo. He considers the letter of the head of the newspaper a threat to the writers. Galaktion briefly evaluates the letters of Ali Arsenishvili, Ilo Mosashvili, Akaki Gatsrelia, Davit Demetradze, Levan Asatiani, and Alexander Abasheli's poem. He thinks that, in general, it is a dry newspaper. He aims to somehow interfere with the work of the newspaper and influence the editorial policy. He intends to carefully follow the critical publications of Literaturuli Sakartvelo, because he expects that the pages of the newspaper will be devoted to the praise of "Tsisperkantselis".

Source: MGL, d-101, p. 24-27; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 343-344;

1936

March 22

He works to prepare the materials for the first volume of his works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-103; 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 350.

Note: The first volume of essays was released late, in 1937.

1936

March 22

He is awarded with the Order of Lenin.

Source: "Awarding of Georgia's Prominent Individuals", Komunisti, 1936, №63 (4527), p. 1.

1936

After March 22

He sends a brief note to the People's Commissariat of Light Industry requesting the allocation of material for a coat, suit, and shoes.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-250; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 136;

1936

After March 22

He sends a brief note to the State Trade Commissariat requesting the allocation of material for a winter coat and suit.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-241; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 136;

1936

March 23

In the newspaper Komunisti, an information notice is published under the title “Awarding of advanced people of Georgia”, in which the People’s Poet of the Republic of Georgia Galaktion Tabidze is on the list of those awarded with the Order of Lenin according to the decree of March 22, 1936.

Source: “Awarding of Georgia’s Prominent Individuals”, Komunisti, 1936, №63 (4527), p. 1.

1936

March 23

The newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes a notice about the awarding of orders to Georgian workers, coal miners, engineers, agronomists, creative intelligentsia and party workers. It is noted that the People’s Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze, was awarded the Order of Lenin.

Source: “Заря Востока”, 1936, №68, p. 1.

1936

March 27

He writes in the notebook how the poems should be distributed and the pages numbered in the first volume of the works.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-103; 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 350-351.

1936

March 28

He completes the collection of materials for the first volume of works. He writes in the notebook that it is necessary to arrange the material according to the titles and rubrics of the poems, number them, compile and correct the table of contents of the book. The volume should be ready for submission to the publishing house by March 31.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-103; 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 351.

1936

March 28 or later

He continues to organize the materials for the first volume of works. He writes that it is necessary to erase the dates in some places and that the whole Book will have a total date of 1908-1916. He thinks about removing nationalist and religious elements (angels, churches) from the poems.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-103; 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 351.

Dating: The entry directly follows the March 28, 1936 entry on the same subject.

1936

After March 28

He writes a poem “Bridge of Chelyuskin”.

Source: MGL, d-103; 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 352.

Note: The text is a variant of the untitled poem “As a warrior pledges his sword...”.

1936

After March 28

He writes a poem “Constitution”.

Source: MGL, d-103; 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 352.

1936

After March 28

He writes a poem “When everyone has something to remember”.

Source: MGL, d-103; 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 352-353.

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem “My song...”.

1936

March 28

The newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo publishes Panteleimon Chkhikvadze’s article “Against Delusion and Naturalistic Swamp”, in which he criticizes formalism and crude naturalism and, with other quotes, criticizes Galaktion Tabidze’s stanza from the poem “Epoch”: “The past was covered separately by / The smell of black ravens and decay / Only good hum, hum of work / Has been refreshed and alive again”. On the first page of the same newspaper, an editorial letter “Stress of self-criticism” is printed, in which Panteleimon Chkhikvadze is criticized for his lack of self-criticism and the fact that he does not dare to name the authors of the lines criticized by him in the letter published in the same issue of the newspaper is negatively evaluated.

Source: “Against Delirium and the Naturalistic Swamp”, Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1936, №3, p. 2.

1936

March 28

In the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo an editorial letter “To Comrade Lavrenti Beria!”, in which gratitude is expressed for the fact that the members of the collective of this newspaper, the best writers: Galaktion Tabidze, Paolo Iashvili, Mikheil Javakhishvili and Alio Mashashvili are among the recipients of the Order of Lenin and the Red Banner of Labour.

Source: “To Comrade Lavrenti Beria!”, Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1936, №3, p. 1.

1936

March 28

In the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo the appeal of the Soviet writers of Georgia is published under the title “Orderly writers” (to the People’s Poet of the Republic Galaktion Tabidze, Paolo Iashvili, Mikheil Javakhishvili, Alio Mashashvili).

Source: “Orderly writers”, Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1936, №3, p. 1.

1936

March 28

In the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo on behalf of the Secretariat of the Board of the Union of Writers of the Soviet Union, the appeal of Alexander Shcherbakov and Vladimir Stavsky to the order-bearer writers: Galaktion Tabidze, Paolo Iashvili, Mikheil Javakhishvili and Alio

Mashashvili is published, under the title “We are looking forward to new creative achievements from you”.

Source: “We are looking forward to new creative achievements from you”, Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1936, №3, p. 1.

1936

March 30 or later

In his notebook, he makes an extract from a Russian newspaper about Roger de Lille, the author of “Marseilles”, who died 100 years ago on June 26, and on this day, in his honour, all French orchestras will play this hymn simultaneously.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-96, 59; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 120.

Dating: The article was printed in the newspaper Pravda on March 30, 1936.

1936

March 31

In the meeting hall of the Palace of Writers, he attends the opening of a discussion dedicated to the fight against formalistic and naturalistic distortions in Georgian Soviet literature, at which Akaki Tatarishvili, the chairman of the Union of Writers, addresses him as a public poet.

Source: Discussion Diary, Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1936, № 4 (April 20) p. 1.

1936

March 31

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes the translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Revolutionary Georgia” by Boris Serebryakov.

Source: Революционная Грузия (Стихотворение) Галактион Табидзе / Борис Серебряков, Заря Востока, 1936, март, №75, с.1.

1936

March

In the magazine Mnatobi, an article by Davit Demetradze titled “On Formalism and Naturalism in Georgian Soviet Literature” is published, with one section dedicated to the achievements of Georgian literature. Among the authors whom the critic considers of great significance for contemporary literature, Galaktion Tabidze is named.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1936, №3, February, p. 137.

April

1936

March 31 - April 1

He hurts the leg.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 163, 164.

Dating: On March 31, 1936, he attended a meeting in the Palace of Writers, and on April 1, he started treatment.

1936

April 1

He starts treatment at the Institute of Physiotherapy in Tbilisi.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1936

April 1

He measures the temperature in the evening. The thermometer shows 37 degrees.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1936

April 1

He gives 30 roubles to his wife, Olya Okujava.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 36; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 366.

1936

After April 1

In his notebook, He writes a poem "A drinking companion is making noise...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 43; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 368.

1936

After April 1

He writes in his notebook: "I have lost weight and look like a locust".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 43; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 368.

1936

After April 1

In his notebook, he writes the riddles told him by Venera Dolidze, a patient of the hospital.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 29; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 369.

1936

After April 1

In his notebook he writes the addresses and phone numbers of the hospital patients - Venera Dolidze and Pavle Chakhnashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 379.

1936

After April 1

In the notebook, he writes the phrase: "The decade of the Paris Congress, i.e. the decade of foreign contemporary writing" and lists several Georgian and Russian writers, in particular: Leo Kiacheli, Giorgi Nadiradze, Valerian Gaprindashvili, Vaso Gorgadze, Ali Arsenishvili, Konstantine Chichinadze and Pavel Petrenko.

Source: MGL, d-104; 59; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 357;

1936

After April 1

In the diary, he writes the list of patients he has met in the hospital.

Source: MGL, d-104; 61; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 359;

1936

After April 1

He writes in his notebook that, in general, women have the talent to behave gracefully, they can eat breakfast with painted lips, drink tea and eat sweets, bathe with curled hair, etc. Eating with painted lips gives the illusion of eating a little, when in fact sometimes they eat the entire turkey.

Source: MGL, d-104; 62; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 359;

1936

After April 1

In his notebook, he makes a note that drinking wine first sweetens a person's character and then pushes him to quarrels and arguments. Especially big quarrels follow the drinking of wine in the villages.

Source: MGL, d-104; 63; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 360;

1936

After April 1

He writes a poem "Andre Malraux".

Source: MGL, d-104; 57; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 357;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem "Look".

1936

After April 1

He writes conflicting thoughts about the city of Sevastopol in his notebook.

Source: MGL, d-104; 58; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 357;

1936

After April 1

After taking his blood pressure, the doctor tells him that everything is fine, and after one month of treatment, his heart will be ninety-nine percent healed. Galaktion jokingly asks what will happen to the remaining one percent.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 354;

1936

After April 1

He is undergoing an ion treatment procedure at the Institute of Physiotherapy.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1936April 2

He starts taking water baths at the physiotherapy institute and feels the positive effect of the procedures on the body. The nerves calm down and the pain in the leg is relieved.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1936April 2

He has a heart problem, he is hospitalized, blood tests are taken, and he is prescribed baths from 9 to 11 o'clock.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 85; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 123.

1936April 2

He writes the story of Dr. Turiashvili in the notebook. He raped a deaf-mute nun of the Bodbe monastery, whom he was invited to heal. The criminal was sentenced to four years of hard labour, and then two years were forgiven, and he continued to live in Tbilisi.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 71; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 123-124.

1936April 2

He measures temperature in the morning and evening. In the morning, the thermometer shows 36.6 degrees, in the evening - 37.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1936April 3

He measures temperature in the morning and evening. In the morning, the thermometer shows 36.7 degrees, in the evening - 37.2 degrees.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1936April 3

He weighs. The scale shows 83 kilograms.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 354.

1936April 3

He weighs 83.5 kilos.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 85; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 124.

1936

April 4

He measures temperature in the morning and evening. In the morning, the thermometer shows 36.6 degrees, in the evening - 37.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1936

April 5

Sandro Shanshiashvili criticizes Galaktion's work in the last period of the discussion dedicated to the fight against formalistic and naturalistic distortions in Georgian Soviet literature held at the Union of Writers.

Source: Discussion diary, Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1936, № 4 (April 20) p. 1; Ak. Tatarishvili, "For the Transformation of the Work of Literary Organizations", Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1936, № 5 (April 28) p. 3.

1936

April 5

He writes the plot of his work in his notebook. The young man does not study well in gymnasium. He loves four-stringed lute, the aged lutenist gives him the lute. Time passes. The boy graduates from the university, becomes a doctor, takes the lute with him and enjoys it on breaks. When he turns 60 years old, someone touches him from behind while walking down the street. The stranger turns out to be a 100-year-old lutenist who made a lute for him. The lutenist takes him to his family and introduces everyone.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 117.

1936

April 5

In his notebook, he writes the plot of the work. Two seminarians graduate from the school and go to the Exarch to ask for priesthood. The Exarch says that he will ordain the priest who will arrive earlier in the morning. One seminarian, who lives further away, hides under the Exarch's bed to appear early in the morning. At night, a nun comes to the Exarch and the seminarian witnesses their intimate relationship.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 23; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 117.

1936

April 5

He measures temperature in the morning and evening. In the morning, the thermometer shows 36.6 degrees, in the evening - 37.2 degrees.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1936

April 5

He gives 250 roubles from his pension to his wife, Olya Okujava.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 36; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 366.

1936

April 5

He starts treatment with massages at the Institute of Physiotherapy. They rub his feet. The pains subside, the leg heals. However, it is difficult to bend the ankle to the left, and the toes also hurt when bending, and he feels pain in the shin when palpated. He cannot go down the stairs normally.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1936

After April 5

He writes an untitled poem dedicated to Sandro Shanshiashvili: "He wrote to me, brother, Galaktion...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 117; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 275-277;

1936

April 6

He gives 280 roubles to his wife, Olya Okujava.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 36; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 366.

1936

April 6

He measures temperature in the morning and evening. In the morning, the thermometer shows 36.2 degrees, in the evening - 36.3 degrees.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1936

April 6

The old hatmaker Ioseb Chachanidze tells how he and his friends used to joke about Alexandrov's garden, when they were partying in the tavern, saying that the garden is more of a depraved place.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 41. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 103.

1936

April 7

The old hatmaker Ioseb Chachanidze tells how he and his friends used to joke about Alexandrov's garden, when they were partying in the tavern, saying that the garden is more of a depraved place.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1936

April 8

He measures temperature in the morning and evening. In the morning, the thermometer shows 36.5 degrees, in the evening - 37.9 degrees.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1936

April 8

Sandro Shanshiashvili's speech at the meeting of the Writers' Union criticizing Galaktion Tabidze is published in the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti.

Source: Discussion: The meetings of the Writers' Union on April 3 and 5, Akhalgazrda Komunisti, April 8, 1936, №81, p. 2.

1936

April 9

He weighs 85.2 kilos.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 85; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 124.

1936

April 9

He measures temperature in the morning and evening. In the morning, the thermometer shows 36.7 degrees, in the evening - 37.2 degrees.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1936

After April 9

He receives a letter from his brother, Abesalom Tabidze. He mentions the debate between naturalism and formalism and thinks that it will probably be over by now. He writes that he recently read Sandro Shanshiashvili's speech against Galaktion. He thinks that the reason for this is the envy caused by his awarding with the Order of Lenin, which made him oppose many others.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, h-24551-323; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 164, 165;

1936

April 10

He gives 100 roubles, which he received as the royalties from the publishing house Zarya Vostoka, to his wife, Olya Okujava.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 36; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 366.

1936

April 10

He measures the temperature in the morning and evening, the thermometer shows 36.6 degrees in the morning, 37.1 degrees in the evening.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1936

April 10

He weighs 84,4 kilos.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 85; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 124.

1936

April 10

He writes a poem "On foot to glory".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 67; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 110.

1936

April 11

He measures temperature in the morning and evening. In the morning, the thermometer shows 36.6 degrees, in the evening - 36.6.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1936

April 12

He measures temperature in the morning and evening. In the morning, the thermometer shows 36.7 degrees, in the evening - 37.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1936

April 13

He measures the temperature in the morning and evening, the thermometer shows 36.9 degrees in the morning, 37.3 degrees in the evening.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1936

April 14

In the Institute of Physiotherapy, Galaktion starts to receive injections.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1936

April 14

He measures temperature in the morning and evening. In the morning, the thermometer shows 36.7 degrees, in the evening - 37.1 degrees.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1936

April 14

He completes the reading of the Book “Marquis de Sade” by Henri Almeras.

Source: MGL, d-104; 63; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 360.

1936

April 14 or later

He writes in his notebook that being tired from work, he wished many times that he would have a fever and lay down in bed for a long time.

Source: MGL, d-104; 63; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 360;

1936

April 14 or later

He writes in his notebook that the rouble has devalued a lot. One rouble is spent like three or four kopecks.

Source: MGL, d-104; 63; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 360;

1936

April 14 or later

He writes in his notebook that Vasil Kapanadze is sick with myocarditis.

Source: MGL, d-104; 64; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 360;

1936

April 14 or later

He writes in his notebook that he often drinks vodka with a teacup.

Source: MGL, d-104; 64; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 360;

1936

April 15

He measures temperature in the morning and evening. In the morning, the thermometer shows 36.6 degrees, in the evening - 37.2 degrees.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-104; 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1936

April 16

In the concluding speech of the discussion dedicated to the fight against formalistic and naturalistic distortions in the Georgian Soviet literature held at the Union of Writers, Akaki Tatarishvili, the head of the Writers’ Union, criticizes Sandro Shanshiashvili for his wrong assessment of Galaktion Tabidze’s work.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1936, № 4 (April 20) p. 1; newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1936, № 5 (April 28) p. 3.

1936

April 16

In the morning, he measures the temperature, the thermometer shows 36 degrees.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1936

April 17

In his diary, he writes an anecdote told by hospital patient Pavle Chakhnashvili: an Armenian baptized a son of a village peasant. After that day, the Armenian visited the peasant's family from the city every week, where they welcomed him cordially and gave victuals on his way back to the city as well. The Armenian told the peasant, if you get to the city, don't forget to see me. Once a peasant came to the city to buy blue vitriol and accidentally met an Armenian who invited him to his home. A small bottle of wine and some meat were brought to the table. The Armenian toasted the peasant's wife, children and relatives in one glass. Then he turned to his wife and said: "Kape" (clear the table). The peasant did not show displeasure when leaving, but again invited the Armenian to the village with his son. After a week the Armenian visited the peasant. The latter set the table when it was already past dinner time. The Armenian was not given a knife and could not eat anything. After a while, the farmer said to his wife: "Kape" (clear the table). The Armenian was disappointed: "I am hungry, what is the matter?", to which the peasant replied: You damned, where did you get it: "Kape" (clear the table) at your place and "Klape" (swallow) at mine.

Source: MGL, d-104; 53-56; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 355-356.

1936

April 17

He writes anecdotes told by the hospital patient Shavleishvili in his diary: one man was cracking nuts. Another one passed by and called: You have a boy. Dizzy with joy, the peasant let the stick go of his hand, untied the waist belt and reached out to kiss penis: My dear, if it wasn't for you, I wouldn't have a son. Meanwhile, he almost fell off the nut tree. Another farmer had a plough and was ploughing when he received happy news about having a son. The peasant decided to present an ox to the herald, when the latter expressed his dissatisfaction with the small present the peasant replied that news were that shocking since he knew that he would have either a boy or a girl.

Source: MGL, d-104; 59; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 358.

1936

April 17

In the diary, he writes the saying of the hospital patient Shavleishvili about Nikoloz the Second, that what the goat had done to the tanner's sumach, the tanner's sumach has done to the goat. What Nikoloz did to the people, the people did to Nikoloz.

Source: MGL, d-104; 60; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 358.

1936

April 18

He weighs 83,8 kilos.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 85; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 124.

1936

April 19

In his diary, he writes the story told by the patient, Venera Dolidze, about some Aliya Chechelashvili and her mother. It turns out that Aliya lived on Mtatsminda. Once she fell ill and her mother came to visit her from the village. When she cured her child, Aliya's mother decided to return to the village. Her daughter apologized that she could not see her off to the station. Mother reassured her that she would find her way on her own, but she returned soon after leaving the house because she was afraid of getting lost in the city. She compared Tbilisi to the upside down heaven, where it is difficult to orientate.

Source: MGL, d-104; 46; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 360-361;

1936

April 19

He writes in his diary the story narrated by the patient Tina Chachibaia about her 105-year-old grandmother cured her by making her drink her own little child's urine.

Source: MGL, d-104; 47; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 361.

1936

April 19

He writes in the diary how the patient Tina Chachibaia has told fortunes to several sick people with cards and predicted the future, namely, for Maro Zambakhidze - the death of a relative, for Venera Dolidze - the loss of a valuable thing, for Pavle Chakhnashvili - betrayal by his friends and how everything has proved true.

Source: MGL, d-104; 48; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 361.

1936

April 19

He writes in the diary how the patient Venera Dolidze was named Verana in the village, because she could not show her adroitness in the affairs of the village.

Source: MGL, d-104; 49; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 362.

1936

April 19

In his diary, he mentions how one of the old patients calls the doctors charlatans, because instead of healing a sore leg, they are satisfied with poking a stick in the armpit (to measure temperature).

Source: MGL, d-104; 50; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 362;

1936

April 19

In the massage room, he hears and writes in his diary the story of one of the patients about the protest movement of the peasants started in Chiatura in 1930-31, which was led by a graduate of the theological academy, named Makhatadze, who called the villagers to come out armed. In the early days of collectivization, the peasants favoured him. Priests were also involved in the case and the rebellion grew into an anti-communist movement. The story reached the ears of Stalin, who was resting in Tskaltubo at that time. Due to public unrest, Mikheil Kakhiani was removed from his position and transferred to another place. When the government army arrived in Chiatura, the people reconciled with the government, many were shot, and Makhatadze managed to escape abroad.

Source: MGL, d-104; 51-52. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 363.

1936

April 20

He writes in the diary the patient Venera Dolidze's story how Alyia Chechelashvili met a man in the institution who spoke to her in Russian. Alia answered in broken Russian. The stranger didn't let Alyia go, he made her speak in Russian for two whole hours. Suddenly, Aliya interlocutor was asked to speak on the phone, where he started speaking in Georgian. Hearing this, Alia scolded the man: "if you were Georgian, why were you talking to me in Russian?", to which the interlocutor replied, "How would I know if you were Georgian?" Alyia got angry, you damned man, what was there to understand? Even the walls started to shake hearing my Russian.

Source: MGL, d-104; 44; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 364; 1936

April 20

He writes in the diary the patient Venera Dolidze's story of how they served Alyia Chechelashvili a "Napoleon" cake in the pastry shop. She didn't like it and when she was leaving, she told them: "if I come the second time, please treat me with "Kutuzov" cake.

Source: MGL, d-104; 45; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 364; 1936

April 20

A meeting of the defence literature section is held in the Union of Writers of Georgia, where Galaktion is elected as a member of the section.

Source: Defence Literature, Newspaper Musha, 1936, №95 (April 24), p. 3.

1936

April 21

He weighs 84,8 kilos.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 85; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 124.

1936

April 22

He writes an untitled poem “Days change days, minutes change minutes...”.

Source: MGL, d-104; 37; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 364-365.

1936

April 23

He writes in the diary Dr. Gabriel Gokieli’s story about charlatan doctors. A young doctor took a lamp and x-ray pictures to the region. He directed a lamp on the sick, then showed them X-ray pictures and “cured” the diseases. With this activity, he has earned a lot of money. The second doctor worked in the prison hospital. One criminal was facing death sentence, his relatives in Moscow organized a case to change the sentence, which took a month. It was necessary to somehow postpone the verdict for a month. The doctor promised help to the prisoner’s relatives in exchange for 20,000 roubles. The money was paid. The doctor diagnosed the criminal with typhoid fever, took him to the hospital and thus saved him. After the case was revealed, the doctor was arrested. From the prison, he asked the relatives of the patient he saved to say that the prison supervisor took half of the money.

Source: MGL, d-104; 31; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 365;

1936

April 23

He writes in the diary the patient Venera Dolidze’s story: One man from Guria invited a Megrelian to dinner. When the latter arrived, he saw a dog tied with a rope in the yard and boldly continued his way towards the house, but the dog got angry, tore the rope and ran towards the Megrelian. The latter reached for the stone but could not remove it from the ground and bitterly called out: Gurulo, may God shame you! What’s wrong with you, you let the dog free and tied the stone to the ground!

Source: MGL, d-104; 32; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 366.

1936

April 23

In the diary, he notes the theme of the poem: two pens - a goose-wing pen and an automatic pen.

Source: MGL, d-104; 33; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 366.

1936

April 23

He writes down the address of the patient Shavleishvili in the diary.

Source: MGL, d-104; 34; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 366.

1936

April 23

He writes down in his diary how many roubles he gave to Olya Okujava in the month of April.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-104; 36; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 366.

1936

April 23

He writes in the diary that now his fun is like a ring removed from a barrel. When you roll it, it sways like a drunk, sometimes it falls, sometimes it gets up, and finally it can't get up anymore and it lies like a dead man.

Source: MGL, d-104; 38; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 367.

1936

April 23

He writes down the dialogue he heard in the hospital bathroom in his diary. One interlocutor complains to another, I haven't heard anything about dialectical materialism, to which the interlocutor replies, all this is probably the fault of the inexperienced teacher.

Source: MGL, d-104; 40; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 367.

1936

April 24

Hospital patient Gigo Savaneli teaches him how to tumble with cards.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 28; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 369.

1936

April 24

A notice is published in the newspaper Musha that on April 20, a meeting of the defence literature section of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia was held, which made certain changes in the composition of the section with Platon Mirotadze, Archil Chachibaia, Alio Mashashvili, Galaktion Tabidze, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Vasil Gorgadze and Aleksandre Gomiashvili.

Source: Defence Literature, Newspaper Musha, 1936, №95 (April 24), p. 3.

1936

April 25

Olya Okujava receives 200 roubles, Galaktion's royalty, from the state publishing house, and leaves 20 roubles to the poet at the hospital.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 35; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 366.

1936

April 25

He makes notes in his diary about the patient who is with him in the hospital, hatmaker Ioseb Chachanidze, who always smokes hookah and thus disturbs the other patients. He remembers that one day he got a matchstick stuck in his pipe and everyone thought that they would get a break from the smoke, but the patient Gigo Savaneli cleaned the pipe of the hatmaker and the latter continued to smoke. When Chachanidze's tooth ached, he found a thread, tied it to the tooth and pulled it out, adding that before there were no dentists anywhere and people used to pull their teeth by themselves. Patient Shakro Shavlshvili compares Ioseb Chachanidze, walking proudly on the balcony, to a colonel. The old hatmaker recalls the stories of his youth, how uninhabited those areas of Tbilisi were, which are now developed. He loves wine and giggles. When they advise him to have fun with women, he replies that this piece of advice is close to wisdom.

Source: MGL, d-104; 25-26; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 370-371.

1936

April 25

In the diary, he writes down the dialogue heard in the hospital. One patient asks the other what his profession is. When he learns that he cultivates a vineyard, he is interested whether the latter is from Kakheti and he guesses the answer correctly.

Source: MGL, d-104; 27; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 370-371.

1936

April 25

Her is angry at Sergo Kldiashvili, who criticizes the “Surami castle”. Galaktion believes that there are places written with such expressions in “Surami castle” that Kldiashvili would not even dream of such.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-104; 27; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 371.

1936

April 25

In the diary, he writes down the phrase “Well, then you should see me” and adds a comment that in general there are strong passages in the poems of the nineteenth century, which can be used as masterpieces for prose.

Source: MGL, d-104; 27; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 371.

Note: It may refer to the phrase from “Mukhammas” by Grigol Orbeliani: “Well, let you see me who I am in the fist-fight!”

1936

April 25

It is mentioned in the diary that a 130-year-old man lived on the slopes of Vera. When they came to see him, they found him repairing the roof of the house. He writes down the topic - “Centenarians I have met”.

Source: MGL, d-104; 27; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 370-371.

1936

April 26

In his diary, he writes down an anecdote told by a hospital patient: an Armenian broke into a Georgian’s house, and when he saw that the head of the family was not at home, he raped his wife. The Georgian decided to take revenge. He took wood to sell in the city and stopped at this Armenian's house. When the Armenian looked and asked the price of the firewood, the Georgian replied: I am not selling it for money, I am selling it for a woman. Whoever spends the night with me will have firewood, a cart and oxen for that woman. An Armenian convinced his wife to sleep with a Georgian. After that, the Georgian made a noise, this woman infected me with the disease. The frightened Armenian returned everything to the Georgian and gave him an additional one hundred roubles, so that this story was kept secret, and he would not be ashamed.

Source: MGL, d-104; 27; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 370-371.

1936

April 26

In the diary, he writes a story told by one of the Gurian patients of the hospital about Mikitani and his three brothers. One of the brothers stayed in Mikitani's shop for the night during his stay in the city. Mikitani bet with him on one hundred roubles that the latter will have diarrhoea tonight and will defile everything. And so it happened, and Mikitani won the bet. In the same way, the other brother also lost one hundred roubles to Mikitan. The third brother decided to take revenge and bet with Mikitani on six hundred roubles. In the middle of the night, when the terrible stomach pain started. He got up and relieved himself in Mikitani's boots and the jug in the room. He took Mikitani's money, mounted his horse, and set out on his way, only to find that the whip remained and returned to the shop. There he raped Mikitani's wife, took a whip and left. Mikitani, embittered, decided to chase him, but stuck his foot in a dirty boot, and when he decided to wash, instead of water, the same dirt was found in the jug. And Mikitani stayed with bitter thoughts.

Source: MGL, d-104; 15-16; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 372-373.

1936

April 26

In the diary, he writes a story told by one of the Gurian patients of the hospital about the brothers - Shaliko and Zaliko, who lived together and had young wives. Shaliko's wife made her husband kick Zaliko out of the house. They gave him one donkey and a hut on the edge of the forest. Zaliko went to sell a donkey to earn bread. The night fell when he was at the foot of a rock in the forest, he left the donkey there and returned home. He told his wife that he had sold the donkey, and the money would be given to him tomorrow. At night, the donkey was eaten by wolves. The embittered Zaliko hit the rock with a stone: "Rock, pay me the price of a donkey right now" and indeed gold fell out of the broken place. When Shaliko heard that his brother had found gold, he asked him to show where the rock was. Zaliko taught him. Shaliko left fattened oxen near the rock at night, which were eaten by wolves. Then Shaliko asked the rock to pay him the price of the oxen, but he got nothing. Angry, Shaliko wrapped his brother in a bag and took him away, Zaliko started screaming: the ruler's wife walks ahead, she asks me to marry her, but I refuse. Shaliko said: Well, I will jump into that bag, and he did so, there he was sitting for a long time. Meanwhile, Zaliko drove the shepherd's sheep. The brother wondered where he got so many sheep. He replied, when you threw me off the cliff, the sheep were there, and greedy Shaliko jumped off the cliff of his own accord.

Source: MGL, d-104; 17-18 AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 374.

1936

April 26

In the diary, he writes a story told by one of the patients of the hospital, Giorgi Beroshvili: a man had a wife and lived in poverty. His wife told him to go and earn money. The man diligently worked in the vineyards, saved money and when he earned a living for two people, he returned home. He got very hungry on the way. He saw an apple tree that bore three fruits, he climbed the tree, ate all three apples and had three nether regions stuck among the branches. When he got home, he complained to his wife. His wife reassured him that she would find out what to do with two of them. Giorgi Beroshvili stopped here, as if he had finished the story. A patient from Guria asked Giorgi what happened to the third, to which Giorgi Beroshvili replied, the third was given to you and started laughing.

Source: MGL, d-104; 19-20; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 374-375.

1936

April 26

In his diary, he writes a tale told by Giorgi Beroshvili, one of the patients of the hospital. The woman was married without love. When she could no longer see her true destiny, she played dead and sent her husband to a distant village, saying that only the bread of that village will help her. When the husband arrived at the named village, a man spoke to him and told him his story. The stranger told him that his wife cheats on him and she was probably now together with her lover. The peasant did not believe his words and told him that his wife was faithful to him. To find out the truth, they went to the village road. When they approached the farmer's house, the stranger made her husband get into a sack, approached the farmer's wife and asked for a place to stay for the night. The woman invited him home, where they met a stranger at the table. The woman sang playing the lute how her husband had gone to a distant village and how she longed for him not to return. Then the man accompanying her husband in a sack sang to the latter: "I told you yesterday, do you believe me now?" The husband rushed out of the sack, killed his wife and lover, and sat down at the table with the man accompanying him.

Source: MGL, d-104; 21-22; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 375-376.

1936

April 26

The masseuse lady at the hospital advises him to do light exercises and, in order not to be bothered by the pain in his leg, to wear shoes like Lenin used to wear - all leather down and rubber material only on the ankles.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 22; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 376.

1936

April 26

He learns that on April 25, the battle of the Abyssinians against the Italians in the Ogaden region ended in defeat.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 22; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 376.

Note: There are only two words in the diary: "Poor Abyssinians". Abyssinia is the ancient name of Ethiopia, and what this sympathy might have been connected with has been identified via research.

1936

April 26

He weighs. The scale shows 85.5 kilograms.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 354.

1936

April 26

He writes in his diary that Pavle Chakhnashvili, the former chairman of the Executive Committee of the Signaghi District, and currently an employee of the Union-Republican State Committee of the Georgian Wine Industry, was suddenly discharged home. He describes him as an interesting person who looks like a self-satisfied person, is witty, direct and a bit rude. He foretold to the elderly patients the soon departure to the next world and dipping in tar, and he talked to the women about their old age. He showed a cynical attitude towards everyone, did what he wanted and did not consider the interests of other patients. He got in a good mood when he was sent food. Hatmaker Ioseb Chachanidze critically assessed his work as the Chairman of the Executive Committee and said that earlier decent people ran away from positions, but now they are greedy.

Source: MGL, d-104; 23-24; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 377-378.

1936

April 27

He weighs 83,8 kilos.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 85; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 124.

1936

April 28

The newspapers Literaturuli Sakartvelo and Zarya Vostoka publish a transcript of the speech of Akaki Tatarishvili, the chairman of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia - "For the transformation of the work of literary organizations" - in which the discussion held in the Union of Writers against formalism and naturalism in literature is evaluated. The publication mentions that some writers have not properly understood the essence of the creative discussion, including Sandro Shanshiashvili, who tried to indiscriminately destroy the indisputable merits of the poetry of the people's poet Galaktion Tabidze. Akaki Tatarishvili points out that it is true that no Soviet writer's work, no matter how important his merits may be, cannot be placed above Bolshevik self-criticism, but Sandro Shanshiashvili's negative evaluation of Galaktion Tabidze's lyrics of the last period was undoubtedly wrong, which is diametrically opposed to the point of view of the proletarian society.

Source: А. Татаришвили, За перестройку работы литературных организаций, newspaper “Заря Востока”, 1936, № 99 (April 28) p. 3; “For the Transformation of the Work of Literary Organizations”, newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1936, № 5 (April 28) p. 3.

1936

April 28 or later

He writes in his notebook that the number of the issue of the newspaper Zarya Vostoka in which the shorthand record of Akaki Tatarishvili’s speech criticizing Sandro Shanshiashvili’s assessment of Galaktion’s poetry was published.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-105; 8; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 379.

1936

April 29

He is preparing to be discharged from the hospital of the Institute of Physiotherapy. He organizes documents. After two months, he plans to go to some resort. He feels that his heart condition has improved. He thinks of the possibility to relax together with his wife Olya Okujava in Tskaltubo.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-104; 8; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 378.

1936

April 29

Ivane Koniashvili, the director of the Institute of Physiotherapy, advises him to go to New Athos or Gagra for vacation.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-104; 8; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 378;

1936

April 30

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes Boris Serebryakov’s translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Great Folk!”

Source: Великое народное (Стихотворение) Галактион Табидзе, Пер. Б. Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1936, Апрель, №101, с.3.

1936

April 30

He finishes reading Nikolai Ostrovsky’s novel – “How the steel was tempered” – and thinks that it is a necessary book.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-104; 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 354.

1936

April 30

He writes in his notebook the story of the head of the Avchala Children's Colony: the latter had a huge pimple on his neck for a long time, which the doctors couldn't do anything about, and one morning it miraculously disappeared by itself.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 354.

1936

April 30

He is interested whether the composer Giorgi Svanidze can write melodies to his texts and notes in his diary that Svanidze intends to publish his symphony in the summer.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-104; 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 355.

1936

April

He writes in his notebook that we should look at the hands and not into the eyes of "Tsisperkantselis".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 31; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 118;

1936

April

Eremia Astvatsaturov publishes a review of the second volume of Galaktion Tabidze's works - "New Book of Galaktion Tabidze's Poems ("Writings", volume two. State Publishing House)" in the magazine Mnatobi. According to the critic, this Book is proof that the author is "the best and most talented poet of the Soviet era". The reviewer reviews his themes, discusses the revolution, industrialization, class struggle, the reflection of the new man in Galaktion's poetry, and repeats the point of view established in Soviet criticism about the two periods of Galaktion's work. The article mentions that Galaktion was not attracted to the bogus "socialism" of the Mensheviks, and during this period he "became extremely passive, almost completely silent". At first, the poet perceived the revolution schematically, but from the first days of October, he completely recovered from hopelessness and was filled with new creative energy. From a poet of sadness and hopelessness, he transformed into a poet of struggle and joy. Revolutionary romanticism and socialist realism became his creative method. According to the critic, the poems "Epoch" and "Revolutionary Georgia" are proof of Galaktion's worldview maturity.

Source: Er. Astvatsaturov, "Galaktion Tabidze's New Book of Poems ("Works", Volume Two. Preface), magazine Mnatobi, 1936, №4, p. 147-159.

May

1936

After May 1

He writes in his notebook that Davit Kldiashvili is not a popular author in modern times, and someone even described him as a prince who had serfs.

Source: MGL, d-105; 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 380-383;

1936

Until May 7

He writes in his notebook to find out if there is a hotel in Tskaltubo and what the costs would be for spending two weeks at the resort. He plans to get a dental X-ray and also tell the doctor that he is bothered by a cough and shortness of breath.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-533, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 170;

1936

Until May 7

He plans to browse foreign literature in Russian editions at bookstores and also buy ink for his fountain pen.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-533, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 170;

1936

Until May 7

He intends to find out what meeting took place at the Writers' Union on April 23 and whether it is possible to review the stenographic report of the meeting.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-533, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 170;

1936

Until May 7

He plans to receive money from the Literary Repository and obtain a certificate for the medical commission, so he can go to a resort for treatment.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-533, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 170;

1936

Until May 7

He plans to subscribe to local and Russian newspapers for the month of June.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-533, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 171;

1936

Until May 7

He plans to buy tickets at Tbilisi station for traveling to Tskaltubo.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-533, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 171;

1936

Until May 7

He plans to publish an announcement about lost documents in the newspaper Musha.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-533, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 171;

1936

May 9 and following days

82-year-old hatmaker Ioseb Chachanidze talks with admiration about the old circus located on former Golovin Avenue in Tbilisi. He describes how foreign actors set up the eponymous pool in the middle of the stage for a water attraction, how women acrobats would make horses jump, and how pictures of fierce battles during the fall of the Paris Commune in 1871 were once hung on the walls of the circus's clapboard building. When Galaktion asks how people reacted to seeing these pictures, the hatmaker replies that they were very interested and paid a lot to see them, but then they found the pictures removed, probably on someone's orders.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 26-32. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 100-102.

Dating: The first notebook entry on the subject is dated May 9, 1936, but then the author notes that something needs to be clarified, after which the entry continues with the words "resurvey". In 1936, Galaktion was treated at the Institute of Physiotherapy, where he met the patient of the same hospital, the elderly Ioseb Chachanidze.

Note: This record from 1936 states that the mentioned pictures were hung on the walls of the circus located on Golovin (now Rustaveli) avenue 60-65 years ago. It is true that the Paris Commune existed actually 65 years earlier, in 1871, but the wooden circus building on Golovin avenue was built in 1899 according to historical sources. It is quite possible that the pictures of the battle scenes of 1871 were hung in this or the following years.

1936

May

He is in Tskaltubo.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-105; 8; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 382.

1936

May

In the notebook, he writes the outline of a telegram to be sent to Lida Gasviani, head of the State Publishing House. He asks the department to send 500 roubles to Tskaltubo.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-105; 8; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 382.

Dating: The outline of the letter is placed in the notebook, which contains the notes made during his stay in Tskaltubo in May 1936.

1936

May

An excerpt from Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Press" is published in the Russian magazine Na Rubezhe Vostoka.

Source: Пресса, Из поэмы Галактион Табидзе, На рубеже Востока, Тбилиси, 1936, Май, №12, с.2.

1936

May

He leaves the Marjanishvili theatre in a drunken state. Actors Shalva Gambashidze, Vaso Godziashvili, Sergo Zakariadze and Giorgi Shavgulidze follow him. He says goodbye to them and walks along Marjanishvili Avenue. He stops an unknown man on the street and kisses him. The passer-by does not recognize him and is surprised by his behaviour.

Source: B. Kevanishvili, Two Meetings with Galaktion, magazine Gantiadi, 1994, №3-4, p. 161.

1936

May

Together with Giorgi Kuchishvili, he visits the director of the economic school, Jaju Jorjikia, in Kutaisi. He is accompanied by Mamia Asatiani, Dia Chianeli, Kote Demetradze and Kutaisi City Committee Secretary Grigol Gabunia. After dinner, Giorgi Kuchishvili and Galaktion read poems, and then walk along the road to Rioni HPP gas station in Tchoma. Galaktion enthusiastically introduces the traveler to the sights of the area. Arriving at the Rioni HPP Dam, they continue their way to Tkibuli through the fields of Godogani and reach the ancient bridge of the Tskaltsitela River. Here they are met by Rioni HPP manager Vladimir Jikia and engineer Giorgi Mikeladze. At the channel, they suddenly encounter the actors: Ushangi Chkheidze, Shalva Gambashidze, Ivliita Jorjadze and Tedo Korsaveli, the head of the organizing committee of the district committee of the party. Gambashidze reads Galaktion's still unpublished poem "From Tskaltubo to Kutaisi" and then hugs the poet. Then, at the initiative of Jikia, they enter the dormitory of young people and meet the residents there. The reading of poems and novels begins without any formal introduction. Dia Chianelli starts first, then Jaju Jorjikia, and finally Giorgi Kuchishvili and Galaktion join in.

Source: M. Asatiani, Meeting, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 189-190;

1936 or earlier

Spring

At night, Olya Okujava writes a long letter, sharing her deep emotional struggles related to Galaktion's alcoholism and illness. She begs him to stop drinking and start treatment. She writes that Galaktion sees Olya as a cold, unfeeling person because she doesn't look into his soul.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-403; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 212-213.

Dating: The letter was written in the spring, before Olya's arrest.

June

1936

After June 1

He writes epigrams in Russian about Paolo Iashvili in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-106, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 387;

1936

After June 1

In his notebook, he makes records in Russian that if a Soviet writer intends to create something great, suitable for the era, he must be the best writer in the world, he must have a solid and clear perspective of creative work.

Source: MGL, d-106, 14; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 387;

1936

After June 1

The state intends to publish one Book of the laureates of the Order of Lenin in Russian. As Galaktion was promised in advance that his Book could be as large as possible, he is determined to compose a Book of five hundred pages. In order to include more material, he intends to combine two lines at a time in Nikolai Tikhonov's translations. He is thinking of making a column "Excerpts from earlier poems". He wants the collection to be opened with the poem "Who Said? ("He threw down a stone and a clod..."), but the title should not be "Я славлю новь" ("I praise new"), but only "НОВЬ" ("New"). In his opinion, a photo taken in the Kremlin, which the artists will improve, or a newly taken photo, can be used as a guide for the book. He believes that the books of all the holders of the Order of Lenin should be published now, but all the holders of the Order cannot be equalized due to the communist principle itself, which means that everyone should receive according to the work done. In his opinion, it is better to print the translations of Nikolai Tikhonov and Boris Brik, but he thinks that it is impossible to arrange the poems chronologically. It is not yet known who will publish the book, whether it will be autographed or not, when it will be released and what kind of royalties he will have.

Source: MGL, d-107, 4-5; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 388-389;

1936

After June 1

He writes in his notebook that the time has passed when you could ask how much to give and they would give you as much as you would like.

Source: MGL, d-107, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 389;

1936

After June 1

He writes an untitled poem "Ukimerioni Hill stood...".

Source: MGL, d-107, 8; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 389-390;

1936

After June 1

He writes a poem “The last feast”.

Source: MGL, d-107, 9; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 390;

1936

After June 1

He writes a poem “Sunrise”.

Source: MGL, d-107, 10; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 391;

1936

After June 1

He writes an untitled poem “The light flows down...”.

Source: MGL, d-107, 11; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 392;

1936

After June 1

He writes in his notebook the telephone number of Grigol Kalandarishvili, an employee of the scientific department of the Lenin Library.

Source: MGL, d-107, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 392;

1936

After June 1

He writes an untitled two-line poem “A man must have...”.

Source: MGL, d-107, 15; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 392;

1936

After June 1

In the notebook he writes a fable “the son of a miller”. It states that in order to calm people’s anger towards the deceased evil miller, his son imposed stricter demands on the peasants than his father.

Source: MGL, d-107, 17-19; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 393;

1936

After June 1

He writes an untitled poem “Memories are like mountain...”.

Source: MGL, d-107, 16; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 393;

1936

June 4 or later

Sergo Parebuzov reads the article of Armenian translator and critic Suren Avchian to him.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-106; 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 385;

Note: From the poet's note, it is not clear what the nature of Suren Avchian's article was, although it probably also referred to Galaktion.

1936

June 4 or later

He learns that Varlam Khurodze will read a report in the library named after Aleksandre Japaridze.

Source: MGL, d-106; 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 385;

1936

June 4 or later

He learns that those who make busts of writers are being fined.

Source: 8. MGL, d-106; 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 385;

1936

June 5

He writes a poem "Veterinary woman – with the name Venera".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 116;

1936

June 5

In his diary, he writes the text of a song he heard somewhere: "I prefer the rose to the violet, / and the wine of Aspeni to water. / To all poets, I prefer / Galaktion Tabidze".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-106, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 384.

1936

June 8

He notices Mikel Pataridze on Mikhailov (currently Davit Aghmashenebeli) avenue. He wants to pass him, but Pataridze stops him and talks to him. It is reported that the Russian translator and poet Panteleimon Petrenko jumped from the bridge of Chelyuskin (the current Tamar King) into Mtkvari and drowned. He was working on the translation of "The Knight in the Panther's Skin" and had only 600 lines left to translate. He wonders what could have driven the young man to commit suicide, sympathizes with Galaktion's mother and worries that no one else can translate the "The Knight in the Panther's Skin" like him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-106, 4-7; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 385-386.

Note: Mikel Pataridze and Panteleimon Petrenko are mentioned only by their last names in the record.

1936

June 9

He reads the obituary dedicated to the Russian translator Panteleimon Petrenko in the newspaper Zarya Vostoka.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-101, 8; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 386.

1936

Until June 19

He receives a letter from Lida Gasviani, the head of the editorial and publishing department of the State Publishing House. She writes that his first volume should have been published a long time ago, but due to the incomprehensibility of the material provided by Galaktion, it was not possible. She requests that the material for the volume be prepared, neatly transcribed, organized, and the pages numbered, and that it be submitted by June 19-20 in order to ensure its publication within the current year. Otherwise, there will be no honorarium.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-452-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 276-277.

1936

June 22

He receives a radiogram signed by K. Olin, sent from the Moscow Transcaucasian Representation, requesting him to arrive in Moscow on June 26. The telegram is sent late by the Writers' Union, causing him many problems. He is unable to make the trip by train in time and has to fly, which he does not want to do due to his weak heart.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 69-70; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 334.

1936

June 23

He prepares to go to Moscow, spending the whole day running around, buying an airplane ticket, and collecting his honorarium from the Literary Fund.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 71-72; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 334.

1936

June 23

He receives a brief letter from Lev Demidov. He writes that he wanted to visit him as an older brother, but he doubted whether he would understand his struggles. He sends a poem dedicated to Maxim Gorky, which he has not yet read to anyone. He confesses that he is very proud and, therefore, will not trouble anyone further, and will walk to Tbilisi on foot.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-451-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 273-274.

Note: We could not find additional information about Lev Demidov.

1936

June 24

At 4 a.m., a car arrives to pick him up. Along with other passengers, he heads to the airport and flies to Moscow.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 73-74; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 335.

1936

June 24

Several poems from the Parisian cycle are published in the newspaper Komunisti: "100, 100 and Another 100 Poems", "On That Day", "André Gide and André Malraux", "André Malraux", "Writer in Disguise – at the Paris Congress", and "Henry Barbusse at the Congress".

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1936, №145, p. 3.

1936

June 26

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Henri Barbusse at the Congress".

Source: Анри Барбюс на конгрессе, (Стихотворение) Галактион Табидзе, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1936, Июнь, №147, с.2.

1936

June 27

In Moscow, at a session of the Central Executive Committee held in the Kremlin, he is presented with the Order of Lenin.

Source: Newspaper Pravda, June 28, 1936, №176, p. 2; Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 79-80, ; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 335.

1936

June

The Russian magazine Na Rubezhe Vostoka publishes translations by Valerian Gaprindashvili of an excerpt of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Hundreds of poems rocketed to the sky" and the poem "A Writer with make-up".

Source: Взвились к небу сотни песен (Стихотворение) Галактион Табидзе, Пер. с грузинского В. Гаприндашвили, Писатель в гриме (Стихотворение) Галактион Табидзе, Перевел с грузинского Георгий Крейтан, На рубеже Востока, Тбилиси, 1936, Июнь, №18, с.5.

1938

June

Levan Deisadze's article "World war problem in G. Tabidze's poetry" is published in the magazine Chveni Taoba. The author of the letter notes that the issue of the world war in the work of Galaktion Tabidze came up with particular severity after the October revolution, although even before that, "he was able to experience the horrors of the world war with semi-mystical glasses". The proof of this is the poem "The wind makes the Italian Christmas tree in Tripoli sway". According to the critic, in the poem "We, poets of Georgia" the poet indicates that the capitalists are preparing a new bloody war against humanity. Deisadze considers the exposure of imperialism to be one of the key themes of Galaktion's contemporary poetry. According to him, the poet is "trying to show us the mechanics of causing a world war". From this point of view, he examines the poetic cycle "Pacifism" and notes that Galaktion can depict the existence of fighters, the physical and spiritual pains associated with war. According to the author, Galaktion sometimes uses the manner of Nekrasov when depicting these images.

Source: L. Deisaze, "World war problem in G. Tabidze's poetry", magazine Chveni Taoba, 1938, №6 p. 38-52.

Note: The author's name is presented with the initial in the publication.

July

1936 or earlier

July 7

Olya Okujava waits at home until the evening, and then she leaves a note and goes to the tailor. She asks him not to go anywhere, to rest, and that she will arrive soon.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-405; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 214.

Dating: The letter is dated July 7 and was written before Olya Okujava's arrest.

1936

July 24

He listens to Beethoven's seventh symphony on the radio and writes down his emotions in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 45; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 119;

August

1936

August 11

Zarya Vostoka signs a contract with translator Dmitri Petrovsky for the translation of one thousand lines of Galaktion's poems by October 10. Benito Buachidze promises to deliver the manuscripts within 10 days, but a month passes, and the translator does not receive the materials.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-452-8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 278.

Dating: The date is specified in Dmitri Petrovsky's letter of September 5, 1936.

1936

August 27

He writes a poem titled "Labour and Rest".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №1444; 66-a., p. 1557; №5348; №6329; d-120, 7; №28897-50, p. 16; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 152.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles "Spring Rivers", "Elegy", and untitled (beginning with: "When the valleys hinder you..." and "And every moment...").

1936

August

Together with Akaki Tatarashvili and Dutu Megreli, he signs an open letter addressed to Stalin, which is printed in the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo under the title “Letter of Soviet writers of Georgia to the great leader of the people, Comrade Stalin”.

Source: Letter of Soviet Writers of Georgia to the Great Leader of the Peoples, Comrade Stalin, Literaturuli Sakartvelo, Georgia, August 1936, No. 14.

September

1936

September 4

The newspaper Pravda publishes his photo and information about awarding him with the Order of Lenin.

Source: Newspaper “Правда”, 1936, №244, (September 4) p. 1.

1936

September 5

The translator Dmitri Petrovsky from Kharkiv receives the translation of his poem titled “В этих стихах вспоминается” (In these verses, it is recalled) from the addressee’s selected Book of poems and letter. Petrovsky promises to send his other Book “Visiting Lermontov” as soon as he receives it from Moscow. The addressee expresses concern that Zarya Vostoka has ordered translations of Galaktion’s poems, but the word-for-word translations have not been provided. He wonders if Galaktion is dissatisfied with his translations. He writes that he personally likes the translation of the poem “Dioskuria”. There is only one small slip-up to correct, which concerns the second poem “Близи тысяч” (“Close to a Thousand”); he himself did not like it and re-translated it. He writes that he hopes to translate a few more poems by Galaktion before the beginning of October for the planned Galaktion evening at the Writers’ House in Moscow, provided that Galaktion can deliver the word-for-word translations. He mentions that his translation of “Dioskuria” is likely to be published in the magazine Krasnaya Nov. Benito Buachidze is informed by this magazine that they are eagerly awaiting his article about Galaktion. Dmitri Petrovsky is interested in the planned publication of Galaktion’s collected works by the Soviet Writer publishing house, which is being edited by Nikolai Tikhonov. He is eager for the three translations he has made to be included in this edition. Therefore, he asks the poet to delay the publication of the Book by a month. He also asks the poet to send the translation of the poem, which he is sending along with the letter, to the editor of Zarya Vostoka, Nikolo Mitsishvili, and to request that the translator be sent a fee. He promises to send the translation of the poem “Gale” in the coming days.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-452-b; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 278.

1936

Afte September 5

Along with the translation of his poem “Gale,” he receives a letter from the translator Dmitri Petrovsky from Kharkiv. Petrovsky informs him that a copy of this translation has also been sent to the editor of Zarya Vostoka, Nikolo Mitsishvili. He writes that if the translation is liked, he should inform both him and Mitsishvili, and the publisher should send the translator a fee. He also requests that as many word-for-word translations as possible be sent for translation.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-452-g; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 278-279.

Dating: The letter dated September 5, 1936, mentions that he will soon send the translation of the poem "Gale".

1936

Until September 6

In Tbilisi, Galaktion's brother Abesalom moves in with him. Abesalom has found a job at a school, but Galaktion comes home drunk every day, complaining that their ancestral home was moved from one place to another without consulting him, leading to disagreements between the brothers.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, h-24551-354; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 170-171;

1936

September 8

He receives a letter from Shalva Radiani. Radiani reproaches him for not responding, despite several letters being sent, and mentions that he even entrusted Giorgi Kuchishvili to deliver the message, yet Galaktion has not replied. He informs him that if the materials for the first volume of his works are not provided within 4-5 days, the publication of the Book will not be possible this year. He asks Galaktion to submit the materials to the state publishing house, as they now have both paper and available printing capacity for this book.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-401; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 262.

1936

September 15

Having arrived at the Palace of Artists, he is asked why he does not wear the Order of Lenin, to which Victor Gabeskiria, who is there, answers instead of Galaktion that the latter does not need to wear the Order because he is the Order himself.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-107, 21; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 394.

1936

September 15

He travels to Kobuleti for a vacation with Olya Okujava. They are uncertain about where they will stay. Galaktion is in a bad mood and feels emotionally drained, expressing that he never truly rests, has a tough life, and is constantly surrounded by harmful and scheming writers.

Source: Olya Okujava's record in Galaktion Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-73, 110-111; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 341.

1936

September 17 or later

He makes an excerpt from the newspaper Pravda, noting that in the morning, jet planes buzzed noisily over London. Their whistling and roaring stirred the circles ready for battle just before the start of Parliament's session.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-597, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 521-524.

Dating: The excerpt is from the 257th issue of the magazine, which was published on September 17.

1936

September 18

He is in Kobuleti. In the rainy weather, he witnesses the dialogue between an old peasant and a servant in a shop-worker. The farmer is worried that the cows are running in the fields without a shepherd. Someone says that it would be better to build a fence for cattle. And the servant declares that now is a different time and neither a fence nor a gate is needed anymore. The furious peasant addresses to the servant that if this is socialism, then what is the need for the servant, let him go home and the peasants themselves will take the necessary products from the shop. The angry peasant is comforted by others that if he can't, his son will still see socialism, to which the peasant replies that he does not care about his son, he is worried to see it himself. On this, the servant ironically tells him that he will undoubtedly see socialism before his son, because he will go to the next world sooner than his son, and the real socialism is there.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-107, 22-23; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 395.

1936

September 18

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes translation by Boris Brik of an excerpt from Galaktion Tabidze's poem "In the Mountains".

Source: В горах, Отрывок Галактион Табидзе, Пер. Борис Брик, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1936, Сентябрь, №219, с.2.

1936

After September 18

He writes an untitled one-stanza poem "In Spain at the moment...".

Source: MGL, d-107, 24; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 395;

1936

September 18 or later

He writes in the notebook the text of an appeal to the workers and teachers of Adjara.

Source: MGL, d-107, 25; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 395;

1936

September 18 or later

He writes an untitled poem “Whoever does not understand the folk word...”.

Source: MGL, d-107, 26; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 395;

1936

September 18 or later

He writes in his notebook the phone number of Ilarion Zhghenti in the book.

Source: MGL, d-107, 30; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 396;

1936

September 18 or later

In the notebook, he writes the experience of a gardener from Sokhumi, which he heard from a woman: if you are going to take hydrangeas on a long way, wrap them in a wet cloth and when you arrive at the place, put the stems in hot water for half an hour.

Source: MGL, d-107, 31-32; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 396;

1936

September 18 or later

He has breakfast in the canteen of the Kobuleti station. He asks for the bill in Russian and is told that he has 12 roubles to pay. Upon hearing this, a Gurian woman standing nearby, who thinks Galaktion is Russian, says in Russian that 12 roubles will be enough for her to live 5 days, and he spends it on one breakfast. The fact that people are in such trouble hurts the poet's heart.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-107, 41; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 398;

1936

After September 19

He receives a letter from his brother Abesalom. Abesalom shares that he left Tbilisi on the same day as Galaktion. He requested a day off from the school principal, thinking he would return soon, but he couldn't stop worrying that he and Galaktion wouldn't be able to meet. Upon arriving in the village and finding a sick child waiting for him, he decided not to return to Tbilisi and informed the school principal of his decision via telegram. On the third day, he reconsidered, thinking he should be more patient, and sent another telegram to the principal saying that if no one else was appointed to his position, he would return. However, he received no response. Later, he sent a request for a teaching position addressed to the principal of the Tbilisi Education Department, but he didn't receive a reply from there either. He expresses his frustration, noting that with his brother's assistance, he could have bought an apartment sooner and settled in Tbilisi with his wife and children.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, h-24551-354; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 170-171;

1936

September 22

He writes a prose sketch titled “The Moon on the Sea”.

Source: MGL, d-627, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 248.

1936

September 25

He is in Batumi, visits the theatre and plans to hold a poetry evening there.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-107, 33; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 395.

1936

September 25

He looks through “Anthology of Georgian Writers” at the Batumi State Publishing House. At this time, three young people are reading a poem by Ioseb Grishashvili. One says that Galaktion Tabidze cannot get close to him. The other answers that Galaktion did not write in the same way as he does now. Galaktion thinks he has witnessed a meaningful conversation and aims to talk everyone through his poetic achievements.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-107, 33-34; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 397.

1936

September 25

In the evening, at the writers’ meeting, he actively engages in conversation and discusses many pressing issues. Finally, one of the attendees asks why his poems before the revolution were more sophisticated than those after the revolution.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-107, 33-34; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 397.

October

1936

October 8

He receives a brief letter from the rector of the university, Karlo Oragvelidze. The letter informs him that the university intends to organize an evening for Galaktion for lecturers and students within the next 10 days. It mentions that S. Pachulia will be sent to discuss this matter with the addressee. He asks for the addressee’s approval and advice.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-451-b; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 274.

1936

October 8

He, along with Olya Okujava, returns to Tbilisi from Kobuleti at night. The street shines with freshly laid asphalt, and as soon as they bring the suitcases into the house, he joyfully runs out onto the asphalt to take a walk.

Source: Olya Okujava’s record in Galaktion Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-73, 124-125; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 343.

1936

After October 8

He writes an untitled poem “Here, real heroism...”.

Source: MGL, d-107, 44, 46; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 399-400;

1936

October 11

He receives a letter from the university employee S. Pachulia. The letter informs him that the actors who were supposed to read his poems at the Galaktion evening on October 17 are unavailable on that date. Therefore, the evening has been rescheduled for October 16 at 8 p.m. Shalva Radiani will be the speaker, and the poems will be read by Tamar Chavchavadze, Veriko Anjaparidze, Vaso Godziashvili, Pierre Kobakhidze, and students. The letter expresses hope that Galaktion will be ready for this day.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-451-g; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 274-275.

1936

October 14

He receives a letter from the university employee S. Pachulia. The letter informs him that Shalva Radiani, who was supposed to give the lecture at the Galaktion evening on October 16, is engaged elsewhere. Therefore, the evening has been rescheduled for October 19 at 8 p.m. Pachulia asks him to take this change into account and to come to the university on October 19.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-451-d; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 275.

1936

Until October 16

He writes a poem “To the Heroes of Spain”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4367; №241 d., p. 46; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 155.

Note: The poem appears in sources both untitled and titled “Spanish Heroes”.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1936

October 16

He publishes the poem “To the Heroes of Spain” in the newspaper Tsiteli Armieli.

Source: Newspaper Tsiteli Armieli, 1936, №239, October 16, p. 3.

1936

October 19

A creative evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze’s work is held at Tbilisi State University. The event begins with an introductory speech by Shura Duduchava. A lecture on the poet’s life and works is read by Shalva Radiani. The university’s vice-rector, Vukol Beridze, delivers a welcoming speech. On behalf of the students, a welcoming poem is read by G. Gudushauri. At the end, Galaktion Tabidze gives a speech of gratitude. In the second part of the evening, actors from the Marjanishvili Theatre, Tamar Chavchavadze and Pierre Kobakhidze, read the poet's poems. The evening concludes with a student amateur performance concert in honour of Galaktion.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's evening at the university, newspaper Bolshevikuri Kadrebisatvis, 1936, N 22, p. 4.

Note: In the source, Beridze and Duduchava are mentioned only by the initials of their names.

1936

October 22

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes Boris Serebryakov's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Argonauts of New Times".

Source: Аргонавты новой эпохи (Стихотворение) Галактион Табидзе, Перев. Борис Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1936, Октябрь, №247, с.3.

1936

After October 26

He reads Yuri Kremlyov's Book "Giacomo Meyerbeer", making highlights and annotations. He is drawing Georgian composers and lutenists – Dimitri Arakishvili, Kote Potskhverashvili, and Avksenti Megrelidze. He writes that Rusudan Gedevanishvili is singing arias from Zakaria Paliashvili's opera "Daisi", Dimitri Arakishvili's "On the Mountains of Imereti", and "I Saw a Dream".

Source: MGL, т-576, Ю. Кремлев, "Джакомо Мейербер", Очерк жизни и творчества, Leningrad, 1936, p. 5-6.

1936

Until October 27

He is being cured at the Mykhailov hospital.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-108, 5; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 401;

1936

Until October 27

In the notebook, he writes an outline of a telegram to be sent to his brother Prokle Tabidze in Samtredia, in which he informs that he is in the "Mikhailov's" hospital and asks for an immediate visit.

Source: MGL, d-108, 5; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 401;

1936

27 October or earlier

There is a lot of preparation for the celebration of the October Revolution. They are repairing the facade of the building in which Galaktion Tabidze lives, and in connection with this, the Housing Union charges him a fee of 700 roubles.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-108, 11; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 402.

Dating: An entry dated October 27, 1936 describes the event as occurring in the past.

1936

27 October or earlier

Pavel Stirov, an employee of the Moscow newspaper Za Komunisticheskoe Prosveshchenye, is visiting him, and he takes his poem to be published.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-108, 11; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 402.

Note: The source does not mention which verse he took with him.

Dating: An entry dated October 27, 1936 describes the event as occurring in the past.

1936

October 27

The publishing house in Moscow is arranging an interlinear of about 90 poems to be sent to Mkhatvruli Literatura, which should be sent in two days. In this regard, Valerian Gaprindashvili visits him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-108, 11; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 402.

Note: Valerian Gaprindashvili is mentioned only by his last name, but in 1940, Galaktion's "Selected Poems" were published in Russian under his co-editorship, and most of the translations were done by him.

1936

Until October 28

He receives a part of the royalties for the first volume of works, 2155 roubles, as an advance from the state publishing house.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-108, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

Dating: An entry dated October 28, 1936 describes the event as occurring in the past.

1936

Until October 28

He has his photo taken with Shalva Radiani for the October exhibition in the photo studio of the Union of Poor Jews of Georgia (All-Georgian Committee for Helping the Jewish Poor).

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-108, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403; Galaktion Tabidze's photo archive, photo: № 5976-206-i.

Note: Shalva Radiani is mentioned in the record only by name.

Dating: An entry dated October 28, 1936 describes the event as occurring in the past.

1936

Until October 28

A poetry evening is held at Tbilisi State University.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-108, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

Dating: An entry dated October 28, 1936 describes the event as occurring in the past.

1936

October 28 or before

Shalva Radiani tells him that Tbilisi State University rector Karlo Oragvelidze asked him how satisfied Galaktion was with the evening held at the university, to which Radiani replied that the poet writes a fervent poem about the university. Galaktion is satisfied with his answer.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-108, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

Note: Shalva Radiani is mentioned only by name in the record, and the name of the rector is not mentioned at all.

1936

October 28 or before

He buys an alphabet notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-108, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

Dating: An entry dated October 28, 1936 describes the event as occurring in the past.

1936

October 28

On the street, he meets the sculptor Nikoloz Kandelaki, who insists on coming to him to make a bust of Galaktion. He thinks that he might actually visit the sculptor in the future, if he finds time.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-108, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 402.

Note: Nikoloz Kandelaki is mentioned only by his last name in the record.

1936

October 28

He is interested in Benito Buachidze's letter, which is to be printed in the magazine Mnatobi and has already caused a lot of talk.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-108, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

Note: Galaktion was probably interested in Benito Buachidze's letter "Georgian Soviet Poetry", magazine Mnatobi, 1936, No. 9, p. 154-198.

1936 or earlier

October 29

Olya Okujava leaves a letter at home stating that there was no wine, and she bought lunch products for 18 kopecks for the next day. She then brought in a bottle collector, returned bottles worth 14 roubles and 28 kopecks, bought potatoes for 2 roubles, and kept the remaining amount to give to Galaktion.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-410; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 212.

Dating: The letter is dated October 29 and was written before Olya Okujava's arrest.

1936

October 29

He receives a letter from Lieutenant Sharifov, an operational representative of the State Security Service. Sharifov expresses his respect and informs him that he wishes to have a confidential conversation with him. Therefore, he asks to be notified through the letter bearer when he will be available for a visit. If he cannot immediately determine a time, Sharifov requests that he call the office or home at the numbers provided in the letter.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-451-e; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 275.

1936

October

In the letter “Georgian Soviet Poetry” published in the magazine Mnatobi, Benito Buachidze characterizes Galaktion as a poet of great, outstanding talent and feelings, who occupies a full place among the luminaries of Georgian literature. The critic highly evaluates the second volume of the poet’s works and notes that the first two books of Galaktion also occupy an honourable place in the foundation of pre-revolutionary poetry, and no one can ignore them, because they contributed to the renewal of Georgian poetry. The new reality turned the individualist Galaktion into a public creator. The critic draws a parallel between Galaktion and Aleksander Blok and concludes that, unlike Blok, Galaktion was able to fundamentally transform himself according to the demands of the new art. Benito Buachidze examines Galaktion’s post-revolutionary lyrics as an artistic document of the era from the thematic point of view.

Source: B. Buachidze, “Georgian Soviet Poetry”, Magazine Mnatobi, 1936, №9, p. 169-188.

November

1936

November 5

He is planting a pine tree in the yard of house №4 on Zhores Street.

Source: An entry by a foreign person in G. Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-108, 13; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

Note: In the record, Zhores Street is referred to as Kirk Street. It means today’s Marjanishvili Avenue.

1936

November 5

He writes a poem “Oh, Still Can’t...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №3274; №4471; №37 d., p. 16; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 156.

Note: The poem appears in sources both untitled and under the titles “In Montmartre” and “Paris”.

1936

After November 5

He selects poems for the third volume of works.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-108, 14; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403;

1936

After November 5

He writes a poem "Recollection in the hospital".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4402; №335-d., p. 16. G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 234;

Note: The poem is also found under the titles "In the Sanatorium" and "At the Sanatorium".

1936

After November 5

He writes an untitled poem "The evening rays were bent in the clouds...".

Source: MGL, d-108, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404;

1936

After November 5

He writes an untitled poem "How good is with the roses...".

Source: MGL, d-108, 16; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404-406;

Note: Originally, the poem was titled as "The Last Flight".

1936

Until November 7

He writes a poem "The Flying Svan".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №5398; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 165.

Note: The poem is also found both untitled ("As Much as Destiny Grants Hopes...") and under the title "In the Mountains".

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1936

November 7

He publishes the poem "In the Mountains" ("The Caucasus Mountains...") in the newspaper Komunisti.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1936, №260, November 7, p. 2.

1936

November 7

The poem "In the Mountains" is published in the newspaper Komunisti.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1936, №260, p. 2.

1936

Until November 11

Olya Okujava visits him at home, brings a clock, sets the time, and leaves a letter. She writes that she will come after work and explain how to operate the new clock. She is happy that from now on, through the hands of the clock, she will be reminded of every moment of the epoch.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-422; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 215.

1936

Until November 11

Olya Okujava visits him at home, bringing sulguni cheese, bread, and tobacco. She pays the electricity bill, washes the floor, tidies up the house, and leaves 1 rouble. She is saddened by Galaktion's indifference. She thinks he spends quality time with others and feels it is even too much for him to be honest with Olya about it.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-411; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 218-219;

1936

Until November 11

Olya Okujava and Galaktion cannot find a moment of solitude, so Olya quietly writes a short note saying that she misses him and wants to be with him. She asks him to call her the next day.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-417; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 220;

1936

Until November 11

Olya Okujava leaves a short note at home, stating that something has broken in their relationship and that she doesn't want to visit him anymore. She writes that she loves the storm, but not the ashes.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-424; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 215-216;

1936

Until November 11

Olya Okujava leaves beans, walnuts, and a short note at home. She promises that she will check on his food portion at 10 o'clock the next day. Whatever they give her, she will bring it back, while Galaktion should come by for the promised butter, oil, rice, and anything else that may be available.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-436; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 218.

1936

Until November 11

Olya Okujava visits in the morning, leaves some matsoni, and writes on a cigarette box that he should eat, sleep, and that she will return at seven o'clock.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-416; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 215; For dating: M. Ninidze, "Researches", Tbilisi, 2025, 1936

Until November 11

Olya Okujava visits him, takes the laundry to the washer. She waits for Galaktion until 2 o'clock, and finally writes again on a cigarette box that she waited a long time, listening to a song about Stenka Razin on the radio. Since there was no one around, the sound of the organ put her in a weeping mood.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-416; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 215;

1936

November 11

Galaktion's wife, Olya Okujava, is arrested on charges of Trotskyism.

Source: Источник: Архив НИПЦ "Мемориал", Москва;
<https://stalin.historyproject.ge/ru/info/2516>

1936

November 12-15

He writes a poem "Through the Eyes of a Mary".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4704; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 169;

Note: The poem is also found in sources under the title "Mary's Eyes".

1936

After November 15

He edits the poem "Through the Eyes of a Mary".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4704; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 169;

1936

Until November 16

The poem "The wind blows, the quiet Likhi is beyond, and across the Likhi..." is being edited.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №383, p. 1;

Dating: The poem is edited with the same red pencil that was used to edit the poem intended for inclusion in the first volume of the poet's works.

1936

Until November 16

He edits the poem “Oh, I often think when I’m alone...”. He changes the beginning to “Outside the city, when brotherly...” and uses a Roman numeral to indicate that it should be included in the first volume of his works.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №383, p. 1;

Dating: We date the information based on the time when the first volume was handed over to the state publishing house.

1936

Until November 16

The poem “The days of vanished youth...” is edited with a red pencil. The beginning is changed to “The days of beautiful youth,” and a Roman numeral is used to indicate that it should be included in the first volume of his works.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №382, p. 2.

Dating: We date the information based on the time when the first volume was handed over to the state publishing house.

1936

November 16

The first volume of Galaktion Tabidze’s collected works is submitted for production with the approval of the state publishing house, and the editing of the Book begins.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in eight volumes, vol. I, 1937, p. 492.

1936

Until November 18

Galaktion is in the hospital. His brother, Abesalom, goes to see him, but he has to leave soon because he has to return home.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 165.

Dating: The information is from Abesalom Tabidze’s letter dated November 18, 1936.

1936

After November 18

He receives a letter from his brother, Abesalom Tabidze. He writes that he is very nervous about him. He promises that he will visit him again on November 24 and stay with him until the evening, and if he stays in the hospital until November 30, he will visit him and help him move home. Abesalom asks him to give up wine, which is destructive for him. It is surprising that Galaktion, who is already at the highest peak, with name, fame and fortune, kills himself so senselessly.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze’s letter, h-24551-324; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 165-166.

1936

November 20

He receives a letter from an old acquaintance from Kutaisi, Prokofi Guchabidze, who is from the village of Mtispiri. Guchabidze writes that life has not gone well for him, and he needs to come to Tbilisi, but he does not have the money for travel. He asks Galaktion to lend him 50 roubles and to arrange another 50 roubles with Nikolo Mitsishvili for him to borrow. He writes that he is expecting the 100 roubles to be sent.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-329; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 276.

1936

Until November 29

From the Tbilisi hospital, he sends a telegram to his brother, Abesalom Tabidze, at the Railway Workers' Preparatory Faculty in Samtredia. He informs him that he will be discharged on the 29th and asks him to visit.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-99; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 89;

1936

Until November 29

He writes a poem "Ibaruri".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-86, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 432;

1936

Until November 29

He writes a poem "Elegy of Hands".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-86, 11-14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book I, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 390; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 434-435.

Note: The poem was published under the title "Exception" after its first publication in the third volume of his works in 1940.

Dating: The information is dated based on the time when the third volume of the works was handed over to the printer.

1936

Until November 29

He writes a poem "Melody".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4455; №5377; №200-a, p. 5378; №5439-5440; G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-86, 19, 21; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 436-437.

Note: The poem was published under the title "Melancholic Singer" after its first publication in the third volume of his works in 1940.

1936

November 29

He shaves his beard with the barber Levan, who tells him that for 30 years he had a barbershop in Tskneti, next to the Davit Sarajishvili factory, where prominent figures like Vazha-Pshavela,

Shio Mghvimele, and Irodion Evdoshvili frequently visited. One day, they went to the Mushtaidi Garden and played lotto. Initially, the barber won two bottles of wine, which Vazha and Irodion drank eagerly. Then, Irodion won a woman's feathered hat, which made Vazha laugh. However, when Vazha won a woman's undergarment and Irodion laughed, the barber invited everyone to the table to ease the tension. The narrator notes that Vazha-Pshavela was a great man, thin but muscular, and his eyes were still sharp.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-86, 22-26; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 437.

1936

After November 29

In his diary, he makes an entry about Georgian music and provides examples from the works of poets: Shota Rustaveli's "What does the song of the nightingale sound like," Akaki Tsereteli's poem "Natela" – the Lyre (a traditional Georgian instrument), Nikoloz Baratashvili, Grigol Orbeliani, Ivane Kereselidze, and Mamia Gurieli. He notes that the majority of Vazha-Pshavela's poems have the title "Song," while Besiki himself is entirely a song.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-86, 27-29; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 438.

1936

After November 29

He writes a poem "Motifs".

Source: Autographs, MGL №4399; №200-a., p. 5448-5449; G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-86, 30-31; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 438-439.

Note: The poem is titled "Khevsurian" in the heading. It is also found under the title "From the Motifs" and without a title ("When the army gathers in grief...").

1936

After November 29

He writes a poem "Two Murdered Poets".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-86, 32; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 439.

Note: The heading is "Motifs," with the note "The statues of Ilia Chavchavadze and Griboedov". The poem is also published without a title as "The rocky mountains of Tbilisi...".

1936

After November 29

In his diary, he makes an entry about "The Raven". He notes that the raven has a highly developed sense of smell, detecting the scent of carrion from afar and heading toward it. When a person is on the brink of death, the raven circles and waits. He provides examples from poetry about ravens: Nikoloz Baratashvili's "Merani" – "The one who chides behind me..." and "The black raven will uncover my grave”; a folk song – “On the black rock, the black raven”; his own poem – “When the day will be ending...” and Edgar Allan Poe’s “The Raven”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-86, 33; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 439-440.

1936

November or after

He writes a poem “She Left the House and Never Returned”, dedicated to the exile of Olya Okujava.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4453; №7299; №335-d, p. 17; №590-d, p. 38; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 170.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (with different opening lines: “The evening touched the window...”; “The evening rays...”).

December

1936

December 1

Shalva Kashmadze dedicates to him the poem “Impromptu to the inimitable Galaktion”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 70; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 230.

1936

December 2

Shalva Kashmadze dedicates to him the untitled poem “Shota enriched the river of the poem...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 71; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 230 -231.

1936

Until December 3

He addresses a statement to the Literary Repository of the Writers’ Union. He writes that he is experiencing financial hardship, accompanied by illness, and requests assistance in the amount of 1000 roubles.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-249; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 105.

1936

December 3

The Literary Repository of the Writers’ Union grants his written request and provides him with the requested assistance.

Source: Historical Chronology, №65-66, 1993-1994, p. 192.

1936

Until December 7

Shalva Radiani writes an article titled “The Poetry of Galaktion Tabidze”, which is intended to be included as an introductory article in the first volume of the collected works of Galaktion. The article reviews the poet’s creative journey from his early years to the contemporary period. The critic argues that Galaktion is one of the first representatives of symbolism in Georgia; however, his work is sharply distinct from that of other symbolists, particularly the “Tsisperkantselis”. In his opinion, the October Revolution of 1917 was of great significance for Galaktion’s creative development, as it marked a change in the themes of the poet’s works, positioning him among the builders of the new socialist republic. For his significant creative achievements, the Soviet government awarded Galaktion the title of National Poet and the Order of Lenin.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in eight volumes, vol. I, 1937, p. V-XXVI.

1936

December 7

The Main Administration for Literature and Publishing Affairs, known as “Mtavlit’i”, signs off on the submission of the first volume of Galaktion Tabidze’s collected works for printing, and the necessary typesetting work for the book’s publication begins.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in eight volumes, vol. I, 1937, p. 492.

1936

December 24

In the notebook, he writes a story told by a peasant from Chkhari about Ioram Robakidze’s wife and her lover Gurgenidze’s killing of a policeman instead of Ioram Robakidze.

Source: MGL, d-108, 21-28; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 406-408.

1936

December

In the magazine Mnatobi, Akaki Tatarashvili’s article “The Poetry of Friendship Among Nations” is published. The article offers a negative assessment of the years of the Democratic Republic of Georgia, stating that it was during this time that Galaktion Tabidze penned his sorrowful words. An excerpt from his poem “The Press”, included in the cycle “Revolutionary Georgia”, is cited. The excerpt speaks of national discord and chauvinism, reflecting the poet’s critical view of that period.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1936, December, №12, p. 138.

1935-1936

He writes an untitled poem, “How Many Thoughts You Hold About the Old Days...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №625-d, 3236; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 139.

1935-1936

After June

He writes a poem “The Last Cloud” (“In That Last Cloud...”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5582; №37-d, p. 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 140; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 788.

Note: The poem is also found untitled “It Took the Arrows of Light...”.

1936

Galaktion frequently visits Korneli Sanadze’s studio for the purpose of having his portrait painted. However, he only manages to sit for two sessions, becoming restless and fidgeting as he composes poems. At one point, he suggests to the painter that he take a Book from the shelf. Sanadze picks up a collection of Alexander Blok’s poems, and Galaktion begins reciting them by heart. At Galaktion’s request, Sanadze follows along in the Book and realizes that he is quoting them perfectly. Then, Sanadze takes a collection of Byron’s poems, and the same thing happens. Later, Galaktion asks Sanadze to read some of his own poems aloud. He listens attentively, praises Sanadze’s work, and encourages him with the words, “Walk with faith, walk, walk, keep your step firm”. Finally, at Sanadze’s request, Galaktion recites his own poems “I and the Night” and “Gusty Wind” while Sanadze paints, capturing the mood of the poems on canvas.

Source: O. Egadze, the poet’s image in the artist’s work, magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba, 1965, N 11, p. 71.

1936

In Moscow, the material collected by Victor Goltsev from the radio recordings related to Galaktion Tabidze is published in the form of a brochure in Russian.

Source: Гольцев В.В., Галактион Табидзе, Микрофонные материалы Управления местного вещания Всесоюзного радиокomiteта, Сост. В. Гольцев, Москва, Радиоиздат, 1936.

1936

He dedicates the poem “Because we know fear” to Elene Bakradze and Shalva Kartvelishvili.

Source: G. Javakhishvili, Elene Dariani’s friends, letter IV, newspaper Kalmasoba, 1997, №10, November 18, p. 7.

1936

He reads Mikhail Kintsurashvili’s Book “What is a Solar Eclipse”, correcting the title to “As a Solar Eclipse”, and making underlines and notes.

Source: GTSM, 154, A. Iasamani, “What is a Solar Eclipse”, Due to the total solar eclipse of 1936, Tbilisi, 1936.

1936 or later

He reads the Russian-translated historical novel by Enrico Larréta “The Glory of Don Ramiro”. He makes underlines and notes.

Source: GTSM, 234, Енрико Ларрета, “Слава Дон Рамиро”, Moscow, 1936.

1936 or later

He writes a poem “So, long live our glorious constitution”.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 547;

1936 or later

He leaves a brief note for the translator Boris Serebryakov. He writes that he is going on urgent business but will be at home to wait starting from 12 o'clock.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-264; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 89.

Dating: We date the information based on the time when creative collaboration with Boris Serebryakov began.

1937

Until 1937

Ovanes Tumanian's daughter Ashkhen, who is with Ioseb Grishashvili, meets him on Rustaveli Avenue, whom Grishashvili introduces as the poet Tabidze. The woman answers that she has heard about the poet Tabidze. Ioseb Grishashvili jokingly tells her that the poet Tabidze, Titsian, whom the woman knows, is more of a critic than a poet, while Galaktion is a real poet. Tei Kekelidze jokingly tells this story in the presence of Titsian Tabidze, which annoys the latter and he calls Tei Kekelidze a "fiction writer".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 25; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 431.

Note: In the source, Ioseb Grishashvili is mentioned only by his last name, Titsian Tabidze - only by his first name, and the name of Ovanes Tumanian's daughter is not specified.

Dating: Dated according to the time of Titsian Tabidze's death.

January

1937

January 25

He visits the family of Elene Bakradze and Shalva Kartvelishvili and writes an impromptu "A letter to Eliko" to Elene Bakradze.

Source: G. Javakhishvili, Elene Dariani's friends, letter IV, newspaper Kalmasoba, 1997, №10, November 18, p. 7.

February

1937

February 12

In his notebook he writes a poem "Inscription on Khovle ornament".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №325-d., p. 8-9; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 147.

Note: The poem in the manuscript is untitled ("Somewhere, there was a place called Khovle..."). For the title reference: G. Tabidze, in Twelve Volumes, Vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 365.

1937

After February 13

He receives a letter from his brother, Abesalom Tabidze. He advises him to publish some good poem in the newspaper Komunisti in one week. He expresses satisfaction that Galaktion is paying more attention to himself than before and reminds the address to which to send the letter.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, h-24551-326; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 166.

1937

Until February 15

He writes a poem "Stretcher, bag, gas mask".

Source: MGL, d-109, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 410-411;

Note: The poem was originally called "Song of the Aidmen".

1937

Until February 15

He selects materials for the third volume of works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-109, 8; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 411;

1937

15 February

He collects and organizes materials for the third volume of works, collects 70 poems from old manuscripts, compares manuscripts and printed texts.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-109, 9; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 412.

1937

After February 15

He writes an untitled poem "Suddenly, as with a camera...".

Source: MGL, d-109, 11; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 412-413;

Note: Originally, the poem began with the line "You must walk with a camera in your hand...".

1937

After February 15

In the notebook, he writes a quote from Akaki Tsereteli's "Tornike Eristavi".

Source: MGL, d-109, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 414;

1937

After February 15

He writes an untitled poem "Oh, how many times should I thank you again...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №6556; №5580; №5492; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 119;

Note: The poem is also found under the titles "Where Else Is It" and without a title (beginning with: "Where else is the relief..." and "Where else is the joy...").

1937

After February 15

In the notebook, he makes a note about Alexandre Abasheli. He notes that his strategy is quite clear. He fights selflessly to ensure that poets' works are printed in alphabetical order in literary magazines and newspapers, to guarantee the first place. Galaktion thinks that such a formal approach to art is unfair.

Source: MGL, d-109, 16; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 415;

1937

After February 15

He writes an untitled two-line poem "Tbilisi was that woman widow...".

Source: MGL, d-109, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 415;

Note: Then the poet included these lines in the poem "Foundation of New Tbilisi".

1937

After February 15

In the notebook, he writes a plan, according to the principle of which he should compile the third volume of works. He plans to divide the collection into sections and chapters. He aims at recording, correcting, rewriting and reprinting old poems, as well as writing new ones according to the needs of thematic sections.

Source: MGL, d-109, 19; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 416;

March

1937

March 29

He is at the "Kolkhida" cafe and is writing an untitled poem "I never thought that someday...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №8203; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 146.

1937

After March 30

He travels by trolleybus, puts money on the driver's counter and announces loudly that all passengers have been paid. Going down the stairs, he looks at the people with satisfaction and says the phrase in Latin: "Poetic freedom!"

Source: A. Ratiani, Recollections about Galaktion, Magazine Mnatobi, 1996, № 9-10, p. 128.

Dating: Dated according to the time when the first trolleybus was put into operation in Tbilisi.

1937

March or later

In response to his brother's letter, in which Abesalom reveals that he had their ancestral home moved from one location to another and slightly renovated, Galaktion expresses surprise. He questions why, if the living conditions in the house have improved, Abesalom and his family are still hesitating to move in.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551.11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 12-13;

April

1937

April 19

He writes an untitled poem that begins with the line “Once you bowed your head...”

Source: Autograph, MGL, №2519; №1780; №2912; №5279; №2038; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 140.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Mother” and appears untitled in sources with the opening lines: “I closed all the doors from Georgia...” and “You closed the doors on me...”.

May

1937

May 18

He receives a brief letter from Elene Bakradze. She writes that she is sending the housemaid who has served her for a long time and whom she trusts. She advises him to leave her at home and have her manage the household. Then, she suggests informing the addressee to come and check how well the maid performs the tasks.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-460-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 279.

1937

Until May 20

It is quoted in the notebook that the new Stalinist constitution requires a radical transformation of the forms of relations between the Art Committee and the art workers.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-111, 4; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 434; For dating: L. Beburishvili, “Researches”, 2025, p. 427.

1937

Until May 20

In the notebook, he writes a quote from the Russian translation of Theophile Gautier’s poem - “Art”.

Source: MGL, d-111, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 435; For dating: L. Beburishvili, “Researches”, 2025, p. 427.

1937

Until May 20

He writes an untitled humorous poem “When a Russian woman goes...”.

Source: MGL, d-111, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 435; For dating: L. Beburishvili, “Researches”, 2025, p. 427.

1937

Until May 20

In the notebook, he writes the outline of a telegram to be sent to Viktor Goltsev. He asks the addressee to let him know how the affairs of the Book are and to send the royalty immediately.

Source: MGL, d-111, 8; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 435; For dating: L. Beburishvili, "Researches", 2025, p. 427.

1937

Until May 20

In the notebook, he makes a note "How the sick arrived", in which he describes how the vacationers who came for treatment behave - they have both domestic and foreign suits and shoes, they strictly follow the regime and hygiene.

Source: MGL, d-111, 9; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 436; For dating: L. Beburishvili, "Researches", 2025, p. 427.

1937

Until May 20

In the notebook, he writes a draft of a telegram to be sent to the state publishing house, in which he requests to send part of the royalty, 500 roubles.

Source: MGL, d-111, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 436; For dating: L. Beburishvili, "Researches", 2025, p. 427.

1937

Until May 20

He writes a poem "Auto-moto-bicycle".

Source: MGL, d-111, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 436; For dating: L. Beburishvili, "Researches", 2025, p. 427.

1937

Until May 20

He writes untitled lines: "You were being rough all night, sea..."

Source: MGL, d-111, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 437; For dating: L. Beburishvili, "Researches", 2025, p. 427.

1937

Until May 20

In the notebook, he writes that there are circles in the Sevastopol club and the Tatar ensemble is managed by some Achkinadze.

Source: MGL, d-111, 20; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 438; For dating: L. Beburishvili, "Researches", 2025, p. 427.

1937

Until May 20

He writes an untitled poem "One-tune, One-colour..."

Source: MGL, d-111, 21; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 438; For dating: L. Beburishvili, “Researches”, 2025, p. 427.

1937

Until May 20

He writes an untitled poem in Russian “В городском саду...” (“In the city garden...”).

Source: MGL, d-111, 23; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 438; For dating: L. Beburishvili, “Researches”, 2025, p. 427.

1937

Until May 20

He writes an untitled poem in Russian “Кто смеет зренье иметь...” (“Who dares to have eyesight...”).

Source: MGL, d-111, 24; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 438; For dating: L. Beburishvili, “Researches”, 2025, p. 427.

1937

May 20

He writes a poem “Demon”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4432; №306-d., p. 24; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 148.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “The Suicide” and appears untitled with the opening line: “You are no more. You created...”.

1937

May 20

He is in Sevastopol.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-111, 26; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 439.

1937

May 20

In the notebook, he notes that Levanevsky Street in Sevastopol is very similar to the street named after him in Tbilisi, because there are no two-story houses, it is muddy, it looks like a village market, because dogs and pigs run around, it is as long as a sparrow’s beak, and yet it is winding.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-111, 34; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 441.

1937

May 20

While in Sevastopol, he enters a kiosk to buy cigarettes. The saleswoman is interested whether finding an apartment in Tbilisi is just as difficult as in Sevastopol. Galaktion confirms and asks the woman why it is difficult to find an apartment in the city, to which the salesman replies that people have moved from the villages to the city.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-111, 35; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 441.

1937

After May 20

Galaktion visits the State Publishing House's accounting office with Grigol Tsetskhladze, where he receives his royalty payment. Since Grigol is told to return the next day for his payment, Galaktion invites his old friend to dinner. They head to the "Sympathy" restaurant on Alexander Pushkin Street. On the way, Galaktion stops by a shop and buys a bottle of "Eniseli" cognac, explaining to Grigol that he needs it for home, and to avoid forgetting later, he bought it in advance. At the restaurant, Galaktion orders two liters of wine, appetizers, and kebabs. He also asks the waiter to serve the cognac. They begin drinking, and after two glasses of cognac, they switch to wine, following Grigol's advice. Galaktion passionately shares his experiences from his travels in Europe. Later, he returns to the cognac. By the time they leave the restaurant, he is very drunk, having consumed two-thirds of the bottle. Grigol offers to escort him home by carriage, but Galaktion refuses.

Source: Grigol Tsetskhladze, "Recollections about Galaktion", collection "Galaktionology", X, Tbilisi, 2024, p.

1937

May 28

The Main Directorate for Literature and Publishing Affairs – "Mtavlit'i" approves the publication of Galaktion Tabidze's collection "Poems" for printing, and the necessary typographical work for the book's release begins.

Source: G. Tabidze, Poems, 1937, p. 86.

1937

After May 28

The State Publishing House, in the series "School Library". "Fiction Literature" publishes Galaktion Tabidze's collection "Poems". The Book opens with an informational article prepared by the editorial team, introducing readers to the poet's biographical and creative journey. The collection includes 49 poems. These are: "May Day"; "Flags, Quickly"; "The Sorrow of the People Was Intoxicating"; "I Love the Storm Alone"; "The Ship 'Daland'"; ("Beyond the Gates of Georgia"); "The Mountains of Guria"; "We, the Poets of Georgia"; "I Want to Start a Song"; "In Memory of a Revolutionary"; "Calmer than Calm"; "It Was"; "Murky Wind"; "Our Luminary is Fier"; "Industrial Lullaby"; "The Poet and the Masses"; "O, Song!"; "What Was Your Childhood"; "Joy Spreads". "To the Enthusiasm of Hope and the World's Victory"; "With Unyielding Voices"; "Flowers Will Cover the Streets"; "With Life, With All Creation"; "Greetings to Georgia, United by a New Path"; "Rocking the Cradle of New Life"; "Play, Orchestra!"; "Follow, Listen to the Wheels"; "Tomorrow is May"; ("Thunder, O Longing!"); "We Were Climbing the Gallows"; "How Many Nights Came to an End"; "That Time Passed Like a Dream"; "March 8"; "The City Underwater"; "Hit the Pickaxe!"; "To Revolutionary Georgia"; "Gradually, Gradually, a New Country is Being Built!"; "Song"; "Shoulder to Shoulder, Shoulder to Shoulder"; "On the Lowlands of Colchis”; “Pioneer, Be Worthy of the New Life”; “Do Not Abandon the Poem Without a Homeland”; “Press”; “Relief”; “Cherry-plum, a Seven-Year-Old Child”; “The Moon of Mtatsminda”; “Blue Horses”; “The Ghost of Akaki”; “I and the Night”.

Source: G. Tabidze, Poems, 1937, p. 86.

Note: The book’s editor is Shalva Radiani. The collection consists of 86 pages and has a print run of 10,000 copies. It was submitted for production on May 11, 1937, and approved for printing on May 28, 1937. The Book includes 49 poems. Before the publication of this collection, all of the poems had already been printed in periodical press or in other editions of the poet’s works.

1937

After May 30

He is preparing to depart from Sevastopol. He packs luggage and documents.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-111, 30; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 440;

1937

After May 30

He writes an untitled poem in Russian “Идем посмотрим море...” (Let’s go see the sea...”).

Source: MGL, d-111, 30; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 440;:

1937

After May 30

He looks at the paintings of Italian-born Russian watercolourist Luigi Premazzi “Street in Tbilisi”, “Caucasian City Street” and writes a description of the pictures in his notebook.

Source: MGL, d-111, 32-33; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 440;

June

1937

June 11

In the notebook, he writes a humorous entry “Dream”, in which he mentions that he would like to describe the feast of deaf people someday. He remembers Beria’s words, which caused laughter in the hall, that the creative drunkenness of the “Tsisperkantselis” often turns into alcoholism. He thinks that the mirth of the “Tsisperkantselis” is howling and fighting, which is far from the true mirth.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-111, 16; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 437;

1937

June 12

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes the translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Who Said? (“He threw down a stone and a clod...”).

Source: Я славлю новь (Стихотворение) Галактион Табидзе, Красный Север, 1937, февраля, №133, с.5.

July

1937

July 1

Olya Okujava is tried for anti-Soviet agitation and sentenced to 10 years of imprisonment.

Source: Сталинские списки из Грузии; БД “Жертвы политического террора в СССР”; Архив НИИЦ “Мемориал” (Москва)

1937

July 1 or later

He writes a poem “The Last Train”, dedicated to his wife Olya Okujava’s exile.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №25299; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 151.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Farewell”.

Dating: Olya Okujava’s sentence for 10 years of exile was pronounced on July 1, 1937.

1937

After July 1

On the second day of seeing off Olya Okujava in exile, he meets Mariam Garikuli on Marjanishvili Street, who asks him if he has heard anything about Olya. Galaktion can’t hold back his tears, telling her that he saw her off the night before and that he hopes to see her again someday.

Source: M. Garikuli, Our Galaktion, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 41.

Dating: Olya Okujava was sentenced to exile for 10 years on July 1, 1937.

1937

July 4 or later

He writes an untitled poem “No, Where There Is Joy...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №3328; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 143; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 789.

1937

July 6

He receives a brief note from Lavrenti Dzidziguri. He writes that he was unable to meet and urgently needs 100 roubles. He mentions that he is always at home from 5 to 7 o’clock and asks to be visited.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-233; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 271.

1937

July 22

He attends a meeting at the Writers’ Union, where they discuss the case of Akaki Beliashvili, who is accused of speaking ill of Joseph Stalin. Beliashvili does not admit to the “crime” and demands to be told who is accusing him. Paolo Iashvili asks Alexandre Kutateladze, who is sitting next to him, for a cigarette, lights it, and steps out into the corridor. A short while later, the sound of a gunshot is heard. Someone shouts that Paolo Iashvili has taken his own life. Galaktion, along with others, rushes to the vestibule and witnesses a horrifying scene.

Source: Nodar Tabidze's record, GTDA, №1437, p. 3.

August

1937

Beginning of August

He takes a suitcase with clothes and new shoes to Olya Okujava at the Tbilisi prison.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-412; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 220.

1937

Beginning of August

He receives a letter sent by Olya Okujava from the Tbilisi prison. She informs him that she received everything. This time, she requests food, money, eau de cologne, and a Book by Galaktion. She also notifies him that they have the right to one meeting in August and asks him to submit an application.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-412; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 220.

1937

August 27

From the balcony, he watches the terrible hail that lasts for several seconds.

Source: MGL, d-98, 81; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 238.

1937

Summer

While being treated at the so-called Mikhailov's Hospital, he sends his brother Abesalom to Shalva Radiani and asks him to visit him. Shalva and Ketevan Iremadze visit him and Galaktion talks to them for a long time about art and poetry.

Source: Sh. Radiani, Our Galaktion, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 259.

September

1937

After September 25

He draws a caricature of a human face on a piece of paper, with big ears, thick eyebrows and a moustache, and writes the words "G. Mushishvili" and "Failure".

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №90, p. 4;

1937

After September 25

He writes on the paper that there are 6 months left until Maxim Gorky's birthday.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №90, p. 4;

Note: The record does not have the form of a sentence. The words: "Terms" and "To Gorky's 6th anniversary" are written.

1937

After September 25

He makes a note on a piece of paper under the title "About one adventure" and under it he writes down the organizations and groups: the Youth Union, members of the Georgian government, the Commissariat of Education, trade unions, members of the Central Executive Committee, the Proletarian Writers' Union, the Union of Writers, the State publishing house, the Tsisperi Kantsebi (Blue horns), the University and the Art Department.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №90, p. 4;

Note: Youth Union or ALKK in the record are presented with the abbreviation "A. K"., the abbreviation of the Central Executive Committee "Tsaghi" or "Tsaki") is illegible.

1937

After September 25

He writes on the topic "Gorky and youth".

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №90, p. 3;

1937

After September 25

He writes the words derived from the root "okro", grammatical forms and other words containing the sound combination "kr" on the paper.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №90, p. 1-2;

October

1937

October 9

He meets Titsian Tabidze near Yerevan (now Freedom) Square, who tells him that he has been summoned to the security service. Galaktion, surprised, asks him, "Why are you going? You know what will happen there" and tries to stop the car to get his cousin away from the place. With tears in his eyes, Titsian knows what awaits him, but he slips away, saying, "Let what must happen, happen". Nevertheless, he goes, and do not return.

Source: Nodar Tabidze's record, GTDA, №1437, p. 3.

Dating: The record indicates that this happened on the day of Titsian Tabidze's arrest.

1937

After October 15

In Homer's poem "Odyssey", he emphasizes the text of the prose translation by Alexander Mikaberidze. In one chapter, "The Beggar Iris", he writes the first two stanzas of an untitled poem. Attached is a sheet with the autograph of the next two stanzas: "I remember, when we, the artists, had a feast, A beggar entered the ceremonial halls. He raised a toast: He said: whoever, even slightly, Sung of Georgia, The beautiful seaside, Let him fulfil, I ask, a small request, Do not consider me a beggar, I am not a beggar. Once, my heartbeat Was the song of those chosen by fate, And the song is mine Of the secret seaside".

Source: MGL, t-82. Al. Mikaberidze, "Odyssey", Tbilisi, 1937, p. 170.

Note: The first stanza of the poem is a variant of the first stanza of the poem "I remember when we, the artists, had a feast..." dated December 4, 1940, which was published in the fourth volume of the twelve-volume academic edition of his works in 1966. It is based on the printed source, corrected by the author, which is kept in the museum. The version of the poem written in the Book is likely the first variant, which differs significantly from the published version and could be considered either a different revision or an independent poem.

1937

October

An article titled "Georgian Soviet Poetry" by Besarion Zhghenti is published in the magazine Mnatobi. To illustrate that themes of social sorrow and lamentation in Soviet poetry have been replaced by healthy optimism and enthusiasm, the article quotes an excerpt from Galaktion's poem "Digging the Cradle of New Life". According to the author of the article, before the revolution, Galaktion was characterized by the most intense themes of hopelessness and sorrow; however, now his poems represent "an exuberant hymn of life and joy".

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1937, October, №10, p. 210.

November

1937

Until November 1

He tries to visit the translator Elene Sher several times but is unable to find her.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-458-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 281.

1937

November 1

He receives a letter from Elene Sher. She expresses regret that Galaktion, who had visited her several times, was unable to find her. She writes that despite having the flu, she will be at Elene Akhvlediani's studio from 11 a.m. to 6-7 p.m. in the coming days because she needs to finish the painting "Yerevan Square". She mentions that Boris Brik brought Galaktion's Book from Moscow. She hopes that one of her translations will also be published. She asks for a poem for October and assures him that she will translate it as well as the Moscow translators. She writes that she intends to discuss her collection, which is published in Russian, in Tbilisi.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-458-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 281.

1937

November 7 or later

He writes an untitled poem “It Has Been Twenty Years...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4684; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 143; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 789.

1937

November 27

In the notebook, he writes a poem “With the pounding of a thousand-foot hammer...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-110, 65; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 423.

1937

After November 28

In the Book “Orderly Soviet Georgia’s Socialist Art”, it is noted that contemporary poets have written poems about the significant event of the draining of the Colchis marshes, demonstrating that socialist labour successfully overcomes the elemental forces of nature. As evidence, a stanza from Galaktion’s poem “Argonauts of the New Era” is cited.

Source: Order-bearing Socialist Art of Soviet Georgia, State Publishing House, 1937, p. 10.

Dating: The Book was signed for printing on November 28, 1937.

December

1937

After December 5

He receives Olya Okujava’s letter sent from Yaroslavl. The sender explains that during her exile, she will only be allowed to send two letters per month and receive two in return. She inquires about his physical condition and how her nephew Vasiko is doing, as he was ill before Olya left the city. She expresses concern that Galaktion’s eyes are troubling him and urges him to consult with Dr. Gorbovsky at the medical clinic. Additionally, she asks if his Book has been published, what the cover looks like, which photo is included, whose foreword it contains, and how many copies were printed. She requests a prompt response.

Source: O. Okujava’s letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-379; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 220-221.

1937

December 12

In the notebook, he writes an untitled poem “Socialist work and learning...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-110, 61; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 424;

1937

After December 12

He dedicates the poem “What is December 12?” to the first elections of the Supreme Council held in the Soviet Union.

Source: MGL, d-98, 83; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 238;

1937

December 19

He notes in the diary the list of books to be published in the future. Publishing house “Federation” plans to publish a single volume, the state publishing house - the third volume of works, and publishing house “Zarya Vostoka” - a poetry collection.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-110, 9; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 418.

1937

Until December 21

In the recording, he expresses hope that the People’s Artist of the Republic Meliton Balanchivadze will work on his melody for orchestra, piano and solo. As for the performance, he thinks Niko Kumsiashvili will perform the best. According to Galaktion, Andria Balanchivadze will edit the half-serious and half-joking text “Where did my husband go?”

Source: MGL, d-579, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 276.

1937

After December 21

He receives a letter from Olya Okujava, sent from Yaroslavl. The sender informs him that she has not yet received any letters or the 50 roubles from him. She mentions having slight issues with her lungs and appendix. The letter describes snowflakes fluttering in the sky like spring flowers. The sender recalls Galaktion’s poems “Snow” and “Peach Blossoms”. She asks if his Book has been published yet and expresses deep concern about him. Olya writes that she sends many kisses to him and his poems. She also inquires if he has Lev Mei’s poetry at home, and if not, she recommends buying it. Finally, she wishes him an early Happy New Year.

Source: O. Okujava’s letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-380; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 220-221.

1937

December 25

He writes an untitled poem “Soviet people’s heroic...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №28897-50, p. 12; №2701; №7417; №d-98, p. 87; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 148.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “The Epoch Forges the Craftsman”.

1937

After December 25

He writes a poem “Vicious dogs of foreign currency”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №66-a., p. 1579; №66-a., p. 1580; №3368; №2044; №2066-2067; №2078; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 153; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 373.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Prometheus’ Happiness”, “If You Listen to the Silence of the Night”, “The Mountain’s Heartbeat”, “Amiran Chained to the Cliffs of the Caucasus”, “Amiran Chained”, and without a title (“If You Listen to the Silence of the Night”).

1937

After December 25

He writes a poem “How good is the lake, embedded in the mountain...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 90; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 245;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem “Hugo, who carries Paris with his heart”.

1937

After December 25

He writes an untitled poem “Socialist saints...”.

Source: MGL, d-92, 92; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 246;

1937

After December 25

He receives a letter from his brother. Abesalom is surprised that Galaktion is not mentioned in the articles published in the newspapers regarding the Soviet Union Writers’ Plenary dedicated to Shota Rustaveli. The addressee believes that his voice should definitely be heard at this celebration. He promises that he will come to Tbilisi at the beginning of the next year and stay for a few days.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze’s letter, h-24551-325; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 165-166.

1937

27 December

He meets Zhora Vartanov on the street and is happy to see him.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-112, 3; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 442.

1937

After December 27

He writes in the notebook that Tbilisi is not Georgia, Tbilisi is Armenia.

Source: MGL, d-112, 4; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 442;

1937

After December 27

He writes an untitled satirical poem “The basement where he will go...”.

Source: MGL, d-112, 5; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 442;

1937

After December 27

He writes an untitled poem “There is a city Ritsa in Abkhazia...”.

Source: MGL, d-112, 8; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 443;

1937

After December 27

He writes an untitled poem “To an inventor...”.

Source: MGL, d-112, 11; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 443;

1937

After December 27

He writes an untitled humorous poem dedicated to Giorgi Kuchishvili in Russian.

Source: MGL, d-112, 12-13; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 443-444;

1937

December 29

The first secretary of the Communist Party of Georgia, Kandid Charkviani, delivers a speech at the plenary session dedicated to Rustaveli of the Soviet Writers’ Union of the USSR, in which it is said about Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Epoch” that it is a hymn dedicated to socialist Georgia and its famous people who are building a happy life.

Source: K. Charkviani, “Soviet Literature of Georgia over the Last Five Years”, magazine Mnatobi, 1938, №1, p. 155-173.

1937

December

In the magazine Mnatobi, Besarion Zhghenti’s article “Shota Rustaveli and Socialist Modernity” is published, in which he references Galaktion’s phrase: “Our time also awaits a new Rustaveli”. He adds that Galaktion Tabidze sometimes transforms his deep poetic relationship with the environment into stanzas reminiscent of Rustaveli’s poem. As an illustration, he cites the words: “In the lines of the Tiger, I see the sky, the earth, and the human intertwined”.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1937, December, №12, p. 97.

1936-1937

He writes a poem “Atom”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4420; №7806; №3888; G. Tabidze, G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 127; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 573.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles “Poison” and “What do you take from the bosom?”

1937 or earlier

He sends a letter to Akaki Gatsserelia and discusses his book, which is to be published by the State Literary Publishing House in Moscow. Galaktion's Book is being published in Moscow for the first time, and careful selection of the poems is necessary. The poet expresses his desire for accurate proofs of the translations, ensuring that the final translations stay true to the meaning of the originals. In his opinion, the Book should feature fewer poems from the early period of his work.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-93; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 85;

Note: Akaki Gatsserelia was one of the compilers of this collection.

1937

Together with Giorgi Kuchishvili, he notices that a small acacia tree near their house has been broken by someone. The friends wrap the broken part with cloth and prop the tree up.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 260-261.

Dating: In the 1952 entry, it is mentioned that this happened 15 years ago.

1937

Galaktion Tabidze's "Selected Poems" is published in Russian in Moscow, preceded by a preface by Boris Turganov "Galaktion Tabidze's Poetry".

Source: Галактин Табидзе, Избранные стихи, М., 1937.

1937

Galaktion Tabidze's "Selected Poems" is published in Moscow under the editorship of Nikoloz Tikhonov, artistically arranged by Ucha Japaridze, and preceded by a foreword by Boris Turganov under the title "Galaktion Tabidze's Poetry".

Source: Табидзе Г.В., Избранные стихи, нар. поэт Грузии, Пер. под ред. Н. Тихонова, Вступ. статья Б. Турганова, Москва, Сов. писатель, 1937.

1937

He is discharged from the hospital and, upon returning home, sees five men near the entrance of his building. Olya has already been exiled, and Galaktion immediately realizes that these disguised agents have come to arrest him. He quickly comes to his senses, climbs onto a low decorative cement pillar in his yard, and starts shouting, "People!..." Hearing this, passengers from a nearby stopped tram rush toward him, shouting that something is wrong with Galaktion. Galaktion gestures toward the disguised agents and asks, "Why do they want my death?" The crowd rushed at the agents, but they managed to escape by running away. This is how the poet saved himself. He knew that no one was arrested in broad daylight and in plain sight. Either they were taken away quietly, or they were deceived - summoned and would go to the department on their own.

Source: Nodar Tabidze's record, GTDA, №1436, p. 2-3.

Dating: The record indicates that this happened in 1937 when he was discharged from the hospital and returned home.

1937

He writes a poem “Loneliness”.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 300;

1937

He publishes the poem “Tiger’s poem” in the collection “Georgian writers to Shota Rustaveli”.

Source: Collection “Georgian writers to Shota Rustaveli”, Tbilisi, 1937, p. 58.

1937

He writes an untitled poem “This year is an indigenous foundation...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 84-85; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 239-240;

Note: He writes an untitled poem “This year is an indigenous foundation...”.

1937

He publishes the poems “Invincible” and “Look!” in the collection “New Colchis”.

Source: Collection “New Colchis”, 1937, p. 71-72.

1937

He writes an untitled poem “Somewhere the Swamp of Chkvishi Rustles...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4684; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 143; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 789.

Note: The titles “Sestina” and “Mother” are crossed out.

1937 or later

Having met Ipolite Vartagava on the street, he greets him with a smile and tells him that he was going to come to his house, because they are going to print his poems in Moscow, they are urgently seeking for Russian specialists of interlinear and he needs his help. He promises that he will provide him with the already selected poems and asks him to remove the ones he doesn’t like. Ipolite thanks him and promises to do his best, but Galaktion’s poems are difficult to translate, and he is afraid of missing anything.

Source: Ip. Vartagava, Days from the Past, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 211.

1937 or later

He brings a collection of his own poems to Ipolite Vartagava, and in a short period of time he receives interlinear from him. Galaktion promises to pay royalties when the Book is published. Vartagava takes the offer of money as an insult and Galaktion feels embarrassed.

Source: Ip. Vartagava, Days from the Past, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 211.

1937 or later

In the notebook, he writes the phone number of Alexandre Abasheli.

Source: MGL, d-110, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 417;

1937 or later

In the notebook, he writes down a phrase he heard during a conversation, that a great upswing is followed by a great downswing.

Source: MGL, d-110, 11; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 419;

1937 or later

He writes an untitled one-stanza poem “Exploded like a mine...”.

Source: MGL, d-110, 11; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 419;

1937 or later

In the notebook, he makes excerpts from Brockhaus and Efron’s encyclopaedia about the Studio Monastery in Constantinople.

Source: MGL, d-110, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 419;

1937 or later

He makes an extract from the encyclopaedia about the work of the Venerable Theodosius of Pechora.

Source: MGL, d-110, 14-15; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 419-420;

1937 or later

He makes an extract from the encyclopaedia about the Iverta monastery of Athos and the icon of the Mother of God of Iveria.

Source: MGL, d-110, 17-21; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 420-421;

1937 or later

In the notebook, he writes lines from Alio Mirtskhulava’s poem “I and Baratashvili”: “Blue horses” are not as good as Baratashvili’s Pegasus”.

Source: MGL, d-110, 24; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 421;

1937 or later

He writes an untitled poem “You had, old poems...”.

Source: MGL, d-110, 25; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 421-422;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem “Great glory of the present”.

1937 or later

Someone Tamara Chuchulashvili jokingly writes in the notebook that she confirms the sale of her soul to the national poet of Georgia Galaktion Tabidze with her own signature.

Source: MGL, d-110, 28; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 421-422;

1937 or later

He writes in the notebook that Azerbaijanis mix up the Georgian words “მე კაი კაცო” (“You, a good man”) when speaking to each other in Azerbaijani.

Source: MGL, d-110, 58; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 423-424;

1937 or later

In the notebook, he writes the annotations of the drugs against rashes and weakness produced by the Moscow chemical factory “Galen-Moscow”.

Source: MGL, d-110, 64; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 423-424;

1937 or later

He writes an untitled one-stanza poem “Enmity that is in Europe...”.

Source: MGL, d-110, 59, 64; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 424, 425;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem “Two worlds”.

1937 or later

In the notebook, he writes the popular folk poem “Zestaponi, Zestaponi, I’m leaving you...”, which conveys the feelings of a Zestaponian peasant conscripted into the imperial army and remembers the invitation of the Russian Red Army by the Georgian Bolsheviks in 1921 to help the workers of Georgia.

Source: MGL, d-110, 61-62; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 424-425;

1937 or later

In the notebook, he makes a note about the meaning of the word “Chkvishi” and indicates that this word means a shepherd in Megrelian. He also mentions that the Megrelian surnames are still preserved in the village.

Source: MGL, d-110, 58; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 425;

1937 or later

He writes a one-stanza untitled poem “The time is like a sky full of clouds...”.

Source: MGL, d-110, 55; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 426;

1937 or later

He writes in the notebook that he comes out with the initiative of wearing tiger skin caps.

Source: MGL, d-110, 54; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 426;

1937 or later

He writes an untitled poem “Inexhaustible, countless...”.

Source: MGL, d-110, 53; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 426;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem “On Montmartre”.

1937 or later

In the notebook, he writes the list of authors of poems dedicated to him.

Source: MGL, d-110, 51; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 427;

1937 or later

He writes an untitled poem “I am writing to someone Meskhi Versifier...”.

Source: MGL, d-110, 48; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 427;

1937 or later

In the notebook, he writes a folk poem “If someone is in trouble...”.

Source: MGL, d-110, 54; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 428;

1937 or later

In the notebook he makes a short note on how to write “mother-tongue”, with or without a hyphen, and that it should be pronounced quickly.

Source: MGL, d-110, 43; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 429;

1937 or later

He writes a humorous poem “He was a profound philosopher...”.

Source: MGL, d-110, 40; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 429-430;

1937 or later

He writes an untitled poem “You sleep leaning on your right arm...”.

Source: MGL, d-110, 37; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 429;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem “Bas-relief”.

1937 or later

He makes an entry about his summer plans. He indicates that he wanted to use the summer wisely; either travel abroad, go to Central Asia, join an expedition to the North Pole, or relax at a resort. However, since none of these plans could be realized, the only remaining option was to visit the tea plantations in western Georgia to bring back “the story of the country’s salvation”. Galaktion notes that luck never favors him, and he is forced to head to the tea plantations in mid-August to avoid dying from hunger.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-496, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 478;

After 1937

He makes an entry in Russian titled “The Communist Manifesto”, in which he notes that the Communist Manifesto was first mentioned in Georgian poetry by Galaktion Tabidze in 1929, in a poem dedicated to the construction of the Transcaucasian hydroelectric plant. This poem was published in 1930 and was soon translated into Russian by Valerian Gaprindashvili under the title “The Old and the New Bridge”.

Source: MGL, d-483, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 362;

1938

January

Until 1938

He prepares for the 30th anniversary of his literary career. In connection with the anniversary, he plans to organize an exhibition that will reflect the poet's literary journey. The exhibition will be divided into two parts: from 1908 to 1917 and from 1917 to 1938. He wishes to display books published in Georgian and foreign languages, as well as newspapers and magazines with which he has collaborated, critical articles, essays, poems published about his books, event posters, and photographs. He intends to give special attention to the Anti-Fascist Congress in Paris.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-528, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 146.

1938

January 1

On behalf of the Presidium, the responsible secretary of the Writers' Union, Aljo Mashashvili, petitions the Council of People's Commissars to increase Galaktion Tabidze's personal pension in honour of the 30th anniversary of his poetic career.

Source: MGL, WUF №3.

1938

January 8

At four in the afternoon, while visiting Tbilisi, Abesalom hears a commotion among women on the stairs of Galaktion's house and recognizes his brother's name. He hurriedly ascends to the apartment and discovers Galaktion lying unconscious on the stairs, completely drunk. He takes the keys from Galaktion's pocket, brings him inside, and lays him on the bed. While undressing him, he notices that the pockets of his coat and trousers are torn, so he stitches them up.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, h-24551-327; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 168.

Dating: The time is specified in a letter dated January 8, 1938.

1938

January 8

Abesalom Tabidze, on behalf of Galaktion, drafts a letter to Lavrenti Beria in which he mentions that he has been working at the Samtredia Railway Secondary School for 26 years and expresses his wish to move to Tbilisi with his family for living, which would also be more convenient for Galaktion. He requests that the addressee allocate an apartment for him in Tbilisi. The letter is left for Galaktion by his brother to copy and send to Beria.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-69; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 65.

1938

January 8 or later

He receives a letter from his brother. Abesalom is concerned about his brother's drinking habits and advises him not to carry money in his pockets, so that his heart doesn't lead him to buy drinks somewhere. In extreme cases, it's better to bring wine home and drink it there. He writes that he found a receipt at his house, which indicates that his brother has pawned a ring and some other items at the pawnshop. He warns him that the deadline is tomorrow, and if he doesn't redeem them, they will be sold. He mentions that he bought him a shirt, and if he resolves the housing issue, he will also take care of buying a nice suit. He asks him to make sure to send a letter to Lavrenti Beria to request an apartment for him. It must be an apartment and not just a room, as he cannot accommodate his family in a single room.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, h-24551-327; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 168.

January 9

He addresses the State Pharmaceutical Directorate with a request, offering to purchase 200 tickets for the employees to attend his 30th anniversary celebration of literary activity on the evening of January 12 at 9 p.m. in the concert hall of the Rustaveli Theatre.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-136; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 105.

1938

January 9

He addresses the management of the department store with a request, offering to purchase 200 tickets for the employees to attend his 30th anniversary celebration of literary activity on the evening of January 12 at 9 p.m. in the concert hall of the Rustaveli Theatre.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-137; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 105.

1938

Until January 10

He notes the addresses of Elene Kartvelishvili and Ketevan Maghalashvili in the notebook.

Source: MGL, d-113, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 445;

1938

Until January 10

In the notebook, he writes information about the famous Armenian musician and folklorist Sghomon Sghomonian, who was called Komitas in the priesthood, that he was a clergyman who collected folklore and sang himself, he finally went to Paris and died there.

Source: MGL, d-113, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 446;

1938

January 10

He writes an announcement about the state circus performances in the notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-113, 8; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 446.

1938

After January 13

Eremia Astvatsaturov's article "Galaktion Tabidze" is published in magazine Chveni Taoba. The author notes that the poet entered the literary arena during the defeat of the 1905 revolution and was overcome by pessimism, because the first excitement was followed by hopelessness, especially since he was influenced by French and Russian symbolists. The poet thinks that he is a “passenger of another century” and can no longer see the prospect of renewal. He compares him to Nikoloz Baratashvili, who sought salvation in solitude due to the defeat of the conspiracy of 1832. He considers the weakness of Galaktion’s earlier poetry to be that he did not understand the inevitability and victory of the revolution, but unlike other decadent symbolists, he secretly carried a spark of hope. After the victory of the October Revolution of 1917, he was the first among the Georgian poets to raise the flag of freedom and started the militant poetry. Therefore, his work is the beginning of the poetic culture of the twentieth century, and on the 30th anniversary of his literary work, he still creates new samples of poetry with youthful energy.

Source: Er. Astvatsaturov, “Galaktion Tabidze”, magazine Chveni Taoba, 1938, December, №12, p. 37-44;

1938

January 20

He reads the newspaper Musha and creating rhymes based on the title Musha.

Source: MGL, t-657, newspaper Musha, January 20, №16g, p. 1, 4.

1938

January 23

He pays the rent of an apartment, 140 roubles.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-110, 52. G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 427.

1938

January

The magazine Mnatobi publishes the letter of Kandid Charkviani “Soviet literature of Georgia during the last five years” in which author Galaktion Tabidze’s work is also mentioned. A well-known party functionary calls the poem “Epoch” an anthem for the socialist homeland and praises Galaktion for the transformation it has undergone since the socialist revolution.

Source: K. Charkviani, “Soviet literature of Georgia during the last five years”, magazine Mnatobi, 1938, №1, p. 155-173.

February

1938

After February 5

He reads the Book “Ancient Poets on Arts” and making annotations. In the preface, he notes the complexity of the short Greek form of one of Alexander Pushkin’s epigrams, mentioning that the same can be said about lyric poetry. He cites a passage from “The Knight in the Panther’s Skin”: “A long story is briefly told; a poet is good for this”. He reflects that it is in this brevity and concentration that the power of poetry lies.

Source: MGL, t-162, “Античные поэты об искусстве”, Leningrad, 1938, p. 7.

1938

February 14

In the notebook, he writes a humorous poem “Athanasios is happy”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-110, 38; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 431.

1938

February 23

Lavrenti Dzidziguri visits the house to inform that Sandro Euli has money to give to him and that he should come by, but Galaktion is not home to meet him.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-231; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 271.

Dating: The date is indicated in Lavrenti Dzidziguri’s letter of February 24, 1938.

1938

February 24

He receives a short letter from Lavrenti Dzidziguri, stating that they have set aside money for Galaktion and that he must meet with Sandro Euli.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-231; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 271.

1938

February 26

An employee from the house-manager’s office knocks on the door. He enters the house and looks at the toilet, where water has poured from above. He tells Galaktion that there is no sign of water anywhere, to which the poet replies that the water is not only coming down to him, but also damaging the apothecary department downstairs. The employee of the house management asks: are you the writer Tabidze? Galaktion confirms, noting that the visitor is smiling ambiguously. Then the poet himself is interested in the last name of the household employee, to which the man replies that his last name is not important. Together, they go to the pharmacy department, where the traces of the water have almost been erased. The housekeeper concludes that there is no water, which Galaktion protests, but in vain. The poet is outraged by the foolish behaviour of the guest and thinks that he is a suspicious person.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-110, 32-34; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 433-434.

1938

February or later

He writes a poem “Somewhere, a Fire is Burning on the Ice”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4489; 325-d., p. 35; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 160.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Somewhere on the Ice” and without a title (“Somewhere, a Fire is Burning on the Ice...”).

Dating: The poem is placed among the entries from February to March 1938 in the notebook.

March

1938

March 4

Olya Okujava is very anxious because she knows nothing about Galaktion. She dreams of him at night and wakes up in the morning in tears.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-381; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 222-223.

Dating: This is mentioned in a letter dated March 5, 1938.

1938

After March 5

He receives a letter sent from Yaroslavl by Olya Okujava. The sender expresses concern that she is sending her eighth letter without receiving a response. She cannot understand what the issue is – has Galaktion perhaps believed that she is an enemy of the Soviet government? She recalls Ivan Bunin's poem about longing for a loved one's heart.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-381; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 222-223.

1938

After March 17

He receives a letter from his brother. Abesalom informs him that he is sending students on holidays on March 20 and plans to travel to Tbilisi on the 21st.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, h-24551-344; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 168.

1938

March 27

In the morning, he meets Elizbar Polumordvinov, who invites him to the buffet of the radio committee. Galaktion refuses because he is in the mood for a walk, he looks at the area of the cobblestone where the work of strengthening the bed of Mtkvari is going on, the house where Niko Pirosmiani lived, the place where he once fell asleep at night and his shoes were stolen. Then he goes up to Avlabari and watches how the workers try to dismantle the balcony of the old house. In the evening, he reads "The Knight in the Panther's Skin", which seems to call him that it's time to create something grand.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 129; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 294;

1938

March 28

The Moscow publishing house "Soviet Writer" receives feedback on his Russian-language Book "Selected Poems". 13-year-old reader Ivan Chepikov from Smolensk region writes that he reread the Book many times and learned a lot from it, because it is a very revolutionary book. In his opinion, future poets will learn a lot from Galaktion Tabidze. The second reader, 17-year-old farm worker Nikolai Sidamin, notes in his feedback that reading the selected poems of Galaktion Tabidze also made him want to be a poet. Galaktion enjoys reading these letters and plans to write back to young readers.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 130; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 295-296.

1938

March 28

He familiarizes himself to the press, which is full of letters dedicated to the 70th anniversary of Maxim Gorky. He thinks that the main thing is missing in the responses: the artistic, musical nature of the great writer, without which it is impossible to create something great.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 130; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 296.

1938

March 28

He writes a poem titled "Theodor Chudetsky", dedicated to his friend, the painter Theodor Chudetsky.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №3452. №325-d., p. 39; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 1972, p. 131.

1938

After March 28

He makes an entry in the notebook "Europe. Prologue", which is a commentary for his own poem - "Prologue". He reviews the issues raised in the poem: the excitement of the European press, the collapse of capitalist farms, the crisis of art, science, sports, etc.

Source: MGL, d-98, 135; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 298-299;

Note: The lines quoted in the record can be found in the version of the poem "Two Worlds" called "Prologue".

1938

After March 28

In the notebook, he makes a note about his poem "Europe, well, why do you want", in which he notes that this poem describes the main sign of the European crisis - the loss of the highest sense of happiness, which cannot be compensated by external activity.

Source: MGL, d-98, 136; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299;

Note: "Europe, well, why do you want it" is a variant of the poem "Undoubtedly in Hitler's heart...".

1938

After March 28

He writes an untitled poem "Star of dawn...".

Source: MGL, d-98, 137; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300;

1938

After March 28

He writes a poem "The first meeting".

Source: Autographs: MGL, Nd-98, №138, №141; №740-741; №29-a, p. 780-789; №45-a, p. 1208; №1024; №2543; №2026; №5973; №1821-1827; №1296; №7296; №2834-2836; №2660-2661; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 112;

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “As If I Don’t Love My Homeland”; “Kuta” – the Abkhazian name for Kutaisi; “The Old Village”; “As If I Don’t Love”; and without a title (with the beginnings: “Thoughtfully gazing at the mountain-hill...”; “Since that day, the Meskhi feels strong...”; “Oh, my heart...”; “It must leave the area filled with beautiful women...”; “From this tribune! As if I don’t love...”; “With passionate hands entwined, turned...”; “With the most difficult hands entwined...”; “To pull away...”).

1938

After March 28

He writes an untitled poem “This was a space...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 140; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 304-305;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem “Two worlds”.

1938

After March 28

He writes down words and phrases on a sheet of paper that are connected to certain memories.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №650, p. 1.

Dating: The list mentions Maxim Gorky’s anniversary, which was celebrated on March 28, 1938.

1938

March 30

He writes an untitled poem “Breeze, violet, daffodil...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №66-a., p. 1583; №2388; №2391; №5372; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 155.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “One Life”, “Multiplied by a Thousand”, and without a title (“The sun that has grown into the azure...”).

1938

After March 28

He writes an untitled poem “They tried and failed to destroy...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 94; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 247-248;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem “October ship”.

April

1938

April 1

He makes a list of household tasks to be completed in the spring.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-502, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 23-25;

1938

April 2

He writes an untitled poem beginning with “Above the mountains...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №882; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 156.

1938

April 3

He plans to clean and organize the house.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-114, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 447.

1938

April 4

He writes in the notebook the outline of a letter to be sent to the editors of the newspaper Pravda, in which he asks them to send the 224th issue of the newspaper of 1936 if they can.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-114, 4; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 448.

Note: It seems that Galaktion was asking for the wrong number of the newspaper. The material and photo dedicated to him were printed not in the 224th, but in the 244th issue of Pravda.

1938

April 4

In the notebook, he writes the draft of a letter to be sent to the publishing house “Soviet Writer”, in which he requests that they immediately send the author’s copies of his “selected poems” published in Russian.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-114, 5; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 448.

1938

April 5

He watches the movement of vehicles in the current Freedom Square of Yerevan. In the notebook, he notes that about two hundred cars passed by in half an hour.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-110, 5; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 417.

1938

April 6

He plans to take a bath, mend his shoes and iron his pants.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-114, 7; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 449.

1938

April 8

He starts tidying up the house and putting things in order.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-114, 7; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 449.

1938

April 9

He washes the bottles, cleans the dust, and buys enough tobacco for two weeks.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-114, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 451.

1938

April 9 or later

In the notebook, he writes words related to gold and their Russian equivalents.

Source: MGL, d-114, 9; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 450;

1938

April 10

He is tidying up the balcony of the apartment. From the balcony, he carries firewood into the kitchen, washes and organizes the socks.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-114, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 451.

1938

April 11

He beats a carpet and cleaning cloths. He cleans the balcony from dust, cleans the rooms of the house, the kitchen, the bathroom and the toilet, throws away the garbage.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-114, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 451.

1938

April 11

A telephone line is installed into Galaktion's apartment.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-114, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 451.

1938

April 12

He looks at the books presented to him by Georgian and Russian authors.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-114, 14; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 452.

1938

April 14

He hems up socks.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-114, 14; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 452.

1938

April 14

Shalva Radiani visits him. He lends him 30 roubles.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-114, 14; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 452.

Note: Shalva Radiani is mentioned only by name in the record.

1938

April 15

He notices that kerosene is dripping from the kerosene stove and spoiling the floor. So, he plans to take it in for repair.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-114, 14; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 452.

1938

April 15

The water from the neighbours damages the ceiling of the bathroom. Therefore, the neighbour brings a worker to his apartment, and they solve the problem.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-114, 14; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 452.

1938

April 16

He takes shoes to be repaired.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-114, 15; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 452.

1938

April 16

He buys products and newspapers.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-114, 15; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 452.

1938

April 16

For the first time in the last two weeks, he has a hot meal, he eats beans, while regretting that he has spent too much.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-114, 15; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 452.

1938

April 16

He edits the poem "From traveller's letters".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-114, 15; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 453.

1938

April 16

He gets his coat, jackets and pants out of the laundry room and goes to the shoe store for inner soles. While standing in line, somebody quietly opens the suitcase and steal the jacket.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-114, 15; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 453.

1938

April 16

He calls Alexandre Abasheli, who informs that two poems have been removed from his “Selected Poems” to be published in Russian, and they are adding Boris Serebryakov’s translations instead.
Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-114, 15; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 453.

1938

April 16

He buys meat, lard, bread, cigarettes, newspapers, and writes down the spent amount in the notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-114, 15; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 453.

1938

April 16

He reads “Boris Godunov” by Alexander Pushkin, which fills him with great pleasure.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-114, 15; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 453.

1938

April 17

He goes to the bath.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-114, 15; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 453.

1938

April 18

He cleans the rooms, the bathroom, buys diapers and cigarettes, has a coat and a jacket sewn.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-114, 15; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 453.

1938

April 20

He takes out the shoes sent for repair.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-114, 16; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 453.

1938

April 20

He meets Shalva Radiani.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-114, 16; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 453.

Note: Shalva Radiani is mentioned only by name in the record.

1938

April 21

He finds a small child’s guitar on his balcony and can’t figure out how it got there.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-114, 16; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 453.

1938

April 22

On the street, he meets Ivane Ioseliani, then Lidia Megrelidze, Daria Akhvlediani and Theodor Chudetsky.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-114, 16; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 453.

Note: Lidia Megrelidze, Daria Akhvlediani and Theodor Chudetsky are mentioned only by their names in the record.

1938

April 27

He is satisfied with the employees of the Art Palace.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 95.

May

1938

May 9

The state publishing house tells him that the printing of the first volume of his works has started and they hope that it will be finished soon.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-96, 56; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 114.

1938

After May 9

The first volume of Galaktion Tabidze's eight-volume works is published, which includes 397 poems. These works are: "The Moon of Mtatsminda", "Blue Horses", "This is Native Wind", "The Moon of Kakheti", ("Natela from Tsinandali..."), "Look: Kakheti", "Tbilisi", "The White Pelican", "Evening", "Candle", "Chronology of One Day", "The Sky of Tbilisi is a Martyr", "Metekhi Stood Gray, Steep", "At the End of an Unknown Street", ("Today May is in Various Colours..."), "On the Balcony", "It Will Come... But When?" "Tbilisi Sleeps a Heavy Sleep", "The Walnut Tree on Mtatsminda", ("Your Old Age..."), "Mary", "The Fields Are Spreading", "You by the Sea", "Serenade", "From Fairytales", "Farewell", "To Pirimze", "Fairy Tale", "A Gentle Manuscript", "Homeland", "Aragvi", "Old Ornament", "Heavy Winter", ("The White Days Are Coming..."), "Omnibus", "Beet", "Letter from the Village", "What Will You Say?", "Over There a Nushi", "Almonds There", "Almonds Here", "Survival of the Poplar Tree", "To Platans of Shindisi", "The Spirit of the Tides Comes Floating", "A Toast to Him", "Tomorrow Will Take Care of Tomorrow", "Flowers and Wine", ("The Snow Madonna Follows the Ship"), "Let Us Reach", "They Will Blame the Wine", "This Sleeping Mountain and Field", "The Oldest Wine", "The Snow Was Slanting, Sloping", "It's Time", "From Winter's Motifs", "My Life", "A broken off Balcony", "Shrouded Forest", "Your Sorrow", "Afternoon Diligence", "On the Road", "June Has Passed", ("Will It be Heard..."), "From the Old Notebook", "The Further You Are", ("People Are Getting Mixed, People Are Fussing..."), "Fields", "This Was Before", "In Reality, as in Dreams", "I Have Seen Somewhere", "The Moon in the Well", "The Scythe Is Screaming", "Greetings to the Blooming Fields", ("I Can No Longer See with My Eyes..."), "The Memory of Our Grove", "The First Ears of Grains", "Here! Here You Are!", "The Old Mill", "Woman!", "On the Road, I Am a Traveler", "Distant Ice of the Caucasus", "A Woman from the Mountains”, “Near the Ruins of the Fortress”, “Hyacinth”, (“The Ancestors Will Open Doors For Him...”), “Time Has Passed”, “The Old Palace”, “They Will Protect You”, “Until Mtskheta”, “Beyond Avchala”, “From Mtskheta”, (“October the Nineth...”), “Only Lullaby”, “As If Not Here”, “From the Tunnels”, “On the Military Road”, “Shadows of the Past”, “Night in the Gorge”, “Native Ephemera”, “Poetry – Above All”, “When Actaeon, Son of Aresteas”, “The Years Will Pass Old Ones”, “Old Magazines”, “Our Magazine”, “In the Café”, “The Street”, “Under the marble”, (“Others are screeching like crows...”), (“I loved the tune warmed by feeling...”), “You At Least One”, (“Whether a word of morality suits a child...”), “Distant with you”, “It”, (“I cast the net of fate into the sea...”), “Reconciliation”, “When Ilia was killed in Tsitsamuri”, “The ghost of Akaki”, “The poem of the tiger”, “White winds”, “Naked”, “I remember Michelangelo”, “The obelisk”, “Heart”, “Suspended monument”, “Marble”, “The curtain rises”, (“Soon discoloured...”), “Wagner”, (“Then, he abandoned everyone and everything...”), “Bridge Rialto over the mountain river”, “Musical phantasm”, (“Like many spreading roses”), “Music – sudden”, “Ah, it’s getting dark”, “To Gautier”, (“Two seas met one another...”), (“When the night around is dark...”), “All affairs”, “There is no more flautist”, “Consolation”, “With an old motif”, “Parallel”, “Art”, “Letter to friends”, “Woman and art”, “Daphne”, “To the poet”, “What is this feeling”, “Creation”, “To memory”, “About veils and violies”, “Ephemera Once again”, “Your toast”, “Snow”, “It snowed in the winter gardens”, “With snow and frost”, “Etching”, “Nanny”, “Poplars in the snow”, “May blossoms”, “To white flowers”, (“Under the white snow...”), “Voiles”, “It was at the end of October”, “No return”, (“Oh, today it is autumn...”), “With Mary’s eyes”, “I and the night”, (“The stars in the sky are sleeping...”), “Invisible”, “The starry dome shines”, “On the barren”, “Silence”, “At the new dawn”, (“Often I dream and gaze at the sky...”), “Chandelier”, “With May’s arrow”, “It’s quiet”, “Yesterday all day”, “The affectionate garden has fallen asleep”, “The moon has hidden behind the mountain”, “A deer’s jump has shone brightly again”, “Letter to her”, “Faith is so easy”, “Mars”, “The horn groans”, (“Her beauty is astonishing...”), “Night, what has happened to you”, (“May’s eyes intoxicate me again...”), “It was an old, familiar thought”, “Primitive”, “Death due to the moon”, “Desert”, “The mysterious second face”, “Once again, dream and love”, “He was walking down the street alone”, “The leaves greet me with a quiet rustle”, “Like wandering light”, “By the window”, “Bell tower in the desert”, “Chianures”, “Awaiting the storm”, (“From the high floor, the sound of the piano...”), “On the last day”, “Old age”, (“I searched for you everywhere... the heat was suffocating me...”), “I will come”, “Dream”, “The rustling of the curtains”, “Where?” “Beyond fate!” “You will burn with excitement again”, “What time is it?” “Peach flowers”, “Peach branch, tired branch”, “Cheers to those peaches, to those peach flowers!” (“I will remember again those pink peaches...”), “Strange palace”, “From horizon to zenith”, “Without love”, “The night met the day”, (“Among the fields, a peaceful, quiet noise was heard...”), “How thirsty I am”, “My star”, “Downpour”, “I will come and kiss you”, “They were agitated”, “Eyes”, “Abed”, “On the train”, “Wine-coloured river!” “I felt it all day”, “When I am captured by the moon”, “With burning beauty”, “A thousand boats reached the shore”, “The poplars bend like bows”, “Believe it if you don’t believe”, (“The road is not worth the trouble...”), “Drifting on the sea like a log”, “Inesa”, “Two blessed maidens”, “Got More Surprised”, “Her gaze, soft and moonlit”, “You are thirteen”, “The heart of existence”, “Careful”, “From the pool”, “I hear the longed-for voice”, “It’s no time for Romancero”, “August has arrived”, “I still deserved it”, “From folk motifs”, “Recollection”, (“The envious ones fought...”), (“Evening, I know, you will enter the garden from the church”), “Nowhere, never”, “The otherworldly shadow”, “Once”, “The dusk of night disappeared”, “The one I loved”, “Autumn in the sanctuary of the fathers of ‘Immaculate Conception’”, “A table with alembics”, “Ten years ago”, “But what can I do?” “Explanation”, “Fragment of autumn”, “Tapestry”, “Evening in the village”, “Autumn flowers”, “From autumn motifs”, “To the sick”, “It’s autumn”, “More than prayer”, “Autumn”, “Yellow leaf”, “Something else... everything”, “Autumn day”, “Gentle autumn is coming”, “Leaves”, “The horizon glimmers slightly”, “For what reason?”, (“The dying of strings... the slow weeping of autumn...”), “You and autumn”, (“The whisper of the bluest velvet...”), “Rain is about to come”, “The last companion”, “The soul is sorrowful”, “The peaceful song of the sisters”, “Leaves are scattered on the road”, “Autumn morning”, “My heart, what is happening to you?”, “Hasn’t Perished”, “Autumn is coming”, “You and autumn”, “Once”, “Wind”, “Elegy”, “Last night, the wind was blowing”, “Cried by the wind”, “Dressed in transparent blonde laces”, “What a sad lullaby the wind sings”, “We crossed fierce seas”, “Late dream”, “The day has passed”, “The wind knocked the crow’s nest”, “Azure or a rose in the sand”, “Again in the forest”, “The Memory of a dead end”, “In the forest”, “The oak”, “The forest took me away”, “Green stripe of the mountain”, “Night will fall in the forest someday”, “The wind of memories”, “Fire, sword”, “Aspen”, “I am genius Rimaneli”, “Beneath tired eyelids”, “The shadow of leaves”, “Orchids”, “The first of May”, “Will not renew, will not return”, “The virgin”, “Time”, “Fate”, “Everything has changed colour”, (“In the blossomed garden, the young flower...”), “Look into my eyes”, “We meet again”, “With hidden pains”, “Closed eyes”, “Guest of the dusk”, “Futile attempt”, “Dressed in black like an elegy”, “Two”, “Three clouds”, “Evening”, “Endless, boundless”, “Sunset”, “Conversation about Edgar”, “Where the end was”, “New Year’s ephemera”, “Hetaira”, “The gravedigger”, (“The foliage rustled in the forest...”), “Dream in shackles”, “Never do I long for freedom as much”, “Dream on the cliff”, “The heart renewed”, (“There, the mountain stream...”), “Let the winds be windy!” “In the mud”, “Black raven”, “Sing me something”, “I gaze at this bottomless sea”, “Like the forest and fields after a storm”, “Traveler’s song”, “The automobile”, “Edgar for the third time”, “Sometimes in the sound of tumultuous city”, “Suddenly startled night”, “The mountains of Guria”, “In the narrow cliffs of Dariali”, “These flowers”, “This storm brings novelty”, “Lift the sun higher, higher!” “I love the storm alone”, “Aurora”, “A moment”, “The woman of flowers”, “I.A.”, “I and the iris”, “Flowers – moments”, “Flowers”, “I was born at dawn”, “You, Song, Mute”, “How beautiful the dew was”, “The first rose”, “Candles”, “You are late”, “Chery-plum, a seven-year-old child”, “Children in a café”, “Days of childhood”, “On the ship”, “Child in the newspapers”, “Towers”, “Lily on wings”, “Like a dream”, “Ephemera of the sea”, “The sound of gunfire in the mountains”, “Roar”, “Futile cry”, “City on the water”, “The last dispatch”, “The ship ‘Daland,’” “Where once with dreaming sails”, “May brought azure seas again”, “Calm sea”, “You by the sea”, “On dreamy repose” and “Ephemera”.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in eight volumes, vol. I, 1937; G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-96, 56; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 114.

Note: The volume was released much later than the second volume. The book's editor is Shalva Radiani. The volume is preceded by a lengthy introductory article by Shalva Radiani titled "The Poetry of Galaktion Tabidze". The Book consists of 492 pages, with a print run of 3,000 copies. It was sent to press on November 16, 1936, and signed for printing on December 7, 1937. The volume includes 397 poems, of which only one poem, "Through the Eyes of Mary", is published for the first time.

June

1938

After June 2

The Book "Soviet Georgia over 17 Years" states that working on themes of socialist reality has added new creative energy to the leading masters of pre-revolutionary Georgian poetry, among whom is Galaktion Tabidze. The poet, who had previously been overwhelmed by disappointment in his work, later transformed into an inspired singer of the heroic days of the new era.

Source: "Soviet Georgia over 17 Years", a political-economic review, Stade Publishing House, 1938, p. 88.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on June 2, 1938.

1938

Until June

He writes a poem titled "The Great Glory of the Present".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №1079; № 5559; №6175; №325-d., p. 24; №325-d., p. 34; №28897-50, p. 4; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 158.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "My Poems" and without a title ("My Poems, Forever").

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1938

June 28

He finds a letter from his brother at home. Abesalom complains that he visited him, but he had no idea where he was. He writes that he bought him white shoes and left them, but if they don't fit, he shouldn't sell them. He advises him to distance himself from Tbilisi and from those people who wish to drown him in wine, suggesting that he should go to a sanatorium for a vacation.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, h-24551-328; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 169.

1938

June

In the magazine Mnatobi, the poem "The Great Glory of the Present" is published.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1938, №6, June, p. 3.

July

1938

After July 20

He receives a letter sent from Yaroslavl by Olya Okujava. The sender writes that every morning, she sends greetings through the sparrows that fly to her window and is waiting for a response. It has been a year and nine months since she has heard anything from him; she has received neither a letter nor the 50 roubles that would have slightly alleviated her situation. She writes that in an age of great humanism, such suffering of a person cannot be allowed, and he should at least write something.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-382; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 223-224.

August

1938

Until August

He grants power of attorney to his brother, Abesalom, to collect his pension for the month of August on his behalf.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-636, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 437.

1938

After August 11

He finds a letter from his brother at home. Before returning to the village, Abesalom advises him to make sure to go on a vacation.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, h-24551-329; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 169.

1938

August 12

A flaw has been discovered two months later in his Book "Selected poems" published in Russian by the publishing house "Zarya Vostoka", and the poet regrets that they did not manage to correct it for so long.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-116, 3; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 459.

1938

Until August 14

In his diary, he writes that travelling to Svaneti is completely impossible and lists the reasons: the collection of his selected poems, to be published by Zarya Vostoka, requires his close supervision; his financial situation remains unsettled; he needs to travel to Chkvishi to gather materials for his autobiography; and he must also go to Gori to prepare a Book dedicated to the 60th anniversary of Stalin's birth, which would be impractical from Svaneti due to the lack of necessary resources there.

Source: MGL, Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 310.

1938

Until August 14

Corrected and re-bound parts of Galaktion's new Russian-language Book "Selected Poems" are being transferred to the warehouse of the publishing house "Zarya Vostoka".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-116, 3; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 459.

Dating: Information on this is given in the entry of August 14, 1938.

1938

August 14

He sends information to the Georgian Telegraph Agency and the Radio Committee that his Russian-language Book "Selected Poems" is ready for distribution.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-116, 3; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 459.

1938

August 16

He receives copyright copies of "Selected Poems" published by the publishing house "Zarya Vostoka".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-116, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 458.

1938

August 16

At 9 o'clock in the evening, Radio Georgia broadcasts information about the publication of Galaktion Tabidze's "Selected Poems" in Russian and Georgian languages.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-116, 3; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 459.

1938

August 16 or later

In his diary, he writes that the publishing house Zarya Vostoka printed his Book Selected Poems in Russian, which contains around two hundred pages and includes over seventy poems. This edition is the most extensive compared to previous Russian editions of his work. The 1933 edition featured 17 poems, the 1935 edition had 37 poems, and the 1937 Moscow edition also contained 37 poems. The poems in this latest edition were translated by sixteen poets, including Nikolai Tikhonov, Pavel Antokolsky, Nikolai Bobyryev, Ryurik Ivnev, Valerian Gaprindashvili, Elene Sheri, Mikhail Troitsky, Boris Brik, Vsevolod Rozhdestvensky, Boris Serebryakov, Alexandre Kancheli, Lev Penkovsky, Panteleimon Petrenko, Dimitry Petrovsky, and others. The book's design was created by the artist Guro.

Source: MGL, d-501, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 18;

1938

After August 16

He writes an informational text in the third person in Russian, titled "The New Book of the National Poet of Georgia, Order Bearer Galaktion Tabidze in Russian", noting that the publishing house Zarya Vostoka has printed the poet's "Selected Poems", which is the most complete of his books published in Russian. He points out that the collection includes translations by 16 different poets.

Source: MGL, d-647, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 207;

1938

August 17

He is dissatisfied with the fact that information about the publication of his "selected poems" in Russian was not published either in Zarya Vostoka and Vecherniy Tbilisi or in the Georgian-language newspaper Musha. He feels that they are not benevolent towards him in the latter.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-116, 3; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 459.

1938

August 17

He writes in the notebook that there will be special radio programs dedicated to his new Book on October 21st and 24th.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-116, 3; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 459.

1938

August 17

Galaktion's "Selected Poems" published in Russian are sent to Baku, Tashkent, Stalino (present-day Donetsk), Minsk, Makhachkala, Kokand (Uzbekistan), Odessa, Sokhumi, Nalchik, Vinnytsia (Ukraine) and Dnipropetrovsk. The collection is also exhibited in Tbilisi bookstores.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-116, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 458.

1938

August 18

He writes in the notebook that he has not given the new Book to anyone yet. He is glad that there is already a great interest in the collection.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-116, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 458.

1938

August 19 or earlier

Simon Tsverava reads Galaktion's "Selected Poems" published in Russian and tells the poet that he doesn't like Elena Sher's translations.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-116, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 458.

Note: Elena Sher is mentioned only by her last name in the record.

Dating: Information is in the August 19 entry.

1938

August 19

He writes in the notebook that the Union of Writers is planning to hold a discussion about his newly published “Selected Poems” in Russian, and three speakers have been chosen.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-116, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 458.

1938

August 26 or earlier

Giorgi Bebutov, an employee of the publishing house “Zarya Vostoka”, tells him that he does not like the design of his newly published “Selected Poems” in Russian.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-116, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 459.

Note: Giorgi Bebutov is mentioned only by his last name in the record.

Dating: Information is in the August 26 entry.

1938

August 27

Giorgi Bebutov, an employee of Zarya Vostoka, tells him that the distribution of his new Russian-language Book “Selected Poems” has been stopped because the lines in the poem “John Reed” are messed up. Galaktion is very heartbroken.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-116, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 459.

Note: Giorgi Bebutov is mentioned only by his last name in the record.

1938

August 28

The remaining copies of the Russian edition of Galaktion’s “Selected Poems” are being sent back to the publisher’s bindery to fix a technical flaw in the book.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-116, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 459.

1938

August or later

Due to illness, he writes a power of attorney to his brother, Prokle (Abesalom) Tabidze, authorizing him to collect his August pension from the savings office.

Source: V. Javakhadze, “Unknown. Apology of Galaktion Tabidze”, Tbilisi, 2020, p. 154.

September

1938

September 4

Akaki Tatarishvili, in the letter “Poetry of People’s Friendship” published in the newspaper Pravda, talks about the period of Menshevism domination in Georgia and points out that it was this shameful era that Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Press” echoed, in which he talks about the artificially stirred up feud between nations.

Source: A. Татаришвили, Поэзия дружбы народов, newspaper “Правда”, 1938, №244, (September 4) p. 3.

1938

September 6

He arrives in Borjomi and is accommodated in a sanatorium room for eight people.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-638, 1; AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 463.

1938

September 6

After a sleepless night, he gets up at 6 a.m. and feels sick.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-117, 9; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 463.

1938

September 6

He complains of lack of appetite and refuses to eat breakfast.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-117, 9; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 463.

1938

September 6

The chief doctor of the Borjomi sanatorium fills out his questionnaire in the presence of Galaktion.

The poet is in such a bad mood that he is afraid not to cry and be ashamed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-117, 9; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 463.

1938

September 6 or later

In the notebook, he writes a quote from the story "Portrait" by the Russian writer Nikolai Gogol.

Source: MGL, d-117, 30; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 465;

1938

September 6 or later

He writes in the notebook that after the age of 35 a person loses height.

Source: MGL, d-117, 30; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 465;

1938

September 6 or later

He writes the phone numbers of magazine-newspaper editors and members of the Union of Writers in the notebook.

Source: MGL, d-117, 33,35.; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 466-467;

1938

September 6 or later

In the notebook, he writes what Ivan Turgenev said to Gustave Flaubert: Like a room filled with the smell of musk, which you can't get rid of, I constantly feel the smell of decay, destruction and death around me.

Source: MGL, d-117, 60; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 472-473;

1938

September 6 or later

In the notebook, he writes the words of a sick person that he has no luck, because if a strand of a woman's hair falls into the cooking pot, he will surely have that plate when the food is distributed.

Source: MGL, d-117, 61; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 473;

1938

September 6 or later

He writes in the notebook that there was some Mirianashvili, who pretends to be a public poet, goes to resorts and makes money. This person reminds him of the character of Gogol's "Revisor" Khlestakov.

Source: MGL, d-117, 68; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 473;

1938

September 6 or later

In the notebook, he writes the words of Ilia Chavchavadze that the conscience is such a string, which a dishonest man uses it as he wishes.

Source: MGL, d-117, 66; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 474;

1938

After September 6

He writes an untitled poem "Near azure sky...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4440; №5365; №60-d., გ. 62-63; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 156; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 375;

Note: The poem is also found under the titles "Mont Blanc", "Tergi", and untitled ("The Heart of Azure...").

1938

After September 6

In the notebook, he writes quotes about Ivan Turgenev in Russian, in which it is said that Turgenev's prose is characterized by linguistic precision and the best reflection of Russian nature.

Source: MGL, d-117, 4-5; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 460;

1938

September 7

He writes a humorous poem "The doctor told me that you will cure...".

Source: MGL, d-117, 11; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 463.

1938

September 8

He is bothered by the hot weather, but he is satisfied that he moved to a separate room in the sanatorium.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-117, 11; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 463.

1938September 8

He observes the vacationers of the sanatorium, he is surprised how Russians suddenly get to know each other and pair up, and he writes about it in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-117, 11; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 463.

1938Until September 10

After a medical examination at the Borjomi sanatorium, a diagnosis of myocardial neurasthenia is identified.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-117, 50 AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 470.

Dating: This information is on the same page before the record dates September 10.

1938September 10

The doctor examines him and writes in the "medical history" that he feels well, but his heartbeat is weak and fast.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-117, 51; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 471.

1938September 12

In the notebook, he writes one hundred names of cigarettes produced from different places.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-117, 15-27; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 464.

1938September 14

In the notebook, he writes the text of a poster posted in the Borjomi sanatorium, which calls on Soviet citizens to protect public property from "robbers, thieves and parasites".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-117, 29; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 465.

1938September 15

A neuropathologist examines him in the Borjomi sanatorium and diagnoses him with acute functional neurosis. He prescribes mineral baths and dust showers.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-117, 51; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 471.

1938

September 15

In the sanatorium of Borjomi, a doctor examines the throat, diagnoses chronic laryngitis and prescribes inhalation treatment.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-117, 51; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 471.

1938

September 15

He listens to the humorous amorous song of Russian women and writes the text in his book.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-117, 32; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 466.

Note: The date of the entry is indicated by the poet as 15.X, although this must be a slip of the pen, because the text is placed between the entries of September 14 and 16.

1938

September 15 or later

In the notebook, he makes a note about a species of bird - the magpie - which kills itself when caught. He remembers that his housekeeper called a woman this word.

Source: MGL, d-117, 32; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 466;

1938

September 16

He visits the Borjomi orangery and writes the names of some plants in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-117, 34; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 466.

1938

After September 19

He receives a letter from Abesalom Tabidze, sent from Samtredia. His brother informs him that he is very happy that Galaktion has started treatment. He writes that he arrived in Tbilisi on September 18 and found a letter from Galaktion at his home. The telephone had been disconnected due to non-payment, but he couldn't have it reconnected because it was a holiday. Abesalom asks him to undergo the complete treatment and, if possible, to take care of his brother's work matters as well.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 179;

1938

September 21

He writes information about the geographical location and environment of Borjomi in the notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-117, 67-69; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 475.

1938

September 21

Together with some sanatorium vacationers, he climbs to the Tskhratskaro pass.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-117, 69; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 475.

1938

September 22

The following story is written in the notebook: a peasant who had three children was dissatisfied with his youngest son and always told him that he would not become a man. The son did not accept his father's rebuke. One day he disappeared. His father searched for a long time but could not find a trace of him. Fate smiled on his son, and he became the pasha of the vilayet. Once he decided to visit his family, returned to the village and approached his native house. His father was in the field and when he was informed that Pasha had come to visit him, he returned excitedly. The father answered the questions of his son dressed in Pasha's clothes in such a way that he did not recognize him. He told him that his wife died, one child died, and the other was sent to another village. When he mentioned that the third son ran away from home, the son couldn't wait any longer and proudly told him: I am your youngest son, you kept telling me that no man should come out of you, and lo and behold, he did! The old man was silent for a while, and then he spoke: if you were a man, you wouldn't have chased the frightened old father out of the field with a stick. After finishing the story, Galaktion writes the phrase in Russian in the notebook: "The inner dignity of a person".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-117, 36-44; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 467-469.

1938

September 22

In the notebook, titled "Reap what you sow", he writes a story about a rich merchant who befriended a stranger and spared nothing for him. Once this merchant, under the supervision of his godson, sent his caravan to a place from which no one returned unscathed, but the journey ended peacefully. It turned out that his new friend was one of the caravan robbers. He recognized the godson of his benevolent merchant and did not rob his friends' caravan. In return, he even gave them his share of the next robbery. After returning to the city, he revealed the story of his business to the merchant, because he thought that they should have nothing to hide from each other.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-117, 46-49; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 469-470.

1938

September 25

In the notebook, he writes down the conversation he heard in the Borjomi sanatorium. One tells the other that a general mobilization has been announced in Czechoslovakia and a one-eyed general will be appointed as the commander-in-chief, to which the other replies that the situation is such that a one-eyed person can't do anything, even a two-eyed one.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-117, 65; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 474.

Note: The one-eyed general refers to General Jan Syrový, who was elected as the head of the provisional government on September 22, 1938. As for Czechoslovakia's current situation, it has gone really badly, and the country was forced to sign the disastrous Munich Agreement.

1938

September 26

He is in the sanatorium of Borjomi. He looks at his “disease history” and writes individual data in his diary.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-117, 50 AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 470.

1938

September 27

In the notebook he writes that it was cold in Borjomi. If a few days ago it was 27 degrees, now it has dropped to 9.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-117, 55; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 471.

1938

September 28

He takes mud baths and undergoes inhalation therapy.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-117, 55; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 471.

1938

September 28

He visits Borjomi Museum.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-117, 55; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 471.

1938

September 28

He writes in the notebook the results of almost one month of treatment. He notes that his appetite has increased, his hand tremors have disappeared, he no longer needs alcohol, his neurosis has disappeared, he no longer has the mania of persecution and fear of people, his voice has returned, and his sleep has improved. He thinks that only his heart condition has not improved, and he will have to continue treatment in Tbilisi.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-117, 56; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 472.

1938

September 28

He visits the Borjomi Museum. Galaktion likes the individual exhibits, especially the English engraving depicting deer hunting. He writes his impressions in the notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-117, 8-9; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 461.

1938

September 28

He writes an untitled poem, “My appetite for food has increased...”.

Source: MGL, d-638, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 464.

1938

September 28 or later

He writes the list of species of plants, animals and birds common in the Borjomi region in his notebook.

Source: MGL, d-117, 10,12,14,16; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 461-462;

1938

September 29

He writes in the notebook that his books should be translated into Ukrainian, Tajik, Azerbaijani, Belarusian, Kyrgyz, Russian, Armenian, Uzbek, Turkmen, Kazakh and Abkhaz languages.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-117, 58; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 472.

1938

September 30

He returns to Tbilisi from Borjomi. He is trying to find out what is going on with his recently published Book of "Selected Poems" in Russian, but he can't find out anything.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-116, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 459.

October

1938

October 1

He goes to the publishing house to find out about his new Russian-language book, "Selected Poems". There he learns that the error in 1000 copies still needs to be corrected, and he does not like the situation in the printing house.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-116, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 459.

1938

October 2

He receives confirmation from the Georgian Telegram Agency that they will spread information about his new book, "Selected Poems", published in Russian, and the radio committee promises to organize two evenings in Georgian and Russian languages.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-116, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 459.

1938

Until October 5

He sends Olya Okujava 50 roubles to Yaroslavl.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-383; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 224-225.

Dating: The fact is mentioned in Olya Okujava's letter dated October 5, 1938.

1938

After October 5

He receives a letter sent from Yaroslavl by Olya Okujava. The sender writes that for the first time, she received 50 roubles from him and learned that he is alive. She writes that she is impressed by the 1937 academic edition of Gogol's works, especially his story "Dead Souls" and, in particular, its lyrical digressions. She also likes Vikenty Veresaev's "How Gogol Worked" and recommends purchasing both books. She writes that she misses the scent of his manuscripts but is afraid to look at them, fearing their reproach or rejection.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-383; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 224-225.

1938

After October 8

He receives a letter from his brother, who informs him that the child is in the children's ward of the Aramyants Hospital in Tbilisi. His brother writes that when he arrives in Tbilisi, he will buy him a coat, so that he doesn't have to go through the winter with his old one.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, h-24551-330; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 171.

1938

October 12

By chance, he meets Pavle Ingorokva, who tells him that in the last few days they have met several times by chance, which must be a sign of great sympathy for each other. He thinks that Pavle Ingorokva is a great person.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 134; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 298.

Dating: In a note dated October 14, 1938, Galaktion notes that the fact happened "the day before yesterday", that is, on October 12.

1938

October 14

The deputy director of the Institute of Physiotherapy notices him walking along the street and stops the car. Together they go to the monument of Rustaveli. He notices how a young woman sitting in a car shows interest in him, whom the deputy director introduces as a colleague.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 134; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 297.

Note: It is possible that the deputy director of the Institute of Physiotherapy mentioned in the note is Giorgi Tevdoradze, because in the same note Galaktion gratefully mentions that Dr. Giorgi Tevdoradze gave me good advice today.

1938

October 14

He gives texts to Georgian Telegram Agency and Radio Committee.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 134; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 298.

Note: It is unclear what kind of texts Galaktion gave to the named institutions.

1938

October 14

Translator Giorgi Bebutov shows the October 10 issue of Kurortnaya Gazeta. There is a feuilleton about Galaktion in it - the “people’s singer” makes the poet very happy.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-98, 134; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 298.

1938

October 14

He receives advice from Dr. Giorgi Tevdoradze, which he considers important.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-98, 134; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 298.

1938

Until October 15

He writes an untitled poem “You were homeless...”.

Source: MGL, d-118, 11-29; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 480-494;

1938

October 15

He makes excerpts from his own poem “Epoch” in his notebook.

Source: MGL, d-118, 11-29; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 480-494.

1938

October 27

He buys a new watch.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-73, 128; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 344.

1938

October 27

Davit Gvelesiani begins painting a new portrait of Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-73, 128; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 344.

Note: Davit Gvelesiani is referred to in the source as Datiko.

1938

October 27

He plans to meet with Kote Potskhverashvili in the coming days and obtain the sheet music for the song written about his poem “Poetry Above All” from Dimitri Arakishvili, in connection with the celebration of the 30th anniversary of his debut in the literary field.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-73, 128; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 344.

1938

October 27

In his diary, he writes that in connection with the celebration of the 30th anniversary of his debut in the literary field, the issues of choirs and solos need to be clarified, and there is a need to fight for the scheduling of the event.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-73, 128; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 344.

1938

October 28

He submits four poems for publication in the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-73, 129; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 344.

1938

October 28

Alio Mashashvili informs that the dates for the anniversary events dedicated to the 30th anniversary of his debut in the literary field will be decided at the meeting of the Writers' Presidium on the second or third day.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-73, 129; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 344.

Note: Alio Mashashvili is referred to in the source by his name.

1938

October 28

Shalva Radiani informs that the anniversary events dedicated to the 30th anniversary of his debut in the literary field will take place at the Palace of Art on November 18 and at the Opera and Ballet Theatre on December 1.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-73, 129; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 344.

1938

October 28

He agrees with Amiran Gabiskiria that a two-hour radio evening dedicated to the 30th anniversary of his debut in the literary field will be held on November 12.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-73, 129; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 345.

Note: Amiran Gabiskiria is referred to in the source by his name.

1938

October 30

He writes in the notebook that Iakob Nikoladze, while looking at the Book - "Soviet Art" - was dissatisfied with its visual decoration and said, we Georgians do not use our eyes at all.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-119, 45; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 512.

November

1938

Until November

He writes an untitled poem, "The resounding wind thundered many..."

Source: Autograph, MGL, №34; №202; №5329; №5347; №6343; №28897-50, p. 13; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 169.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "Ballad of the Walnut Tree".

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1938

November 1

He writes in the notebook that he should buy the first and second volumes of his works. He plans to find out the name of Vasil Egnatashvili's father.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-119, 9-12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 499.

1938

November 1

In the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, he publishes the cycle Poems of Joy, which includes three untitled poems: "The heroic of the Soviet people...", "The resounding wind thundered many...", and "Color comes from the sun and wind..."

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1938, №26, p. 1.

1938

November 1, or later

He looks through the new issue of Literaturuli Sakartvelo, in which his "Poems of Joy" is published and writes about it in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-119, 23; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 502; For dating: L. Beburishvili, "Researches", 2025, p. 581.

Note: Literaturuli Sakartvelo is referred to under the old name Saliteraturo Gazeti in the entry.

1938

After November 1

In the notebook, he writes that a philharmonic or opera choir studied two songs written based on his poems, including "The legions are coming".

Source: MGL, d-119, 26; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503; For dating: L. Beburishvili, "Researches", 2025, p. 581.

1938

After November 1

He writes a humorous poem “Your ticket... Kinto-jan...”.

Source: MGL, d-119, 29; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 504; For dating: L. Beburishvili, “Researches”, 2025, p. 581.

1938

Until November 6

He writes the list of clubs in Tbilisi in his notebook.

Source: MGL, d-119, 5 G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 496;

1938

November 6

He is going to give the first and second volumes of his works and books of poems published in Russian as gifts to party leaders: Vasil Egnatashvili, Philipe Makharadze, Valerian Bakradze and Kandid Charkviani. In the notebook, he writes the variants of the dedication texts to be written on the books.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-119, 9-12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 497-498.

1938

November 19

He plans to sort the laundry, buy shoes, rubber overshoes and a suit.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-119, 31; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 504.

1938

After November 19

He writes a poem “Advance of the Homeland...”.

Source: MGL, d-119, 46-47; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 507-508;

Note: The work is a variant of the poem – “Homeland”.

1938

After November 19

He makes an entry in the notebook “Costume of people from Chkvishi”, in which he describes how the residents of Chkvishi dressed up.

Source: MGL, d-119, 59; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 511;

1938

After November 19

He writes an untitled verse “My motherland, with the blood...”.

Source: MGL, d-119, 62-63; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 512;

Note: The text is a variant of the poem “My Song”.

1938

After November 19

He writes in the notebook, in which he discusses where one might find a good description of Bagrat Temple, or the ruins of an ancient church like it. It means that Byron has poems that describe ancient ruins. He thinks that Ivan Bunin's translation of Longfellow's poems, Vakhtang Orbeliani's poem "In Gelati" and Grigol Orbeliani's "The Face of King Tamar in Bethany Church" can also be useful.

Source: MGL, d-119, 65-66; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 513;

1938

After November 20

He receives a letter sent from Yaroslavl by Olya Okujava. The mention of Galaktion's longing reminds the addressee of Apollon Maykov's words about his and Yakov Polonsky's spiritual kinship. She imagines that Galaktion has no firewood, has to work in the cold, and feels concerned.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-384; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 225-226.

1938

November 21 or later

He attends the performance of Polikarpe Kakabadze's play "The Marriage of farm workers" in Marjanishvili theater and likes the role played by actor Giorgi Shavgulidze.

Source: G. Lortkipanidze, profession – director, recollections of Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 142-144.

Dating: The play "The marriage of farm workers" was staged in Marjanishvili Theatre between 1938 and 1958. Since the premiere of the first season took place on November 21, 1938, we date the fact to the period after this date.

1938

Until November 28

He writes a poem "October Ship".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №835; №66-a., p. 1584; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 383; For dating: N. Sikharulidze, "Researches", Tbilisi, 2025, p. 474.

1938

November

In the magazine Chveni Taoba, he publishes an untitled poem, "Unyielding, selfless...".

Source: Magazine Chveni Taoba, 1938, №11, p. 3.

1938

November

In the magazine Mnatobi, he publishes an untitled poem, “Wind traveling from Tskaltubo to Kutaisi...”.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1938, №11, p. 9.

1938

Autumn

He is at Alexandre Sigua’s home with Shalva Dadiani, actor Giorgi Shavgunidze, and director Shota Aghsabadze. They reminisce about interesting encounters with both Georgian and foreign figures. Giorgi Shavgunidze brings comedic scenes to life from various performances. Shalva Dadiani expresses his respect for Galaktion, referring to him as a classic of Georgian literature. Lado Gudiashvili humbly tells the poet that he owes him a portrait he hasn’t painted and promises to rectify this mistake. Galaktion responds that he is a lyrical poet, sees lyricism everywhere, and believes Lado views it the same way in painting. Later, Galaktion recalls his meetings in Kutaisi with Akaki Tsereteli, Vaso Abashidze, and Lado Meskhi. Lado Gudiashvili makes a sketch as a memento of the evening.

Source: Al. Sigua, One autumn evening, magazine Drosha, 1973, N 10, p. 8.

December

1938

Until December

In the collection Stalin’s Generation, he publishes the poem “Youth”.

Source: Collection “Stalin’s Generation”, Tbilisi, 1938, p. 8.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1938

December 12

He plans to buy a suit, go to the hairdresser and visit Iakob Nikoladze.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-119, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 513.

1938

December 12 or later

He writes in his notebook “With a common front” in which he formulates a plan on how to act to organize his own creative evening. He focuses on periodicals, also aims to collect his own photos, prepare a biography and poems.

Source: MGL, d-120, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 514;

1938

December 12 or later

He writes in the notebook the list of magazines and newspapers published in Georgia and the cost of their subscription for 3 months.

Source: MGL, d-120, 6,8,10,11; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 514-516;

1938

December 12 or later

He writes in the notebook how an old man on the street interrupted the women's conversation with the words: "stop flirting to each other and teach me where the pharmacy is", and when they taught him, he said that they could go on flirting.

Source: MGL, d-120, 7; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516;

1938

December 14

He is preparing for the 30th anniversary of his literary work. He plans to collect the poems dedicated to him by Shio Mghvimeli, Ekaterine Gabashvili, Lado Matchavariani, Shalva Kashmadze, print a facsimile and a photo, and provide information to the press by phone.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-120, 13; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516.

1938

December 15

In the Armenian newspaper Sabtchota Sakartvelo, Suren Avzian's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "The Flight of the Whites" is published, along with the poet's photo portrait.

Source: MGL, t-666, newspaper Khorurdain Vrastan, December 15, 1938, №102, p. 2.

1938

December 17

He is excited that the Writers' Union has yet to announce the 30th anniversary event scheduled for December 23rd. He thinks that the Union of Writers is deliberately working against him and they refuse to invite Geronti Kikodze and many other writers.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-121, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 524-525.

1938

After December 17

In the magazine Mnatobi, he publishes four untitled poems under the collective title "Preludes": "From Tskaltubo to Kutaisi...", "Breeze, Iris, Narcissus...", "I am different...", and "Above the Mountains...". In the same issue of the magazine, separately and independently from this cycle, the poem "October Ship" is also published.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1938, №11, November, p. 9-10; For dating: N. Sikharulidze, "Researches", Tbilisi, 2025, p. 475.

Note: The untitled poem "I am different..." is also found under the title "Colourful".

1938

Until December 18

He writes a poem "Integrals of Poetry".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №6530; 28897-50, p. 24; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 160; For dating: N. Sikharulidze, "Researches", Tbilisi, 2025, p. 475.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Integrals”.

1938

18 December or before

Levan Asatiani prepares the text of the invitation cards for the event dedicated to the 30th anniversary of Galaktion’s literary work and gives it to Lado Sirbiladze for printing, but he has not yet selected the image to be printed on the card.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-121, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 525.

Dating: Information about this is in the entry of December 18, 1938.

1938

18 December or before

He writes in the notebook that the portrait taken by the photographer Gigolashvili was not good to be published in Literaturuli Sakartvelo. His portrait was also ordered from Severian Ketskhoveli, but he disappeared somewhere.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-121, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 525.

Note: The newspaper is referred to as Saliteraturo Gazeti in the record, although in 1938 it was already published under the name Literaturuli Sakartvelo.

Dating: This information is noted in the entry dated December 18, 1938.

1938

18 December or before

A photographer is sent to his house from the Union of Writers to take a picture for the anniversary event. Galaktion is unhappy that the finished photos are being lost and an unknown photographer is being sent to take a new picture and that no one knows how he will look in the photo.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-121, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 525.

Dating: Information about this is in the entry of December 18, 1938.

1938

18 December or before

Shalva Kashmadze brings a poem dedicated to Galaktion to be printed in the newspaper Komunisti, however the head of the literary department of the newspaper Bidzina Abuladze refuses to publish it. According to him, based on the decision of the editorial board, no page will be devoted to Galaktion in the newspaper, and they may publish only his poems. Galaktion is outraged by this news and explains his attitude towards him with Bidzina Abuladze’s futuristic past.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-121, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 525.

1938

18 December or before

He loses the Order of Lenin.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-121, 5; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 527.

1938

18 December or before

Kandid Charkviani tells Alio Mashashvili that the party leadership is unhappy with Galaktion for losing the Order of Lenin and they are not going to arrange him the anniversary. Therefore, the event will be held in the evening format. When Galaktion is told this, he thinks that Kandid Charkviani's decision is fair.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-121, 5; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 527.

Dating: Information about this is in the entry of December 18, 1938.

1938

18 December or before

Theodor Chudetsky begins work on the photo of Galaktion, which should be printed in the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-121, 4; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 526.

Note: The newspaper is referred to as Saliteraturo Gazeti in the record, although in 1938 it was already published under the name Literaturuli Sakartvelo.

Dating: Information about this is in the entry of December 18, 1938.

1938

18 December or before

Together with Shalva Radiani, he plans what materials should be published in Literaturuli Sakartvelo in connection with his anniversary. From Radiani's behaviour, he suspects that the latter may be playing a double game and preventing the jubilee from being properly held.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-121, 4; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 526.

Note: Shalva Radiani is mentioned only by name in the record.

Dating: In an entry dated December 18, the fact is described as having already occurred.

1938

18 December or before

Shalva Radiani tells him that the Literary Repository allocated a one-time aid of 3000 roubles to Galaktion in connection with the 30th anniversary of his work, and it is planned to increase his pension. The poet thinks that it is a very small amount. Even an untalented artist gets so much in one painting.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-121, 4; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 527.

Dating: Information about this is in the entry of December 18, 1938.

1938

18 December or before

Aristo Tchumbadze expresses his desire to participate in Galaktion's evening. When Galaktion informs Alio Mashashvili about this, the latter says that Tchumbadze is an insignificant writer and his word has no value.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-121, 5; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 527.

Dating: Information about this is in the entry of December 18, 1938.

1938

18 December or before

Shalva Radiani tells him that the writer's club, where Galaktion's evening is to be held, will open on the 21st. Although the heating system in it is damaged, it will be heated by other means. In addition, Radiani hopes that the evening will be broadcast live on the radio.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-121, 7; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 528.

Dating: Information about this is in the entry of December 18, 1938.

1938

December 18

He makes a list of poems to be read for the anniversary event: "Great glory of the present...", "Soviet people's heroic...", "The moon shines", "Thick cloud...", "To homeland", "Integrals of poetry", "Everyone has something to remember". One thing that worries him is whether there will be flowers at the evening.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-121, 7-8; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 529.

1938

December 18

He is worried because Alexandre Sulava, who is not distinguished by great wisdom, is named among the speakers in the program of his anniversary event. Galaktion is nervous that the others are all young and no one knows who will say what.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-121, 5; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 527.

1938

December 18

In the notebook, he writes the text of the statement published in connection with the anniversary event of his 30 years of literary activity.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-121, 6; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 527.

1938

December 18

He writes a plan in his notebook, what to do to prepare the anniversary event. He aims to track down Nikoloz Chachava, an employee of Literaturuli Sakartvelo, to remove Severian Ketskhoveli's pictures, to manage to publish a picture, facsimile or poem on the front page of Literaturuli Sakartvelo, to explain to the editors of the newspapers - Komunisti and Musha - that during the anniversary evening, not only the jubilee's poems have to be published but also the material dedicated to him. He thinks that it is necessary to save the poems and pictures, to actively involve the radio, writers of the old generation - Anastasia Eristavi-Khoshtaria, Ilia Aghladze, Shalva Dadiani, Alexandre Abasheli in the event. He plans to set up a kiosk where his big poster will be displayed and where his books and literary periodicals will be sold. He thinks it is necessary to make a wall newspaper, have photographers and artists attend the evening, film the evening, find other speakers in case one of the main speakers gets sick.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-121, 6-7; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 528;

1938

December 19

In the morning, he goes to Theodor Chudetsky, who finishes painting his portrait by 12 o'clock.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-121, 8; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 529.

1938

December 19

He brings the picture drawn by Theodor Chudetsky to the editorial office of Literaturuli Sakartvelo and feels in advance that some employees of the newspaper may dislike the work. Nikoloz Chachava and Shalva Radiani admire Chudetsky's work. When the artist Severian Ketskhoveli is asked his opinion about the picture, he says with a violent smile that some people like the priest and others like the priest's wife. According to Galaktion, the artist indicates that he considers the picture of artist Aleksandre Gigolashvili to be better than the work of Teodor Chudetsky. After Ketskhoveli's words, Nikoloz Chachava changes his opinion and says that Gigolashvili's work is better than this painting. Shalva Radiani demands to show Gigolashvili's painting. They take Gigolashvili's work from the drawer, which Galaktion considers "bad", and the fight, over which picture is better, begins. The editor of Literaturuli Sakartvelo Shalva Radiani decides to publish Chudetsky's picture in the newspaper, Galaktion agrees with his opinion. The poet notices that after Radiani's decision Ketskhoveli stands ashamed. Galaktion overhears a conversation between Ketskhoveli and Chachava, who are planning to prevent Chudetsky's painting from being published. Ketskhoveli says that Chudetsky's picture needs retouching, which Galaktion disagrees with. Dimitri Benashvili supports Gigolashvili's painting, while Lado Sirbiladze supports Chudetsky's.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-121, 8; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 529-530.

Note: In the record, the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo is mentioned by its old name – Saliteraturo Gazeti, and Nikoloz Chachava, Severian Ketskhoveli, Aleksandre Gigolashvili and Dimitri Benashvili - only by their last names.

1938

December 19

While in the editorial office of Literaturuli Sakartvelo, he noticed that "Galaktion Tabidze" was written on the top of the mock-up of the anniversary page dedicated to him. Because of the misspelled name, Galaktion gives a note to the editor Nikoloz Chachava, who he believes has been fighting him on purpose for years. Chachava promises to correct the mistake.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-121, 10; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 530.

1938

December 19

In the editorial office of Literaturuli Sakartvelo, Lado Sirbiladze shows the paper on which 300 invitations to his anniversary evening should be printed. Galaktion provides facsimiles for cards. He fears that his opponents may announce that attendance at the evening is possible only with invitation cards, and then not distribute the cards and in this way reduce the number of attendees.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-121, 10; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 530.

1938

December 19

In the editorial office of Literaturuli Sakartvelo he learns that Nikoloz Chachava has not yet given the facsimile of his poem to the editor and demands that it be delivered to Shalva Radiani on time. The latter calls Dimitri Benashvili to him, and after arguing, they decide to print only a part of the manuscript of the poem. Galaktion is worried because he feels that nothing ever goes the way he wants it to. He is afraid that his picture may be minimized in size in the newspaper.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-121, 10; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 531.

Note: In the record, Dimitri Benashvili is mentioned only by his last name.

1938

December 19

Levan Asatiani learns late that more photographs need to be printed for the anniversary event of Galaktion Tabidze and is hopeful that they will manage to do it.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-121, 10-11; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 531.

Note: Levan Asatiani is only mentioned by name in the record.

1938

December 19

Platon Keshelava tells him that there is light in the writers' palace, but no heating. He also informs that the issue of radio broadcasting of the event should be resolved by Levan Asatiani in agreement with Alio Mashashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-121, 11; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 531.

Note: In the record, Platon Keshelava and Levan Asatiani are mentioned only by their names.

1938

December 19

Shalva Dadiani tells him that he will definitely make a speech at his evening, and Ioseb Grishashvili doubts how much he will be able to prepare for the speech. Galaktion thinks that if the heart is willing, the khada is eaten with both hands.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-121, 11; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 531.

1938

December 19

Levan Asatiani is trying to find actors to participate in the Galaktion evening.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-121, 11; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 531.

Note: Levan Asatiani is only mentioned by name in the record.

1938

December 19

Akaki Gatsserelia tells him that the singer Davit Badridze, who also performed at Galaktion's 1933 anniversary, will definitely take part in his evening.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-121, 11; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 531.

Note: In the record, Akaki Gatsserelia and Davit Badridze are mentioned only by their last names.

1938

December 19

He agrees with the artist Davit Gvelesiani to cover the portrait of Galaktion painted by him with varnish.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-121, 11; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 531.

Note: In the record, Davit Gvelesiani is mentioned only by his last name.

1938

Until December 20

He writes a poem "From the Tale of the Moon".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №5597; №6678; №6679; №7415; №37-d., p. 19; №28897-50, p. 22; №8776; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 162.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "Verification of Dreams".

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1938

December 20

He plans to submit a poem for the 12th issue of the magazine Mnatobi.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-120, 17; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

1938

December 20

Dimitri Benashvili's article "Galaktion Tabidze" is published in the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo. The critic first of all characterizes the poet's early lyrics and the feeling of spiritual orphanhood, which is manifested in it, he connects with the defeat of the revolution of 1905-7. As for the next period, according to Benashvili, "the years of Menshevik rule were the saddest time for Galaktion". After the victory of the socialist revolution, the poet took the side of the revolution, which is evidenced by the poems "John Reed" and "Epoch". The critic considers it a great merit of Galaktion that he avoided the epigone of Ilya, Akaki and Vazha in his youth. He considers Baratashvili the closest poet to Galaktion, because he, like Baratashvili, weakened the importance of rhyme in the poem and turned rhythm into its driving force. According to the author of the letter, among the artists of his time, Galaktion had the greatest influence on Georgian poets, and this process continues.

Source: D. Benashvili, Galaktion Tabidze, Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1938, №31 (December 20), p. 3.

1938

December 20

In the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, under the collective title “From New Poems”, the following works are published: “Integrals of Poetry”, “Homeland” (“The Progress of the Homeland is Remarkable”), “Labour and Rest”, and “From the Tale of the Moon”. On the same page of the newspaper, below Galaktion’s portrait, a fragment of the poem “The Glory of the Present” is printed in the poet’s handwriting.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1938, №31, p. 3.

1938

December 20

In the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, an informative article is published stating that on December 23, a creative evening dedicated to the 30th anniversary of the work of Georgia’s National Poet Galaktion Tabidze will be held at the Writers’ Club. According to the article, reports will be presented by Shalva Radiani and Akaki Gatsserelia. The speakers will include Simon Chikovani, Besarion Zhghenti, Dimitri Benashvili, Irakli Abashidze, Levan Asatiani, and others. Poets Giorgi Kuchishvili, Alio Mashashvili, Ilo Mosashvili, Simon Chikovani, Karlo Kaladze, and Alexandre Gomiashvili will read their own poems. Galaktion’s poetic works will be read by Akaki Vasadze, Tamar Chavchavadze, Veriko Anjaparidze, and Sergo Zakariadze. At the end of the event, Galaktion will introduce his new poems to the audience.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1938, №31, p. 4.

1938

December 20

In the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, an article by Akaki Gatsserelia titled “Galaktion Tabidze’s Lyricism” is published. The researcher discusses Galaktion’s second poetic collection, Artistic Flowers, noting that the French epigraph preceding the Book signals to the readers the European character of his lyricism and its connection to European culture. Akaki Gatsserelia argues that Galaktion’s work is closely aligned with symbolism, highlighting that the specific attitude toward language characteristic of the Symbolist school in Europe and Russia was cautiously adopted by Galaktion Tabidze in Georgian poetry. He believes that Galaktion’s lyricism is the result of a synthesis between Georgian and European poetry. To illustrate this point, Akaki Gatsserelia references several examples from Galaktion’s poetry. Additionally, the researcher emphasizes the unique principles of landscape depiction in Galaktion’s work and the poet’s attitude toward the revolution.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1938, №31, p. 3.

1938

December 20

In the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, an informative text is published stating that the publishing house “Federation” will release a collection of selected lyrical poems by Galaktion Tabidze at the beginning of 1939. According to this announcement, the Book will feature an introductory letter by Akaki Gatsserelia.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1938, №31, p. 3.

1938

December 20 or later

Before the anniversary event, he is overwhelmed with anxiety. He dreads the possibility of any unpleasant incidents occurring at any moment. He is particularly worried that the speakers might bore the audience, thereby ruining the atmosphere of the event. However, he holds onto the hope of support from the younger generation.

Source: MGL, d-120, 28-30; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 520;

1938

December 20 or later

He selects poems to be published in the newspaper Komunisti as part of the anniversary events.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-120, 34-35; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 521-522;

1938

December 20 or later

In the notebook, he writes that thematic evenings can be held about his work, and there he also mentions one of the topics: “Galaktion Tabidze - a worthy successor of Georgian classics”.

Source: MGL, d-120, 41; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 522;

1938

December 20 or later

He writes the list of magazines and newspapers published in 1908 in his notebook.

Source: MGL, d-120, 42-48; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 523-524;

1938

After December 20

He receives a letter from Olya Okujava, sent from Yaroslavl. The sender writes that she still hasn’t received a letter from Galaktion and longs to transform into a bird, flying to their home and peeking inside through the lace of the curtain. Olya hopes for a reconsideration of her indictment, and at night, she dreams of Galaktion, who hands her a release paper.

Source: O. Okujava’s letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-385; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 226-227.

1938

December 22

The newspaper Musha publishes Levan Asatiani's article "Galaktion Tabidze ("On the occasion of the 30th anniversary of poetic creativity"), in which, like the approach established in Soviet criticism, the critic connects the poet's early lyrics with the failure of the 1905 revolution. Asatiani notes that along with pessimistic poems, Galaktion's early poetry also showed revolutionary tendencies and that "in the early stages, he was able to show great skill in expressing words with music and colours". In his work, Georgian poetic culture reached such heights that it equalled the level of European and Russian poetry of its time. Levan Asatiani notes that among the poets of his generation, Galaktion was the first to stand on the side of the revolution. It is true that he is primarily a lyricist, but he does not remain only in the sphere of personal feelings and adds social content to the lyrics as well. According to the critic, Galaktion is the inheritor of the best traditions of Georgian poetry of the nineteenth century. His creative path is the path of development of Georgian poetry from individualism, pessimism and decadence to the high ideals of socialist lyrics and political poetry.

Source: L. Asatiani, "Galaktion Tabidze ("On the occasion of the 30th anniversary of poetic creativity"), newspaper Musha, 1938, №292, p. 3.

1938

Until December 23

He writes a poem titled "Morning in Germany".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №5322-5323; №5375; №5379; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 163.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "What is Fascism?" and is published untitled ("In a street filled with people").

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1938

Until December 23

He sends a brief letter to the Central Union. He writes that his literary evening will take place on December 23 at the Voroshilov Club and requests that tickets be purchased for his employees in the amount of 300 roubles.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-251; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 136;

1938

Until December 23

He writes a brief announcement stating that his literary evening will take place on December 23 at the Voroshilov Club and that tickets for attending the event are being sent to him for free distribution.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-244; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 137;

1938

December 23

In the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, a poem by Galaktion titled “From the Poems ‘Stalin’” is published.

Source: newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, 1938, №292, (December 23). p. 3.

1938

December 23

In the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, Galaktion’s poem titled “From the Poems ‘Stalin’ – ‘Morning in Germany’” is published.

Source: newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, 1938, № 292, p. 3.

1938

December 23

In connection with the 30th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s creative work, the essay “People’s Poet” created by Rusudan Peradze is published in the newspaper Zarya Vostoka.

Source: Перадзе Р.Г. Народный поэт: К 30-летию творческой деятельности Г. Табидзе, В газ. “Заря Востока”, Тифлис, 1938 № 292, от 23/XII.

1938

December 23

In the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, an article by Varlam Zhuruli titled “Galaktion Tabidze” is published, aimed at presenting a literary portrait of the poet. The author identifies Nikoloz Baratashvili as a poetic predecessor to Galaktion, noting that the melancholic moods from Baratashvili’s works are uniquely transformed in Galaktion’s lyricism. Among the foreign poets who influenced Galaktion, Théophile Gautier, Paul Verlaine, Charles Baudelaire, Alexander Blok, Innokentiy Annensky, Valery Bryusov, and Fyodor Tyutchev are mentioned. Varlam Zhuruli points out that Galaktion stands out among these poets for his distinctive poetic voice, simplicity, and musicality. The article also reviews the main themes of Galaktion’s post-revolutionary works.

Source: V. Zhuruli, Galaktion Tabidze, newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, 1938, №292, December 23, p. 3.

1938

December 24

The newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi publishes the poem “Our light is fiery”.

Source: M. Alavidze, Galaktion’s Life and Poetry, magazine Gantiadi, 1992, № 11-12, p. 123; newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi, 1938, №171.

1938

December 24

In the Armenian newspaper Sabtchota Sakartvelo, an article about Galaktion Tabidze is published, along with Hovhannes Karapetyan’s translation of the poem “On Every Line” and the poet’s photo portrait.

Source: MGL, t-667, newspaper Khorurdain Vrastan, December 15, 1938, №110, p. 2.

1938

December 25

A literary evening dedicated to the 30th anniversary of Galaktion's literary career is held in Tbilisi.

Source: Newspaper "Правда", 1938, №355, (December 26) p. 3.

1938

December 26

The newspaper Pravda publishes information that on December 25, an event dedicated to the 30th anniversary of the literary work of the people's poet and order-bearer Galaktion Tabidze was held in Tbilisi.

Source: Newspaper "Правда", 1938, №355, (December 26) p. 3.

1938

December 29

He receives a letter from Savle Abuladze, who apologizes for being unable to meet with him at the Teachers' House as previously arranged. Savle cites his child's illness as the reason for his inability to attend and writes to Galaktion that he has not forgotten about his assignment.

Source: MGL, d-534, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 174.

1938

December 29 or later

He makes a note regarding the letter received from Savle Abuladze, stating that the sender's message is quite telling. Galaktion points out that Savle Abuladze has been dismissed from the leadership of the literary circle at the Teachers' House and may be upset because of this. The poet suspects that his refusal to meet is likely due to this situation rather than his child's illness.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-534, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 174.

1938

After December 30

In the magazine Mnatobi, an article by Akaki Gatsserelia titled "Galaktion Tabidze's Lyricism" is published, which had previously appeared in the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo on December 20.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1938, December, №12, p. 131-141.

1938

After December 30

In the magazine Mnatobi, an article by Eremia Astvatsaturyov is published regarding the 20th anniversary of the Komsomol and the collection "Stalin's Generation" released by the children's literary publishing house. The article states that Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Youth" reflects the author's unique poetic strength by depicting two different youths from opposing worlds: the fascist, consumed by a sickly zeal, and the Soviet Komsomol member, characterized by strong aspirations.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1938, December, №12, p. 179-180.

Note: Eremia Astvatsaturov is referred to in the source by the pseudonym "A. E" ..

1938

Until December 31

He writes a poem "New First Visitor".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4668; №4681; №721; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 172.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles "My Life", "New First Visitor", and untitled ("It is good to be lit by feelings...").

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1938

Until December 31

He writes a poem titled "Rejoice, Fireplace!"

Source: Autograph, MGL, №7419; №8086; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 150.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "New Year's" and untitled ("Snow and the mane of wind").

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1938

December 31

The newspaper Musha publishes Galaktion's poems "Have fun, the fireplace" and "New first visitor" are published.

Source: Newspaper Musha, 1938, №300, p. 1.

1938

December 31

The newspaper "Vecherniy Tbilisi" publishes the translation of Galaktion's poem "Christmas trees shine..." by Boris Serebryakov.

Source: Newspaper "Вечерний Тбилиси", 1938, №299, p. 1.

Note: In the Russian translation, the poem is titled as "In the happiest country" ("В самой радострой стране").

1938

December 31

Galaktion's poem "New Year's" is published in the newspaper Pizkultureli.

Source: Newspaper Musha, 1938, №300, p. 4.

1938

December 31

The cinematographer captures Galaktion's New Year's greeting and poem on tape.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

1938

December

He writes a poem "New Year's".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4668; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 182.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "Mandatory, Universal".

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1938

December

He writes a poem "Remember Forever".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №5457-5462; №6539; №6654; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 180.

Note: "The poem is also found under the titles: 'The Order-Bearing Georgia,' 'New Year,' 'By the Path of Lenin and Stalin.'"

1938

December

In the magazine Chveni Taoba, a letter by Eremia Astvatsaturovi about Galaktion Tabidze's work is published. The author compares Galaktion to the decadent-symbolist writers, drawing parallels with Charles Baudelaire, Valery Bryusov, and Alexander Blok, and emphasizes the similarities between the poet's work and the poetry of Nikoloz Baratashvili. In his opinion, like Baratashvili, Galaktion, too, was consumed by sorrow and hopelessness, seeing escape from life as the only way out. However, even in his sorrowful heart, a spark of hope could still be seen, which, due to historical conditions, turned into a blazing fire. From the very first days of the October Revolution, his poetic soul was completely healed from the wound of hopelessness, as the Soviet system awakened in him revolutionary passion. At the end of the letter, Astvatsaturovi concludes that Galaktion Tabidze's work is the beginning of Georgian poetic culture and Soviet revolutionary poetry.

Source: E. Astvatsaturov, Galaktion Tabidze, magazine Akhali Taoba, 1935, N p. 37-44.

1938

December

Akaki Gatsserelia's article "Galaktion Tabidze's Lyric" is published in the magazine Mnatobi. The author of the work notes from the beginning that soon it will be twenty years since the publication of the poet's second Book - "Skull with artistic flowers". This is a collection that still maintains its vitality and appeal and opens a new era in the history of Georgian poetic culture. According to the critic, Galaktion in the first Book showed a rare mastery in the field of conveying lyrical thrills, and with this collection exhausted the possibilities of romantic lyrics. In the second book, we get to know the poet "endowed with absolute hearing". According to Gatsserelia, in terms of his attitude to words, Galaktion is a symbolist, but he is free from symbolic themes. Galaktion Tabidze carried out a synthesis of European and Georgian poetry. He is a great master of speaking not only in direct words, but also in semitones. In the lyrics of Galaktion's second period, the images of nature are made impressionistically, and in this sense, he approaches Blok and Rilke. According to the critic, Galaktion enriched Georgian poetry with new measures. He got rid of the atmosphere of individualism with the help of the revolution, in the second Book of the poet it is vague, but still the approach of the revolution can be seen. Galaktion received the Revolution as Blok - as the beginning of the destruction of the old world and the birth of a new one. According to the critic, recently the tone of the poet has become more pathetic, declamatory. His attempts to find genre novelty were not always successful, that's why he divided his poems into cycles. The author of the work concludes his discussion by talking about the influence of Galaktion and notes that "for 30 years, his lyrics nourished the entire Pleiad of poets".

Source: Ak. Gatsserelia, Galaktion Tabidze's Lyric Poetry, Magazine Mnatobi, 1938, №12, p. 131-141.

1938

In connection with the 30th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's creative work in Tbilisi, Rusudan Peradze's essay "National Poet" is published as a Book in Russian.

Source: Перадзе Р.Г. Народный поэт: К 30-летию творческой деятельности Г. Табидзе, Тифлис, 1938.

1938

He is planning to write something about Shalva Dadiani's work style in his notebook, but crosses it out and writes in Russian, damn Shalva.

Source: MGL, Galaktion Tabidze's archive, ☉. 534-6, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 175. Note: N. Sikharulidze, "Researches", Tbilisi, 2025, p. 303.

Note: Shalva Dadiani is humorously referred to as "Shalva Chkondideli".

1938

In the notebook he writes an untitled poem "Forever Great Stalin...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-110, 36; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 432.

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem "Great glory of the present".

1938

He writes a titleless poem "The Sea is Too Calm...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №2389; 4461; 5228; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 157.

1938

He writes a poem “I Am Not an Orphan in This World”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №622; 2522; 5515;2036; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 158.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Variations”.

1938

In the collection ‘Homeland,’ a poem titled “The White Army Was Coming” is published.

Source: Collection “Homeland”, 1938, p. 323.

1938

He publishes the poem “Idea” (“Walk with Faith...”) in the collection “Homeland”.

Source: Collection “Homeland”, 1938, p. 8.

1938 or later

In the notebook, he makes extracts from the Russian-language Book “Chrestomathy of Western European Literature. Literature of the Middle Ages (IX-XV centuries)”. He collects information on the ballad, rondo and virelai, writes François Villon’s ballads: “The Contest at Blois”, “The Great Will”, “The Ballad of Old Ladies”, “A Message to Friends” and “Epitaph” and his own rondo from “The Great Will”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 98-103; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 251-259; G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-123, 56-59; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 583;

1938 or later

He writes in the notebook about birds: nightingales, snipe and grouse, how children cry and bury dead birds, how they love playing Arsena’s story and Aspindza war and how they rejoice when it’s a sunny day. Then he writes a phrase from Nikolai Gogol’s play “Marriage”, an incident from the life of Prosper Merimee, information about the village of Tsitsakhi, and the Russian meanings of “forest” and its word combinations. Finally, he makes excerpts from Gogol’s novel “Dead Souls” and inserts both his own comments and phrases related to this or that episode from the statements of Olga Darius.

Source: MGL, d-98, 95-98; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 248-251.

1938 or later

He writes a poem “Lalaveri (a village in Svaneti, which no longer exists)”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 104; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 259-261;

Note: Later, the poet included a verse in the poem “Talk about lyrics”.

1938 or later

He writes in columns a list of pairs of consonants in rhyme for two-syllable words beginning with a vowel.

Source: MGL, d-98, 105; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 261-262.

1938 or later

He writes a poem “Tur”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 106; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 262-263;

Note: Later, the poet included a verse in the poem “Talk about lyrics”.

1938 or later

He writes a poem “Those peaks have always called me, attracted me”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 107; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 263-264.

1938 or later

He writes a poem about the motifs of the folk poem “Mokhevi woman Tina”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 108; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 265;

1938 or later

He makes excerpts from the Russian translation of “Don Quixote” by Miguel de Cervantes and observes the rhyming syllables.

Source: MGL, d-98, 108; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 265-266.

1938 or later

He makes a sketch about a sad hot summer day.

Source: MGL, d-98, 109; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 267.

1938 or later

He writes a one-stanza untitled poem “Dozing in peace”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 109; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 267.

1938 or later

He recalls the poem written by Alexandre Abasheli in 1909 and doubts whether he wrote “The evil of men” or “The evil of times”. He also remembers that “The evil of times” is the title of Niko Lortkipanidze’s novel.

Source: MGL, d-98, 109; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 267.

1938 or later

He writes a brief conclusion in Russian about Kale Bobokhidze’s poem ‘Sergo Orjonikidze.’ He notes that this is the first work dedicated to the famous leader. The poem is written sincerely and leaves a pleasant impression on the reader. The press responded positively to the author’s work. He points out that it would be desirable for the work to be translated into Russian”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-488, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 417-418;

1938 or later

He compiles a list of his own photographs and portraits painted by artists.

Source: MGL, d-492, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 445-446;

1938 or later

He reads the Russian collection “Soviet Georgia Over 17 Years”, He makes underlines and notes.

Source: GTSM, 237, “Советская Грузия за 17 лет”, Tbilisi, 1938.

1938 or later

He reads the agricultural terminology collection “Horticulture” compiled by Alexandre Makashvili. He makes underlines and notes. He creates rhymes for almost every plant name and term, both translated from Russian to Georgian and from Georgian to Russian.

Source: GTSM, 237, Agricultural terminology, I, “Horticulture”, Tbilisi, 1938.

1938 or later

He writes an untitled poem: “The thought that accompanies / this seed and plow, / the light that warms / the blossoming garden”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record in the book, GTSM, 237, Agricultural terminology, I, “Horticulture”, Tbilisi, 1938, p. 286.

1938 or later

He writes an untitled poem: “There was blood and mud, / there was slime, / the connecting thread / between hearts was torn”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record in the book, GTSM, 237, Agricultural terminology, I, “Horticulture”, Tbilisi, 1938, back flyleaf.

After 1938

He reads Vladimir Svyatoslavsky’s Book “Native Resorts”, making underlines and comments. He recalls that when Zahesi was opened, the Mtkvari River in Tbilisi was so shallow that it was possible to cross on foot, and people were catching fish by hand in the river’s shallows. It was such a beautiful sight that the children’s joy knew no bounds.

Source: MGL, t-578, В. В. Святловский, “Родные Курорты”, Odessa, 1897, p. 42.

Dating: The Upper Avchala Hydroelectric Power Station (Zahesi) was opened in 1938.

1939

January

1939

January 1

The newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti publishes a poem titled “Remember Forever!”.

Source: newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, 1939, №1, January 1, p. 1.

1939

January 1

He goes to the printing office to pick up the New Year's issue of the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, where a young employee of the printing office expresses his admiration for his poems.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

1939

January 1

He is happy with the fact that his poems are printed in the New Year issues of the newspapers Musha, Akhalgazrda Komunisti, Pizkultureli, and Vecherniy Tbilisi, but he is disappointed that his name is distorted in the newspaper Musha, and the lines of the poem are messed up. He also plans to "hunt down" the editorial offices of the newspapers Komunisti and Zarya Vostoka.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

1939

January 1

In the evening, he visits the family of poet Kale Bobokhidze. Those who are there treat him with honour and praise the new poems published in the press. One of the guests says that Galaktion's poem printed in the newspaper Musha is simple at first glance, but it has an amazing depth of thought. At these words, Galaktion remembers that Akaki the scribe also expressed a similar opinion about his poetry.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

1939

January 1

The cinematographer, who filmed Galaktion while he was visiting Kale Bobokhidze, tells him that it was a great honour for him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

1939

January 1

Elizbar Polumordvinov, who is visiting Kale Bobokhidze, remembers how he gave the first Book of Galaktion in 1914 to a farm worker.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

1939

January 1

Kale Bobokhidze praises Galaktion and ranks him above Mayakovsky.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

1939

January 1

While visiting Kale Bobokhidze, the writer Mariam Garikuli, who was there, reads Galaktion's poem.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

1939

January 1

Keto Tchirakadze calls him on the phone and tells him that she and her friends are reading Galaktion's poems.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

1939

January 1

The critic Lavrosi Kalandadze, visiting Kale Bobokhidze, says that Galaktion has given a quantum to the critics who hate his early poems. The poet read these very poems at his evening and caused admiration of the audience.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

1939

January 1

While visiting Kale Bobokhidze, Giorgi Kuchishvili is surprised that Galaktion does not drink wine.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

1939

January 1

In the evening, he goes to the cinema, where he asks young people for matches. They overtake each other to give the poet matches and Galaktion enjoys their attention.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

1939

January 1

He summarizes the impressions of the day in the notebook. He is impressed by the cordial attitude of the society towards him. It is true that he feels the "policy of neither barbecue nor spit" from some, but he still believes that the new year started with a triumph for him, and he needs to deepen the victories throughout the year.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

1939

January 2

In the morning, he walks into the breakfast room and hears his name being whispered. He feels embarrassed by the attention shown to him, but he also enjoys it.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 533.

1939

January 2

He meets Shalva Dadiani in the Union of Writers, who complains that he returned from Baku a day ago, where he participated in the memorial evening of Mirza Fatali Akhundov. Galaktion is surprised by his words: I won't be everyone's Tch kondideli, will I? The poet thinks that Shalva Dadiani is an artist and not Tch kondideli, and sincerely feels sorry for him, because in reality he is an unhappy person and has to endure a lot with a stoic placidity and an artistic mask. He writes in the notebook that he needs to find out what connects him with Alio Mashashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 533.

1939

January 2

He hears the typing women say that 1939 will be a lucky year because it contains the number nine and writes their words in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 534.

1939

January 2

He feels sorry for Shalva Radiani, who, as the editor of Literaturuli Sakartvelo, has to listen to writers' reprimands. He thinks that Radian is really having a hard time, because he pretends to be a representative of Marxist criticism, and this research methodology is still undeveloped.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 534.

1939

January 2

He talks with Levan Asatiani and Shalva Radiani. Asatiani takes it upon himself to organize Galaktion's poetry evening at the State Conservatory. The planning of the musical part is entrusted to Nikoloz Chachava, who prepares the plan of the event. The evening is scheduled for January 11.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 534.

1939

January 2

Galaktion goes to the State Conservatory, where he reserves the hall for the evening on January 11.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 534.

1939

January 2

In the vestibule of the State Conservatory, he meets Elene Andronikashvili, who tells him that she will not let him go anywhere and that she should take him to the artist Keto Maghalashvili, who has been eager to paint Galaktion for a long time.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 534.

Note: In the record, Elene Andronikashvili is mentioned only by name.

1939

January 2

Together with Elene Bakradze, he goes to the workshop of the artist Ketevan Maghalashvili. He admires her works and likes the picture of Shalva Dadiani, on which the artist is working at that time.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 534;

1939

January 2

He agrees with the artist Ketevan Maghalashvili that they will start working on his portrait from the next day.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 535.

1939

January 2

Siko Pashalishvili tells Vano Berikatsishvili, the typesetter of the newspaper Komunisti, about Galaktion's last poems, that the real Galaktion can be seen in these poems. Vano, who was still participating in the "Artistic Flowers" publication, knows Galaktion well and is happy to convey Siko Pashalishvili's opinion to him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 535.

1939

January 2

Translator Boris Serebryakov recounts that the editor of the newspaper Zarya Vostoka reprimanded the staff because they could not get Galaktion's poem for the New Year's issue of the newspaper, as the editors of the newspaper Vecherniy Tbilisi managed to do.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 534.

1939

January 2

He meets Elene Bakradze in the conservatory and at the woman's insistence they go together to Ketevan Maghalashvili. The host and Helen offer wine and liquor, which Galaktion politely declines. The artist begins to work on the portrait of Galaktion. At the same time, the poet recalls the year of 1916 together with Elene, the time they spent together in Moscow, the evening of his poetry held there, and how the woman cheered him on. Because of this, Elene even received a letter of reprimand from Titsian Tabidze. Galaktion observes Elene's behaviour, her conversation, and after returning home, he writes in his diary: “I feel very well that Eliko loves me... Eliko loves me... and she loved me twenty years ago!”

Source: MGL, Galaktion Tabidze’s archive, ☞. 122, p. 2-3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 533-535.

1939

January 2

Simon Tsverava plans to hold Galaktion’s evening in the teachers’ club in January. He thinks of Konstantine Kapanelli as the speaker and tells Galaktion about it.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-122, 3; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 535.

1939

January 3

He again visits the workshop of Ketevan Maghalashvili, where the host paints his portrait. He is fascinated by the noble, aristocratic appearance of Maghalashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-122, 3; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 536.

1939

January 3

To commemorate the 30th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s poetic career, the Presidium of the Writers’ Union raises the issue of granting him a one-time financial aid of 3,000 roubles from the Literary Fund.

Source: MGL, WUF №6.

1939

January 3

To mark the 30th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s poetic career, the Writers’ Union Commission petitions the Council of People’s Commissars to increase his personal pension and allocate a one-time financial aid of 3,000 roubles from the Literary Fund.

Source: Minutes of the Commission Meeting, MGL, WUF №1, №6.

1939

January 3

He goes to the Palace of Writers, where he talks to Levan Asatiani and Nikoloz Chachava. He agrees with them that his evening will be held at the conservatory on January 11. Levan Asatiani agrees to participate in the evening with Shalva Dadiani.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-122, 3; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 536.

Note: Levan Asatiani is mentioned in the record by his first name, Nikoloz Chachava by his last name, and Shalva Dadiani - as Shalva Tch kondideli.

1939

January 3

In the Palace of Writers, he meets Besarion Zhghenti, who came from Moscow. The latter informs him that Galaktion's Book is expected to be published in April, and they are going to organize an evening for it in Moscow.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 3; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 536.

Note: Besarion Zhghenti should refer to Galaktion's "Selected Poems", published in Moscow in 1940.

1939

January 3

He attends the meeting of the professional union of workers under the Union of Writers.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 3; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 536.

1939

January 3

He visits Andria Balanchivadze in the evening. The hosts set the table, but Galaktion refuses to eat and drink. Andria Balanchivadze advises to include the Union of Composers in the anniversary event and remove the vocal section from the program. Galaktion thinks of his advice.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 3; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 536.

1939

January 3

He goes to the barber shop.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 3; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 536.

1939

January 3

He goes to the theatre museum, where his voice is recorded. He reads a poem "From the tale of the Moon".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 3; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 536.

1939

January 3

He returns home at 12 o'clock at night and writes down his impressions of the day in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 3; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 536.

1939

Until January 4

Several times he sees the musical comedy "Peter" by the Hungarian director German Kosterlitz, in which actress Francesca Gaal participates.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 5; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 539.

Dating: The diary of January 4, 1939 states that he saw this film for the tenth time that day.

1939

January 4

He goes to the cinema and once again sees the movie "Peter" with the participation of the Hungarian actress Francesca Gaal. In the hall, he meets Alexandre Kutatelli, whom he considers a mediocre man.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 5; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 539;

1939

January 4

He receives Olya Okujava's letter from Yaroslavl.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 5; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 539.

Note: The addressee of the letter is not mentioned in the record, but his wife was in Yaroslavl in 1939.

1939

January 4

The location of the Galaktion evening is being changed. The event should be held in the concert hall of the Rustaveli Theatre instead of the conservatory. In connection with this fact, the poet meets conductor Aleksandre Gvelesiani and composers Andria Balanchivadze and Ivane Gokieli.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 5; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 539.

Note: Andria Balanchivadze, Ivane Gokieli and Aleksandre Gvelesiani are mentioned only by their last names in the record.

1939

January 4

He goes to the workshop of the artist Ketevan Maghalashvili, who continues to work on his portrait. Galaktion tells the stories of his studies at the seminary, they talk about classical and modern art.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 4; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 537-538.

1939

Until January 4

He loses the Order of Lenin.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 5; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 538-539.

Dating: From the record of January 4, it can be seen that he has already lost.

1939

January 4

Mary Mikeladze meets him in the Palace of Writers and says that a certain teacher at the railway school, named Mshvenieradze, censured Galaktion and expressed his surprise at how the anniversary is being paid to a man who lost the Order of Lenin. Mary Mikeladze thinks that it is necessary to inform the Secretary of the Union of Writers. Polikarpe Kakabadze advises the same, and Galaktion says that this teacher seems to be a provocateur and it is not worth publicizing the incident.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 5; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 538-539.

1939

January 5

In the morning, he meets the translator Konstantin Bogdanovskiy on the Vera Bridge, who reads to him the new translation of the poem "Courage". The poet is satisfied with the translation and recitation of his poem and thinks that this is a proof that even in foggy weather the poem can sing about joy.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 5; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 539.

1939

January 5

He goes to the workshop to the artist Ketevan Maghalashvili, who continues to work on the portrait of the poet and asks him to hold the head and face well, because otherwise they will not achieve the result, and Galaktion feels in his heart that the portrait will turn out well. The artist tells that she knew a young Gurian named Togo, who was deeply in love with Galaktion's poems. The poet narrates the story of the creation of the poem - "The Wind from Tskaltubo to Kutaisi". According to him, he wrote this poem on a cigarette box in Tskaltubo, then he didn't like it, tore it up and threw it away. Some woman glued these scraps to each other and Galaktion's poem became a popular poem. He also tells about the meeting with Akaki Tsereteli in 1912, when the venerable poet asked Galaktion, because of his peculiar way of reciting the poem, whether he was a Rachvelian. Galaktion also recalls the misunderstanding caused by translator Panteleimon Petrenko during the reading of one of his poems at a literary evening in Sokhumi. One of the Russians present at the evening misunderstood some phrase and they hardly managed to calm him down. Galaktion likes the opinion of Ketevan Maghalashvili that despite Vladimir Mayakovsky's strict expression, there was something childish, naive and lyrical in his appearance.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 5-6; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 540.

1939

January 5

The newspaper Vecherniy Tbilisi publishes a notice that in the middle of January, a big evening will be held at the teacher's house in Tbilisi, dedicated to the 30th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's literary work. There is also information that Galaktion Tabidze's evening will be held in Poti in January on the initiative of Poti party organization.

Source: Newspaper "Вечерний Тбилиси", 1938, №4, p. 2.

1939

January 6

He attends the concert of the Armenian composer Komitas Quartet at the Philharmonic and writes in his Book about the famous Armenian musician and folklorist Soghomon Soghomonian, known as Komitas in the monastery, that he was a clergyman who collected folklore and sang himself, and finally went abroad and died there. In this regard, Galaktion remembers the story of one Armenian present at the trial of Catholicos Patriarch Ambrose Khelaia. According to him, he did not react to the judge's address: "Accused Khelaia" and only gave an answer after the judge referred to him as "Catholicos Ambrose" and explained his behaviour in such a way that he was Khelaia in laity, and now he is Catholicos Ambrose.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 6; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 541-542.

1939

January 6

Dimitri Uznadze congratulates Galaktion on the 30th anniversary of his literary work.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 7; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 542.

1939

January 7

He goes to the writers' palace, where it is terribly cold. Only one room has a fireplace and is surrounded by writers who talk about music. Galaktion shares his impressions of the previous day's concert at the Philharmonic. Ilia Aghladze expresses the opinion that Armenian, as well as English music, is characterized by a monophonic tone. Writers express dissatisfaction with the fact that Russians come to Tbilisi with their families and stay here because they like Georgia very much. Khariton Vardoshvili says that Guria is full of Russians, and Viktor Gabeskiria invents what he saw and heard in Samegrelo, how one Russian boy cursed another in the Megrelian language. According to Ilia Aghladze, there are many Russians in Racha as well. Then the writers start talking about Georgian poetry. Viktor Gabeskiria likes Galaktion's poems and dislikes Simon Chikovani's poetry because of its absurdity. They touch on the creativity of Jack London and Theodore Dreiser. Leo Kiachelli tells Shalva Radiani that many critics judge the Book without reading it. Galaktion is told that he deserved a better anniversary night. After a while, Iona Vakeli enters the room, who has lost an overshoe on the bus. Galaktion remembers that he doesn't have overshoes and his coat is old, but he comforts himself with Rustveli's words: "If your head is yours, you will not be remembered as poor".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 7-8; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 542-544.

1939

January 8

He meets Mikheil Lobzhanidze, who heartily congratulates him on the 30th anniversary of his literary work.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 8; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 545.

1939

January 8

An employee of Main Literary Board replaces the grapheme “k” in the poet’s name on the poster of Galaktion’s evening with “q”, which causes Galaktion to become enraged. He thinks that it is not Main Literary Board’s job to change his name.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-122, 8; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 545.

1939

January 8

He goes to the literary fund, where they tell him that they cannot give him 3,000 roubles in full as a royalty, and when they have the opportunity, they will compensate him in parts.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-122, 8; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 545.

1939

January 8

Beso Zhghenti cheers him up that his Book will be published in Russian this year and praises the translator Nikolai Tikhonov. He recalls how he read Galaktion’s poems at the Writers’ Congress in Moscow in 1934 and what admiration these translations caused.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-122, 8; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 545.

1939

January 8

He is outraged that the state concert organization takes 30 percent of his evening’s earnings and many tickets.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-122, 8; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 545.

1939

January 8

He meets Ioseb Grishashvili, who modestly nods his head. Galaktion attaches so much importance to this that he even writes about it in his diary.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-122, 8; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 545.

1939

January 9

He takes part in making a poster for his anniversary evening. He is satisfied with the originality of the work and the spring colours. An employee of the Main Literary Board asks why the poster says “Galaktion” and not “Galaqtion”, to which the poet replies that his mother named him Galaktion and always signed it that way. The trustee of the Main Literary Board asks a few more questions and finally says with an apology that he was appointed to the position only a few days ago and is trying to understand the case well.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-122, 9; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 546.

1939

January 9

While crossing the street, Misha Lobzhanidze, who stops him in time, saves him from being hit by a car. Lobzhanidze expressed his surprise that Galaktion read poems very shyly at his anniversary evening. The poet answers that he is shy by nature and was worried that day. The interlocutor says that the poet is generally shy, but Galaktion adds that this is not always true.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 9; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 546.

1939

January 10

In the morning, they put up posters about Galaktion's creative evening, which is planned to be held in the Rustaveli Theatre.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 9; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 547.

1939

January 10

The director of Rustaveli Theatre Polikarpe Murgulia tells him that by January 12, the theatre will be decorated for the holiday.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 9; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 547.

1939

January 10

Levan Asatiani gets in touch with the writers participating in Galaktion's poetry evening and reminds them of the time of the event.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 9; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 547.

1939

January 10

Tickets for Galaktion's anniversary event are partially sold out.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 9; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 547.

1939

January 10

Giorgi Kuchishvili, Kale Bobokhidze and Elene Sher agree to participate in Galaktion's evening.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 9; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 547.

1939

January 10

Galaktion finds a person who will sell the poet's books and pictures on the day of the event.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 9; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 547.

1939

January 10

At the reception with the Secretary of the Trade Unions of the Party Committee, who issues an order to purchase tickets for the evening of Galaktion.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 9; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 547.

1939

January 10

He is happy that the posters of his anniversary event attract people.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 9; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 547.

1939

January 10

On the way, he meets the writer Grigol Matchavariani, who tells him that he will certainly attend his evening.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 10; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 547.

Note: In the record, Grigol Matchavariani is referred to by the pseudonym "Sakharikedeli".

1939

January 10

He is disappointed that he does not see any interest in his anniversary event from the Union of Writers.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 10; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 547.

1939

January 10

As Shalva Dadiani hesitates to participate in Galaktion's party, Galaktion considers finding a substitute.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 10; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 547.

1939

January 10

He writes in the notebook that the organizational issues of the event need to be resolved, namely the case of the music department and the issue of heating and lighting of the hall.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 10; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 547.

1939

January 10

He selects poems to be read at the poetry evening.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 10; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 547.

1939

January 10

The newspaper Komunisti publishes a notice that, on the initiative of the literary circle at the Tbilisi teachers' house, a big literary evening dedicated to the 30th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's creative work is being organized in the middle of January. Teachers, writers and students will participate in the event. Galaktion Tabidze evenings will also be held in Poti.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1939, №8 (January 10), p. 4.

1939

January 11

In the Union of Writers, Besarion Zhghenti is chosen as the main speaker of the anniversary evening of Galaktion. Galaktion is pleased because he believes him to be a rare orator and cultured man.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 10; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 547.

1939

January 11

Director of Rustaveli Theatre Polikarpe Murgulia and artist Irakli Gamrekeli fulfil their promise to Galaktion and prepare a big poster of the event.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 10; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 547.

1939

January 11

He orders a frame for the portrait from the artist Davit Gvelesiani.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 10; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 547.

Note: The artist Davit Gvelesiani is mentioned only by his last name in the record.

1939

January 11

He tells Levan Asatiani that the writers are lined up to participate in the evening.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 10; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 547.

Note: Levan Asatiani is mentioned only by name in the record.

1939

January 11

The newspaper Musha publishes a notice that on January 12, Galaktion Tabidze's creative evening will be held in Rustaveli State Theatre.

Source: Newspaper Musha, 1911, №9 (January 11), p. 4.

1939

January 11

He writes in the notebook the opinion of artist Davit Gvelesiani about Alio Mashashvili. Mashashvili described him with the words of Pushkin: "We consider everyone to be zero, but we think we are one".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 10; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 547.

Note: Artist Davit Gvelesiani is mentioned only by his last name in the record.

1939

January 11

He talks to the editors of the newspapers Musha, Komunisti, Akhalgazrda Komunisti, Vecherniy Tbilisi by phone about the event and is satisfied with their cordial attitude.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 10; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 547.

1939

January 12

In the State Theatre named after Shota Rustaveli, an evening dedicated to the 30th anniversary of Galaktion's creative work is held, which is opened by Shalva Dadiani with an introductory speech. Speakers are Levan Asatiani, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Alexandre Abasheli, Alio Mashashvili, Kale Bobokhidze, Riurik Ivnev. The Russian translation of Galaktion's poems is read by Boris Serebryakov and Elene Sher. Andria Balanchivadze performs musical compositions written on the texts of Galaktion. Galaktion himself reads "I and Night" and "The moon of Mtatsminda". The poet is very satisfied with the event but feels very tired.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 10-11; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 548; Newspaper Komunisti, 1939, №11 (January 14), p. 4.

1939

January 12

He is outraged by the behaviour of Alio Mashashvili, the secretary of the Union of Writers, at the evening dedicated to the 30th anniversary of his creative work. Galaktion believes that he wanted to open the evening himself, and since that honour belonged to Shalva Dadiani, he defiantly sat down in the first row of the parterre, and after the evening was over, he ironically tells Galaktion that he remembers the old poems well.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 11; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 548.

1939

After January 12

Alio Mashashvili's behaviour at the event made Galaktion create an epigram: "Alio said to Ilio...", which quickly spreads.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 11; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 548.

1939

After January 13

In the magazine Chveni Taoba, Eremia Astvatsaturov's article "Galaktion Tabidze" is published. The author notes that the poet entered the literary scene during the defeat of the 1905 Revolution and was overtaken by pessimism, as the initial excitement was followed by hopelessness, especially since he was influenced by French and Russian symbolists. The poet believes that he is a “late traveller of another century” and no longer sees the prospect of renewal. He compares him to Nikoloz Baratashvili, who, after the failure of the 1832 conspiracy, sought solace in solitude. He considers the weakness of Galaktion’s early poetry to be his lack of understanding of the inevitability and triumph of the revolution. However, unlike other decadent-symbolists, he secretly carried a spark of hope. After the victory of the October Revolution in 1917, he was the first among Georgian poets to raise the flag of freedom and laid the foundation for militant poetry. Therefore, his work is the foundation of 20th-century poetic culture, and on the 30th anniversary of his literary career, he continues to create new examples of poetry with youthful energy.

Source: Er. Astvatsaturov, “Galaktion Tabidze”, magazine Chveni Taoba, 1938, December, №12, p. 37-44;

1939

January 14

The newspaper Komunisti publishes a notice about the creative evening of Galaktion.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1939, №11 (January 14), p. 4.

1939

January 14

He falls ill with the flu.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-122, 10; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 548.

1939

After January 14

Galaktion, suffering from the flu, cannot afford hospital treatment and remains at home. Due to the lack of firewood, he is often unable to light the fire and heat the house, due to which his illness worsens and he can no longer work.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-122, 10; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 548.

1939

After January 15

Over a period of time, he becomes extremely dependent on drinking. When drinking vodka, his hands shake so much that the drink spills. Seeing this, the handsome peasant tells him sympathetically that such a young man should not need have such a thing.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-122, 11; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 549.

1939

After January 15

Due to the serious health condition of Galaktion, the artist Ketevan Maghalashvili temporarily stops working on his portrait.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-122, 11; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 549.

1939

After January 15

Materials for an anthology of Georgian literature to be published in Armenian are being brought from Galaktion.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 11; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 549.

1939

After January 15

Composer Bidzina Ghoghoberidze creates a song based on Galaktion's poem "The wind from Tskaltubo to Kutaisi...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 11; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 549.

1939

After January 15

He buys firewood and while carrying it home from the yard, he injures the finger of his right hand. His finger gets swollen, and he cannot write for almost a whole month.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 549.

1939

After January 15

He is often in a depressed mood, feels apathy towards everything and slowly moves away from the writer's association.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 549.

1939

After January 16

The magazine Oktombreli with the caption "Favourite words of a beloved writer" publishes Galaktion Tabidze's stanza from the untitled poem "Time with its plane...", facsimile, photo and Solomon Tsaishvili's biographical letter "Galaktion Tabidze".

Source: S. Tsaishvili, "Galaktion Tabidze", magazine Oktombreli, 1939, January, №1, p. 12-13.

1939

After January 16

Galaktion Tabidze's poem "New Year's" is published in the magazine Oktombreli.

Source: G. Tabidze, "Spring", magazine Oktombreli, 1939, January, №1, p. 1; 1939

After January 16

The magazine Oktombreli publishes Solomon Tsaishvili's letter "Galaktion Tabidze" (public poet, 30th anniversary of his writing career).

Source: Magazine Oktombreli, May, 1939, №1, p. 12-13.

1939

Until January 20

He sends 200 roubles to Olya Okujava in Yaroslavl.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-387; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 227-228.

Dating: The fact is mentioned in Olya Okujava's letter dated January 20, 1939.

1939

After January 20

He receives a letter sent by Olya Okujava from Yaroslavl. The sender describes a beautiful morning that reminds her of Galaktion's poem about the peach blossoms. She writes that she received 200 roubles from him and asks him to take good care of the old photos so they don't get lost. She expresses complete confidence that Galaktion will never break her heart.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-387; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 227-228.

1939

January 22

He is with the artist Ketevan Maghalashvili, who is painting his portrait. Also present is Elene Kartvelishvili, who introduced them to each other.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-460-b; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 279.

Dating: The fact is mentioned in Elene Bakradze's letter of January 23, 1939.

1939

January 23

He receives a letter from Elene Bakradze. She writes that she and Ketevan Maghalashvili were waiting for him and had good wine for hospitality. She expresses concern that her voice was gone the previous day and asks if he is well. She explains that completing the portrait is as important for the artist as finishing a poem is for him, especially since the exhibition is approaching. Since they no longer expect his visit that day, she asks him to make sure to come the following day.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-460-b; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 279.

1939

January

The poem "New Year's" is published in the magazine Oktombreli,

Source: magazine Oktombreli, 1939, №1, January, p. 1.

February

1939

After February 5

He receives a letter sent by Olya Okujava from Yaroslavl. The sender expresses concern that she has not yet heard any news from him. She writes that her health is a bit shaken and that she has recently finished reading Anna Karavaeva's novel "The Timber Mill" and is thrilled by its artistic comparisons. Prior to that, she reread Aleksei Novikov-Priboy's novel "Tsushima", which depicts people's suffering under the conditions of self-enslavement, and she has already begun reading Maxim Gorky's Book about writers.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-388; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 228.

1939

Until February 15

Ketevan Maghalashvili and Elene Kartvelishvili visit Galaktion's house twice and send him a letter asking him to go to Ketevan's to finish the portrait, but the poet does not respond.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-460-g; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 280.

Dating: The fact is mentioned in Elene Bakradze's letter of February 15.

1939

February 15

Elene Bakradze sends a letter to Galaktion, explaining how important it is for Ketevan Maghalashvili to finish the portrait, but it seems she has been lost track of and has not seen him. She asks him to make the right decision and go to Ketevan's from the very morning.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-460-g; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 280.

1939

After February 19

He writes in the introduction to Vera Bardavelidze's Book "The Calendar of Svan Folk Celebrations" that it is possible that all religious customs were directed against evil spirits. He is particularly interested in whether there is an evil spirit that prevents the general increase in livestock milk production, specifically with regard to cows.

Source: MGL, t-20, V. Bardavelidze, "The Calendar of Svan Folk Celebrations", I, New Year's cycle, Tbilisi, 1939, p. 1.

1939

February

On behalf of the Secretariat of the Writers' Union, the executive manager, Irodion Kavzharadze, notifies in writing that he should meet with Sandro Euli to discuss arrangements for an evening event in Poti dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze's work.

Source: MGL, WUF №5.

Note: The document does not specify the date.

March

1939

After March 2

He writes a poem "But that sound echoes another harp...".

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 423;

1939

Until March 4

He writes a poem “Out Loud”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №70-a, p. 1792; №3531; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 179.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1939

Until March 4

He writes a poem “Wrapped in Ivy”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №3552. №334-d., p. 11; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 176.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“To the Opera Garden...”).

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1939

March 4

The newspaper Sabtchota Mastsavlebeli publishes the poems: “First September”, “Out Loud” and “Wrapped in Ivy”.

Source: Newspaper Sabtchota Mastsavlebeli, 1939, №19, March 4, p. 3.

1939

March 4

The newspaper Sabtchota Mastsavlebeli dedicates an entire page to Galaktion’s poetry, including articles and poems about him. It also features a portrait of the poet and the autograph of the poem “The Heroic Era of the Soviet People Defends the Artist”.

Source: G. Tabidze, Wrapped in a Shawl, newspaper Sabtchota Mastsavlebeli, March 4, 1939, N 19, p. 3.

1939

March 4

The newspaper Sabtchota Mastsavlebeli publishes Galaktion Tabidze’s poems: “Wrapped in a Shawl”, “Loudly”, and “The First September”.

Source: G. Tabidze, Wrapped in a Shawl, newspaper Sabtchota Mastsavlebeli, March 4, 1939, N 19, p. 3.

1939

March 4

The newspaper Sabtchota Mastsavlebeli publishes Solomon Tsaishvili’s article “Galaktion Tabidze”, in which he reviews the poet’s personal and creative biography. He notes that Galaktion is one of those poets who, from the very first days of the establishment of Soviet power, “unequivocally, firmly, and with the full strength of his poetic voice” took the position of the working class.

Source: S. Tsaishvili, Galaktion Tabidze, newspaper Sabtchota Mastsavlebeli, March 4, 1939, N 19, p. 3.

1939

March 4

The newspaper Sabtchota Mastsavlebeli publishes a poem by Savle Abuladze dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze, titled “To Galaktion Tabidze”.

Source: S. Abuladze, To Galaktion Tabidze, newspaper Sabtchota Mastsavlebeli, March 4, 1939, N 19, p. 3.

1939

March 4

The newspaper Sabtchota Mastsavlebeli publishes a poem by Vera Kuprashvili dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze, titled “To My Beloved Poet”.

Source: V. Kuprashvili, To My Beloved Poet, newspaper Sabtchota Mastsavlebeli, March 4, 1939, N 19, p. 3.

1939

After March 9

He reads the eleventh volume of the Russian-published Literary Encyclopaedia. making underlines and notes. In the biography of the Mexican poet Jaime Torres-Bodet, the 1933 novel “The Star of the Day” is mentioned, along with a phrase he wrote in 1926: “When the moon shines in the daytime”.

Source: MGL, t-339, “Литературная Энциклопедия”, Том Одиннадцатый, ред. А. В. Луначарский, Moscow, 1939.

1939

March 10

Together with Alio Mashashvili, Shalva Dadiani and Giorgi Leonidze, he signs the collective article of Soviet writers of Georgia with the order - Petition “Lenin-Stalin with great party flag (Achievements in the development of Georgian Soviet literature during the years between the XVII and XVIII Party Congresses)”.

Source: “Lenin-Stalin with great party flag (Achievements in the development of Georgian Soviet literature during the years between the XVII and XVIII Party Congresses)”, Akhalgazrda Komunisti, 1939, March 10, p. 2.

1939

March 10

The article “Writers of Soviet Georgia for the XVIII Congress of the Communist Party” is published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka signed by Alio Mashashvili, Shalva Dadiani, Galaktion Tabidze and other writers, which talks about the successes achieved between the 17th and 18th congresses.

Source: Писатели советской Грузии к XVIII Съезду ВКП (б) (О творческих достижениях грузинских писателей за годы между историческими XVII и XVIII съездами ВКП (б), Заря Востока, 1939б 10 марта, №56, с.2.

1940

After March 19

Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Lyrics for the People” is published in the magazine Chveni Taoba.

Source: G. Tabidze, “Lyrics for the People”, magazine Chveni Taoba, 1940, March, №3, p. 3-5;

April

1939

April 5

He is interested whether there are any of his “favourite poems” published by Zarya Vostoka in Russian left in their warehouse and learns that they are completely gone.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-115, 14; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 456;

1939

April 5

He learns that the literary Repository gives out a pension for whole months and plans to negotiate with Ilo Mosashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-115, 14; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 456;

1939

April 5

He writes in the notebook that he hopes for the help of Gigla Mebuki in the Federation on April 20.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-115, 14; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 456;

Note: In the record, Gigla Mebuke is mentioned only by name and it is not clear what exactly he was supposed to help with.

1939

April 13

He sends money to Daria Akhvlediani.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-458; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 284.

Dating: The fact is mentioned in Daria Akhvlediani’s letter of April 16.

1939

April 16

He receives a letter from Daria Akhvlediani, asking to borrow 30 roubles until April 25. She writes that the money she sent on April 13 has already been spent, and she doesn't even have money left for bread.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-458; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 284.

May

1939

After May 3

He receives a letter sent by Olya Okujava from Yaroslavl. In relation to the feelings of distance from Galaktion, the sender recalls a stanza by Alexander Pushkin and the words of Niccolò Machiavelli: "Let fate trample me underfoot, but I will see if it will feel ashamed". She writes that she is unwell and desperately wants to be at home.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-389; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 229.

1939

May 18

The Russian newspaper Sovetskaia Abkhazia publishes the poems of Georgian poets: Galaktion Tabidze, Ilo Mosashvili, Solomon Tavadze, and others about Colchis.

Source: Из стихов о Колхиде (поэтов Г. Табидзе, И. Мосашвили, С. Тавадзе и др.), Советская Абхазия, 1939, 18 мая, №112, с.2.

1939

After May 20

He receives a letter sent from Yaroslavl by Olya Okujava. Olya is in extreme despair because she has not received even a short letter from Galaktion. She writes that she is physically weak and is reading Lev Mei's poems.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-390; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 230.

1939

May 25

At night, he enters the restaurant for dinner. Some drunken young people invite him to the table. One of them drinks wine from a dessert tray and then hands the glass to Galaktion. He empties the almost liter container without a breath and returns home extremely drunk.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 549.

1939

May 26

In the morning, he wakes up dressed and having hangover, he fails to get up, he feels pain in his side and he barely manages to go to the hospital. After the examination, the doctor concludes that the ribs are injured and prescribes treatment.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 550.

1939

May 28

Olga Darius takes Galaktion's laundry to the laundromat and leaves a note saying that the washed items will be delivered to the house by a helper by 9 a.m. the following day. She suggests that they agree on cleaning the house on May 30. She writes that there will be no problems, as the addressee will personally go and oversee the process. Olga promises that she will also visit on the evening of the 29th at 6 p.m., as she is very concerned about his heart condition.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 310; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 245;

1939

May 29

The medicine prescribed by the doctor does not provide relief. He decides to stay in the hospital. On the way, he meets Olga Darius, who advises him to return home and continue treatment there. The woman takes care of Galaktion herself, cleans the apartment and calls the doctor. The doctor diagnoses the poet with pleurisy.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 550.

Note: Olga Darius is referred to as "Olga Yurievna" in the record.

1939

After May 29

The doctor diagnoses neuralgia.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 550.

1939

After May 29

He is preparing the third volume of works for the state publishing house.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 550.

1939

After May 29

He signs an agreement with the publishing house "Federation" on the publication of one book.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 550.

1939

End of May or later

He receives a letter from Olga Darius. The addressee reminisces about the unforgettable two days spent with Galaktion three days ago. She hadn't told anyone where she was, and when her friends couldn't find her at home, they somehow assumed that she had committed suicide. After that, the past few days feel like three months to the addressee, and she eagerly awaits another meeting with Galaktion. Initially, she refrains from calling, wanting Galaktion to reach out to her, but eventually, she calls. Since no one answers, she sends a letter informing him that she will be home every evening after 8-9 p.m. and will be waiting for his visit. Regarding the reconsideration of Olya Okujava's exile sentence, Darius writes that something must be found to support the case review, for which legal assistance will be needed. He also mentions that there is another, more direct way to address the issue, but he will discuss it in person.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 236; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 244-245;

Note: Olya Okujava is not mentioned in the letter, but it is likely that her court case is referred to in the "case review".

June

1939

After June 10

Alexandre Abasheli's poem "Snow", dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze, is published in the magazine Mnatobi.

Source: Al. Abasheli, "Snow", Magazine Mnatobi, 1939, April, №4, p. 5; 1939

Until June 14

In Vladimir Hospital, he writes a letter to Olya Okujava, expressing his regular receipt of her letters. He is astonished by her delicate resilience, courage, and spiritual fortitude. He admits to feeling desperate and exhausted himself. Concerned about Olya's illness, he wishes to assist her in any way possible. He asks what she needs most so he can send it in a parcel: a warm coat, shoes, bed linens, cotton, cologne, and whether he can include food items like sugar, tea, coffee, cocoa, cookies, jam, flour, or oil – anything that won't spoil during transit. He encourages her to write back. He explains that his own depression has hindered him from writing letters. He shares that he sent 200 roubles on June 14 and is now sending an additional 300. He mentions that, following her recommendation, he purchased Lev Mei's poems and plans to read them soon. He yearns to find ways to ease her suffering.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 49-50;

1939

May 29 – June 15

He rests and recuperates at home, gradually starting to recover. Olga Darius cares for the patient with heartfelt attention.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 550.

Note: Olgha Darius is referred to as "Olga Yurievna" in the record.

1939

June 20 or later

He reads the June 20th issue of Literaturuli Sakartvelo and makes annotations directly in the newspaper. He observes that the leading article discusses the self-satisfaction and decline of poets, noting that some poets are content only with the re-publication of their old works. Galaktion believes it is no coincidence that the discussion centres on poets rather than prose writers. He disagrees with the author's assertion that creating an environment for writers to share their creative plans would be beneficial, arguing that such an arrangement would pave the way for plagiarism and the appropriation of others' ideas. He finds the claim in the publication that criticism and self-criticism significantly aid writers to be misguided, as he believes it cannot be applied to contemporary criticism. Galaktion points out that Vano Tsulukidze's article is imbued with false pathos; Levan Metreveli misuses the term "revolutionary", when he should have used "revolutionary's"; he remarks that in Khariton Vardoshvili's translation of Schiller's poems, only a few phrases stand out; Ilia Khoshtaria's poem "My Homeland" is "flooded with pretentiousness"; and Giorgi Natroshvili's commentary on Demna Shengelaia's stories is monotonous and dull. He finds that Apolon Tsuladze's article "Ethnographic Georgia for Cinematization" contains intriguing insights about the Megrelian and Gurian dialects. In his notes, Ioseb Grishashvili is described as a "literary fence-crawler".

Source: MGL, d-637, 22; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 460.

1939

After June 20

He receives a letter from Olya Okujava.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 550.

1939

After June 20

He sends 50 roubles to Olya Okujava, who is in exile.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 551.

1939

After June 30

In his notebook, he records information about the life and literary activities of the great Persian poet Nizami Ganjavi. He notes that the anniversary date of the poet is incorrectly stated in Literaturuli Sakartvelo.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-123, 19; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 585.

Dating: The entry references the June 30, 1939 issue of Literaturuli Sakartvelo. Accordingly, the entry must have been made after this date.

July

1939

July 2

The insured letter sent to Olya Okujava is returned from the post office.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 154; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 313.

1939

July 15

Due to the expiration of the retention period, the 200 roubles sent to Olya Okujava are being returned from the post.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 154; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 315.

1939

After July 23

He receives a letter from Olya Okujava sent from Vladimir, in which the sender inquires whether Galaktion has received the letters sent on May 20 and June 14, in which she wrote about her illness. He provides the address of a post box in the city of Vladimir for the letters to be sent. She once again expresses her concern about not having any news regarding him.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-391; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 230-231.

1939

Until July 25

The sculptor Iakob Nikoladze creates a bust of Galaktion Tabidze in plaster.

Source: Mamia Duduchava, Iakob Nikoladze, magazine Literaturnaia Gruzia, 1971, №2, p. 48.

1939

Until July 25

An art exhibition is held, featuring the portrait of Galaktion Tabidze painted by artist Davit Gvelesiani, the bust of Galaktion made of plaster by Yakob Nikoladze, and a still life by Ketevan Maghalashvili, which includes a depiction of Galaktion's book.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 11; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 549.

Dating: The information about the exhibition is in Sabtchota Khelovneba, signed for printing on July 25.

1939

July 27 or later

In the notebook, under the title "Fire", he translates from the Russian text an episode from Lloyd Willis's novel, which tells how a rescue dog saves a fireman's family.

Source: MGL, d-123, 26-29; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 578-581;

1939

July 27 or later

He writes an untitled poem "In front of me there is a furious torrent...".

Source: MGL, d-123, 25; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 581;

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem "From ashen garden...".

1939

July 27 or later

He makes excerpts from the introduction of the Russian-language Book - “Chrestomathy of Western European Literature”.

Source: MGL, d-123, 21-24; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 583-585;

1939

July 27 or later

In the notebook, he writes “Svaneti in the XVI century”, which describes the struggle of the Svans against the Dadashkelians for social freedom.

Source: MGL, d-123, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 585-586;

1939

July 28

In the notebook, he writes down the words of the apple seller, a farmer from Vaziani, who met a Russian buyer who told him that he is selling the product at a high price: a donkey is worth as much as a cucumber in Isfahan, and there is no one to grow it.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-124, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 587.

1939

July 28

In the notebook, he writes about the library of the railway police department. He plans to find out whether the library has an archive, why the building has no inscriptions, what the name of the club manager is, etc.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-124, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 587.

August

1939

After August 1

He familiarizes himself with the guidebook of the Georgian Soviet Republic Pavilion published for the All-Union Agricultural Exhibition. On the last page, he writes down the means of transportation by periods: cart, donkey, horse, phaeton, diligence, railway, bus, trolleybus, airplane. He notes that the elevator is called the lift in multi-story buildings. He thinks that in relation to this topic, he should study the geography of Georgia, its rivers and mountains, and find information in an encyclopaedia.

Source: GTSM, 327, All-Union Agricultural Exhibition, Pavilion – Georgian SSR, Guide, Tbilisi, 1939.

Dating: On August 1, 1939, the All-Union Agricultural Exhibition opened in Moscow, and the Georgian pavilion was rated as the best.

1939

August 7

He departs for Kislovodsk.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-122, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 551.

1939

August 8 or after

In the August 8 issue of the newspaper Pravda, he reads Emelian Yaroslavsky's response regarding the Soviet Union history textbook, addressing the remarks made by Joseph Stalin, Andrei Zhdanov, and Sergei Kirov, and he makes excerpts from the article.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-616, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 128.

1939

August 10

He meets Ushangi Chkheidze at the "Intourist" hotel in Kislovodsk, who is very happy to see him. Galaktion recalls how he unusually read "The moon of Mtatsminda" at the anniversary evening of Galaktion in 1933. Ushangi Chkheidze answers that his declamation could not come close to the content of the poem.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-125, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 597;

1939

August 11

He plans to travel by car to ascend Mount Elbrus.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-125, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 598.

1939

August 11

He reads Nikolai Gudzi's Book "How Tolstoy Worked" and thinks it is a very important work.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-125, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 598.

1939

August 11

He is fascinated by the environment, music and restaurant of Kislovodsk hotel "Intourist".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-125, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 598.

1939

August 11

He dedicates lyres made of ivory to the two women. He is planning to take such lyres to some friends in Tbilisi as well. He considers it possible to publish one of the books with the image of such a lyre.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-125, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 598.

1939

August 11

He likes local post papers with pictures of Russian writers: Griboyedov, Chekhov, Krylov, and others. He thinks that it would be good to introduce similar cards in Georgia.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-125, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 598.

1939

August 11

He plans to dedicate a poem to Ushangi Chkheidze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-125, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 598;

1939

August 11

He plans to take Olgha Darius and Laine Bartels to Elbrus. He is going to get a map and literature about Elbrus.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-125, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 598;

1939

August 11

In Kislovodsk, he visits an exhibition of local artists and likes the Caucasian landscapes depicted on their canvases.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-125, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 599.

1939

August 11

He explores one of the oldest gardens in Kislovodsk.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-125, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 599.

1939

August 11

In the notebook, he mentions a conversation he overheard in Kislovodsk between two peasants about the fact that Crimean wines are better than Caucasian wines.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-125, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 599.

1939

After August 11

He writes an untitled poem "To Ushangi Chkheidze" ("It's been a long time since he was here...").

Source: MGL, a-1708, G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 313.

Dating: On August 10, 1939, at the "Intourist" Hotel in Kislovodsk, he meets Ushangi Chkheidze. On August 11, he considers dedicating a poem to him. In the poem, Elbrus is mentioned, which he ascends after August 11.

1939

After August 11

He ascends to Yalbuz from the Baksan Gorge.

Source: G. Tabidze, autobiography, MGL, d-659, 20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 484;

1939

After August 11

He receives a letter sent from Vladimir by Olya Okujava. The sender repeats that she has not received any letters from him and is feeling desperate. She writes that she is reading Vikenty Veresaev's Book "Pushkin in Life" and enjoys it so much that she doesn't want it to end soon. She also mentions that she dreamed she was in Tbilisi, with Galaktion.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-392; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 231.

1939

August 12

He continues to read the Book "How Tolstoy Worked". Galaktion admires Tolstoy's method of work. He thinks that personally his way of working is different because he does not have a peaceful creative environment.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-125, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 599.

1939

August 13

Giorgi Tavzarashvili calls him in the middle of the night, inviting him to a party of Georgians at the "Intourist" hotel. Galaktion initially says that he cannot leave the guests and refuses, but when he learns that Ushangi Chkheidze will be with them, he decides to go. He is satisfied with the environment and the gathered community.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-125, 2; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 600.

1939

August 15

In the Armenian newspaper Sabtchota Sakartvelo, Hovhannes Karapetyan's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "To Revolutionary Georgia" is published.

Source: MGL, t-665, newspaper Khorurdain Vrastan, August 15, 1939, №186, p. 3.

1939

After August 20

In the preface to the Academy of Sciences of Georgia's Book "Svan Poetry", he makes annotations and comments on the poems and notes. In one of the household songs, "Bimurzela from Mestia", he highlights the lines in every stanza: "Mibina Lizi-Lichedi", "I have begun coming and leaving", which he later frequently uses in his notes from 1947-1958 to describe his actions. He writes a variant of the poem "Handuq'afar", which his mother had written down in her youth. Later, Galaktion includes this text in his poem "Grandmother's Glasses". At the end of the book, He writes a poem “Edelweiss”, describing his house in Chkvishi, as well as the “King’s Grove” given to his ancestors by King Solomon II of Imereti. He notes that theatre, music, and painting have developed, and a unified Georgian art has emerged, characterized by emotional, romantic, and highly modern elements.

Source: MGL, t-114, “Svan Poetry”, compilers and translators: Akaki Shanidze, Varlam Topuria, Meri Gujejiani, Tbilisi, 1939, p. XIII-XVII, 3, 5, 7, 9, 11, 13, 15-19, 21, 23, 25, 77, 84-89, 101, 107, 117, 119-125, 140-151, 172-178, 201-213, 227, 229, 249, 251-253, 257-259, 267, 302, 309, 321-323, 331, 363, 378, 386, 412-415, 430, 436-438.

1939

August 26

He is elected to the committee for the 100th anniversary of Akaki Tsereteli.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-124, 3; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 588;

1939

August 26

He writes the plan of anniversary events adopted at the meeting of the anniversary committee dedicated to the 100th anniversary of the birth of Akaki Tsereteli in the notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-124, 3; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 588;

1939

August 7-27

He travels from Kislovodsk to Dagestan, Chechnya, Kabardino-Balkaria, Karachay-Cherkessia, North Ossetia, and ascends to the summit of Yalbusz.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-73, 54; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 340.

1939

August 27

He returns from Kislovodsk to Tbilisi via the military route.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-73, 105; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 340.

1939

August 31

He writes a poem titled “Greetings to Youth”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №2765; №2782; №2783; №2785-2786; №5940-5941; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 175.

Note: The poem also appears under the title “Due to the Beginning of the Academic Year” and untitled (“Greetings to New Youth...”).

1939

August

He is worried because it has been a month and a half since he did not receive a letter from Olya Okujava.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 12; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 550.

Dating: The record mentions Olya Okujava's letter of June 20. At the time of making a record, according to Galaktion, about a month and a half has passed since this fact.

September

1939

September 1

The poem "Greetings to Youth" is published in the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti.

Source: newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, 1939, №200, September 1, p. 3.

1939

After September 3

He receives a letter from Olya Okujava, sent from Vladimir. In it, she expresses her worries about Galaktion being overly impractical and suggests that he will struggle to care for himself. She advises him to purchase a coat and galoshes before the cold sets in and to have a piece of outerwear ready. Olya inquires about their mutual friends and writes about the joy she would feel receiving a letter from him, imagining how she would kiss and embrace him. She mentions that she has read Vikenty Veresaev's Pushkin in Life multiple times, deeply empathizing with the suffering the great poet endured at the hands of Russia's aristocracy. She has also read Ivan Pushchin's Book about Alexander Pushkin and Vladimir Vinogradov's work on Pushkin's language. Olya encourages Galaktion to find and acquire these books. She concludes the letter with the happy news of receiving the funds he sent.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-393; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 231-233.

1939

September 15

He receives a letter sent from Vladimir by Olya Okujava.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-73, 112; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 342.

1939

September 16

They prune the garden and cut the branch of the acacia that was damaged by the storm on July 15 but is still alive, which makes a heavy impression on him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-73, 112; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 341.

1939

September 16

He has the flu, his side still hurts, and he thinks there is no hope for recovery.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-73, 112; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 341.

1939

After September 22

He receives a telegram sent from Vladimir by Olya Okujava. She writes that she has not received any response to her letters or the telegram. She feels as though she cannot endure this silence any longer and pleads with him to let her know how he feels.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-437; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 236.

1939

September 25

At the Second Congress of Soviet Writers of Georgia, Shalva Dadiani delivers a report titled "Comrade Stalin's Image in Georgian Soviet Fiction". He lists, alphabetically, the writers who mention Stalin in their works, including Galaktion Tabidze. He extensively reviews the poems and poems of various writers, mentioning some of them twice and praising their work. Regarding Galaktion Tabidze, he states that the poet "in a few lines informs us that, before, there was the 'shackle of slavery,' 'war and betrayal,' but today 'Switzerland is a sixth of the world,' and the great leader 'raised the banner of the labour and intellect of men, the call of global thought, achievement, and invention.'"

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1939, №29, October 4, p. 2.

1939

September 26

At the Second Congress of Soviet Writers of Georgia, Simon Chikovani delivers a report titled "Georgian Soviet Criticism". In his speech, he mentions that several good literary articles have been written recently, including Akaki Gatsrelia's article on Galaktion Tabidze's poetry. He also states that Georgian symbolism remains completely unexplored and unexamined, and that a strong and clear criticism, imbued with Leninist-Stalinist ideas, is needed for the past. He argues that while symbolism revealed the complete poverty of the era, not all works of that time are to be dismissed. "We must not forget that understanding Galaktion Tabidze's work is impossible without considering symbolism and modernism," he asserts. He goes on to explain that in his early creative period, Galaktion was associated with French and Russian symbolists and the history of Georgian modernism. He, along with Valerian Gaprindashvili and others, created many lyrical forms in Georgian poetry, which continue to exist in our poetry today. They contributed significantly to the culture of Georgian poetry, and this is undoubtedly an area of study for our literature.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1939, №29, October 4, p. 3.

1939

September 28

The delegates of the Second Congress of Soviet Writers of Georgia elect a member of the Writers' Union Board through a secret ballot.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1939, №29, October 4, p. 1.

October

1939

October 7

He writes an untitled poem, "To the Mountains of Abkhazia, with Clouds Over the City...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2484; №2570; №2771; №2775; №2766; №2777; №2779; №6532; №759-762; №5511; №5520; №2039; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 129. For dating and clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 603.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "With Free Enthusiasm", "Greece", and untitled, with different beginnings: "Where the Mountain of the Hellenes is – Gimmette..."; "I see the long-fulfilled wish..."; "Here, exalt the happiness..."; "Neither is there a storm, nor fog..."; "Again, this meeting (not with clouds), with a new city, new fields..."; "With the 22nd of October"; "Powerful, dissatisfied with the enemy..."; "We see the long-fulfilled wish..."; "Let a new eloquence chase...".

1939

October 11

He leaves a brief letter for Lavrenti Dzidziguri, asking to borrow 200 roubles for a few days.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-232; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 271.

1939

After October 11

He receives a letter sent from exile by Olya Okujava. She informs him that she has recovered and has been discharged from the hospital. She shares a dream she had the previous night, in which she was acquitted and released, preparing to go to Sokhumi. She longs to see Galaktion's book, which was supposed to be published in 1936. Olya urges him to take care of himself and to make sure to visit the doctor. She hopes that Galaktion has received her telegram.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-394; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 233-234.

1939

October 18

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes Boris Serebryakov's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Salute to the liberated brothers of Belarus and Ukraine" is published.

Source: Освобожденным братьям Западной Украины и Западной Белоруссии (Стихотворение) Галактион Табидзе, Перевел с грузинского Борис Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1939, 18 октября, №240, с.3.

1939

After October 21

He reads Boris Mikhailovsky's Book "Russian Literature of the 20th Century", making underlines and notes. In the article about Alexander Blok's work, he writes that Blok's first Book was published in 1904 when he was 24 years old, while his own first Book was published in 1914 when he was 22 years old.

Source: MGL, t-358, Б. В. Михайловский, Русская литература XX века – с девяностых годов XIX века до 1917 г., Moscow, 1939.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on October 21, 1939.

1939

October or later

He writes satirical poems dedicated to Giorgi Leonidze "Folklore-Molklore Goglae." and "Folklore-Molklorus. Recipe".

Source: MGL, d-127, 8-9; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 606-607;

1939

October or later

He writes a one-stanza untitled poem "Perished forever..."

Source: MGL, d-127, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 608;

1939

October or later

In the notebook, he writes a memory dedicated to Irodion Evdoshvili.

Source: MGL, d-127, 14; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 608;

1939

October or later

In the notebook, he writes the German text of Goethe's "Mountain Peaks" in Georgian transliteration.

Source: MGL, d-127, 15; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 609;

1939

October or later

In the notebook, he writes quotes from the play of the English playwright Thomas Otway "Venice Preserved, or a Plot Discovered".

Source: MGL, d-127, 16; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 609.

1939

October or later

In the notebook, he writes a German quote by Martin Luther that the one who does not love wine, women and music will remain a fool for the rest of his life.

Source: MGL, d-127, 28; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 611;

November

1939

Until November

Ketevan Iremadze translates Antoine Francois Prevot's novel "Manon Lescaut" and asks Galaktion Tabidze to write a poem for this book, which had precedents in French and Russian literature. Galaktion agrees and asks Iremadze to collect poems dedicated to Manon Lescaut. Ketevan fulfils his request and, in addition to the poems, provides with operas written on this topic, librettos and photos of the French female singers who performed Marguerite. Galaktion is satisfied and in a few weeks, he writes a poem entitled "Inscription on the Book "Manon Lescaut" with the subtitle "Dedicated to Ketevan Iremadze".

Source: Sh. Radiani, Our Galaktion, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 261; Autograph, MGL, №2770; №2780; №3549; №3550; №5616; №8719; №22901; №28897-50, p. 1; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, p. 177.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "Inscription on the Book", "Inscription on the Book of De Grioux and Manon", and untitled ("Forever Resounds: Everlasting").

Dating: In November, a review of this Book was published in the magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba.

1939

Until November

The novel "Manon Lescaut", translated by Ketevan Iremadze, is published, preceded by a poem titled "Inscription on the Book "Manon Lescaut" written by Galaktion, inspired by this translation.

Source: Abbot Prévost, "Manon Lescaut", Tbilisi, 1939, p. 1.

Dating: In November, a review of this Book was published in the magazine Soviet Art.

1939

Until November 4

He writes a poem titled "October Symphony" ("October is the most intense wind of genius...").

Source: Autograph, MGL, №2573; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 183.

Note: The poem is also found untitled ("October is the most intense wind of genius...").

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1939

November 4

The poem "October Symphony" ("October is the most intense wind of genius...") is published in the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1939, №32, November 4, p. 1.

1939

November 7

The poem “Towards Victory” is published in the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti.

Source: newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, 1939, №257, p. 4.

1939

November

In the magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba, a review by Aleksandre Sulava of Ketevan Iremadze’s translation of Abate Prevost’s novel Manon Lescaut is published. The review is preceded by a stanza from Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Inscription on the Book Manon Lescaut”, dedicated to Ketevan Iremadze. The author notes that the Book includes a poem written with Galaktion Tabidze’s brilliant craftsmanship and great poetic erudition, describing the novel as a genius creation of the XVIII century, but asserting that Galaktion Tabidze’s twenty-line poem is equally remarkable.

Source: A. S-a, Abate Prevost “Manon Lescaut”, Ketevan Iremadze’s translation, Publisher “Federation”, 1939, magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba, 1939, №11, p. 87.

December

Until December 17

He submits a request to the Tbilisi Heating Department, asking them to issue firewood for personal use on a cash basis.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-133; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 106.

1939

December 17

The Tbilisi Heating Department attaches a resolution to his request, approving the issuance of the requested firewood.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-133; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 106.

1936-1939

He writes a poem titled “We Are With You, Dolores!”

Source: Autograph, MGL, №5230; №5230; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 174.

Dating: G. Tabidze, “works in twelve volumes” Vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 390.

1939

He writes an untitled poem “Perhaps because the sail of the ship”, the original, extensive autograph version of which is dedicated to Olya Okujava’s exile and not saying goodbye to her.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4499; 5562; 2424; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 215.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles “Disconnection”, “Merging Between Dream and Reality”, and untitled (“On the Banks of the River, the Dry Threads...”).

1939

He writes a poem titled “On the Carpet Depicting Stalin’s First Meeting with Lenin in Tammerfors in 1905”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 69; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 229.

1939

Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Gori” opens the Book “Georgian writers to the Leader” published by the publishing house of Writers’ Association dedicated to the 60th anniversary of Stalin’s birth.

Source: Collection “Georgian writers to the Leader”, Tbilisi, 1939, p. 1-6.

1939

He writes a poem titled “On the Translation of The Knight in the Panther’s Skin into Abkhaz”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №902; 66-a, p. 1561; №2776; №2039; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 176.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“The Lines of Rustaveli...”).

1939

He writes a poem “Renewal of Nature”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №332; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 179.

1939

In the collection “Homeland”, he publishes the poem “Idea” (“Walk With Faith...”).

Source: Collection “Homeland”, 1939, p. 17.

1939

He considers organizing a decadal event “Galaktion and Akaki”. He writes a list of speakers, indicating that the composer for the first evening will be Grigol Chkhikvadze and the speaker will be Korneli Kekelidze.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-500, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 15.

1939

He writes notes on Vera Bardavelidze’s Book “The Calendar of Svan Folk Celebrations”. He mentions that in 1928, at her initiative, Despina Gelovani’s novel “I Will Find Justice with Blood” was published in the magazine Mnatobi, but he was unable to find any old issues of the magazine. The required copies were also not available in the Mnatobi editorial office. Galaktion notes that both writers and readers are indifferent to journals and newspapers, and for this reason, much ethnographic material published in them remains unused. The poet disagrees with Vera Bardavelidze's opinion that the accounts of the elderly about Svan folk celebrations are not entirely reliable. According to Galaktion, while an elderly person may become physically frail, the reliability of the images deeply imprinted in their memory should not be questioned because of that.

Source: MGL, d-646, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 187-189;

1939

The 11th volume of the "Literary Encyclopaedia" in Russian is published, which includes Giorgi Abzianidze's encyclopaedic article "Galaktion Tabidze". The article provides biographical information about the poet and notes that the early lyric poetry of Galaktion, particularly the "Mary" cycle, was notably influenced by Alexander Blok's "Poems on the Beautiful Lady". However, it is emphasized that the character of Mary in Galaktion's work is much more realistic than the object of Blok's amorous lyrics. The article states that Galaktion Tabidze is a major innovator in Georgian poetry and that the October Revolution had a pivotal influence on his creative work. The poetic cycles "Epoch", "Pacifism", and "Revolutionary Georgia" are briefly characterized.

Source: Литературная энциклопедия, Т. 11, 1939, Москва, Художественная литература, p. 161-162.

1939

He writes a list of the Russian anthologies in which his poems were published. He notes that he did not receive any royalties for these publications.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-510, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 71.

1939 or later

He reads Giorgi Kachakhidze's Book "The Life of Shio Mghvimeli". He highlights passages and makes comments. At the end, he writes a plan in bullet points for a memoir about Shio Mghvimeli: The writer's opinion on Sergei Yesenin, how Valerian Gunia used to joke with him, how Shio Mghvimeli gently tended to his garden, visiting his home, spending time with Shio Mghvimeli, Niko Valishvili, and Isako, a meeting at the "Paskunji" editorial office, Shio and his walking stick, the melancholy writer, and Shio among other elderly men.

Source: GTSM, 321, Giorgi Katchakhidze, "Life of Shio Mghvimeli", Tbilisi, 1939.

After 1939

He makes a note about the composer and chanter Alexandre Kavsadze. He points out that Kavsadze was the only composer who took into account the peculiarities of the Georgian language when transferring it into the language of music. He paid special attention to the sharpness of the Georgian word. Galaktion considers the modern Georgian anthems to be flawed due to formalism.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-640, 128; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 85.

After 1939

He makes excerpts from the 11th volume of the Russian-language "Literary Encyclopaedia". He highlights certain phrases from the encyclopaedic article "Galaktion Tabidze", authored by Giorgi Abzianidze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-503, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 30-32;

Until 1940

He writes a poem "He Left Home and Never Returned.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4453; №335-d, p. 17; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 170.

Note: The poem is also found in sources without a title.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1939

He writes an untitled poem "How Wonderful It Is, Homeland...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3549; №58-d, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 144; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 789.

Note: The poem is also found with the title "To the Artists".

1939

He writes an untitled poem "The Wind of Bullets and the Rain of Blood...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4814; №58-d, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 145.

1930s

He writes a poem "Lyric Poetry in the Claws of the Beast" ("If You Listen Closely...").

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4449; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 157.

1939 or later

He reads Alexandre Abasheli's collection of poems "The Sun and the Homeland". He is making underlines and on the front flyleaf, he writes down the four books of the poet's poems: "The Smile of the Sun", "The Shattered Mirror", "The Lit Path", "The Sun and the Homeland".

Source: GTSM, 305, Alexandre Abasheli, "The Sun and the Homeland", Tbilisi, 1938.

Until 1940

He writes a poem "Pas-de-Calais" ("Pas-de-Calais, Where Once...").

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4388; №7771; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 153.

Note: The poem also appears untitled with the opening line "It Knows the Tireless Cliffs...".

Until 1940

He writes a poem “The Englishman Follows the Frenchman” (“The Railways Are Entwined...”).

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4392; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 154.

1940

January

1940

Until January

He writes a poem “Let Everyone Know”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4430; №5573; №3964; №4124; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 91.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Two Forces”.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1940

Until January 1

He writes a poem on the friendship of nations for the New Year’s issue of the newspaper Zarya Vostoka, in which he also raises the political issues of Finland.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 500.

1940

January 1

The poem “Many New Years” is published in the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti.

Source: newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, January 1, 1940, №1, p. 2.

1940

January 1

The translation of Galaktion’s New Year’s poem “For the Friendship of Nations” is published in the newspaper Zarya Vostoka, in which the author’s mood has been significantly altered.

Source: Г. Табидзе, За дружбу народов, “Заря востока”, 1940, 1 января, №1 (4923), p. 4.

1940

January 1

Galaktion’s second wife, Olga Darius, writes in her diary that two new poems by Galaktion were published for the New Year in newspapers. Both were written hastily, just a day or a few hours before the newspapers were printed, but the translator for Zarya Vostoka turned the poem’s heroic mood and serious political theme into a pathetic toast. In Galaktion’s opinion, the translator had no malice, and this was the result of ignorance, lack of professionalism, and poor taste. Darius is upset that Galaktion no longer has the final version of the original poem, but she finds a rough autograph and makes her own faithful translation of it.

Source: O. Darius's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 500.

1940

After January 4

He receives a letter from Lavrenti Dzidziguri. He congratulates him on another victory and wishes him continued progress and success. He writes that he was unable to attend his last evening event because he was on a business trip. He informs him that the previous day, a scholar at the university asked for permission to use Galaktion's biographical information for writing a paper.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-226; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 272.

1940

After January 7

In the December 1939 issue of the magazine Mnatobi, Besarion Zhghenti's bibliography titled "To the Leader: A Collection of Georgian Writers Dedicated to Great Stalin" is published, which opens with Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Gori". It is noted that this serves as a lyrical overture for the multi-voiced orchestra presented in the collection, echoing all the main motifs articulated throughout: the people's heavy past, the immortal heroic spirit of the motherland as embodied by Stalin, the great battles led by him, the revived and flourishing Georgia resulting from these struggles, and the people's gratitude and loyalty to Stalin.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1939, December, №12, p. 153-154;

1940

Until January 15

He writes a poem "From the Cabinet to the Masses".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4425; №3294; №3322; №37-d., p. 48; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 219; For dating: N. Sikharulidze, "Researches", Tbilisi, 2025, p. 475-476.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "Autumn in the Village", "From the Cabinet to the Masses", "Light in the Village", and "On the Occasion of the Holiday".

1940

Until January 15

He writes a poem "Light from the West".

Source: Autograph: MGL, №323; №3322; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 18.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "The Kremlin", "Light from the East", and "To the East"; For dating: N. Sikharulidze, "Researches", Tbilisi, 2025, p. 475-476.

1940

Until January 15

He writes an untitled poem, "The Lake Comes and the Ladybird...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4498; №7806; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 220; For dating: N. Sikharulidze, “Researches”, Tbilisi, 2025, p. 475-476.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Fragment”.

1940

Until January 15

He writes a poem “Figures of Frogs in the Versailles Pool”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4346; №577; №5373; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 222; For dating: N. Sikharulidze, “Researches”, Tbilisi, 2025, p. 465-476.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Frog Similar to Delacroix”, “During the Draining of Colchis”, and “Concert”.

1940

Until January 15

He writes a poem “Two Billion”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4506; №5366; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 224; For dating: N. Sikharulidze, “Researches”, Tbilisi, 2025, p. 475-476.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“Only Two Billion...”).

1940

Until January 15

He writes a poem “Ioveliada”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4382; №6323; №5767, p. 124; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 225; For dating: N. Sikharulidze, “Researches”, Tbilisi, 2025, p. 475-476.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Excerpt” and untitled (“This Georgia, this Mountain, this Field...”).

1940

Until January 15

He writes an untitled poem, “I Remember the Worker”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4690; №5342; №7807; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 228; For dating: N. Sikharulidze, “Researches”, Tbilisi, 2025, 475-476.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Lenin”, “Memory of Ilia Chavchavadze”, and untitled (“There too carries another hero...”).

1940

Until January 15

He writes an untitled poem, “What Fate Told You: Do Not Be Afraid...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №70-a, p. 1790; №4503; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 231; For dating: N. Sikharulidze, “Researches”, Tbilisi, 2025, p. 475-476.

1940

Until January 15

He writes a poem “To the German Poet”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №774; №4460; №37-d., p. 71; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 231; For dating: N. Sikharulidze, “Researches”, Tbilisi, 2025, p. 475-476.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Dimitri Gulia” and “Stakhanovite”.

1940

Until January 15

He writes a poem “Pushkin in Paris”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4484; №5227; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 231; For dating: N. Sikharulidze, “Researches”, Tbilisi, 2025, 475-476.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Shattered Heart” and untitled (“Let’s get lost in the halls of Bacchus...”).

1940

Until January 15

He writes a poem “Franc”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4475; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 234; For dating: N. Sikharulidze, “Researches”, Tbilisi, 2025, p. 475-476.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“Paris. This Voice...”).

1940

Until January 15

He writes an untitled poem, “The Only One Goes to the Sky...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4400; 4669; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 236; For dating: N. Sikharulidze, “Researches”, Tbilisi, 2025, p. 475-476.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Evening at the Summer House” and “Autumn”.

1940

Until January 15

He writes a poem “Because of Heine’s Verse”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4446; 37-d., p. 11; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 238; For dating: N. Sikharulidze, “Researches”, Tbilisi, 2025, p. 475-476.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Verses”.

1940

Until January 15

Inspired by Théophile Gautier’s novel “Mademoiselle de Maupin”, he writes a poem “From Gautier’s Novel”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №2390; №4421; №4667; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 210.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Paris”.

1940

Until January 15

He writes a poem “Chimera”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4508; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 207; For dating: N. Sikharulidze, “Researches”, Tbilisi, 2025, p. 475-476.

1940

Until January 15

He writes an untitled poem, “To the Deepest, Most Complex...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4401; №5324; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 208.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Down with Fascism” and untitled (“To the Deepest, Most Complex, it has grown accustomed...”); For dating: N. Sikharulidze, “Researches”, Tbilisi, 2025, p. 465-476.

1940

Until January 15

He writes a poem “I Remember The Face”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4371; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 186.

1940

Until January 15

He writes an untitled poem, “What a Wonderful and Good Day...”

Source: Autograph, MGL, №70-a, p. 1796; №4409; №5767, p. 143; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 209.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Spring”.

1940

Until January 15

He writes a poem “Towards the City”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4387b; №5578; №5580; №5581; №2405-2406; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 211.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles “Once a Delicate Iris, a Cloudless Child” and “In Your Place”, as well as untitled (“Oh, how many times must I thank you again...”).

1940

Until January 15

He writes a poem “Rustaveli in Paris”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4377; №7810; №5767, p. 70; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 214.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“His Portrait Hangs on the Wall...”).

1940

Until January 15

He writes a poem “Upon Returning”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4450; №5335; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 215.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Leningrad”.

1940

Until January 15

He writes a poem “Ibarruri”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4417; №200-a, p. 5427; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 173; For dating: N. Sikharulidze, “Researches”, Tbilisi, 2025, p. 475-476.

1940

Until January 15

He writes a poem “This Year” (“I Demand a Word...”).

Source: Autograph, MGL, №66-a, p. 1576-1577; №3367-3368; 4792; 722; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 149; For dating: N. Sikharulidze, “Researches”, Tbilisi, 2025, p. 475-476.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“I Demand a Word!”..).

1940

Until January 15

He writes a poem “Gold”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №328 d., p. 19-20; №66-a, p. 1529. №4201; №4336; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 105.

Note: The poem is found in sources untitled and under the titles: “Versailles and Trianon”, “Versailles in Gold”, and “Gold in Versailles”.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1940

Until January 15

He writes a poem “Its Nature”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4356; №66-a, p. 1522; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 107.

Note: The poem is also found in sources without a title.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1940

Until January 15

He writes a poem “Ritsa”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №177; №640; №737; №2398; №2873; №2872; №4507; №2025; №3914; №4900; №5476; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 228.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Golden Harp”, “Near the Shores of Lake Ritsa”, “Dream by Lake Ritsa”, “Soviet Abkhazia”, and untitled (with the beginnings: “There is a lake in Abkhazia: Ritsa...”; “What an enchanting place - Ritsa...”; “Abkhazia has the fairy-tale Ritsa...”).

Dating: It is dated according to the time of submission for publication of the third volume of G. Tabidze’s collected works.

1940

Until January 15

He writes a poem titled “The Poet and the Masses”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1549; №1550; №2525; №4335; №771-773; №4932; №5516-5517; G. Tabidze, G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 75.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “The Poet and the Masses”, “Meeting on the Ship”, “Separation Between Culture and the Masses”, “I Remember in Paris”, “Connection Between the Poet and the Masses”, and untitled (with the beginnings: “Sokhumi: In the Window...”; “Masses, masses...”).

Dating: The third volume of the collected works, where this poem was first published, is signed for printing on January 15, 1940.

1940

Until January 15

He writes a poem “Bas-relief”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4413; №325 d., p. 5; G. Tabidze, works in fifteen volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 2017, p. 119.

Note: The poem is found in sources untitled and under the title “The Bas-Relief of I. Nikoladze”.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1940

January 15

The third volume of Galaktion Tabidze’s collected works is submitted for publication under the auspices of the State Publishing House, and the editing of the Book begins.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in eight volumes, vol. III, 1940, 364.

1940

Until January 25

He writes a prose text titled “Lyric”, in which he develops his perspective on the essence and purpose of lyrical poetry, the specifics of poetic craftsmanship, the stages of the development of lyric poetry, and the peculiarities of the work of world-renowned lyric poets.

Source: MGL, d-657, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 348-356.

1940

Until January 25

He writes a prose text titled “Akaki”.

Source: MGL, d-657, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 357-386.

Note: The text is a prose version of the poem “Akaki Tsereteli”.

1940

January 27

Elene Shervashidze gifts the Russian edition of Alio Mashashvili’s poem “Enguri”, translated by her into Russian, with the inscription: “To Galaktion Tabidze, sincerely his admirer, Elene Shervashidze”.

Source: MGL, t-359, Алио Машашвили, “Энгури”, Tbilisi, 1939.

1940

January 30

It is reported on the radio that Galaktion Tabidze has read new poems that have received great acclaim from critics.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze’s letter, h-24551-331; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 171.

Dating: In a letter dated February 1, 1940, Abesalom Tabidze states that this happened “the day before yesterday”.

1940

January 31

An article titled “Contemporary Georgian Literature”, published in the newspaper Komunisti discusses the release of Besarion Zhghenti’s Book “Georgian Writers of the Soviet Era”, marking the 20th anniversary of the establishment of Soviet power. One section of the Book is dedicated to the works of Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: “Contemporary Georgian Literature”, Newspaper Komunisti, January 31, 1941, №25, p. 4.

February

1940

February 1

He received a letter from Varlam Zhuruli. The letter mentioned that the poems he had sent for the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti were greatly appreciated, and an article had even been written about them. However, at the time, some official material had arrived for publication, and it was inconvenient to print the poems later. As for the information about the evening, it had been published in the January 30 issue. He was asked not to forget their editorial team.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-467; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 284-285.

1940

After February 1

He receives a letter from his brother, Abesalom Tabidze, sharing his joy about the news on the radio regarding Galaktion and the praise of his poems in the newspapers. He writes that he has his wife and children in Chkvishi and that the heavy snowfall has caused him some concern. He informs that the Railway Schools Administration has nominated Abesalom for the title of Meritorious Teacher and asks him to call the assistant to the Minister of Education to find out when the list of winners will be submitted for approval to the Supreme Council.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, h-24551-331; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 171.

1940

February 2

The Russian newspaper Sovetskaia Abkhazia publishes the translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Labour and rest" ("The valleys prevent you...") by Boris Serebryakov.

Source: Труд наш счастлив и свободен (Стихотворение) Г. Табидзе, Перевод с грузинского Б. Серебрякова, Советская Абхазия, 1940, 2 февраля, №26.

1940

February 4

On the calendar page, he writes: "A more dreadful day than all the others," because he lost his portfolio of poems, 1,500 lines.

Source: V. Javakhadze, "Unknown. Apology of Galaktion Tabidze", Tbilisi, 2020, p. 22.

1940

After February 7

In Solomon Kubaneishvili's Book "The Chronology of Vazha-Pshavela's Life and Work", he makes underlining and comments.

Source: MGL, t-204, Sol. Kubaneishvili, "The Chronology of Vazha-Pshavela's Life and Work", Tbilisi, 1940, p. 68-69, 78, 93, 161-167, 198, 207, 214-218, 220-222, 265.

1940

Until February 8

He sends 300 roubles to Olya in exile.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-395; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 234-235.

Dating: The date is specified in Olya Okujava's letter dated February 15, 1940.

1941

February 14

The newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo publishes Besarion Zhghenti's article "The Innovative Features of Georgian Soviet Literature". The author includes a quote from Galaktion Tabidze's poem “Let us stand where the storm is...” and adds that these lines reflect the best tradition of Georgian literature and testify to the revival of this tradition with new strength in the Soviet era. The critic also notes that the great epic traditions of classical Georgian poetry have not yet been fully revived and developed in Georgian Soviet literature, and the poems of Galaktion Tabidze, Giorgi Leonidze, Razhden Gvetadze, and others published to date are merely the first attempts.

Source: B. Zhghenti, “The Innovative Features of Georgian Soviet Literature”, newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, February 14, 1941, N 7, p. 2.

1940

After February 15

He receives a letter sent by Olya Okujava from exile. The addressee envisions Galaktion’s village, where he was born, and the house in Kutaisi, where Olya herself was born. She observes the frost-covered window ornaments and sees countless things in them. She writes that she has read Honoré de Balzac’s “The Devil’s Skin”, Boris Lavrenev’s stories: “The Great Land” and “The Lottery of Adler’s Cape”, George Sand’s “Consuelo”, and Ibanes Blasco’s “Rosura Salsedo”, and she begins reading a collection of works by Kozma Prutkov. She informs him that she sent a letter on February 1, requesting confirmation of receipt, and on February 8, she received 300 roubles.

Source: O. Okujava’s letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-395; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 234-235.

1940

After February 20

He receives a letter sent by Olya Okujava from exile. The letter begins with words from Gogol about the “Road”, which often brings salvation, and she longs for the day when the road will lead her home. She shares that she is reading Abram Lezhnyev’s Book “Pushkin’s Prose”. Suddenly, she feels overwhelmed by so many things to write that she can’t express anything, and she apologizes to Galaktion. She tells him that the moon has already risen and has sent him countless kisses.

Source: O. Okujava’s letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-400; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 236.

1940

After February 20

Mirza Gelovani’s poem “To Galaktion” is published in the magazine Chveni Taoba.

Source: M. Gelovani, “To Galaktion”, magazine Chveni Taoba, 1940, February, №2, p. 14;

1940

After February 20

He reads magazine Komunisturi Aghzrdistvis. He makes underlines and notes.

Source: MGL, t-652, magazine Komunisturi Aghzrdistvis, 1940, January, №1.

1940

After February 20

At the end of the magazine Komunisturi Aghzrdisatvis, he begins writing an untitled poem “The Frost and Snow Stand...” right before the table of contents.

Source: MGL, t-652, magazine Komunisturi Aghzrdisatvis, 1940, January, №1.

1940

After February 20

He writes in the table of contents of the journal Komunisturi Aghzrdisatvis that it is necessary to account for photographs, cinema, and journalists. He likes Vaso Gorgadze’s statement and is interested in the stories of Simon Chikovani, Vano Tsulukidze, and Mykola Bazhan. He notes that Shalva Radiani is a valuable assistant.

Source: MGL, t-652, magazine Komunisturi Aghzrdisatvis, 1940, January, №1.

Note: Based on the note “Bashi-Achuki?”, the discussion is likely about the jubilee evening dedicated to the 100th anniversary of Akaki Tsereteli’s birth, which was held at the Writers’ Palace.

1940

February 22

At midnight, he listens to melodies by Schubert and Bach.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-98, 110; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 267.

1940

February 22

He meets an old acquaintance, someone named Archil and invites him for a beer. They recall a journalist Datiko Pavliashvili, who was called “Napoleon”,

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-98, 110; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 268.

1940

February 22

He writes in his diary about journalist Datiko Pavliashvili. He notes that by appearance he was very similar to the French knight Napoleon. He was sincere and funny. In addition, he had a giant hump and constantly wore a discoloured tailcoat. This tailcoat was sewn for him by the editors of “Iveria”. Pavliashvili worked in the Commissariat of Justice, where he fell in love with a woman who named him Quasimodo because of his hump.

Source: MGL, d-98, 110; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 268.

Note: Datiko Pavliashvili is referred to by the nickname “Napoleon”.

1940

After February 22

He writes an untitled poem “April, one thousand eight hundred...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 112; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 269.

Dating: The poem immediately follows the entry dated February 22, 1940. Both texts are written in the same ink.

1940

After February 22

He writes the plan of the poem “Bambura Mura” and then starts writing the text according to the plan.

Source: MGL, d-98, 112-114,116,118-119; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 270-275, 277-283.

Note: In the autograph, the poem begins with the words: “The unclean glass of the coffeehouse or tavern...”.

1940

February 27

He undergoes a blood test and writes the data in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-98, 150; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 313.

1940

February

The poem “Speaking of Lyric” is published in the magazine Mnatobi.

Source: G. Tabidze, “Speaking of Lyric”, magazine Mnatobi, 1940 №2, p. 3-19.

1940

February

The poem “To Galaktion” by Mirza Gelovani is published in the magazine Chveni Taoba.

Source: magazine Chveni Taoba, 1940, №2, p. 14.

1940

After February

On Rustaveli Avenue, Galaktion accidentally runs into the poet Otar Mamphoria and invites him to Mtatsminda. After reaching the Pantheon, they turn left onto a small path, and Galaktion says that it’s a route he discovered himself. They head to the summer restaurant of the funicular. The poet greets a familiar waiter from Racha, places an order, and gazes thoughtfully at Tbilisi. Mamphoria takes out his notebook and pencil to write down what Galaktion is saying. The poet recalls how, after his first poems were published, a housewife in Kutaisi would add extra sugar to his tea. At a nearby table, Russian tourists, including a beautiful woman, are singing a song based on his poem “From Tskaltubo to Kutaisi”. The poet lights up with joy, takes Mamphoria’s notebook, and draws a sun – symbolizing himself as Galaktion – with rays representing other poets. The Russian tourists approach their table and toast to Galaktion. The beautiful woman kisses his forehead, and Galaktion kisses her hand in return. Then, he offers a toast to lyrical poetry that fights for justice and asks Mamphoria if he has read his “Speaking of Lyric”. He then recalls García Lorca, whose soldiers sang a song based on his poem during his execution. Later, Galaktion and Mamphoria descend toward the Pantheon of public figures. It's already late, and the gate is locked, but Mamphoria manages to open it. The noise alerts the guard, but upon seeing Galaktion, he respectfully invites them into the Pantheon. The poet stands for a long time, gazing at the statue of Nikoloz Baratashvili.

Source: O. Mamphoria, One evening with Galaktion, Literaturuli Sakartvelo, December 3, 1982, N 49, p. 13.

Dating: The recollections suggest that Galaktion's poem "Speaking of Lyric" has already been published.

March

1940

March 4

The Presidium of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia petitions the head of the Special Medical-Sanitary Administration, Ivane Pranguliani, to assist Galaktion Tabidze in receiving treatment for alcoholism at an appropriate hospital in Moscow.

Source: MGL, WUF №7.

1940

March 5

He sends a letter to the Ukrainian poet Mykola Bazhan, informing him that he has reviewed the Ukrainian edition of the Book "Soviet Georgian Poetry" and found one mistake in the preface. On page 20 of the book, it is stated that Galaktion's poetry is influenced by Vladimir Mayakovsky. The recipient notes that, despite his great respect for Mayakovsky, this claim is not accurate, and anyone who becomes familiar with Galaktion's poetry will easily be convinced of this.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-70; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 66.

1940

After March 7

He reads Grigol Iaralov's article "Ilia Mosashvili – Poems", published in the magazine Mnatobi under the "Bibliography" section. He writes that the critic notices the repeated use of rhymes in the author's poems but fails to recognize that they echo Galaktion's rhymes. He concludes that Ilia Mosashvili is a poet of his school.

Source: MGL, t-543, magazine Mnatobi, 1941, January, №1.

1940

Until March 14

He receives a letter from an unknown young reader, who is inquiring whether the poem "May Day" by the poet is mistakenly printed in the school textbook with a typographical error.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. XII, Tbilisi, 1975, p. 559.

Dating: It was dated based on Galaktion's reply letter.

1940

Until March 14

He sends a reply letter to the young reader who inquired whether a typographical error had been made in the poem “May Day” published in the school textbook. Galaktion thanks the young reader for their attention and confirms that there was a typographical error in the text, and it should read “Greetings to the Battles”. The poet assures the recipient that this mistake will be corrected in future editions of the textbook.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. XII, Tbilisi, 1975, p. 559.

1940

March 16

At the XIII Congress of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia, Kandid Charkviani presents a report titled “Art and Literature”, in which he notes that the leading poet, Galaktion Tabidze, enriched Georgian poetry with masterfully written poems about Stalin and his native city, Gori.

Source: K. Charkviani, “art and Literature”, magazine Chveni Taoba, 1940, April, №4, p. 9 (7-11);

1940

March 17

He submits the Book “Lyric” to the Children’s Literature Publishing House (“Sablitgami”) for printing and plans to negotiate the honorarium.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-499-4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 7.

1940

After March 20

He receives a message from Olya Okujava. She writes that she hasn’t received a response to her numerous letters and messages, and she pleads with him to get in touch.

Source: Olya Okujava’s letter, G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 236.

1940

After March 23

He reads Niko Marr’s Book “Description of the Manuscripts of the Monastery of Mount Sinai”, making underlines and annotations.

Source: GTSM, 146, Marr, Н. Я., “Описание Грузинских Рукописей Синайского монастыря”, Moscow-Leningrad, 1940.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on March 23, 1940.

1940

Until March 24

He writes a poem “Book – Friend”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-128, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 7-8.

Note: The first and fifth stanzas of the poem are published under the title “Books – Are The Sea” and are dated to the 1940s, while the second and third stanzas, with minor changes, are titled “You Have a Sky Like This” and are dated to 1944.

1940

Until March 24

He writes two versions of the untitled poem “Why Should I Be a Red Carpet to Someone Else...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary, MGL, d-128, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 8-9.

Note: The poem was later published under the title “Where Is Such Another Sea?”

Dating: The autograph is placed before the entry dated March 24, 1940.

1940

Until March 24

He writes an untitled poem dedicated to Akaki Tsereteli, titled “He Said a Little, But...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-128, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 13-14.

1940

Until March 24

He writes an untitled poem dedicated to Akaki Tsereteli, titled “Voices Heard Among the People...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-128, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 20.

Dating: The autograph is placed before the entry dated March 24, 1940.

1940

March 24 or earlier

He learns that the printing works of the third volume of his works will be finished in two or three days and the publishing will start soon.

Source: MGL, d-129, 2; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 29.

1940

March 24 or earlier

He fails to find out when his portrait by Davit Gvelesiani will be accomplished.

Source: MGL, d-129, 2; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 29.

1940

March 24 or earlier

He learns that new pages should be added to the textbook of the X grade “Chrestomathy of Georgian literature, XX century” and he hopes that his poems will be included in the added material.

Source: MGL, d-129, 2; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 29.

1940

March 24 or earlier

He writes in the diary that Akaki Tsereteli was welcomed heartedly by the Georgian community during his stay in Paris in the fall and winter of 1909-1910, and he notes that such a support from emigrants is necessary for him as well.

Source: MGL, d-129, 2; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 29.

1940

March 24

In his diary, he writes about what is needed to organize the evenings: press coverage, radio, a stage, posters, decorations for bookstores and windows on Rustaveli and Plekhanov Avenues, trams, special lighting, the facade of the opera theatre, composers and musicians, a literary brigade, evening agitation-propaganda, women's brigades, school youth, and students. He believes that the events should take place in every school. He notes that, in this case, the most important thing is the permission from Kandid Charkviani.

Source: MGL, d-129, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 29.

1940

March 24

To organize the evenings, he inspects the tram stops that are suitable for this purpose and counts 60 points located on Mikhail's Avenue.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-129, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 29.

1940

March 24

He goes to the Composers' Union to see Ivane Gokieli. A female employee replies that he has travelled to Kyiv. Afterward, she asks Galaktion for his name, and upon receiving his answer, she tells him that he is their pride and they will help him. He reflects that pride is good, but one must not forget to work on creating something great.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-129, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 29.

1940

March 24

He receives a phone call from the Writers' Union informing him that there will be a meeting of award-winning writers and students at the Veterinary Institute, featuring Simon Chikovani, Irakli Abashidze, and Giorgi Leonidze. They invite him to participate, but Galaktion is unwell and thinks that such evenings can bring him no benefit; they only make him anxious, and he will end up spending the whole week in bed afterward.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-129, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 29.

1940

March 24

Shalva Radiani's article "New Poems of Galaktion Tabidze" is published in the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo. The author notes that Galaktion Tabidze is an excellent lyricist and an extremely difficult event in Georgian poetry. He wrote masterpieces over thirty years, but his poetry has not been thoroughly studied. He reviews new texts: a fragment from the poem titled "I Remember Youth", "From the Moon's Tale",  ("O colour of the setting sun is still..."), "Somewhere, On the Ice", and  ("The evening rays..."). He notes that the poet experienced ideological and artistic failures, which led to discussions about the end of his creative path. Nevertheless, it is concluded that Galaktion Tabidze remains a virtuoso of romantic verse in Georgian poetry, and his latest publications show that he has great creative potential.

Source: Sh. Radiani, "Galaktion Tabidze's New Poems", Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, №9, p. 4.

1940

March 24

He visits Valerian Gaprindashvili, who believes that his heart ailment is caused by overwork, beer, and cigarettes. The writer's young daughter, Nana Gaprindashvili, who is studying nearby, remarks on the beauty of the snow visible through the window. Her father tells her that Galaktion has excellent poems about snow and wind. The child asks whether he has poems about Lenin, to which the father replies that he has poems about both Lenin and Stalin. The guest and host engage in a lengthy discussion about an incident between Irakli Abashidze and Bondo Keshelava, as well as about Kolau Nadiradze, Khariton Vardoshvili, Alexandre Abasheli, and a Book dedicated to Stalin. Valerian Gaprindashvili expresses joy that his poem about Stalin was published next to one of Galaktion's poems. The host mentions that he appreciates the response to Galaktion's recent poems. After returning home, Galaktion resolves to quit smoking cigarettes.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-129, 1-2; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 28-29.

Note: On this very day, there was Shalva Radiani's letter about Galaktion's last poems in Literaturuli Sakartvelo. "Incident" may refer to the fact that Bondo Keshelava beat Irakli Abashidze.

1940

March 24

The newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo publishes the March 16 report of Kandid Charkviani on the XIII Congress of the Communist Party of Georgia. The report states about Galaktion Tabidze that by the 60th anniversary of Stalin's birth, the advanced poet was creatively active and enriched Georgian poetry with skilfully written poems about the leader and Gori.

Source: K. Charkviani, The report of the Central Committee of the XIII Congress of the Communist Party of Georgia (Bolshevik) – The improvement of the material and cultural conditions of workers, collective farmers, and intellectuals, from the report dated March 16, 1940, newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, №9, p. 2-3.

1940

March 24

He reads the report of Kandid Charkviani and Shalva Radiani's letter "Galaktion Tabidze's New Poems" published in the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo. He is satisfied with both.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, p. 2; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 29.

1940

After March 24

His poems "Blue Horses", "I and Night", "Stalin", "The First of May", "The moon of Mtatsminda", "Flags, quickly", "Our light is the colour of fire", "Play, orchestra!", "To revolutionary Georgia", "On the plain of Kolkhida" are published in the X-grade textbook "Chrestomathy of Georgian Literature, 20th Century".

Source: MGL, d-129, 2; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 29.

Dating: An entry made before March 24, 1940 shows that the Book has not yet been published.

1940

After March 29

He writes an untitled poem titled "In the Garden, the Light Was Blooming White...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-129, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 36.

Note: The poem has not been published in the volumes during his lifetime, but it is included in the list of poems recorded on July 16, 1946, titled "Almost Ready Materials".

1940

March 29-30

He keeps track of how much paper he has at home and how much more he can find to put in waste paper. He relies on old posters and tries to find out where the posters are printed. In his diary, he makes a record that he must meet with Lado Sirbiladze and Niko Kiknadze in the Central Committee. He concludes that nothing is hopeless.

Source: MGL, d-128, 32; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 26.

1940

After March 30

He receives a letter from Olya Okujava sent from exile. The sender shares a dream in which she was all alone in an endless, burning desert. She writes that for three and a half years she has regularly sent him letters and even sent three telegrams, including one on March 20, 1940, but she has not received a reply to any of them, and thus all hope has faded. She asks him not to send money anymore, as it makes her feel insulted. Despite her situation, she has not lost her dignity and does not want to rely on anyone's mercy.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-396; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 237-238.

1940

Until March 31

Gigo Zaziashvili wants to paint his portrait, and they are going to agree on the time.

Source: Diary entry, MGL, d-129, 3; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 30.

1940

March 31 or earlier

The royalties of the third volume of his eight-volume works are credited to the bank account.

Source: MGL, d-129, 3; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 30.

1940

March 31

He begins the final revision of the poem "Akaki Tsereteli".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-129, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 30.

1940

March 31

He learns that the previous day in Mtskheta, the car of the Union of Writers, in which Irakli Abashidze, Konstantine Lortkipanidze and Ilo Mosashvili were sitting, overturned. No one was seriously injured, but Irakli Abashidze could not go to the Writers' Union, which delayed the preparation of the portrait for the third volume of Galaktion.

Source: Diary entry, MGL, d-129, 3; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 30.

1940

March 31

In his diary, he notes that the matter of adding his portrait to the third volume of the eight-volume collected works is being delayed because Beno Gordeziani is scheming something.

Source: MGL, d-129, 3; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 30.

1940

After March 31

He writes a prose text titled "In the Blacksmith's Shop", whose main character is a young blacksmith named Rati.

Source: MGL, d-658, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 410-429;

1940

After March 31

He writes a prose text titled "Morning in the Mountains".

Source: MGL, d-658, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 430-434;

April

1940

April 1

He learns that Shalva Tabukashvili will make a big contribution to the editing of his Book “Lyrics”, and it will be handed over to the publishing house today. He regrets that, in contrast to this, the publication of the third volume in the state publishing house is slow, because Beno Gordeziani is not doing anything either, and the editor is also sick.

Source: MGL, d-129, 4-6; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 31.

Note: “Lyrics” was published in the Children’s Literature Publishing House, and the third volume of works - in the State Publishing House.

1940

After April 4

The article “Lenin in Georgian Poetry” by Shalva Radian is published in the magazine Mnatobi. The critic lists the poets who dedicated works to Lenin, with Galaktion Tabidze being mentioned first.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1940, №4, p. 111.

Dating: Magazine Mnatobi is signed for printing on April 4, 1940.

1940

April 2-5

In his diary, he writes down the names of the speakers at his jubilee held in 1933 and the authors participating in the booklet of the Federation of Writers. Among them are: Besarion Zhghenti, Panteleimon Chkhikvadze, Raphael Agamalian, Dia Chianeli, Giorgi Lezhava, Savle Abuladze, Solomon Tsaishvili, Shalva Radiani, Simon Khundadze, Levan Asatiani, Giorgi Natroshvili and Konstantine Lortkipanidze. He notes that the publication of his books is hindered by various hindering conditions, including the lack of paper, because the entire stock of paperbacks in printing houses is used up for the anniversary of Akaki Tsereteli.

Source: MGL, d-129, p. 7; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 33.

Note: Raphael Agamalian (1903-1937) is mentioned in the source by his last name and position - Kultprom. Since 1930, he was the chairman of the cultural and propaganda agency of Georgia.

1940

Until April 6

Sergo Kldiashvili persistently asks Galaktion for his Russian Book published in Moscow.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-129, 8; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 33-34.

1940

April 7

The university is going to publish Akaki Tsereteli's collection and they ask Galaktion to provide 100 or more lines in ten days.

Source: MGL, d-129, 9; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 34-35.

1940

April 7

In his diary, he notes that he has to write the May Day poem in a hurry.

Source: MGL, d-129, 9; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 34-35.

1940

April 7

He has to give Konstantine Bogdanovsky 1000 lines to translate and writes in his diary that he does not know how he will cope with this responsible task.

Source: MGL, d-129, 9; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 34-35.

1940

April 7

The sister-in-law, Tatiana Tsintsadze, tells him that a man asked her son Nodar Tabidze about his last name on the street, and when he got the answer, he wondered if the boy had heard about Galaktion Tabidze. Nodar answered proudly, he is my uncle. The stranger said that he knew Galaktion and he was his great friend and they drank wine together several times. Galaktion can't figure out who "the hell" that man could have been.

Source: MGL, d-129, 9; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 34-35.

1940

April 7

At the end of the day he summarizes the current results. The only thing that makes him happy is that the Book was finally sent to the printing house in a corrected form. He is worried that he cannot understand the people he is dealing with. He is dissatisfied even with Konstantin Bogdanovsky.

Source: MGL, d-129, 9; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 34-35.

1940

April 9

In preparation for an evening event, he visits the Philharmonic Hall, which leaves a good impression on him. Near the Opera Theatre, he meets Karl Zelms, and they have a disagreement over certain issues.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, 9; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 35.

Note: Karl Zelms is mentioned in the source by his last name.

1940

April 9

Nina Kvirikadze speaks to him about the relationship between mass and theatre, stating that theatre depends on society because the government does not provide sufficient funding. She explains that this is due to the mistreatment of Kote Marjanishvili. More people attend the Marjanishvili Theatre than the Rustaveli Theatre, and this, she believes, is a natural consequence.

Source: MGL, d-129, 9; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 35-36;

Note: Nina mentioned by name in the source is not yet identified; it is possible that it refers to Nino Kldiashvili, who worked in the Writers' Union Secretariat.

1940

Until April 9

He visits Korneli Sanadze 15 or 17 times to pose for a portrait. During the sessions, he constantly moves around and recites poems from masterpieces of the world. He particularly often quotes a poem by Byron to his wife.

Source: Ts. Khetereli, My Heart, My Turmoil, newspaper Komunisti, August 15, 1981, N 188, p. 4; 1940

April 9

He learns that Korneli Sanadze will finish his portrait after 2 weeks, on April 29.

Source: MGL, d-129, 9; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 35-36; Ts. Khetereli, My Heart, My Turmoil, newspaper Komunisti, August 15, 1981, N 188, p. 4.

1940

April 9

He makes a note in his diary that Vano Tsulukidze and Polikarpe Kakabadze are heartbroken and avoid talking about lyrics. Shota Dzidziguri wonders if he has many new poems as before. He thinks that his Book published by the Children's Literature Publishing House should be called "Selected Lyric" or "Lyric".

Source: MGL, d-129, 9; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 35-36;

1940

April 9

He makes a note in his diary that Irakli Abashidze, translators, paper, and a thousand other matters need to be resolved urgently.

Source: MGL, d-129, 9; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 35-36;

1940

April 9

He learns from Shalva Radiani that the third volume of his eight-volume works should be ready in three weeks.

Source: MGL, d-129, 9; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 35-36;

1940

April 9

The date of his evening is planned to be May 19, and the poet urges himself he must use the remaining 43 days energetically and productively.

Source: MGL, d-129, 9; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 35-36;

1940

April 10

He addresses a statement to Boris Gogua, the head of the Department of Arts Affairs. He informs him that his literary evening is scheduled for May 19 at the Opera Theatre and requests the issuance of the relevant order.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-138; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 106.

1940

April 10

He meets the Opera administrator Karl Tselms, who marks the date of Galaktion's evening as May 19 in the calendar and plans to provide written consent to the poet. However, he suddenly decides that he needs to confirm this with the theatre director, Maisuradze, and goes to meet him. The director responds that it is necessary to obtain permission from the Department of Arts Affairs. Galaktion then meets with Benjamin Gogua, who requests that the matter be coordinated with the Secretary of the Central Committee, Ilia Tavadze. Galaktion hopes that Irakli Abashidze will mediate with Ilia Tavhadze, but he is in Moscow, and Shalva Radiani has been appointed as his deputy. Shalva arranges a meeting with Ilia Tavadze by the end of the current day, and Galaktion hopes that Gogua will not ruin the process, as he will meet Tavadze earlier.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, p. 10; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 36.

1940

April 10

The People's Commissariat of Education has been discussing the irreptitious mistake in Galaktion Tabidze's poem "The First of May" in the X grade textbook of Georgian literature. Instead of the phrase "Greetings to those fighters" it is written "Greetings to those shackles".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, 13; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 38.

1940

April 11

Shalva Radiani informs that he failed to see Ilia Tavadze, but he hopes that the matter will be resolved. Galaktion is worried by the fact that the error made in his poem "First May" in the X grade textbook of Georgian literature ("shackles" was written instead of "fighters") will be discussed by the Central Committee after the discussion by the People's Commissariat of Education. Radiani reassures that the worse irreptitious political mistakes have been printed in the magazine Mnatobi and they were corrected.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, 13; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 38.

1940

April 11

He informs Shalva Radiani that he will not be able to attend Vladimir Mayakovsky's evening.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, 13; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 38.

1940

April 11

Ketevan Iremadze is calling him twice from the University, at the Union of Writers and at home because of a proofreading irreptitious mistake in the textbook, the composers of which are Shalva Radiani and Prokle Kekelidze, and the editor is the deputy of the People's Commissariat of Education - Besarion Kiziria. Galaktion tries to reassure Ketevan Iremadze that the reader will not accept the word "shackles" instead of the word "fighters" as a metaphor, because the rhythm in the poem is broken due to an extra syllable, and both the teachers and students will understand this because they have already learned to compose poems in the tenth grade. He thinks that those who understand this will not see the evil intention, and there are correction errors even in first-class editions. He wonders who flared up the news that people ruin their lives because of one error, but he thinks there are people who "only breathe on this kind of news".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, 13; AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 38-39;

Note: Ketevan Iremadze is mentioned in the source with the name - Keto, Prokle Kekelidze - with the last name and place of work - University, Besarion Kiziria - with the last name and place of work - People's Commissariat of Education.

1940

Until April 12

He meets Simon Chikovani, who always falters when he speaks about Galaktion, but this time he tells Galaktion that he should give a report on the days of Akaki Tsereteli's writing in a clear language because the latter is a specialist in lyrics.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 39-40.

1940

Until April 12

Ilia Tavdaze does not agree to hold Galaktion's evening on May 19, at the Opera House until Vladimir Mayakovsky's evening is held first.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 39-40.

1940

April 12

He thinks that he will publish a poem in the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti by the first of May.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 39-40.

1940

April 12

He likes the letters of alphabet drawn by the artist of the Marjanishvili theatre, which distinguish the sign of this theatre from the signs of the Opera and Rustaveli theatres, so he wants to know who this artist is so that he can commission him to make his poster.

Source: MGL, d-129, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 39-40.

1940

April 12

Ketevan Iremadze calls him. She is worried because of Prokle Kekelidze, thinking that Galaktion Tabidze's poem "The First of May" is ruined because of an irreptitious mistake in it. In her opinion, only Galaktion Tabidze can help if he declares that the mistake is insignificant. The poet is angry because the poem was published three times before it was printed in the textbook: in 1933 in Mnatobi, in 1935 in the second volume of his works, and in 1937 in his "poems" published in the school library series. A mistake remains a mistake, but it is correctable and not made with malicious intent.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 40.

1940

April 12

Olga Darius pretends to leave Galaktion, but she delays, does not leave the house, opposes him in every little thing, interferes with his work and threatens that she will not help in preparing the material for the volume of Russian translations.

Source: MGL, d-129, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 39-40.

1940

April 12

He recalls the news of 1938 - the Philharmonic, "Literature Fund", Writers' Union, Saliteruro Gazeti, Komunisti, the struggle with the new generation. He faced resistance everywhere, he was opposed everywhere to conceal his 30-year-old achievements. And now they present it as if it was just passive then and now it has become active.

Source: MGL, d-129, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 39-40.

1940

April 13

He meets Shalva Radiani, who looks very upset because of an irreptitious mistake in Galaktion's poem. He tells them that they are going to create a commission and discuss the issue in the Central Committee. When asked if they said anything in the meeting at the State Publishing House, Galaktion answers that they told him, but Shalva was in Moscow at that time.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 40.

1940

April 13

Shalva Radiani conveys that Ilia Tavadze is not in a hurry to arrange the evening of Galaktion in the Opera House, saying that they have plenty of time. Galaktion concludes that unless he can find some other way, the case is doomed.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 40.

1940

April 13

He informs Shalva Radiani that his Book "Lyric", which is published by the Children's Literature Publishing House, is compiled and sent to Giorgi Iamanidze for reviewing.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 40.

1940

April 13

He continues to work on the poem "Akaki Tsereteli".

Source: MGL, d-129, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 40.

1940

April 14

He makes a note in his diary about Vladimir Mayakovsky's evening held at the Philharmonic. He notes that the community gathered very slowly, the hall was half empty, and the spiritual mood was mournful. Mayakovsky's portrait and large pictures of Lenin and Stalin were exhibited. Alio Mashashvili was reading the report reluctantly and no one was listening. He concludes that it was a dull evening, because no one did well, and the public still does not like Vladimir Mayakovsky.

Source: MGL, d-129, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 41; MGL, d-138, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 116;

1940

April 14

He attends Vladimir Mayakovsky's evening at the Philharmonic, where he is introduced to the second secretary of the Central Committee, Ilia Tavadze.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 41; MGL, d-138, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 116.

1940

April 14

At the Philharmonic, at the evening of Vladimir Mayakovsky, he meets Shalva Radiani, who tells him that after Mayakovsky's evening, he will start his evening affairs.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 41.

1940

April 14

Aleksandre Sulava informs that his Book "Lyric", which is published by the Children's Literature Publishing House, is being assembled and printing is starting.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 41.

1940

April 14

He meets Givi Gachechiladze at Vladimir Mayakovsky's evening at the Philharmonic. He romantically imagines Galaktion Tabidze's evening held in the Palace of Arts, which was broadcast on the radio.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 41.

1940

After April 14

Galaktion Tabidze's Book "Lyric" is being published.

Source: G. Tabidze, "Lyric", Tbilisi, Children's Literature Publishing House, 1940, School library, with portraits and biographical details.

Dating: On April 14, 1940, printing began with the information given to Galaktion by Alexander Sulava.

1940

Until April 15

Iona Tuska writes music for Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Inscription on the Book "Manon Lescaut".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 191;

1940

April 15

He leaves Elene Sher 6 poems for translation.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 41.

Note: Elene Sher (Sharvashidze) is mentioned by name in the source.

1940

April 15

He learns from Shalva Radiani that Ilia Tavadze still hasn't negotiated with Kandid Charkviani regarding Galaktion's evening.

Source: MGL, d-129, 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 41.

1940

April 15

He makes a note in his diary that the evening of Vladimir Mayakovsky in the Philharmonic was held badly, Giorgi Leonidze made a name for himself with lies, and Shalva Dadiani - with an artistic pose.

Source: MGL, d-129, 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 41.

1940

April 15

He makes a plan for his evening arrangement. He thinks to use: Iona Tuskia's music on "Manon Lescaut", a photo of Iakob Nikoladze's bust, Davit Gvelesiani's watercolour painting and Ioseb Gvantseladze's lyrical etchings on Galaktion's theme. He writes the last name of the main administrator of the opera house: Karl Zelms.

Source: MGL, d-129, 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 41.

1940

April 15

He learns that Giorgi Leonidze is going to print Daria Akhvlediani's memoir about Akaki Tsereteli, which talks about Galaktion Tabidze, at the beginning of the collection. Galaktion does not have much hope for Giorgi Leonidze's kindness and thinks that he might be going to erase the lines about him from this memory.

Source: MGL, d-129, 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 41.

1940

April 16

He goes to the translator, Konstantin Bogdanovsky, and finds out that he doesn't even have half of the translation ready. He leaves Mirza Gelovani's poem dedicated to him and a fee for translation in the amount of 20 roubles.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, p. 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, 42.

1940

April

Kandid Charkviani's report on the XIII Congress of the Communist Party of Georgia is published in the magazine Chveni Taoba. It states about Galaktion Tabidze that he enriched Georgian poetry with poems about the Leader and Gori in connection with the 60th anniversary of Stalin's birth.
Source: magazine I, 1940, №4, p. 7-11.

May

1940

May 5

In the Russian newspaper Molodoi Stalinets Boris Serebryakov's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Greetings to Youth" is being published.

Source: Привет молодежи, (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Перевел с грузинского Борис Серебряков, Молодой сталинец, 1940, 5 мая, №63.

1940

April 14– May 17

He writes an untitled poem, "Where Youth Left....".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-138, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 116-117;

1940

From April 14 until May 17

In the notebook, he writes the list of writers and actors - Akaki Tsereteli, Anton Purtseladze, Vaso Abashidze, Valerian Gunia, Kote Meskhi, Lado Aleksii-Meskhishvili and Iakob Nikoladze.

Source: MGL, d-138, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 116;

1940

From April 14 until May 17

He meets Iliia Aghladze, who tells him that he is a poet, and Galaktion is surprised by him acknowledging Galaktion's poetry.

Source: MGL, d-138, 9-10, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 119.

1940

From April 14 until May 17

Iliia Tavadzze informs him that the issue of Galaktion's evening has not yet been coordinated with Pavle Kandelaki at the Main Directorate of Arts..

Source: MGL, d-138, 9-10, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 118.

1940

May 17

He writes an untitled poem "It is said: when times...".

Source: MGL, d-98, 64; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 225.

Note: The work is the analogue of the poem "With iron chain".

1940

After May 17

He writes a poem "Morning".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record in the notebook, MGL, d-138, 20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 122-123.

Note: It is a variant of the poem "I Will Go Among the People with Joy".

1940

After May 17

He recalls that Vladimir Mayakovsky arrived in Tbilisi in August 1924 and was not met with much interest by the public. He attributes this to the August heat, which had already driven Semyon Nadsan away from Tbilisi before Mayakovsky, and he could not understand why the doctors had advised him to rest in Tbilisi during the summer. Galaktion remembers that one day, after leaving the editorial office of Mnatobi, he saw Mayakovsky walking down Rustaveli Avenue, surrounded by local futurists. He was only a few steps away, but his heart did not allow him to approach. He never saw him again, as Mayakovsky left the unwelcoming Tbilisi that very night.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record in the notebook, MGL, d-138, 21; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 123-124.

1940

Until May 23

He sends another letter to Olya Okujava, who is in exile.

Source: Olya Okujava's letter, G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 238;

1940

May 25

He intended to attend Konstantine Chichinadze's evening at the Writers' Union, but due to the rain, he was unable to go.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-489, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 428.

1940

May 25 or later

He makes a note that on the night of May 25, 1940, after the rain, a mosquito of the Anopheles species flew into his room.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-489, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 425.

1940

May 26

In the Writers' Union meeting hall, he finds a record on the table discussing his influence on contemporary poetry. He suspects that the written notes belong to one of the writers who sat on the presidium during the evening of Konstantine Chichinadze held the day before.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-489, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 428,;

1940

May 27

At the Writers' Union, he meets with the responsible secretary of the Union, Irakli Abashidze, to discuss the Book Akaki Tsereteli. Irakli asks him to attend the Global-People's Assembly of the Intelligentsia at the Marx-Engels-Lenin Institute, where Mikhail Kalinin will also be present.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-131, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 58.

1940

May 27

He attends the Global-People's Assembly of the Intelligentsia at the Marx-Engels-Lenin Institute. He sits in the second row and converses with Grigol Mukhadze. Suddenly, a man dressed in a militia uniform asks him to leave the hall and go to the commandant's office, where they question his identity and request his documents. Afterward, they apologize and escort him to the back row of the hall.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-131, p. 2-3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 58-59.

1940

May 27

He attends a meeting of the Geographical Society, listening to the reports of Giorgi Gekhtman and Anatoli Balabuev on Mikhail Lermontov. He is captivated by Giorgi Gekhtman's beautiful Georgian.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-131, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 60.

1940

May 28

In his diary, he recounts the behaviour of attendees at the previous day's Global-People's Assembly of the Intelligentsia at the Marx-Engels-Lenin Institute. Shalva Dadiani exhibited arrogance, proclaiming himself the finest representative of the intelligentsia; Besarion Zhghenti captured attention with his expressive demeanour, asserting that he would accomplish any task assigned to him. Irakli Abashidze, upon entering the hall, immediately delegated a task to Zhghenti; Ivane Javakhishvili listened to the speeches through a hearing aid and applauded fervently; while David Gachechiladze appreciated Mikhail Kalinin's speech, he was disappointed that there was no mention of Rustaveli.

Source: MGL, d-131, p. 4-5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 60.

1940

May 29

In his diary, he records the reactions of Ilia Aghladze, Kale Bobokhidze, Aleksandre Gomiashvili, and Irakli Abashidze to his expulsion from the hall during the Global-People's Assembly of the Intelligentsia at the Marx-Engels-Lenin Institute on January 27. He comments on their regrettable display of intellectuality.

Source: MGL, d-131, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 61.

1940

After May 29

He reads his published poem Akaki Tsereteli, corrects lines, notes what is missing and what needs to be added. He mentions that technical corrections are necessary. He lists his poems about Akaki: "Akaki's Ghost", "Due to Akaki's Death", "The Poet Was Being Buried" (published in Revolutsiuri Sakartvelo), "Akaki in Kharagauli".

Source: MGL, t-640, Galaktion Tabidze, "Akaki Tsereteli", Tbilisi, 1940.

1940

After May 29

He writes an untitled poem, "Gori – and then what, Gori...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, t-640, Galaktion Tabidze, "Akaki Tsereteli", Tbilisi, 1940.

1940

Second half of May

He sends a letter to Olya Okujava in exile, mentioning that for three and a half years, he received letters from her twice a month. He had not written for a long time because he was completely exhausted and weakened, but eventually, he sent a lengthy letter asking what she needed and what he could send from Tbilisi. He received no response to this letter and realized it had not reached Olya. Consequently, he only sent money and telegrams. He earnestly requests that she not refuse to accept the funds, explaining that this care is an expression of his love and should not be humiliating for her. In his frail condition, it is difficult for Galaktion to write letters, yet he asks Olya to continue informing him about her affairs. Although he had not written for a long time, he dedicated a poem to Stalin's 60th birthday, reflecting on his role in the liberation of humanity. In February, his second poem "A Conversation About Lyricism", was published in the magazine Mnatobi. Currently, he is working on a poem dedicated to the memory of Akaki Tsereteli. He writes that his third volume of works will soon be published, for which a positive review has already appeared in the Literaturuli Gazeti.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 51-52.

1940

After May 29

In his Book Akaki Tsereteli, he writes that the word “passing away” is better than “death”. After death, a person’s face changes so remarkably that many of them become unrecognizable.

Source: MGL, t-640, Galaktion Tabidze, “Akaki Tsereteli”, Tbilisi, 1940.

1940

After May 31

He receives a letter from Olya Okujava sent from exile. The correspondent joyfully informs him that she received a second letter from him on May 23, but the telegrams Galaktion mentions in his letter have not arrived. She is deeply concerned that Galaktion is unwell and that Olya is not by his side. She knows he needs care like a child and requires suitable working conditions. She urges him to see doctors and, based on their recommendations, to go to a sanatorium. He is a human being, not a stone, and he needs rest as well. She expresses hope that her case will soon be reviewed and that she will be released.

Source: O. Okujava’s letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-397; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 238-239.

1940

After May 31

The Writers’ Union Federation’s publishing house, under the editorship of Razhden Gvetadze, publishes Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Akaki Tsereteli” in a 4,200-copy print run.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze, “Akaki Tsereteli”, Tbilisi, 1940.

1940

After May 31

In his Book “Akaki Tsereteli”, he makes underlining, corrects the text, and counts the number of lines and pages of his works for Volume V of his collected writings.

Source: MGL, t-125, Galaktion Tabidze, “Akaki Tsereteli”, Tbilisi, 1940, p. 60-61, 68-76, 129-153, back flyleaf.

June

1940

Until June 3

Under the editorship of Valerian Gaprindashvili and Viktor Goltsev, Galaktion’s “Selected Poems” is published in Russian in Moscow. Translations are made by the editors themselves, and the Book is preceded by Shalva Radiani’s preface “Poetry of Galaktion Tabidze”.

Source: Табидзе Г.В. Избранные стихотворения, Пер. с груз. под ред. В. Гаприндашвили и В. Гольцева, Москва, Гослитиздат, 1940.

Dating: Information about the publication of the Book was published in the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo on June 3.

1940

June 3

The newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo publishes a notice that the 5th-6th issue of the magazine Mnatobi was published, this combined issue of the magazine is entirely dedicated to Akaki's anniversary, and it had, along with other materials, Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Akaki Tsereteli".
Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, June 3, 1940, №16, p. 4.

1940

June 3

In the review published in the newspaper Literary Georgia, titled "G. Tabidze's Selected Poems in Russian", it is noted that the Russian State Publishing House Fiction Literature has released a high-quality Russian-language edition of the selected poems of Georgia's People's Poet, Galaktion Tabidze. It is said that the Book is divided into three sections, the first of which contains pre-revolutionary poems (1908-1916), the second - from the first years of the revolution (1917-1929), and the third - new ones (1930-1937). Poems have been translated by Vladimir Derzhavin, Vera Zvyagintseva, Konstantin Lipskerov, Nikolai Tikhonov, Valerian Gaprindashvili, Pavel Antokolskiy, Arseny Tarkovskiy, Sergei Spasskiy, Boris Brik, and others.

Source: "G. Tabidze's Selected Poems in Russian", Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, June 3, 1940, №16, p. 4.

1940

June 3 or after

He makes a note on the article "The Lyricism of Konstantine Chichinadze" published by Vano Tsulukidze in the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, where it is stated that Literaturuli Sakartvelo remains true to its path, and when it needs to speak about Galaktion, it instead discusses Alexandre Abasheli, Konstantine Chichinadze, and Alio Mashashvili. He points out that the author's view on the monumentality of Konstantine Chichinadze's lyricism is not accurate. Another flaw he sees in the article is that it begins with a direct conclusion.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-637, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 459.

Dating: The inscription is made on the issue of Literaturuli Sakartvelo dated June 3, 1940.

1940

June 9 or earlier

They tell him that, according to the law, neither "Federation Publishing House" nor Mnatobi have the right not to pay royalties on time and in full.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 74-75.

1940

June 9

The chief accountant of "Federation" publishing house informs that they have settled all the financial issues with him. Galaktion is unhappy and thinks that the case should be decided by the court.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 75.

1940

June 9

He makes notes in the calendar Book that Ilo Mosashvili has been released from the Literature Fund.

Source: MGL, d-133, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 74-75.

1940

June 9

He sets his plans for the next day. The to-do list includes: receiving royalties from the newspaper Komunisti and the magazine Pioneri, paying the rent for the apartment and picking up a coat.

Source: MGL, d-133, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 74-75.

1940

June 9

In his diary, he notes that the new moon was visible on the right side of the sky, which Olga Darius told him is a good sign, and he really had a meaningful day.

Source: MGL, d-133, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 74-75.

1940

June 9

He writes with satisfaction in his diary that in the Chronology of the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo he is mentioned as a "people's poet" for the first time. He thinks that there is a pleasant mood in the Union of Writers.

Source: MGL, d-133, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 74-75.

Note: This refers to the June 3, 1940 issue of Literaturuli Sakartvelo.

1940

June 9

He is informed that he has been included in the Mikhail Lermontov Jubilee Committee.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 74.

1940

June 9

He receives calls at home and from the Writers' Union, informing him that the driver expelled a young woman out of the car on the Kojori road, who, in order to attract attention, has announced that she lives in the apartment of the people's poet, Galaktion Tabidze. She was then taken to her grandmother on Kamo Street. Galaktion can't figure out who it could be.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 74.

1940

June 9

In the evening, he watches the unforgettable for him film "The Great Waltz", about the life of Johann Strauss, in the cinema.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 75.

1940

June 9

He meets Daria Akhvlediani in the Union of Writers, who tells him that she will die soon and that Galaktion is so busy that he will not even be able to come to her funeral.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 75.

1940

June 9

The printing of the magazine Mnatobi has been stopped due to lack of paper and the publication of Galaktion's poem "Akaki Tsereteli" is delayed.

Source: MGL, d-133, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 74.

1940

June 19

He attends an evening dedicated to Lev Tolstoy, jotting down his impressions fragmentarily on a piece of paper.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-557, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 310-311.

1940

After June 19

He writes a prose narrative about the military events that unfolded in Europe at the beginning of World War II.

Source: MGL, d-658, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 443-449;

1940

June 20

The poem "Akaki Tsereteli" by Galaktion Tabidze, dedicated to the 100th anniversary of Akaki Tsereteli, is published in the newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti.

Source: G. Tabidze, Akaki Tsereteli, newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti, 1940, №140, June 20, p. 3.

1940

June 20

The poem “Akaki Tsereteli” is published in the newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti.

Source: G. Tabidze, Akaki Tsereteli, newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti, 1940, №140.

1940

June 20

In the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo under the title “Galaktion Tabidze - “Akaki Tsereteli” there is information that Akaki’s Jubilee days the publishing house “Federation” has published the lyrical poem “Akaki Tsereteli” by the people’s poet Galaktion Tabidze, which covers 144 pages, is published with high quality and costs 11 roubles and 50 kopeks. Information about this Book is also included in the review “Akaki’s Jubilee Days” published in the same newspaper.

Source: “Galaktion Tabidze - “Akaki Tsereteli”, Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1940, №17, June 20, p. 2, 3.

1940

June 22

He sits in the presidium at the anniversary session dedicated to the 100th anniversary of the birth of Akaki Tsereteli held in the Opera Theatre named after Zakaria Paliashvili.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, June 28, 1940, №18, p. 1.

1940

June 23

The first joint session of the Plenum of the Board of Soviet Writers of Georgia, the Presidium of the Soviet Writers’ Union of the USSR and representatives of the literary organizations of sister republics dedicated to the 100th anniversary of the birth of Akaki Tsereteli opens in the concert hall of the Rustaveli Theatre. Galaktion is unanimously elected to the praesidium but is not offered to deliver a speech.

Source: “The Plenary of the Board of the Soviet Writers’ Union of Georgia Dedicated to A. Tsereteli”, Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1940, №19, p. 2. G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-133, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 72;

1940

June 28

The newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo publishes the information that on June 22, a ceremonial session dedicated to the 100th anniversary of the birth of Akaki Tsereteli took place in the Lenin Order Theater named after Zakaria Paliashvili in Tbilisi. Galaktion Tabidze is named along with other writers, artists and actors in the presidium of the session.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, June 28, 1940, №18.

1940

June

Irakli Toidze's caricature of Galaktion Tabidze is published in the magazine Niangi.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 73.

1940

June

The magazine Pioneri publishes an excerpt from Galaktion Tabidze's poem, titled "Childhood and youth of Akaki Tsereteli".

Source: G. Tabidze, "Childhood and youth of Akaki Tsereteli", magazine Pioneri, 1940, June, №6, p. 16.

1940

June

In his notebook, he writes a brief description of Akaki Tsereteli's literary activity. He notes that Akaki is the most powerful representative of Georgian civic lyricism, who lived by the progressive ideals of his time and played a significant role in the liberation movement with his bold literary expressions.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-505, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 41-42.

July

1940

Until July 4

He sends 300 roubles to Olya Okujava.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-398; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 239-240.

Dating: The date is indicated in a letter from Olya Okujava, dated July 21, 1940.

1940

July 4

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a passage from Galaktion Tabidze's poem Akaki Tsereteli is published, titled "The Poet", translated by Boris Serebryakov.

Source: Поэт, Отрывок из поэмы "Акакий Церетели", Г. Табидзе, Перевел с грузинского Б. Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1940, 4 июля, №152.

1940

July 5

Postgraduate Grigol Orakhelashvili calls and shares provocative stories about Sergei Chilaia, Giorgi Natroshvili, and Vladimir Mayakovsky. He mentions that Sandro Shanshashvili is having a jubilee celebration because he expressed dissatisfaction that Galaktion Tabidze has a jubilee every five years, questioning, “What have I done wrong? I’ve been working for 60 years”. He also informs that Shalva Radiani continues to assert that Galaktion was a pessimist before 1917.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-134, 20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 80.

1940

Until July 9

Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Akaki Tsereteli” is published in the Book “Akaki Tsereteli: Jubilee Collection for the 100th Anniversary of his Birth” published by Tbilisi State University.

Source: A. Tsereteli: Jubilee Collection for the 100th Anniversary of his Birth, editor D. Kipshidze, Tbilisi, The Publishing House and Printing House of the Stalin State University, 1940.

Dating: Information about the release of the collection is in the July 9 newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo.

1940

Until July 9

He gets poisoned with beer and as a result of the illness he remains weak.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-133, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 72.

1940

Until July 9

They rob him and take 30,000 roubles. The police cannot find the culprit.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-133, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 72-73.

1940

Until July 9

He is given a room in Ilia Chavchavadze’s house in Saguramo as a cottage.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-133, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 72.

1940

Until July 9

He has a new suit sewn for him.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-133, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 73.

1940

Until July 9

He has his photo taken on Lenin Street, current Merab Kostava Street.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 73.

1940

Until July 9

He starts working on a new Book and a play for the 20th anniversary of the Sovietization of Georgia.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 73.

1940

Until July 9

The magazine Mnatobi and "Federation" Publishing House reduce the royalty.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 72-74.

1940

Until July 9

He receives royalties for the Book "Akaki Tsereteli" from the Publishing House "Federation".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 73.

1940

Until July 9

While sorting his papers, he finds poems written about him by 100 different poets.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 73.

1940

Until July 9

The publication of the third volume of Galaktion's eight-volume works has been suspended.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 72.

1940

Until July 9

The magazine Mnatobi, in which his poem "Akaki Tsereteli" is published, is delayed due to lack of paper.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 72.

1940

Until July 9

His poem “Akaki Tsereteli” and the jubilee collection “Akaki Tsereteli – For the 100th Anniversary of His Birth”, published by the university, are not displayed in the shop windows.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-133, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 72.

1940

July 9

He visits Gigo Zaziashvili with his friend - artist Miakhail Vadbolshi and they have a photo taken.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-133, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 72.

1940

July 9

The newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo publishes the notice that the first joint session of the Plenum of the Board of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia, the Presidium of the Union of Soviet Writers of the USSR and representatives of the literary organizations of the sister republics dedicated to the 100th anniversary of the birth of Akaki Tsereteli was opened in the concert hall of the Rustaveli Theatre on June 23, 1940, at 12 pm. The newspaper mentions that the stage was decorated with portraits of Lenin, Stalin and Beria. The newspaper states that Galaktion Tabidze was unanimously elected to the presidium of the plenum together with other writers.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, July 9, 1940, №19, p. 2.

1940

July 9

The newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo publishes the information that the publishing house of the State University has published the jubilee collection “Akaki Tsereteli” for Akaki’s jubilee days and that the collection includes Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Akaki Tsereteli” among other materials.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, July 9, 1940, №19, p. 4.

1940

July 9

At the Writers’ Union, he meets Akaki Beliashvili and learns that the printing of his poem “Akaki Tsereteli” is delayed because the paper for the magazine Mnatobi is expected to arrive from Rostov.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-133, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 75.

1940

July 9

In the Union of Writers, he meets Sandro Euli, who talks endlessly about the magazine Niangi published under his editorship, in particular, the issue dedicated to the anniversary of Akaki Tsereteli.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 75.

1940

July 9

He receives his Book "Selected Poems", printed by the State Publishing House of Moscow.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 75.

1940

July 9

He is summoned by Irakli Abashidze to the Writers' Union and says that Kandid Charkviani is interested in their relationship, to which Irakli replied that they have a good relationship. He asks if Galaktion is upset that he was not participating in the events. Galaktion responds that he is indeed upset, while Abashidze blames everything on the intrigues of others. In Galaktion's opinion, his recent activism, initiated to commemorate the 20th anniversary of Georgia's annexation, and the letter sent to Stalin did not sit well with them.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 75.

1940

July 9

The State Printing and Publishing Combine signs off on the transfer of Galaktion Tabidze's collected works for the printing of the third volume, and the printing work necessary for the publication of the Book begins.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in eight volumes, vol. III, 1940, 364.

1940

After July 9

He makes a note titled "What Is Technically New in This Book?", in which he reflects on the third volume of his works. He notes that there are significant innovations in terms of versification in this book, specifically: the rhyme scheme of the poem "Everyone Has Something to Remember", the construction of the poem "From the Tale of the Moon", the themes of the poem "In the Mountains", the ballad-form poem "Gori", a cycle dedicated to Europe, the poem "A Conversation About Lyrics", and others.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-127, 11-12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 607.

1940

After July 9

The third volume of the eight-volume collection of Galaktion Tabidze's works is being published, featuring 149 poems and 1 epic poem. These works include the following: "My Song", ("The eye and thought of today..."), "By the Path of Lenin and Stalin", "From the Moon's Narrative", "In the Mountains", "This Year", "Gori", ("The heroic of the Soviet people..."), ("The colour of the sun and the wind..."), "Integrals of Poetry", "To Homeland", "Labour and Rest", "Rejoice, Fireplace", "The New First Visitor", "Glory of the Present", ("Wind from Tskaltubo to Kutaisi..."), ("Breeze, Violet, Daffodil..."), ("I am someone else. Day as wide as the sky..."), ("Above the mountains..."), "October Ship", ("A stormy wind roared..."), "Greetings to Youth", "Somewhere on the Ice", ("When the army gathers for war..."), "Homeland", ("The many-coloured road to the homeland"), "Lyre, Many Good Times", "Endurance", "The Wind", "Lake in the Alpine Zone", "Inscription on the Book Manon Lescaut", ("The colour of the setting sun again..."), "Storm", "Where the Alps Are. as Fields", "Expression", "In the Sanatorium", ("The Only One Goes to the Sky..."), "Traveler's Song", "Fragment", "Revival", ("The sea is too calm..."), "It Surpasses All Strength", "The Alps", "From the Train", "At Sea", "He Left the House and Never Returned", "Exception", "Big City", ("Let's mark this place..."), ("Perhaps, because the sail of the ship..."), "Auto-Moto-Bicycle", ("To the deepest, most complex..."), "What Will You Find Here, Abroad?" "Memory of the Native Land", "Thoughts on the Homeland", "On That Day", "Henri Barbusse at the Congress", "Vesuvius", ("Unchangingly Universal..."), "Foreign Poet", "Inscription on the Portrait of Anatole France", "The Unemployed", ("Ingenuity cannot save you..."), "Willow", "It Is Approaching", "Little Pierre", ("Autumn is coming..."), "At Voltaire's Monument", "Bas-relief", "From Gautier's Novel", "Melancholic Singer", "Sound Cinema", "Rustaveli in Paris", "Pushkin in Paris", ("I am always ready"), ("As a warrior"), ("The Giant of All Times"), ("What fate has told you"), "The Old Scholar", "L'Humanité", "Towards the City", "The Death of the Unemployed", "The Foreign Child", "Street Singer", "Homeless Mother", "Mystery in the Rain", ("Evening, at our table..."), "Montparnasse", ("Light between the clouds..."), "On Montmartre", "Once in the Morning", ("Now, dear recollection..."), "On the Eiffel Tower", "The Murderers' Café", "Bananas", "In These Surroundings", "Ruhr", "The Rhine", "To the Foreign Poet", "Because of Heine's Line", "The Wolf and the Lamb", "In Naples", "Abyssinian Soldier", "Ibarruri", "Seville", "The Road to Barcelona and Valencia", "Guadalquivir", "Tabes Dorsalis", "Long Live the New Life", ("I thought..."), ("You'll tell me: like this storm..."), "Mont Blanc", ("Somewhere, far away, Stockholm remained..."), "Worker's Word", "Reims", "Ioveliada", "Two Forces", ("You are no longer..."), "Demonstration Against War", ("From a road abroad..."), "By Plane", "Down with Sponger", "The Obvious Beast", "The Colourless Day of Europe", "Chimera", "Upon Returning", "I Remember The Face", "To the Heroes of Spain", ("The poppy has bloomed..."), "Like Leaves on a Tree", ("There is a monument by the garden..."), ("What a wonderful and good day..."), "Two Billion", ("How captivating..."), ("Silence covers..."), ("In Lancashire, still stands..."), ("I remember the worker"), ("On Hammers and anvils"), "Its Nature", "A Poet who is honest in Heart", "Gold", ("And then, when..."), ("I have not seen your surroundings..."), "Escaping the Crisis", ("There, in the corner..."), "European Diplomat", "The Cloud of Vanity", ("Paris.

This voice”), “Oh, Still Can’t...”  (“You have parted from the sick side”), and the epic poem “Conversation About Lyricism”.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in eight volumes, vol. III, 1940.

Note: The responsible editor of the Book is Shalva Radiani. The volume consists of 364 pages, and the print run is 3,000 copies; out of the 150 works included in the volume, 115 poems and the poem “A Conversation About Lyricism” are published for the first time.

1940

After July 9

The poem “Akaki Tsereteli” is published in the magazine Mnatobi.

Source: G. Tabidze, “Akaki Tsereteli”, magazine Mnatobi, 1940 №5-6, p. 67-110.

1940

July 11

The newspaper Komunisti publishes an article titled “Preparations for the 20th Anniversary of the Establishment of Soviet Power in Georgia”, which notes that the National Poet of the Republic, Galaktion Tabidze, is writing poems to commemorate this occasion.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-133, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 76.

1940

July 11

He calls the children’s literature department at the publishing house and learns that his Book “Lyric” has been printed, is being bound, a photo is being added, and it will be ready in a week.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-133, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 76.

1940

July 11

He calls the director of the State Publishing House, Niko Kiknadze, to inquire about the publication of the third volume of his eight-volume collected works. He learns that the publishing house is still experiencing a paper shortage, causing further delays in printing.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-133, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 76.

1940

July 11

He buys a new list of members of the Union of Writers, in which there are a total of 129 members and 10 candidates.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-133, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 76.

1940

July 11

He writes in the calendar-Book that Olgha Darius has bought a new coat and celebrates the purchase.

Source: MGL, d-133, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 76.

1940

July 11

He plans to draw up a project to organize an exhibition of Russian editions of his poems.

Source: MGL, d-133, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 76.

1940

July 12

He receives royalties from the newspaper Komunisti and magazine Pioneri.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 76;

1940

After July 12

Shalva Radiani's article "Galaktion Tabidze" is published in the magazine Mnatobi, in which it is said that Galaktion Tabidze's work is extremely complex and it is necessary to study it thoroughly. The author talks about the visible influence of Galaktion on the work of modern poets, the extraordinary sense of rhythm in his poetry, musicality, new and innovative poetic forms, the harmony of colours and sounds, the richness of rhymes and virtuoso composition. The article discusses creativity of different periods, romantic and symbolist motifs, revolutionary transformations and the creative rise of the Soviet era.

Source: Shalva Radiani, "Galaktion Tabidze", Mnatobi, 1940, №7, p. 83-99.

Note: The magazine was signed for printing on July 12, 1940.

1940

July 13

Erast Torotadze, an employee of the State Publishing House, promises that the printing of the third volume of works will be completed in a month, but he does not like that only four stanzas are transferred from one page to the next. Galaktion pays no attention to this.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 76.

1940

July 13

The antiquarian brings him the first edition of his Book from 1914, which is beautifully preserved.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 75.

1940

July 13

He decides to go to Saguramo on July 15.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 75.

1940

July 13

He pays half a year's rent for the apartment.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 75.

1940

July 14

At five o'clock in the morning, he writes a poem "Galaktion's march" ("My native land...").

Source: MGL, d-98, 34; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 185;

Note: The work is a black variant of the poem "My native land".

1940

After July 15

He is in Saguramo and begins working on the poem "The Year 1940".

Source: The entry from Galaktion Tabidze's diary for April 16, MGL, d-129, p. 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 42;

1940

After July 15

While in Saguramo, Nikoloz Shengelaia arrives by car, meets the writers, and then they go fishing on Aragvi. Galaktion Tabidze has the impression that the famous director is experiencing some kind of tragedy and is trying to cover it up with humour and jokes.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's note on the page of a desk calendar, MGL, d-201, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 282.

Dating: The year 1940 is indicated in the source, and it is clear from Galaktion Tabidze's record of July 13, 1940 that he should have left for Saguramo on the 15th of that year.

1940

After July 15

Konstantine Gamsakhurdia greets Galaktion every morning while resting in the house of the Writers' Union of Saguramo: Hello, Lion! And Galaktion answers: Hello, Tiger! Once Gamsakhurdia changes the greeting text and says: Hello Tiger! And he expects Galaktion to reply, "Hello, Lion!", and after a short pause, he replies, "Hello, bumpkin!"

Source: A. Khintibidze, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 309-310.

Dating: Dated according to the time of Galaktion Tabidze and other Georgian writers being together in Saguramo.

1940

After July 15

In Saguramo, he meets Maxim Gorky's sister-in-law, Nadezhda Vvedenskaia, who tells him that Gorky often remembers him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 132-133; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 297.

1940

July 14-16

He receives royalties from the newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazia.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-133, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 76;

1940

July 16

In his diary, he writes that two days ago, Ietim Gurji passed away in the Aramiants Hospital, and he will be buried the following day.

Source: MGL, d-133, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 76.

1940

After July 18

Galaktion Tabidze's Book "Lyric" is being published.

Source: G. Tabidze, "Lyric", Tbilisi, Children's Literature Publishing House, 1940, School library, with portraits and biographic details, 1940

July 19

He writes a poem "The Motive of Ilia".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №617; №2515; №6675; №2041, №5522; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 187.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "Ilia's Song" and without a title ("On the sea, the shadow of twilight...").

1940

After July 21

He receives a letter sent from exile by Olya Okujava. The sender longs for his presence and affection. She seems to hear Galaktion's reassuring words that her case will be reviewed, that she will be proven to be a victim of rumours, and that she will be released. She urges him to take care of his health, to seek treatment, and to rest so that he can continue working with full strength afterward. She informs him that on July 4, she received another 300 roubles from him and worries that Galaktion might be depriving himself of necessities and sending them to her. She inquires whether he received the letter she sent on June 15.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-399; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 239-240.

1940

July 24

While staying in Saguramo, he writes an untitled poem "Path of Peace!"

Source: Autographs: MGL, №217; №2320; №2321; №2049; №724-725; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 8.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles "The Path of Victory" and "Hopes and Meetings", as well as untitled (beginning with: "The colours of the West...", "The sun sets, the golden mountains...", "I will remember you... the colours...", "The sun has turned a basket full of roses upside down...", "The path of victory...", and "Victory will bring us together again...").

1940

July 29

From Saguramo, he sends a letter to Giorgi Kuchishvili, telling him how wonderfully he fits into life there.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-464; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 285.

Dating: This is mentioned in Giorgi Kuchishvili's letter of August 12, 1940.

1940

July

His wife Olga Darius gets poisoned by fish and feels awful.

Source: MGL, d-133, 6-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 72-74.

1940

July

He writes in the calendar that Tatiana Meyer received the first prize, and Vladimir Meyer received the Order of Merit.

Source: MGL, d-133, 6-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 72-74.

1940

July

In his calendar book, he notes that the matter of the summer house was critical, but he was given a room in Saguramo.

Source: MGL, d-133, 6-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 72-74.

1940

July

He feels that Shalva Apkhaidze and Irakli Abashidze are deceiving him. Konstantine Bogdanovsky is delaying the translations, and the Book will soon be published by Children's Literature Publishing House. He mentions that Kato Mikeladze is surprised by his inactivity, and Leo Kiacheli is concerned that things are going badly.

Source: MGL, d-133, 6-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 72-74.

1940

July

Konstantine Bogdanovsky is delaying the translations.

Source: MGL, d-133, 6-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 72-74.

1940

July

Kato Mikeladze tells him that she is surprised by his inactivity.

Source: MGL, d-133, 6-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 72-74.

1940

July

He catches sight of Daria Akhvlediani and Lidia Megrelidze, who have returned to Tbilisi from the summer house.

Source: MGL, d-133, 6-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 72-74.

August

1940

August 4

He is in Saguramo and writes the poem "Ars longa, Vita brevis".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №3569-3570; №3567; №3566; №2828; №624-d., p. 3050-3051; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 189.

Note: The poem is also found untitled ("Life in the mountains and valleys...").

1940

August 9

In the Union of Writers, the first secretary of the Central Committee - Kandid Charkviani and the second secretary - Ilia Tavadze, in the presence of Irakli Abashidze and Alio Mashashvili, return the lost Order to Galaktion, which makes a great impression on the members of the Writers' Union.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-135, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 81.

1940

After August 9

During a session with Korneli Sanadze, he points to the spot on his suit where the Lenin Order is attached and asks the artist to depict it in the portrait. The painter assures him that the order is not significant for the greatness of Galaktion Tabidze, but Galaktion still insists on its inclusion.

Source: A. Khintibidze, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 309-310.

Dating: The emphasis on the order suggests that this must have happened after his return.

1940

August 10

Together with Olga Darius, he returns from Tbilisi to Saguramo by bus. When a passenger from Akhatani learns his identity, his face brightens up, as he recognizes him from his poems and invites him to his home. They talk about Ilia Chavchavadze. In response to Galaktion's question about why Ilia was killed, the host answers that it was because he was a landowner. Regarding the murderers, he mentions that one was from Tsitsamuri, the second was from Saguramo, and the third was from Akhatani.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-135, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 81.

1940

August 12

He receives a letter from Giorgi Kuchishvili in Guria, who is happy to hear that Galaktion is resting well. However, he writes that the beauty of Guria, to which Galaktion dedicated an extraordinary poem in his youth, probably cannot be compared to anything else.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-464; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 285.

1940

August 15

Shalva Apkhaidze hands him over a letter from Alexandre Sulava along with a list of questions for his biography. The sender writes that all the biographies written up until then are dry, and he believes that answers to these questions will enrich the work. He asks that if any question seems unnecessary, not to answer it, and if any new, interesting questions come to mind, to add them.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-482; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 287.

1940

Until August 24

While in Shovi, he participates and speaks at a poetry evening. Galaktion thanks the attendees and recalls the events of 1917, when, according to him, he lived illegally in Kutaisi and was constantly awaiting arrest. According to Galaktion, during this period, the poem "Flags Quickly" was written spontaneously, when the poet was informed near the Kutaisi Theatre that the revolution had occurred.

Source: The stenogram of G. Tabidze's speech, MGL, d-661, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 563-566;

1940

August 27

He receives a letter from Alexandre Sulava. He has heard from Shalva Apkhaidze that his letter and the questions for the biography have been passed to Galaktion. Sulava has written an article about Galaktion and needs to add some biographical details to it. Therefore, he kindly asks the poet to answer the questions in a timely manner, or if that is not possible, to let him know.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-483; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 287-288.

1940

August 31

He is in Saguramo and writes the poem "Preface".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №227; №588; №1244; №2540; №3262; №3537; №8120; 2124; N. Kvirikadze's manuscript, №2118; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 128.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "As Merani", "To the Army of the Caucasus", "20 Years", "The Thunderous Adventure of the People", and untitled (beginning with: "As Pegasus..."; "Preface..."; "As a flower reaches the garbage..."; "As a dream reaches the garbage..."; "As Pegasus reaches the lagam...").

1940

After August 31

He becomes acquainted with the Russian magazine Literaturuli Mimokhilva. He writes on the back cover that, for the poet, the connection to everyday life is of great importance, as well as reflecting this reality through printed media. He notes that in his youth, he had connections with the underground press, and all his poems were a reflection of everyday life. He could never imagine life without newspapers, magazines, books, editorial offices, printing houses, and proof sheets. He knows many examples from the history of literature where writers have attempted to escape reality and create a theory of tranquillity. He had been fighting against this tendency since his youth through his literary and practical activities. He asks the question: What does the theory of "art for art's sake" mean?

Source: MGL, t-699, magazine "Литературное Обозрение", Moscow, July 5, 1940, №13.

1940

August

He writes a poem "The Cicada of Saguramo" ("For the Feast, You Sacrifice...").

Source: Autographs: MGL, №70-a, 1791; №8169; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 124.

Note: The poem is also found untitled ("For the Feast, You Sacrifice...").

September

1940

September 5

He writes an untitled poem, “In the Many Past Years...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №831; 918; 2700; 7285; 2347-2349; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 202.

1940

September 9

He writes an untitled poem “There are so many mistakes in the world...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №66-a., p. 1518; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 190.

1940

September 9

He recalls and writes in his diary the names of the elderly people he has known since childhood.

Source: MGL, d-136, 1-30; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 90.

1940

September 9

In his diary, he makes excerpts from Jean-Jacques Rousseau’s autobiographical Book “Confessions”. Here, there are also various facts about Montesquieu, Voltaire, Socrates, Aristophanes, Plato, Michel de Montaigne, Chateaubriand, Beethoven, and other famous individuals.

Source: MGL, d-136, 1-30; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 93-108.

1940

September 9

He is in Saguramo, recalling the people he has encountered throughout his life and thinks about listing them according to their appearance, character, clothing, or other criteria. He designates categories such as: prematurely aged, frowning, gullible, incredible, sorrowful, dressed in traditional chokha, in strange costumes, powdered, low-browed, peculiar, annoying, and others. He writes brief descriptions of people in these categories.

Source: MGL, d-136, 1-30; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 83-85.

1940

September 9

He divides the years of his life into five-year periods, ten-year periods, fifteen-year periods, and twenty-year periods. He thinks that it is necessary to have 60 employees and 4 managers to prepare a 600-page biography from 1892 to 1950.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-136, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 108.

1940

September 9

In his diary, he writes that he is a popular poet, and a knowledgeable person in the history of Georgian literature would laugh at the unexpected assertion from one of the publishers in Moscow that Galaktion was influenced by the Tsisperkantselis and shared the worldview of this group – the denial of the classical Georgian heritage, distancing from revolutionary-minded circles, the rejection of the need for books, the glorification of erotic ideas, the apologia for insanity, suicide, and murder, the veneration of Nietzscheanism, and speeches based on debauchery, advertising, apoliticism, and bowing to foreign powers. He refers to the Tsisperkantselis as a group of cynics. He finds all this laughable, as he actually emerged in the literary arena back in 1905, officially in 1908, with his first Book published in 1914, and he appeared in the world as a finished poet, while the magazine Tsisperi Kantsebi was published in 1916 and contained nothing cultural. The only novelty was his influence on the “Tsisperkantselis” and not their influence on him. To support this, he cites articles published in the newspaper Borba about him and the authors of other writings: Akaki Tsereteli, Davit Kldiashvili, Vasil Barnov, Valerian Gunia, Shio Mghvimeli, Shalva Dadiani, Romanoz Pantskhava, and Ether Shushania.

Source: MGL, d-136, 28; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 108-109.

1940

After September 9

In his notebook, he writes about the situations in which a person experiences excessive freedom. This happens: during prayer, when they are agitated, when they are dreaming, when they are asleep, when they leave everyone and everything behind and go far away, when they achieve a goal and think they have overcome all difficulties, when they believe they love “that one and only” and their heart is closed off to others forever, when they are celebrating an anniversary and think they are the most important. In his opinion, this freedom is illusory and temporary.

Source: MGL, d-136, 1-30; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 110.

Dating: The entry was made after the one dated September 9.

1940

September 10

He writes an untitled poem “The rock of Abkhazia, the clay of trench...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-98, 26; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 177.

1940

September 10

He writes a poem titled “Nature is a Sculptor”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №66-a, p. 1518; 2382; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 190.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“The rock of Adjara, the clay of trench...”).

1940

September 10

He is in Saguramo. He writes a poem “My Native Land!”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №192; 338; 440; 441; 616; 1437; 3496-3497; 3828; 7435; 7460; 24361; 145-d., p. 5; 4647; 726-731; 2468-2474; 8776, p. 24; 7453; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 191.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Twenty Great Years” and untitled (“Three Great Oceans...”).

1940

September 10

At the Writers’ Union, he meets Ioseb Noneshvili, who informs him of the university Komsomol’s decision to organize a meeting with Galaktion on September 15th. Galaktion agrees and says that everything must be conducted properly, just like in 1933, when his grand event was held at the university. Ioseb Noneshvili promises that the Komsomol will take care of everything.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-629, 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 320-321.

1940

After September 10

In his notebook, Galaktion writes that Ioseb Noneshvili is one of the organizers of his poetry evening at the university. He notes that the young poet seems sincere, humble, and shy; he is not a member of the Writers’ Union, nor is he a candidate for membership, yet he is always around.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-629, 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 320.

1940

After September 10

Galaktion makes a note about Dimitri Benashvili, mentioning that Benashvili has called him several times and then sent a letter through Ioseb Noneshvili. He notes that Benashvili is the editor of the magazine Chveni Taoba and is currently working on a monograph about him, which he says will be his most significant work. Galaktion recalls that Dimitri Benashvili gave an excellent speech at his jubilee evening in 1938 and has always welcomed him sincerely.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-629, 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 321;

1940

After September 10

He writes an untitled poem “Here, in Tsinamdzghvriantkari...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 27; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 178-179;

Note: The text is an early version of one episode of the poem “My native land”.

1940

September 12 or earlier

He writes a speech for an evening dedicated to his poetry in Saguramo, stating that citizens of the Soviet country are fortunate to live peacefully while bourgeois countries spill the blood of their people. He notes that twentieth-century Georgian poetry holds a foremost place in Soviet literature, not only matching but perhaps even surpassing the poetry of previous centuries. This exemplary level of Georgian poetry has been achieved based on the conditions created by the party and the government.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-629, 22; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 326-327.

1940

September 12

Evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze is arranged in Saguramo.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-129, p. 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 42; MGL, d-629, 22; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 326.

1940

After September 12

He returns from Saguramo to Tbilisi.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-129, p. 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 42;

1940

September

He is in Saguramo and writes a poem "Autumn is Coming".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №171-172; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 199.

Note: The poem also appears untitled ("Swift autumn is coming...").

October

1940

Until October 1

Laine Bartelis, the niece of his second wife – Olga Darius – falls ill with tuberculosis and is sent to Abastumani for treatment.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, p. 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 42;

Note: Laine Bartelis is mentioned by name in the source.

1940

October 1

He reads the edition of Alexander Pushkin's poems and poems translated by Paolo Iashvili. At the end of the book, he writes that almost every poem abundantly uses Galaktion's rhymes, the arrangement of the poems, and the overall poetic pathos. He thinks that this happened not intentionally, but unconsciously, because Paolo Iashvili could not free himself from the influence of his poetry; every poem he wrote was saturated with it, and the strength of this poetry was so deeply ingrained in his bones that he could not escape it. He thinks that the translator would gladly avoid this influence, but it would be a Sisyphean task for him, and the translation would lose its essence. Therefore, the translator consciously gave himself completely to the flow and could no longer resist the force of this war. He notes that the translations of Alexander Pushkin's poems gained from this influence, and the translator became closer to naturalness, which was not characteristic of his own poems.

Source: GTSM, 1587, A. Pushkin, Verses and Poems, Translation from Russian by the order-bearing poet Paolo Iashvili, Tbilisi 1936.

1940

October 1

He travels to Abastumani with his second wife, Olga Darius, to visit her niece, Laine Bartelis, who is suffering from tuberculosis.

Source: Olga Darius's record in G. Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-138, 27-28, 30-35; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 128-129.

1940

After October 1

He writes an untitled poem "Keep walking, don't let your brow frown...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-138, 37; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 130.

1940

October 4

He delivers a speech at the literary-artistic evening dedicated to the 23rd anniversary of the October Revolution held in the Writers' Club.

Source: "23rd anniversary of the October Revolution held in the Writers' Club", Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1940, №31 (154), p. 3.

1940

October 4

He addresses a statement to Ivane Pitskhelauri, the head of the People's Commissariat of the Georgian Soviet Socialist Republic, and requests that his foster-daughter, Laine Bartelis, be admitted to the Tuberculosis Institute, which is being opened by the People's Commissariat of Health in Abastumani. The statement is accompanied by a note regarding Laine Bartels' illness and the necessity of treatment in Abastumani.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-139; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 106.

1940

After October 4

He sends a letter to I. Z. Pitskhelauri, an employee of the Republic's People's Commissariat, and apologizes for not being able to personally visit his foster-daughter, who was then in Abastumani, to express gratitude for the attention shown to her.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-263; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 66.

Dating: The statement, for which he expresses his gratitude, is written on October 4, 1940.

1940

October 5

At the university, Andro Tevzadze gifts his Book "The Smile of the Stars" to Galaktion Tabidze with the inscription: "To Galaktion Tabidze. I will always long for this, / may my poem also echo like thunder in the sky; / read it, feel my thoughts as well, the greatest poet of our time!".

Source: MGL, t-57, Andro Tevzadze, "The Smile of the Stars", Tbilisi, 1940.

1940

October 6

He meets Sandro Euli and Iona Vakeli on Rustaveli Avenue. Sandro Euli tells him that he looks like a tiger. Iona Vakeli appeals to Euli that, since this is the case, he should raise the issue of awarding the Stalinist prize to Galaktion in the party organization. Sandro Euli thoughtfully answers that, unfortunately, it does not depend on him. Vakeli says that this issue should be raised in the Union of Writers, because there is no poet like Galaktion in the entire Soviet Union. Anna Akhmatova cannot be compared with him either. Sandro Euli adds that there are those who consider themselves to be better poets than Galaktion. Iona Vakeli begs Euli to raise the issue of awarding Galaktion, because neither Kandid Charkviani, nor Lavrenti Beria, nor even Joseph Stalin will go against it. This is a matter of dignity, so as not to overshadow the achievements of the great poet. Iona Vakeli says that he will raise this issue at the next city congress. Finally, he adds that they have decided to give the prize based on the work of the last year, which is wrong, because the poet should be seen as a whole. After the conversation, Galaktion concludes that this award will not be given to anyone in Georgia, the Union of Writers does not nominate its own candidate, there are enemies who do not want Galaktion to receive the award. Even Iona Vakeli does not know that the publication of Galaktion's Book is being delayed for this very reason.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 142; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 305-306.

1940

October 7

He meets Irakli Abashidze in the Union of Writers and asks why the city congress of writers was postponed. Abashidze answers that they are waiting for news from Moscow and the return of Kandid Charkviani. Galaktion is interested in the news surrounding the award, which Abashidze says is only one week away. Galaktion notes that this is a serious matter, to which the interlocutor agrees. Then he gives Irakli Abashidze the newly published third volume of his works, adding that several of his books have been published this year, including in Russian. The secretary of the Writers' Union meets his words with silence, which makes Galaktion think that they are not going to raise the issue of awarding him the prize. Iona Vakeli does not lose hope that Galaktion will be rewarded and encourages the poet. He hears how Demna Shengelaia and Konstantine Gamsakhurdia are talking enthusiastically in the circle of writers.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 143; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 306-307.

1940

October 9

He receives a letter from Dimitri Benashvili, informing him that on October 13, students are organizing a literary evening in Galaktion's honour at the Tbilisi University club, and the author of the letter will be the speaker. Poets will also perform. He writes that the messenger will provide more details about the meeting.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-468; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 288.

1940

October 10

He makes a note titled "Same Old Stories", in which he adds an ironic comment to an excerpt from Demna Shengelaia's novel "Inspiration", published in Literaturuli Sakartvelo.

Source: MGL, d-628, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 273.

1940

October 10

Shalva Radiani's letter "New Poems of Galaktion Tabidze" is published in the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo. According to the critic, Galaktion Tabidze is the founder of a new poetic culture and unifier of the best traditions of European and Georgian poetry. Despite ideological and artistic failures at a certain stage, the poet's rise continues and has great creative potential.

Source: Sh. Radiani, "New Poems of Galaktion Tabidze", Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1940, №28 (151), p. 4.

1940

October 10

Having met Simon Tsverava on the way to the Union of Writers, he asks if he knows anything about the Stalin's Prize, to which Tsverava replies that he has not heard anything yet, however, according to his information, Galaktion is one of the candidates for the prize. Shalva Radiani tells him the same thing, who he meets at the door of the Writers' Palace. He promises Galaktion that he will actively support his candidacy and will sacrifice himself for him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 143; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 308.

1940

October 14

Ioseb Imedashvili dedicates his Book "Swirl" with the inscription: "To dear Galaktion, with love from the author. 26/X, '40".

Source: MGL, t-706, Ioseb Imedashvili, "Swirl", Tbilisi, 1940.

1940

October 14 or later

On the last page of the gifted Book “Swirl” by Ioseb Imedashvili, he writes an untitled poem dated August 31, 1934, which begins with the line “With a new Book of happiness...”.

Source: MGL, t-706, Ioseb Imedashvili, “Swirl”, Tbilisi, 1940.

Note: The poem was later published under the title “Greetings to Youth”.

1940

After October 15

In his diary, he writes that he believes in Jesus Christ turning water into wine, but he can't believe that anyone could get drunk from that wine.

Source: MGL, d-132, p. 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 66.

1940

After October 15

He writes a letter to be sent to the Great Soviet Encyclopaedia, informing them that he is sending two photographs taken that year to be selected for inclusion in the article about his work.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-132, p. 20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 66.

1940

October 16

He accounts for the family expenses from September 16 to October 26 and discovers that they have spent 9,451 roubles.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-132, p. 9-15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 63-65.

1940

October 16

Galaktion Tabidze's evening is held at Tbilisi State University.

Source: T. Jangulashvili, “Leap Toward the Sky”, magazine Tsiskari, 1992, №8, p. 107.

1940

October 17

He learns from Kale Bobokhidze that the Union of Russian Writers has nominated Giorgi Leonidze for the Stalin Prize. Piotr Pavlenko is active in the circle of Russian writers to support Leonidze. The wife, Olga Darius, tells Galaktion that everything is clear now. He thinks that Leonidze had already started this case, and the delay in the publication of the third volume of Galaktion's works, as well as the poem “Akaki Tsereteli”, is related to this. Despite everything, Galaktion is sure that people love him very much, and his evening at the university is proof of that.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 144; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 308.

1940

October 19

He reads in the newspapers that Giorgi Leonidze has been nominated for the Stalin Prize. He believes that injustice won, because Leonidze's epic was written not in the current year (which was required by the conditions of the award), but a year earlier. Galaktion thinks that if no one has expressed a positive opinion about Leonidze's work, now they will begin to falsely praise him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 144; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 308.

Note: Galaktion in Giorgi Leonidze's epic must refer to the Book "Stalin, Book I, Childhood and Youth", Tbilisi, 1939.

1940

October 22

In his diary, he writes that Niko Berdzenishvili will give a lecture at the Rustaveli Theatre at 9 o'clock on "The Role of the Georgian People and Their Strength in the Struggle Against Foreign Invasions in the XIV to XVIII Centuries". He is interested in whether the classical Georgian literature of that time played any role in the struggle against foreign invasions and if there are any surviving materials in oral tradition about the battles against foreign invaders.

Source: MGL, d-137, 1-2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 111.

1940

After October 22

In the notebook, in connection with the topic of poetry, he mentions the following words: monotony, folkliness, lack of ideas, etc.

Source: MGL, d-137, 8-14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 112.

1940

After October 22

In the notebook, he mentions that Alio Mashashvili is a real Party-Bolshevik, advanced poet of October and writes down phrases about him.

Source: MGL, d-137, 8-14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 112.

1940

After October 22

He writes in the notebook that Leo Kiacheli does not take any measures for the chairmanship.

Source: MGL, d-137, 8-14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 112.

1940

After October 22

He writes an untitled poem "What sins! Like rubies and sapphires...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-137, 6-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 111.

Note: It is a variant of the untitled poem “You should not sacrifice your boat...”.

1940

After October 22

In his diary, he writes that Akaki Shanidze has photographs of Mose Janashvili and him.

Source: MGL, d-137, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 113.

1940

After October 22

He writes a poem titled “It’s an Iris”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-137, 19; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 113-114.

1940

After October 28

Lado Gudiashvili’s wife, Nino Gudiashvili, presents Igor Urushadze’s Book Iakob Nikoladze, which includes a photoreproduction of the bust of Galaktion Tabidze sculpted by Nikoladze. The Book notes that by creating a psychological portrait, Iakob Nikoladze revealed an entirely different aspect of his artistry.

Source: MGL, t-435, И. Урушадзе, “Яков Иванович Николадзе”, Moscow-Leningrad, 1940.

1940

October 31

Galaktion Tabidze receives some Kogorskiy’s letter, in which he talks about how appropriate it was to print the third volume of the poet’s works on non-standard paper. The addressee explains that he has consulted with the polygraphic sector of the Union of State Publishing Houses regarding this matter and everything is in order.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record in the notebook, MGL, d-137, 20-21; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 114.

Note: We cannot find any additional information about Kogorskiy.

1940

After October 31

He receives a letter from Olya Okujava sent from exile. The correspondent begins the card with words from Romain Rolland about Beethoven, then describes the sunbeams that “resemble Galaktion’s apricot flowers”, and continues the conversation about poetry and literary criticism. According to her, one must either be a poet or have a good understanding of poetry to notice all the nuances and shades of a poem. Precious critics should be able to detect the endless streams of diamonds in great poetry, especially in Galaktion’s verses. This idea occurs to Olya after reading an article in the July 23 issue of the newspaper Pravda, which mentions Galaktion as the greatest Georgian poet but says nothing specific about his poems. Olya wonders if Galaktion has visited any doctors and whether he managed to obtain the books that Olya recommended. She writes that it won't be possible to find them in Tbilisi, but they can be purchased from publishers in Moscow and Leningrad. She shares that she recently read Vikentii Veresaev's Book "Gogol in Life", and now she is reading Romain Rolland's Book about Hector Berlioz and other famous musicians. She notes that she also sent the letter on September 19. She is very interested in the recent Russian translations of Galaktion's poems.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-398; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 240-241.

1940

October

He participates in the evening dedicated to the October Revolution held at the Writers' Club.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, p. 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 42.

November

1940

November 6

The newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo publishes information that the reading evening of Galaktion Tabidze's new poems will be held at the Writers' Club on November 27.

Source: "An Evening of Reading Galaktion Tabidze's New Poems at the Writers' Club", Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1940, №31 (154), p. 4.

1940

November 6

The newspaper Lliteraturuli Sakartvelo publishes a letter by Besarion Zhghenti titled "The Poet and the Revolution", which presents a literary portrait of Galaktion. According to the critic, Georgian Decadent poetry found its highest expression in Galaktion's lyrics. From the poet's first book, it became clear that a path was opened for him toward European and Russian Decadent poetry. Nevertheless, the author never reached the borders of epigonism and did not sever ties with the tradition of national literature. Galaktion's second Book is a true treasure of pre-revolutionary Georgian poetry. Initially, the essence of the revolution was vague for Galaktion, but later the poet grasped its international and historical significance. According to Beso Zhghenti, despite his great mastery, the poet struggles to reflect specific reality. This flaw is evident in his recent poems "Akaki Tsereteli" and "A Conversation About Lyricism".

Source: B. Zhghenti, "The Poet and the Revolution", Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1933, №31 (November 6), p. 2.

1940

November 6

In the newspaper Komunisti, the plans of Georgian writers are published under the column "What we are working on in 1941". Galaktion Tabidze writes that in 1940 he wrote the poems "Talk about Lyric”, “Akaki Tsereteli” and “Caucasion Wind”, and the latter one will be published shortly. According to the poet, in 1941 he plans to travel to the republics of the Soviet Union and write a Book about these impressions. In addition, the fourth volume of his writings will be published, the Children’s Literature Publishing House will publish his new poems, the publishing house Zarya Vostoka will publish his new translations, and the poet will prepare for publication all the volumes planned by the Central Committee’s resolution of 1933.

Source: “What we are working on in 1941”, Komunisti, 1941, №31, p. 3.

1940

After November 6

In his diary, he writes a record “minor explanation” that refers to Beso Zhghenti’s letter “Poet and Revolution”, namely the critic’s opinion that Galaktion cannot successfully work on a poem, i.e., a poetic epic. He notes that the letter is weak and we are dealing with a kind of literary conspiracy against him.

Source: MGL, d-490, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 437;

1940

Until November 18

He drafts a plan for a series of evenings dedicated to his work, to be held in the hall of the State Conservatory. He envisions holding 520 thematic evenings, featuring participation from around 300 speakers, over 700 poets, more than 500 actors, and over 700 singers, with an estimated audience of more than 43,000 attendees. He envisions Ivane Javakhishvili, Ivane Beritashvili, Iakob Nikoladze, Mose Toidze, Geronti Kikodze, Tedo Sakhokia, Alexandre Abasheli, and others as the chairpersons of the evening events.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-593, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 499-500;

1940

After November 18

On November 23, he writes the text for the invitation card for his poetry evening to be held at the Beria Club.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-534, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 173;

1940

After November 18

He makes a brief note in Russian about the death of Ivane Javakhishvili. He mentions that with his passing, Georgian society has lost a great scholar and citizen. He also quotes verses from Nikolai Nekrasov’s poem “To the Memory of Dobrolyubov”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-534, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 173;

1940

November 20

He writes a request letter addressed to the rector of Tbilisi State University, Davit Kipshidze, asking for assistance for Svetlana Cherniavskaia, a student at the Electro-Technical Institute, to continue her studies at the Faculty of Literature.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. XII, Tbilisi, 1975, p. 559.

1940

From October 22 to November 23

He writes in the notebook regarding the organizational issues of arranging his evening at the club named after Lavrentiy Beria. He writes down the phone numbers of club employees and the list of participating writers: Alexandre Abasheli, Ioseb Grishashvili, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Konstantine Lortkipanidze, Iona Vakeli, Vasil Gorgadze, Simon Kldiashvili, Tedo Sakhokia, Mariam Garikuli, Marika Baratashvili, Iasamani, Levan Metreveli, Kale Bobohidze, Giorgi Katchakhidze, Solomon Tavadze, Kartvelishvili and Sio Kalandadze (Khidistaveli).

Source: MGL, d-137, 24-28; MGL, d-139, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 114-115;

Note: Marika Mikeladze is mentioned by name in the source.

1940

November 23

The newspaper Komunisti publishes a notice that on November 23, a creative evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze will be held at the Beria House of Culture. Shalva Radiani will read a report on the poet's work, and well-known Georgian writers will speak at the event. The evening will conclude with a concert section.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1940, №272 (November 23), p. 4.

1940

November 23

A literary evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze is held at the Lavrenti Beria House of Culture. Shalva Radiani reads a report on the poet's work. Speakers include Vasil Gorgadze, Marika Mikheladze, Kale Bobokhidze, Sio Kalandadze, and Andro Tevzadze. Galaktion reads his poems. The evening concludes with a concert section. At the end of the event, a woman dressed in national attire presents flowers to Galaktion.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1940, №272 (November 23), p. 4; Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-129, p. 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 42. G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-534, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 171-172. "Galaktion Tabidze's creativity evening", Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1940, №33 (156), p. 1;

1940

November 23 or later

In his notebook, he records his impressions from the poetry evening held on November 23. He notes that the hall was packed with attendees. He is pleased with the report read by Shalva Radiani. He believes that Vasil Gorgadze's speech made an excellent impression on the audience, as did the words of Marika Mikheladze, Sio Kalandadze, and Kale Bobokhidze. Andro Tevzadze's speech elicited excitement from the crowd. Galaktion thinks that this was one of those rare evenings that went splendidly well.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1940, №272 (November 23), p. 4; G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-534, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 171-172.

Note: The name of Ebralidze is not specified in the source, and the individual's identity cannot be determined.

1940

After November 23

In the notebook, he writes about the shortcomings of his evening at the club named after Lavrentiy Beria. He notes that Alexandre Abasheli, Ioseb Grishashvili, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Mikheil Kintsurashvili and others did not appear. The photographer of Literature Repository was drunk and did not take any pictures, it was dark at the opening of the evening and the light was turned on only during the speech of Shalva Radiani, and Ebralidze, the representative of the Main Literary Board, behaved obnoxiously.

Source: MGL, d-137, 29-30; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 115.

1940

After November 23

In his notebook, he notes that Komunisti published an announcement about his evening event held at the Beria Club. He is delighted that his materials have been enriched with the memoirs of Vasil Gorgadze and Mariam Garikuli. He shows interest in Sio Kalandadze's dedication to him.

Source: MGL, d-137, 29-30; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 115.

Note: Sio Kalandadze is mentioned in the source under the pseudonym "Khidistaveli".

Dating: The evening was held on November 23.

1940

November 27

In the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo there is information that a reading evening of new poems by Galaktion Tabidze will be held in the Writers' Club today.

Source: "An Evening of Reading Galaktion Tabidze's New Poems at the Writers' Club", Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1940, №31 (154), p. 4.

1940

November 27

The writer's club hosts a reading evening of Galaktion Tabidze's new poems, where Irakli Abashidze, the responsible secretary of the Union of Writers, gives an introductory speech, and Shalva Radiani reads a report about Galaktion Tabidze's new poems. According to the speaker, the complexity of thoughts in the poet's poems breaks the simplicity and musicality of the narration. Then Galaktion Tabidze himself reads his new poems, to which the hall applauds loudly. The following will express their impressions: Eremia Astvatsaturov, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Vano Tsulukidze, and Besarion Zhghenti.

Source: "An Evening of Reading Galaktion Tabidze's New Poems at the Writers' Club", Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1940, №33 (156), p. 4.

Note: "27 January" is written in the publication instead of 27 November.

1940

November 28

The newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo publishes information about the reading evening of Galaktion Tabidze's new poems held at the Writers' Club on November 27.

Source: "An Evening of Reading Galaktion Tabidze's New Poems at the Writers' Club", Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1940, №33 (156), p. 4.

1940

November 28

The newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo publishes information about Galaktion Tabidze's creative evening held on November 23 at Lavrentiy Beria House of Culture.

Source: "Galaktion Tabidze's creativity evening", Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1940, №33 (156), p. 1.

1940

After November 28

Galaktion Tabidze's poem "I will go to the people with joy" is published in the magazine Oktombreli.

Source: G. Tabidze, "I will go to the people with joy", magazine Oktombreli, 1940, November, №11, p. 1;

1940

November

While in Abastumani, he sends a letter to his foster-daughter, Laine Bartels, informing her that the duration of her stay at the Abastumani Institute has been extended for another month by the order of the People's Commissar for Health, Matchavariani, and a dispatch has been sent regarding this. He advises her to inform Mr. Mikadze promptly about the extension. He asks her to decide whether, after this month, she will remain in Abastumani or return to Tbilisi and to write to her mother, Olga Darius, about her decision.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-263; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 66.

Dating: At least one month must have passed since Laine Bartels' arrival in Abastumani (no later than October 4).

December

1940

After December 2

He receives a letter from his brother, Abesalom Tabidze, informing him that he has moved his wife and children from Chkvishi to Samtredia. He writes that part of their yard has been remeasured by the collective. To prevent their family home from being damaged, Abesalom spent four thousand roubles on its roofing. He asks Galaktion to submit an application to ensure that the yard is not taken away. He also requests that Galaktion helps Tatiana and goes to the prosecutor's Office located next to the Rustaveli Monument to deal with the matter. He sends his regards to Olya.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, h-24551-332; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 172-173.

1940

December 4

He writes an untitled poem "I remember when we had a feast to bid farewell to the artists..."

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4902; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 191.

1940

December 4

He loses a portfolio containing 1,500 lines of poetry. He thinks it is the worst day of his life.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-73, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 325;

Note: In the source, Olga Darius is referred to by a pronoun.

1940

December 4

Olga Darius leaves him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-73, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 325.

1940

December 4

He is distressed by a letter received from his brother, Abesalom Tabidze, informing him that part of the yard in Chkvishi is being transferred to the collective farm, and if no action is taken, the other part will also be taken.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-73, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 325.

Note: In the source, Abesalom Tabidze is referred to by the initial of his name.

1940

December 4

He is ill.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-73, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 325.

1940

December 5

The translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Stalin" is published in the Russian newspaper Sovetskaya Abkhazia.

Source: Сталин, (Стихи), Г. Табидзе, Советская Абхазия, Сухуми, 1940, 5 декабря, №282.

1940

December 6

He sends a request to the Children's Literature Publishing House, asking them to include his Book "The Art of Poetry" in the 1946 publishing plan. The Book will contain verses and poems about the purpose of poetry, including works by Akaki Tsereteli, Ilia Chavchavadze, Vazha-Pshavela, and others, with a total of approximately 5-6 thousand lines. He writes that such a Book does not exist in the Georgian language and is very necessary for young people.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-140; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 107.

1940

December 6

He plans to review various books in preparation for the publication of "The Art of Poetry" and select material about the art of poetry. He thinks that the same texts will also be suitable for Viktor Goltsev's article, which is set to be published in the Moscow magazine Novy Mir.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 194.

1940

Until December 30

He writes a poem "A New Year's Poem to Soviet Estonia".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №237; 3832; 5663; 1266; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 205.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "To Estonia", "Our Warmest Greetings", and untitled ("Our warmest greetings to the land...").

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1940

December 30

He makes a note about the news around the Stalin Prize. He notes that Giorgi Leonidze went to Moscow in advance to organize things. The jury, which had to select the candidates, gave him 4 votes, and Nikolay Aseev received 10 votes. He thinks that this is a great defeat of Leonidze and not of Georgian poetry, as some people want to portray. He also considers Aseev's poem about Mayakovsky to be nonsense and unworthy of the award. Galaktion points out that there are rumours that the Council of People's Commissars is going to make a decision that the prize will be awarded not for the last year, but for the artistic productions of the last five years. Besides, the award was given to not one but three poets. He thinks that this is due to the fact that the works of 1940 were not recognized as worthy of the prize. Leonidze seems heartbroken, it can be felt from his recently published elegiac poem.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 144; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 308-309.

1940

December 30

"New Year's poem to Soviet Estonia" is published in the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1940, №36, p. 1

1940

December 30

The newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo publishes information under the title "Volume III of Galaktion Tabidze's writings" and a photo of this volume. The publication states that the Book was published by the state publishing house under the editorship of Shalva Radiani, has a leather cover, most of the poems in it are new and it costs 12 roubles. Individual poems included in the sections: "Everyone has something to remember", "From old motifs", "Memories of Europe" and "Conversation about lyricism" are listed here.

Source: "Volume III of Galaktion Tabidze's writings", Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1940, №36 (159), p. 3.

1940

December 30

In the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, an article by Shalva Radiani titled "G. Tabidze – Lyricism" is published, which is a review of the poet's collection "Lyricism". The critic discusses the poet's creative journey and thematically reviews the material presented in the new book.

Source: Sh. Radiani, "G. Tabidze – Lyricism", Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1940, № 36 (December 30), p. 4.

1940

December

The Moscow magazine Krasnaya Nov publishes the bibliography of Mikhail Zenkevch on the Book "Galaktion Tabidze. Selected Poems" published by the Publishing House "Fiction" in 1940 in Moscow. It is noted that Galaktion Tabidze is one of the greatest Soviet poets, his work is well known to a wide circle of readers with the selection published in 1937 under the editorship of Nikoloz Tikhonov. But the new edition is significantly supplemented and reflects the poet's long and difficult creative path from 1908 to 1937. Three sections of the Book are reviewed with quotations. It is emphasized that Galaktion Tabidze was a typical representative of Georgian symbolism in his youth and followed Paul Verlaine's will about the musicality of the poem. He enriched Georgian poetry with new rhythms and rhymes, but the years of reaction caused a feeling of loneliness and hopelessness in his work. The author considers the second part of the Book to be the period of transformation of the poet, when he overcomes loneliness and wants to follow the achievements of the revolution to the end. The third part of the Book is called the celebration anthem of the victorious socialism and the trumpet call of the people. The only regret for the author is that the poems of the national poet of the last three years were not included in the collection.

Source: М. Зенкевич, “Галактион Табидзе. Избранные Стихотворения”, журн. “Красная Новь”, 1940, ноябрь-декабрь, №11-12, стр. 334-335.

1935-1940

He writes an untitled poem “Shota’s ‘Immortal’ Is Named – the Heart of the People...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №66-a, 1502; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 130.

1935-1940

He writes an untitled poem “To Those Who Have Not Seen Our Sea...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2514; №4339; №66-a, 1494; №2040; №5521; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 129.

Note: The poem is also found with the titles: “Old Orthography”; “Inscription on a Book”; and “Language of the Native Land”.

1940 or earlier

He writes a draft of a letter to Saliteruro Gazeti, stating that the letter cannot be published in its current form because what is said there about Giorgi Leonidze’s alliterations is actually Galaktion’s achievement. Regarding the author’s claim that Giorgi Leonidze’s alliterations are natural, while Galaktion’s are artificial, he refers to it as “pretentious”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-507, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 53;

Note: The identification of the article that Galaktion is referring to could not be determined.

1940

He writes a poem “A look of Meskhian”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №775; 5517; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 197.

1940

In the Book “Anthology of Georgian Literature for Non-Georgian Schools”, compiled by Ioseb Kakabadze and Evgeni Odisharia, a brief biography of Galaktion is published along with his poems “Peaks of New Mountains” and “Our Army is Strong, but with a Different Strength”.

Source: “Anthology of Georgian Literature for Non-Georgian Schools”, compiled by I. Kakabadze and E. Odisharia, Tbilisi, 1940, p. 150-154.

1940

He reads Parmen Loria's novel "Deli Murad" and thinks that it would have been better to include the main character's name, Andro, in the title. He writes to the author about this. Parmen Loria is immensely delighted that Galaktion not only read his novel but also wrote him a letter.

Source: P. Loria, Recollections about Galaktion, newspaper Sabtchota Adjara, October 12, 1973, N 199, p. 4.

Note: Later, Parmen Loria indeed changed the title of his novel, renaming it "Dawn in the Gorge".

1940

He writes a brief conclusion on Konstantin Bogdanovsky's translations of Akaki Tsereteli's poems "Tamar the Treacherous" and "Little Kakhi". He points out that the translations should be considered successful, as the translator managed to closely approach the original and convey its literary value as much as possible.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-621, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 151;

1940

He writes a poem "Sorrow of the Past".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-130, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 43-45.

Note: The poem is not published in the collected works during the poet's lifetime, but it is included in the poem "Akaki Tsereteli".

1940

He visits the exhibition of Iakob Gogebashvili and admires the enlarged books "Mother Tongue" and "The Door of Nature", the framed transparencies, and the portrait by Kote Kavtaradze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-139, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 132.

1940

He writes a poem "Thuja".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-139, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 131.

1940

He writes an untitled poem "From the mountain of Mtatsminda to the moon of Moscow...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-139, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 133.

1940

He writes an untitled poem “This life is full...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-139, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 133.

1940

He writes an untitled poem “You stand joyfully in the vines...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-139, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 133.

1940

He is interested what Ketevan Chkhaidze wants from him, who often talks to him, and what connection she has with the futurists.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-139, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 134.

1940

He writes an untitled poem “Some will tell me: be vigilant...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-139, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 134.

1940

He writes an untitled poem “If you exist – somewhere in the sky...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-139, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 134.

1940

He writes a poem “Pine of Bichvinta”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-139, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 135.

1940

He writes an untitled poem “The sea washes away the rain’s veil...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-139, 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 135-136.

1940

In his diary, he writes that the tactic of Ioseb Grishashvili, Alexandre Abasheli, Shalva Apkhaidze, and Simon Chikovani is to steal rhymes and fight with him at the same time. He thinks that he cannot take care of his own creativity.

Source: MGL, d-139, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 136.

1940

He writes an untitled poem “Even if hungry poetry...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-140, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 137.

1940

He writes an untitled poem “Life is not worth...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-140, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 137.

1940

In his diary, he writes that he does not strive to discover the laws of verse structure; he only works creatively. As a poet and citizen, he serves the people and the revolution.

Source: MGL, d-140, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 138.

1940

He works on a poem “Akaki Tsereteli” and writes a plan for the memory in six points in his diary: Ukimerioni, Tbilisi Seminary, Kharagauli Station, Kutaisi Literary Evening, the opinion of the Tsisperkantselis about Akaki, the opinion of the Tavadiashvili family – a bagpipes player and a card player, and what Akaki accomplished with his lyrics. He notes that he needs to read “My Adventure” and Dimitri Benashvili’s monograph.

Source: MGL, d-140, 8-11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 138-139.

Note: He probably refers to the monograph published in 1931, “For the Marxist Methodology in Artistic Creation”.

1940

He visits Korneli Sanadze to see his first portrait and offers to paint a new one. He wants to be depicted leaning on his knee, with his right hand resting on the back of a chair, and a Book open in his left hand. Sanadze fulfils the request and draws his portrait with a pencil.

Source: O. Egadze, The poet’s image in the artist’s work, magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba, 1965, N 11, p. 71.

1940

In the eighth volume of the second edition of the Small Soviet Encyclopaedia, a brief encyclopaedic article titled “Galaktion Tabidze” is published, stating that Galaktion is a prominent Georgian poet whose early work was influenced by symbolism. In the post-revolutionary era, the poet overcame his symbolist tendencies and depicted scenes of socialist construction. It is stated that Galaktion has been awarded the title of “National Poet” and the Order of Lenin.

Source: Малая советская энциклопедия, Т. 8, Москва, 1940, p. 573.

1940

He writes an untitled poem “Can death ever overcome poetry? On the contrary!..”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №6806; №83830; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 283.

1940

He writes an untitled poem “Poems, wine...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-140, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 139.

1940

He drafts an inscription for the dedication in the Book to be given as a gift to Philip Makharadze.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-507, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 53.

1940

He writes an untitled poem “What Dreams Made Radiant...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №1082; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 171.

1940

He reads the Russian edition of Aristophanes’ comedy “Wealth (Plutus)” and makes underlines.

Source: GTSM, 217, Аристофан, Богатство (Плутос), Leningrad, 1924.

Dating: According to Galaktion Tabidze’s inscription.

1940

He reads Lydia Megrelidze’s book “The Broken Family”, makes underlines, and corrects the text.

Source: GTSM, 276, Lydia Megrelidze, “The Broken Family”, Tbilisi, 1940.

1940

He reads Arno Oneli’s collection of poems “Excellent Students”, draws a portrait on the cover, and makes annotations.

Source: GTSM, 281, Arno Oneli, “Excellent Students”, Tbilisi, 1940.

1940 or later

He writes an autobiography.

Source: MGL, d-659, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 451-452.

1940 or later

He writes phrases on a piece of paper, which he later uses in the poems “The Street” and “In the Café”.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №571, p. 1.

1940 or later

He writes a poem “To a Fellow Poet” (“As Long as You Are Alive, You Feel...”).

Source: Autograph, MGL, №5538; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 198; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 801.

1940 or later

He writes an untitled poem “In My Hair, the Shadows of Silver...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3313; №5477; №565; №2511; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 198; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 801.

Note: The poem is also found titled “You Spent Your Whole Life’s Journey on the Sea” and untitled with different opening lines (“In My Hair, Too, the Shadows of Silver...”; “In Your Hair, Too, the Shadows of Silver...”).

1940 or later

He writes an untitled poem “What Fate Has Bestowed Upon Me...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №5538; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 199; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 801.

1940 or later

He writes a poem “The Tied Imp” (“To the Leg of My Writing Desk...”).

Source: Autograph, MGL, №3547; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 199; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 801.

1940 or later

He writes a poem “Ocean” (“To the Fully Loaded Oil Ships...”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4468; №2413; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 206; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 803.

Note: The title “Gibraltar” is crossed out.

1940 Or later

He writes a poem “A Melody to the Listener” (“It Comes with a Harp, Pure and Enchanting...”).

Source: Autograph, MGL, №401-d, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 192. For dating and clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 799.

1940 or later

He comes across a 1940 calendar in the Book “The Land of Socialism”, where he makes highlights and notes.

Source: MGL, t-425, “Страна Социализма”, Календарь на 1940 год, Moscow, 1940.

1941

Until 1941

In front of the garden of the Communards, he meets Akaki Gatsrelia’s sister who asks him to come with her to the canteen under the “Peasant’s House”. He arranges papers from his portfolio at the table and tells her about his impressions after returning from Abkhazia. Gatsrelia is especially interested in several stanzas written with a pencil on the paper, to which the poet replies, I am writing a poem about Kutaisi. She asks him to read it. Galaktion hands the paper to his interlocutor to read. This is the poem “From Tskaltubo to Kutaisi”. Gatsserelia remains impressed.

Source: A. Gatsserelia, Reeds and Gobelin, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 49-50.

Until 1941

He writes a one-stanza untitled poem “Even the enemy was thirsty...”.

Source: MGL, d-91, 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 16;

January

1941

January 1

In the newspaper Komunisti, questionnaires from writers, actors, musicians, and directors are published under the title “What We Will Work on in 1941”, starting with the information about Galaktion Tabidze. The poet indicates that he completed the poems “Akaki Tsereteli”, “A Conversation About Lyricism, and “The Wind of the Caucasus” in 1940, and plans to travel to the Soviet republics in 1941, based on which he will write a book. He also notes that this year the State Publishing House plans to publish the fourth volume of his works, while the publishing house Zarya Vostoka will print new translations.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1941, №1 (January 1), p. 3.

1941

January 1

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes the translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Estonia” by Boris Serebryakov.

Source: Eesti (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Б. Серебряков, Заря Востока, 1941, 1 января, №1, p. 3

1941

After January 1

In his diary, he writes that what he is proud of, he achieved not through desk work but by being among the people. This is what makes him brilliant and valuable to everyone; it has shaped his past, present, and future – his glory, power, reverence, and admiration. However, he has never been so dizzy from these circumstances that he didn’t know the true truth or falsehood. From there, Akaki Tsereteli and Academician Niko Marr would greet him. Everyone was blinded by his victories; the Tsisperkantselis were defeated in their struggle against him. Ioseb Grishashvili, Sandro Shanshiashvili, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Alio Mashashvili, Ilya Mosashvili, Elizbar Polumordvinov, Irakli and Grigol Abashidze, and Simon Chikovani were all involved. A defeat like the one the Tsisperkantselis experienced has never been seen in the history of literature. Titsian Tabidze thought he would escape through trickery, Paolo Iashvili believed he would be saved by a mysterious fate, and Valerian Gaprindashvili planned to win through unfair organizational tactics. Ali Arsenishvili thought he could destroy him by gliding on the ice, Ivane Kipiani joked that Nikolo Mitsishvili had gotten himself into a situation by sitting on two chairs, and Sandro Tsirekidze believed he could mock him together with Valerian Gaprindashvili. Along with them, his youth was overshadowed by Grigol Laghidze, Shota Dadiani, Datiko Meskhi, and Razhden Dateshidze.

Source: MGL, d-141, 12-14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 144-145.

Note: Some of the writers are mentioned in the source by their surnames, while others are mentioned by their first names.

1941

After January 1

In his diary, he writes that various individuals have his portraits by Gigo Zaziashvili, Davit Gvelesiani, Vasily Krotkov, Nikifor Kulesh, Vava Gabunia, Ketevan Maghalashvili, Irakli Topadze, Gvetadze, Kote Kavtaradze, Davit Kakabadze, Revaz Revazishvili, Nikolai Chernishkov, Olgha Darius, Lado Gudiashvili, Sergei Sudeikin, Boris Semyonov, and Theodor Chudetsky, as well as an etude by Ivane Vepkhvadze; busts by Iakob Nikoladze, Nikoloz Kandelaki, and Tite Sikharulidze; and the cover of the Book ‘Motherland, Life’.

Source: MGL, d-141, 12-14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 144-145.

Note: Gigo Zaziashvili, Davit Gvelesiani, Vasily Krotkov, Nikifor Kulesh, Vava Gabunia, Irakli Topadze, Gvetadze, Revazishvili, Boris Semyonov, Theodor Chudetsky, Ivane Vepkhvadze, Iakob Nikoladze, Nikoloz Kandelaki, and Tite Sikharulidze are mentioned by their last names.

1941

January 2

He listens to the conversation of Leo Kiacheli and Akaki Beliashvili in the circle of writers. Kiacheli says with regret that “Gvadi Bigva” will never receive the prize because the novel was sent late and he will not be able to read it. Beliashvili consoles them that they are obliged to read it. Galaktion pulls Simon Tsverava aside and tells him that “Gvadi Bigva” will probably get the prize, to which Tsverava agrees. The poet says that apparently a new list of nominees has been sent to Moscow. The interlocutor confirms and notes that Leonidze and Chikovani are on the list. Galaktion thinks that the government has cheated, or they really haven’t seen the works deserving premium, or they don’t want to spend the money.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-98, 145; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 309-310.

1941

January 4

The newspaper Komunisti publishes an information letter “Volume III of Galaktion Tabidze’s writings” and a photo of the volume are published. The publication states that the Book was published by the state publishing house under the editorship of Shalva Radiani, most of the poems contained in it are new and cost 12 roubles. Individual poems included in the sections: “Everyone has something to remember”, “From old motifs”, “Memories of Europe” and “Conversation about lyricism” are listed here.

Source: “Volume III of Galaktion Tabidze’s writings”, Komunisti, 1941, №3, p. 4.

1941

January 5

The article “Anthology of Georgian poetry in Russian” is published in the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo. It talks about the publication, which includes Georgian writing from ancient times to modern times, and which is published by the Moscow State Publishing House of Fiction. The Book was prepared for publication by Victor Goltsev, Alexandre Abasheli and Simon Chikovani, and the authors of the fundamental research accompanying the Book are: Korneli Kekelidze, Geronti Kikodze, Shalva Radiani, Besarion Zhghenti and Mikheil Chikovani. The publication states that the fourth part of the Book presents contemporary poets, of which Galaktion Tabidze is named first.

Source: “Anthology of Georgian poetry in Russian”, Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1941, №1 (160), p. 1.

1941

January 6

He attends a meeting of critics at the Writers’ Union. According to the first speaker, Sandro Shanshiashvili, the critics either do not understand or lack the education to properly evaluate the work. They say that Galaktion Tabidze is a great poet, but they do not elaborate on this opinion. Alka Sulava responds that everyone will read Galaktion Tabidze. Sandro Shanshiashvili agrees and notes that this is due to his talent, not the criticism.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-142, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 153.

1941

January 6

He addresses a statement to the Chairman of the Writers’ Union, Irakli Abashidze, requesting the publication of his poem “The Wind of Caucasus” in connection with the 20th anniversary of Georgia’s annexation.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-142; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 107.

1941

January 9

He learns from the radio that Leo Kiacheli, Mikheil Chiaureli, Akaki Khorava, and engineer Archil Kurdiani have received the Stalin Prize. In the diary, it is noted that there was a lot of discussion following the jury’s decision. They say that Kiacheli deserved the award, Chiaureli - not, and engineer Kurdiani appropriated the intellectual property of the co-author. Shalva Dadiani is unhappy that he was not nominated for the award, Konstantine Gamsakhurdia, who was planning to buy a car, was also upset. They say that Leonidze’s script on Giorgi Saakadze was resented by Stalin because of his naivety, and he should not have hoped for a prize. He writes down Kale Bobokhidze’s words about Giorgi Leonidze: like the dog in the manger he will neither eat himself nor let the horse eat. According to Bobokhidze, if someone more famous from Georgian poetry was nominated, he would have won the award without hesitation.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 145; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 310-311.

1941

After January 9

He makes a record "People's Dictionary of the Revolution of 1905", in which he explains popular expressions and catchphrases related to the revolution.

Source: MGL, d-98, 146; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 311-312;

1941

Until January 14

He sends 300 roubles to Olya Okujava in exile.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-386; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 242.

Dating: The date is specified in Olya Okujava's letter of January 14.

1941

After January 14

He receives a letter from Olya Okujava, in which she speaks of her boundless love for him. She writes that she received 300 roubles from him on January 14 and that he should not send her money again, as Galaktion will be left hungry afterward. Tears choke her, and she can no longer write anything else.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-386; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 242.

1941

January 15

In the newspaper Zarya Vostoka, Mikheil Davitashvili's article "Galaktion Tabidze's New Poems" is published, which states about the third volume of the poet's works, which was published in 1940. According to the author of the letter, the third volume of Galaktion Tabidze's works is proof of the poet's recent creative achievements. He talks about individual poems of the poet and points out that no important topic of modernity remains outside the attention of Galaktion. Attention is focused on the fact that the poet treats the artistic form of the work with great care. His new poems are distinguished by rhythmic, compositional and tropical innovations. The author of the letter highly appreciates the poems of Galaktion's European cycle, as well as the poem "Conversation about Lyric", which proves that Galaktion is the best continuation of the traditions of Georgian classics of the nineteenth century.

Source: М. Давиташвили, Новые стихи Галактионом Табидзе, "Заря Востока", 1941, №12, p. 4.

1941

January 17

In his diary, he writes that Alexandre Abasheli no longer jokes and is going on the offensive; he has the naive critics write that his Book “The Sun’s Laughter” is optimistic, although it is a deeply pessimistic and decadent work. He thinks this is directed against him, as Galaktion was a pessimist, while he is an optimist. He had Konstantine Gamsakhurdia write that with a small Book published over the course of a year, he stood alongside the leading Soviet poets, including himself, after a demonstrative silence of twenty years. Abasheli highlighted the authors printed in the old Tsisartkela according to the alphabet, which will allow him to stand at the forefront, rather than alongside others. He had Boris Serebryakov compile a Book in the same manner, as he is a member of the editorial board of the anthology of Georgian poetry to be published in Moscow, where he also plans to compile the Book alphabetically. This approach is also being followed by Viktor Goltsev, Alio Mashashvili, and Simon Chikovani. Alexandre Abasheli intended to have the authors printed alphabetically in the collection of the Writers’ Union dedicated to the 20th anniversary of Georgia’s annexation in February. Galaktion notes that until then, all books and magazines were opened with his poems. He is curious how this duel will end.

Source: MGL, d-143, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 159-160.

1941

January 19

An announcement is published in the newspaper Komunisti with the title “Lenin’s Evening at the Writers’ Club”. It says that on January 21, an evening dedicated to the memory of Lenin will be held in the club of the Writers’ Union, which will be opened by Irakli Abashidze with an introductory speech. Shalva Radiani, Demna Shengelaia, Leo Kiacheli, Beso Zhghenti and Eremia Astvatsaturov will deliver speeches, and poets: Galaktion Tabidze, Alio Mashashvili, Simon Chikovani, Iona Vakeli, Alexandre Abasheli, Ilo Mosashvili, Sandro Euli, Karlo Kaladze and Giorgi Kuchishvili will take part.

Source: “Lenin’s Evening at the Writers’ Club”, “Pavlo Tychyna”, Komunisti, 1933, №16, p. 2.

1941

After January 20

In the preface of Paata Gugushvili’s Book “Georgian Journalism”, he makes underlinings, writes comments, and places question marks.

Source: MGL, t-27, Paata Gugushvili, “Georgian Journalism”, Tbilisi, 1941, p. VII-XIX.

1941

January 21

He participates in an event dedicated to Lenin’s memory, held at 8 PM, and recites a new poem “Lenin’s Memory” in honour of the leader.

Source: “Lenin’s Evening at the Writers’ Club”, “Pavlo Tychyna”, Komunisti, 1933, №16, p. 2.

1941

January 22

In his diary, he writes that after the evening dedicated to Lenin's memory on January 21, which was opened with his poem, Ioseb Grishashvili announced that he does not read poems from paper and that he had him in mind. He also argued in the printing house that the collection of the Writers' Union should not start with his poem. He believes that Ioseb Grishashvili has started a new duel with him.

Source: MGL, d-143, 2-3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 160.

1941

After January 22

He receives a letter from Abesalom Tabidze, in which his brother expresses satisfaction with the review published in the newspaper Zarya Vostoka about Galaktion's third volume of works. He is interested in whether a statement has been made not to take away the yard of Chkvishi. He instructs him to go to the chairman of the Education Union, explain that the documents for presenting his brother, Abesalom Tabidze, as a deserving teacher are with him, and find out what has been decided. If he cannot manage to go, he should at least call. He sends his regards to Olga Darius.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, h-24551-333; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 173.

1941

Until January 24

He writes a poem "They are with him".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №623; №7624-7625; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 68.

Note: The poem is also found untitled ("The evening mist suffocates...").

Dating: From Galaktion's entry on January 24 (MGL D-143, p. 9), it is clear that the poem has already been submitted to the magazine Mnatobi.

1941

January 22-24

He writes a poem "For the University". The title is crossed out.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-143, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 161.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles "At the University" and "Labour Closely Connected with Science".

Dating: In the diary, the poem is placed between the entries of January 22 and January 24.

1941

January 24

The newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo publishes an information letter "An evening dedicated to the memory of Lenin at the Writers' Club", in which it is stated that the event was opened by the responsible secretary of the Union of Writers, Irakli Abashidze, Shalva Radiani made a report,

Besarion Zhghenti gave a speech, and Demna Shengelaia, Galaktion Tabidze, Sandro Euli and Ioseb Grishashvili read their works.

Source: “An evening dedicated to the memory of Lenin at the Writers’ Club”, Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1941, №4, p. 1.

1941

January 24

In the editorial office of the newspaper Zarya Vostoka, the Tbilisi worker holds a meeting with the correspondents who present him with flowers. At the event, he reads passages from a new poem and talks about the peculiarities of creative work. Beso Zhghenti gives a report on Galaktion’s creative works.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 165; Встреча рабкоров с народным поэтом Грузии Галактионом Табидзе, “Заря Востока”, 1941, №23, p. 3.

1941

January 24

He is informed that Alio Mashashvili shortens the poem “To the memory of Lenin” given to the magazine Mnatobi, which he is not satisfied with.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 165.

Note: In the source, the poem is mentioned under the title “Lenin”.

1941

January 24

He sends the poem “New Tbilisi” to be printed in the newspaper Komunisti.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 166.

1941

January 24

In the diary, he mentions that the list and addresses of all regional newspapers should be found out through the telegraph agency.

Source: MGL, d-143, 9-10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 166.

1941

January 24

He works on the poem “A woman fought on the barricades” (Do you remember what wind has been blowing...”).

Source: MGL, d-143, 9-10; GTDA, №454, p. 1-4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 166.

1941

Until January 25

He writes a poem “Two Ratis”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3843; №3844; №67-d., p. 10; №84-d., p. 3-5; №84-d., p. 3-5; №2024; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 28.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “We”, “The Hundred-Year-Old Man”, “Letter to the Editorial Board”, and untitled (“Don’t think of me as a stranger...”).

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1941

Until January 25

He sends the poem “To Lenin’s memory” to be printed for the January issue of the magazine Mnatobi.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 166.

1941

Until January 25

For the collection dedicated to the 20th anniversary of the Sovietization of Georgia, he presents the poem “My native land!” to the Union of Writers.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 166; “Twenty years”, a literary collection, Tbilisi, Children’s Literature Publishing House, 1941;

1941

Until January 25

He submits the poem “We” to the magazine Oktombreli for printing.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 166.

1941

Until January 25

He gives Boris Serebryakov the poems for translation for the Russian-language Book “Poets of Soviet Georgia”.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 166.

Note: The title of the Book is “Поэты Советской Грузии”

1941

Until January 25

He sends his poems to the publishing house of Georgian poetry anthology in Moscow.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 166.

1941

Until January 25

He sends poems to be included in the South Ossetian anthology.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 166.

1941

Until January 25

He promises poems to the editors of the newspapers Zarya Vostoka, Khorurdain Vrastan and Izvestia.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 167.

1941

Until January 25

He prepares material for the XVIII All-Union Conference of the Communist Party.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 167.

1941

January 25

He notes in his diary that he needs to prepare the Book "My Native Land" for the publisher "Federation". He has materials to submit to the magazine Mnatobi, the university newspaper, Saliteruro Gazeti, Akhalgazrda Komunisti, Komunisti, Khorurdain Vrastan, Zarya Vostoka, Izvestia, and for the Book "The Art of Poetry" to be published by the Children's Literature Publishing House.

Source: MGL, d-143, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 167.

1941

After January 25

He gives the poem to the editors of the newspaper Khorurdain Vrastan.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 167.

1941

After January 25

He sends the poem to the editors of the newspaper Izvestia.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 167.

1941

After January 25

Through Boris Serebryakov, he sends Zarya Vostoka a piece from the poem “My Native Land”, translated by Serebryakov himself.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 167.

1941

January 26

The Union of Writers informs that they have received a telegram from Mykola Bazhan with a request to attend the 50th anniversary of the birth of the Ukrainian poet Pavlo Tychyna and the 30th anniversary of his appearance on the writing scene. He learns that the Union of Writers has already sent a congratulatory telegram, but he also thinks of sending congratulations himself and finds out Tychyna’s address to send the telegram.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 167.

1941

Until January 27

On the trolleybus, he meets Mose Toidze, who speaks with admiration about his poem, praising both its form and its content.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 173.

Note: The recollection does not specify which poem it is about.

1941

Until January 27

On Plekhanov Avenue, he pays attention to the fight of the tram-driver of the stopped tram and the group of people. Mose Toidze stands in the middle of them and is very angry that the tram-driver does not let a woman with a samovar in her hand. The artist wins and the tram-driver agrees to take the Russian woman with the samovar. To Galaktion Tabidze’s question about what is going on, Mose Toidze answers that he barely found a samovar of the type that was used in Gori before in an old furniture store, and he needs it to paint Stalin’s picture.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 172.

1941

January 27

Under the title “The Eighteenth Conference”, he extensively lists the topics and issues to be covered in the poem “In Honour of the Party Conference”.

Source: Autograph: MGL, 143-d, (old number)-13-18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 168-170.

1941

January 27

In the Borjomi store located on Rustaveli Prospect, he meets Mose Toidze, who is very happy to see him. Galaktion recalls his painting published in 1893 in the magazine Kvali - orphaned beggars huddled against the street wall in the rain. Mose tells him that at that time he did not receive any special art education, he just painted. There is a misunderstanding in the store, Mose is given 1 glass instead of 1 bottle of Borjomi, and when he expresses his displeasure, it turns out that he himself made a mistake and gave the wrong receipt to the seller.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 19; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 171.

1941

January 27

He writes the text of a congratulatory telegram for the Ukrainian poet Pavlo Tychyna on his 50th birthday and 30th anniversary of his appearance on the writing scene. He expresses his concern that he cannot personally participate in this celebration. Galaktion wishes him a long life and creative success to glorify Ukraine and the Soviet Union.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 167.

1941

January 28

In his diary, he writes various stories about Mose Toidze: Olgha Darius tells that when asked by the governor from her daughter's school, Mose answered that he has four children, and the woman told him that five were mentioned in the document. Moses replied that no document could tell the truth better than him. Then his wife brought out all five children and the artist was surprised that he really had five children. He notes that Moses was sometimes a follower of Leo Tolstoy, and sometimes he started vegetarianism following Repin and almost starved to death. There was a fire in the artist's house once, but he was so engrossed in painting that he did not understand what was happening and was fascinated by the unusual lighting of the room.

Source: MGL, d-143, 20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 172-173.

1941

January 28

A children's calendar of 1941 is published, on the March 2 page of which is printed the photo of Galaktion Tabidze and the poem "Shoulder to shoulder!"

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 19; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 171.

1941

January 28

Levan Asatiani's letter "Pavlo Tychyna" dedicated to the 30th anniversary of the literary work of the famous Ukrainian poet is published in the newspaper Komunisti. It says that Pavlo Tychyna, in addition to the Georgian classics: Davit Guramishvili, Akaki Tsereteli and others, has translated the poems of the modern Georgian poet, Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Levan Asatiani, "Pavlo Tychyna", Komunisti, 1933, №22, p. 2.

1941

January 29

The newspaper "Zarya Vostoka" publishes the article "Working Correspondents Meeting with Georgian People's Poet Galaktion Tabidze", which mentions that on January 25, Georgian People's Poet Galaktion Tabidze met working correspondents in the editorial office of the newspaper Zarya Vostoka. A report on the poet's work was read by the critic Besarion Zhghenti, who reviewed the stages of the poet's creative evolution. Galaktion told the audience about the process of working on poems and read the introduction of a new poem dedicated to the twentieth anniversary of the Sovietization of Georgia.

Source: Встреча рабкоров с народным поэтом Грузии Галактионом Табидзе, "Заря Востока", 1941, №23, p. 3;

Note: "24 January" should be written in the newspaper instead of "25 January".

1941

January 30

He receives a letter from Mikheil Dotchviri, a teacher of language and literature at the Khobi secondary school. The letter includes a communist greetings, and Dotchviri strongly requests the poet to explain the meaning of the phrase "They sleep in dark coils", unknown chimeras" in the poem "Blue Horses".

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-468-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 288.

1941

January 31

The newspaper "Zarya Vostoka" publishes the article "Working Correspondents Meeting with Georgian People's Poet Galaktion Tabidze", which mentions that on January 25, Georgian People's Poet Galaktion Tabidze met working correspondents in the editorial office of the newspaper Zarya Vostoka. A report on the poet's work was read by the critic Besarion Zhghenti, who reviewed the stages of the poet's creative evolution. Galaktion told the audience about the process of working on poems and read the introduction of a new poem dedicated to the twentieth anniversary of the Sovietization of Georgia. At the end, the poet answered the questions of those present.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1941, №5 (January 31), p. 1.

February

1941

Until February

He writes an untitled poem “Once in the Overgrown with Weeds and Swampy”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3541; №84-d, p. 34-36; №2021; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 84.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Mosquito-Anopheles” and “The Country Became a Permanent Sun”.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1941

February 1

He writes a poem titled “In Honour of the Conference’s Great One”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №9-10; №4078-4079; №4643-4646; №843; №4933; №4936; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 71.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Near Tkvarcheli”, “In Preparation for the Eighteenth Union Party Conference”, “How They Don’t Sleep”, “The Eighteenth Conference”, and untitled (starting with: “Over there, where the boundary of fertile fields...”, “Everywhere, accelerating the pace...”, “Overcoming - of time, of space...”).

1941

February 2

The poem “In Honour of the Party member of the Conference” is published in the newspaper Komunisti.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, February 2, 1941, №27, p. 2.

Note: A facsimile of Galaktion is attached to the text.

1941

After February 2

The poem “In honour of the party member of the conference” printed in the newspaper Komunisti deserves universal approval and causes a furore. The poet is praised even by those who are not his admirers.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 25; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 175;

1941

After February 2

The poem “In honour of the party member of the conference” is translated into Armenian and printed in the newspaper Sovetakan Hayastan.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 25; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 175;

1941

After February 3

Boris Serebryakov translates the poem “In honour of the party member of the conference” into Russian, and the Tbilisi journalist of the newspaper Izvestia sends it to be printed in the newspaper.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 25; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 175.

1941

After February 3

Boris Serebryakov informs that the poem translated by him into Russian “In honour of the party member of the conference” has been already prepared for printing in the newspaper Izvestia.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 25; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 175.

1941

After February 3

Vladimir Vasilenko translates the excerpt of the poem “In honour of the party member of the conference” into Russian.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 25; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 175.

1941

After February 7

The collection dedicated to the 20th anniversary of the Sovietization of Georgia “Georgian Writers of Soviet Georgia” opens with Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “My native land”.

Source: Collection “Georgian Writers of Soviet Georgia”, Tbilisi, 1941, p. 1-6;

1941

After February 7

In the collection of poems of Georgian poets “Poets of Soviet Georgia” translated into Russian by Boris Serebryakov, the translations of Galaktion Tabidze’s poems: “Christmas trees shine...”, “Beyond the doors of Georgia...” and “Two worlds” are published.

Source: “Поэты Советской Грузии”, пер. Б. Серебрякова, Тб., “Заря Востока”, 1941, p. 100-109.

Note: The poems were printed under the titles: “В Самой Радостной Стране”, “Революционная Грузия”, “Украина и Белоруссия”.

1941

February 10

He attends Avetik Isaakian’s evening at the Union of Writers and the dinner held in his honour at the Tiflis Hotel. He wonders how the press will react to this.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 23; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 174.

1941

After February 10

In the diary, he writes the text of a speech by Knut Hamsun, in which it is noted that earlier writers were required to become communists and those who did not belong to this group were looked down upon. The writers made sacrifices but still did not yield their positions. Hamsun notes that agitational talk about art cannot shape anyone into a great creator.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 24; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 174.

1941

After February 10

For the upcoming exhibition, he notes in his diary what materials will be needed for the display. The list includes: his photograph wearing the Order of Lenin, photos of all the volumes of his books, the literary bulletin "Galaktion", which features portraits of authors of poems and articles about him.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 25; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 175.

1941

Until February 12

Valerian Tsagareishvili writes the music for Galaktion Tabidze's poem "My native land!".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 29; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 178; MGL, d-144, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 191.

1941

Until February 12

Boris Serebryakov sends the translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem to the newspaper Komsomolskaia Pravda.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 29; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 178.

1941

February 12

The Armenian translation of the poem "In honour of the party member of the conference" is broadcast on the radio.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 25; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 175.

1941

February 12

The postman hands over 96 roubles sent from Moscow and a letter dated February 3, informing that Saliteruro Gazeti owed this amount to him from the April 20, 1937 issue.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 29; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 178.

1941

February 12

Lena visits Galaktion Tabidze. Galaktion thinks about superstition at that time and writes in his diary that Lena is superstitious.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 29; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 178.

Note: From many Lenas mentioned in Galaktion's archive, this one could be Elene Sturua, daughter of Ivane, but she also may be a family helper whose name is not mentioned anywhere in the archive.

1941

February 12

Besarion Zhghenti expresses his consent to publish "Great Caucasus Wind" as a book.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 29; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 178.

1941

February 12

It is mentioned in the Moscow newspaper Literaturnaia Gazeta that Galaktion Tabidze sent a congratulatory telegram to Pavlo Tychyna on the occasion of his 50th birthday anniversary.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 29; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 178.

1941

February 12

He sees his poem "My native land" printed in the collection of the Union of Writers "Georgian Writers of Soviet Georgia" in the printing house and notes that it has been magnificently published.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 29; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 178; "Georgian Writers to Soviet Georgia: 1921-1941)", Federation, 1941;

1941

February 12

The phone rings, he picks up the phone and says it's Galaktion Tabidze's apartment, but they hang up.

Source: MGL, d-143, 29; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 178.

1941

February 12

He writes in his diary that he is not superstitious, but just when he was thinking about the happy arrangement of numbers in the Academy branch telephone: 6-9-9-6. The postman brought the royalties sent from Moscow - 96 roubles 4 years late. He writes that they are playing tricks with interlinear translations, but he hopes that the matter will be settled down.

Source: MGL, d-143, 29; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 178.

1941

After February 12

Ivane Gokieli, the chairman of the Union of Composers, tells him that Valerian Tsagareishvili's music for his poem "My native land" is rare; He is sorry that they don't have a choir, but he wants it to be played on the radio.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 191.

1941

February 13

Irakli Abashidze informs that the printing of "Wind of the Great Caucasus" will be delayed, and Besarion Zhghenti does not dare to tell him the news.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 29; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 178.

1941

After February 13

He writes two versions of festive untitled poem "Gvadi stole a goat...".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 30; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 178-179.

1941

After February 13

He writes two versions of the poem "To Stalin from Georgia".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 30-31, 34-41; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 179-187.

Note: The variant of the second and third stanzas of the poem is the poem "Star of Georgia".

1941

After February 13

Besarion Zhghenti in the introductory letter of the Book "Modern Georgian Literature" - "Innovative Features of Georgian Soviet Literature" notes that the great epic traditions of classical Georgian poetry have not yet been properly restored and developed in Georgian Soviet literature. Galaktion Tabidze's poems are only the first attempt to revive the Georgian Soviet poetic epic.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 33; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 188.

1941

February 14

The Presidium of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia petitions the Pension Commission under the Council of People's Commissars. Since Galaktion Tabidze is unable to engage in intensive creative work due to illness, they request an increase in his personal pension.

Source: MGL, WUF №8.

1941

After February 14

Due to the inadequate evaluation of his poems in Besarion Zhghenti's Book "Modern Georgian Literature", Galaktion writes two versions of the poetic caricature "Twenty Years Later (An Innovative Poem)". One begins with the phrase: "To Georgian writers, twenty years later...", while the other starts with the words: "Congratulations to the writers, so you won't be disheartened...".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 26, 33; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 177, 188.

1941

After February 13

He encounters Besarion Zhghenti on the street and, in the presence of Irakli Abashidze, Shalva Dadiani, Ilo Mosashvili, and others who are there, tells him about the poetic caricature he wrote about his book. Besarion Zhghenti blushes.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 33; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 188.

Note: It refers to Besarion Zhghenti's newly released Book at the time, "Contemporary Georgian Literature".

1941

February 14

At the evening held at the artillery school, he reads "The moon of Mtatsminda" in Georgian and "Idea" in Russian, which makes a great impression.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 27; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 176.

1941

February 14

At an evening event held at the Artillery School, Besarion Zhghenti, in his speech, speaks more about Sandro Shanshiashvili than about Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 27; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 176.

1941

February 14

At the evening event held at the Artillery School, Sandro Shanshiashvili refuses to read his poem, expressing dissatisfaction that Galaktion Tabidze read his first.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 27; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 176.

1941

February 14

At the evening held at the Artillery School, Boris Serebryakov is asked from the stage to read a full translation or an excerpt of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "In honour of the Conference". He says he will read not a translation, but his original poem, and reads a translation of Galaktion's poem. Galaktion is left astonished.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 25; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 175.

1941

After February 14

He receives a fee of 1500 roubles from the newspaper Komunisti for the poem "In honour of the party member of the conference".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-143, 25; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 175.

1941

After February 14

He receives a fee of 250 roubles from the newspaper Sovetikan Hayastan for the poem "In honour of the party member of the conference".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 25; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 175.

1941

After February 14

He makes a note in his diary about the jubilee exhibition celebrating the 50th anniversary of his birth. Since the purpose of the exhibition is to present the poet's life and literary work, he thinks that an exhibition organizing committee should be formed, the members of which will be representatives of the government, writers' union, artists' association, people's commissariat of education, the committee should draw up a plan and select or build a suitable building for the exhibition.

Source: MGL, d-143, 26; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 176;

1941

After February 14

In the diary, he writes the addresses and phone numbers of former seminarians: Domenti Aronishidze, Tedo Begiashvili, Ilo Mosashvili, Vaso Gorgadze, Akaki Siradze, Genadi Mikheladze, Akaki Margiani, Lado Gegechkori, Galaktion Tabidze, Gogla Leonidze, Giorgi Kakhaia.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 26; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 176.

1941

After February 14

He writes two variants of the poem "For 20 years anniversary (innovative poem)".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 26; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 176.

1941

After February 15

Galaktion Tabidze's poem "New Tbilisi" is published in the artistic collection "XX Year" dedicated to the 20th anniversary of the Sovietization of Georgia.

Source: Collection "Year XX", Tbilisi, 1941, p. 17-28;

1941

February 16

Literaturuli Gazeti publishes Levan Asatiani's article "Plan of the Georgian Children's literature Publishing House", in which Galaktion Tabidze is mentioned among other authors.

Source: Л. Асатиани, "План Детиздата Грузии", newspaper "Литературная Газета", 1941, 16 February, №7, p. 6.

1941

Until February 17

He makes a note in his diary that he is interested in how the painted picture of Ivane Vepkhvadze and the portrait made for the exhibition by Davit Gvelesian will turn out to be; How is the case with the literature museum? He notes that photographs of all books are required; He learns that the poem is not being printed in "Beria's collection", but in another collection.

Source: MGL, d-143, 21; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 173;

1941

February 17

According to the decision of Irakli Abashidze, Niko Kiknadze, Aleksandre Cheishvili and Kale Bobokhidze, the publication of the fourth volume of Galaktion Tabidze's eight-volume works is not included in the plan of the State Publishing house.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 21; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 173.

1941

February 17

In his diary, he notes that the newspaper Literaturuli Gazeti printed a despicable letter of Beso Zhghenti.

Source: MGL, d-143, 21; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 173.

Note: The discussion likely pertains to the article "Innovative Characteristics of Georgian Soviet Literature", published on February 14.

1941

After February 17

He notes in his diary that 100 Georgian poets have written poems, articles or comments about him. Among them are writers and poets of the 19th century. These authors are named as: Akaki Tsereteli, Niko Marr, Davit Kldiashvili, Valerian Gunia, Dominika Eristavi, Shio Mghvimeli, Trifon Ramishvili, Zakaria Chichinadze, Ia Ekaladze, Narkan, Etim Gurji, Vasil Barnov, Ekaterine Gabashvili, Anastasia Eristavi-Khoshtaria, Alexandre Abasheli, Aleksandre Shanshiashvili, Giorgi Kuchishvili, and others.

Source: MGL, d-143, 22; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 173.

1941

After February 17

He writes an untitled poem "You sing about spring night...".

Source: MGL, d-143, 23; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 174.

Note: The version of the second stanza of the poem is "You should not sacrifice your boat...", and the third stanza is "The dawn is breaking in white. I'll close Dickens...".

1941

February 21

He gives a poem to the newspaper Komunisti for publication.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 44; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 184.

Note: The poem was supposed to be published in the February 25th issue, but it was not published, and we do not know what poem he sent.

1941

February 21

He participates in the literary evening held by the Central Committee and reads the poem “To Stalin from Georgia”. He thinks that he has read well, but Ioseb Grishashvili claims that the poem should be recited by heart.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 41, 44; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 187, 189;

1941

February 14-20

He recites the poem “To Stalin from Georgia” at a Writers’ Union evening event.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 41; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 187.

1941

February 21

He participates in the evening held in Plekhanov’s club, which is crowned with his triumph; He is asked to read “Mary”, “Blue Horses”, and other poems.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 44; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 189-190.

1941

February 23

At the evening of the Red Army House, Boris Serebryakov reads a translation of Galaktion’s poem.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 44; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 190;

Note: The name of the poem is not mentioned in the source.

1941

February 23

He participates in the evening organized by the Union of Writers.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 44; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 190;

1941

Until February 23

He sends a letter to Sergo Jinchvelashvili, inquiring about his recollections of Akaki Tsereteli and discussing the possibility of publishing the memories of the great poet’s journey to Mukhiani as a separate book.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-225; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 257-258.

Dating: The fact is mentioned in Sergo Jinchvelashvili’s letter dated February 23, 1941.

1941

February 23

In the letter “Georgian literature during 20 years” published in Literaturnaia Gazeta, Irakli Abashidze reviews the development of Georgian literature in the last twenty years and briefly characterizes the work of individual writers. In the article about Galaktion Tabidze, it is said that he is one of the greatest representatives of pre-revolutionary Georgian poetry, who became a singer of the victories of socialism from the very first days of the victory of the revolution and created a number of brilliant artistic creations.

Source: Ираклий Абашидзе, Грузинская литература за двадцать лет, “Литературная Газета”, 1941, №8, p. 3.

1941

After February 23

He receives a letter from Sergo Jinchvelashvili, who sends him his recollection about Patsia Galadava. Jinchvelashvili writes that his memory of Akaki Tsereteli has been submitted to Giorgi Leonidze at the Georgian Literature Museum. He believes that publishing the recollections of Akaki Tsereteli’s journey to Mukhiani as a separate Book is a good idea and could also bring in some income.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-225; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 257-258.

1941

After February 23

He sends a lengthy letter to the Secretary of the Georgian Writers’ Union, Irakli Abashidze, expressing dissatisfaction with the fact that, despite being awarded the title of National Poet and the Order of Lenin, he lacks a favourable working environment. He complains that critics evaluate his work with bias, publishing houses delay their work, and even the addressee himself referred to Galaktion as a pre-revolutionary poet in his article in Literaturnaya Gazeta, thereby disregarding his contributions during the Soviet period. He directly asks whether Abashidze acknowledges Galaktion as a Soviet poet. At the end of the letter, he requests Abashidze to demonstrate goodwill by supporting the idea of holding Galaktion’s jubilee evening at the Opera Theatre.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-82; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 86.

Dating: The article by Irakli Abashidze mentioned in the text was published on February 23, 1941.

1941

Until February 24

In the collection “Georgian Writers of Soviet Georgia”, he publishes the poem “My Native Land!”.

Source: Collection “Georgian Writers of Soviet Georgia”, 1941, p. 1. For clarification of information: N. Sikharulidze, “Researches”, Tbilisi, 2025, p. 474.

1941

February 24

In his diary, he writes that Alexandre Abasheli was defeated in the matter of printing authors according to the alphabet in the collections.

Source: MGL, d-143, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 160.

1941

February 24

He attends an evening dedicated to the 20th anniversary of Georgia's Sovietization held at the opera theatre.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-143, 44; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 190;

1941

February 24

In the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, an article by Irakli Abashidze titled "The Years of the Rise of Georgian Literature" is published, in which the author generally reviews the two decades of development of Georgian Soviet literature and how socialist construction is reflected in contemporary Georgian literature. Irakli Abashidze characterizes the works of representatives of Georgian poetry, prose, and criticism of that time. Regarding Galaktion, it is mentioned in the article that he is one of the greatest representatives of pre-revolutionary Georgian poetry, who, from the very first days of the victory of the proletarian revolution, became a singer of socialism.

Source: I. Abashidze, "The Years of the Rise of Georgian Literature", Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1941, №9 (February 24), p. 3.

1941

February 24

The newspaper Literaturuli Gazeti publishes the article "Georgian Writers - Soviet Georgia", which is dedicated to the artistic collection of the same title published by the "Federation", and it is said that it opens with the poem "My native land" by the people's poet Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: "Georgian Writers - Soviet Georgia", Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1941, №9 (168), p. 5.

1941

February 24

In the article "Writing of the Heroic Era", Beso Zhghenti quotes from Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Let us stand where there is a storm..." and adds that these words of the poet testify to the revival of the best traditions of Georgian writing in the Soviet era.

Source: Beso Zhghenti, "Writing of the Heroic Era", Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1941, №9 (168), p. 5.

1941

February 24

The article "Georgian Book" reviews the literature published in the Georgian language since the establishment of the Soviet government and states that the books of Galaktion Tabidze were published 15 times and their total circulation is 43,300 copies.

Source: “Georgian Book”, Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1941, №9 (168), p. 6.

1941

February 25

The newspaper Zarya Vostoka prints an excerpt translated by Boris Serebryakov from Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “My native land” under the title (“Stalin is with us”).

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-143, 44; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 190; “С нами Сталин”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, February 25, 1941, №47 (5273), p. 7.

1941

February 25

The newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes A. Eliadze’s article “Stalin’s Image in Georgian Literature”. The author notes that in his poems dedicated to Stalin, the People’s Poet of Georgia - Galaktion Tabidze conveys the darkness of the past life, which the working people, under the leadership of Stalin, defeated and created a new, happy life.

Source: А. Елиадзе, “Образ Сталина в грузинской литературе”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, February 25, 1941, №47 (5273), p. 7.

Note: Several articles have been published under these initials and surname in the newspapers Zarya Vostoka and Komunisti, but the first name is not mentioned anywhere.

1941

February 25

The newspaper Pravda publishes Vladimir Derzhavin’s translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “My native land”.

Source: “Страна родная моя”, newspaper “Правда”, February 25, 1941, №55 (8463), p. 4.

1941

February 25

Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Labor, closely related to science” is published in the newspaper Tbilisis Universiteti.

Source: Newspaper Tbilisis Universiteti, Tbilisi, February 25, 1941, p. 1.

1941

February 25

The newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi publishes the poem “Revolutionary Georgia”.

Source: M. Alavidze, Galaktion’s Life and Poetry, magazine Gantiadi, 1992, № 11-12, p. 123; newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi, 1941, №47.

1941

February 25

The February 25 issue of the Ukrainian newspaper Ukrainskiy Komsomolets published Galaktion’s poem “My native land” translated by Mykola Nachibin.

Source: MGL, d-145, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 236.

1941

After February 25

He writes a plan for a poem whose main characters are Rati and Eva.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-511, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 78-79.

Note: The outline of the work corresponds to the extensive manuscript version of the poem "Amirani", which Galaktion did not publish. In the manuscript, the work was titled "The Wind of the Caucasus".

1941

February 27

He attends the first session held in connection with the establishment of the Georgian SSR Academy of Sciences.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 192.

Dating: Session was opened on 27 February 1941.

1941

February 28

He goes to the savings bank and, according to the existing rules, he brings the record books of the Order of Lenin for exchange.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 220.

1941

February

The poem "We" is published in the magazine Oktombreli.

Source: magazine Oktombreli, 1941, №2, p. 1.

1941

Until March

He writes a poem titled "Look at the Mountains!".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №46; 48; 3555; 2024; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 56.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "Spring" and untitled ("Here, in the Mist, It Melts...").

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

March

1941

Until March 1

Giorgi Svanidze writes music for Galaktion Tabidze's poem translated into Russian "To the liberated brothers of Western Ukraine and Belarus".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 190;

Note: The Russian title of the text is: "Освобожденным братьям Западной Украины и Белоруссии".

1941

March 1

In his diary, he makes an entry titled "About Music". He reviews the issue of accent placement in the songs composed by Dimitri Arakishvili and Tamar Shaverdashvili based on his poems "Poetry Above All" and "Shoulder to Shoulder". He praises both songs, but thinks that it would be good to match the musical stress with the Georgian pronunciation stress, so it is necessary to rewrite the lyrics, which should match the music. He notes that he has not yet heard Valerian Tsagareishvili's "My native land", which Ivane Gokieli liked a lot. He writes that these three pieces should be given in revised form to the radio choir to be sung at his big evening. They tell him that there are two more musical performances of Dimitri Arakishvili based on his poems.

Source: MGL, d-144, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 190-191.

1941

March 1

He plans to promote the creation of songs based on his own poems. It means those poems, on which songs have already been composed: Valerian Tsagareishvili's "My Native Land", Tamar Shaverdashvili's "Shoulder to shoulder", Dimitri Arakishvili's "Poetry First".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-126; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 604.

1941

March 2

He talks on the phone to Dr. Giorgi Natadze, whose letter he read in the newspaper, and anonymously asks about vitamin C substitute. The professor recommends the fruit of dog-rose, which should be boiled and taken before dinner.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 191-192.

Note: Giorgi Natadze is mentioned in the source by his surname and title - professor.

1941

March 2

He goes to an exhibition of folk art and meets Shalva Maradashvili, a young artist from the village of Tkviaveli, who gives him his huge stone work "Kakheti" and makes him very happy. The artist promises to make exhibits for the poet's exhibition.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 192.

1941

March 2

Ivane Vepkhvadze's etude is exhibited in the National Gallery, which makes him very happy.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 192.

1941

March 2

In the evening, he receives a new issue of the newspaper Pravda, in which the translation of his poem "My native land" by Vladimir Derzhavin is printed, which makes him happy.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 192.

1941

March 2

In the diary, he notes the important days of March: March 8 - Women's Day, March 14 - the day of Karl Marx's death (1883), and March 18 - Commune and Remedasi Day.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 192.

1941

Until March 3

While developing the publishing plan for 1941 in the state publishing house, Irakli Abashidze says that Galaktion Tabidze should rest a little.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 195.

1941

March 3

In his diary, he notes a remark by Irakli Abashidze during the drafting of the 1941 publishing plan at the State Publishing House, stating that Galaktion Tabidze needs to take a break. He thinks that Irakli Abashidze himself should rest, because his secretaryship in the Union of Writers is just self-promotion and no one knows how the affairs of the Union will go. He wants him not to complicate the relationship and convince him that he is on his side. He points out that he has to protect himself because his livelihood is being taken away. He considers it terrible that despite his constant work, he cannot get out of extreme poverty, walking in the same streets for years, not having a clean shirt, losing self-respect and hiding from people. He writes that he is not an envious and evil person by nature, but poverty can make him such a man. He thinks that society is making every effort to shake him down from his height and make him disfigured. He concludes that it is necessary to fight for existence and invokes Rustaveli's phrase: "The best thing in need is mind!".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 195.

1941

March 3

He goes to Tbilisi State University, where the editor-in-chief of the university newspaper - Varlam Mikadze, presents him with the issue dedicated to the 20th anniversary of the Sovietization of Georgia "Tbilisi State University named after Stalin". He feels immense joy that his poem "Labor, Closely Linked with Science" is printed with a facsimile on the very first page of a beautifully designed colour newspaper of rare elegance. He thinks that the university supports him.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 192.

1941

March 3

He meets Simon Kaukhchishvili, Mose Gogiberidze and Konstantine Kapaneli at Tbilisi State University. Simon Kaukhchishvili speaks with admiration about the sessions of the Academy and the reports made there. Galaktion regrets not attending the others besides the first session.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 192.

1941

March 3

At the Writers' Union, he meets Viktor Goltsev, who informs him that he is preparing a major article about him for the Moscow magazine Novy Mir. Goltsev requests his poems about poetry to be translated and used in the article..

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 192.

1941

March 3

In his diary, he writes that the anthology of Georgian poetry, which was to be published in Moscow, contains numerous errors, causing significant confusion. Galaktion believes that Viktor Goltsev's situation is not looking good.

Source: MGL, d-144, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 192.

Note: Viktor Goltsev is mentioned in the source by his first name and patronymic – Viktor Viktorovich.

1941

March 3

Simon Chikovani and Giorgi Katchakhidze agree to organize the evening of Galaktion Tabidze, and the poet thinks whether it is worth holding or not.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 192.

1941

March 3

Together with other Georgian writers and the Ukrainian delegation, he goes to the Mtatsminda Pantheon to Akaki Tsereteli's grave. Ukrainians decorate the poet's coffin with flowers and take a photo.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 193.

1941

March 3

While at the grave of Akaki Tsereteli with the Ukrainian delegation, Pavlo Tychyna promises to send his books with inscriptions. He and Mykola Bazhan are invited to Ukraine. Tychyna notes that he is no longer in financial trouble, as he receives the Academy membership fee and the royalties of the books that are published regularly.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 193.

1941

March 3

In his diary, he notes that Irakli Abashidze is behaving suspiciously and considers having a serious conversation with him about it. Galaktion links the unfavourable conditions created for his literary work and the negative attitude towards him directly to Abashidze. He believes that in Abashidze's article "A Great and Significant Achievement" published in Zarya Vostoka, the strengths of Alio Mashashvili, Giorgi Leonidze, and Ilo Mosashvili are emphasized, while Galaktion is overshadowed and merely referred to as one of the best pre-revolutionary poets. He notes that the secretary of the Writers' Union must honestly answer whether he recognizes Galaktion's contributions to the public, whether he deserves the title of National Poet and the Lenin Order. He writes that he needs a platform for his work and a source of livelihood, and that Abashidze should support him in a comradely manner. He expresses a desire for his evening event to be organized at the State Opera Theatre, as poets need a broad audience. He believes that the theatre's administration will not obstruct this and that Abashidze must also support it.

Source: MGL, d-144, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 193-194.

1941

March 3

The newspaper Stalinets of Yerevan prints the translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Sonnet" by Alexander Stephanov.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 194.

1941

March 3

He makes a note in his diary that “The Wind of the great Caucasus” can be printed as separate poems in seven periodicals and divides the material as follows: “New Mountains” in Saliteraturo Gazeti, “Big Cities” in the newspaper Komunisti, “Compiegne Forest” in the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, “War” in the magazines Remedasi and Mnatobi, in the magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba - “Paris”. He notes the books of the State Publishing House, Children’s Literature Publishing House, “Zarya Vostoka” and “Federation”; He writes down the theme of the poems: about a woman - “A woman fought on the barricades”, “Italian woman”, “Eve”, “8 March ever”; About defence and the Red Army, industry, collectivization, socialist construction and May Day. He mentions that he has written many poems about Stalin. He considers it necessary to publish books of painters, artists and writers in high quality. Finally, he summarizes that it is necessary to “take over” seven periodical organs, publish three books and organize an evening in the Opera House.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 194.

1941

March 4

Irakli Abashidze presents a Book with the inscription: “To the people’s poet of Georgia, beloved Galaktion, the creator of precious and forever unforgettable books, I dedicate this little work of mine with deep respect”.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 195.

Note: “4. IV” is written by mistake instead of “4. III”.

1941

March 4

The newspaper Zarya Vostoka published on March 3 a photo of Ukrainian and Georgian writers at Akaki Tsereteli’s grave: Andrey Malyshko, Mykola Bazhan, Viktor Goltsev, Alexander Korneichuk, Pavlo Tychyna, Simon Chikovani, Levan Asatiani, Galaktion Tabidze and Irakli Abashidze.

Source: Newspaper “Заря Востока”, March 4, 1941, №53 (5279), p. 2.

1941

March 4

Alexandre Abasheli suggests that he prepare his poems for publication as a Book by the publishing house Zarya Vostoka. Galaktion tries to find out whether it will be possible to use his old translations. He plans to submit a proposal but fears that reviewing it might take too long and that the signing of the contract could be delayed.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 197.

Note: It is about the book: Галактион Табидзе, "Страна моя родная": Стихи, Пер. с груз., Тб., Заря Востока, 1942.

1941

March 4

In his diary, he reviews an article by Georgia's Komsomol secretary, Alio Mirtskhulava, titled "Stalin's Generation" (Сталинское племя), published in the Yerevan newspaper Stalineli. The article claims that Georgia's Komsomol has nurtured many outstanding poets, including the beloved and twice-decorated poet Alio Mashashvili. Galaktion laughs at Mirtskhulava's assessment, noting that this supposedly beloved poet was unanimously criticized by the Writers' Union and negatively evaluated by Irakli Abashidze at a congress. According to Galaktion, Mashashvili has not written a single poem in proper Georgian, steals moods from others' poems, engages solely in self-promotion, seeks to exploit others for his benefit, and is despised by writers. Galaktion recalls how Alio Mirtskhulava tried to persuade Konstantine Kapaneli to write an article about him in exchange for a good fee. He also mentions that the Central Committee will need to put in significant effort to address the flaws in the anthology of Georgian poetry translated into Russian, compiled by Mirtskhulava and Viktor Goltsev. What especially outrages Galaktion is what Mashashvili had a Komsomol member write in a Russian newspaper. The young person expressed joy at visiting the homeland of Rustaveli and Mashashvili. Galaktion believes that such ambitious individuals hinder the proper development of literature.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 195-197.

1941

March 6

He is talking on the phone with the second secretary of the Central Committee of Georgia - Ilia Tavadze. He informs that recently he has been working hard like all Soviet citizens, which is confirmed by his poems published in many newspapers. He considers writing to be his primary duty, but the Union of Writers and publishing houses do not cheer him up accordingly. He constantly works in the interests of Soviet culture and wants his creativity to be appreciated. Galaktion asks for approval and support to organize a large-scale literary evening at the State Opera House. It is possible that the evening will improve his material condition, on which his future work depends. Ilia Tavadze answers that Irakli Abashidze has already talked about this the day before, he is going to Sagarejo for a day and upon his return he will inform about his decision.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 4-5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 197.

1941

March 6

In the Union of Writers, Irakli Abashidze informs that he has given Ilia Tavadze his request to arrange an evening at the Opera Theatre. Tavadze requested that the Union of Writers write to him officially about this. They have indeed sent an official letter and are waiting for a decision. Galaktion Tabidze tells him that he himself talked to Ilia Tavadze. Irakli Abashidze is interested in whether this was a face-to-face meeting. Galaktion replies that he spoke on the phone.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 197-198.

1941

March 6

In the office of the Writers' Union, he sees the text of the Writers' Union's appeal to Ilia Tavadze about organizing his evening, which is very short and only mentions that Galaktion Tabidze requests permission to hold a paid literary evening at the Opera Theatre. He thinks that he will be turned down, but he does not know in what form.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198.

1941

March 7

The newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo publishes the article "Writers in Artillery School", in which it is stated that after the main speaker, Besarion Zhghenti, the people's poet Galaktion Tabidze read his poems in Georgian and Russian languages. Among the speakers are: Aleksandre Shanshiashvili, Rodion Korkia and Boris Serebryakov, who read the translations of Galaktion Tabidze and Aleksandre Shanshiashvili's poems.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, March 7, 1941, №10, p. 4.

1941

Until March 9

He learns that the artist Boris Semyonov has created a very interesting portrait of him from memory.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198;

1941

March 9

In his diary, he writes extensively about the collection of poems "Poets of Soviet Georgia" translated by Boris Serebryakov. He notes that six poems in the Book are by the editor - Valerian Gaprindashvili, four each - by Alio Mashashvili and Konstantine Tchichinadze, three each - by Galaktion Tabidze, Alexandre Abasheli, Shalva Apkhaidze, Ioseb Grishashvili, Giorgi Leonidze, etc. He thinks that this Book will not make an impression on modern Georgian poetry and the title is also conditional. He suspects that some interested person worked on the Book with or without Valerian Gaprindashvili. He writes that placing the poets alphabetically darkens the state of modern poetry, that printing only one poem of Giorgi Kuchishvili is insulting, and opening the Book “Paladauri” with the poem of Alexandre Abasheli is unthinkable. He considers it a disadvantage that “Stalin” is only the title of Davit Gachechiladze’s poem. He thinks that Alexandre Abasheli had a bad influence on Boris Serebryakov. He wants not to appear as the initiator of the printing of poems in the alphabet himself, but he should not be allowed to do so. He notes that the editorial office of “Zarya Vostoka” was used against him by Alexandre Abasheli. With the poem “Shalva Dadiani” he tries to put the writer forward, but he himself believes that Shalva Dadiani was not worthy of dedicating the poem and placing it in the centre of the book. Alexandre Abasheli copes with the alphabet and his accomplices are Konstantine Tchichinadze, Boris Serebryakov, Konstantine Gamsakhurdia, Valerian Gaprindashvili, Viktor Gabeskiria, Geronti Kikodze, Pavle Ingorokva and Vano Tsulukidze. He notes that this very weak front gets away with cunning, however, these writers often go to Zarya Vostoka and have a firm foothold in the Saliteruro Gazeti.

Source: MGL, d-144, 5-6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198-198.

Note: Konstantine Chichinadze, Boris Serebryakov, Konstantine Gamsakhurdia, Valerian Gaprindashvili, Victor Gabeskiria, Geronti Kikodze, Pavle Ingorokva and Vano Tsulukidze are mentioned in the source by their last names.

1941

March 9

He does not get an answer from Ilia Tavadze about arranging the evening in the opera theatre and writes about it in his diary.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198.

1941

March 9

He makes a note in his diary that there is complete indifference to everything in the Union of Writers, they got rid of the events dedicated to the 20th anniversary of the Sovietization of Georgia and calmed down. Alio Mashashvili was nicknamed “Zenitka” because of his nose.

Source: MGL, d-144, 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198.

1941

March 11

The first and second books of the eighth volume of the sixteen-volume work of Alexander Pushkin, published in Russian by the Academy of Sciences of the Soviet Union, are sent to his house.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 200.

1941

Until March 12

He spends several tens of thousands of roubles of the royalties and pension received over two years on his second wife, Olga Darius, and her niece, Laine Bartelis.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 201.

1941

March 12 or earlier

He is asked to provide a poem for the magazine Oktombreli in 10 days.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 201;

1941

March 12

He does not receive a response from Ilia Tavadze regarding the organization of the evening at the opera theatre and writes about it in his diary.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 199.

1941

March 12

He writes in his diary that Literaturuli Sakartvelo published the Chronology "Writers in the Artillery School", in which, among others, his participation is mentioned. He writes his impressions about the publications of this issue. He notes that in Levan Asatiani's article, which is printed under the pseudonym "Reader", Mykola Bazhani is highly praised. He likes Konstantine Gamsakhurdia's article "Georgian SSR Academy" and Aleksandre Baramidze's article "Academician Korneli Kekelidze". He notes that in Makvala Mrevlishvili's poem "Georgian Academy" his old rhyme from the poem "Gothier" - "აკადემიის - ნაკადემიის!" ("Academy - streams!") is used.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 200.

Note: Instead of Literaturuli Sakartvelo its old name – Saliteraturo Gazeti is written in the diary. Konstantine Gamsakhurdia, Mikola Bazhani and Aleksandre Baramidze are mentioned in the source by their last names, but the identity of the pseudonymous "reader" is not mentioned.

1941

March 12

In his diary, he makes excerpts from the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo about preparations for the anniversary days dedicated to the 100th anniversary of the death of Mikhail Lermontov and adds his comments. He notes that the publishing house "Federation" publishes Konstantine Chichinadze's translation "Demon" and Geronti Kikodze's translation "Heroes of our time". He is going to ask Geronti if they are "heroes" or "hero" so that nobody blames him. Tbilisi University is publishing a collection of Lermontov's selected poems and narratives, which, according to Galaktion, are translated by weak translators – Mikheil Pataridze, Kolau Nadiradze, Davit Gachechiladze, and Babilina. Konstantine Chichinadze does not want to be involved in this project, as his own translation is being published separately. The biography is being written by Levan Asatiani, while the collection is being prepared by Davit Kipshidze, Giorgi Leonidze, and Simon Janashia. Irakli Abashidze and Giorgi Leonidze organize an exhibition in the literary museum, the university holds a scientific session, the film studio releases a short film “Lermontov in Georgia” scripted by Giorgi Leonidze, a bust of the poet is erected in Tbilisi and memorial plaques are made on houses.

Source: MGL, d-144, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 200.

Note: Konstantine Chichinadze, Giorgi Leonidze, Irakli Abashidze, Simon Janashia are mentioned in the source by their last names, Mikel Pataridze, Kolau Nadiradze and Babilina Khositashvili - by their first names, Davit Gachechiladze and Davit Kipshidze - by their initials and surnames.

1941

March 12

He goes to the Philharmonic, where the issue of holding his evening is decided and the program is planned for March 14.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 200.

1941

March 12

He goes to the Composers’ Union to select lyrics for music. He thinks that it would be good to sing the following poems: “Everyone has something to remember”, “Legions are coming”, “Here Tsinamdzghvriant-kari”, “I remember my youth”, “Hit the pickaxe”, “And reeds where whistling”, “Larix sibirica”, “From the tale of the moon”, “Ars longa vita brevis”, “Be the first among equals”, “The progress of the motherland is surprising”, “Rejoice, fireplace”, “The wind blows from Tskaltubo to Kutaisi”, “I am someone else”, “Above the hills”, “Lyre, many good times”, “Limitless, unaccountable”.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 200.

1941

March 12

Galaktion Tabidze’s second wife, Olgha Darius, tells artist Revaz Revazishvili over the phone that she is in a very poor situation and is looking for a job. She also informs that her daughter, Laine Bartelis, who is suffering from tuberculosis, will arrive soon and is going to move in with her. Revaz Revazishvili promises a job. Olga also tells Galaktion that she is leaving him and asks for money, because she thinks that all the royalties belong to her. Galaktion thinks that Olga has sensed a crisis approaching and flees, terrorizing him. According to the poet, she behaves dishonourably, and Galaktion has served her with dedication and is still ready to help.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 6-7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 200-201.

Note: Olga Darius is mentioned in the source by first name and patronymic, Revaz Revazishvili - by last name, Laine Bartelis by first name.

1941

March 12

He thinks that he will be financially helped by the royalties that he can take for the collection of the Union of Writers "Motherland", because he has published two poems in it: "Our army is strong, but with a different strength" and "All Red Army men stand like a lion". In connection with this collection, he also thinks about the arrangement of the material in it according to the principle of alphabetical order of the surnames of the authors, which he considers to be completely pointless.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 201.

1941

March 12

He calls the editorial office of the newspaper Komunisti about the royalty and they promise to pay it on March 18.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 201.

1941

March 12

He has 400 roubles in the savings bank, 300 roubles in pension and 300 roubles in his hand. He thinks that he will not be able to start a business with this amount, he will not be able to hold an evening. Royalties from the collection "Motherland", magazines - Mnatobi and Oktombreli are also suitable. Even 2000 roubles is not enough, Laine Bartelis needs 3000 roubles. He has unpaid rent and electricity for the apartment and needs to support himself.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 201.

1941

March 12

He plans to compile a Book called "Art Poetique" in which he will include all the poems on the poetic art and will have as a leading line the lines from the first Book printed in 1914: "Who has seen the black book, the Book with red letters, performed with letters written in drops of blood, written with hope?" The publication will include the following poems: "In battle I am looking for self-forgetfulness", "Poetry", "Music is beauty", "That distant spring", "Parallel", "The moon of Mtatsminda", "And I will go in the wind like Mozart", "To Gaultier", "Flags quickly"; Fragments from the books "Pacifism", "Epoch", "Revolutionary Georgia", "Akaki Tsereteli", "Wind of the Great Caucasus”, from the Book of 1927, from volumes I, II and III of works. Thinking of printing Book covers and short forewords. The main idea will not be art for art’s sake, but experienced and sincere art for people - “the poet is a fighter, a blacksmith of a new country, standing in the front in fierce battles, like a whitewashed wall”.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 201-202.

1941

March 12

Olga Darius declares that she will not leave him even for a second to save him, she argues that he follows her whenever she leaves the house and makes her waste her time. She tries to exasperate, cries and threatens to leave him because she is not appreciated, asks for money. Galaktion thinks that she has a connection with the poet’s opponents and therefore encourages provocations, spreads rumours that he has started drinking. Because of this gossip, the Central Committee might send the poet for treatment.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 202.

1941

March 12

He meets Irakli Abashidze in the Union of Writers and explains to him that the answer about holding an evening in the opera theatre cannot be delayed so much, because he has no means of livelihood and his books have been excluded from the publishing plan. Irakli Abashidze is surprised with Polikarpe Kakabadze, who is nearby, as if he is not involved in anything. Polikarpe tells him that a writer should have at least 100 roubles a month, regardless of whether he writes something or not, and that this is how he had things done in the magazine Mnatobi.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203.

1941

March 12

He meets Alka Sulava, Lavrosi Dzidziguri, Vano Berikatsishvili, and Gobron Agareli in the Union of Writers. They talk about literary influences. Galaktion has an impression that the meeting was planned rather than coincidental.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203.

Note: Alka Sulava, Lavrosi Dzidziguri, Vano Berikatsishvili are mentioned in the source by their surnames, Gobron Tsitskishvili - by a pseudonym.

1941

March 12

In the evening, he has a heated argument with Olgha Darius, unable to tolerate the situation any longer. This woman constantly tries to extort money from him, draining him of his last reserves of strength.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203.

1941

March 13

His brother, Abesalom Tabidze, brings his son Vasil Tabidze, who has a damaged eye from a handgun, to Tbilisi. The patient is placed in the railway hospital. Abesalom returns to the village and his wife Tatiana Tsintsadze stays with her son in Tbilisi.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203.

Note: Abesalom and Vasil Tabidze and Tatiana Tsintsadze are mentioned by name in the source.

1941

March 13 or later

Galaktion's nephew, Vasil Tabidze, is in the hospital due to an eye injury. The poet who came to see him is interested in the news of the village and asks his nephew if the mulberry tree planted on his mother's grave is still standing. And Vasiko replies that the tree grew too big, overshadowed everything around it, and was cut down.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 216-217.

1941

March 14

Shalva Radiani's article "Alexandre Abasheli" is published in the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo. The author notes that Alexandre Abasheli is a poet of "opinion" and thus differs from Galaktion Tabidze and Ioseb Grishashvili, whose works are dominated by immediacy, feelings and lyricism.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, March 14, 1941, №11, p. 3.

1941

After March 14

He receives a letter sent from exile by Olya Okujava. The sender writes that the extraordinary-coloured snow of that day reminded her of Galaktion's words about "violet snow". She longs for the Georgian spring and expresses concern over not receiving letters from Galaktion, wondering if her own letters ever reach the recipient. She shares that she is reading Maxim Gorky's novel "In the World" and Stefan Zweig's novels "Romain Rolland" and "Marceline Valmore". She asks him to take care of his health.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-401; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 242-243.

1941

March 15

A meeting of Galaktion Tabidze with students of the third school named after Ilia Chavchavadze is being held. He is named an honorary pioneer and is given flowers. Students read poems, sing, and do physical exercises. He notes that it was a rare evening and a student, Lia Kaishauri, has read his poem “Prologue of 100 Poems” with great skill.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203.

Note: In the diary, the title of the poem is incorrectly written as “Prologue of Five Hundred Poems”.

1941

March 15

He still does not get an answer from the Secretary of the Central Committee, Ilia Tavadze, about the arrangement of the evening in the opera theatre. He comes to the conclusion that they are not allowed to hold the evening and should not pester them anymore.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203.

1941

March 15

He makes a note in his diary that Shalva Radiani’s article on Alexandre Abasheli in the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo is as he deserves, he is worth neither praise nor reproach. But it is unclear to him why the author of the article mentions Galaktion next to Ioseb Grishashvili. He thinks that the author wants them to fight, and Shalva Radiani gradually respects him less.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203.

Note: The source mistakenly refers to the newspaper’s earlier name as Saliteruro Gazeti.

1941

March 16

He holds a meeting with the pioneers at Tbilisi’s Ilya Chavchavadze Third School. The students recite the poet’s verses, while Galaktion himself reads an excerpt from the poem “Revolutionary Georgia”. At the end of the event, the pioneers present the poet with a bouquet.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-611, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 65.

1941

March 17

He writes a poem “The Paris Commune”.

Source: Autograph: MGL, №23356; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 57.

1941

March 17

He still does not get an answer from Ilia Tavadze about arranging an evening at the opera theatre and writes about it in his diary.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 204.

1941

March 17

Olgha Darius poisons herself but survives.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 204.

1941

March 17

He writes in his diary that Shalva Radiani's article "Alexandre Abasheli", published in the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, is nonsense. He then lists, point by point, the recent actions directed against him: 1. The publication of the third volume of his works was delayed due to the intervention of Alio Mashashvili and Ilia Tavadze. 2. The publication of the fourth volume was not included in the plan thanks to Alio Mashashvili. 3. "The wind of the Great Caucasus" was not released. 4. Alexandre Abasheli, with the support of his allies, initiated the inclusion of authors in collections based on alphabetical order. 5. Government prizes were distributed to the opponents of Galaktion on the initiative of Ilia Tavadze. 6. Irakli Abashidze was not allowed to hold his evening at the opera. He considers this a big secret, because at home they always assured him that Irakli Abashidze is his enemy.

Source: MGL, d-144, 8-9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 204.

Note: First of all, government awards imply the Stalin award, which was established in 1941 and received by Giorgi Leonidze and Leo Kiacheli.

1941

After March 17

He brings the poem "The Paris Commune" to the editorial office of the newspaper Komunisti for publication, but they refuse to print the poem on the grounds that the entire issue of the newspaper is devoted to Giorgi Dimitrov's letter.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-91, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 18; Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 204;

Note: Giorgi Dimitrov is mentioned by his last name in the source.

1941

After March 17

In notebook, he makes a note under the title “Defeats”, in which he lists the recent failures he has suffered. He notes that he was unable to secure approval for holding an evening event at the Opera and Ballet Theatre, that others received the prizes, that the editorial board of the newspaper Komunisti refused to publish his poem “The Paris Commune”, and that other authors’ evenings were being held at the Writers’ Union, among other setbacks.

Source: MGL, d-91, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 18;

1941

March 18

He makes a note in his diary that since morning he has been thinking about the idea expressed in the poem “Full walnuts”. The wind blows around the hundred-year-old walnut tree, the past is replaced by the future, and the sound of the tree is like the sound of the Black Sea. The walnut tree has turned into a harp, and the giggling, sun-drenched child near it is not worried at all. He notes that the idea of the poem is to express perfection and fruitfulness, which follows the vigour of new life. Noise here equates to music, and in this respect the poem continues the “music and beauty” line he established in poetry. The music expands and moves into a poem, then develops into a novel, a play, a poem, and ends with the basic idea that modernity needs fullness. He writes that poetry should sound like the sound of the Black Sea, the Black Sea and the walnut tree are Georgian zest and should not be confused with other. He thinks that the titles of the poems of his Book published in 1927 are proof of this. “Blue horses”, “The moon of Mtatsminda”, “I remember my childhood” and other poems echo the line “As the noise of our Black Sea”. He recalls that the artist Davit Gvelesiani, who did not know Georgian well, was fascinated by the verse “Full walnuts” in which the noise of the walnut tree is compared to the noise of the Black Sea, because he heard a new sound. Varla Makharoblidze painted “Blue Horses” against the background of mountains and the picture was displayed in the teacher’s house. He reflects that the novelty and innovation in the path modern poetry is taking differ from the styles of Ilia Chavchavadze, Akaki Tsereteli, Vazha-Pshavela, Rapiel Eristavi, Bachana, and Parmen Tsakheli, and that this divergence requires thorough explanation and evaluation. He observes that elements of his poem “Ripe Walnuts” have influenced the poetry of Makvala Mrevlishvili, Giorgi Leonidze, Simon Chikovani, and Alio Mashashvili, the prose of Leo Kiacheli and Nikoloz Lortkipanidze, as well as the criticism of Geronti Kikodze and Pavle Ingorokva.

Source: MGL, d-144, 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 205-206.

Note: In the source, persons are mentioned by their last names.

1941

After March 18

The Book “Essays” by Simon Khundadze is published, which includes a work by the author on Galaktion’s creativity that was published in 1933.

Source: S. Khundadze, “Essays”, 1941, p. 352-369.

Dating: The Book was signed for publication on March 18, 1941.

1941

March 19

In the newspaper Komunisti, he reads the resolution of the Council of People's Commissars of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics regarding the allocation of Stalinist prizes for remarkable works in the field of literature and learns that the prizes were awarded to Leo Kiacheli for his novel "Gvadi Bigva" and Giorgi Leonidze for his poem "Childhood of a Leader". He thinks that the opinion of the commission and the public was divided at the time when unworthy candidates were presented. According to the people, the members of the commission presented themselves for the award, but the attitude of the government turned out to be different, the government just thanked the commission; According to people, the commission referred to Alexei Tolstoy with irony, but in the end he appeared to be on the list of prize winners, according to people, the members of the commission said that they had not even read Leonidze's poem, but in the end he also received the prize. While making this note, the architect Vano Piolia enters the room, and the poet is forced to stop writing.

Source: MGL, d-144, 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 206-207.

Note: Alexei Tolstoy and Giorgi Leonidze are mentioned in the source by their surnames.

1941

March 19

While traveling on a trolleybus, he hears the conversation of two women who say that the Stalinist prize of 10,000 roubles should not have been given to Leo Kiacheli, but to the one who read his "Gvadi Bigva" to the end. One of the women said, that Kiacheli was saying that the jury would not even read his novel, but the central committee would present it and give him a prize. According to Galaktion, if the country had not been covered with straw, such things would not have happened.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 208.

1941

March 20 or earlier

He is negotiating with the magazine Remedasi regarding the publication of the poem.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 208.

Note: Probably, it should have been about the poem "May 1".

1941

March 20

He talks to Irakli Abashidze on the phone and learns that the secretary of the Central Committee, Iliia Tavadze, is against celebrating the 50th anniversary of the birth of Galaktion Tabidze in the opera theatre, but he agrees to publish a collection for him in the Publishing House "Federation". When Galaktion asks Abashidze why Tavadze refuses his anniversary, he does not answer.

Source: MGL, d-144, 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 207.

Note: Galaktion jubilee was not held until 1943.

1941

March 20

Passing by the trolleybus in front of the opera house, he again feels the resentment of not being allowed to hold an evening there. He thinks that the policy of appeasement is starting again, because they are afraid of a big public demonstration. He writes in his diary that he would have preferred to refuse to hold the evening from the beginning and not wait for so long in vain.

Source: MGL, d-144, 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 207.

1941

March 20

Alexandre Abasheli informs that he is waiting for the Central Committee to approve the plan of the Book of Russian translations of Galaktion Tabidze's poems "My Native Land" to be published in Zarya Vostoka in about 10 days and promises to sign a contract with him as soon as it is approved.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 208.

Note: The Book was published in 1942.

1941

March 20

Razhden Gvetadze informs that in 10 days he is waiting for the Central Committee to approve the plan of the Book of Russian translations of Galaktion Tabidze's poems "My Native Land" to be published in "Federation" and promises to sign a contract with him as soon as it is approved.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 208.

Note: The Book was published in 1942. Razhden Gvetadze is mentioned in the source by his last name.

1941

March 20

Konstantine Chanturishvili informs that in 10 days he is waiting for the approval of the plan of Galaktion Tabidze's Book "On the Art of Poetry" published by the Children's Literature Publishing House from the Central Committee and promises to sign the documents soon.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 208

Note: The Book was not published, and Konstantine Chanturishvili is referred to by his surname in the source.

1941

March 20

His sister-in-law - Tatyana Tsintsadze and nephew - Vasil Tabidze, who has had health problems, are returning to Samtredia from Tbilisi. Laine Bartelis, foster daughter of Galaktion, feels also much better.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 208.

Note: Tatiana Tsintsadze, Vasil Tabidze and Laine Bartelis are mentioned by name in the source.

1941

March 12, 20

He receives a lifetime passport.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 208; Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203;

1941

March 20

He writes in his diary that he is doing his job, but Stalin prizes are given to others - Giorgi Leonidze and Leo Kiacheli. He remarks that the country is metaphorically "covered with straw" and that this cannot continue. Therefore, he hopes that the situation will change.

Source: MGL, d-144, 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 208.

1941

March 21

He makes a note in his diary about the Ilya Selvinsky's evening to be held in the Palace of Writers today. He mentions that on the day of Sovietization of Georgia, he met him in the opera theatre and left an impression of a person full of conceit. Boris Brik wrote about Selvinsky that during the revolutionary speeches he was resting in the house of Crimean writers, and, as a result, his position is destabilized. He thinks that it is easy to understand according to one of his books and the evaluation of the newspaper Pravda. He quotes from a poem written by Selvinsky on the death of Vladimir Mayakovsky and concludes that this is the whole art of the author's poetry, and Galaktion suggests that the author will read his tragedy "Abdallah's Son, Babek" with this pathos.

Source: MGL, d-144, 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 208-210.

1941

March 21

He attends Ilia Selvinsky's evening in the Palace of Writers. The writer reads his new tragedy "Babek, son of Abdallah". According to Galaktion Tabidze, the work is weak, but the speakers: Besarion Zhghenti, Shalva Soslani, Simon Chikovani and Giorgi Tsagareli praise it very much. Only Kolau Cherniavsky speaks appropriately and honestly. In his final speech, Ilia Selvinsky himself mocks their eulogies and notes that Georgians know how to praise each other endlessly at the table. Selvinsky considers himself an innovator, whose productions require a new theatre and actors. Galaktion is surprised to discover that Simon Chikovani barely speaks Russian. Ioseb Imedashvili tells Galaktion that it was a great honour for him to attend this evening, and the poet himself thinks that he did the right thing by not giving a speech at the evening.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 210-211.

Note: Ilia Selvinskiy, Giorgi Tsagareli and Kolau Cherniavskiy are mentioned in the source by their surnames, while Besarion Zhghenti and Ioseb Imedashvili are mentioned by their initials and surnames.

1941

March 22

In the Palace of Writers, he meets the Ukrainian writers Yanka Kupala and Yakub Kolas who returned from Tskaltubo. Irakli Abashidze, Ilo Mosashvili and Razhden Gvetadze are with them. Yanka Kupala invites Galaktion to dinner. Galaktion first agrees but later cannot go. He learns that Irakli Abashidze and Karlo Kaladze had dinner with Ukrainian writers and had a good time. Galaktion wonders who else was there.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 210.

1941

March 22

For his stepdaughter, Laine Bartelis, who is suffering from tuberculosis, he secures another two-month treatment program following seven months of prior treatment.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 210.

Note: Laine Bartelis is mentioned by name in the source.

1941

March 22

He writes in his diary about the melodies written on his texts. In addition to the poem "Poetry First", Dimitri Arakishvili had musical works based on two more of his texts. Grigol Chkhikvadze praises the song written by Valerian Tsagareishvili for the choir "My native land". Galaktion wonders if it is so good why it is not published.

Source: MGL, d-144, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 211.

Note: Grigol Chkhikvadze and Valerian Tsagareishvili are mentioned in the source by their last names.

1941

March 22

He meets Polio Abramia and Gigla Mebuke, who inform him that they really want to host his evening on the radio, and they ask him to make a program.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 211.

Note: Polio Abramia and Gigla Mebuke are mentioned in the source with their initials and surnames.

1941

March 22

When Savle Abuladze visits and doesn't find him at home, Galaktion, upon being informed of the visit, speculates that they probably want to organize an evening event at the Teachers' House.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 211.

Note: Savle Abuladze is mentioned in the source with his first name and last name.

1941

March 22

Brother - Abesalom Tabidze and sister-in-law - Tatiana Tsintsadze call him from Samtredia by phone, but he is not at home.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 211.

Note: Abesalom Tabidze and Tatiana Tsintsadze are mentioned by name in the source.

1941

March 22

He is told that Bondo Keshelava was looking for him, but no message has been left as to why.

Source: MGL, d-144, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 211.

1941

March 22

They tell him that Giorgi Kuchishvili warmly congratulated Leo Kiacheli on receiving the Stalin Prize, to which Apolon Tsuladze remarked, "He didn't take the whole prize, just half of it, so you should congratulate him on half". Kuchishvili became angry and said, "Who asked you? I doubt you". To this, Apolon Tsuladze replied, "It's nothing if you doubt me; the unfortunate thing is that you're losing your mind".

Source: MGL, d-144, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 211.

1941

March 23

He learns from the governor of the teacher's house that there are two circles, artistic-pedagogical, which has lessons twice a month, and youth, which meets three times a month. Galaktion considers it possible to change the schedule and hold several events in a row, and thinks that if his evenings are held, both circles will merge. For this, he considers it necessary to agree on the program and technical implementation, pre-planning and finding the main line with Savle Abuladze.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 211-212.

1941

March 23

He meets Aleksandre Tsimakuridze in the Artists' Club, who asks why he doesn't congratulate him. Galaktion does not know what to congratulate, but after Theodor Chudetsky explains to him that Tsimakuridze was awarded the title of honoured artist, he sincerely congratulates him. The artist tells how he heard this good news. At first, on February 25, Shakro told Kurdiani to broadcast it on the radio, but he thought he was joking. He called first Mose Toidze, then Davit Kakabadze, but both of them said they had not heard anything. He went home tired, and the next morning, the whole art academy congratulated him and he believed that this story was true. Tsimakuridze says that he is happy with the appreciation more than with the money. He also points to Galaktion Tabidze's Order of Lenin and tells him that this and the name are everything.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 212.

Note: Theodor Chudetsky is mentioned by name in the source.

1941

March 23

In the artists' club, Iakob Nikoladze tells him that he is making his marble bust on his own initiative. Then he scolds Galaktion: "I was calling you at the opera theatre on February 25, why didn't you sit next to me?" Then he tells Galaktion what Sergei Mikhalkov said about him that he was a great person, very smart and a great poet.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 213.

1941

March 23

Lado Gudiashvili in the Artists' Club says that if all poets were like Galaktion, they would be much happier.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 213.

1941

March 23

He writes in his diary that Irakli Abashidze was apologizing in the artists' club for being in a hurry and going to the funeral of Alio Mashashvili's brother. He also mentions that someone wrote an epigram about the persecution of Giorgi Leonidze.

Source: MGL, d-144, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 213;

Note: Alio Mashashvili is mentioned by name in the source.

1941

After March 23

Iakob Nikoladze makes a bust of Galaktion from marble.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 213; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503.

1941

March 24

He submits the poem "Paris Commune" for printing to the magazine Mnatobi, and in the evening they inform that the poem has been sent for compilation.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 213.

1941

March 24

He attends Bondo Keshelava's evening at the Writers' Palace. He likes society, young Megrelian women. Bondo is reading from a notebook, and not very well. Besarion Zhghenti notes that Bondo Keshelava has not published a book, nor is it printed in the press, but still so many people gathered. The next speaker, Alio Adamia, says that he is not an orator like Besarion Zhghenti, which is followed by a roar from the crowd. Bondo Keshelava reads a poem written in 1924 under the influence of Sergei Yesenin and says that he is not responsible for this poem, which is followed by people's laughter. Grigol Abashidze is afraid that Keshelava will get angry and hit Beso Zhghenti like he did with my brother. Karlo Kaladze notes that it is a very strange evening, and Simon Tsverava concludes that Keshelava lacks political insight.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 13-14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 213-214.

1941

March 24

At Bondo Keshelava's evening in the Palace of Writers, Khariton Vardoshvili notes that the 20th century is the age of decline and decadence, only Galaktion Tabidze ascended and gave poetry another image. Dimitri Benashvili and Aleksandre Gomiashvili invite Galaktion to organize an evening at the conservatory. The poet tells Shalva Demetradze that the Central Committee has already decided to publish his Book "My Native Land". He replies that he will return from Leningrad (current Petersburg) in May and the Book will be well published. He agrees to Galaktion's request to conclude a contract in advance. Bondo Keshelava thanks him for attending his evening. Galaktion thinks that Bondo Keshelava will not easily establish himself in poetry, but he can be useful if he follows the right way. Keshelava's poems - "Tbilisi", "Akaki", "Vazha" - have a Georgian flavour, according to Galaktion, he is greatly influenced by Galaktion, but they did not say anything about it at the evening.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 214.

1941

March 24

He meets with the People's Commissar of Agriculture, asking for reinstating his seminarian friend, veterinarian Giorgi Kakhaia, to his job.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 214.

Note: Giorgi Kakhaia is mentioned in the source by his last name.

1941

March 24

In the evening, his sister-in-law Tatiana Tsintsadze arrives from Samtredia with chickens, eggs and pork.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 214.

Note: Tatiana Tsintsadze is mentioned in the source by her last name.

1941

March 24

In the morning, he meets Nikoloz Iashvili, who, in the poet's opinion, is a genius young man who admires him and understands modern style very well.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 214.

Note: Nikoloz Iashvili is mentioned in the source by his surname and title – lecturer.

1941

March 24

He is curious about why permission to hold the evening event at the Opera Theatre was denied. He believes that Simon Chikovani should step down from the poets' section at the Writers' Palace, as he is deliberately stirring up trouble.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 214.

1941

March 24

The poem "Spring" written for the magazine Oktombreli is sent to the printing house.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008,

1941

March 24

He reads the bibliography compiled by Mikhail Zenkevich published in the Moscow magazine Krasnaia Nov about his Book "Selected Poems" published in Moscow in 1940 and writes his impressions in his diary. He notes that the article was reprinted from the newspaper Pravda, but the information is not indicated. From this publication, it is worth noting that Galaktion Tabidze is one of the strongest Soviet poets and that the collection reflects the difficult path of his work from 1908 to 1937. Regarding the idea that the poems are divided into three periods by the author's wish, he does not agree and notes that it was not his wish to divide them into three periods. The editors - Valerian Gaprindashvili and Viktor Goltsev wanted to justify their symbolism, and they declared him a symbolist. The remark regarding the fact that the poems of the last three years were not included in the Book is easily explained by Galaktion with the fact that the Book was prepared in 1937 and its publication was delayed by three years. Just like the publication of the third volume of works was delayed in Georgia. According to the poet, all this happened because he was not given the Stalin Prize.

Source: MGL, d-144, 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 214.

1941

March 24

Shalva Radiani praises his bibliography compiled by Mikhail Zdanevich, which Galaktion himself dislikes very much. The poet thinks that Shalva Dadiani either thinks that he is a fool or he himself is the one.

Source: MGL, d-144, 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 214.

1941

March 25

Sergo Jintchvelashvili's wife brings him her husband's memories of Akaki Tsereteli, from which it can be seen that her husband wanted to paint Akaki Tsereteli, Davit Kldiashvili, Varlam Rukhadze, and Galaktion Tabidze sitting at a table under a mulberry tree in a garden with fruit trees during a trip to the village of Mukhiani in 1913. Galaktion notes that he too remembers the day very well, especially the horses tied to the fence and the large arch of flowers.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 215.

1941

March 26

At home with him are his brother - Abesalom Tabidze and sister-in-law - Tatiana Tsintsadze. In the morning, Abesalom tells him that he is unorganized, he lives in one room with his wife and children. Galaktion mentions that at the age of 38, he could settle in Tbilisi because he had found a job for him. Abesalom blames everything on Galaktion, saying that he can see him dying and he cannot watch it. And Galaktion sees it differently, when he was dying, his brother did not stay by his side and left him. Now, when Abesalom sold the house and spent the money, he approached Galaktion again. Abesalom petitions the government to leave their old yard. Tatiana doesn't mind giving up the lime standing in the yard, because she can earn 500 roubles by cutting it. Galaktion worries that the lime tree planted by his mother must be cut. He remembers the constant conflict with his brother regarding the trees. Mother chased Abesalom not to cut the trees, he pointed an ax at the tree, but mother did not give up. Abesalom was still cutting trees in silence. Immediately after his mother's death, Abesalom cut down all the trees and used them for firewood. Galaktion cannot understand why their village house needed to be turned from facing north to south, altering its appearance. The poet recalls that due to such perverseness and lack of coherence, their cousin Titsian nicknamed Abesalom after Joris-Karl Huysmans's character Des Esseintes.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 216-217.

Note: Abesalom Tabidze and Tatiana Tsintsadze are mentioned by name in the source.

1941

March 26

He writes in his diary how contemporary writers achieve success. They even wrote a poem about Giorgi Leonidze's dexterity: "His surname was valued at a thousand, his novel at ten thousand / half of Leonidze's jostling through!" They say about Leo Kiacheli that he was not worthy of the Stalin Prize, but he won with his being Megrelian and points to other Megrelians: Kirile Patchkoria, Shalva Dadiani.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 216-217.

Note: Giorgi Leonidze and Kirile Patchkoria are mentioned by their surnames.

1941

March 26

He goes to the Palace of Writers and sees Irakli Abashidze, who tells the story of Ilya Selvinskiy, what method Boris Pasternak used when his poems were no longer being printed. It turns out that at that time he started translating Georgian poets and slipped his best poems, which he could not print, into these translations. Of course, the translations came out great, Georgian poets were proud of themselves, how good we are, and Pasternak laughed quietly. According to Selvinskiy, a good translation is still one that is close to the original. He learns from Irakli Abashidze that the Central Committee will approve the new plans of publishing houses by March 30.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 217-218.

1941

March 26

He meets Makvala Mrevlishvili in the Union of Writers, who tells him that she did not dare to offer him a book but promises to bring it. Galaktion thinks she is a talented woman.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 217-218.

1941

March 26

Solomon Tavadze asks Leo Kiacheli if he needs a personal secretary, and Leo waves his hand pessimistically. Galaktion notices some internal change in Kiacheli. Previously, he did not attend poets' evenings at all, but on March 24, Bondo sat in the presidium at Keshelava's evening. Galaktion writes in his diary that Bondo Keshelava, proud of this, patted me as if he had received a Stalin's prize.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 217-218.

1941

March 26

He has his tooth pulled out by the dentist Otto Heine. The dentist tells him a story about his son who introduced himself to a friend as Heine while studying in Moscow. In response, the interlocutor introduced himself as Pushkin. This reminds Galaktion of the story of Ilia Chavchavadze and Akaki Tsereteli.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 220.

Note: Otto Heine is mentioned by his last name in the source.

1941

March 26

In the Union of Writers, they talk about Gotthold Lessing's comedy "Mina von Barnhelm or Soldier's Happiness", in which Erekle the Second is mentioned, then they discuss the war for a long time. Galaktion laments that the day is wasted.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 217-218.

Note: The title of the play is not mentioned in the diary.

1941

Until March 27

He attends an art exhibition dedicated to the 20th anniversary of Soviet Georgia. He thinks that Joseph Charlemagne's "Atskuri" is a rare painting, the like of which cannot be found in an exhibition, and everyone pays attention, because it is the work of a true master - in every way interesting, noble, refined and delicate - but the critics did not appreciate it properly. The idea of the painting is the same as that of his poems - "On that Venetian bridge" and "Car and Cart", while "Auto and Dmanisi" by Irakli Abashidze is completely different.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 16; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 219.

Note: The initials of Joseph Charlemagne's name are indicated as "O", because at a certain period he used this initial from one of the versions of his name - "Osip".

1941

Until March 27

Boris Serebryakov informs that in the February 25 issue of the newspaper Ukrainskiy Komsomolets Mikola Nachibin's translation of his poem "My native land" was published.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 220.

1941

March 27

He goes to the public library to see the Ukrainskiy Komsomolets newspaper, whose February 25 issue has a translation of his poem "My native land", but the library has not received the newspaper yet.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 220.

1941

March 27

He calls the savings bank, where he has submitted the saving-bank books of the Lenin Order for exchange. The bank responds that they received the last batch of saving-bank books three days ago, but his documents were not among them. They informed him in writing from Moscow that Galaktion Tabidze's saving-bank Book and other documents will be sent additionally. They suggest calling back in a week. Olgha Darius thinks a surprise is expected. Galaktion also begins to have a bad feeling about it. If that weren't the case, why would his saving-bank Book be an exception? Yet he knows that he won't be able to do anything about it. If they don't return it, he will find himself no longer a holder of the Lenin Order. He consoles himself with the thought that they won't treat him that way.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 220.

1941

March 27

He writes in his diary that the January issue of the magazine Mnatobi is remembered with his poem "Memory of Lenin", as his poems were included in many magazines, collections and books for 30 years. He thinks that if these editions are collected and exhibited, it will be the first document to prove that he is a central figure in Georgian writing. He knows that no one denies this, but they want to take the first place by cunning: Sandro Abasheli by including the authors in the collections according to the alphabet, Alio Mashashvili - through the Communist Party, Ioseb Grishashvili - he does not know with what, but he knows that he also fought with dedication for the first place in the collection "Georgian Writers of Soviet Georgia. He notes that only the alphabet wins here and there, once fate smiled at Alio Mashashvili and his poem "Chimchaira" was placed on the first place by Valia Bakhtadze fifteen years ago, but the main place is undoubtedly his and this is a great victory. Alexandre Abasheli, Ioseb Grishashvili and Alio Mashashvili are defeated. He thinks that Giorgi Leonidze deliberately avoids speaking on this front, but his speech is expected from some side. He remembers the 80th anniversary of Vazha-Pshavela's birth and thinks that it is necessary to start preparations immediately, just like for the 100th anniversary of Mikhail Lermontov's death.

Source: MGL, d-144, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 219-220.

1941

March 27

In the evening, he goes to the exhibition of artists for the second time to see Charlemagne's work "Atskuri" again, but due to a fire in the gallery, all the paintings are taken down in order to save them. When he asked what caused the fire, they answered that the boys climbed on the roof at night, drank, smoked and started the fire carelessly. Firefighters soon put it out, but the exhibition was messed up.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 220.

1941

March 27

From the bibliography compiled by Mikhail Zenkevich, published in the magazine Krasnaia Nov, which states about the Book "Selected Poems" of Galaktion published in Moscow in 1940, he writes one passage about "The moon of Mtatsminda" and disagrees with the author. He writes that the meaning of "The moon of Mtatsminda" is related to the existence of poetry, its greatness and legacy. He mentions the cover of his first book, Woman with a lyre and Nietzsche's letters on the subject of Wagnerism, in which he talks about the lightness of the author of Carmen - Bizet, and thinks about the problem of harp and lyre, how harp merges with the lyre.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 16; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 218-219.

Note: Zenkevich is mentioned by his last name in the source.

1941

March 27

The January issue of the magazine Mnatobi is released late, opening its literary section with Galaktion's poem "Lenin's Memory".

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1941, №1, p. 9-10;

1941

March 27

He thinks about the decade of evenings that should be arranged at the teacher's house. Regarding this issue, he is waiting for Savle Abuladze the next day. He thinks that the evenings should be quiet and efficient, because there is still an expectation of arranging the evening at the Opera House.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 220.

1941

March 27

He learns that the second issue of the magazine Mnatobi will be released soon and the third is also being prepared. His “anniversary” is published in one and in the other - “The Paris Commune”.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 220.

1941

March 27

He writes in the diary that according to the new decision, the recipients of the awards are called laureates.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 220.

1941

March 27

He wonders who are the authors of Georgian literature textbooks and when they will be published.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 220.

1941

March 27

He writes in his diary that the reading of Shalva Soselia’s Russian novel “The Golden Fleece” in the Palace of Writers ended in a complete failure, and Leo Kiacheli was also dissatisfied with this. Niko Lortkipanidze said that the novel will be good if one works on it for another 10 years.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 220.

Note: Shalva Soselia is mentioned in the source under the pseudonym “Soslani”.

1941

March 28

He meets Alexandre Abasheli, who is dissatisfied with critics and disheartened by their reviews. Abasheli informs him that the editorship of his Russian Book “My Native Land” has been entrusted to Gary Bebutov. Consequently, when Alexander Stepanov recently sought permission to translate Galaktion’s poems for Abasheli, he directed him to Bebutov. Bebutov was frustrated that dishonest translators were being sent to him, asserting that as the editor, he should have the authority to choose the translators or decline the editorship altogether. Alexandre Abasheli agreed with this stance but urged Bebutov to proceed with the work, assuring him that no one would interfere.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 221.

Note: Alexander Stepanov is mentioned in the source with the pseudonym "Stepane" ("Степанэ").

1941

March 28

He writes three variants of the untitled poem "What a beautiful voice the sparrow has...".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 221.

1941

March 28

In his diary, he writes Dimitri Benashvili's remark about the phrase of Giorgi Leonidze's untitled poem "You are coming to the congress...": "We don't want Georgia to be a country of roses and nightingales anymore". According to Benashvili, in addition to the lack of taste and poetic sense, it is also unclear why the poet attacks the rose and the nightingale. He notes that this is caused by a frivolous attitude towards the responsible topic but adds that such a mistake with Leonidze is only of a private nature. Galaktion Tabidze believes that this is not the first case with Giorgi Leonidze. He recalls the exhibition of Akaki Tsereteli, where Leonidze tried to overshadow the great poet's achievements. His words are that Akaki is a simple piper. According to Galaktion, Leonidze himself stands in the position of a piper and destroys folklore. The poet mentions in his Book that it is necessary to fight against the falsification of folklore.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 222.

Note: Dimitri Benashvili and Giorgi Leonidze are mentioned in the source by their surnames.

1941

March 28

He plans that his Russian Book should include only new poems, mainly from the period after 1937, and he notes down the phrase "Wind of Iveria" as the probable title of the book.

Source: MGL, d-144, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 222.

Note: The Book was published under the title "My native land" ("Страна моя родная" and not "Wind of Iveria" ("Ветер Иверии").

1941

March 28

He plans for his book, "Selected Poems", which will be published by "Federation", to contain 5,000 lines of material. If he divides each line into two, as he did in the poems "Underwater City" and "I and Night", the Book will contain 10,000 lines. He believes that a single preface is insufficient. Instead, he envisions one general review and separate forewords authored by Shalva Radiani, Giorgi Abzianidze, Dimitri Benashvili, and Akaki Gatsserelia.

Source: MGL, d-144, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 222.

Note: Shalva Radiani, Giorgi Abzianidze, Dimitri Benashvili and Akaki Gatsserelia are mentioned in the source by their last names.

1941

March 28

In his diary, he mentions that he has published the Book in the Children's Literature Publishing House, with which, he intends to confront the position of those poets who do not want Georgia to be a "rose-nightingale country".

Source: MGL, d-144, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 222.

1941

March 28

In the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, a brief bibliographic article by Vasil Baiadze is published regarding the newly released third volume of Galaktion Tabidze's works. The author of the article assesses this Book as an important event on the front of Soviet poetic culture.

Source: V. Baiadze, Galaktion Tabidze – "Essays". Vol. 3, Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1941, №13 (March 28), p. 3.

1941

March 29

Savle Abuladze, the head of the Literary-Pedagogical Circle of the Teachers' House, is visiting him. They agree that one event will be held in the teacher's house in April, and other evenings - at the end of the year, for which it is necessary to specify the topics that the participants should work on.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 222.

1941

March 29

He receives a call from the editorial office of the magazine Oktombreli asking him for a poem for the May issue.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 222.

1941

March 29

In response to the phrase "We no longer want Georgia as a country of rose-nightingales" from Giorgi Leonidze's untitled poem "You are coming to the congress", he writes a poem "Roses", which should be combined with the poem about Kutaisi.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 222.

1941

March 29

He considers it necessary to clarify the contents of his books to be published in the near future, but the publishing plans have not yet been approved by the Central Committee. He thinks that it is possible to remove his publications from the plan, but he hopes that they will leave at least one, if not two.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 222.

1941

March 30

After a week's delay, an updated record Book of the Order of Lenin, a travel ticket and money coupons are returned to him from Moscow.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 223.

1941

March 30

Boris Serebryakov visits and asks for poems about Lenin and May Day for translation. In this regard, Galaktion writes in his diary Stalin's words that Lenin was born for revolution, he was truly a genius of revolutionary explosions and a great master of revolutionary leadership.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 223.

1941

March 30

Rodion Korkia proposes to organize Galaktion's evening in the Consumer Societies Union in April.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 223.

1941

March 30

He suggests to Sio Khidistaveli that his evening event be held at the Public Library in April. He considers making better use of his photographs and the 1927 newspaper Galaktioni during the event.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 223.

1941

March 30

Giorgi Abzianidze tells him that it required a great struggle to have his portrait displayed at the artists' exhibition dedicated to the 20th anniversary of Soviet Georgia. Galaktion is curious about who opposed it.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 223.

Note: The source does not specify which exhibition is being referred to.

1941

March 31

He thinks that, since morning, it feels like the first truly sunny day of spring. The wind is blowing, occasionally growing stronger. The yard resembles an illustration by the French artist Gustave Doré; the wind scatters the spread sheets, and a woman struggles to take them down.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 223.

Note: Gustave Doré is referred to by his last name in the source.

1941

March 31

Ilia Chavchavadze's third school informs him that the students are making an album in connection with the March 15 meeting.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 223.

1941

March 31

Giorgi Kuchishvili returns the debt with an apology and Galaktion tells him that it was not necessary.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 223;

1941

March 31

He speaks with Gary Bebutov, the editor of his Russian-language Book "My Native Land". He emphasizes that the Book should primarily feature new poems, to be translated by accomplished poets such as Pavel Antokolskiy and Vladimir Derzhavin. They also consider involving poets who haven't previously tried translation but have the potential. They agree to reject unscrupulous translators like Boris Brik. The Book will start with poems from 1941 and proceed in reverse chronological order: 1940, 1939, and so on. They agree that Galaktion will arrange the poems himself. They plan to develop an appeal to translators and prepare accurate word-for-word translations, agreeing to start work once the plan is approved.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 223-224.

Note: Gary Bebutov is referred to by his last name in the source.

1941

Until March 31

He takes Laine Bartelis, who was raised by his second wife, Olga Darius, to Abastumani for treatment.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-483-ð; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 291.

Dating: This is mentioned in the letter from Laine Bartelis that Galaktion received on March 31.

1941

March 31

Shalva Radiani's student, Elene Rukhadze, visits him and presents written questions regarding his poetry. She is interested in the general form of his poems, specifically during the first and second periods, what he expressed in the poem "Akaki Tsereteli", and whether he wrote any other poems in 1940–1941. The poet notes in his diary that thus March – Women's Month – ended, fittingly concluding with a woman's questions.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 224.

1941

March 31

In his diary, he summarizes the achievements of March: he notes that the most precious thing for him was the meeting with the students of the Ilia Chavchavadze third school. He is happy that his poem "Spring" will open the March issue of the children's magazine Oktombrelis; this month he received the issue of the newspaper Pravda about his selected poems published in Russian in Moscow; the song "My native land" written by Valerian Tzagareishvili for the choir, etude painted by Ivane Vepkhvadze, "Kakheti" sculpture on stone presented by Shalva Maradashvili, his poem "Work, closely related to science" printed in the issue of the university newspaper dedicated to the 20th anniversary of the Sovietization of Georgia, a photo taken with Ukrainian and Georgian writers at the grave of Akaki Tsereteli, printed in the newspaper Zarya Vostoka; Alexander Stepanov's "Caucasus Wind" translated into Russian, books by Irakli Abashidze and Sandro Euli with inscriptions, a collection of poems of Georgian poets translated into Russian by Boris Serebryakov "Poets of Soviet Georgia", a Chronology published in Literaturuli Gazeti "Writers at the Artillery School", Mikhail Zenkevich's bibliography about Galaktion Tabidze's Book "Selected Poems" published in the Moscow magazine Krasnaya Nov, the opening of the January issue of the magazine Mnatobi with the poem "To the memory of Lenin", translation of his poem "My native land" in the newspaper Komsomolets Ukraini, his portrait drawn by Boris Semyonov. He concludes that all this is very important.

Source: MGL, d-144, 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 224.

Note: Alexander Stepanov is mentioned by the pseudonym "Stepane" in the source.

1941

March 31

In his diary, he lists the failures he experienced in March. The list includes: losing the fight to organize an evening at the Opera Theatre, not receiving the Stalin Prize, only partially succeeding in establishing the alphabetical order of authors in collections, failing to publish the poem “The Paris Commune” in the newspaper Komunisti, and the Writers’ Union organizing evenings not for him, but for Ilia Selvinsky and Bondo Keshelava.

Source: MGL, d-144, 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 224-225.

1941

March 31

In his diary, under the list of unfinished tasks, he notes that he still has not managed to publish a poem in the magazine Remedasi or organize an evening on the radio. He also outlines his plan for the following month, which includes working on books for Zarya Vostoka, Federatsia, and Children’s Literature Publishing House; organizing evenings at the Trade Union, the Teachers’ House, the Public Library, the Radio, and the Philharmonic; deepening the idea of Georgian colourfulness; and writing poems for May. He expresses interest in Iakob Nikoladze’s marble bust.

Source: MGL, d-144, 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 224-225;

1941

March 31

He believes that opposition against him is growing within the Writers’ Union Presidium and Literaturuli Sakartvelo. This conflict began long ago but was previously conducted covertly. He is convinced that the Writers’ Union will never tolerate concessions to others at his expense. Therefore, he anticipates a major confrontation. He feels that his enemies are organizing and consolidating, but he is certain it will eventually be revealed that they aim to appropriate his achievements for others. He writes that he will not yield his successes to anyone.

Source: MGL, d-144, 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 224-225.

1941

After March 31

Akaki Gatsrelia’s Book “Books and Authors” is being published, which includes the critic’s article published in 1938 on the work of Galaktion.

Source: A. Gatsrelia, “Books and Authors”, 1941, p. 201-211.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing after March 31, 1941.

1941

After March 31

He receives a letter from his foster-daughter, Laine Bartels, from Abastumani, where she is being treated for tuberculosis. Laine expresses her deepest gratitude for the care and attention shown to her. She writes that she does not deserve it because she has many negative traits but plans to work on improving her character. She informs him that she will be transferred to an institute in the coming days and feels hopeful about her recovery. She shares that they were taken on a trip to the Abastumani Observatory, the second largest in the Soviet Union, but since it was during daylight hours, they were not shown anything through the telescope. She sends her kisses and regards to her aunt, who raised her.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-483-8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 291. Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 224.

Note: Laine Bartels is mentioned by name in the source.

April

1941

March 31 - April 1

He reads the encyclopaedia and wonders who was Alexandre Razmadze, the son of Solomon, the composer and editor of the music section of newspapers, who died in 1896.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-145, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 235;

1941

March 31 - April 1

He wonders what letter Giorgi Chumburidze, who lectures at the University, has written about him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-145, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 235;

Note: Giorgi Chumburidze is mentioned in the source with his first name and last name.

1941

March 31 - April 1

He wonders who the university student Elene Rukhadze is, who is writing a paper about Galaktion under the guidance of Shalva Radiani.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-145, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 235.

1941

March 31 - April 1

He is interested in the last name of a young man working for the magazine Mnatobi, who is receiving a lot of attention.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-145, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 235.

1941

March 31 - April 1

He is interested in the last name of chief, a handsome young man who always tells him that, unlike other authors, his books sell well.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-145, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 235.

1941

March 31 - April 1

In the diary, he writes down the phone numbers of Korneli Kekelidze and Ilia Chavchavadze III school.

Source: MGL, d-145, 3-4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 235.

Note: Kornele Kekelidze is mentioned by name in the source.

1941

March 31 - April 1

He can't remember when the head of the department store promised him to give paper.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-145, 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 235.

1941

March 31 - April 1

He is curious whether Savel Abuladze is capable of translating poems.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-145, 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 235.

1941

March 31 - April 1

He writes an untitled poem, "Stands Sylene – ever mighty...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-145, 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 236.

Note: The poem is not published in volumes. He included it in the list of poems recorded on July 16, 1946 "Almost finished materials.

1941

April 1

He receives the insured letter sent on March 27 signed by Petre Chagin from the Moscow state publishing house "Mkhatvruli Literatura", which states that in order to celebrate the 5th anniversary of Maxim Gorky's death, the state publishing house will publish a large collection of writers' memories, conversations and letters with Maxim Gorky. He is very much requested to take part in the book. They ask him let the latter know if he agrees or not, and send the material in April or early May. He is going to send a reply that he will deliver recollections about Maxim Gorky in early May.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 225.

1941

April 1

He sends a letter to the editorial office of the newspaper Ukrainis Komkavshireli in Kyiv. He asks them to send two copies of the newspaper, in which his poem "My native land" translated into Ukrainian by Mykola Nachibin was printed on February 25, as well as the royalty if he deserves it.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 225; MGL, d-145, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 235-236.

1941

April 1

Representatives of the Nadzaladevi club, who want to hold his evening on April 4, come to him and tell him that they have permission from the Union of Writers. Their offer is acceptable for Galaktion.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 225.

1941

April 1

In the morning, Olgha Darius tells him that something is wrong with the phone, and when he looks at it, he sees a sign that today is April 1st. Galaktion doesn't like such pranks.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 225-226.

Note: Olgha Darius is mentioned in the source by her first name and patronymic.

1941

April 1

A steel bridge attached to his teeth breaks. He goes to the dentist, Otto Heine. The doctor tells him that the last tooth on which the bridge was attached is loose. If this wisdom tooth is not good, he won't be able to attach those four teeth to anything. He asks Galaktion to come in three days to find out the condition of the wisdom tooth.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 226.

Note: Otto Heine is referred to by his surname in the source.

1941

April 1

Konstantine Chanturishvili asks him to come in three days to sign the contract to publish the Book "Art of Poetry".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 226.

Note: Konstantine Chanturishvili is mentioned in the source with the initial of his first name and last name.

1941

April 1

A young woman he does not know tells him, "I am a student of Abesalom Tabidze. I arrived from Samtredia today, and Abesalom asked me to tell you that the child is doing well". Galaktion asks her, "Which child are you asking about? Vasiko Tabidze is here, isn't he?". Suddenly, he is interrupted and the girl asks him "What message shall I pass to Abesalom?" and he responds, "We are all well”. The young woman laughs heartily, saying, “Today is April 1st, it’s easy to deceive”. Galaktion is once again irritated by the April Fool’s lie.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 226.

Note: Vasiko Tabidze is referred to in the source as a child.

1941

April 2

They are asking him from the Gori Pedagogical Institute to participate in a grand evening of Georgian Soviet poetry, which will be held on April 12th at 8 PM in the institute’s building for the workers of Gori. They write that expenses will be reimbursed. He discusses the details of the evening with Vano Tsulukidze.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 226.

1941

April 2

He fails to receive a response from the publishers “Federation” and “Zarya Vostoka” regarding the books to be published in 1942 – “My Native Land” and the children’s publishing house’s Book “The Art of Poetry”.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 226.

1941

April 2

He continues to write the poem “Conversation about roses”. He thinks it turns out great.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 226.

Note: The discussion concerns a poem that was intended as a response to those poets who say, “We no longer want Georgia to be the land of roses and nightingales”.

1941

April 2

He likes Solomon Kubaneishvili’s Book “The Chronology of Vazha-Pshavela’s Life and Creative work” and is satisfied that the author wants to prepare a similar Chronology of his life and work.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 226. 2

1941

April 2

In the evening, Shalva Radiani’s student, Elene Rukhadze, visits him. She reads to Galaktion a monograph written about him and mentions that many others, besides herself, have worked on Galaktion. The poet dislikes that the young woman is repeating Shalva Radiani's opinions and thinks that Savle Abuladze's letter was better – short, witty, and polite. He finds it very tiresome that this woman is reviewing the past, heartbreak, and hopelessness. He appreciates Sergo Javshanidze's opinion that Galaktion is the only poet in Georgia who reached the peak without anyone's help. He recalls Polikarpe Kakabadze's opinion that if you take a traitor as a friend, you have already lost.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 226-227.

1941

April 2

In his diary, he notes that the bickering continues in the Writers' Union. On March 31, during the discussion of Iakinte Lisashvili's novel "Ketskhoveli", Simon Chikovani stated that he was against biographical novels. Irakli Abashidze argued that this was a major political mistake. Galaktion is surprised that Simon Chikovani wrote the review for the novel's publication.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 20, 22; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 227.

1941

April 2

He reads Max Nordau's Book "The Psycho-Physiology of Genius and Talent" and thinks that much of it pertains to him. He writes a quote stating that a genius processes the impressions received into an artwork understandable to the public solely through their intellectual powers. Immediately, imitators and parasites emerge. To illustrate, Nordau cites the damp places in the Atlantic Ocean described by Charles Darwin, where the initial appearance of a bird is quickly followed by the emergence of parasites, flies, and microbes that feed on the bird's blood. An infertile island starts to teem with life. In literature, these are akin to artificial parasites and blemishes that mimic the genius's work, leading to the establishment of critical and aesthetic schools that benefit from digesting the genius's and his imitators' works. Eventually, literary historians emerge, struggling to explain how it all happened, resulting in a national literature filled with secondary writers, aesthetic systems, critical works, and monographs.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 21; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 227-228.

1941

After April 2

He writes an untitled poem "You see, there is an open space in front of..."

Source: Autographs: MGL, №163-d, p. 8-9; №4917; №5512; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 282;

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "The Union of Hearts" and "You see, there is an open space in front of".

1941

April 3

They put up posters with information announcing that on April 4th, at 6 PM, a literary and artistic evening featuring Galaktion Tabidze will be held at the Plekhanov Club in Nadzaladevi.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 22; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 228-229.

1941

April 3

At 8 o'clock in the evening, he goes to the Writers' Club for a meeting announced by the Translators' Section of the Writers' Union, where there was supposed to be a reading and discussion of the translation of Mikhail Lermontov's poem "The Novice" by Babilina Khositashvili. However, the evening is not held. According to Galaktion, the head of the Translators' Section, Simon Chikovani, shows no interest, and despite many people attending, the reading is postponed for a second time. He learns that Simon Chikovani was accepted as a party member that day and thinks that no one will be able to take away the leadership of the poets' and translators' sections from him now.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 20, 22; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 227.

1941

April 4

In Nadzaladevi, at the Plekhanov Club, Galaktion Tabidze's literary and artistic evening begins at 6 PM. As the curtain rises and the poet appears, everyone stands, and flowers are brought to the stage. The introductory speech is delivered by the teacher Matsaberidze, and Besarion Zhghenti delivers an extensive talk on Galaktion Tabidze's work. The evening features poets and writers including Giorgi Leonidze, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Rodion Korkia, Boris Serebriakov, Makvala Mrevlishvili, Giorgi Katchakhidze, Andro Tevzadze, and Vasili Gorgadze. In the artistic segment, Vaso Godziashvili, Tamar Chavchavadze, Sergo Zakariadze, and Ana Vardiashvili, accompanied by a trio, participate. Books are displayed in the foyer, and the theatre is packed with people. Giorgi Leonidze reads the poem "Poetry Above All", Giorgi Kuchishvili reads "Prologue to 100 Poems", Solomon Tavadze reads "To the Moon of Mtatsminda", and Tamar Chavchavadze reads "Mary", "Legions are Coming", and others. Giorgi Katchakhidze and Makvala Mrevlishvili read their own poems suited to the evening. Boris Serebriakov reads a translation of the poem "My Native Land", Alexander Stepanov gives an introduction to the translation of "The Wind of the Caucasus", and Grigol Tabatadze reads a poem previously read at the evening "Zarya Vostoka". Rodion Korkia presents a new report, "The Red Army in Galaktion Tabidze's Work", and Simon Tsverava delivers an emotional speech, calling Galaktion the pinnacle of 20th-century Georgian poetry. Andro Tevzadze and Shakro Navtlugheli deliver engaging speeches. At the conclusion, Galaktion Tabidze recites his poems: "Twenty Years", "I and the Night", "The Moon of Mtatsminda", and "To Revolutionary Georgia", which are met with great ovations from the audience. A concert follows, featuring performances by Tamar Chavchavadze, Vaso Godziashvili, and an ensemble of pipers. Among the attendees is Giorgi Tchumburidze, who, overwhelmed with admiration, embraces the poet. A stenographic record is made, and photographs are taken during the event.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 22; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 228-229; "Galaktion Tabidze's Creative Evening at the Plekhanov Club", Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1941, №15, p. 1; 1941

April 4

In his notebook, he writes about the evening held at the Plekhanov Club in Nadzaladevi, noting that some of those announced on the poster did not attend: Shalva Dadiani, who claimed he was working on a libretto; Ioseb Grishashvili, who said he had a fever; Simon Chikovani, who stated he would come if he didn't leave for Moscow but neither went to Moscow nor attended the evening; and Irakli Abashidze, who had added his name to the program himself but did not show up. Galaktion believes these four schemers continue to conspire against him. Initially, he thought that Leonidze would also come up with an excuse, but this did not happen. Overall, he considers the evening to have been a great success.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 22; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 228-229.

1941

April 4

In his diary, he analyzes the literary evening held in Nadzaladevi at the Plekhanov Club. The event was organized in great haste – posters were put up only the day before, the program was not prearranged, and decisions were made on stage as the event unfolded. He suspects that something is happening within the Writers' Union, as the event had been agreed upon, yet the secretary, Irakli Abashidze, did not attend. Galaktion had firmly instructed the organizer, the head of the library, not to include names in the poster unless those individuals had confirmed their attendance. However, they were listed anyway. He writes that there is a transparently orchestrated political strategy at play – to use his and others' literary evenings as a means to bolster the popularity of Giorgi Leonidze, who, according to him, is met with public antipathy. He speculates that if Leonidze gains the support of these 30 writers, he will prevail but achieving this will require significant effort.

Source: MGL, d-144, 23; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 229-230.

Note: Irakli Abashidze is mentioned in the source as the secretary of the Union of Writers; Giorgi Leonidze, Guguli Bukhnikashvili, Victor Gabeskiria, Konstantine Gamsakhurdia, Davit Gachechiladze, Razhden Gvetadze, Sezman Ertatsmindeli, Khariton Vardoshvili, Iona Vakeli, Pavle Ingorokva, Iakinte Lisashvili, Ioseb Mtchedlishvili, David Suliashvili, Alexandre Kutateli, Demna Shengelaia, Grigol Tsetskhladze, Alexandre Tcheishvili, Ana Khakhutashvili, Gigo Khechuashvili, Artem Akhnazarov, Vladimir Gegechkori, Anastasia Eristavi-Khoshtaria, Konstantine Kapaneli, Platon Keshelava, Alexandre Kancheli - by surnames, Babilina Khositashvili and Natalia Aziani - with the pseudonyms “Babilina” and “Aziani”.

1941

April 4

In his diary, he writes that the “Gori Epic” is beginning – preparations are underway for the grand evening of Soviet poetry to be held at the Pedagogical Institute for the workers. He fears that these evenings might delay the publication of his books: “My Native Land” by the “Federation” publishing house, the Russian version of “My Native Land” by the “Zarya Vostoka” publishing house, and “The Art of Poetry” by the children’s publishing house. He hopes that the publishing plans will soon be approved and that the books will be ready on time. He must work in a way that one task does not hinder the other.

Source: MGL, d-144, 23; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 230.

1941

April 4

In his diary, he lists alphabetically the members of the Writers’ Union who have expressed opinions about him at different times: Abasheli Alexandre, Asatiani Levan, Daria Akhvlediani, Dimitri Benashvili, Bobokhidze Kale, Gatsrelia Akaki, Gelovani Mirza, Gorgadze Vaso, Garikuli Mariam, Dadiani Shalva, Etim Gurji, Tavadze Soloman, Kasradze Davit, Lortkipanidze Konstantine, Megrelidze Lidia, Mikeladze Marika, Mosashvili Ilo, Natroshvili Giorgi, Zhuruli Varlam, Zhghenti Besarion, Radiani Shalva, Serebriakov Boris, Sulava Alka, Korkia Rodion, Kuchishvili Giorgi, Shanshiashvili Sandro, Shengelaia Demna, Tsverava Simon, Tsulukidze Ivane, Khidistaveli Sio. Then he finds out that some people have been left out and adds: Astvatsaturov Eremia, Mebuke Gigla, Lortkipanidze Niko, Metreveli Levan, Abashidze Irakli, Apkhaidze Shalva, Gam-sakhurdia Konstantine, Grishashvili Ioseb, Kldiashvili Simon, Mashashvili Alio, Mrevlishvili Makvala, Nadiradze Kolau, Shengelaia Demna, Kipiani Ivika, Shanidze Alexandre, Keshelava Platon, Shubladze Vera, Tevzadze Andro, Kashmadze Shalva.

Source: MGL, d-144, 24; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 231.

1941

April 4

In his diary, he lists alphabetically the writers who deliberately avoid speaking about him or talk ambiguously: Abashidze Irakli, Abashidze Grigol, Avaliani Vladimir, Apkhaidze Shalva, Baliauri Lado, Bukhnikashvili Guguli, Gabeskiria Viktor, Gamsakhurdia Konstantine, Gachechiladze Davit, Gachechiladze Giorgi, Gvetadze Razhden, Gomiashvili Alexandre, Grishashvili Ioseb, Ertasmindeli Sezman, Euli Sandro, Vardoshvili Khariton, Vakeli Iona, Ingorokva Pavle, Kaladze Karlo, Kachakhidze Giorgi, Kintsurashvili Mikhail (Iasamani), Kldiashvili Sergo, Leonidze Giorgi, Lisashvili Iakinte, Marijani, Margiani Revaz, Mashashvili Alio, Mrevlishvili Makvala, Mtchedlishvili Ioseb, Nadiradze Kolau, Pataridze Mikel, Polumordvinov Elizbar, Suliashvili Davit, Tatishvili Ioseb, Pashalishvili Siko, Kvariani Simon, Khiacheli Leo, Kikodze Geronti, Kutateladze Alexandre, Shengelaia Demna, Chachibaia Ivane, Shengelia Aleko, Chikovani Simon, Chikovani Mikheil, Tchkhaidze Boris, Tsetskhladze Grigol, Kipiani Ivika, Cheishvili Alexandre, Tchitchinadze Konstantine, Jabushanuri Gabriel, Khakhutashvili Ana, Khechuashvili Gigo, Khositashvili Babilina, and Khoshtaria Ilia. Later, he realizes that three people were missed and adds: Adamia Alio, Shanidze Alexandre, and Beliashvili Akaki.

Source: MGL, d-144, 24; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 231.

1941

April 4

In his diary, he lists alphabetically the writers whose opinion about him would have been significant, but who are not in a position to speak: Agladze Ilia, Aziani Natalia, Akhnazarov Artem, Gegeshidze Lado, Danelia Sergi, Eristavi-Khishtaria Anastasia, Kakabadze Polikarpe, Kapaneli Konstantine, Keshelava Platon, Mikeladze Kato, Nakashidze Nino, Sakhokia Tedo, Alexandre Kancheli, and Alexandre Tcheishvili.

Source: MGL, d-144, 24; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 232.

1941

April 4

Irakli Abashidze presents a collection of his poems with the inscription: “To the National Poet of Georgia, beloved Galaktion, the dear and ever-unforgettable creator of books, I dedicate this small work of mine with deep respect”.

Source: MGL, t-12, Irakli Abashidze, “Georgian Journalism”, Tbilisi, 1941.

1941

April 4 or later

In the collection gifted by Irakli Abashidze, under the poem “Auto and Dmanisi”, he writes about a painting titled “Atskuri” by the honoured artist of art, Ioseb Charlemagne, exhibited at an art exhibition. He connects the painting’s concept to his own poems “The Automobile and the Cart” and “The Bridge of Venice”, as well as to Irakli Abashidze’s poem. He notes that everyone paid attention to the painting, as it is so noble, refined, and delicate. He thinks it would be a good idea to acquire it.

Source: MGL, t-12, Irakli Abashidze, “Georgian Journalism”, Tbilisi, 1941, p. 107.

1941

April 4 or later

In the poetry collection gifted by Irakli Abashidze, under the poem “Statue on Mtatsminda”, he underlines certain lines and notes which of his own or others’ poems may have influenced them. Next to the words, “I often hear the shrill calm, like the fall of grape clusters on the grass,” he writes: “I deeply love the scattering from the bridge, like violet snow maidens”. Next to the words, “Slowly settling behind Didube and then repeating again,” he notes: “Everything will repeat again, just the same”. Beside the words, “I hasten toward the mountain with a quick step,” he references: “A quick step as one leaves the cathedral (“Mary”)”. Finally, near the words, “In those storms clad against the wind,” he comments that this was his own idea.

Source: MGL, t-12, Irakli Abashidze, “Georgian Journalism”, Tbilisi, 1941, p. 7-8.

1941

April 5

Olgha Darius writes reproachfully in her diary, stating that no request or warning has any effect on him – he continues to drink. She says that life is becoming unbearable and meaningless as a result. She urges him to look at Benjamin Popov, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Fyodor Chudetsky, and the drunken vagrants on the streets, pointing out that drinking has brought happiness to none of them.

Source: MGL, d-144, 23; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 232.

Note: Olgha Darius is not mentioned, but there is her inscription; Benyamin Popov, Giorgi Kuchishvili and Theodor Chudetsky are mentioned in the source by their surnames.

1941

April 2-6

Together with his cousin, Sofio Tabidze, he examines a 17th-century manuscript Book belonging to his father, Vasil Tabidze, titled “Spiritual Teachings of Our Venerable and Blessed Father John the Confessor, Abbot of the Studion, to His Disciples”. Sofio is amazed at how finely the letters are written, notices a wax stain on the first page, and tells Galaktion that the Book was likely read diligently at night by candlelight.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-145, 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 237; MGL, d-146, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 242;

1941

April 6

In his diary, he describes the first page of his father Vasil Tabidze’s book, The Teachings of the Blessed and Holy Father John the Confessor, Abbot of the Studite Monastery, to His Disciples. He details the inscriptions on the cover, interesting notes on the flyleaf, the second flyleaf, and the numbering. He notes that all titles are written in cinnabar (a type of Georgian script), and recounts how Shalva Radiani, upon seeing the book, exclaimed that he understood where the lines in Galaktion’s poem came from: “Some have a rose, others cinnabar... everyone has something to remember”. He mentions that the Book is attributed to the XVII century because Georgian calligraphy reached its peak during this period.

Source: MGL, d-146, 1-4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 240-243.

Note: Shalva Radiani is mentioned in the source by name.

1941

April 2-7

He gives a Book and a picture to Dodo Todria.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-145, 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 237;

Note: It is not mentioned which Book and picture are being referred to.

1941

April 2-7

In his notebook, he notes that on April 7th at 2:30 p.m., he needs to go to the Marjanishvili Theatre.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-145, 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 237;

1941

April 7

On the radio, he listens to Giorgi Leonidze reading his own poems. He imagines Leonidze as though kneeling, seeking recognition from the Party. He wonders if, having already received the Stalin Prize, Leonidze still desires more. In the poet's view, Leonidze's lyricism is an endless dithyramb to himself, and his melodious reading style imitates Titsian Tabidze. Leonidze venerates Sayat-Nova, Pirosmani, and Vazha-Pshavela, sometimes even equating himself to these idols. In the same program, Galaktion hears someone giving a lecture about Leonidze's work, and Tamar Chavchavadze passionately reciting his poems. This reminds Galaktion of a humorous incident: when the opera Tosca was staged, Giorgi Leonidze referred to it in a newspaper as Sorrow, mistakenly associating the name Tosca with the Russian word for sadness (тоска).

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 25; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 232-233.

1941

Until April 7 and onwards

Giorgi Abzianidze writes a monograph about Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 25; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 233.

1941

After April 7

The poem "Spring" is published in the magazine Oktombreli.

Source: G. Tabidze, "Spring", magazine Oktombreli, №3, p. 1; 1941

Until April 8

He writes a poem "The Connection Between Hearts".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №232; №233; №3869; №4013; №2113; N. Kvirikadze's manuscript, MGL, №2052. G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 19.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (starting with: "The fortress of Aghmashenebeli – the nest of the griffon and the hawk...", "Go, go forth, go forth...", "The beauty of our field...", "Great army! There is your steadfast side...", "Great army...") and under the titles "Great Army!" and "Great Army".

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1941

April 8

From the publishing house “Federation”, he brings for review the poems selected by Akaki Gatsrelia and Shalva Demetradze for his Book “My Native Land”. He is generally satisfied but wants to add some new ones.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 25; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 233.

1941

April 9

Savle Abuladze visits him and informs him that the evening is scheduled for April 20 at the Teacher’s House. They determine the text of the announcement and the approximate scheme of topics, which the members of the circle will work on.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 26; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 233.

1941

April 9

The newspaper Stalineli publishes an announcement titled “Georgian Poetry Evening”, which notes that on April 12th at 7 PM, the Gori Pedagogical Institute will host a grand poetry evening featuring the participation of: Galaktion Tabidze, Giorgi Leonidze, Alio Mashashvili, Ioseb Grishashvili, Simon Chikovani, Irakli Abashidze, and Ilo Mosashvili.

Source: newspaper Stalineli, 1941, №43, p. 4.

1941

April 9

In the newspaper Komunisti, Galaktion Tabidze reads a Chronology stating that on April 10, a meeting will be held in the Workers and Peasants Correspondents’ Office with the Stalin Prize laureates Leo Kiacheli and Giorgi Leonidze. This event, aimed at the core press workers and active worker correspondents, will include a report by the responsible secretary of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia, Irakli Abashidze, discussing the laureates’ creative work. Following this, Leo Kiacheli and Giorgi Leonidze will share their creative working methods with the attendees.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 26; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 233.

1941

After April 9

In the magazine Mnatobi, the poem “Jubilee” (“Let it be in the storm of storms...”), dedicated to the 20th anniversary of the Sovietization of Georgia, is published.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1941, №2, p. 63-67;

Note: The poet divided “Jubilee” into three separate works: “Star of Georgia”, “Great Lighting”, and “Anopheles Mosquito”. For more information, see: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes”, vol. IV, p. 350.

1941

After April 9

In the February 1941 issue of the magazine Mnatobi, a letter by Besarion Zhghenti is published regarding the collection “Soviet Georgia”. It notes that the work expresses boundless gratitude towards Stalin and the people’s readiness to defend their blood-earned freedom through heroic struggles, a sentiment affirmed by Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “My Native Land”, which opens the book.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1941, February, №2, p. 167.

1941

After April 9

In the magazine Mnatobi, Besarion Zhghenti publishes an extensive, review-style article titled “Georgian Literature of the Soviet Era”, a section of which is dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze’s work. According to the critic, the poet’s pre-revolutionary lyricism contained all the prerequisites for the renewal of his creative nature, and immediately following the victory of the Socialist Revolution, he became, without hesitation, a singer of the new life. Over time, his work grew richer with deeper themes and ideas. The author of the article also believes that the poem cycle “Memories of Europe” portrays vivid images reflecting the sharp contradictions of the capitalist world.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1941, February, №2, p. 108.

Dating: Magazine Mnatobi is signed for printing on April 9, 1941.

1941

After April 9

In the magazine Mnatobi, an article by Ilia Tavadze, “The Art of the Georgian People”, is published. The author discusses poets who are particularly dear and beloved to Georgians, and he names Galaktion Tabidze first and foremost.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1941, February, №2, p. 57.

Dating: Magazine Mnatobi is signed for printing on April 9, 1941.

1941

April 11

In the informational letter of “Literary Georgia”, titled “Evening of Georgian Soviet Poetry in Gori”, it is stated that on April 12, the Faculty of Language and Literature of Gori Pedagogical Institute is organizing a grand evening of Georgian Soviet poetry at the institute’s club. The invited poets include Galaktion Tabidze, Ioseb Grishashvili, Alio Mashashvili, Giorgi Leonidze, Simon Chikovani, Ilo Mosashvili, and Irakli Abashidze.

Source: “Evening of Georgian Soviet Poetry in Gori”, Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1941, №15, p. 4.

1941

April 11

The newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo publishes information about the third issue of the magazine Mnatobi, mentioning among its publications Galaktion Tabidze's poem "The Paris Commune".

Source: "Evening of Georgian Soviet Poetry in Gori", Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1941, №15, p. 4.

1941

April 11

In the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, an article titled "Galaktion Tabidze's Creative Evening at the Plekhanov Club" is published, discussing the evening event held on April 4.

Source: "Galaktion Tabidze's Creative Evening at the Plekhanov Club", Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1941, №15, p. 1.

1941

April 14

In the morning, together with his wife, Olga Darius, he travels to Gori to participate in an evening event. They visit the Gori Fortress, where Olga Darius sketches the fortress wall and discovers a fragment with enamel.

Source: O. Darius's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 502; G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-146, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 244.

1941

April 12

Together with his second wife, Olga Darius, he explores the Gori Fortress and asks her to sketch the images on its walls. Olga Darius sketches as best as she can, adding a figure of a man, which Galaktion likens to himself. They discover a fragment with enamel. Later, they stroll through the Gori market, where they purchase a kilogram of apples at a high price, and then visit Stalin's House Museum.

Source: O. Darius's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 502. G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-146, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 244.

1941

April 12

At the Gori Pedagogical Institute, a grand evening dedicated to Georgian Soviet poetry for workers takes place in the institute's club. The speaker, Ipolite Vartagava, shares stories with the audience about his former students, Galaktion Tabidze and Giorgi Leonidze. Another speaker, Alexandre Ghlonti, refers to Galaktion as the "wizard of poetry" and describes his masterpieces as the "Svetitskhoveli of Georgian poetry". Vaso Baiadze calls the visiting poets the "general staff of poetry” and refers to Galaktion as the “commander-in-chief of poetry”. Galaktion recites several poems, including “The Moon of Mtatsminda”, “Revolutionary Georgia”, and “My Native Land”.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entry, MGL, d-144, 26; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 233; MGL, d-146, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 244. Sh. Chubinidze, Only This and the Fortress of Gori, newspaper Gori, №144, December 12, p. 4; “Evening of Georgian Soviet Poetry in Gori”, Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1941, №16, p. 4; Sh. Nutsubidze, Gori hosted Galaktion, newspaper Gamarjveba, November 1, 1973, №131, p. 3; Al. Ghlonti, Meetings with Galaktion, magazine Drosha, 1979, N 10, p. 7.

1941

April 12

After the Georgian poetry evening in Gori concludes, Galaktion pulls Alexandre Ghlonti aside and says, “As was said here, Galaktion is the wizard of poetry, the Svetitskhoveli, the commander-in-chief of poetry, but why is it that others are the ones receiving the awards?”.

Source: Al. Ghlonti, Meetings with Galaktion, Mravalkari (Philological Sketches), Tbilisi, 1991, p. 152-153.

1941

April 13

At the invitation of the People’s Artist of the Republic, Pavle Prangishvili, Galaktion Tabidze, along with other Georgian writers in Gori, attends the performance “You Can’t See What You’ve Seen Before” and meets with the theatre ensemble.

Source: “Evening of Georgian Soviet Poetry in Gori”, Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1941, №16, p. 4.

1941

From the “Federation” publishing house, Galaktion Tabidze brings a printout of the Book “My Native Land”, counts the lines, and decides to add more – 3543 lines. He lists the poems to be added from the third volume: “Roses”, “My Native Land!”, “New Tiflis”, “Wind of the Caucasus”, an excerpt from the poem “Ancient Cities”, an excerpt from the poem “On Café Corso Street”, an excerpt from the poem “Compiègne Forest”, “Larix sibirica”, “Ars longa, vita brevis”, and an excerpt from the poem “Akaki Tsereteli”. He is interested in how many pages a large-format Book might be and how many poems it can contain. He notes that the Book should include comments, a monograph by Giorgi Abzianidze, and a facsimile.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-146, 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 243.

Note: Giorgi Abzianidze is mentioned by the first name in the source.

1941

April 14

In his diary, he notes that preparations for May Day need to be made. He must take care of his costume and send a poem to the magazine Mnatobi.

Source: MGL, d-146, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 244.

1941

April 14

He writes rhymes in his diary.

Source: MGL, d-146, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 244.

1941

April 15

He makes a note about a photograph taken in the 1920s with homeless children. He recalls that one day, near the railway station, they encountered orphaned children who had come from Russia. Their parents had perished in the Civil War, and they had sought refuge in Georgia because of its better climate. According to Galaktion, that same day, he met Shio Mghvimeli, who, upon seeing the photograph of Galaktion with the children, was moved to tears and took the picture from him. Galaktion notes that, under the care of the government, the children were placed in orphanages where they were cared for and educated. The memory of meeting the children resurfaced for him after being shown the photograph, which had been found among Shio Mghvimeli's papers.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-641, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 106-107.

1941

April 15-16

In his diary, under the title "Idea for Evenings", he lists possible venues for holding events throughout May. The list includes: the Writers' Union, the University, the Trade Union, the Marjanishvili, Griboyedov, Rustaveli, Musical Comedy, and Youth Theatres, the Public Library, the Japaridze Park, the clubs named after Voroshilov, Beria, Dzerzhinsky, Orjonikidze, and Gorky, the Ilia Chavchavadze School, the Houses of Folk Art and the Red Army, the Red Army, Pioneer, Artists', Railway, Public Catering, and Georgian Alpine Clubs, the State Film Industry, Parents' University, Tbilisi City Council, the Funicular, Georgian Estrada, the Philharmonic, the editorial offices of "Communist" and "Young Communist". It is also mentioned that events can be organized with physical culture enthusiasts, on May 1st on the radio, and on May 10th at the Teachers' House.

Source: MGL, d-146, 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 244;

1941

April 15-16

In his diary, under the title "Idea for May Raid", he lists the number of poems to be provided to various journals and newspapers: 28 poems to Komunisti, 28 to Akhali Komunisti, 28 to Zarya Vostoka, 1 to Mnatobi, 4 to Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 4 to Niangi, 14 to Sabtchota Mastsavlebeli, and 1 to Chveni Taoba.

Source: MGL, d-146, 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 244;

1941

April 15–16

In his diary, under the preparations for a meeting with the Literary-Pedagogical Circle of the Tbilisi Teachers' House on April 20, Galaktion Tabidze outlines tasks to be completed from April 17 to 20. He notes that it would be beneficial if Savle Abuladze's speech ends with a poem. He plans to speak about poetry. Other speakers will include Solomon Tsaishvili, Ioseb Imedashvili, Grigol Tskhvediani, Niko Gurgenidze, Grigol Japaridze, Ivane Khalipashvili, and Ipolite Vartagava. The concluding part will discuss the circle's activities. Preparations include making posters, announcements, and lighting arrangements. He records the phone number of the head of the Teachers' Club, Levan Prokopashvili. Stenographers are to arrive at 8 PM. He needs to find the magazine Lomisi and the newspaper Poeziis Dghe, and also an actor for recitations. If many people sign up to speak, the evening may extend to September 21 and 22. Information needs to be conveyed to Simon Tserava, Oboli Musha, and Nikoloz Iashvili. He notes the need for monographs by Giorgi Abzianidze, Solomon Kubaneishvili, Dimitri Beniashvili, and Davit Kasradze.

Source: MGL, d-146, 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 245;

Note: Simon Tsverava, Nikoloz Iashvili, Giorgi Abzianidze, Solomon Kubaneishvili, Dimitri Benashvili, Davit Kasradze are mentioned in the source by their last names, Solomon Tavadze - by the pseudonym "Oboli Musha".

1941

After April 16

In his diary, he records excerpts from poems: "Let Tomorrow Worry About Tomorrow", "Here! Behold!", "Clusters of Life", "Free and Strong Person", "Go Forward, Walk!", "From the May Songs", "Ring Follows Ring...", "From Daily Prose", "How Do You Not Know What Power Is", "Thunder, O Heart's Desire!", "Smile", "Science with Steadfast Labor", "And Yet You Moan", "Time Has Also Looked at That Heart", "We, Not Just One Life's Edge...", and "Where the Alps Are, in the Field".

Source: MGL, d-146, 10-12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 245-248;

1941

After April 16

He writes the phone numbers of Grigol Venadze and Otar Egadze in his diary and notes that he should meet Korneli Sanadze the next day.

Source: MGL, d-146, 10-13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 248;

1941

After April 16

He writes a prose sketch about how, after a party, while walking home in the pitch-black night, he is accompanied by a woman who recognizes him by his voice and expresses her respect for him.

Source: MGL, d-146, 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 248-249;

1941

After April 16

In his diary, he notes the number of lines for the poems to be added to the Book “My Native Land” to be published by the “Federation” publishing house, listing them by titles.

Source: MGL, d-146, 16-18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 249-250.

1941

After April 16

In his diary, he notes that he needs to submit 2000 lines of poems to the “Zarya Vostoka” publishing house, 1364 lines of poems to the “Federation” publishing house, 5000 lines for the fourth volume to the State Publishing House, 2000 lines of the poem “The Shepherd” to the Children’s Literature Publishing House, and 2000 lines to “Remedas”. In total, this amounts to 37,092 lines.

Source: MGL, d-146, 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 250.

1941

After April 16

He writes a letter to the Russian publishing house “Zarya Vostoka”, requesting them to include in their plan a small Book of his poems under the collective title “On Cafe Corso Street”. The Book will include the poems “On Cafe Corso Street”, “Compiegne Forest”, “The Paris Commune”, and “Refugees”, totalling 3000 lines.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-146, 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 248-249.

1941

After April 16

He writes a poem “First of May Greeting to Shota Rustaveli”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-146, 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 251-252.

Note: The poem was printed under the title “Again Meskhi’s gaze”.

1941

April 18

A translation of an excerpt from Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “My Native Land” is published in the Russian newspaper Molodoi Stalinets performed by V. Vasilenko, a student of the Faculty of Philology at Tbilisi University.

Source: Земля родная, Отрывок из поэмы, Галактион Табидзе, В. Василенко, Молодой сталинец, 1941, 18 апреля, №48;

1941

April 18

The article “Evening of Georgian Soviet Poetry in Gori”, published in the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, reviews the Georgian Soviet poetry evening organized on April 12 by the Faculty of Language and Literature of the Gori State Pedagogical Institute at the institute’s club. It mentions that the success of the evening was ensured by the participation of well-known poets: Galaktion

Tabidze, Giorgi Leonidze, Alio Mashashvili, and Ioseb Grishashvili. The evening was opened by the dean of the faculty, Alexandre Ghlonti. Vano Tzulukidze gave a brief overview of Georgian Soviet poetry. Among the reports read by the students were M. Khutsishvili's "The Peculiarity of Galaktion Tabidze's Lyricism" and E. Korotkova's "Galaktion Tabidze as a Poet of the Socialist Revolution". Then, Galaktion Tabidze and other poets read their poems, and the audience greeted them with thunderous applause.

Source: "Evening of Georgian Soviet Poetry in Gori", Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1941, №16, p. 4.

1941

Until April 19

He selects materials for the Russian Book "My Native Land!" and notes down 38 items in his diary that are needed. The list includes: Panteleimon Petrenko's translations of poems from a small handwritten notebook, his drawings, and 112 works with some pages torn out, the article "In Memory of Petrenko" published in the newspaper Vecherniy Tbilisi, and an article in the newspaper Komunisti signed by "A Group of Comrades"; Gary Bebutov's plan for Galaktion's selected works and Boris Brik's plan for his poetry collection, translations of individual poems by Konstantin Bogdanovsky, Valerian Gaprindashvili, Nikolai Tikhonov, Alexander Shcherbakov, Elena Scher, Ivane Cherkezishvili, Natalia Astafieva, Rurik Ivnev, Boris Serebryakov, and Vyacheslav Ivanov; interlinear translations by Olya Okujava and others, Boris Brik's poem about Galaktion, an invitation card to his evening event in Leningrad in 1934, photos and memories; six congratulatory telegrams received in 1933 on the 25th anniversary of his literary debut, a letter from the Transcaucasian State Publishing House; letters from Maxim Gorky and others for Alexander Pushkin's anniversary, three interesting extracts about travels to Azerbaijan and Armenia during the 1929 Congress of the Peoples' Friendship of Transcaucasia; an invitation card to an Anton Chekhov evening in Taganrog, a caricature of Lev Tolstoy, Alexander Pushkin, and Nikolai Gogol with aspiring writers; the literary Chronology "Far Chairmanship" published in the newspaper Tsitelarmeli; untranslatable Russian lines "On the Barricades of the World"; Popov's radio broadcast "The People's Poet of Georgia in Leningrad", Russian translations of letters by David Kldiashvili and Sandro Shanshiashvili, the 1936 issue of the newspaper Pravda with his portrait, and the Russian text "I Have Arrived".

Source: MGL, d-150, 5-8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 279-281.

1941

Until April 19

From the 38 items listed in the diary for the Book "My Native Land!", he separately notes exactly half that are ready and mentions that the remaining items still need to be worked on.

Source: MGL, d-150, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 281;

1941

Until April 19

In his diary, he writes the plan for a radio broadcast, where the introductory and concluding remarks will be delivered by the announcer. The list of poems to be read includes: "The Diagonal of Snow” (“The Long, Long Diagonal of Rain”), “The Frog Similar to Delaroché”, “It Will Not End”, “Its Nature”, “Two Forces”, “Escaping the Crisis”, “In Memory of Gastello”, “Ordained Georgia”, “Friendship of Nations”, “Stalin”, “Poetry Above All!”, “My lyre, Many Good Times”, and “What Saracens Once”. The list of musical numbers based on Galaktion’s poems includes: Ivane Gokieli’s “Marching Song”, Shalva Taktakashvili’s “My Native Land”, Andria Balanchivadze’s “The Union of Hearts”, Dimitri Arakishvili’s “Poetry Above All”, Tamar Shaverzashvili’s “Shoulder to Shoulder”, Valeri Jvaridze’s “I and the Night”, Massenet’s “Mary”, Valerian Tsagareishvili’s “My Native Land!”, the Ishkhneli Sisters’ “Remember, Mary”, a choral song by Giorgi Svanidze, Iona Tuskia’s “Manon Lescaut”, and Revaz Gabichvadze’s romance to be performed by singer Mikheil Kvarelashvili.

Source: MGL, d-150, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 281-282.

Note: Ivane Gokieli, Shalva Taktakashvili, Andria Balanchivadze, Valerian Tsagareishvili, Iona Tuskia, Revaz Gabichvadze, Mikheil Kvarelashvili are mentioned in the source by their last names.

1941

Until April 19

He writes a poem “Hey, homeland”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, Nd-150, 8-9; Nd-124, 15; №130; №131; №587; №2829; №7793; №2815; 725; №2050; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 20;

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“Hey, homeland...”).

1941

Until April 19

He selects poems from various publications and notes their titles in his diary, with page references. The list includes: “Manon Lescaut”, “We Don’t Want to Invade Others”, “There Are Many Armies in the World”, “Isn’t It Adorned for Him”, “Walk with Faith”, “My Song”, “To the Homeland”, “My lyre, Many Good Times”, and “Shoulder to Shoulder”.

Source: MGL, d-150, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 284;

1941

Until April 19

He writes a version of the poem “Gradually, Gradually, a New Country is Being Built” from the 1930 cycle “Revolutionary Georgia”, untitled as “Life Took Away the Dream...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-150, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 284-285;

1941

Until April 19

He writes a poem entitled “From all sides”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, Nd-150, p. 12; №135; №1103; №1277; №2113-2114; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 24;

Note: The poem is also found with titles: “Irakli, Victor of a Hundred Wars” and “Irakli’s Sword.

1941

Until April 19

For the newspaper Komunisti, he writes versions of the untitled poem “From the House in Varazis Khevi...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-150, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 286-287;

Note: The original title of the poem was “Answer to Georgian Students”, and it was first published under the title “On that Venetian Bridge”.

1941

April 19

At 9:30 PM, a radio program titled “Galaktion Tabidze at the Microphone” is broadcast, lasting 28 minutes. Shalva Radiani speaks, and Davit Spirandi and Nazi Kereselidze read poems, including: “Flags Quickly!”, “Prologue to One Hundred Poems”, “I Want to Sing”, “From the Daily Prose”, “There are Days”, “Nineteen Eighteen”, “Turbid Wind”, “What Are Words For”, “Lenin”, “Circle Follows Circle”, “In the Evening on Mtatsminda”, “We Are the Poets of Georgia”, and “My Native Land”.

Source: Radio program today, newspaper Komunisti, 1941, April 19, p. 4; Galaktion Tabidze’s diary entries, MGL, d-142, 10; MGL, 144, 26; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 153, 233.

1941

April 19

In the radio broadcast Chronology, the newspaper Komunisti publishes information that on the current day at 21:30, a literary program titled “G. Tabidze at the Microphone” will take place, lasting 35 minutes.

Source: Radio Broadcast Today, Newspaper Komunisti, 1941, 19 April, №92, p. 4.

1941

19 April

At 21:30 in the evening he participates in the literary radio program “G. Tabidze at the microphone”.

Source: Radio Broadcast Today, Newspaper Komunisti, 1941, 19 April, №92, p. 4.

1941

After April 19

Boris Serebriakov informs him that the Russian translation of the poem “Eesti”, originally published in the newspaper Zarya Vostoka, has been reprinted in an Estonian newspaper in Tallinn.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-142, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 155.

1941

After April 19

He writes an untitled poem "What a beautiful sky Georgia has...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-142, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 155.

1941

After April 19

The third issue of the magazine Mnatobi publishes the poem "Paris Commune" ("Thus filled with the source of the day..."), which is preceded by an epigraph with the words of Eugène Pottier: "Ah, the people have taken to the streets and everyone sings, for the first time singing victory and poetry".

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1941, March, №3, p. 7-9;

1941

April 20

At 8 PM, an evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze is held at the Teacher's House. Savle Abuladze gives a lecture, and speeches are delivered by Grigol Japaridze and Ilia Sikharulidze. Young poets read their poems.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-144, 26; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 234.

1941

April 20

He holds a meeting with members of the Literary Circle at the Tbilisi Teacher's House. Speeches are delivered by Simon Tsverava, Savle Abuladze, and others.

Source: "Galaktion Tabidze's Meeting with Members of the Literary Circle at the Teachers' House", Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1941, №17, p. 1.

1941

After April 20

For his bibliography, he notes in his notebook unpublished materials, specifically the speeches and presentations given by the speakers at the meeting with the members of the Literary Circle at the Tbilisi Teacher's House.

Source: MGL, d-98, 148; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 312-313.

Dating: The meeting was held on April 20, 1941.

1941

April 20 or later

In his diary, he lists one hundred poets who have written poems, essays or narrations about him: Sandro Shanshiashvili, Davit Kldiashvili, Vasil Barnov, Valerian Gunia, Gandegili, Shalva Dadiani, Ia Ekaladze, Trifon Ramishvili, Shio Mghvimeli, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Varlam Rukhadze, Niko Kurdghelashvili, Ilo Mosashvili, Lidia Megrelishvili, Daria Akhvlediani, Lavrenti Dzidziguri, Lidiya Megrelishvili, Olimpieli, Alexandre Abasheli, Bobokhidze Kale, Gelovani Mirza, Gorgadze Vaso, Mariam Garikuli, Ietim Gurji, Solomon Tavadze, Marika Mikeladze, Konstantine Lortkipanidze, Varlam Zhuruli, Rodion Korkia, Demna Shengelaia, Sio Khidistaveli, Soso Grishashvili, Marika Mrevlishvili, Kolau Nadiradze, Ivika Kipiani, Vera Shubladze, Andro Tevzadze, Shalva Kashmadze, Giorgi Gagua, Soso Amashukeli, Nikoloz Tchilashvili, Ekvtime Tchanishvili, Konstantine Ratishvili, Davit Gabruashvili, Irakli Topadze, Giorgi Sidoshvili, Giorgi Shinatekheli, Ketevan Kuchukashvili, Vakhtang Khutsishvili, Vasil Gujabidze, Vasil Kirvalidze, Ekaterine Gabashvili, Natela Veshapeli, Liuvena, Valiko Ciureli, Givi Orjonikidze, Grigol Tabatadze, Grigol Arosia, Giorgi Lomtadidze, Severian Isiani, Sapo Mgeladze, Ioseb Gvantseladze, Ilia Khinveli, Ioseb Gvantsaladze, Raud Gogokhia, Tushi, Ashug-Muradi, Savle Abuladze, Vera Kuprashvili, Nino Tkeshelashvili, Varden Kurtanidze, Banspicho Chichua, Andro Chavchanidze, Geronti Tughushi, Vano Beroshvili, Vladimir Sulaberidze, Shakro Navtlugheli, Mikheil Uznadze, Lado Matchavariani, Severian Museridze, Guguli Nasaridze, Vanion Daraseli, Giorgi Samkharadze, Shalva Shavgulidze, Ruben Akopov, Ryurik Ivnev, Boris Brik.

Source: MGL, d-144, 27; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 234-235.

Note: Varlam Rukhadze, Lavrenti Dzidziguri, Ilo Mosashvili, Alexandre Abasheli, Ioseb Grishashvili, Giorgi Gagua, Nikoloz Tchilashvili, Konstantine Ratishvili, Davit Gabruashvili, Giorgi Sidoshvili, Ketevan Kuchukashvili, Vasil Gujabidze, Vasil Kirvalidze, Ekaterine Gabashvili, Valiko Tsiureli, Grigol Tabatadze, Grigol Arosia, Giorgi Lomtadidze, Severian Isiani, Ilia Khinveli, Ioseb Gvantseladze, Nino Tkeshelashvili, Banspicho Chichua, Andro Chavchanidze, Geronti Tughushi, Konstantine Beroshvili, Vladimir Sulaberidze, Mikheil Uznadze, Vanion Daraseli, Shalva Shavgulidze are mentioned in the source with the initials of the first names and the last names; Niko Kurdghelashvili with the pseudonym - “Narkani”, Lidia Megrelidze with the pseudonym - “Nazisi”, Olimpieli, Giorgi Mantashov with the pseudonym - “Shinatekheli”, Ioseb Gvantseladze - with the pseudonym - “Knari”, Ivane Bukurauli - with the pseudonym “Tushi”, Sarkis Kirakozov - with the pseudonym “Sh. Navtlugheli”, Samkharadze Giorgi - with the pseudonym “Giaseli”, Liuvena, Ashugh-Murad, with pseudonyms, Severian Museridze – as Seo Museridze.

1941

April 25

In the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, an informational article titled “Galaktion Tabidze’s Meeting with Members of the Teachers’ House Literary Circle” was published, stating that the meeting took place on April 20. The speaker, Simon Tsverava, discussed Galaktion Tabidze’s role in the development of Georgian Soviet poetry, while Savle Abuladze talked about various stages of the poet’s creative work. Writer Ilia Sikharulidze and Associate Professor Grigol Japaridze emphasized the importance of Galaktion Tabidze’s work in the communist upbringing of the youth. It was noted that based on his poetry, young people will develop topics such as Lenin and Stalin's portrayal in his works, themes like G. Tabidze as a singer of international solidarity, and Soviet patriotism in G. Tabidze's poetry, among others. Young poets Shalva Bakidze and Mikheil Zangurashvili read poems dedicated to Galaktion. In conclusion, the poet himself read his poems: "My Native Land", "Revolutionary Georgia", and "The Moon of Mtatsminda".

Source: "Galaktion Tabidze's Meeting with Members of the Literary Circle at the Teachers' House", Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1941, №17, p. 1.

1941

April 26

At the Abkhazian State Theatre, he attends a Soviet poetry evening dedicated to the Abkhazian edition of "The Knight in the Panther's Skin" and sits on the honorary presidium.

Source: "Evening of Soviet Poetry in Sokhumi", Komunisti, 1933, №99, p. 1.

1941

April 26

He delivers a speech at the festive event dedicated to the publication of the Abkhazian translation of "The Knight in the Panther's Skin" at the Sokhumi State Theatre.

Source: На литературном вечере в Гостеатре Абхазии, "Советская Абхазия, 1941, №99, p. 1.

1941

April 26

The article titled "The Knight in the Panther's Skin in Abkhazian" published in the newspaper "Zarya Vostoka" notes that a major literary evening will be held in Sokhumi at the Abkhazian State Theatre on April 26 to celebrate the release of the Abkhazian translation of "The Knight in the Panther's Skin". Prominent Georgian poets, including Irakli Abashidze, Galaktion Tabidze, Ilo Mosashvili, Karlo Kaladze, Konstantine Chichinadze, Razhden Gvetadze, and Konstantine Lortkipanidze, will participate in the event.

Source: "Вепхис ткаосани на абхаском языке", "Заря Востока", 1941, №98, p. 4.

1941

April 27

The newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti publishes an article titled "Literary Evening at the Abkhazian State Theatre", noting that on April 27, the Abkhazian State Theatre hosted an event dedicated to the significant occasion of the publication of Shota Rustaveli's "The Knight in the Panther's Skin" in the Abkhazian language. The event was attended by party officials and representatives of the intelligentsia of the Abkhazian Autonomous Republic. Georgian writers, including the People's Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze, delivered speeches.

Source: Newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti, 1941, №99, p. 1.

Note: The same article in Russian and Abkhaz languages is published in the Russian and Abkhazian versions of the newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti: На литературном вечере в Гостеатре Абхазии, "Советская Абхазия, 1941, №99, p. 1.

1941

April 27

The newspaper Kommunisti publishes an informational article titled “Soviet Poetry Evening in Sokhumi”, reporting that on April 26 of the current year, the Abkhazian State Theatre hosted a Soviet poetry evening dedicated to the Abkhazian edition of “The Knight in the Panther’s Skin”, which turned into a true celebration. Among the poets seated in the presidium were Dimitri Gulia, the translator of Shota Rustaveli’s poem, Galaktion Tabidze, Irakli Abashidze, Ilo Mosashvili, and others. Galaktion Tabidze, Ilo Mosashvili, and Konstantine Chichinadze read their poems.

Source: “Evening of Soviet Poetry in Sokhumi”, Komunisti, 1933, №99, p. 1.

1941

After April 27

Galaktion Tabidze compiled a list of publications and oral presentations about himself, totalling 245 entries.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-98, p. 120-127; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 283-293; Shalva Radiani, “The Poet of Revolution”, Mnatobi, 1930, №4, p. 148.

Note: Among these, there is one publication that does not pertain to him: Shalva Radiani’s article “Revolution’s Poet”, published in the magazine Mnatobi, which discusses the suicides of Vladimir Mayakovsky and Sergei Yesenin. It appears that the poet mistakenly included this publication instead of one of Shalva Radiani’s articles about him.

1941

April 29

In his notebook, Galaktion Tabidze notes that he needs to send a telegram to Samtredia and, the following day, he must visit the Writers’ Union and wait for a call from Polio Abramia.

Source: MGL, d-147, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 252-253.

Note: Polio Abramia is referred to by the last name in the source.

1941

April 29 or later

In his notebook, Galaktion Tabidze notes that he plans to travel to Moscow, although he is unsure when. He is curious about the man who has arrived in Tbilisi from Moscow to organize an evening event and wonders if it will be possible to meet him. Tabidze thinks that Vasiliy Kachalov should not get involved in the matter. He doesn’t understand the need for separate events for poets who began their careers before the revolution and those who started afterward, as if the latter group is inherently superior and as if the former no longer continues to write. He is also curious whether Igor Severyanin is still at the editorial office of the newspaper Krasnaya Nov. He suspects that others have been preparing in secret for a long time, while he has to go completely unprepared.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-147, 1, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 252-256.

Note: Vasiliy Kachalov and Tretyakovskaya are mentioned in the source by their last names.

1941

After April 29

He is curious whether Boris Serebryakov has already submitted the Russian translations of his poems to the radio or if they are not ready yet.

Source: MGL, d-147, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 253.

1941

After April 29

He notes in his notebook the poem by A. Abalauri titled “Genius of Galaktion”.

Source: MGL, d-147, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 254.

1941

After April 29

He notes in his notebook that he must meet with KOlya Kandelaki on May 17th at 12 o'clock.

Source: MGL, d-147, 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 254.

1941

After April 29

He spontaneously composes the poem “So, you believe the pianist has fallen...”

Source: MGL, d-147, 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 254.

1941

After April 29

In his notebook, Galaktion Tabidze writes that in the daily newspaper Tsitelarmieli, issue No. 284 from December 10, 1932, a notice was published about his appointment as the chairman of the Central Circle of Military Writers.

Source: MGL, d-147, 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 254.

1941

After April 29

Eremia Astvatsaturov recounts that despite the long-standing opposition from Irakli Abashidze, Sandro Euli, and Simon Chikovani, his letter was published. He was summoned to the Central Committee, and the entire literary community was agitated, but he did not change his mind. An expanded session of the Writers' Presidium was convened on this issue. Leo Kiacheli was described as a great scoundrel, conducting some sort of politics. Galaktion notes that he was not invited to this meeting and that he already thought the same about Kiacheli. The second issue of the magazine Chveni Taoba did not go on sale. Issue №2-3 was released, but Eremia Astvatsaturov's letter was not published in it. Instead, it was replaced by a boastful letter from Gabriel Jabushanuri, which discusses him and Simon Chikovani.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-147, 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 255.

1941

After April 29

In his notebook, he notes down Russian-language materials: translations by Panteleimon Petrenko and Boris Brik, the evening held on June 17, 1934, at the Leningrad Academy of Arts building, verse fragments, unpublished translations, translations published in newspapers, information published in the Russian newspaper Pravda on September 4, 1936, about his being awarded the Order of Lenin, Maxim Gorky's letter to the Alexander Pushkin Jubilee Committee regarding his election on September 20, 1934, and the history of his three-volume works, "Epoch", and other publications.

Source: MGL, d-147, 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 255-256.

Note: Panteleimon Petrenko is mentioned by his last name in the source.

1941

After April 29

In his notebook, he lists books containing articles about him. The list includes Simon Khundadze's published "Essays" from 1941, where the chapter "Galaktion Tabidze" occupies pages 352-370, and Galaktion is mentioned in the preface by Besarion Zhghenti. Also noted is Akaki Gatsserelia's collection of literary essays "Books and Authors", where the chapter "Galaktion Tabidze" occupies pages 201-212.

Source: MGL, d-147, 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 256.

1941

After April 29

He starts writing an untitled poem "She fluttered, spread her wings...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-147, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 256.

1941

April 30

He is granted a pension and receives a pension card.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's Pension Card, National Archives of Georgia, HYPERLINK "https://archive.gov.ge/ge/kviris-dokumenti/galaktion-tabidzis-sapensio-wignaki"
<https://archive.gov.ge/ge/kviris-dokumenti/galaktion-tabidzis-sapensio-wignaki>

1941

April

The poem "May Day" is published in the magazine Remedas.

Source: G. Tabidze, "May Day", magazine Remedasi, №4, cover page, p. 2.

1941

April

At the evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze held at the Philharmonic Summer Hall, Simon Tsverava gives a speech.

Source: S. Tsverava, People's Love, newspaper Tbilisi, October 31, 1973, N 256, p. 3.

Dating: From the March 31, 1941 entry, it is evident that he has planned to hold an evening event at the Philharmonic in the following month.

May

1941

Until May

He writes a poem “May”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3874; №1867; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 55.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “May Day” and untitled (On the Streets and Squares).

1941

Until May 1

He writes a poem “Greetings to May”

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2531; №5838; №7699; №7707; №7830-7835; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 49.

Note: The poem is also found with titles: “First May”, “First of May on the Embankment”, and untitled (beginning with: “How could I not praise my country...”, “The sun shines with full strength...”, and “The sky shines with complete clarity...”).

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1941

May 1

The Russian newspaper Molodoi Stalinets publishes the translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Greetings to May” (“How can I not praise my country...”) by Boris Serebryakov.

Source: Сердце, пой! (Стихи) Галактион Табидзе, перевод Бориса Серебрякова, Молодой сталинец, 1941, 1 мая, №54.

1941

May 1

The poem “Greetings to May” is printed in the newspaper Komunisti.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1941, №2, 1 May, p. 1.

1941

After May 9

He receives a letter from Davit Tsotsonava, a seventh-grade student from the village of Akhali Kindgha in the Ochamchire district. The student is curious about how to understand the phrase he read in the 1938 issue of the magazine Chveni Taoba, which stated that Galaktion restored the romantic-symbolist poetic voice of Baratashvili. The student also asks whether there is a difference between the literature of 19th and 20th-century writers in terms of both form and content.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-468-8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289.

1941

After May 10

In Giorgi Kuchishvili's Book "Selected Poems", he makes underlining and comments.

Source: MGL, t-202, G. Kuchishvili, "Selected Poems", Tbilisi, 1941, p. 5-6, 9, 11, 19-20, 23, 24-29, 31-36, 51-52, 62-63, 66-67, 75-76,

1941

May 15

He writes a poem "Klara Tsetkina".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2586; №3837; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 9.

1941

After May 16

In a school orthographic dictionary, he underlines certain words and writes rhymes on the last page.

Source: MGL, t-93, School Orthographic Dictionary, compiled by V. Topuria and I. Giginishvili, Tbilisi, 1941, p. 3-6, 208.

1941

May 17 or later

He receives a letter from Ilia Khinveli, informing him about a typographical error in the typewritten copy of Galaktion's poem "Greetings to May" that was given to him. Instead of the phrase "resounding song" as published in the newspaper Komunisti, the copy read "three-stringed song". Since this disrupted the syllable count, the sender corrected it to "song of relief". Khinveli writes that he had the editorial secretary send Galaktion an honorarium and apologizes profusely for its extremely small amount.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-469; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 333;

1941

After May 23

He receives a letter from Sergo Jinchvelashvili, who asks him to go somewhere to resolve a matter on his behalf, to lend him 51 roubles until he receives his pension, and to provide him with a few sheets of writing paper.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-224; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 258.

1941

Until May 26

He writes a poem "Oh, the joy of creation".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2024; №1867; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 54.

Note: The poem is also found with titles: “Oh, the Joy” and untitled (Who with a sincere heart, honestly...”).

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1941

After May 26

The magazine Oktombreli publishes Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “May is Coming”.

Source: magazine Oktombreli, May, 1941, №5, p. 1;

1941

April-May

At the event dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze in Mtatsminda Park, Galaktion reads his poem “Mtatsminda Moon” at the end of the evening, following the words of thanks. As he recites the poem, the moon appears, greeted by a thunderous applause from the audience. When the hall quiets down and the poet resumes reading, another round of applause begins from a different group of listeners. It turns out that there are foreigners in the audience who, upon hearing about the extraordinary coincidence from their translator, also express their emotions with applause.

Source: S. Tsverava, People’s Love, newspaper Tbilisi, October 31, 1973, N 256, p. 3.

1941

May

In his notebook, Olga Darius writes that the Tunguska meteorite fell on June 30, 1908, at 7 AM. The meteorite’s descent was observed across the entire central Siberian region. It flew through the sky for about 10 seconds with such brightness that it was visible even against the backdrop of the sun. The meteorite hit the ground at great speed.

Source: MGL, d-147, 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 256-257.

Note: Olga Darius is not mentioned in the source, but the handwriting is hers.

1941

May

In his notebook, he writes the title of Siko Pashalishvili’s poem dedicated to Stalin’s sixtieth anniversary, “Greetings from Georgia”, which was published in the magazine Remedas in 1939, and the title of Lidia Megrelidze’s article, “A Little Something for the History of the Poti Theatre”, which was published in the magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba in 1940.

Source: MGL, d-147, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 257.

Note: Siko Pashalishvili and Lidia Megrelidze are mentioned in the source by their surnames.

1941

May

In his notebook, he notes that there are articles about Shalva Dadiani by Eremia Astvatsaturov and Shalva Radiani. The magazine Pioneri published an article titled “Renowned Anniversary Celebrant”, Alka Sulava published “The Beloved Writer of the People”, Simon Kvariani published “Shalva Dadiani”, and a poem was published in the magazine Oktombreli.

Source: MGL, d-147, 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 257.

1941

May

In his notebook, he compiles a bibliographical list of the past two years, which includes both his own works and publications dedicated to him or his creative output.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-147, 19-20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 257-258.

1941

May

The poem “Klara Tsetkina” is published in magazine “Remedasi”.

Source: Magazine Remedasi, 1941, №5, p. 1.

1941

Summer or later

At Elbakidze Bridge, he meets Lavrosi Kalandadze and offers him to drink a bit of cognac. Lavrosi Kalandadze says that it would indeed be good to drink to the glory of poetry, as poetry is one of humanity’s main saviours. Galaktion responds that such exaggeration of the role of poetry would not even please the heavens. While poetry is both the ignition of passion and torment, a fountain of water is needed to extinguish a fire... but in poetry, there should not be a single drop of water.

Source: A. Ratiani, Recollections about Galaktion, Magazine Mnatobi, 1996, № 9-10, p. 137-138.

Dating: According to the author, the event took place a few months after the start of World War II.

1941

Summer or later

He meets Shalva Kashmadze and Lavrosi Kalandadze. In response to Lavrosi Kalandadze’s words about his pessimism, he says that, in reality, he loves the sky, the earth, and life very much, and that, from time to time, not only he but all people feel sadness.

Source: A. Ratiani, Recollections about Galaktion, Magazine Mnatobi, 1996, № 9-10, p. 138.

Dating: According to the author, the event took place a few months after the start of World War II.

1941

Summer or later

In a conversation with friends, he recalls how Giorgi Kuchishvili once sarcastically asked him if he had a scorpion in his pocket, since he was afraid to put his hand in and take out money. He notes regretfully that at that time, he truly didn't have any money.

Source: A. Ratiani, Recollections about Galaktion, Magazine Mnatobi, 1996, № 9-10, p. 138.

Dating: According to the author, the event took place a few months after the start of World War II.

1941

Summer or later

In a conversation with friends, he says that his desire to be united with eternity, which overwhelms him, is often mistaken by some for self-aggrandizement and vanity.

Source: A. Ratiani, Recollections about Galaktion, Magazine Mnatobi, 1996, № 9-10, p. 139.

Dating: According to the author, the event took place a few months after the start of World War II.

1941

Summer or later

He advises Shalva Kashmadze to stop writing poems and focus on criticism instead. He says that poetry is treacherous and can sometimes trip you up. Writing in general is a dark business, but writing poetry is even more so.

Source: A. Ratiani, Recollections about Galaktion, Magazine Mnatobi, 1996, № 9-10, p. 139.

Dating: According to the author, the event took place a few months after the start of World War II.

June

1941

Until June

He knocks on Mariam Garikuli's door and leaves an invitation card in the door handle, inviting her to his event that evening. Mariam Garikuli attends the event, which is intended for workers, and gives a speech.

Source: M. Garikuli, Our Galaktion, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 42.

1941

After June 5

The poem "May Day" is published in the magazine Pioneri.

Source: Magazine Pioneri, 1941, №5, p. 1.

Dating: This issue of the magazine Pioneri was signed for printing on June 5.

1941

Until June 22

Carrying his bust crafted by Tite Sikharulidze, Galaktion walks along Plekhanov (current David Aghmashenebeli) Avenue and Marx (Zaarbrücken) Square toward Soviet (Arnold Chikobava)

Street. On the way, he stops to buy cigarettes, placing the bust on the counter and sitting nearby to chat with the Armenian vendor woman. Upon learning that she is a mother of seven children, he wishes happiness for each of them and bids her farewell. Journalist Abibo Tomadze notices Galaktion from a distance and approaches him specifically to offer assistance. The poet remarks that the bust is light. The journalist helps him place it on his shoulder, and Galaktion continues on his way toward Soviet Street.

Source: A. Tomadze, Galaktion and the cigarette vendor woman, December 9, 1982, N. p. 4.

Note: It is possible that he was carrying the bust to his creative evening event or to an exhibition.

1941

After June 22

Together with Georgian writers, he tours the Pioneers' Palace and its study rooms. Due to the onset of the war, a quietness prevails in the building. Ana Vardiashvili's concert brigade is preparing to leave for the hospital, but upon seeing Galaktion, they pause and sing "Suliko" and "Tsitsinatela" to him.

Source: A. Tomadze, Galaktion in the Pioneers' Palace, Young Leninst, November 2, 1973, N 44., p. 3.

1941

After June 22

He writes a poem "War-like".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №218; №1140; №2886; №6360; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 11; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 294.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (starting with: "To the eagles, a salute!.." and "No – weak and cowardly...").

1941

After June 22

He writes a poem "Homeland, do you hear how it calls you?".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3353; №3563; №3324; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 23; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 294.

Note: The poem is also found untitled, starting with: "Homeland, do you hear how it calls you?.." and "Don't rush. The wind will die down...").

1941

After June 22

He writes a poem "A Number".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №445; №1032; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 29; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 294.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (starting with: "There was a number of victims..." and "Who will erase the stain of war from the world without hindrance...").

1941

After June 22

He writes an untitled poem “In Hitler’s Heart, Undoubtedly...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4329; №6790-6791; №7261; №2417; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 30; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 294.

Note: The poem is also found with the title “Europe, What Do You Want?” and untitled (“Europe, tell me what you want...”).

1941

After June 22

He writes an untitled poem “Our Borders Have Been Crossed...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5738; №5825-5826; №5881; №2009-2010; №2055-2056. G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 34; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 294.

Note: “The poem is also found untitled (starting with: “Thoughts will be scattered...”, and “A heavy old father enters...”).

1941

After June 22

He writes an untitled poem “For Some Reason, When the Surroundings...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5185; №3959; №7847-7849; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 32; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 294.

Note: The poem is also found with the title “What Splendour and Wealth” and untitled (starting with: “Is there not – for fascism...”, and “What splendour and wealth...”).

1941

After June 22

He writes an untitled poem “Friends! It Repeats...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3848-3851; №717-718; №4014-126; №6360; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 12; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 294.

Note: The poem is also found with the title “We Will Win” and untitled (starting with: “For an ancient time, an unjust power flows...”, and “The enemy only digs a grave...”).

1941

June 24

He writes a poem “Homeland, O Life”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3564; №3847; №4620; №6428; №3853; №724; №2048; №5928; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 12.

Note: The poem is also found with the titles: “We Will Win”, “Beautiful Homeland!” and untitled (“Oh, did I not feel...”).

1941

June 27

In the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, Besarion Zhghenti’s article “For the Homeland” is published, in which the author reviews the manifestations of patriotic sentiment in Georgian poetry and focuses on Galaktion’s poem “My Native Land”, considering it a masterpiece of contemporary civic lyricism.

Source: B. Zhghenti, For the Homeland, Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1941, №26 (June 27), p. 3.

1941

June

He writes an untitled poem “For Me, Only This Sound, This Colour Is Longed For...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №3565; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 174.

July

1941

July 9

In his diary, he writes that claiming there are fewer political accents in his poems than in Alio Mirtskhulava’s work and disregarding his anti-fascist poems is a diversion.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-591, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 487.

1941

July 31

He writes a poem “A Man”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №190; №2524; №4968; №6263; №7764; №8206; №5513; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 256.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (with beginnings: “From that ancient time...”; “Language, mind, and advice...”).

August

1941

Until August 15

He translates one stanza from George Gordon Byron’s poem “The Deformed Transformed”: “Beyond the Po, beyond the mountains...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-148, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 259;

Note: The original title of the poem is “The Deformed Transformed”.

1941

Until August 15

He writes three versions of the poem “What Saracens Once”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-148, 1-3, 26-27; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 259-260, 273-274.

1941

Until August 15

In his notebook, he writes quotes from Molière’s play “The Pretentious Young Ladies” and William Shakespeare’s play “Cymbeline”.

Source: MGL, d-148, 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 260.

1941

Until August 15

In his notebook, he writes in Latin a quote from Publius Ovidius Naso’s poem “Fasti” along with its translation: “A strong man will have the whole earth as his homeland, just as the fish has the sea”.

Source: MGL, d-148, 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 261.

Note: The quote in the original reads: “Omne solum forti patria est ut piscibus aegror”

1941

Until August 15

He doubts his wife Olga Darius’s actions and is curious about who she met, where she was calling from, and how much she paid for the cigarettes.

Source: MGL, d-148, 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 261.

1941

Until August 15

He is irritated by the fact that his wife, Olga Darius’s, niece – Laine Bartelis, whom she raised – does not obey his aunt and gives orders in Galaktion’s household.

Source: MGL, d-148, 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 261.

Note: Layne Bartelis is mentioned by name in the source.

1941

Until August 15

He writes in Russian, refusing to apologize to some scoundrel.

Source: MGL, d-148, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 261.

Note: It is unclear from the entry who is being referred to.

1941

Until August 15

He writes several versions of a poem on the theme of Varazi Gorge.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-148, 7-10, 22; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 262-264, 270.

Note: The titles "Poems of Varazi Gorge" and "Varazi Gorge" are crossed out in the autograph. Two stanzas of the poem, with significant changes, were incorporated into the poem "The Infantry Set Out", dated 1941–1945. In 1947, a revised version of the poem was published under the title "On That Venetian Bridge".

1941

Until August 15

He writes three versions of "Poems of Varazi Gorge".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-148, 8-9, 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 262-264, 270

1941

Until August 15

In the notebook, it is noted that he needs to buy cigarettes and matches. He also needs to have a massage, take baths, and resolve the issue with the housekeeper.

Source: MGL, d-148, 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 264.

1941

Until August 15

He attempts to recall how many women he knows. To do this, he first lists the organizations where the women he is acquainted with work. The list includes: Federation, Zarya Vostoka, Kommunisti, publishing houses for children's literature and the state press; the Writers' and Artists' Unions; the theatres of Marjanishvili, Rustaveli, Griboedov, and the Opera; the Social Welfare Institution (Sobes), a savings bank, radio, the People's Commissariat for Education, and the university's medical commission. Additionally, he remembers women from his yard and his relatives. He estimates the total to be around 1,000.

Source: MGL, d-148, 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 264.

1941

August 15

He is in a medical clinic and notes the names of the doctors: Ivane Pranguliani, Gabriel Pondoev, and Ivane Demuria, as well as the procedures he was prescribed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-148, 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 265.

1941

August 15 or later

He is revising the second version of the "Varazi Gorge" poems with a different melody and changes the title from "Varazi Gorge" to "Venetian Bridge".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-148, 8-9, 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 262-264, 270 .

1941

August 16

He is staying in the medical clinic and notes the names of the doctors: Ivane Demuria, Kharadze, and Sabashvili. He writes that they will check his temperature at 6 PM and that the lights in the vestibule are turned off in the evening.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-148, 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 265.

1941

August 17

He is in the treatment complex and Dr. Gobronidze gives him sleeping pill powder.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-148, 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 265.

1941

After August 17

He writes three variants of the untitled poem "Let such a wind blow...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-148, 12-15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 265-268;

Note: The poem was first published under the title "Flying" in the collection "My Native Land" in 1942.

1941

After August 17

In his notebook, he notes the kiosks and stores of the Soviet Printing Complex where tickets for the exhibition dedicated to his 50th birthday will be sold.

Source: MGL, d-148, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 268.

1941

After August 17

He starts writing an untitled poem "If they preach that life is nothing...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-148, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 269.

1941

After August 17

In his diary, he lists the authors of articles and poems written about him: Davit Kldiashvili, Gandegili, Vasil Barnov, Shalva Dadiani, Valerian Gunia, Sandro Shanshishvili, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Ia Ekaladze, Zakaria Chichinadze, Shio Mghvimeli, Ekaterine Gabashvili, Etim Gurji, Daria Akhvlediani, Niko Marr, Alexandre Abashvili, Ioseb Grishashvili, Mirza Gelovani, Marika Mikheladze, Kale Bobokhidze.

Source: MGL, d-148, 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 269.

1941

After August 17

He writes an untitled poem “The most precious of all...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-148, 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 269.

1941

After August 17

He writes an untitled poem: “Poetry is eternal / the arena of wisdom”. / Greetings from me to everyone, / who is on my side!”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-148, 22; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 270.

1941

After August 17

He writes fragments for a poem entitled “To Glass”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-148, 22, 24, 25; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 270-273.

1941

After August 17

In his notebook, under the title “Women in Tbilisi”, he writes that the city was left to women – mothers, wives, sisters, and daughters – because fathers, sons, husbands, and brothers were drafted to the front. This situation significantly changed the face of Tbilisi, and at night, a rare order was established. From dusk until dawn, housewives take turns on duty. The “dictatorship of women” is felt in hospitals – most doctors in the medical commission are women. The same applies to institutions, schools, offices, and trade organizations.

Source: MGL, d-148, 23; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 271.

Note: In the same notebook, preceding this text, he has written about how many women he knows and their affiliations.

1941

After August 17

He writes an untitled poem “If here...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-148, 23; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 271.

1941

After August 17

He is preparing material for publication in the newspapers Komunisti and Zarya Vostoka.

Source: MGL, d-148, 22, 23, 24; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 270-272.

1941

After August 17

He writes an acrostic titled “Parsadan”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-148, 25; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 272.

1941

After August 17

In his notebook titled “How They Fight Me”, he writes that his poems about the Great Patriotic War are not being published in the newspapers Komunisti and Zarya Vostoka. His old adversary, Ioseb Grishashvili, is placed in the first position, which he believes is an attempt to overshadow him. He thinks this is a result of his defamation, and there is a decree and instruction regarding this. Although the group is powerful, they won't be able to defeat him. Previously, his evenings had an element of surprise; he managed to arrange everything at the last minute, and they wanted his evenings to be both present and absent at the same time.

Source: MGL, d-148, 28; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 274.

1941

After August 17

In his notebook, he writes that the first priority is to keep the apartment. Additionally, he needs oil and 5 kilos of beans.

Source: MGL, d-148, 28-29; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 274-275.

1941

After August 17

In his notebook, he notes Vasiliy Slovachenskiy's statement that every writer is now an engineer.

Source: MGL, d-148, 28-29; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 274-275.

1941

After August 30

He receives a letter sent by Olya Okujava from exile. The sender expresses concern that she still has not heard anything of him. She writes that she has gathered handfuls of rays and sends him millions of suns. She asks him to take care of his health, which will also bring happiness to Olya. She misses him very much and longs to be home; from afar, she embraces and kisses Galaktion, his books, and each manuscript.

Source: O. Okujava's letter to Galaktion, MGL, 24551-402; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 243-244.

September

1941

September 2

He writes a poem “September 2, 1941”.

Source: Autograph: MGL, №1333; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 91.

1941

After September 2

In the magazine Mnatobi, the poem “Homeland” (“We were very poor...”) is published.

Source: G. Tabidze, “Homeland”, magazine Mnatobi, 1941 №8, p. 3.

Note: This issue of the magazine was signed for printing on September 2, 1941.

1941

September 4

He goes to the medical complex in Vake for treatment.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze’s letter, G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 170;

1941

September 4

Shalva Kashmadze learns that Galaktion has been admitted to the Vake hospital for treatment and sends a short note to his ward. He inquires about what is hurting him, whether he needs anything, and when he will be discharged. He had considered bringing him his book, but reconsidered, thinking that Galaktion would probably not be able to look at it in the hospital.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-483-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289.

1941

September 6

From the window of the third floor of the medical complex, Galaktion sees a burial taking place. There are only a couple of wreaths by the coffin, and a procession of 10-15 people is heading towards the Vake cemetery. Galaktion and the two women standing next to him think it must be a child’s funeral, which is why there are so few people. However, Galaktion recognizes among the mourners Giorgi Kuchishvili, Arno Oniani, and Shalva Kashmzadze, and realizes that the funeral is not for a child but for the elderly writer, Daria Akhvlediani. Galaktion is so disappointed by the lack of attention given to the deceased that he does not inform the women beside him whose funeral it was.

Source: Galaktion’s Diary, MGL, d-621-3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 151-152.

Note: Daria Akhvlediani’s death date is known to be September 9, but Galaktion’s diary is dated September 6.

1941

Until September 9

He receives a letter from Daria Akhvlediani. She writes that she will be discharged from the hospital on Monday. She is in such financial difficulty that she doesn’t even have enough money to buy bread or to rent a cart to go home. Therefore, she kindly asks for a loan of 500 roubles and promises to repay it in monthly instalments of 50 roubles each.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-457; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 284.

Dating: We date it based on the time of Daria Akhvlediani’s death.

1941

Until September 9

He is informed that Giorgi Leonidze asked Daria Akhvlediani to remove Galaktion Tabidze's name from the text while writing memories about Akaki Tsereteli for the Literature Museum, or else he wouldn't receive his honorarium. They assert that the materially struggling Akhvlediani fulfilled this request and did not include Galaktion's name in the materials submitted to the museum, but she gave the complete version of the memories to Galaktion himself.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 272, p. 13; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 238.

Dating: We date it according to the time of Daria Akhvlediani's death.

1941

September 11

Based on the decree signed by Joseph Stalin on September 8, Galaktion Tabidze's wife, Olya Okujava, is executed in the Medvedev Forest near the city, along with 156 other prisoners from the city prison.

Source: Марат Гизатулин, Булат Окуджава: «...От бабушки Елизаветы к прабабушке Элисабет», 2020, HYPERLINK "http://maxima-library.org/component/maxlib/b/516722?format=read" <https://maxima-library.com/new-books-2/b/516722>

Note: Galaktion Tabidze is not informed about this.

1941

Until September 29

The poem "We will Win" is published in the collection "We will Win!".

Source: Collection "We Will Win", 1941, p. 3-5.

Dating: According to the bibliographic periodical "Book Chronology" (1941, No. 8), the collection "We Will Win" was already printed on September 29.

1941

After September 29

He receives a letter from Abesalom Tabidze, in which his brother expresses dissatisfaction that he can neither find Galaktion at home nor reach him by phone. The sender notes that this was the case a month ago as well. He informs him that he has eczema on his leg, that he has come to Tbilisi for treatment, and that he will return on September 30.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, h-24551-334; Abesalom Tabidze's letter, G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 174.

October

1941

October 9 or later

He receives a letter from Datiko Tsotsonava, an eighth-grade student from the New Kindgha Secondary School in Ochamchire District. The student asks if there is a difference in both form and content in the works of 20th-century Georgian writers. Galaktion responds that there is indeed a difference, and it could not have been otherwise, but he does not know whether his answer will be accepted. He adds that, of course, there is a difference, but neither life nor criticism is arranged as it should be. The poet sends the response but remains uncertain whether the recipient will receive it.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-149, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 275.

1941

After October 9

He learns that in the December 1938 issue of the magazine Chveni Taoba, in Eremia Astvatsaturian's article "Galaktion Tabidze", it was mentioned that Galaktion had restored a romantic-symbolist poetic voice akin to that of Nikoloz Baratashvili. He notes this phrase emphatically in his notebook.

Source: MGL, d-149, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 275.

1941

October 11

The newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes a notice that Galaktion Tabidze's Book "Lyric" has been released, which includes poems written by the poet at various times.

Source: Newspaper Sabtchota Oseti, 1941, №9 (January 11), p. 4.

1941

October 12

He has a brother visiting him in Tbilisi for treatment. Galaktion leaves the house at 2 PM, returns drunk at 1 AM, and argues with his wife, Olga Darius.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, h-24551-355; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 174;

Note: The wife's name is not specified in the source.

1941

October 13

The brother leaves a letter at home, describing how intolerably Galaktion behaved during the night. He writes that wine is stripping him of his human dignity. He asks him to pull himself together, as his drunkenness is causing suffering to everyone who loves him.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, h-24551-355; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 174;

Note: The wife's name is not specified in the source.

November

1941

November 5

In the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, an article by Beso Zhghenti titled “The Main Theme of Socialist Lyricism” is published. The article quotes a stanza from Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Press” and states that a number of the poet’s works express the impact of socialist industry on the daily life of our people.

Source: Beso Zhghenti, “The Main Theme of Socialist Lyricism”, Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1941, №25-26 (48), p. 6.

1941

November 5

In the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, an announcement is published stating that an official evening dedicated to the 20th anniversary of the October Socialist Revolution will be held at the Writers’ House at 8 p.m. on the current day. The event will feature speeches by Shalva Radiani, Sandro Euli, Iakinte Lisashvili, Nino Nakashidze, Beso Zhghenti, Leo Khiacheli, Simon Chikovani, Konstantine Gamsakhurdia, Rodion Korkia, and Simon Tsereteli. The following authors will read their works: Alexandre Abasheli, Irakli Abashidze, Kale Bobokhidze, Valerian Gaprindashvili, David Gachechiladze, Razhden Gvetadze, Alexandre Gomiashvili, Iona Vakeli, Sandro Euli, Giorgi Kachakhidze, Giorgi Leonidze, Konstantine Lortkipanidze, Alio Mashashvili, Ilo Mosashvili, Galaktion Tabidze, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Sandro Shanshiashvili, Demna Shengelaia, and Simon Chikovani.

Source: “Celebratory evening dedicated to the 20th anniversary of the October Socialist Revolution”, Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1941, №25-26 (48), p. 8.

1941

November 5

In the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, Giorgi Natroshvili’s article “Our Homeland” is published, in which various works by Soviet poets are discussed, including Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Let Every Red Army Soldier Stand Like a Lion”.

Source: Giorgi Natroshvili, “Our Homeland”, Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1941, №25-26 (48), p. 3.

1941

November 5

The newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo publishes Dimitri Benashvili’s article “The Socialist Village in Georgian Soviet Literature”, in which he states that Galaktion Tabidze has dedicated several works to the renewed Soviet village and provides a quote from the poem “Labour Roars – Poetry Roars!”

Source: Dimitri Benashvili, “The Socialist Village in Georgian Soviet Literature”, Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1941, №25-26 (48), p. 3.

1941

November 7

The poem “Mass - Stalin is powerful and Stalin - is a mass” is published in the newspaper Sabtchota Sopeli.

Source: G. Tabidze, “Mass - Stalin is powerful and Stalin - is a mass”, Sabtchota Sopeli, 1941, №42.

1941

Until November 20

He writes a poem “Leningrad”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №6696; №6698; №6699; №7995-7997; №2017-2018; №2098-2103; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 65.

Note: The poem is also found with titles: ““To Leningrad”, “For Leningrad”, and untitled (beginning with “This story happened before...”, ‘Now the treacherous fascists...’, “The city stands, the renowned one stands...”.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1941

November 22

The newspaper Avangardi publishes the poem “Fighting with Him, Fighting with Him”.

Source: Newspaper Avangardi, 1941, №79, p. 1.

1941

After November 20

The magazine Mnatobi publishes the poem “Leningrad”.

Source: G. Tabidze, “Leningrad”, magazine Mnatobi, 1941 №11, p. 23-26.

Dating: This issue of the magazine Mnatobi is signed for printing on November 20, 1941.

December

1941

December 9

The writer and teacher Bartholomew Pertaia shows Vazha-Pshavela’s notebook and tells him that his son, Vakhtang, gave it to him as a gift. Galaktion cannot believe that Vazha’s son would have given away his father’s notes and thinks that Pertaia could have bought the notebook somewhere else.

Source: Autograph: MGL, №423; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 277.

1941

December 9

Inspired by the notes in Vazha-Pshavela’s notebook, he writes an untitled poem: “In the bosom, your pocket notebook...”.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book VI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 19.

1941

Until December 16

The editor of the newspaper Kobuletebi Kolmeurne asks him to send a poem for publication in the newspaper.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-143; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 67.

Dating: The fact is mentioned in Galaktion's reply letter dated December 16.

1941

December 16

He sends a short poem to the newspaper Kobuletebi Kolmeurne. He apologizes for its brevity and promises that if they need further collaboration, they should contact him. He writes that he does not want any honorarium, but if they publish his poem, they should provide two copies of the newspaper.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-143; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 67.

1941

December 9

He writes an untitled poem 'In One Bay, Your Notebook Lies...'.
Source: Autograph: MGL, №423; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 17.

Source: Autograph: MGL, №423; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 17.

1941

Until December 21

He writes a poem "Millions of the Sacrificed".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №6423-6425; №1254-1255, №1256, №1258; №2070-2072; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 86.

Note: "The poem is also found with the titles: "The Sacrificed Millions" and "The Times of Sacrifice for the Homeland Reign".

1941

December 21

The newspaper Komunisti publishes the poem "Millions of the Sacrificed".

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, December 21, 1941, №302, p. 3.

1941

After December 26

The magazine Mnatobi publishes the poem "The Sacrificed Millions" ("The Times of Sacrifice for the Homeland Reign...").

Source: G. Tabidze, "The Sacrificed Millions", magazine Mnatobi, 1941, №12, p. 3.

Note: The magazine is signed for printing on December 16, 1941.

1941

He continues working on the untitled poem "The Enemy Longed for...".

Source: MGL, d-91, 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 16.

1941

In a letter, he addresses Levan Gabriadze, the secretary of the Kutaisi district committee, requesting the assistance of his seminary friend Giorgi Kakhaia, who was serving as a veterinary doctor at the №2 market on Ninotsminda Street in Kutaisi. Kakhaia faced charges for allegedly selling the control station of the meat inspection facility to another person. He was dismissed from his job due to these accusations. Kakhaia maintains that he did not sell the control station but rather temporarily transferred it to another person with the market director's consent. Therefore, Galaktion asks Levan Gabriadze to help restore Kakhaia to his position.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's diary entry, MGL, d-202, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 293.

1941

In the diary, he writes about an incident from 1914 when, during his visit to Isidore Kvitsaridze's publishing office with Akaki Tsereteli, the gendarmes wanted to conduct a search, but they were hesitant to do so in the presence of the elderly poet.

Source: MGL, d-150, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 275-277.

1941

He writes an untitled poem "The Path is Widely Open...".

Source: Autograph: MGL, №8458; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 42.

1941

He writes an untitled poem "Why do I need the moon, the swan of the evening...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №84-d., p. 5; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 87.

1941

He expresses in writing his conclusion that he liked Savle Abuladze's latest poem and that, after a few minor technical corrections, it should definitely be published.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-141; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 107.

1941

In the morning, he finds Olga Darius's letter in the room, in which she describes how drunk Galaktion behaved the previous night. She writes that this is not the first time. It seems that there are two personalities living within Galaktion – one kind and attentive, the other cruel and merciless. She writes that Galaktion's words, claiming that Olga is trying to drive the poet out of his own house, are nonsense. She writes that she will leave on her own because she can no longer bear the tension and insults.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 108; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 246-247;

1941

He writes a literary text titled “Prose Fragments,” which reflects the period of the Russian Civil War and revolutions. The main character of the work is a young Georgian named Rati, who becomes involved in the revolutionary struggles.

Source: MGL, d-658, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 402-409.

1941

He makes a note titled “Kale Bobokhidze,” in which he describes how Kale Bobokhidze read his poem in a small circle of writers and how the attending writers tried to get him to finish reading quickly.

Source: MGL, d-658, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 409-410;

1941

He reads Pavle Ingorokva’s Book “Historical Monuments of Svaneti”, making underlines and annotations.

Source: GTSM, 192, P. Ingorokva, “Historical Monuments of Svaneti”, vol. two, texts, Tbilisi, 1941.

1941 or later

He writes an untitled poem “Rustaveli’s lines...”.

Source: MGL, d-98, 69; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 229;

Note: The poet titled the poem “Due to the Translation of The Knight in the Panther’s Skin into Abkhazian”.

After 1941

During the ongoing renovation work at the Writers’ House, Galaktion speaks with the young poet Otar Tchelidze in his garden. Observing a strange sound emanating from the garden, Galaktion realizes that someone is attempting to carve a window into the wall of the Writers’ Garden, which would disrupt the writers’ tranquillity and crack the wall. Galaktion tells his companion that, in his youth, he admired the poems of an older poet who never touched wine but squandered his muse praising kintos and wine. Among the poets in whom he had the greatest hope, one perished, and the other took their own life.

Source: O. Tchelidze, Galaktion’s prophecy, Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1996, №6, May, p. 2.

Note: The three poets mentioned should be: Ioseb Grishashvili, Titsian Tabidze and Paolo Iashvili.

Dating: According to Otar Tchelidze’s recollections, the fact took place when he had already published several poems in the press, and his publications began in 1941.

After 1941

He makes a note about the Russian conductor Alexander Gauk. Galaktion describes him as a petty, unpleasant person with despicable habits, behaving more like a bureaucrat than an artist.

Source: MGL, d-640, 69; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 51;

1942

Until 1942

In his notebook, he drafts a statement to be submitted to the state publishing house. He notes that the Central Committee had decided back in 1933 to prepare an academic edition of his works, but the project has yet to commence. He requests that the state publishing house include the publication of his Book in next year's plan. He mentions that 1942 marks the 50th anniversary of his birth, thus it is appropriate to publish a single-volume collection of his selected works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-469, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 257-258.

Dating: The statement talks about 1942 in the future tense.

January

1942

Until January

He writes three versions of the poem "This New Year".

Source: Autographs: MGL, Nd-150, 13-16; №136-137; N 696; №722; №2068; №1257;. G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 128;

Note: The poem is also found untitled ("This New Year...").

1942

January 1

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation by Boris Serebryakov of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "New Year" is published.

Source: Новый год (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Перевел с грузинского Борис Серебряков, Заря Востока, 1942, 1 января, №1.

1942

After January 27

The poem "This New Year" is published in the magazine Mnatobi.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1942, №1, p. 5.

Dating: The issue of the magazine was signed for publication on January 27, 1942.

1942

January or later

He translates George Noel Gordon Byron's poem "I Dreamed a Bitter Dream..." based on the translation by Ivan Turgenev.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-150, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 291.

February

1942

February 11

In his diary, he writes that he needs to acquire the Book depicting episodes from the Patriotic War, “For the Motherland! For Stalin!” and the poetry collection “We Will Win!” and find pictures of the authors featured in these books. He likes Irakli Toidze’s poster “The Motherland Calls You”, which depicts a woman holding the text of the military oath. He thinks this image could be used for the poem “What Barbarian Before...”. He notes that the cover of a Russian Book titled “Moscow” would also be useful for the exhibition.

Source: MGL, d-145, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 238.

1942

February 11-22

He writes the first two versions of the untitled poem “In Front of the Front...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-145, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 238;

1942

February 11-22

In the diary, he writes down the materials he will need for a creative evening. Among them are: Ivane Gokieli’s music for the poem “Campaign”, Grigol Mirzoev’s poster “Orderly Georgia”, the poem “A New Person”, translations of the poems “The Writer in Grimm”, “New Year”, and “Eesti” by Boris Serebriakov, and the poem “Red Army” by Georgy Kreytan, the poetic collection “We Will Win”, the collection of the Red Army, the January 1941 issue of the magazine Mnatobi, in which his poem “Memory of Lenin” was printed, and the February issue, in which the poem “Jubilee” was printed.

Source: MGL, d-145, 14-15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 239.

Note: Ivan Gokieli, Boris Serebryakov and Grigol Mirzoev are mentioned in the source by their last names.

1942

February 11-22

In the diary, he writes down three French encyclopaedias he needs.

Source: MGL, d-145, 16; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 239;

1942

February 22

He writes the final version of the untitled poem “In front of the Front...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-145, 17-18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 239;

1942

After February 22

In his magazine, he notes pages from Mikheil Zandukeli’s 1935 Book “New Georgian Literature”, published for higher pedagogical institutions in Batumi. The Book mentions that contemporary poetry draws attention to the meter of the poem. The author cites Galaktion Tabidze’s poem John

Reed as an example, noting how its rhythm conveys revolutionary life with extraordinary excitement and passion, depicting destruction, love of life, and the horrific reality of the time.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-145, 19-21; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 240.

1942

After February 22

In his diary, Galaktion Tabidze writes a list of themes in Russian: Red Army, Navy, Partisans and the Army, Homeland, its Freedom and Independence, Party, Great Lenin's Banner, Forward to Victory, Order-bearing Georgia, and the Liberated German People.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-145, 22; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 239;

1942

February 23

A translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Red Army" by Georgy Kreytan is published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka.

Source: Красная Армия (Стихи) Галактион Табидзе, перевод с Грузинского Г. Крейтана, Заря Востока, 1942, 23 февраля, №46.

1942

After February 27

The poem "For two decades and more" is published in magazine Mnatobi.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1942, №2, p. 7.

Dating: Magazine Mnatobi is signed for printing on February 27, 1942.

March

1942

Until March

During a heavy snowfall, Galaktion, slightly tipsy, is cautiously walking on the opposite side of the Marjanishvili Theatre. He slips and falls, but Akaki Getsadze and his two friends quickly help him up. The poet inquires about their nationality and, upon finding out they are Georgians, kisses and embraces them. He starts discussing the horrors of the war, its prolongation, and expresses his concern about the influx of evacuated Russian refugees into Georgia. He fears that many will not return, which poses a threat to Georgian morals, saying, "Our spirit will be corrupted, we will be debased".

Source: A. Getsadze, Galaktion's proximity, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 112-115.

Dating: The author notes that at that time "there were life-and-death battles raging near Moscow". The Battle of Moscow took place from September 30, 1941, to April 20, 1942. However, since there is mention of heavy snowfall, this likely occurred before spring.

1942

Until March 28

He writes an untitled poem “I couldn’t find the words...”, dedicated to Artem Akhnazarov.
Source: MGL, 1715, AE in 25 books, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 318;

April

1942

After April 17

The publishing house “Zarya Vostoka” is publishing a collection of Russian translations of Galaktion Tabidze’s poems titled “My Native Land”.

Source: Табидзе Г., Страна моя родная: Стихи, Пер. с груз., Заря Востока, Тб., 1942;

1942

Until April 20

He writes an untitled poem “He Would Unfold the Newspaper”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1345; №6413-6415; №5924-5927; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 120.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (beginning with: “We were very poor...” and “He would unfold the newspaper...”).

Dating: The collection “My Native Land”, where this poem is first published, was submitted for production on April 20, 1942.

1942

Until April 20

He writes an untitled poem “Brothers, the enemy is strong...”.

Source: Autograph: MGL, №593; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 129.

Note: The poem is also found with the title “Brothers”.

1942

April 20

The Writers’ Union Publishing House “Federation” sends Galaktion Tabidze’s poetry collection “My Native Land” to the press for printing.

Source: G. Tabidze, “My Native Land”, Tbilisi, 1942, p. 56.

1942

April 28

Elizbar Ananiashvili’s translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Leningrad” is published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka.

Source: Ленинград (Стихи) Галактион Табидзе, Перевел с грузинского Д. Стрельцов, Заря Востока, 1942, 28 апреля, №100;

May

1942

May 1

Boris Serebryakov's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "First of May" is published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka.

Source: Первое мая (Стихи) Галактион Табидзе, Перевел с грузинского Борис Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1942, 1 мая, №103.

1942

May 4

At the market in Shaitan, on the present-day Vakhtang Gorgasali Street, he meets Geronti Kikodze. When he tells him that he plans to organize a creative evening to mark his 50th anniversary, Kikodze promises to give a brief introductory speech.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-448; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289-290.

Dating: This is mentioned in Geronti Kikodze's letter dated May 6, 1942.

1942

After May 6

For two days, Geronti Kikodze reads Galaktion's poems to write an introductory speech for his evening. However, he gradually becomes more convinced that Galaktion has some kind of sixth sense, an extrasensory perception, with which he perceives the world. His approach to events is so unexpected that it cannot be explained. In Kikodze's opinion, any attempt to interpret Galaktion's poetry would give the impression of simplifying it, of vulgarizing it. The writer believes that the interpretation of Galaktion's lyrical works should be done through musical pieces, but only in the case where the composer of the music would be sensitive to Galaktion's "monastic soul" and would look into it with the depth of his soul. Therefore, the recipient of the letter apologizes for not fulfilling the promise and suggests that if an introductory speech is necessary, someone else should write it. Personally, he believes it would be better for such an evening to be conducted only by reading the poems and performing musical pieces.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-448; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289-290.

1942

May 19

The Writers' Union publishing house "Federation" grants permission to print Galaktion Tabidze's collection of poems "My Native Land" with a circulation of 2,500 copies.

Source: G. Tabidze, "My Native Land", Tbilisi, 1942, p. 56.

1942

May 19

The publishing house "Federation" grants permission to print the edition of Galaktion Tabidze's Book "My Native Land".

Source: G. Tabidze, "My Native Land", Tbilisi, 1942.

1942

After May 19

The poetry collection “My Native Land” by Galaktion Tabidze includes 20 poems: “My Native Land”, “Dedicated Millions”, (“We Were Very Poor...”), “What the Saracen Formerly”, (“Here, For This City...”), “Homeland, My Life”, “Struggle with It”, (“Neither azure...”), “New Year”, “The Flier”, “The lyre”, “Brothers”, (“There Are Many Armies in the World...”), “To the Motherland”, “The Great Army”, “Frog Like Delaroché”, “Two Forces”, “Escaping the Crisis”, “I Departed from the Sick Side”, and “Irakli’s Sword”.

Source: G. Tabidze, “My Native Land”, Tbilisi, Federation, 1942.

Note: The book’s editor is Razhden Gvetadze. The collection consists of 56 pages, with a print run of 2,500 copies. The Book was submitted for production on April 20, 1942, and signed for printing on May 19. The collection includes the first publication of the poems: “The Great Army”, “The Pilot”, “What the Saracen Formerly”, (“We Were Very Poor...”), and “Brothers”. Other works had already been published in periodicals or the poet’s previous collections.

1942

After May 19

The publishing house Federatsia publishes a collection of Galaktion Tabidze’s poems titled “My Native Land, My Earth”.

Source: G. Tabidze, “My Native Land”, Tbilisi, Federation, 1942;

1942

May 25

He addresses a statement to the publishing house Federatsia and requests that, since his poetry collection “My Native Land, My Earth” can be considered for publication, the honorarium be deposited into the Molotov district savings account.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-144; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 107.

1942

May 29

He writes a poem “But the Homeland is Immortal”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3280; №3339; №2069; №3323; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 96.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (beginning with: “The dark-brown horror!..”; “It’s all the same...”; “The horror of the atomic age!”..).

1942

May 30

He writes an untitled poem “It is made from the one tree...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2494; №3285; №3338; №5497; №293-d., p. 22; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 610-611;

Note: The poem is also found with the title “Made from One Tree”.

June

1942

Until June

Mikhail Kvividze, a tenth-grade student at Tbilisi Railway Workers' Fourth School, sends a short note along with his poem "To Galaktion Tabidze". He writes that he loves his poems very much, that he is just beginning to write himself, and that he strives to become a worthy servant of poetry.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-493-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 334;

1942

After June 29

He writes a poem titled "In Honor of the Soviet Union Hero M. Gakhokidze".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-124, 5-7; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 589-593;

1942

After June 29

He writes an untitled poem "The war has changed the clear sky..."

Source: MGL, d-124, 13-14; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 594-595;

Note: The poem was originally titled "Down with the Evil of Wars".

1942

After June 29

He writes an untitled poem "Hey, homeland..." in his notebook.

Source: MGL, d-124, 15; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 596-597;

July

1942

July 15

He sends 200 roubles to Olya Okujava in Yaroslavl.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-123, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 553.

Note: At this time, Olya Okujava has already been executed, but Galaktion does not know this.

1942

July 19

Boris Serebriakov's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "To the hero Mikheil Ghakhokidze" is published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka.

Source: Герою Михаилу Гахокидзе, (Стихотворение) Галактион Табидзе, Перевел с грузинского Б. Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1942, №169.

1942

After July 19

In the Russian-language collection “The Heroic Son of the Georgian People - Mikheil Levanovich Gakhokidze”, Galaktion’s poem “To the Hero Mikheil Gakhokidze” is published.

Source: Галактион Табидзе, Герою Михаилу Гахокидзе, Героический сын грузинского народа Михаил Леванович Гахокидзе: Сборник. Тбилиси, Заря Востока, 1942.

Dating: One letter from the newspaper of July 19, 1942 is included in the publication.

1939

July 27

At the Writers’ Union, Galaktion meets an elderly railroad worker who has brought a letter regarding a recent flood in Imereti. The elderly man says he saw such a flood in 1896. Galaktion remembers a similar disaster from his childhood and tries to determine if the flood the man is referring to is the same one from 1896. To do this, he checks the 1896 November issues of the magazine Kvali.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-123, 30; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 578-579.

August

1942

August 3

The letter and money sent to Olya Okujava in Yaroslavl are returned to him.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-123, 1; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 553.

Note: At this time, Olya Okujava has already been executed, but Galaktion does not know this.

1942

August 11

He addresses a statement to the State Publishing House. He writes that for the poems included in the manual prepared by Shalva Radiani and Korneli Kekelidze, he is entitled to an honorarium of up to three hundred roubles, but it has not been paid because he has not provided materials for Mnatobi. He requests that the honorarium be paid and promises to provide the materials to Mnatobi without fail.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-146; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 108.

1942

August 11 or later

He begins writing a poem in Russian about Dariali and the battles.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-145; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 108.

1942

After August 23

He receives a letter from his foster-daughter, Laine Bartelis, from Abastumani. She thanks him for enabling her to receive treatment there and considers staying permanently. She hopes that if she tries, she might be able to find some work. She writes that the weather in Abastumani is nice and cool, but there is a lack of food. As a result, instead of gaining weight, she lost some and has been prescribed bed rest. She writes that the poet Lado Asatiani is also resting there, who, due to illness, looks terribly weak, but no one likes him because he believes himself to be a god.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-483-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290-291.

1942

31 August

They are broadcasting Galaktion's new poems on the radio: "To the Caucasian Army", "Elguja's Return", and "As Before".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 13; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 551.

September

1942

Until September

He writes a poem "Lyre, As Before, I Await You Now Too".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №584; №4374; №2009; №2054; №2077-2078; №3878-3880; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 94.

Note: The poem is also found with the titles: "Lyre!", "Two Decades, and Even More", and untitled ("Greetings, Sea!").

1942

Until September 1

Translator Ivan Novikov leaves the translations of Galaktion's two poems - "I and Night" and "Moon of Mtatsminda" - to Alexandre Abasheli.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 13; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 552.

Dating: In a journal entry dated September 1st, he describes the event as something that happened in the past.

1942

September 1

In his diary, he records plans for events to celebrate his 50th anniversary. He hopes the jubilee will be unexpectedly grand, unforgettable, and also profitable. He plans to hold events at the Writers' Union, clubs, various cities in Georgia, Azerbaijan, Armenia, the State Publishing House, and other publishing houses. He also intends to publish his books in Armenian, Azerbaijani, and French.

Source: MGL, d-98, 147; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 312.

1942

September 1

After returning from Shulaveri, he takes Olgha Darius, who is suffering from malaria, to a dispensary for treatment.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 13; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 552.

1942

September 1

The editorial team of the magazine Mnatobi requests the new poem "Elguja's Return" for publication, intending to replace Alio Mashashvili's poem, which has been published multiple times before.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 13; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 551.

1942

September 1

He begins preparations for his 50th anniversary celebrations. He plans to involve Shalva Dadiani in the arrangements. Although he fears that the ongoing war might hinder the proper execution of the event, he remains hopeful that it will still be possible to hold evenings at the Writers' Union, clubs, in Armenia, and Azerbaijan. Additionally, he considers it feasible for his books to be published by the State Publishing House, publishers such as "Federation", "Zarya Vostoka", "Technique and Labor", and the publishing house of Tbilisi State University, including translations in Armenian, Azerbaijani, and French. He aims to carry out at least part of his plans sequentially, so that the event will be "unforgettable, sincere, and at the same time profitable".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 13; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 551.

1942

September 4 or later

He writes a poem "In Memory of the Machine Gunner".

Source: Autograph: MGL, №349; №949-950; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 133.

Note: The poem is also found untitled ("Of Two Machine Gunners..."); For dating: G. Tabidze, "Twelve Volumes", Vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 402.

1942

September 7

Galaktion's new poems, "Mountain's Heartbeat", "Heroic Ruins", and "Larix Sibirica", are broadcast on the radio.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 14; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 552.

1942

September 7

He receives an advance honorarium of 250 roubles from the magazine Mnatobi for his poem "Elguja's Return".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-122, 14; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 552.

1942

September 7

The editorial board of the magazine “Mnatobi” promises to allocate 16 pages for him in the 9th issue of the magazine.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-122, 14; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 552.

1942

September 7

He receives an offer from Georgian Radio to participate in a children’s program.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-122, 14; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 552.

1942

September 9

He prepares three poems for the radio: “The Castle by the Aragvi”, “Dusk in the countryside” and “Barbarian”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-122, 14; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 552.

1942

September 9

He writes an untitled poem “My poems, may you have...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-122, 15; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 552-553.

Note: He drafts a version of the poem “The Great Glory of the Present”.

1942

Until September 10

He writes a celebratory poem dedicated to Shalva Dadiani titled “In the Album! Dessert” and dates it to 1939.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-151, 20-21; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301.

1942

September 10

On September 7, in relation to a radio broadcast, he writes in his diary that some people are obstructing him. He suspects that Giorgi Tsagareli is not on his side because out of the three poems submitted, only one, “The Heartbeat of the Mountain”, was passed on, while the other two, “Heroic Ruins” and “Larix Siberica”, were not. He learns that they are avoiding lyrical works and want to release real, everyday poems. He reflects that either they do not understand, or they understand and are obstructing him. He concludes that the poems for the radio are taken by Giorgi Tsagareli, who reads them, and directives are given by the hooligan and futurist Leo Esakia, while the fraud Karlo Kaladze interferes, along with the Central Committee. He is curious whether his collaboration with the radio has been disrupted and why Karlo Kaladze interferes into the relations between the radio and literature.

Source: MGL, d-151, 4-6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 302.

1942

September 10

Between 1 and 2 in the afternoon, he loses his documents. Among them are: a permanent passport, military ID, order book, pension book for the order, pension book issued by the Georgian Social Security Commissariat, bread card, grocery card, and savings bank book.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-145; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 108.

1942

September 11

He writes a statement about the documents lost the previous day, indicating his address and telephone number.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-145; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 108.

1942

Until September 17

He writes a poem “Elguja’s Return”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №633; №2695-2698; №4629; №8441; №1274-1276; №4019-4026; №2109-2112; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 101.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (beginning with: “And the boy goes to...”; “But you, girl, explain to me...”; “This was relief and novelty...”; “It brings the scent of the evening...”; “The garden gate is open...”).

Dating: The magazine Mnatobi No. 7-8, where this poem was first published, is signed for printing on September 17, 1942.

1942

After September 17

The magazine Mnatobi publishes the poem “Elguja’s Return”.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1942 №7-8, p. 34-35.

Dating: The magazine Mnatobi is signed for printing on September 17, 1942.

1942

20 September

He writes a statement addressed to the Fifth District Police Department, stating that while traveling by tram, his permanent passport issued by this department, his military exemption certificate, and his membership card of the Union of Soviet Writers were stolen.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-147; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 108.

October

1942

After October 11

He compiles a bibliography of critical literature on his work.

Source: MGL, d-98, 120-127; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 283-293;

1942

After October 11

He transcribes Zakaria Chichinadze's letter of May 20, 1927 in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-98, 128; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 294.

November

1942

After November 3

Three poems of Galaktion Tabidze are published in magazine Mnatobi: "Heart of the Mountain", "Heroic Ruins", "To the Army of the Caucasus".

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1942, №9, p. 3-5.

Dating: The magazine issue was signed for printing on November 3, 1942.

1942

November 17

He writes in his diary that he has turned fifty years old.

Source: MGL, d-150, 19; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 291.

1942

After November 17

In his diary, he remembers the story of his first meeting with the poet Beglar Akhospireli and the governor's order to arrest them.

Source: MGL, d-150, 21-23; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 292-294;

1942

After November 17

He writes an untitled poem "Not in vain, in the Soviet hero there is order full of strength...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-150, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 294-295;

1942

After November 17

In his diary, he writes that a person becomes fearless after experiencing unexpected dangers. He lists his own experiences: being left alone at night by his mother, passing through a cemetery in the dark, challenging God, being attacked by drunken guards, entering a swollen river for his mother, facing revolvers and daggers multiple times, being attacked by robbers on Mamadaviti Street, getting caught in gunfire on University Street in October 1917, having a bullet pass very close in 1915, a train attack in 1918, exhaustion while swimming in the sea, a conflict with someone named Tskitishvili and enduring insults, seeking refuge in an attic during a flood, the fear of not being sent from a religious school to a seminary, the hunger of 1917, and the dangers associated with choosing a literary career.

Source: MGL, d-150, 25; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 295;

1942

After November 17

In his diary, he writes that the February Revolution marked the beginning of destruction. For many, it was unexpected, but not for him, as the foundation was already being laid in the form of a great war and crises. He was not mistaken in predicting the timing, because while other events unfold slowly, revolutionary movements, despite many obstacles, progress with unprecedented speed.

Source: MGL, d-150, 25; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 295-296;

1942

After November 17

He collects material on the themes of Amirani and the Caucasus Mountains, noting quotes from both his own poems and those of other poets. He writes that it's worth looking at folk poems and legends, and records the names of various authors, including: Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, Grigol Orbeliani, Nikoloz Baratashvili, Ilia Chavchavadze, Alexandre Kazbegi, Vazha-Pshavela, Mamia Gurieli, Sulikhan-Saba Orbeliani, Sandro Shanshiashvili, and Jean-Jacques Rousseau.

Source: MGL, d-150, 26; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 296;

1942

After November 17

In his diary, he describes the yard in Chkvishi: a maple tree standing by the river, quinces, and a thorn tree that agronomist Pkhakadze referred to as an acacia, prompting Galaktion's mother to compose a humorous verse about it. He recalls the densely intertwined scrubs in the forest, whose branches could be used like a hammock for resting, the intoxicating summer heat like alcohol, the grove planted by his grandfather across the road, six cherry plum trees from which they distilled brandy; a meadow embroidered like a carpet, and the pasture where they took their family's breadwinning cow, "Chestnut", to graze. He remembers that, as a child, he too had chestnut-coloured hair, which later turned black.

Source: MGL, d-150, 27; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 296-297;

1942

After November 17

He lists 18 lines for the poem "The Union of Hearts" and at the end, he attempts to form a stanza from them.

Source: MGL, d-150, 28-29; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 297-298;

1942

After November 20

The Russian collection “The Caucasus is Indivisible”, which features Azerbaijani, Armenian, and Georgian poems, includes a translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “The Great Army” (“Великая армия”) by Semyon Olender.

Source: “Кавказ несокрушим”, М., Гослитиздат, 1942, p. 141.

December

1942

December 27

He receives a letter from the staff of the public library, who wished to hold an evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze and to present a report about him either at the end of the current year or during the first week of the new year. They include a phone number and ask him to inform them which day would be convenient for him so that the event can be scheduled accordingly.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-145; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 291-292.

1942

December

In Kutaisi, he visits the photographer David Mkheidze and leaves the following inscription in the photo salon’s album: “Great naturalness, sincerity, rare artistry, a sense of reality, culture, and passionate talent—this is what is valuable in our craftsman’s photography. My portraits are true masterpieces. A big thank you to David Mkheidze”.

Source: G. Tcheishvili, David Mandaria was telling me, magazine Gantiadi, 1993, № 5-6, p. 181-182.

1942

He visits the principal of Dighomi School, Vladimir Jibuti, twice. During his last visit, he spends three days with Jibuti’s family and writes several poems. He reads one of these poems, which is about the sea and speaks of Adjara, to his host.

Source: M. Jibuti, One Summer, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 314.

1942

Ilia Arosia writes in his notebook his untitled poem “I am the ghost of that holy dream...”, with the epigraph “As you are further away, the more I delight” taken from Galaktion Tabidze’s words.

Source: MGL, d-152, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 304.

1942

He writes a poem “The Army Comes with a Song”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №20-22; №5571; №5575; №1253; №2062-2063; №5362; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 110.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Nana” and without a title (beginning with: “The wind sways the flags...”; “The army begins the attack...”; “March”); For dating: G. Tabidze, Twelve Volumes, Vol. V, p. 373.

1942

He writes an untitled poem “Like a King, I Passed...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №5803; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 175.

1942

He writes the first version of the poem “Unveiling of the Monument” (“Inscription in Pencil on the Monument of Shota Rustaveli”).

Source: Autograph: MGL, №329; №919; №3469; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 132.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “To a Poet Friend”, “Because of Unveiling of Rustaveli’s Monument”, and “Shota Rustaveli’s Monument in Tbilisi”.

Dating: The original version of the poem is dated based on the unveiling of the Shota Rustaveli monument created by sculptor Konstantine Merabishvili, which took place in 1942.

1942 or later

In one of playwright Geno Kelbakiani’s plays, a character recites a poem by Galaktion in the fourth act. This greatly pleases Galaktion. However, the play is rejected. A little while later, Galaktion meets the playwright and asks about the performance date. Kelbakiani, feeling down, tells him that the play has been cancelled. Galaktion jokingly replies, “What if we just stage the fourth act?”

Source: N. Agiashvili, Around Galaktion, magazine Niangi, 1982, N 16, p. 4.

Dating: We date based on the beginning of Geno Kelbakiani’s career in dramaturgy.

1942 or later

He drinks in a wine cellar with Aleksandre Kutateladze. When they came out to head home, they encountered a street sweeper named Hasan. Galaktion introduced Aleksandre Kutateladze as a famous novelist. The street sweeper misunderstood and thought the newcomer’s name was “Romana”, addressing him as such. Kutateladze became irritated, but Galaktion chuckled at the situation.

Source: N. Agiashvili, Around Galaktion, magazine Niangi, 1982, N 16, p. 4.

1943

January

1943

January 11

He writes an untitled poem “Above, there is one blue sky...”.

Source: Autograph: MGL, №23; №549; №2520; №4817; №5169; №3313-3314; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 134.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “In the Azure of Ajara” and without a title (beginning with: “Like a panorama...”; “Above, the heartless, azure sky...”; “Above, the conceited, azure sky...”; “And behold, before my eyes unfolded the bright expanse...”).

1943

20 January

He receives a letter from the staff of the public library. They inform him that the evening dedicated to him will be held on Sunday, January 24th, at 8 PM. They had initially planned for Geronti Kikodze to deliver the main speech, but due to family circumstances, he was unable to do so and personally recommended Akaki Gatsereila instead. In addition, actors and young people will read poems by Galaktion and poems dedicated to him. They write that over 100 invitations – stating that Galaktion himself will be attending the event – have already been printed and distributed to the library’s readers. They kindly ask him to stop by the library before the event, if possible, or let them know where and when they could meet him. They would also like to get his autograph.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-145-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 292.

1943

Until January 20

He writes a poem “To the Defender of Sevastopol”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2930-2936; №1261; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 125.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Receive First of All” and without a title (“Receive First of All...”).

Dating: The magazine Mnatobi, where this poem was first published, is signed for printing on January 20, 1943.

1943

After January 20

In the magazine Mnatobi, under the rubric “A New Page in History” and signed by “Galaktion”, the following poems are published: “A New Page in History”, “Hey, Homeland”, “The Path of Victory”, “Memory of Sevastopol”, “The Hero’s Victory”, and “But the Homeland is Immortal...” Among them, the poem “The Forests” is not included due to its inappropriateness.

Source: Galaktion, A New page of History, magazine Mnatobi, 1942, №11-12, p. 19-23; G. Mebuke, one unknown poem by Galaktion “Forests”, magazine Literaturuli Adjara, 1960, №1, p. 36.

Note: This issue of the magazine is signed for printing on January 20, 1943.

1943

January 29

He writes a poem “To the Warriors!”

Source: Autographs: MGL, №134; №2585; №3523-3527; №8145; №1266; №6745; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 93.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Stalingrad”, “1943. January 29”, “May of Stalingrad”, “To the Warriors” and untitled (“We, friends, remember...”).

1943

January 29

He writes a poem “Without Mercy!”

Source: Autographs: MGL, №134; 2585; 6745; 1260; 8145; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 111.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “1943. January 29”, “Stalingrad”, and “May of Stalingrad”.

1943

January

The poem “Lenin” is published in the magazine Mnatobi.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1943, №1, p. 9-10.

February

1943

Until February 11

He writes an untitled poem “War wishes to replace the clear sky...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №28897-50, p. 80-81; №1258-1259; №2073-2074; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 166.

Note: The poem also appears under the titles: “War Has Replaced the Clear Sky” and “For Us, Life Is Everything”.

Dating: G. Tabidze’s collection “Homeland, Life”, in which this poem was first published, was signed for print on February 11, 1943.

1943

Until February 11

He writes a poem “The Wind of Aragvi”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2044; №2064-2065; №1276; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 97.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “The Sun Rises Again” and without a title (“The Sun Rises Again...”).

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1943

February 11

The State Printing Word Combine issues permission to print the circulation of Galaktion Tabidze’s Book “Native land, life”.

Source: G. Tabidze, “Homeland, Life”, Tbilisi, 1943.

1943

After February 11

He gifts his poetry collection “Homeland, Life” to Lado Bzvaneli with the inscription: “To the author of two thousand letters – a distinguished educator, a cherished Georgian, a most beloved person, as a token of deepest respect”.

Source: Archil Marshania’s private collection, “Homeland, Life”, Tbilisi, 1943.

1943

After February 11

Galaktion Tabidze’s poetry collection “Native Land, Life” is published, which includes 28 poems. These works are: “Everyone has something to remember”, “My native land”, “The heartbeat of the mountain”, “Long live the hero”, “We will win”, “The return of Elguja”, “By a native call”, “Devoted millions”, “We were poor”, “What Saracens have done before”, “Native Land, Life”, “Fight with him”, “Gastelo”, “Lyre!”, “Brothers”, “Great army”, “Irakli’s Sword”, “Fighting poet”, “The first May”, “The war wants to change the sky”, “To the country’s road, multi-coloured”, “The country’s progress”, “We, the poets of Georgia”, “Walk by faith”, “The city under water”, “Hey, native land! The feeling of your care”, “My old dream”, “Restored by work”.

Source: G. Tabidze, “Homeland, Life”, Tbilisi, 1943.

Note: The editor is Irakli Abashidze. The volume of the collection is 56 pages, and the print run is 3,000 copies; the Book was signed for printing on February 11, 1943. The collection includes 28 works, with 3 poems being published for the first time: “The War Wants to Change the Clear Sky”, “The heartbeat of the Mountain”, and “By Native Call”. Other works had already been published in periodicals or in the poet’s previous collections.

1943

February 15

He writes a statement addressed to the Georgian Literary Fund, informing them that he is leaving for the countryside to finish working on a book and is requesting financial assistance in the amount of 500 roubles.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-148; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 109.

1943

Until February 22

He writes an untitled poem “Eternally lit by falling snow...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2909, 5509; №6345-6346; N. Kvirikadze’s autograph, №5472-5473; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 168.

Note: The poem can also be found under the titles “Lenin” and “Lenin in Switzerland”.

Dating: The magazine Mnatobi №1, in which this poem was first published, was signed for print on February 22, 1943.

1943

After February 22

The poem “Lenin” is printed in the magazine Mnatobi under the signature “Galaktion”.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1943, January, №1, p. 9-10;

1943

February 23

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “To the Red Army” by Ryurik Ivnev is published.

Source: Красной армии (Стихотворение) Г. Табидзе, Перевод с грузинского Рюрик Ивнев, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1943, 23 февраля, №44.

1943

February

At the evening held at the Academy of Sciences to mark the 35th anniversary of poetic activity, the director of the Institute of Georgian Literary History named after Shota Rustaveli, Korneli Kekelidze, opens the event on behalf of the institute. He notes his approval of awarding Galaktion Tabidze the title of People’s Poet and the fact that in printed publications, his name is already referred to without a surname, just like Shota, Akaki, Iliia, and Vazha.

Source: K. Kekelidze, a poet of truth and authenticity, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 71-72.

March

1943

Until September 23

He notes in his diary that he has to meet with Ucha Japaridze and Eremia Astvatsaturov.

Source: MGL, d-156, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 331;

1943

Until September 23

In the diary, he writes that political betrayal should remain classified as betrayal, but it is not appropriate to recognize such individuals as traitors to culture.

Source: MGL, d-156, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 331;

1943

Until September 23

In the diary, he reviews two aspects of poetry: the creative and the technical. He notes that the talent for artistic creation is innate, akin to physical beauty or a strong voice, and cannot be acquired through effort alone. Poets are born with this talent, but it is still possible to learn the craft of verse and write relatively beautiful poetry through extensive hard work. He mentions that even in the seemingly formless verses of Nikoloz Baratashvili and Grigol Orbeliani, genius is perceptible, but mastering the technique of verse is essential for expressing talent. He believes that the poets' section of the Writers' Union should facilitate the work of aspiring poets by providing them with a Book that highlights the achievements of Georgian poetry, teaches them how to engage with editorial boards, prose writers, and critics, as well as poets from sister republics and other art forms such as music, painting, architecture, theatre, and cinema. He discusses the profitability of poetry, using examples from books, the press, radio, evenings, and posters, explaining the obstacles to the normal development of poetry and the peculiarities of wartime poetry.

Source: MGL, d-156, 7-10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 332-333.

1943

September 23

In the diary, he writes that six pioneer children living in his and the adjacent yards, who are probably children of communists, are behaving audaciously, and that their leader is Konstantine Lortkipanidze's son.

Source: MGL, d-156, 11-12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 333.

1943

March

In the diary, he lists the income and expenses for February and March: he received 3,156 roubles from the State Publishing House, 400 roubles from the magazine Mnatobi, and 525 roubles as a pension. From this total of 4,191 roubles, he spent 1,130 roubles, including 430 roubles on a coat and 500 roubles on shoes. He plans to take out loans from the Literary Repository and Social Security.

Source: MGL, d-146, 21; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 252.

1943

March

In the diary, he notes that he plans to enter into contracts with the publishing houses "Zarya Vostoka", the Children's Literary Publishing House, and "Federation". He considers it feasible to conduct a radio program and a regular evening event, as well as prepare translations for the publishing house "Zarya Vostoka".

Source: MGL, d-146, 21; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 252.

April

1943

April 20

In the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, an article by Sergi Tchilaia titled "Poems about the Homeland" is published, dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze's Book "My Homeland, My Life". The critic speaks with admiration about the poet's poems, including "My Native Land", "Everyone Has a Keepsake", "Elguja's Return", and others. Sergi Tchilaia believes that Galaktion has given new inspiration to the theme of patriotism in Georgian poetry and has created original examples of civic lyricism. The critic also points out that not all the poems are of the same level, which disrupts the artistic unity of the book. Sergi Tchilaia attributes this issue to Galaktion's recent excessive output, which affects the quality of the poems and poses a risk of creating poetic clichés. The author of the article also does not approve of some of the poet's linguistic experiments.

Source: S. Tchilaia, "Poems about the Homeland", Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1943, №10 (April 20), p. 1.

1943

April

He writes a plan for a play, in which the main characters are representatives of feuding families, a beloved woman, and a young man. He works on individual episodes of the play in the form of poetry.

Source: MGL, d-654, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 283-296.

May

1943

After May 17

He reads the collection "Heroic Sons of the Georgian People". After reading Konstantine Lortkipanidze's article "The Heroism of Akaki Robakidze", He writes a poem "War on the Peaks".

Source: GTSM, 1625, "Геройческие сыны грузинского народа", Tbilisi, 1943.

1943

Spring

On Plekhanov Avenue, he meets the wife of the photographer Vasil Totochia and her fellow classmates, taking a photo with them. Later, he retrieves the photo from the studio and brings it home to the Totochias.

Source: N. Pilpani, Two photographs of Galaktion, newspaper Kutaisi, January 8, 1983, N 6, p. 4.

June

1943

June 22

In his notebook, he writes the words of the Apostle Paul from a sermon delivered by Bishop Gabriel on September 8, 1860, at the Gelati Monastery: "Each man shall bear his own burden".

Source: MGL, d-158, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 350.

1943

After June 22

In his notebook under the title "Caucasus", he lists the following poems: "Army of the Caucasus", "Heroic Ruins", "Aragvi", "Deer on the Mountain", "Lile", "Evil vulture", "The Same Old Iron", "Morning in the Mountains", "We are one - but different", "Look, the ship is going to set off", "The Red Army near the Caucasus", "Two eagles", "Where is Eva?".

Source: MGL, d-158, 4, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 351.

1943

After June 22

He writes an untitled poem "Listen to native tunes..."

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-158, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 351-352.

1943

After June 22

He begins to write an untitled poem "With a passionate hand engaged, turned over..."

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-158, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 352.

Note: The stanza was later included in the poem "As if I do not love my homeland".

1943

After June 22

He writes a letter to his second wife, Olgha Darius, informing her that he did not find her at home, will not be able to come for dinner, and she should not expect him at home on Zhores Street until after 9 PM.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-158, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 352.

Note: Olgha Darius is referred to in the source with her first name and patronymic.

1943

After June 22

In his notebook, he lists 60 artists, including: Alexandre Tsimakuridze, Shalva Mamaladze, Soso Gabashvili, Apolon Kutateladze, Mose Toidze, Irina Shtenberg, Davit Gvelesiani, Ketevan Maghalashvili, Ucha Japaridze, Ioseb Vepkhvadze, Shalva Dzneladze, Kiril Zdanevich, Nikoloz Kandelaki, Nino Brailovskaia, Iakob Nikoladze, Petr Bliotkin, Alexander Bazhbeuk-Melikov, Nina Tamamsheva, Lado Gudiashvili, Gigo Zaziashvili, Irakli Toidze, Korneli Sanadze, Shalva Makashvili, Tamar Abakelia, Elene Akhvlediani, Davit Kutateladze, Grigol Meskhi, Theodor Chudetsky, and Mikhail Vadbolski.

Source: MGL, d-158, 25-30; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 355.

Note: The artists are mentioned in the source either by surname alone or by initials and surname.

1943

After June 22

In the notebook, he notes Yuri Karsky's translations.

Source: MGL, d-158, 30; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 355.

1943

June 26

He writes a poem “Stanzas” (“Here the poet’s monument will be erected”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2517; №2038; №5519; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 136.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “The Poet’s Monument Will Be Erected at the Seaside” and untitled (with the beginning: “The poet’s monument will be erected at the seaside”).

1943

June 29

He is at home, in the apartment on Zhores (now Marjanishvili) Street, and in the morning writes the poem “A Toad from the Iranian Consulate Garden”.

Source: Autograph: MGL, №3353; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 137.

July

1943

Until July

He writes a poem “Georgian Ornament”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №45; №1000; №28897-50, p. 5; №1298. G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 21.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles “Gothic” and “Sharp, Bright, and Distant”, as well as without a title (“Sharp, Bright, and Distant...”).

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1943

Until July

He writes a poem “The Cup”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №7683; №4013; №8370; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 22.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Oath” and without a title (“I take the May cup in my hand...”).

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1943

July 28

He writes a poem “Clouds near Dzaugi”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №54; №1339; №1279; N. Kvirikadze’s Autograph №2122; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 143.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “The Ridges of the Caucasus Ask Me” and untitled (“A monument should be erected to those days...”).

1943

July 29

While traveling on the tram, he loses his bread and sugar ration cards and asks three passengers to confirm the fact.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-283; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 109.

August

1943

Until August 2

He writes a poem “The Shoulders of Kazbegi”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №7; №986; №5337; №28897-50, p. 53; №1279; N. Kvirikadze’s manuscript, №2121; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 148.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “The Shoulders of Kazbegi”, “Stems of Chalk”, “The Tea Rose”, and untitled (“How precious it is not to me...”).

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1943

Until August 2

He writes a poem “Piama Natroshvili”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №28897-50, p. 68; №1262; №2082; N. Kvirikadze’s autograph, №2125; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 152.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “To the Georgian Woman in the War”, “Where You Stood, Piama!”, Pia Natroshvili, and untitled (“Where the piama meets the leaves...”).

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1943

Until August 2

He writes a poem “War on the Peaks”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1262; №2083; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 151.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “The Time of the Miraculous Battle” and untitled (“The time of the miraculous battle...”).

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1943

Until August 2

He writes a poem “For the Truth”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №520; №1277; №2061; N. Kvirikadze’s autograph, №2115; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 153.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “The Horseman leaves the Steed”, “The Song of Flag-bearer”, “The Capture of Poltava”, and “The Flag of Truth”.

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1943

Until August 2

He writes a poem “Lullaby”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №24-25; №908-909; №8098; №8099; №334-d., p. 1; №2010; №5489; №2057; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 107.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Nana” and without a title (beginning with: “He told you before leaving...”; “Nana, sleep, my child...”; “You sleep for a little while...”).

Dating: The issue of the magazine Mnatobi №7, where this poem was first published, is signed for printing on August 2, 1943.

1943

After August 2

In the magazine Mnatobi, under the general title “From the Circle of Poems – A New Page in History”, the following poems are published: “The Shoulders of Kazbegi”, “Clouds by Dzauga”, “Lullaby”, “Georgian Ornament”, “For the Truth”, “I Write Some Poet from Meskheti”, “Piama Natroshvili”, “*The Time of the Miraculous Battle...”, and “Cup”.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1943, №7, p. 3-9.

Dating: The issue of the magazine Mnatobi №7, where these poems were first published, is signed for printing on August 2, 1943.

1943

August 3

In the diary, he writes about a conversation between a water vendor and a citizen regarding why water cannot be sold cold in Tbilisi during the summer. It turns out that while ice is very cheap, transporting it to the location costs one hundred times more. Therefore, solving the problem requires addressing the transportation issue.

Source: MGL, d-153, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 308.

1943

August 3

He writes a short vignette about how nine Yazidis dropped a piano while transporting it because they were bumped by someone. A local man from Racha, standing nearby, boasted that he used to carry a piano up the hill single-handedly as easily as if it were a feather.

Source: MGL, d-153, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 308.

1943

August 3

He writes a short vignette about a man walking barefoot on the cobblestones in both winter and summer—poet Terenti Graneli.

Source: MGL, d-153, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 308.

1943

August 3 or later

In the miniature written on August 3rd, where the story was about the Yazidis carrying a piano, the piano is replaced by a palm tree.

Source: MGL, d-152, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 308.

1943

August 5

He writes a statement addressed to the Director of the City of Tbilisi Trade Department. He mentions that on July 29, he lost his bread and sugar ration cards in the tram and requests that new ones be issued to him.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-283; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 109.

1943

August 5

In his notebook, he writes that at 24:00 on the current day, the capital city Moscow will mark the liberation of the cities of Oryol and Belgorod with a salute, and he begins writing a poem on this theme.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-283, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 109.

1943

August 6

He reads the information published in the newspaper Komunisti about how the Soviet army liberated the cities of Oryol and Kharkov from the Germans on the 5th of August, in a 24-hour period. He writes a poem titled “August 5, 24 Hours” inspired by this successful offensive action of the Soviet army.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №434-445; №1278; Na-58, 173-176; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 162; Newspaper Komunisti, August 6, 1943, №165, p. 2.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “The First Salute of Victory”, “To Oryol and Belgorod”, “Unforgettable and Precious”, and “Great Turning Point. 1943, August 5. 24 Hours”.

1943

August 8

The newspaper Komunisti publishes the poem “5 August, 24 Hours”, which is dedicated to the liberation of the cities of Oryol and Kharkov from the Germans by the Soviet Army.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1943, August 8, №167, p. 2.

1943

August 12

In his diary, he notes that Shalva Radiani will collaborate with him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-154, 4, 16-17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 314.

Note: Likely, it refers to the editing of Galaktion's "Selected Works".

1943

August 13

At a meeting in the Composers' Union, he meets Shalva Mshvelidze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-154, 19; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 314.

Note: Shalva Mshvelidze is mentioned by surname in the source.

1943

After August 13

In his diary, he writes down a list of desired participants for the upcoming anniversary evening at the opera house. Among them are: Petre Sharia, Irakli Abashidze, Leo Kiacheli, Besarion Zhghenti, Ilo Mosashvili, Razhden Gvetadze, Sandro Euli, Shalva Radiani, Shalva Dadiani, and Simon Chikovani.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-154, 25; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 315;

1943

After August 13

He is writing an untitled poem, "Give me hope! This Eden...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-154, 26-27; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 315-316;

1943

After August 17

He writes a poem "The Forests of Bryansk", which is dedicated to the offensive operation carried out by the Soviet Union's forces to liberate Bryansk Oblast.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №45-a, p. 1207; №7804; №181-d., p. 15; №3957-3958; №1283; №28897-50, p. 69; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 239.

Note: The text is the original version of the poem "Listen to the Native Harps".

Dating: We date it based on the starting date of the Bryansk offensive operation.

1943

Until August 24

He writes a poem "Lucidity", dedicated to the liberation of Kharkov from the fascists.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №641-642; №28897-50, p. 54; №2914; №888; №8776, p. 44 G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 174.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "Kharkov" and untitled (with the beginnings: "Shevchenko, who undressed..." and "Today, like a dream..."). In the manuscripts (№641-642; №28897-50, p. 54) and the first printed version, the poem includes an epigraph: “And I again found my Kharkov as a dream... Natalia Zabela”.

Dating: On August 24, 1943, he reads this poem on the radio. On the same day, the poem is already printed in the form of a poster.

1943

August 24

Galaktion's poem “Clarity”, which is dedicated to the liberation of Kharkov from the fascists, is printed as a separate poster.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-426, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 99.

1943

August 24

Georgian Radio broadcasts Galaktion's poem “Clarity”.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-426, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 99.

1943

August 24

He reads the poem “Clarity” at the Writers' Union.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-426, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 99.

1943

After August 24

He makes a note about his own poem “Clarity”. He mentions that it was printed as a separate poster on August 24, 1943, and that its Russian translation was done by Boris Serebryakov. He points out that the poem received great acclaim from the public as an original and innovative work.

Source: MGL, d-426, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 99.

1943

August 31

He notes an action plan in his notebook. He plans to Book the Opera Theatre by October 2, select photographs, check whether the typesetter has printed the poems, and sort out the issues related to bread coupons.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-479, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 326.

1943

After August

He writes a poem “The Capture of the New City”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3934; №8790; №28897-50, p. 74; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 137.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (with the beginnings: “We do not want what belongs to others...” and “Salute to the face of dawn...”); For dating: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 405.

September

1943

Until September 8

He writes a poem “The Don Basin”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1985-1986; №2915; №4735; №4737; №6426; №888; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 138.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “What Donbass Means!”, “To the Don Basin”, and untitled (with the beginnings: “Once, it was so peaceful...”; “Don Basin – our true apple...”; “Don Basin – once, it was so peaceful...”; “Let there be no doubt, Don Basin...”).

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1943

September 8

On the socio-political poster “With a Bayonet and a Pen”, depicting scenes from World War II, Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “The Don Basin” is printed.

Source: The poster “With a Bayonet and a Pen”, №27.

1943

September 14

To prepare for the Book “The Sea Roars”, he flies from Tbilisi to Sokhumi at 11:15. He arrives at his destination at 12:10. In his diary, he notes that instead of a 14-hour train journey, the flight took only 1 hour.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-155, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 318.

1943

September 14

He and his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, settle into a cozy room at the “Abkhazia” hotel in Sokhumi and browse through the materials for the Book “Memories of Abkhazia” that was brought from Tbilisi. He is sick with the flu but thinks he should endure it.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-155, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 318.

Note: The Book “The Sea Has Roared” was printed in 1948.

1943

September 14

In Sokhumi, he meets the lecturer from the Pedagogical Institute, Ioseb Botsvadze, who tells him that he has found an unknown poem by Alexandre Chavchavadze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-155, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 318.

1943

September 14

In Sokhumi, an employee of the Abkhazian State Publishing House complains about the lack of paper. However, since Galaktion has already signed the contract for the publication of his book, he is forced to find a solution.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-155, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 318.

1943

After September 26

Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Dnepropetrovsk" is printed on the public-political poster "With a Bayonet and a Pen", depicting the Second World War.

Source: Poster "With a Bayonet and a Pen", №38; For

October

1943

Until October

"He writes a poem "Look".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №594-595; №6394; №167-d., p. 14-16; №7584; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 147.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "It Was Before the Morning", "Machine-gunner, A. B. Narsia", and "A. Narsia"; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 412.

1943

Until October 1

He is writing a prose text that serves as the foundation for the poem "Invention".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-157, 2-9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 336-340.

1943

Until October 1

He writes an untitled poem, "To that thief, as is customary...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-157, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 341.

1943

Until October 1

He writes an untitled poem, “The Guard Regiment Breaks Through the Encirclement...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-157, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 341.

1943

Until October 1

He writes an untitled poem that begins with the lines “The scatterbrain did not say - that thief, I think, is a Lezghin...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-157, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 341-342;

1943

Until October 1

He edits his previously written poem “Catastrophe” (“Though I am alive...”) for publication in his collection “Selected Works” and titles the new version “Letter to a Friend Doctor”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-157, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 343-344.

Note: This refers to the “Selected Works” published in 1944.

1943

Until October 1

He writes a poem “The Banner of the Guard”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-157, 11-12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 342-343.

1943

Until October 1

He writes three versions of the untitled poem, “Look, how it gazes at the ridges...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-157, 15-17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 345-346.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Look!”.

1943

Until October 1

He begins writing a poem on the theme of war titled “Dnepropetrovsk”, but during the process, he shifts the setting of the action to the Caucasus, where battles are also taking place, and titles it “Dzaugi”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-157, 19-22; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 347-349.

Note: “Dzaugi” was the name given to the city of Vladikavkaz.

1943

Until October 1

In his diary, he notes his anniversary years: 1943 – 35, 1948 – 40, 1953 – 45, and 1958 – 50. Due to a misunderstanding regarding his birth year, he starts counting from 1892.

Source: MGL, d-157, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 349.

1943

October 1

The newspaper Komunisti publishes an announcement titled “Galaktion Tabidze’s Evening”, which states that the Writers’ Union is organizing an artistic-literary evening in October to commemorate the 35th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s literary career and supports the academic publication of his works.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, October 01, 1943, №1, p. 4.

1943

October 1

In his diary, he writes about the announcement “Galaktion Tabidze’s Evening” published in the newspaper Komunisti, noting that it is placed in an inconspicuous location on the last page and will have no resonance. Neither the “Jubilee” nor “National Poet” is mentioned, and the time and place of the event are not specified. He points out that the government’s 1933 resolution, which states that a complete academic edition of his works should be published, is distorted. He concludes that there are six major misunderstandings in the newspaper’s six-line announcement. He believes that the reporter from Komunisti, Apolon Nutsbidze, extracted this information from the minutes of the Writers’ Union, and that the source of the misunderstanding lies there.

Source: MGL, d-157, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 349.

Note: Apolon Nutsbidze is referenced by his last name in the source.

1943

Until October 5

Pavle Kandelaki, the deputy head of the Main Directorate of Arts, promises to allocate the Opera Theater and assist with organizing the evening based on his experience, but the Writers’ Union must mediate.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-157, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 350.

1943

Until October 5

He informs Besarion Zhghenti about Pavle Kandelaki’s agreement to hold his creative evening at the Opera Theatre, to which Zhghenti replies that the location for the event will be decided by the Writers' Union commission. Galaktion begins to suspect that Irakli Abashidze is once again opposed to holding his evening at the Opera Theatre.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-157, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 350.

1943

October 5

Four days have passed since the announcement "Galaktion Tabidze's Evening" was published in the newspaper Komunisti, but the Writers' Union has still not chosen an organizational committee. Three candidates have been named: Levan Asatiani, Simon Tsereteli, and Andro Tevzadze. Galaktion thinks they want to hold the evening hastily and insignificantly.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-157, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 350.

1943

October 5

He writes his autobiography and submits it for printing. He believes that he must always stay ahead so that his enemies do not get the chance to outpace him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-157, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 350.

1943

Until October 7

He writes a poem "Chanchibadze", dedicated to the Soviet military figure Porfily Chanchibadze.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №8139; №2086; №3325; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 170.

Note: He writes a poem "Chanchibadze", dedicated to the Soviet military figure Porfily Chanchibadze.

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1943

October 7

In the newspaper Komunisti. Frontline Page, a poem titled "Chanchibadze" dedicated to the Soviet military figure Porphile Chanchibadze is published.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, "Frontline Page", 1943, №1, p. 2.

1943

From September 23 to October 6

In his diary, he writes a list of twenty-two prose writers, thirteen critics (of whom nine are his supporters), five playwrights, and four representatives of mixed genres in connection with the jubilee evening to be held at the Opera in celebration of the 50th anniversary of his birth and the 35th anniversary of his literary debut.

Source: MGL, d-156, 14-17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 333-334.

1943

October 6

The secretary of the Writers' Union, Irakli Abashidze, goes to Sokhumi without electing the commission for organizing Galaktion Tabidze's evening at the presidium meeting, despite his promises. Irodion Kavzharadze, the manager of affairs, informs the poet that Irakli Abashidze will return on October 8, and in the meantime, if necessary, he will personally approve the protocol for the commission's formation. Galaktion is unsure how to proceed since the organizational committee's work plan needs to be determined in two days, so he plans to meet with Petre Sharia the following day.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-157, 25; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 350.

1943

October 6

Shalva Radiani hands over the compiled "Selected Works" of poems for review and asks him to return it with corrections.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-156, 20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 335.

1943

October 6

In his diary, he writes that it is necessary to finalize the review of his "Selected Works", fill it with new material, and remove weak parts. He notes the poems "Supportive (The Sky of Kharkov)" and "The Sun Rises Again and Sets Again".

Source: MGL, d-156, 20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 335.

Note: The poem "Supportive" was later published under the title "Clarity", while the poem "The Sun Rises Again and Sets Again" was published under the title "The Aragvi Wind".

1943

October 6

Eremia Astvatsaturov requests an autobiography and the writing of a genuine poem, not the kind that Giorgi Leonidze writes.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-156, 20-21; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 335.

Note: Eremia Astvatsaturov and Giorgi Leonidze are mentioned by their last names in the source.

1943

October 6

Shota Beritashvili requests a photo to draw his portrait, and Galaktion notes in his notebook that it takes him 2-3 days to draw each picture.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-156, 20-21; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 335.

Note: Shota Beritashvili is mentioned by his last name in the source.

1943

October 6

To mark the 50th anniversary of his birth and the 35th anniversary of his literary debut, Beno Gordeziani announces that even printing a simple poster will take two months due to a shortage of personnel in lithography, and Galaktion wishes to print several coloured posters. It is necessary to create zincography clichés and have them worked on by artists, as well as obtain many permits and paper. The poet writes in his diary that the paper may be available from a children's literature publisher, a state publishing house, or a federation. He also considers it necessary to have photo paper for taking pictures. He is advised to publish a small Book by November that will explode like a bomb, spark everyone's conversation, and provoke correspondence.

Source: MGL, d-156, 18-20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 334-335.

1943

After October 6

He writes in his diary that there is a recollection that a person will never forget and that life is only here. He asks God not to betray him and notes that an attempt is half of fate.

Source: MGL, d-156, 26-27; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 336;

1943

October 10

A translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Oh, Rustaveli..." is published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka.

Source: Тебе, Руставели! (Стихотворение) Галактион Табидзе, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1943, 10 октября, №212.

1943

Until October 12

He writes a poem titled "General-Colonel Leselidze".

Source: Autograph: MGL, №182; №7709; №1277; №2085; №3325; №8142; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 109.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "On the Cliffs of the Caucasus", "May Morning", "Leselidze", "General Leselidze", and untitled (beginning with: "On the Cliffs of the Caucasus..." and "The lion of the horde...").

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1943

October 12

The poem "General Leselidze" is published in the newspaper Komunisti.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1943, №213, October 12, p. 3.

1943

After October 15

He writes a poem “The Pilot from Adjara”, dedicated to the pilot Israphil Jintcharadze, who died in World War II.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2196, 2191-2194; 2529. 5660-5662; 1272-1274; works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 196.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Who Was He?”, “What Kind of Pilot Is Our Pilot?”, and untitled (with the beginnings: “Who was it, that thirty...”; “Jintcharadze – became the soldier...”).

Dating: It is dated based on the time of Israphil Jintcharadze’s death.

1943

After October 15

While in the office of the Chairman of the Ajara Regional Executive Committee, he learns about the death of the Hero of the Soviet Union, Israpil Jincharadze. The Chairman hands the death notice, a letter from Mikhail Kalinin, and documents to the hero’s grieving mother, which has a profound effect on Galaktion, causing him to tear up.

Source: P. Nishnianidze, From Galaktion’s Life, Tbilisi, 1964, p. 61-63.

Dating: Dated according to the time of Israpil Jincharadze’s death.

1943

After October 20

He compiles a list of poems on the theme of the Great Patriotic War, written by Georgian poets and published in the newspaper Komunisti between 1941-1943.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-568, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 350;

1943

October 28

The director of the state publishing house, Nikoloz Kiknadze, calls Galaktion on the phone and invites him to his office. When Galaktion arrives at the publishing house, he is offered the publication of a Book of selected works. The poet is surprised by the offer. He tells Niko Kiknadze that it is necessary to publish not a selection, but a complete academic collection of his works. The director promises to give him an answer within a week.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-124, 16; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 597

1943

October 28

When the poet Gobron Agareli, an employee of the state publishing house, learns that Galaktion wants a complete academic edition of his works, he tells him that he is well aware of the type of publication being discussed and that it should fully represent his entire body of work. Upon leaving the publishing house, he relays the words of Petre Sharia to Galaktion, which Sharia had said about him: “Help this man publish his book; he is a poet through and through.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-124, 16; AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 597

1943

October 31

He writes an untitled poem “I Will Visit....”.

Source: Autograph: MGL, №8171; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 139.

1943

October 31

He writes a poem “To the 31st Girls’ School” (“Your Passionate Feeling Brings Me Joy...”).

Source: Autograph, MGL, №8171; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 175.

November

1943

Until November

He writes a poem “To Her, Illuminated by the Sun of Imereti”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №7592; №1263; №2088; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 171.

Note: The poem can also be found under the title “Jakhua” and without a title “To him, enlightened by Iberia’s most fervent sun...”; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 428.

1943

November 6

In the newspaper Komunisti, Galaktion Tabidze’s poems – “Kazbegi’s Shoulders” and “The Ridges of the Caucasus Ask Me” – are published under the title “Greetings XXVI”.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, Propaganda Leaflet, November 6, 1943, №28, p. 1.

1943

November 6

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation by Ryurik Ivnev of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “To the Great October” is published.

Source: Великому Октябрю (Стихотворение) Галактион Табидзе, Пер. с грузин. Р. Ивнев, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1943, 6 ноября, №231.

1943

November 20

He writes a poem “Dnepropetrovsk”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №6426; №167-d., p. 18-21; N. Kvirikadze’s autograph, №1264; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 140.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “From Dnepropetrovsk”, “Forward, to the West!”.

1943

November 21

At 9 AM, Lado Bzvaneli visits the house. Galaktion is not at home, so he speaks with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze. He asks her to leave his notebook “Three Pictures” for her husband, so he can read it the next day and take it with him. He expresses his wish to attend the poet’s anniversary on November 29 at the Opera Theatre and congratulate him with a short speech and a poem, as his village teacher. He asks to be added to the list of well-wishers and to send three invitations. He requests that the response to this request be given to his wife.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-459; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 293.

1943

November 26

In the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, Shalva Radiani’s article “The Poet’s Path” is published, which reviews Galaktion’s creative journey. The critic reiterates views expressed in his earlier writings about Galaktion’s poetry both before and after the revolution. He notes that the poet understands all the secrets of artistic creation, and his poems are cast in the most delicate forms. Shalva Radiani also touches on Galaktion’s recent lyrical works and speaks of his militant patriotism.

Source: Sh. Radiani, “The Poet’s Path”, newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1943, №6 (November 26), p. 3.

1943

November 26

In the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, Alexandre Sajaia’s poem “Jubilee Dedication to Galaktion” is published.

Source: A. Sajaia, “Jubilee Dedication to Galaktion”, newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1943, №6 (November 26), p. 3.

1943

November 26

In the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, an article titled “Galaktion Tabidze’s Evening” is published, noting that on November 29, a special evening will be held at the State Opera and Ballet Theatre, dedicated to the 50th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s birth and the 35th anniversary of his poetic career. The presentation “Galaktion Tabidze and New Georgian Poetry” will be delivered by Besarion Zhghenti. Poets Alexandre Abasheli, Giorgi Leonidze, Alio Mashashvili, Karlo Kaladze, Sandro Euli, Viktor Gabeskiria, and others will participate in the jubilee event. The evening will conclude with a concert program..

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's Evening, newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1943, №6 (November 26), p. 3.

1943

November 26

In the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, Giorgi Natroshvili's article "Singer of the Soviet Era" is published. The author of the article attempts to paint a creative portrait of Galaktion. According to the critic, although Galaktion Tabidze followed the mystical traditions of symbolism in his early phase, he still remained a national poet, as he was deeply connected to the healthy stream of national literature. Giorgi Natroshvili states that the influence of European poetry did not detach Galaktion from literary tradition, and the spiritual scope of Georgian romanticism remains the leitmotif of his poetry.

Source: G. Natroshvili, Singer of the Soviet Era, newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1943, №6 (November 26), p. 3.

1943

November 26

In connection with the 35th anniversary of Galaktion's literary career, a collective address titled "The People's Beloved Poet" is published in the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, signed by Alexandre Abasheli, Ioseb Grishashvili, Irakli Abashidze, Giorgi Leonidze, Simon Chikovani, and Grigol Abashidze. The jubilee address notes that the strengthening of Georgian modernism is linked to the name of Galaktion Tabidze, and his contribution to the reform of modern Georgian verse is of great significance. Inspired by the work of Paul Verlaine, the Georgian poet attempted to introduce refined melodies into Georgian poetry, partially transforming the musical quality of the Georgian verse of that time.

Source: A. Abasheli, I. Abashidze, Gr. Abashidze, I. Grishashvili, G. Leonidze, S. Chikovani, "The People's Beloved Poet", newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1943, №6 (November 26), p. 3.

1943

After November 27

In the magazine Mnatobi, Vano Shaduri's article "Leningrad and Georgian Culture" is published. The author cites Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Leningrad" and notes that the order-bearer National Poet created a unique portrayal of the epic battles of Lenin's city, conveying the Georgian people's love and dedication to Leningrad.

Source: V. Shaduri, "Leningrad and Georgian Culture", "Magazine Mnatobi, 1943, August, №8, p. 123-154;

1943

Until November 28

The portrait "Galaktion Tabidze", created by the Stalin Prize laureate Ucha Japaridze, is published in the newspaper Komunisti.

Source: Ucha Japaridze, "Galaktion Tabidze", Newspaper Komunisti, 1943, №246, p. 3.

1943

November 28

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation by Ryurik Ivnev of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "The March of the Great Army" is published.

Source: Поступь Армии Великой (Стих) Г. Табидзе, Перевел Рюрик Ивнев, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1943, 28 ноября, №247, с.2.

1943

November 28

In the newspaper Komunisti, a poem titled "For Truth" ("The Horseman Will Leave Pegasus...") is published, signed by Galaktion Tabidze, National Poet of Georgia.

Source: G. Tabidze, "For Truth", Newspaper Komunisti, 1943, №246, p. 3.

1943

November 28

In the newspaper Komunisti, an informational piece titled "Galaktion Tabidze's Evening" is published. It states that on November 29 at 8 PM, a jubilee evening will be held at the Tbilisi Zakharia Paliashvili Opera and Ballet Theatre, celebrating the 50th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's birth and the 35th anniversary of his creative career. Besarion Zhghenti will deliver a presentation titled "Galaktion Tabidze and New Georgian Poetry", and writers, representatives from Tbilisi State University, and the Red Army will speak. Poems will be recited by Alexandre Abasheli, Grigol Abashidze, Razhden Gvetadze, Giorgi Leonidze, Alio Mashashvili, Karlo Kaladze, Sandro Euli, Viktor Gabeskiria, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Kale Bobokhidze, Alexandre Sajaia, Andro Tevzadze, and Ioseb Nonashvili. The evening will conclude with a concert featuring artists from the Soviet Union and the Republic, as well as other performers.

Source: "Galaktion Tabidze", Newspaper Komunisti, 1943, №246, p. 3.

Note: The list of actors includes: A. Vasadze, D. Andghuladze, E. Sokhadze, D. Gamrekeli, P. Amiranashvili, N. Tsomaia, T. Chavchavadze, G. Davitashvili, V. Anjaparidze, D. Badridze, N. Kharadze, M. Nakashidze, M. Kvarelishvili, T. Bakradze, P. Kobakhidze, S. Zakariadze, G. Gogichadze, B. Kraveishvili, T. Dunenko, Gordon, Nodar Chkheidze, and S. Kancheli.

1943

November 28

In the newspaper Komunisti, Besarion Zhghenti's article "Galaktion Tabidze" is published, in which the critic discusses the pessimism of Galaktion's first book, which was a result of the defeat of the 1905 revolution. He writes about its symbolism and the changes that Galaktion's poetry underwent during the socialist era.

Source: B. Zhghenti, "Galaktion Tabidze", Newspaper Komunisti, 1943, №246, p. 3.

1943

Until November 29

He writes the text of the announcement that on December 6, a major literary evening dedicated to the works of Galaktion Tabidze will be held at the Zakaria Paliashvili State Opera and Ballet Theatre but later changes the date to November 29.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-233; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 109.

1943

Until November 29

He writes an announcement addressed to the director of the Tbilisi Opera and Ballet Theatre, requesting that the hall be reserved on Monday, December 6, for holding a creative evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze's works.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-233; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 109.

Dating: The evening was moved to November 29, and after it was held, he would not have written this announcement.

1943

Until November 29

He receives a letter from Polio Abramyan, who wholeheartedly congratulates him on the 50th anniversary of his birth. He writes that due to illness, he will not be able to attend the anniversary event, and with the invitation sent to him by the Writers' Union, he sends his wife in his place. However, he expresses deep sorrow for the addressee's daughter and asks to send tickets to two young people who are in love with his poetry.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-485; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 292-293;

1943

November 29

At the Zakaria Paliashvili State Opera and Ballet Theatre, a jubilee evening is held in honour of Galaktion Tabidze's 50th birthday and the 35th anniversary of his poetic career. A report on the poet's work is delivered by Besarion Zhghenti. Academician Korneli Kekelidze addresses the jubilarian, referring to Galaktion as a continuer of the finest traditions of Georgian literature. Kekelidze notes that the poems published in the latest issue of the magazine Mnatobi are signed not as "Galaktion Tabidze" but simply as "Galaktion". He views this as the ultimate evidence of the poet's popular recognition, pointing out that in the history of Georgian literature, only a select few have been honoured to be recognized by their first names alone – Shota, Besiki, Akaki, Ilia, and Vazha. Kekelidze declares that from now on, Galaktion joins these illustrious names. During the event, Galaktion recites his poem "The Moon of Mtatsminda". However, midway through the reading, he loses track of the poem, becomes flustered, and, despite the audience's thunderous applause, stops his reading and returns to his seat. The poet is visibly distressed by his perceived failure, and Marika Baratashvili attempts to calm him.

Source: B. Zhghenti, Galaktion Tabidze, magazine Mnatobi, 1943, №9-10, p. 161; K. Kekelidze, A speech delivered on the 50th anniversary of the birth and the 35th anniversary of the literary activity of Georgia's People's Poet, Galaktion Tabidze, 1943. 29. XI. At the Zakaria Paliashvili State Opera and Ballet Theatre, awarded the Order of Lenin; magazine Matsnei, (The series of Language and Literature), 1973, №3, p. 8. M. Baratashvili, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 98;

1943

November 29

The actress Nutsa Chkheidze writes a letter congratulating on the 50th anniversary of his birth and the 35th anniversary of his literary career. She wishes him a long life, hoping that in his poems he will “still carve the thoughts and feelings of the people with pearls”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-484; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 293-294.

1943

November 29

At the anniversary evening dedicated to the 50th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s birth and the 35th anniversary of his poetic career, held at the Zakaria Paliashvili State Opera and Ballet Theatre, Shalva Dadiani reads Galaktion’s poem “For the Truth” (“The horseman left his Steed”).

Source: MGL, t-132. G. Tabidze, works, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1947, p. 33.

1943

After November 29

In the magazine Mnatobi, Besarion Zhghenti’s essay “Galaktion Tabidze” is published, in which the critic aims to characterize the poet’s 35-year creative journey. The extensive article revolves around several key issues: 1. Galaktion’s early poetry; 2. The poet’s second book; 3. Galaktion’s relationship with literary tradition; 4. Galaktion and the revolution; 5. Galaktion’s poetry during the Soviet period. Like other Soviet critics, Besarion Zhghenti attributes the melancholic mood prevailing in the poet’s first Book to social causes. However, he also points out that alongside these sentiments, Galaktion’s early work reveals a fighting, optimistic spirit. According to Zhghenti, Galaktion’s poetry was characterized from the outset by a tendency towards complex poetic forms, distinguishing his poetic style from the rhetorical poetics of the so-called “democratic school”. Zhghenti considers “Artistic Flowers” to be the pinnacle of Georgian decadence, where Galaktion Tabidze emerges as a fully realized decadent. Despite the critic’s disapproval of the overall spirit of the book, he believes that in terms of mastering poetic technique, melody, and genre originality, Galaktion elevated Georgian verse to the highest level of perfection, and the collection’s significance extends far beyond the borders of national literature. The critic argues that the impressionistic manner of perceiving the world reached its highest level of development in Galaktion’s poetry. He believes that this is linked to the poet’s ability to liberate the word from its objective, communicative function, emphasizing its sound qualities. Zhghenti highlights the factor that, in his opinion, contributed to Galaktion’s rapid transformation: the poet’s unbroken connection to the traditions of national literature. In this regard, Zhghenti contrasts Galaktion with the “Tsisperkantselis”. The essay also explores Galaktion’s attitude towards the revolution. The author suggests that initially, there was a degree of ambiguity in Galaktion’s position; however, the poet quickly overcame his inner conflict and enthusiastically embraced the revolution. The emergence of new themes and motifs in Galaktion’s poetry, as well as the evolution of his worldview, led Zhghenti to assert that the author was inevitably faced with the necessity of renewing the poetic form developed for the expression of personal, intimate themes, ephemerality, and fantastical images. In Zhghenti's view, in the intense creative struggle to overcome these challenges, the poet was not always able to maintain his poetic level, with the poem "John Reed" serving as evidence of this. The critic then shifts to an ideological and thematic characterization of Galaktion's Soviet-era poetry. He highlights themes of patriotism, defence of the homeland, revenge against enemies, and industrial advancement in the poet's post-revolutionary works, discussing these topics in detail.

Source: B. Zhghenti, Galaktion Tabidze, magazine Mnatobi, 1943, №9-10, p. 161-180.

Dating: The article's annotation indicates that it was read as a presentation on November 29, 1943.

1943

Autumn

He enters a café located on Rustaveli Avenue. He sees a shy girl sitting in the corner and approaches her, asking for permission to sit at her table. After receiving her consent, he starts a conversation. When he learns that the girl's last name is Bagrationi, he cannot hide his delight and tells her how wonderful it is that such a beautiful girl is dressed so modestly. After a short while, the girl expresses her intention to leave in order to bring bread to her elderly relatives. Upon hearing this, Galaktion himself buys a large white loaf from the buffet and hands it to the girl. He then suddenly steps out onto the street and returns with a torn poster in hand. He shows the poster to the young girl and tells her that his words are printed on it. He then accompanies the girl to the street and bids her farewell.

Source: E. Bagrationi, Galaktion's bread, Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1996, №23, June 7, p. 3.

December

1943

December 3

In the newspaper Literatura da Kheovneba, an article titled "Galaktion Tabidze's Evening" is published, noting that on November 29, a special evening was held at the State Opera and Ballet Theatre to celebrate the 50th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's birth and the 35th anniversary of his poetic career. Besarion Zhghenti delivered a presentation titled "Galaktion Tabidze and New Georgian Poetry". Academician Korneli Kekelidze also spoke at the event. On behalf of the poets of Georgia, Giorgi Leonidze congratulated Galaktion on this jubilee date. The jubilarian read his poems during the evening.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's evening, newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1943, №7 (December 3), p. 3.

1943

Until December 12

He writes an untitled poem "Spring's Violet Gaze".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №8143; №8188; №1259-1260; №65; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 165.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “It Is for the Homeland That He Sings,” “Kuparadze,” “The Far-Sighted Gaze of the Commander-in-Chief,” and “Moscow”.

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1943

December 12

In the newspaper Komunisti, a poem titled “Moscow” is published.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, December 12, 1943, №256, p. 3.

1943

He runs into his old acquaintance, Nino Kvirikadze, on the street. After Nino’s husband, Davit Ebanoidze, fell victim to the repressions of 1937, and she was forced to leave her home, she has been living in a single room with her sixth-grade daughter, Nunu, while her eleventh-grade son, Davit, is raised by his grandmother, Ekaterine Gvinjilia-Kvirikadze. Galaktion and Nino get married, and she moves in with Galaktion along with her children.

Source: N. Tskhvediani, To immortalize my dearest aunt Nino, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 379-380.

1943

He writes a poem “Batumi”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №639; №659; №2187; №2188; №2319; №7431; №1269-1271; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 143.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Signs on the Water,” “Sailors in Batumi,” “The Sailor,” and untitled (with the beginnings: “A sailor stands by the Black Sea...” and “By the Black Sea...”).

1943

He writes an untitled poem “Not in Vain...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3976; №4155-4156; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 149.

Note: The poem is also found untitled, with a different beginning: “How vainly he directed the bullet...”.

1943

He writes a poem “The Oda Has Changed the Stage”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4006; №8097; №4126; №4151; №4152. №4154; №5493; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 150.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “The Stage Appears High on the Mountain,” “The Stage,” “From the New Stage,” and untitled (“The Stage Appears High on the Mountain...”).

1943

He has his photo taken with his wife Nino Kvirikadze.

Source: N. Tskhvediani, To immortalize my dearest aunt Nino, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 380.

1943

At the request of Ucha Japaridze, he goes to the artist's studio, where the painter creates a portrait of Galaktion. The poet makes a great effort to conceal the fatigue caused by his stillness.

Source: U. Japaridze, I gladly recall, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 312.

1943

He writes an untitled poem "Listen to the Native Melodies..." with the refrain "This is the genius of Galaktion".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1943

The Presidium of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia sends a letter to Beno Gogua, head of the Arts Affairs Department under the Council of People's Commissars, requesting that the State Opera Theatre be allocated on November 15 of the current year (Monday) to celebrate Galaktion Tabidze's 50th birthday and the 35th anniversary of his poetic career.

Source: MGL, WUF №10.

1943

He writes an untitled poem "My Star Will Shine Again...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №8835; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 176.

1943 or later

He dedicates a poem titled "March 8" to Nino Kvirikadze.

Source: N. Tskhvediani, To immortalize my dearest aunt Nino, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 380.

1943 or later

On his own initiative, he organizes a literary evening. The Writers' Union advises him to postpone it for another time, but he goes ahead with it and finds himself in front of an almost empty hall. After the evening, he tells his family that a bullet is not necessary to kill a poet. Later, he confides to his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, that Mayakovsky committed suicide after holding an exhibition showcasing his creative journey, which had no visitors. In his opinion, all of this was orchestrated by his enemies.

Source: I. Kukava, from the archive of memory, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 406.

Dating: This must have occurred in 1943, after the meeting between Nino Kvirikadze and Galaktion.

1943 or later

Once, when entering a church outside the city, Galaktion joins the choir, captivating the congregation with his beautiful baritone voice. After the service, the priest searches for him, wondering who this man with such a remarkable voice is.

Source: I. Kukava, from the archive of memory, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 405.

Dating: Since the story is narrated by Nino Kvirikadze, we can date it to the period following their reunion in 1943.

1943 or later

During one of their meetings, Konstantine Gamsakhurdia tells him that despite being an aesthete of the Georgian word, he somehow pays no attention to his clothing. Galaktion bursts into laughter, spreads out his five fingers, and replies that he has dedicated those five fingers to poetry, and 50 years from now, it will matter little to his admirers what he is wearing today; poetry is eternal, and clothing has nothing to do with it.

Source: N. Ebanoidze, Recollections about Galaktion, Tskhvediani, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 417.

Dating: Since Nunu Ebanoidze witnessed this conversation, it must have taken place after the marriage of her mother, Nino Kvirikadze, and Galaktion.

1943 or later

He dedicates the humorous poem “I Can’t Write a Poem About Barbusse” to Nino Kvirikadze.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 513.

Dating: We date it based on the time of starting the relationship with Nino Kvirikadze.

1943 or later

He writes a satirical poem “Petruza was saying something twisted about me...”.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 524.

Dating: Since the poem was written by Nino Kvirikadze, we date it based on the time of starting the relationship with her.

1943 or later

Georgian Radio broadcasts a report “Soviet Literature’s Founding Writers on Galaktion Tabidze”. The text is read by actor Giorgi Saginashvili. The report includes epithets such as “The Sorcerer of Poetry,” “The Era Itself in Poetic Verses,” and others. Afterward, actors read the poet’s poems. Tamar Chavchavadze reads the following texts: “The Old and the New Bridge,” “Greetings to Georgia,” “Idea,” and “Do Not Abandon a Poem Without a Soul,” while Giorgi Davitashvili reads the poems: “The Homeland’s Progress is Astonishing,” “The City Underwater,” “The 70-Year-Old Poet Walks Down the Street,” “Lumianite,” “Workers’ Speech from Europe,” and others.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 514-515.

Dating: We date it based on the time of starting the relationship with Nino Kvirikadze.

1943 or later

He writes an untitled poem "You are from Baghdati, let's bid farewell to the goblet, Nino...".

Source: MGL, a-1717, AE in 25 books, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 319;

1943 or later

He writes a poem titled "Victor Hugo" ("So that he may respond to the enemy...").

Source: MGL, a-1696, G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 306;

1944

January

1944

Until January 1

He begins working on a poem about the Caucasus. He intends to base the work on native themes, which, in his view, should determine the poem's significance and success in the future.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, January 1, 1944, №1, p. 3.

Dating: The information is provided in a questionnaire published on January 1, 1944.

1944

Until January 1

He goes daily to the editorial office of the newspaper Komunisti, where he reviews poignant poems and abundant materials sent from the front by soldiers. On Saturdays, during meetings at the Writers' House, he reads these works to his colleagues and the gathered audience.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, January 1, 1944, №1, p. 3.

Dating: The information is provided in a questionnaire published on January 1, 1944.

1944

Until January 1

He is working on an autobiography for one of the publishers.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, January 1, 1944, №1, p. 3.

Dating: The information is provided in a questionnaire published on January 1, 1944.

1943

Until October 1

In his diary, he notes the themes for posters: "Georgian Writers", "Biography", and "For Poetry".

Source: MGL, d-157, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 346.

1944

January 1

In the newspaper Komunisti, under the common title “Many Happy New Years!”, three poems are published: “Look”, “For Those Who Know”, and “Many Happy New Years!..”.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, January 1, 1944, №1, p. 3.

1944

January 1

In the newspaper Komunisti, under the section “New Year’s Questionnaires”, texts by Galaktion Tabidze, Giorgi Leonidze, and Grigol Abashidze are published. The writers discuss the work they accomplished in previous years and also reflect on their future plans. Galaktion notes that in the new year, 1944, he intends to submit all the works he has created over the past 35 years to the state publishing house. According to his estimate, this material amounts to 35,000 lines. Under the agreement with the publishing house, a complete collection of the poet’s works, which will unite all previously published pieces, should soon be released. The questionnaire also reveals that since the very first days of the war in Europe, the poet has been keeping a diary, based on which he created the poems: “On Café Corso Street”, “The Forest of Compiègne”, and “Europe”. Galaktion also discusses his ongoing projects, mentioning that he is currently working on a poem about the Caucasus, which he believes will be a significant work. Additionally, the poet is preparing an autobiography for one of the publishers. Alongside all this, he daily reviews moving poems sent from the frontlines in the editorial office of the newspaper Komunisti.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, January 1, 1944, №1, p. 3.

1944

After January 1

He submits approximately 35,000 lines of his published verses and poems to the publisher for the release of his collection titled “Selected”, which includes works from his 35-year career.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, January 1, 1944, №1, p. 3.

Dating: The information is provided in an article published on January 1, 1944.

1944

January 1 or later

On the public-political poster depicting World War II titled “With a Bayonet and a Pen”, a poem by Galaktion Tabidze titled “Many New Years” is published, edited by Otari Egadze and artistically designed by Shota Beritashvili.

Source: Poster “With a Bayonet and a Pen”, №3.

1944

January 1 or later

On the public-political poster depicting World War II titled “With a Bayonet and a Pen”, the Russian translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Many New Years”, titled “Грядущим годам”, is published, edited by Otari Egadze and artistically designed by Shota Beritashvili.

Source: Poster “Штыком и пером”, №3.

1944

After January 3

The magazine Mnatobi publishes the speech “Galaktion Tabidze”, read by Besarion Zhghenti at the evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze at the State Opera and Ballet Theatre. The author notes that the poet has enriched native literature with brilliant works; he is a reformer and innovator, just like the preceding classics – Shota Rustaveli, Davit Guramishvili, Nikoloz Baratashvili, Ilia Chavchavadze, Akaki Tsereteli, and Vazha-Pshavela. His poetry is universally recognized and has a significant influence on the work of contemporary poets. The poems “Desert”, “I and the Night”, and “A Grave-digger” paved the way for the author towards European and Russian poetry, but he has never severed his ties with native tradition, as evidenced by his masterpieces “Mtatsminda’s Night” and “Blue Horses”. He reviews the poems from before and after the revolution and concludes that Galaktion Tabidze splendidly fulfilled his complex creative intentions.

Source: B. Zhghenti, “Galaktion Tabidze”, Magazine Mnatobi, 1943, №9-10, p. 162-181;

1944

After January 4

In his notebook, he writes a list of poems published by Georgian poets on the theme of the patriotic war in the newspapers Komunisti and Mebrdzoli.

Source: MGL, d-427, 3-19; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 100-103;

1944

After January 5

On the cover of Nikolai Dzerzhavin’s booklet “Attack on the East”, he writes the Russian translation of the German title “Наступление на восток” and makes underlining marks on the lines.

Source: MGL, t-306, “Дранг нах Остен”, Tbilisi, 1944.

1944

January 25

The writer and educator Nino Tkeshelashvili goes to the editorial office of the newspaper Komunisti to see him, but she is unable to find him.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-459-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 294.

Dating: This is mentioned in Nino Tkeshelashvili’s letter dated January 26, 1944.

1944

January 26

The writer and educator Nino Tkeshelashvili leaves her manuscript “Georgian Woman Warrior” along with the letter. She writes that the literati and historians have praised it, and if Galaktion likes it too, she asks him to intervene with the editorial office of Komunisti to have it published. She believes it should be printed soon as agitational material. She requests his help, as she has spent a lot of time and energy writing it, and its publication will support her both morally and materially during this time of hunger. She also asks him to let her know if anything needs to be corrected, preferably through the main literary department employee, the Bolshevik agitator Eka Mghebrishvili.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-459-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 294.

1944

January 26

The newspaper Komunisti publishes a list of candidates for the real membership of the Academy of Sciences of Georgia. Among them, Galaktion Tabidze is named in the field of artistic literature.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, January 26, 1944, №18, p. 2.

1944

After January 27

He writes a poem titled “Violet Pages” dedicated to the end of the Leningrad blockade.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2018-2019; №2104-2105; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 176.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “The Leningrad Factory During the Blockade Days,” “Factory in the Days of the Leningrad Blockade,” and untitled (“Here is a small pile of violet pages...”).

Dating: It is dated based on the date of the end of the Leningrad blockade.

1944

January

He writes a poem “New Year” (“Pull the Curtains Apart...”).

Source: Autograph, MGL, №6667; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 186.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Pull the Curtains Apart”.

February

1944

February 7

His evening is held at the Giorgi Eristavi Gori Theatre. A report on Galaktion’s work is read by Solomon Khutsishvili. David Lashkaradze, Elene Virsaladze, Simon Skhirtladze, and Vasil Baiadze give speeches. Galaktion reads poems, including “My Native Land”. After the evening, wounded soldiers meet the poet in the foyer, expressing their admiration for the poem “My Native Land”. They embrace the poet and tell him that they are heading back to the front to defend their homeland. Galaktion blesses their journey.

Source: Sh. Chubinidze, Only This and the Fortress of Gori Have Left, newspaper Gori, №144, December 12, p. 4.

1944

After February 22

He writes an untitled poem “Our Heart Enlivening...”.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 494;

1944

February 23

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “To the Red Army” is published.

Source: Красной Армии (Стихотворение), Г. Табидзе, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1944, 23 февраля, №38.

1944

Until February 22

During the discussion of Galaktion Tabidze’s election as an academician of the Academy at the Writers’ Union, one writer comments that Galaktion loves wine, walks around drunk all the time, and embarrasses them. Galaktion calmly asks, “So, my friend, do you not love wine?” The writer replies that he does not. “Have you never been drunk?” Galaktion inquires, to which he responds that he has never been. After this, Galaktion smiles and addresses the presidium, suggesting they elect his opponent as an academician.

Source: N. Agiashvili, Around Galaktion, magazine Niangi, 1982, N 16, p. 4.

Dating: Dated according to the time of his election as a member of the Academy.

1944

Until February 22

The issue of electing writers as academicians at the Georgian Academy of Sciences arises, and the Central Committee of the Party bypasses Galaktion, nominating another poet instead. Concerned, Akaki Gachechiladze approaches Konstantine Gamsakhurdia to complain about this situation. Together, they visit the Vice President of the Academy, Simon Janashia, who also believes that not electing Galaktion would be a disgrace for the Academy. He instructs Akaki Gachechiladze to write a suitable characterization and attestation to present Galaktion as a candidate for academia.

Source: N. Tabidze, “Life is the colour of my unfiltered wine...”, Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, March 8, 1991, № 10, p. 10.

Dating: Dated according to the time of his election as a member of the Academy.

1944

February 22

He is elected as a full member of the Georgian SSR Academy of Sciences.

Source: g-t-b-m-656; Membership certificate of the Georgian Academy of Sciences.

1944

After February 22

He is filmed on video along with the members of the Academy of Sciences of Georgia.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 270, p. 68; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 197.

1944

Until February 23

He writes a one-stanza untitled poem “O Greatness, Homeland! Of Friendship Among Nations...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-159, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 356;

1944

Until February 23

In his notebook, he writes in Russian the Soviet Union anthem written by Sergey Mikhalkov and El-Registan.

Source: MGL, d-159, 6, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 357.

1944

February 23

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “To the Red Army” is published without indicating the translator.

Source: “Красной Армии”. newspaper “Заря Востока”, February 23, 1944, №38, p. 3.

1944

February 23 or later

In his notebook, he writes that a translation of his poem was published in the newspaper Zarya Vostoka. He is curious about who the translator is and what the translation is like, as the translator does not sign their name.

Source: MGL, d-159, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 356.

1944

February 24

He receives a brief letter from the President of the Georgian Academy of Sciences, Niko Muskhelishvili. The letter informs him that the Academy has taken into account his contributions to the native literature and has elected him as a full member of the Academy.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-459-b; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 294.

1944

February 27

He writes an untitled poem “Roar, Georgian Fireplace...”.

Source: MGL, N. Kvirikadze’s manuscript, №501; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 177.

1944

February

In the emigrant magazine Kartveli Eri, published in Berlin, an article titled “Symbolism in Georgia” is printed under the pseudonym “Legioner Tamazi” by the Georgian poet Ilia Shengelia, who lives abroad. The author aims to describe Georgian symbolism as a literary and cultural phenomenon, drawing on the works of Galaktion Tabidze and the Tsisperkantselis. Ilia Shengelia notes that Galaktion is one of the greatest representatives of contemporary poetry, having introduced unprecedented poetic lightness and musicality to Georgian literature. When discussing the peculiarities of Galaktion Tabidze’s lyricism, the critic points out that he is not an analytical poet by nature, and his poems are not characterized by intellectualism. Instead, they predominantly captivate readers with their poetic finesse and astonishing melodic quality. The critic openly opposes the established cliché in Soviet literary studies regarding the so-called two periods of the poet’s work. However, he also displays another extreme by completely dismissing Galaktion’s Soviet-era poems as expressions of the author’s “creative death”. Ilia Shengelia discusses the unbearable ideological pressure, censorship, and self-censorship under which Galaktion and Georgian writers had to operate. According to the critic, he had the opportunity to review the poet’s poems “The Great Glory of the Present” and “Above the Mountains”, some of which the author had to modify due to censorship before publication.

Source: Legionnaire Tamazi [Ilia Shengelia], Symbolism in Georgia, magazine Kartveli Eri, №10-11, 1943, p. 6-8.

March

1944

March 7-9

For three days, Galaktion’s poems are read on the radio: “Devoted Millions,” “Homeland,” “Irakli’s Sword,” “The Progress of the Homeland,” “Great Army,” and “Four-Stringed Lute”.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 506.

1944

After March 9

He reads the Book about Ivan Turgenev, published in the series “Great Patriotic Writers”, and making underlines.

Source: GTSM, 913, Писатели-патриоты Великой Родины И. С. Тургенев, Moscow, 1944.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on March 9, 1944.

1944

After March 9

He writes a poem “Symphony of Roots”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, GTSM, 913, Писатели-патриоты Великой Родины И. С. Тургенев, Moscow, 1944.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on March 9, 1944.

1944

February 23 - March 13

In his notebook, he writes the Russian translation of his poem “So, Glory to the Sun!” under the title “Грядущим годам” (To the Coming Years).

Source: MGL, d-159, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 356.

1944

23 February - 13 March

He begins writing a poem with the lines: “Wings of memories are taking me...” and later titles it “The Parting of the Sun and the Ridge”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-159, 13-14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 358-359.

Note: The poem was never published during Galaktion Tabidze’s lifetime; it was first printed in the seventh volume of the academic edition of his works, titled “The Waves of Memories Are Fleeting...” without a title.

1944

February 23 - March 13

In his notebook, he writes the list of writers participating in the upcoming Georgian literature evenings to be held in Moscow: Irakli Abashidze, Shalva Dadiani, Alio Mashashvili, Galaktion Tabidze, Ioseb Grishashvili, Konstantine Gamsakhurdia, Simon Chikovani, Demna Shengelaia, Iliia Mosashvili, Shalva Apkhaidze, Karlo Kaladze, Konstantine Lortqipanidze, Grigol Abashidze, Besarion Zhghenti, Alexandre Kutateladze, and Razhden Gvetadze. He is curious about when they are leaving, for how long, and by what means of transport, and he thinks about what clothes and shoes he should take with him.

Source: MGL, d-159, 17-18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 359-360.

1944

February 23 - March 13

In his notebook, he writes the list of full members of the Georgian SSR Academy of Sciences, corresponding members, and the directors of scientific institutions that are part of the Division of Social Sciences.

Source: MGL, d-159, 20-24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 360.

1944

March 14

At the beer stand near the Mushtaidi Park, a crowd has gathered, and Galaktion witnesses a heated exchange between an agitated railway worker and a Russian sailor. The railway worker curses at the sailor, saying that a Georgian man’s mother pays five thousand roubles for her son’s pants, while Russians walk around without pants. At this remark, some people burst out laughing, and the young folks stare at Galaktion; as soon as he smiles, they smile back at him.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-159, 29-31; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 361.

1944

After March 14

In his notebook, he writes down a poem preserved on the wall of the Metekhi Church: “King Erekle took this fortress from the enemy by his might...”.

Source: MGL, d-159, 40; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 362.

1944

After March 14

The State Publishing House, under the editorship of Shalva Radiani, publishes Galaktion Tabidze’s selected works.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze, Selected, Tbilisi, 1948;

1944

March 21

He sends a brief letter to Comrade Golashvili, reminding him that 4 tickets for the international carriage of the Batumi train should be booked by March 25 for those traveling to organize Galaktion’s evening in Batumi.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-72; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 67.

1944

March 27

A poetry evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze is held at the Batumi State Theatre, where Giorgi Salukvadze reads his Russian translation of the poem “I and the Night” and a poem dedicated to the poet.

Source: G. Salukvadze, Unforgettable Evenings, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 267.]

May

1944

May 6

In the Russian newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, Besarion Zhghenti’s article “Georgian Literature during the Great Patriotic War” is published. The author writes that in the first half of May, Georgian writers will visit Moscow to present works created during the war period. The critic reviews various poets’ verses and notes that Galaktion Tabidze published two books after the war began: “Homeland, Life!” and “My Native Land”, the latter of which begins with a poem dedicated to Stalin. He includes the final stanza of Vladimir Derzhavin’s Russian translation of the poem “My Native Land”.

Source: Б. Жгенти, “Грузинская литература в дни Великой Отечественной Войны”, newspaper “Литература и Искусство”, May 6, 1944, №19, p. 2.

1944

Until May 9

In his notebook, Galaktion writes down the names of participants in the events of Georgian writers and artists to be held in Moscow: Marijani, Ioseb Grishashvili, Konstantine Chichinadze, Demna Shengelaia, Aleko Shengelia, Razhden Gvetadze, Akaki Beliashvili, Levan Asatiani, Simon Chikovani, Ilia Mosashvili, Karlos Kaladze, Irakli Abashidze, Viktor Gabeskiria, Konstantine Gamsakhurdia, Sergo Kldiashvili, Alexandre Kutateladze, and Shalva Apkhaidze.

Source: MGL, d-163, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 369.

Note: The writers are mentioned by their last names in the source.

1944

Until May 9

In his notebook, he writes a list of clothing and items needed for the trip to Moscow: underwear, a blue and white silk shirt, a towel, a drinking cup (horn), a bread knife, and a spoon.

Source: MGL, d-163, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 370.

1944

Until May 9

He writes a poem titled “Basketball” dedicated to his step-child, Nunu Ebanoidze.

Source: MGL, d-163, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 370.

Note: G. Tabidze’s note mentions Nunu Ebanoidze by the first name in the source.

1944

May 13

He participates in a grand evening of Georgian writers and artists held in the columned hall of the Moscow House of Unions.

Source: “Вечера грузинской литературы”, newspaper “Литература и Искусство”, May 20, 1944, №21, p. 1.

1944

May 13

In the Russian newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, an article titled “Greetings to the Masters of the Art of Sunny Georgia!” by Nikolai Tikhonov is published, noting that Georgian and Russian poets have a long-standing friendship, but they are meeting for the first time in Moscow during World War II. The Russian readership became acquainted with Georgian poets ten years earlier; however, it was difficult to fully reflect the richness of Georgian poetry through translations, as showcasing the peculiarities of the language proved to be extremely challenging. At this meeting, Georgian poets are widely represented, starting with the national poet Galaktion Tabidze and ending with the young poet Grigol Abashidze. Following the article, Tikhonov’s translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Everyone Has Something to Remember” is published.

Source: Н. Тихонов, “Встреча друзей”, “Каждый имеет любовь свою”, newspaper “Литература и Искусство”, May 13, 1944, №20, p. 2.

1944

May 16

He participates in an evening of Georgian writers held at the club of the Higher Military Political Courses in Moscow.

Source: “Вечера грузинской литературы”, newspaper “Литература и Искусство”, May 20, 1944, №21, p. 1.

1944

May 18

In connection with the evenings of Georgian literature and art held in Moscow, the Soviet Radio Committee broadcasts the poems of Galaktion Tabidze. Vasily Kachalov reads the translations of the poems “Hey, Homeland!” (“О, родина, тебя любя”) and “Kazbeg” (“Как-же мне не дорожить тобою, о, Казбек?”), while Nikolai Pershin reads the translation of the poem “Everyone Has Something to Remember” (“Каждый имеет любовь свою”).

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-163, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 369.

Note: The actors are mentioned in the source by the initials of their first names and their last names.

1944

May 19

He reads poems in Moscow at the Central House of the Red Army during an evening of Georgian literature and music.

Source: “Вечера Грузинской литературы и музыки”, газ. “Заря Востока”, 1944, 23 мая, №102, ст. 1.

1944

May 20

He participates in a grand evening of Georgian writers and artists held at the House of Actors in Moscow.

Source: “Вечера грузинской литературы”, newspaper “Литература и Искусство”, May 20, 1944, №21, p. 1.

1944

May 21

He participates in an evening of Georgian writers held at the Officers’ Club in Moscow.

Source: “Вечера грузинской литературы”, newspaper “Литература и Искусство”, May 20, 1944, №21, p. 1.

1944

May 21

The Russian newspaper Trud publishes a notice about the planned publication of translations of the best poetic and prose works by Georgian writers for 1944, organized by the Department of Artistic Literature of the State Publishing House. Among them, the collected works of the National Poet Galaktion Tabidze are mentioned in first place, followed by works by Simon Chikovani, Ioseb Grishashvili, Irakli Abashidze, and Leo Kiacheli. The poems have been translated by Nikolai Tikhonov, Boris Pasternak, Vladimir Derzhavin, Vladimir Zvyagintsev, and others.

Source: “Издание книг грузинских писателей”, газ. “Труд”, 1944, 21 мая, №120, ст. 2.

1944

May 21

The Russian newspaper Komsomolskaia Pravda publishes a translation by Sergei Spassky of the poem “Greetings XXVI”, originally published in the newspaper Komunisti in 1943, titled “Kazbek” – “Казбек”. The poem combines two works written in 1943: “The Shoulders of Kazbek” and “The Caucasus Ridges Ask Me”.

Source: Г. Табидзе, “Казбек”, газ. “Комсомольская Правда”, пер. С. Спаского, 1944, 21 мая, №120, ст. 3.

1944

After May 21

He writes an untitled poem, “How Precious is the War-Cry of the Hero...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-163, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 368-369;

1944

After May 21

He counts the lines and quantity of his poems: Volume I – 2,664 lines and 141 poems, Volume II – 5,720 lines and 130 poems, Volume III – 2,872 lines and 266 poems, the collection “Homeland, Life” – 1,496 lines and 28 poems. In total: 12,752 lines and 665 poems.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-163, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 368;

1944

May 22

In connection with the Georgian literature and art evening held in Moscow, the Soviet Radio Committee broadcasts Galaktion Tabidze’s poems. The poet reads Nikolai Tikhonov’s translated poem “Everyone Has Something to Remember”, actor Nikolai Pershin reads Semyon Olender’s translation “Great Army” and Sergei Spassky’s translation “Kazbek”, while Marina Goldina reads Sergei Shervinsky’s translation “Oath” and Adelina Adalis’s translation “To the Defender of Sevastopol”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-163, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 369; “Выступления Грузинских писателей и работников искусств в Москве”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, May 26, 1944, №104, p. 1.

Note: The translators and actors are mentioned in the source by the initials of their first names and their last names. The Russian titles of the referenced poems are: “Каждый имеет любовь свою”, “Великая армия”, “Как-же мне не дорожить тобою, о, Казбек?”, “Присяга” and “Привет герою”.

1944

May 23

He receives a letter from an unknown admirer of his poetry, Captain Ambrosi Shengelia.

Source: P. Shamatava, The day begins with victory, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 297.

1944

May 24

He participates in the Georgian literature evening held at Moscow State University.

Source: “Вечера грузинской литературы”, newspaper “Литература и Искусство”, May 20, 1944, №21, p. 1.

1944

May 25

He signs a contract with the Moscow State Publishing House for the publication of translations of his selected poems.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-206, p. 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 313.

1944

May 25

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Everyone Has Their Own Keepsake” is published, translated by Nikolai Tikhonov.

Source: Каждый имеет любовь свою (Стихи) Галактион Табидзе, Перевел с грузинского Н. Тихонов, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1944, 25 мая, №103.

1944

May 9-26

He is attending the Decade of Georgian Literature and Art in Moscow.

Source: “Вечера грузинской литературы”, newspaper “Литература и Искусство”, May 20, 1944, №21, p. 1;

1944

May 26

He participates in an evening of Georgian classical poetry held at the Writers’ Club in Moscow.

Source: “Вечера грузинской литературы”, newspaper “Литература и Искусство”, May 20, 1944, №21, p. 1.

1944

May 28

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation by Sergei Spassky of two poems by Galaktion Tabidze written in 1943, “Kazbek’s Shoulders” and “The Ridges of the Caucasus Ask Me”, is published as a single poem titled “Kazbek”.

Source: Г. Табидзе, “Казбек”, газ. “Заря Востока”, пер. С. Спасского, 1944, 28 мая, №106, ст. 2.

1944

After May 29

In the Transcaucasian poetry collection “Wrath and Love,” he counts the number of lines.

Source: MGL, t-298, “Гнев и Любовь”, Поэзия Закавказья, Moscow, 1944.

1944

May

He signs a contract with the Moscow State Literary Publishing House regarding the publication of a Book of translated poems.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 46-47; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 480.

Note: The Book was published in 1950.

1944

After May

He writes an untitled poem “The Arrival, the Meeting of Brother and Friend...”.

Source: Autograph: MGL, №1335; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 179; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 433.

June

1944

Until Summer

He writes an untitled poem “From the Vegetable Garden, Where Dill and Coriander...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №7789; №170-d., p. 19; №6674; A. Tabidze’s autograph, №1291; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 179.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles “From the Garden, Where” and “The Stomach of Paris”.

Dating: It is dated based on the time when G. Tabidze’s collection “Gold in the Azure of Adjara” was submitted to the publishing house.

1944

Until Summer

He revises the poem “New Year” (“Pull the Curtains Apart”) and includes its new version in the collection “Gold in the Azure of Adjara” under the title “Pull the Curtains Apart”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №6667; G. Tabidze, “Gold in the Azure of Adjara”, 1944, p. 75.

1944

Until Summer

He writes a poem “With a Golden Boat”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №8381; A. Tabidze's autograph, №1290; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 189.

Note: The poem is also found untitled ("The Golden Boat...").

Dating: It is dated based on the time when G. Tabidze's collection "Gold in the Azure of Adjara" was submitted to the publishing house.

1944

Until Summer

He writes an untitled poem, "Do Not Forget the Golden Evening...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №19, p. 11; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 182.

Dating: It is dated based on the time when G. Tabidze's collection "Gold in the Azure of Adjara" was submitted to the publishing house.

1944

Until Summer

He writes a poem "Tamari by the Sea".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №2381; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 186.

Dating: It is dated based on the time when G. Tabidze's collection "Gold in the Azure of Adjara" was submitted to the publishing house.

1944

Until Summer

He writes an untitled poem "He Watches the Turbulent Waves...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №2317; N. Kvirikadze's manuscript, №19, p. 21; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 187.

Dating: It is dated based on the time when G. Tabidze's collection "Gold in the Azure of Adjara" was submitted to the publishing house.

1944

Until Summer

He writes an untitled poem "The Places Where My Childhood Passed".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №1289; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 188.

Note: The poem is also found untitled "It Is Delightful in the Time of Youth...".

Dating: It is dated based on the time when G. Tabidze's collection "Gold in the Azure of Adjara" was submitted to the publishing house.

1944

Until Summer

He writes a poem "The Woman in the Lemons".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №43; №44; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 188.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “The Woman with Lemons”.

Dating: It is dated based on the time when G. Tabidze’s collection “Gold in the Azure of Adjara” was submitted to the publishing house.

1944

Until Summer

He writes a poem “Sanatorium”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №1289; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 190.

Note: The poem is also found untitled, “The Dream Became Reality...”; in the manuscript and the first printed text, the poem includes an epigraph: “Following the Edge of the Forest, the Thicket... Shota Rustaveli”.

Dating: It is dated based on the time when G. Tabidze’s collection “Gold in the Azure of Adjara” was submitted to the publishing house.

1944

Until Summer

He writes a poem “Antiquities”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №2326; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 202.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Carved on Vernes’ Stone”.

Dating: It is dated based on the time when G. Tabidze’s collection “Gold in the Azure of Adjara” was submitted to the publishing house.

1944

Until Summer

He writes a poem “To Create Something Great”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №2313-2314; №2324-2325; №5340; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 194.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “The Sea and Poetry” and untitled “You Must Be Compared To...”.

Dating: It is dated based on the time when G. Tabidze’s collection “Gold in the Azure of Adjara” was submitted to the publishing house.

1944

Until Summer

He writes a poem “I Spare Your Flowers”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №2385; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 203.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Do Not Leave the Door Open” and untitled “I Spare Your Flowers...”.

Dating: It is dated based on the time when G. Tabidze’s collection “Gold in the Azure of Adjara” was submitted to the publishing house.

1944

Until Summer

He writes a poem “Shota Rustaveli by the Black Sea”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №5; 2309; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 205.

Dating: It is dated based on the time when G. Tabidze’s collection “Gold in the Azure of Adjara” was submitted to the publishing house.

1944

Until Summer

He writes a poem “Sunrise Over the Sea”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2321; №1268-1269; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 207.

Note: The poem is also found untitled “The Sun Overturned a Basket Full of Roses...”.

Dating: It is dated based on the time when G. Tabidze’s collection “Gold in the Azure of Adjara” was submitted to the publishing house.

1944

Until Summer

He writes a poem “Other Flowers”.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 209.

Dating: It is dated based on the time when G. Tabidze’s collection “Gold in the Azure of Adjara” was submitted to the publishing house.

1944

Until Summer

He writes a poem “In Every Storm”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2528; №3988; №5797-5799; №2400; №4114-4116; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 210.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles “Preface,” “Comrades,” and untitled, with the beginnings “In Every Storm...” and “Gold Flashes from the East...”.

Dating: It is dated based on the time when G. Tabidze’s collection “Gold in the Azure of Adjara” was submitted to the publishing house.

1944

Until Summer

He writes a poem “The Horse”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2384; №5544; №5760; №5761; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 212.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles “The Martyr’s Horse,” “From Folk Motifs,” “The Story of the Horse,” and untitled “But a Year Later, This Horse...”.

Dating: It is dated based on the time when G. Tabidze’s collection “Gold in the Azure of Adjara” was submitted to the publishing house.

1944

Until Summer

He writes a poem “Forty Years Ago”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1517-1518; №1546-1547; №4334; №4340; №5664; №5665; №325-d., p. 57; №325-d., p. 62; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 219.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles “The Surplus Number,” “In the Abysses,” “You Observe the Arcs of the Malady,” and untitled, with the openings “I Beg You...,” “Georgia Entrusted Me...,” “Europe, What Enmity It Is...,” and “What Has Been Butchered in Europe...”.

Dating: It is dated based on the time when G. Tabidze’s collection “Gold in the Azure of Adjara” was submitted to the publishing house.

1944

Until Summer

He writes a poem “You Have Such a Sky”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2359; №1290; №5498; №8381; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 204.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “My Friend, Please” and untitled, with the beginnings “Khasan, Please...,” “It Seems Like Water: Here It Darkens...,” and “My Friend, Please...”.

Dating: It is dated based on the time when G. Tabidze’s collection “Gold in the Azure of Adjara” was submitted to the publishing house.

1944

Until Summer

He writes a poem “Symphony of Roots”.

Source: Autograph: MGL, №5-28, p. 183; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 141.

Dating: It is dated based on the time when the collection “Gold in the Azure of Adjara”, where this poem was first published, was submitted for publication.

1944

Until June

He writes an untitled poem “When the enemy is thwarted...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5-59, 1-3; №732; №1268; №2346; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 43.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Our Homeland Stands like the Cliff”, “On the Forehead of the Caucasus”, and untitled (with beginnings: “When the enemy is thwarted...”, “Singing with Melodies on the Shore...”, “There, among the Predators...”).

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1944

June 23

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Homeland” by Mikhail Svetlov is published.

Source: Родина (Стихи) Галактион Табидзе, Перевод с грузинского М. Светлова, Заря Востока, агитлистовка, Тбилиси, 1944, 23 июня, №13.

July

1944

Until July

Mirza Gelovani, stationed at the front, dedicates a poem.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 272, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 236.

Dating: We date it based on the time of the author’s death.

1944

July 3

He is in the garden with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, and writes an untitled poem “The Joyful Running of Children by the Sea...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №322; №5490; N. Kvirikadze’s autograph, №7766; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 171.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “The Joyful Running of Children by the Sea”.

1944

July 25

The President of the Georgian SSR Academy of Sciences, Niko Muskhelishvili, issues a certificate stating that Galaktion Tabidze has been elected as a full member of the Georgian Academy of Sciences since February 22, 1944.

Source: g-t-b-m-656. Membership Certificate of the Georgian Academy of Sciences.

August

1944

August 2

He makes a note that his poem “What Does Today Mean” has achieved great success in literary circles. He read it to the poet Alio Adamia at the Palace of Arts, and the audience liked it very much. Gaioz Imedashvili mentioned that he had encountered a rare poem in the form of this work about a military pilot. Galaktion received congratulations on his success from Platon Keshelava, Sandro Euli, Giorgi Kachakhidze, Simon Tsereteli, and employees of the Literary Fund.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-633, 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 393.

1944

After August 17

In Moscow, in the Russian anthology of Georgian poets titled "Victory", six poems on the theme of war by Galaktion Tabidze are published: "Hey, Homeland!" translated by Mikhail Svetlov, "Everyone Has Something to Remember" translated by Nikolai Tikhonov, "My Native Land" translated by Vladimir Derzhavin, "Kazbek" translated by Sergei Spassky, "To the Defenders of Sevastopol" translated by Adelina Adalis, and "Oath" translated by Sergei Shervinsky.

Source: "Гамарджвеба", Стихи грузинских поэтов, Советский Писатель, М., 1944, p. 106-119.

Note: The mentioned poems' Russian titles are: "О, родина, тебя любя", "Каждый имеет любовь свою", "Земля родная моя!", "Как-же мне не дорожить тобою, о, Казбек?", "Привет участнику героической обороны Севастополя в июньские дни 1942 года" and "Присяга".

1944

Summer

He rests in the "May 1st" hotel in Batumi and is writing a cycle of poems about the sea themes.

Source: N. Malazonia, by the seaside in Batumi, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 229.

1944

Summer

Every morning, he goes to the beach from the hotel and stays there until noon. Then he has lunch at the hotel and prepares for work after about ten minutes: he rolls up his sleeves, puts on his slippers, and sits down at the writing desk placed near the bed. He writes, erases, reads aloud, and works like this until midnight. After that, he has dinner, goes out for a little while, and upon returning, reviews what he has written before going to sleep.

Source: N. Malazonia, by the seaside in Batumi, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 229.

1944

Summer

One morning, he stands lost in thought in the seaside park of Batumi, not noticing how Nestor Malazonia approaches him, nor hearing his call until he stands right in front of him. They walk together to the middle of the park. Galaktion confides his sorrow that Georgian poets write nothing about the sea and promises that from now on, the sea will be the constant theme of his poetry.

Source: N. Malazonia, by the seaside in Batumi, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 230.

1944

Summer

At 8 PM, Nestor Malazonia visits the hotel. Galaktion is thrilled and hands over the manuscript of his newly written poem, "The Beginning". Malazonia starts reading the poem aloud, but he struggles to deliver it well. The poet takes back the manuscript and continues reading himself, with great enthusiasm and fervour. After finishing, he excitedly asks Nestor to ensure that this poem is printed in the upcoming Book "Gold in the Azure of Adjara" as the first piece.

Source: N. Malazonia, by the seaside in Batumi, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, 230-231.

September

1944

Summer

He visits the wounded in the hospital in Tsikhisdziri and reads them poems. Afterwards, he goes to the nearby pioneer camp, where he treats the younger students to sweets.

Source: Ts. Maminashvili, Natanebi Pharm, October 26, 1973, N 30, p. 4.

October

1944

After October 3

He makes a record titled "Bagrati Cathedral", in which the characteristics of the historical monument are briefly outlined.

Source: MGL, d-627, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 267;

1944

Until October 7

He writes a poem "Imihtvina" ("How happy we all are...").

Source: MGL, a-1730, AE in 25 books, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 327;

1944

October 7

In his notebook, he writes about the impressions he received from traveling by train from the Black Sea coast to Tbilisi. He notes that the new train environment is very clean and tidy, and the journey is pleasant and not tiring.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-519, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 106.

1944

October 7

The Ajara State Publishing House issues a printing permit for the circulation of Galaktion Tabidze's Book "Gold in the Azure of Adjara".

Source: Galaktion, "Gold in the Azure of Adjara", Batumi, 1944.

Note: The author's name is indicated on the cover of the Book without the surname.

1944

After October 7

He reads his Book "Gold in the Azure of Adjara" and revises the lines. He notes that the poems consist of 1,532 lines.

Source: MGL, t-642, "Gold in the Azure of Adjara", Batumi, 1944.

1944

After October 7

He reads his poetry collection "Gold in the Azure of Adjara", editing and adding new verses. Next to the untitled poem "Every Snowflake...", he notes that the poem he has read is recorded on a tape.

Source: GTSM, 365, G. Tabidze, "Gold in the Azure of Adjara", Book One, Batumi, 1944.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on October 7, 1944.

1944

After October 7

In Batumi, Galaktion Tabidze's maritime collection "The Gold in the Azure of Adjara" is published, which includes 73 verses and 3 poems. The works are as follows: "Who Was He?", "Profile of the Caucasus", "Sunrise over the Sea", "Batumi", "What Does Today Mean?", "Labour – with Science", "Old Grandpa", "Evening in the Mountains", "Look!", "Journey along the Silver Path", "My Soul Today is This Black Sea", "Unbeatable", "Dream by the Adjaristskali", "Sun Colours", "Sanatorium", "Those Places", "With the Radiance of the Bright Sun", "Symphony of Plants", "Symphony of Roots", "Fusion of Dream and Reality", "Nature, the Sculptor", "Do Not Let the Door Remain Open", "With the Passion of Plants", "Come, I Pray, You Have the Sky", "Golden Ship Anchored", "From the Garden, Where Cumin and Coriander Grow", "Horse", "Gazing at the Raging Waves", "Autumn is Approaching", "In the Southern Lowlands", "Woman in Lemons", "Other Flowers", "Draw the Curtains", "Our Old Flags", "Antiquities", "Tamara by the Sea", "Shota Rustaveli by the Sea", "Akaki Tsereteli by the Black Sea", "In the Azure of Adjara", "Ship 'Daland'", "May has Brought Again", "Historical Ship", "My Sailor", "Straight into the Wind", "Sail that is Unquenchable", "Argonauts of the New Age", "Children by the Sea", "Do Not Forget!", "I Write These Lines", "I Will Cast My Fate into the Sea", "Symphony of the Sea", "I Observe this Bottomless Sea", "After the Storm", "Rage the Sea of Life", "Candles", and "On the Ship", "It Swims Like a Piece of Driftwood on the Sea", "I Love the Storm", "A Thousand Boats Approached the Shore", "Calm Sea", "Dreamer at Rest", "Where Once I Dreamt of Sailing", "You by the Sea", "Two Seas Met Each Other", "Evening Was Settling on the Sea", "City on Water", "Surface of the Sea", "Relief and Courage Flared", "Colours of the Waves", "As the Sailor of Old", "With Lillian's Wings", "Forty Years Ago", "The End", and the poems: "The Defeated Disease" and "The People – Amirani".

Source: Galaktion, "Gold in the Azure of Adjara", Batumi, 1944.

Note: The author's name is indicated only by their first name on the book's cover. The collection is edited by Nodar Malazonia, and the print run consists of 4,000 copies. The collection was submitted for printing on October 7, 1944. Out of the 75 works included, 28 poems are published for the first time: "The Beginning", "Who Was He?", "Sunrise Over the Sea", "Batumi", "What Does Today Mean", "Dream by the Adjaristskali", "Sun Colours", "Those Places", "With the Radiance of the Bright Sun", "Symphony of Plants", "Symphony of Roots", "Nature, the Sculptor", "Come, I Pray, You Have the Sky", "Golden Ship Anchored", "From the Garden Where the Cumin and Coriander Grow", "Horse", "Gazing at the Raging Waves", "Autumn Is Approaching", "Woman in Lemons", "Other Flowers", "Draw the Curtains", "Our Old Flags", "Antiquities", "Tamara by the Sea", "Shota Rustaveli by the Sea", "In the Azure of Adjara", "Forty Years Ago", "The End", and 2 poems: "The Defeated Disease" and "The People – Amirani".

1944

After October 7

He prepares a draft report for presentation at the Division of Social Sciences of the Georgian Academy of Sciences. He notes that the Acharian State Publishing House has published his Book Gold in the Azure of Adjara. Alongside other poems in the collection, "The Profile of the Caucasus" is printed, which is preceded by lines from Rustaveli as an epigraph.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-480, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 334

1944

After October 7

The Adjara State Publishing House, with a print run of 4,000 copies and under the editorship of Nestor Malazonia, publishes a collection of Galaktion Tabidze's poems titled "Gold in the Azure of Adjara".

Source: G. Tabidze, "Gold in the Azure of Adjara", Book One, Batumi, 1944;

1944

After October 7

He titles the notebook: "Gold in the Azure of Adjara" (Book Two), Medicine in Georgian Poetry.

Source: MGL, d-162, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 365.

1944

After October 7

In the notebook, he writes down a recollection titled "Diasami". In Mtskheta, even a child knows the identity of Diasami. From the XI century to the early XIX century, all of Georgia was filled with Diasami-like noble physicians, whose knowledge and experience were astonishing and who were beloved by the people. Diasami's ancestors were also physicians. He names Georgian women associated with medicine—King Tamar, Queen Rusudan, Queen Mariam, and the enlightening St. Nino. He mentions the statue of St. Nino in front of the Catholic Church in Batumi, which is magnificent, and he can never forget her face, as well as the fresco of King Tamar in Bethany, which inspired the most brilliant Georgian poets.

Source: MGL, d-162, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 364.

1944

After October 29

In his notebook, he makes a note titled “He Won’t Go Off the Radar So Easily” about Ioseb Grishashvili. He notes that he should examine Grishashvili’s books chronologically, as he suspects that Grishashvili is hiding the fact that many of his rhymes are reminiscent of Galaktion’s work. He recalls how Giorgi Kuchishvili was astonished by Grishashvili’s audacity. He believes that Grishashvili’s style is rude and is reminded of Zakaria Chichinadze’s words, who referred to Grishashvili as “the boy from Abano (Bathroom)”. He ironically mentions Grishashvili’s pseudonyms and feels somewhat offended if anyone considers Grishashvili his disciple. He thinks that Ioseb Grishashvili cannot achieve the poetic simplicity and reach the heights of freedom attained by Pushkin, Akaki, and Galaktion. According to him, Grishashvili tends to ruin his poems more when making corrections. Thematically, his poetry is monotonous and poor. Although he realizes that the pseudonym “Grishashvili” is not suitable, he stubbornly refuses to change it. Galaktion believes that Grishashvili hinders critics from understanding his work and that he presents himself with his own library. He thinks that Grishashvili’s creativity has no connection to Alexandre Chavchavadze and Sayat Nova, a claim he strives to prove. According to Galaktion, Grishashvili deceives Sergi Tchilaia, pretending that Akaki once said Grishashvili “is thundering”. He plans to read Giorgi Jibladze’s letter about Ioseb Grishashvili, expecting to encounter a lot of nonsense.

Source: MGL, d-434, 2-5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 112-113;

1944

October

In the magazine Mnatobi, a review of the Russian-language collection “Гамарджвеба” is published under the pseudonym “N. I”. This collection includes poems written by Georgian poets between 1941 and 1944. The list of authors is arranged in alphabetical order and includes Galaktion Tabidze. It is noted separately that Galaktion Tabidze, Giorgi Leonidze, Alio Mashashvili, Ioseb Grishashvili, Irakli Abashidze, Ilo Mosashvili, Simon Chikovani, and Grigol Abashidze are well-represented in the collection with selected poems. However, unfortunately, some of their notable poems are presented with weak translations.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1944, September-October, №9-10, p. 167.

November

1944

November 6

He writes a poem “Remember, Remember,” inspired by Zurab Antonov’s play “The Eclipse of the Sun in Georgia”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №37-38; №1279, №2019; №5500; №6242-6243; №6350; №6396-6397; №6418; N. Kvirikadze's autograph, №8787-8789; G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-161, 2-5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 363-364; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 172.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles "Sunrise in Georgia," "Remember Forever," "A Free Ray," and untitled, with the beginnings "Remember Forever, Always..." and "Remember Forever the Flowers..."

1944

November 7

In the newspaper Komunisti, a poem titled "Remember. Remember!" Remember forever. Remember..." is published, signed by "Galaktion Tabidze, National Poet of Georgia".

Source: G. Tabidze, "Remember. Remember!", Newspaper Komunisti, 1944, №221, p. 4.

1944

November 11

He writes an untitled poem "The Polished Courtyard..."

Source: MGL, N. Kvirikadze's manuscript, №25; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 177.

December

1944

December 2

The responsible secretary of the Presidium of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia, Giorgi Jibladze, signs a characterization of Galaktion Tabidze for submission to the Academy of Sciences of the Georgian SSR, stating that he is an active member of the union and conscientiously fulfils his duties.

Source: MGL, WUF №14.

1944

December 3

He writes a poem "Manassehism".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №938; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 174.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "To Manasseh".

1944

December 5

In the Russian newspaper Batumskii Rabochii, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "To the Red Army" is published.

Source: Красной Армии (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. Батумский рабочий, Батуми, 1944, 5 декабря, №238.

1944

December

He writes a poem “New Year”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №448; №751-752. №723; №1281; №6221-6222; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 184.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles “Thunder,” “The New Year Arrives,” and untitled, with the beginnings “In the Valley or on the Mountains They Sing...” and “The New Year Arrives...”.

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1944

The state publishing house has decided to print Galaktion Tabidze’s “Selected Works” with a volume of fifteen thousand lines, but the poet wishes for it to be forty thousand lines. He brings a massive collection of material for inclusion in the Book to the publishing house with the help of a worker, and the author of the book’s preface, Shalva Radiani, has to put in considerable effort to ensure that the publishing house fulfils Galaktion’s wish.

Source: Sh. Radiani, Our Galaktion, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 254-255.

Note: The Book indeed turned out to be of substantial volume. It consists of 504 pages.

1944

Due to the publication of his “Selected Works” by the State Publishing House, he is nominated for the Stalin Prize. However, someone whispers to the chairman of the prize-awarding commission who arrived from Moscow that Galaktion has written only one poem about Stalin, while Beria is not mentioned at all. As a result, the decision is changed, and the reviewers are urgently asked to sign new reviews, leading to the awarding of the Stalin Prize to Simon Chikovani for his poem “David Guramishvili”.

Source: A. Khintibidze, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 311.

1944

In Kutaisi, he has his photo taken with Valerian Laliashvili, Evgeny Purtskhvanidze, Giorgi Samkharadze, Vladimir Gugushvili, Shota Kuridze, Ruta Berodze, and Enver Sadikov.

Source: M. Alavidze, Galaktion’s Life and Poetry, magazine Gantiadi, 1992, № 11-12, p. 123.

1944

After the Soviet Union’s anthem was first fully performed on January 1, 1944, the time had come for the creation of anthems for the republics. Irakli Abashidze gathered other Georgian poets without even letting Galaktion Tabidze know, urging them to collaboratively compose the text for the State Anthem of the Georgian Soviet Socialist Republic, but their efforts yielded nothing. Subsequently, Galaktion learned that the honour ultimately fell to Alexandre Abasheli and Grigol Abashidze. This news distressed not only Galaktion but also his admirers. Dimitri Tomashvili bluntly told him, “You should have written the Georgian anthem”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 261, p. 76; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 121.

1944

In his diary, he records the narrated stories of Levan Metreveli, Anton Chumburidze, Theodor Chudetsky, Viktor Mirzashvili, Davit Kakabadze, and Kolau Cherniavski regarding life and living conditions in Svaneti.

Source: MGL, d-164, 1-11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 370-376.

Note: Anton Chumburidze is mentioned in the source as tenor Chumburidze.

1944

He writes an untitled poem, “In This Election...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-164, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 376-377.

1944

He writes six versions of the poem “Many Happy New Years!” (“My Tbilisi, Kutaisi, Aspindza, Mtskheta...”).

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-130, p. 85-86; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 52-57.

1944

He writes two versions of an untitled humorous poem “For stealing the goat, this Kiachieli...”.

Source: MGL, a-2139, AE in 25 books, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 641;

1944 or later

He submits a typed autobiography in Russian to the Writers’ Union.

Source: MGL, WUF №37-41.

Dating: The source does not specify a date, but the content includes events from 1944.

1945

January

1945

January 1

In the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, Davit Shamatava’s review is published on the poetry collection “Georgian Warriors”, released in Moscow, which features poems by Georgian poets on the theme of war. The reviewer discusses Galaktion’s poem “Glory to the Hero!” and gives it high praise.

Source: S. Shamatava, “Georgian Warriors”, newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1945, (January 1, №1) p. 4.

1945

January 1

Galaktion Tabidze's poem "A New Year Rises" is published in the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba.

Source: newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, January 1, 1945, №1, p. 1.

1945

January 1

Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Many Happy New Years" is published in the newspaper Komunisti.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, January 1, 1945, №1, p. 3.

Note: The poem was later published under the title "So, Glory to the Sun!".

1945

January 2

In his diary, he writes that the State Publishing House will soon release a collection titled "Selected Works", while he has a Book in preparation for the Children's Literature Publishing House. He is uncertain when Zarya Vostoka will print his Book "Lyric" and whether the Moscow publishing house will publish the same book.

Source: MGL, d-165, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 379.

1945

January 2

He writes an untitled humorous poem, "By the Walls of the Academy...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 3-4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 379.

1945

January 3

In the newspaper Komunisti, an article by Giorgi Jibladze titled "The Great Image of Stalin in Georgian Poetry During the War Period" is published, noting that Stalin is the greatest man of all time, and his name is associated with the breaking of the chains of violence and the celebration of freedom-loving nations – a sentiment that Galaktion Tabidze expressed well in his poem "What Today Means".

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, January 3, 1945, №2, p. 3.

1945

January 7

In his diary, he writes that Davit Turdospireli is 57 years old, while his brother Giorgi Kuchishvili is 59.

Source: MGL, d-165, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 380.

Note: Davit Turdospireli is mentioned in the source by the initial of his first name and his last name, while Giorgi Kuchishvili is mentioned by his first name.

1945

January 7

In his diary, he writes that he is scheduled to meet Dr. Mikheil Tsinamdzghvrishvili in the morning on Klara Tsetkin Street near Vorontsov Square.

Source: MGL, d-165, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 380.

Note: Mikheil Tsinamdzghvrishvili is mentioned in the source by profession and surname.

1945

January 8

In his diary, he writes that there was a Pantheon of Georgian Artists at the Kukia Cemetery. He mentions the burial of Avksenti Tsagareli there and sorrowfully notes that he fell victim to excessive drinking and a lack of food.

Source: MGL, d-165, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 380.

Note: Avksenti Tsagareli is mentioned in the source by his nickname, Asiko.

1945

January 8

He reads poems at an evening event held at the Writers' Palace for front-line soldiers who participated in the Second World War.

Source: An evening's printed poster and Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-523-9, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 124-125.

1945

After January 8

In his diary, he writes about the evening event held at the Writers' Palace for front-line soldiers who participated in the Second World War, noting that Besarion Zhghenti gave the opening speech. Poems were read by Varvara Meskhishvili, Vladimir Bragin, Ivan Bodrov, Rurik Ivnev, Boris Serebryakov, among whom Varvara Meskhishvili stood out as the best.

Source: MGL, d-167, 53; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 419-420.

Note: Varvara Meskhishvili, Vladimir Bragin, and Ivan Bodrov are mentioned in the source by their last names, while Besarion Zhghenti, Rurik Ivnev, and Boris Serebryakov are referred to by the initials of their first names and their last names.

1945

After January 8

He writes an untitled poem, "There is a Trace of Plow Next to the Pen...".

Source: MGL, d-167, 53; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 420.

Note: The poem was later published in various collections also untitled and dated in the 1940s.

1945

January 10

In his diary, he writes that during the 1870s and 1880s, a desire for the establishment of a permanent theater troupe ripened among the people. They responded late to the call from the newspaper Droeba for fundraising. Major Iason Ioseliani donated 300 ten roubles to the Georgian theater, which facilitated its rapid development. To invite a public assembly, Ilia Chavchavadze sent letters, leading to the establishment of a committee and a permanent troupe. The theatrical season opened on September 5, 1879, with Barbare Jorjadze's comedy "What I Sought and What I Found". After this, anyone involved in the stage was referred to as an actor. He also notes that Ivane Ioseliani was a similar benefactor, having contributed a significant sum for the publication of Romanoz Pantskhava's magazine Gantiadi.

Source: MGL, d-165, 11-12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 381.

Note: Iason Ioseliani is mentioned in the source by his last name and pseudonym – Kara-Major; Barbare Jorjadze is referenced by her last name, while Romanoz Pantskhava is noted under the pseudonym—Khomleli.

1945

January 13

He writes an untitled poem "The Colour of Lilies Is Spread...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5191; №3319; №5491; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 252.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "The Colour of Lilies Is Spread" and untitled "The Colour of Lilies Is Spread...".

1945

January 15

He translates Vladimir Mayakovsky's lines from the poem " Не юбилейте ".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-636, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 427.

1945

January 18

In his diary, he notes first name and the last name of the author of his portrait – Gigo Zaziashvili.

Source: MGL, d-165, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 381.

1945

January 19

He submits his autobiography and photo to the editorial office of the newspaper Komunisti.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 381.

1945

January 19

In his diary, he writes that there was a consecration of water in Sioni.

Source: MGL, d-165, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 381.

1945

January 19

In his diary, he notes a meeting with Theodor Chudetsky at the editorial office of the newspaper Komunisti and meetings at the Academy of Sciences.

Source: MGL, d-165, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 381.

Note: Theodor Chudetsky is mentioned in the source by his first name.

1945

January 20

He receives a telegram from Azerbaijan confirming their agreement to the proposal.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 506.

Note: It is likely regarding the translation of Galaktion's poems into Azerbaijani.

1945

January 21

On the radio, Galaktion's poem "Lenin" is recited.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 506.

1945

January 23

In his diary, he notes Alexei Tolstoy's article "A Quarter Century of Soviet Literature" and Vano Shaduri's article "Saint Petersburg and Georgian Culture".

Source: MGL, d-165, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 382.

1945

January 25

He writes an untitled poem, "How Do I Cover the Sky...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 382;

1945

January 26

In the Chronology section of the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, it is reported that Abkhaz writers are working on translations of the poems of Nikoloz Baratashvili and Galaktion Tabidze into Abkhaz.

Source: newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1945, 26 January, №4, p. 4.

1945

January 26

At 8 p.m., following the announcer's introduction, Galaktion's poems are recited on the radio.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 506.

1945

January 28

In his diary, he writes about the illustrations he will need for the prints. The list includes: all the books together, the first Book published in 1914, the second book, “Gold in the Azure of Adjara” separately, illustrations about the war, and those of Akaki and Galaktion.

Source: MGL, d-165, 21; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 382;

1945

After January 28

The newspaper Pravda requests the poem again, which, according to Vano Shaduri, had been distorted when transmitted via telegraph during its first submission, preventing it from being printed.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-165, 23; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 383.

1945

January 29

Nino Kvirikadze reads in the Literatura da Khelovneba newspaper Chronology that Abkhazian poets are currently working on a Book about Galaktion. She is surprised because Galaktion has not yet received a response from them.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 507.

1945

January 30

Newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba and the magazine Pioneri request materials from him and he promises to provide them to both.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 507.

February

1945

February 2

He goes to the Central Committee of the Party to meet the district committee secretary, Donadze, but does not see him.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 507.

1945

February 2

He goes with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, to the light industry plant in search of shoes, and they are promised a response soon.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 507.

1945

February 2

He feels unwell and goes outside for some fresh air.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 507.

1945

February 3

For the documents required to nominate Galaktion Tabidze for the Stalin Prize, the Writers' Union prepares a list of his publications in Russian.

Source: MGL, WUF №12.

Note: The list is quite incomplete.

1945

After February 5

He reads the magazine Mnatobi, making highlights and annotations.

Source: MGL, t-546, magazine Mnatobi, 1944, December, №12.

1945

February 7

He is sick with the flu and has a fever.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 507.

1945

February 7

The magazine Pioneri requests a poem from him, but he declines.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 507.

1945

February 8

The Writers' Union informs him that photographs and additional materials are needed regarding his nomination for the Stalin Prize.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 507.

1945

February 11

Boris Serebryakov asks him for a collection of his poems to send to the Russian magazine Novy Mir in Moscow.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 507.

1945

February 12

He participates in an event commemorating the 30th anniversary of Akaki Tsereteli's death, held at the Rustaveli Theatre.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 508.

1945

February 12

The magazine Pioneri again requests a poem from him, and he deeply regrets that he cannot provide one.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 508.

1945

February 15

He receives a pension.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 508.

1945

After February 18

He receives a letter from his brother. Abesalom informs him that his eldest son, Vasil, is graduating from school with a gold medal, and that Nodari, who is in the seventh grade, is also studying very well. He instructs him to go to the Land Management Commissariat to formalize the documents regarding land ownership. If he can't manage to do it on Abesalom's behalf, he should handle it for himself. He asks to resolve this matter within two or three days. He sends his regards to Galaktion's wife, Nina Kvirikadze.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 175.

1945

February 23

The newspaper Komunisti publishes information that on the current day at 1 p.m., Giorgi Tsagareli will read Russian translations of Galaktion's poems at the Writers' Union.

Source: "Writers' Union", Newspaper Komunisti, February 23, 1945, №38, p. 4.

1945

February 23

At the Writers' Union, Giorgi Tsagareli reads Russian translations of Galaktion's poems.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 508.

1945

After February 25

On the title page of the poetry collection "Daphion", under the title, he writes: "Or 'The Ennobled Commoners'". In the table of contents, he notes that the poems by Giorgi Salukvadze and Nana Gvarishvili are good, Parmen Rurua's work is "idiocy and nonsense", and Shota Rokva's is "mockery".

Source: MGL, 605, “Daphion”, Batumi, 1945.

1945

February 26

He is asked to attend the Academy’s general meeting the following day.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 508.

1945

February 26

He receives two tickets to an amateur choir concert scheduled at the Rustaveli Theatre, but neither he nor Nino Kvirikadze can attend.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 508.

1945

February 27

In the morning, he feels unwell and cannot attend the general meeting at the Academy. He stays in bed and writes the poem “The Roaring Georgian Hearth”.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 508.

Note: The record also mentions the title or opening words “Before the Fire,” but no such poem has been found in Galaktion’s archive.

March

1945

March 4

He writes an untitled poem, “The Linden’s Shade Shelters the Traveler from the Sun’s Arrows...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №233-a, p. 6316; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 230.

1945

March 4

He tries to quit drinking wine and smoking cigarettes. He paces back and forth in the room. While shaving, he notices that his skin is irritated. Nino Kvirikadze bathes his face with hot water and applies cologne to the irritated areas. He leaves the house but returns slightly intoxicated. He tells his wife that he is still unwell and cannot follow through on his decision to quit wine and cigarettes.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 508.

1945

March 4

Galaktion’s Book “Gold in the Azure of Adjara” is published for the second time.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 508.

1945

Until March 7

He needs to pay for the apartment but does not have the money. Very little remains from the funds he received at the Academy the previous day. He has also collected his pension, but they are giving him an advance for the next month. He refuses to be admitted to the medical facility.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 508.

1945

March 7

Nino Kvirikadze is upset that Galaktion is not taking care of himself and leaves the house.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 509.

1945

Until March 8

The poetry section of the Writers' Union reviews the Russian translations of Galaktion Tabidze's poems by Giorgi Tsagareli for the Book Lyric, which is set to be published in the first half of the year by the publishing house Zarya Vostoka, under the editorship of Vladimir Elsner. The translation leaves a strong impression on the audience, as it is musical and closely resembles the original. Discussion about the translation is led by Simon Chikovani, Konstantine Chichinadze, Besarion Zhghenti, Viktor Gabeskiria, Grigol Tsetskhladze, Giorgi Jibladze, Akaki Gatsereia, and others. They express a desire for the publication to include several additional poems characteristic of Galaktion Tabidze's poetry. The State Literature Publishing House of Moscow, Goslitizdat, also intends to print this book.

Source: "Galaktion Tabidze's Selected Poems in Russian", newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, March 8, 1945, №9, p. 1;

1945

March 8

The newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba publishes an article titled "A Collection of Selected Poems by Galaktion Tabidze in Russian".

Source: newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, March 8, 1945, №9, p. 1.

1945

March 8

At midnight, he visits Nino Kvirikadze and promises that he will be admitted to the medical facility.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 509.

1945

March 8 or later

In his diary, he writes that the publication of his selected works has been expedited.

Source: MGL, d-165, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 383.

1945

March 8 or later

At the Writers' Union, they praise the Russian translations of Galaktion Tabidze's poems by Giorgi Tsigareli and hand them over to the publishing house Zarya Vostoka for printing the Book "Lyric".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 383.

1945

March 8 or later

The Russian magazine Novy Mir requests his to provide them with his poems.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 383;

1945

March 9

In the morning, he returns home with Nino Kvirikadze and plans once again to be admitted to the hospital.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 509.

1945

March 10

Nino Kvirikadze writes in the notebook that Galaktion has changed significantly.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 509.

1945

March 11

He has been unwell for two days and has not left the house.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 509.

1945

March 12

He still does not get up. He summons Dr. Ivane Pranguliani and promises to visit him the following day.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 509.

1945

March 13

In the newspaper Komunisti, the special correspondent's article "Spring in Kutaisi" includes Galaktion's phrase "The breeze traveling from Tskaltubo to Kutaisi".

Source: “Spring in Kutaisi”, newspaper Komunisti, March 13, 1945, №51, p. 3.

1945

March 13

He neither goes himself nor allows Nino Kvirikadze to visit Dr. Ivane Pranguliani.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 509.

1945

Until March 14

He writes a poem “Whose Is This Roar”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4633; №28897-50, p. 55; №8776, p. 42; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 176.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Near Taganrog”.

Dating: G. Tabidze’s “Selected Works”, where this poem was first published, was signed for printing on March 14, 1945.

1945

Until March 14

He writes a poem “Strength Is a Weapon”.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 183.

Dating: G. Tabidze’s “Selected Works”, where this poem was first published, was signed for printing on March 14, 1945.

1945

Until March 14

He writes a poem “The Founding of New Tbilisi”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №76; №28897-50, p. 56; №8776, p. 40; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 191.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “The Founding of New Tbilisi”.

Dating: G. Tabidze’s “Selected Works”, where this poem was first published, was signed for printing on March 14, 1945.

1945

Until March 14

He writes a poem “The Window”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №26; №335-ᄁ, p. 18-19; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 192.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “By Airplane Over the Caucasus” and untitled “How Beautiful Is July...”.

Dating: G. Tabidze’s “Selected Works”, where this poem was first published, was signed for printing on March 14, 1945.

1945

Until March 14

He writes a poem “Then Glory to the Sun”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №238; №749; №8434; №4996; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 193.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “To Many New Years” and untitled, with the beginnings “Then Glory to the Sun...” and “Again Glory to the Sun...”.

Dating: G. Tabidze’s “Selected Works”, where this poem was first published, was signed for printing on March 14, 1945.

1945

Until March 14

He writes a poem “Seek the Melody of Joy”.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 207.

Dating: G. Tabidze’s “Selected Works”, where this poem was first published, was signed for printing on March 14, 1945.

1945

March 14

He goes with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, to see Dr. Ivane Pranguliani.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 509.

1945

After March 15

He reads his selected poems, edits lines, and writes a new version of the poem “My Native Land!”.

Source: MGL, 619, Galaktion Tabidze, “Selected Works”, editor Sh. Radiani, Tbilisi, 1944, p. 18-57.

1945

March 17

He submits a completed personal file in Russian to the Writers’ Union.

Source: MGL, WUF №17-19, №21.

1945

March 18

He meets with Doctor Gabriel Pondeev and informs him that he hears a noise – sometimes it is a mix of the music of Schumann, Beethoven, and four-string viol, and other times it sounds as if a mosquito is buzzing near his ear. He notices the doctor’s eyes widen in surprise and fear on his face, realizing that poor Galaktion might be losing his mind.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-165, 41; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 385-386.

1945

Until March 19

In his diary, he writes a list of necessary items and products for the hospital: an electric heater, socks, safety pins, a pencil, a bucket, paper, two large paper bags, tobacco, cigarette paper, soap, a toothbrush, powder, a towel, a handkerchief, cologne, cotton, eggs, yogurt, milk, butter, apples, pepper, garlic, onions, canned goods, cheese, sugar, cake, and vinegar.

Source: MGL, d-165, 33-34; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 384;

1945

Until March 19

In his diary, he notes the address and phone number of the Republican Polyclinic and Hospital of the Medical Administration.

Source: MGL, d-165, 35; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 384;

1945

Until March 19

In his diary, he writes about the mandatory internal regulations for hospitalized patients.

Source: MGL, d-165, 35-37; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 384-385;

1945

March 19

He is being treated in the seventh ward of the Medical Centre. The doctors treating him are Gabriel Pondoev and Elizabeth Vozdvizhenskaya-Kharadze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 42; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 386.

Note: Gabriel Pondoev is mentioned in the source by his last name, while Kharadze is referred to as Kharadze's wife.

1945

March 19 or later

He is hospitalized and writes a power of attorney in his wife Nino Kvirikadze's name, authorizing her to retrieve items he had pawned at the city pawnshop.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-282; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 137;

1945

March 19 or later

At the Writers' Union, a discussion is held about Giorgi Natroshvili's report titled "Georgian Poetry During the Patriotic War". Sandro Shanshiashvili expresses critical views on Galaktion Tabidze's new collection, "Gold in the Azure of Adjara". He believes this Book does not reach the heights of Galaktion's poetic oeuvre, as the themes of many poems are vague, and the parallels, comparisons, epithets, and metaphors are inappropriate and illogical. In some poems, there is neither meaning nor feeling, and the form is unclear and chaotic. Besarion Zhghenti disagrees with this opinion, stating that Galaktion's new Book contains brilliant poems. He argues that the measure Sandro uses to assess Galaktion's poetry is incorrect, as Galaktion is not merely a painter of images; his main goal is to evoke a variety of moods in the reader, which he achieves remarkably well.

Source: Georgian Poetry During the Patriotic War (Debate Around Comrade G. Natroshvili's Report), newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1945, №14 (20 April), p. 2; №15 (1 May), p. 3.

Dating: In the 13th issue of the newspaper, it is noted that the discussion took place between March 19 and March 28.

1945

March 20

In the hospital, they meet Dr. Ivane Pranguliani, Ivane Gachechiladze, and the translator Sherman, who Galaktion gives bread and sugar ration cards to.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 43; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 386.

1945

Until March 21

In the diary, it is noted that the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba published a Chronology about the Book of Abkhazia, and the Russian newspaper Literatura i Iskusstvo covered the evening dedicated to Akaki Tsereteli.

Source: MGL, d-165, 25; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 383;

1945

March 21

In the hospital, he reads Sulkhan-Saba Orbeliani's "The Wisdom of Lies" once again. The doctor shares his unfortunate story, expressing his heavy emotional state. He feels downhearted due to the relentless snowfall and the cold, unheated rooms, leading to his cold. There's no bath, and the meals are bad – just tea in the morning and evening, and for lunch, a lean soup and other meagre offerings. He reflects that this is a misfortune.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 26, 44; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 386.

1945

March 22

In the hospital, his third wife, Nina Kvirikadze, brings him beans, cornbread, fresh onions, and "The Knight in the Panther's Skin". She tells him that an evening event titled "Georgian Poetry During the Patriotic War" was held at the Writers' Union, where Dimitri Benashvili spoke and presented Galaktion Tabidze's poetry collection "Gold in the Azure of Adjara", published in 1944.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 45; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 386.

1945

March 23

He is in the hospital and writes the poem “Do You Remember?”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5196; №3316; №5480; N. Kvirikadze’s manuscript, №8217-8218; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 230.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles “Do You Remember How They Met, Mary,” “Do You Remember When,” “Your and My Boat,” and untitled “Do You Remember How They Met, Mary...”. In the manuscript (№5196), the poem includes an epigraph: “...The Brightest Sparkling on Her Lips”. – Shota Rustaveli”.

1945

March 23

He is attended by Doctor Gabriel Pondoev. His wife and brother-in-law, Nina and Kalistrate Kvirikadze, bring him a piece of meat and a few cigarettes. He had expected more since he had given 600 roubles. Someone named Marusia interrupts him while he is working on a poem. In the evening, the light are turned off, and he is left in darkness. He reflects that it is a day of nightmares.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-165, 46; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 386-387.

Note: Nina and Kalistrate Kvirikadze are mentioned by their first names in the source.

1941

March 23

The newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi publishes Sh. Simonishvili’s response to the third volume of Galaktion’s works. The reviewer briefly examines the new Book from a thematic perspective and considers it a significant achievement of Soviet poetry. The critic points out that to showcase the successes of socialism, the poet employs contrast. He juxtaposes the socialist and capitalist societies, revealing their true nature and further emphasizing the grandeur of the Soviet homeland. The author of the article also highly praises the poem “A Conversation about Lyricism”. In his view, this work represents a philosophical treatise on the origins and development of lyric poetry, in which the poet successfully conveys the essence of lyricism and accurately evaluates the lyricists of different eras.

Source: Sh. Simonishvili, A Patriotic Lyricist (G. Tabidze, “Works”, vol. III), newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi, 1941, №69 (March 23), p. 3.

1945

March 24

Doctor Elizabeth Vozdvizhenskaya-Kharadze prescribes treatment in the electrotherapy cabinet, darsonval procedures, and a regimen of bed rest. He has high blood pressure but no longer coughs, and his hands no longer tremble.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-165, 47; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 387.

1945

March 25

In the hospital, Nunu Ebanoidze brings cheese and vinegar, while Nadia Mikeladze brings a huge cake. They sort out the electricity, and the radio turns on. He does not like the hostess of the medical institution, as she is biased and pays more attention to the Russians and Jews. He is reading 25 stories by Guy de Maupassant.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 48; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 387.

Note: Nunu Ebanoidze is mentioned by first name in the source.

1945

March 26

Gabriel Pondoev examines him and concludes that Galaktion needs arteriotomy, but he is not afraid. Nina Kvirikadze brings an electric heater, which warms the room well. She dislikes that they plan to accommodate another patient in his room.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 50; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 387.

1945

March 27

He records the daily temperatures in his diary from March 19 to March 26: 19/III. 36,8. 20/III. 36,7-37,3. 21/III. 36,8-37,4. 22/III. 37,1-36,8. 23/III. 36,8-36,6. 24/III. 36,8-37,0. 25/III. 36,7-37,0. 26/III. 37,2-37,3.

Source: MGL, d-165, 50; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 387.

1945

March 27

Elizabeth Vozdvizhenskaya-Kharadze disagrees with Gabriel Pondoev that he has high blood pressure. He receives the darsonval treatment and suffers from toothaches and pimples.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 50; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 387-388.

1945

March 27

He begins to write a poem "The Fishermen".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 50; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 388.

Note: This poem is included in the anthology titled "The Book of Peace", dated between 1945 and 1956.

1945

March 27

In the hospital, Nina Kvirikadze brings irises, tobacco, groceries, and a silk handkerchief. Galaktion receives the darsonval treatment. Nina and the doctor have an unpleasant argument, and the doctor notes that Nina herself needs treatment.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 51; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 388.

1945

March 27

In his diary, he writes that the Soviet Army has captured the Polish city of Gdynia.

Source: MGL, d-165, 51; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 388.

1945

March 28

In the hospital, he undergoes his sixth procedure, is examined via X-ray, and is diagnosed with myocarditis and other related conditions. Nina Kvirikadze brings him tobacco, bread, meat, and beans. She speaks nervously about the female doctor and blames Galaktion.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 52. G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 388.

1945

March 29

He is visited by doctors Gabriel Pondoev, Elisabeth Vozdvizhenskaya-Kharadze, and the hospital director, Kereselidze, whose children wish to meet him. Seeing the first butterfly of spring in the garden makes him think that winter is over and that spring will bring relief.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 53; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 388.

1945

March 30

He writes a poem titled "The Swallow", inspired by the first swallow that chirped in the hospital garden on March 24, heralding a sunny day.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 53; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 388.

Note: The poem is likely the first version of "The Morning of Victory".

1945

March 30

He is in the hospital and writes the poem "On the Agitated Sea".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №416; №3314; №5478; N. Kvirikadze's manuscript, №2509; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 153.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "Two Ships" and untitled, "On the Agitated Sea...".

1945

March 30

He is in the hospital and writes the poem “Sing, Little Black Swallow”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №416; №32; N 777; №3417; №1282; №5507-5508; №6233-6234; №6408; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 231.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles “Morning of Victory,” “Victory,” “Do You Remember, Earlier...,” “May 9, 1945,” and untitled, with the beginnings “Do you remember, earlier, the year before last...,” “In spring, the spark of life was lit...,” and “Do you remember? Earlier, the year before last...”.

Note: “Sing, Little Black Swallow” is the initial version of the poem “Victory,” which the poet revised to fit the theme of the Soviet Union’s victory in World War II and published on May 9, 1945, in the newspaper Komunisti.

1945

March 31

He notes in his diary an incident at the medical facility. Ivane Tsitsishvili, a university librarian and lecturer at one of the institutes who was suffering from cancer, attempted suicide by jumping from the third floor. However, he first fell on a tree, then fell into the gynaecology department, breaking only his arm. A pregnant woman in the gynaecology ward went into labour from the shock.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-165, 54; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 388.

1945

March 31

In the hospital, a Hero of the Soviet Union passes away. He had a bullet fragment lodged in his lung.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-165, 54; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 389.

1945

March 31

They apply medicine to his skin, and he feels relief. He undergoes the seventh procedure.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-165, 54; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 389.

1945

March 31

His stepson, Dutu Ebanoidze, visits him in the hospital and brings notebook s. Galaktion gives him 100 roubles to pass on to his sister, Nunu Ebanoidze, who is leaving for Kaunas that day. Davit Turdospireli and the hospital director, along with three children, also visit him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 54; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 389;

Note: Dutu Ebanoidze is referred to by his first name, Nunu Ebanoidze as "From Kaunas" and Davit Turdospireli by the initial of his first name and the last name – D. Chkheidze.

1945

March 31

In the diary, it is noted that the Soviet army has taken the Polish city of Danzig.

Source: MGL, d-165, 54; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 389.

1945

March 31

He outlines his plans for April: by April 22, he intends to write no less than 800 lines for the poem "The Book of Peace". He emphasizes the need to focus on his health and nutrition, and to abstain from tobacco and wine.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 55; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 389.

April

1945

April 1

He has a visiting day at the hospital, but his wife, Nina Kvirikadze, does not come.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 55; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 389.

1945

April 1

He anoints his body with cold water in the hospital and feels more invigorated.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 55; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 389.

1945

April 1

He writes an untitled poem "No other autumn is visible...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 6-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 380.

1945

April 2

At 7 a.m., the radio announces the release of the selected works of the National Poet Galaktion Tabidze. He contemplates that, in light of this joyful news, he should stop smoking tobacco.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 57; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 389.

1945

April 2

He anoints his body with cold water in the hospital, undergoes a physiotherapeutic procedure, and has an examination with Dr. Elizabeth Kharadze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 55; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 389.

Note: The discussion is about the darsonval procedure, which involves the use of high-frequency electric currents.

1945

April 2

His wife, Nina Kvirikadze, does not go to visit him in the hospital again.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 55; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 389.

1945

After April 2

From his selected poems, he cuts Shalva Radiani's preface "Galaktion Tabidze's Work", edits the lines, takes out paragraphs, removes "Gal. Tabidze" from the title and throughout the entire text, and writes "Galaktion".

Source: Sh. Radiani, "Galaktion Tabidze's Work", MGL, d-685, G. Tabidze, Selected Works, Tbilisi, 1944, p. 3-16.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on April 2, 1945.

1945

After April 2

The State Publishing House is printing a selected collection of Galaktion Tabidze's poems, with a circulation of 4,000 copies, edited and prefaced by Shalva Radiani. It includes a portrait by Davit Kutateladze.

Source: G. Tabidze, Selected Works, Tbilisi, 1944; G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 57; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 389.

1945

After April 2

He submits a statement to the Printing House of the State Publishing House, stating that his "Selected Works" amounts to 15,492 lines, according to their calculations. Galaktion requests a fee of 15 roubles per line, the same amount other poets receive from them. Of this, he has already received 80,000 roubles and asks that the remaining balance be settled in full in connection with the publication of the book.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-151; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 110.

1945

April 3

Nina Kvirikadze still does not visit him in hospital. Galaktion thinks that she is using his academic ration and saving on him. He does not have enough bread provided by the hospital and asks someone else to buy bread for him. An elderly woman tells him that they forbade her to receive letters at the sanatorium in Geneva, as getting rid of family troubles helps a person the most. He notes that it is true.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 58; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 390.

1945

April 3

The doctor examines him, he anoints his body, and undergoes a physical therapy procedure.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 58; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 390.

1945

April 3

He continues writing the poem "The Book of Peace" according to the established plan.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 58; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 390.

1945

April 3

In the journal, he notes that the Germans are suspiciously surrendering cities to the English in World War II. Ukraine and Belarus are invited to the United Nations Conference in San Francisco from April 25 to June 26.

Source: MGL, d-165, 58; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 390.

1945

April 4

In the hospital, he weighs and is 73.8 kilograms.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 59; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 390.

1945

April 4

From the hospital, escorted by a military unit and music, they are laying to rest the Ukrainian Soviet hero. As stated in his will, he will be buried in Simferopol, the city for whose defence he was awarded the title of hero.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 59; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 390.

1945

April 4

In the hospital, his wife, Nina Kvirikadze, brings one kilogram of bread, one jar of yogurt, three packets of tobacco, and a branch of peach blossoms. She behaves strangely, as if upset, avoids entering his room, and shies away from receiving assignments from him. Galaktion still thinks that she is taking too much advantage of his academic allowance.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 59; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 390.

1945

April 4

He undergoes a physiotherapeutic procedure, and Dr. Gabriel Pondojev examines him, determining that he has eczema.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 59; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 390.

1945

April 4

He completes the daily plan for writing the poem "The Book of Peace".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 59; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 390.

1945

April 4

Regarding the publication of the selected poems, he speaks on the phone with the staff of the publishing house – Giorgi Iamanidze and Lavrosi Kalandadze. He thinks it is necessary to call again.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 59; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 390.

Note: Giorgi Iamanidze and Lavrosi Kalandadze are mentioned by their last names in the source.

1945

April 7

He revises the plan for writing the poem “The Book of Peace”, aiming to complete 1,760 lines by April 27, with a daily target of 200 lines.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-165, 55, 60; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 389-390.

1945

April 7

He is pleased that after undergoing 11 physical therapy sessions, his blood pressure has decreased from a top reading of 200 to 150, while the bottom reading has lowered to 90.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-165, 60; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 390.

1945

April 7

In his diary, he notes that it marks the 15th anniversary of the establishment of the Lenin Order, dating back to April 6, 1930. Before the Second World War, 7,250 individuals were awarded the order; during the war, 35,636 received it, bringing the total to 42,886 over the span of 15 years.

Source: MGL, d-165, 60; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 390-391.

1945

7 April

His wife, Nina Kvirikadze, still does not visit him in the hospital, despite her promises.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-165, 60; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 391.

1945

April 8

He continues to wait for his wife, Nina Kvirikadze, to visit him in the hospital, but she still does not come.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-165, 61; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 391.

1945

April 8

He completes the planned diary entries for the poem “The Book of Peace”. He thinks that if he continues to work like this every day, in a year and a half, or in 984 days, he will have 196,800 lines ready. For twice that amount, 393,600 lines, he expects to receive a fee of 5,904,000 roubles. He notes that there are 1,669 stanzas in “The Knight in the Panther’s Skin”, which amounts to 6,676 lines. He wishes to surpass 78,000 lines but believes that no one can sustain such productivity.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 61; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 391.

1945

April 9

Instead of planned one hundred lines he writes four hundred lines for the poem "The Book of Peace", which he did not anticipate and considers a record.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 62; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 391.

1945

April 9

Nina Kvirikadze still does not come to visit. Galaktion thinks she is shameless and betraying him. The poet is troubled by skin pain and has no medication with him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 62; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 391.

1945

April 9

The doctors, Gabriel Pondoev and Elizabeth Kharadze, visit him. He cannot undergo the physiotherapy procedure because there is no electricity.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 62; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 391.

1945

April 9

In the desk calendar, which indicates the birth and death dates of Charles Baudelaire, he notes that he passed away at the age of 46.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 62; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 391.

1945

Until April 10

Nina Kvirikadze writes "foolish" poems in which she refers to Galaktion as an enemy.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 63; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 391.

Dating: This is mentioned in Galaktion Tabidze's entry dated April 10, 1945.

1945

April 10

Davit Gvritishvili gifts his Book "Georgian Stalingraders" with the inscription: "To the highly esteemed poet-academician G. Tabidze, with deepest respect, the author".

Source: GTSM, 361, D. Gvritishvili, “Georgian Stalingraders”, Tbilisi, 1944.

1945

April 10

In the hospital, Nina Kvirikadze brings beans, cornbread, and a skin remedy. She does not reveal the reason for her long absence and behaves strangely. The poet is dissatisfied that since March 19, he has only been able to spend 250 out of his 1000 roubles. His wife reproaches him that it does not befit an academician to keep track of money. She also advises him that if working tires him, he should write less.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-165, 63; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 391.

1945

April 10

He writes 200 lines for the poem “Book of Peace”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-165, 63; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 391.

1945

April 10

Doctors Gabriel Pondoev and Elizabeth Kharadze conduct a physical therapy procedure.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-165, 63; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 391.

1945

April 11

Davit Gvritishvili is taking his book, published by the Georgian Academy of Sciences, to the hospital.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-165, 64; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 392.

Note: In the source, Davit Gvritishvili is mentioned by his last name.

1945

April 11

Davit Sherman is taking his translation to the hospital.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-165, 64; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 392.

1945

April 11

He receives a salary from the Academy of Sciences and gives 200 roubles to his wife, who takes books to the hospital, and she spills medicine once again.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 64; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 392.

1945

April 12

Nina Kvirikadze brings eggs, cheese, dried fish, and a large supply of sugar to the hospital and washes his body.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 65; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 392.

1945

April 12

The previous day, in the books brought to him by Nina Kvirikadze, he finds his wife's poems, in which there are hints of a thirst for revenge, and she refers to herself as a "murderer".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 65; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 392.

1945

April 13

In the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, Giorgi Natroshvili's report "Georgian Poetry During the Great Patriotic War" is published, in which Galaktion is mentioned among the poets whose works generate great interest among Georgian soldiers.

Source: Georgian Poetry During the Great Patriotic War, Comrade G. Natroshvili's Report, newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1945, №13 (April 13), p. 2.

1945

April 13

In his diary, he writes that the President of the United States, Franklin Roosevelt, has died and that the Soviet Army has taken Vienna.

Source: MGL, d-165, 66; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 392.

1945

April 13

In his diary, he notes that Ekvtime Takaishvili was brought back from France.

Source: MGL, d-165, 66; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 392.

1945

April 13

He thinks about organizing a literary evening.

Source: MGL, d-165, 66; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 392.

1945

April 13

In his diary, he writes about Davit Gvritishvili's account of Ivane Javakhishvili's death in 1940 while giving a lecture at the House of Arts Workers. Javakhishvili couldn't finish his last word, "nec..." He collapsed and died on the spot. Galaktion thinks that the unfinished word might have been "necessary".

Source: MGL, d-165, 66; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 392.

Note: Ivane Javakhishvili and Davit Gvritishvili are mentioned by their last names in the source.

1945

April 14

He is weighed in the hospital and weighs 73.2 kilograms.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 67; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 392.

1945

April 14

He is troubled by a rash on his body. He undergoes a physical therapy procedure. Doctors Ivané Pranguliani and Elizabeth Kharadze arrive. Pranguliani informs him that guests are scheduled to visit that day. The poet thinks it will be a good day.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 67; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 392.

1945

April 14

Ushangi Chkheidze visits him in the hospital, bringing khachapuri, and they talk for a long time.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 67; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 392.

1945

April 14

In the hospital, he reads works by Akaki Tsereteli in the evening.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 67; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 392.

1945

April 14

In his diary, he writes that Theodore Roosevelt died while a painter was working on his portrait. The next day, he was supposed to deliver a speech on the radio about how the current war is the most barbaric war in history.

Source: MGL, d-165, 67; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 392.

1945

April 14

In the desk calendar, which indicates the birth and death dates of Vladimir Mayakovsky, he notes that Mayakovsky's days are celebrated colourlessly.

Source: MGL, d-165, 67; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 392.

1945

April 15

Giorgi Kuchishvili visits the hospital and delivers the sad news that Ivane Ioseliani passed away three days ago.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 68; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 392.

Note: Giorgi Kuchishvili is mentioned by his first name in the source.

1945

April 15

In the hospital, Nina Kvirikadze brings violets, bread, crushed walnuts, and fried fish. He thinks she is deceiving him, behaving strangely, and glaring at him as if he owes her something. He is not surprised that her father called Nina "Kvakhvretia" (stone piercer) because of such a look. When Galaktion asks her if she has money, Nina ironically replies that she herself is the money.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 68; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 393.

1945

April 15

He has 1,400 lines ready for the poem "The Book of Peace", and 360 lines remain to complete the plan.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 68; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 393.

1945

April 16

He spends the entire day thinking about the recently deceased Ivane Ioseliani. In Galaktion's opinion, it would be good to write a Book about him, as he was the brightest embodiment of contemporary Georgian youth.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 69; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 393.

1945

April 16

He is still troubled by a rash on his skin and is undergoing a physical therapy procedure.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 69; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 393.

1945

April 16

He adds 100 lines to the poem "The Book of Peace".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 69; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 393.

1945

April 16

He rereads the comedies by Avksenti Tzagareli published in 1936. He wonders why the editor and author of the preface, Ioseb Grishashvili, rambles.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 69; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 393.

1945

April 17

In his diary, he writes that a real nightingale is singing in the hospital garden and that it is an amazing day overall.

Source: MGL, d-165, 70; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 393.

April 17

The doctors – Ivane Pranguliani, Elizabeth Kharadze, and the assistant to the hospital director – visit him. He is troubled by a rash on his skin and the inside of his lip but thinks that there is nothing alarming.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 70; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 393.

1945

April 17

He adds 100 lines to the poem "The Book of Peace".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 70; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 393.

1945

April 17

In his diary, he writes that Ivane Ioseliani is being buried at six o'clock, and the weather is cloudy with heavy snowfall.

Source: MGL, d-165, 70; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 393.

1945

April 18

The doctors examine him. He is only troubled by the rash; otherwise, everything seems to be in order.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 71; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 393.

1945

April 18

In the hospital, he listens to a lecture on contemporary politics and thinks that it is weak.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 71; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 393.

Note: The lecturer is referred to as someone named Petrosyan, but his identity cannot be determined.

1945

April 18

He writes 100 lines for the poem "The Book of Peace". He wishes to exceed the set plan.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 71; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 393-394.

1945

April 18

Alexandre Kancheli is admitted to the hospital.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 71; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 394.

1945

April 18

He strolls in the hospital garden by the fish pond.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 71; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 394.

1945

April 18

He reads an article by Giorgi Aleksandrov against Ilya Ehrenburg in the newspaper Pravda.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 71; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 394.

Note: Giorgi Aleksandrov and Ilya Ehrenburg are mentioned by their last names in the source.

1945

April 20

In the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, an obituary for Vano Ioseliani is published, signed by Galaktion Tabidze and about twenty other Georgian writers.

Source: Vano Ioseliani (Obituary), newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1945, №14 (67), p. 4.

1945

April 20

In the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, a notice is published that from March 19 to 28, a discussion took place at the Writers' Union centred around Giorgi Natroshvili's report titled "Georgian Poetry of the Period of the Patriotic War". It is noted that Sandro Shanshiashvili spoke at the event, expressing critical views on Galaktion Tabidze's new collection, "Gold in the Azure of Adjara".

Source: Georgian Poetry During the Great Patriotic War (Debate Around Comrade G. Natroshvili's Report), newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1945, №14 (April 20), p. 2.

1945

April 22

In the newspaper Literaturnaya Gazeta, an article titled "Georgian Poetry of the War Period" by Vladimir Tatishvili is published. The article discusses a meeting at the Georgian Writers' Union dedicated to this theme, during which Giorgi Jibladze reviewed Galaktion's new Book "Gold in the Azure of Adjara". The Book includes all the poems the poet has written about Adjara since 1912. The speaker highlighted the poet's exceptional talent and mastery but noted that the collection also contains some unsuccessful artistic expressions. Regarding the theme of war, Jibladze emphasized that during the Great Patriotic War, Galaktion Tabidze wrote many outstanding poems glorifying Soviet heroes.

Source: V. Tatishvili, Грузинская поэзия в дни войны, Литературная газета, April 22, 1945, №17, p. 4.

1945

April 23

In Moscow, Galaktion Tabidze's poems are being appreciated in Giorgi Tsagareli's translations for the Russian Book "Lyric" to be published by Zarya Vostoka. The translator believes that if Galaktion receives a Stalin Prize, the book's royalties will increase.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 72; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 394.

Note: Giorgi Tsagareli is mentioned by his first name in the source. Galaktion did not receive the Stalin Prize.

1945

April 23

In the hospital, Nina Kvirikadze brings khachapuri, beans, and greens. Galaktion likes the beans and greens, but the khachapuri, in which he discovers splinters, upsets his stomach.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 72; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 394.

1945

April 23

He keeps an eye on the events happening in Berlin.

Source: MGL, d-165, 72; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 394.

Note: From April 21 to May 2, decisive battles of World War II were taking place in Berlin.

1945

April 23

On the page for April 23 in the desk calendar, where it states that Ioseb Grishashvili was born on this day in 1889, he ironically notes that if this is not celebrated, how could it be possible?

Source: MGL, d-165, 72; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 394.

1945

March 27 - April 24

He writes the daily temperature of his body in his diary: 27/III. 36,4-36,9. 28/III. 36,3-37,2. 29/III. 36,7-36,8. 30/III. 36,8-36,8. 31/III. 36,7-37,4. 1/IV. 36,6-36,8. 2/IV. 36,3-36,8. 3/IV. 36,6-37,0. 4/IV. 36,2-36,8. 5/IV. 36,7-37,2. 6/IV. 37,2-37,0. 7/IV. 37,0-36,8. 8/IV. 36,6-36,8. 9/IV. 36,5-36,6. 10/IV. 36,6-37,0. 11/IV. 36,8 -37,0. 12/IV. 36,8-37,0. 13/IV. 36,5-36,9. 14/IV. 36,8-36,9. 15/IV. 36,3-37,1. 16/IV. 36,6 -37,3. 17/IV. 36,6-36,1. 18/IV. 36,4-36,7. 19/IV. 36,4-36,7. 20/IV. 36,6-36,6. 21/IV. 36,6-36,6. 22/IV. 36,6-36,8. 23/IV. 36,4-39,2. 24/IV. 36,6.

Source: MGL, d-165, 40; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 385.

1945

April 24

He exceeds the set plan for the poem "The Book of Peace". He writes an additional hundred lines, bringing the total to 2,500 instead of 1,760. In his diary, he writes that his only remaining friend is "The Book of Peace".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 73; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 394.

1945

April 24

Nina Kvirikadze brings bread and other products to the hospital.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 73; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 394.

1945

April 24

In his diary, he writes that the Soviet Army has entered Berlin and that a conference of the United Nations (UN) is to be held in San Francisco on April 25.

Source: MGL, d-165, 73; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 394.

1945

Until April 28

He reads poems and proverbs from the first part of the Book “Folk Eloquence” by Petre Umikashvili, published by “Federation” in 1937.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-166, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 397;

1945

Until April 28

In his diary, he writes that the translation of Archangelo Lambert’s Book “Description of Samegrelo” by Alexandre Tchkonია, published by “Federation” in 1938, is greatly needed.

Source: MGL, d-166, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 398;

1945

April 28

Doctor Gabriel Pondoev talks to him about his physical condition and treatment. He explains that his illness is not caused by organic diseases but by living conditions such as poor housing, air quality, and food, as well as heavy mental work. He advises him to fundamentally change his lifestyle, to establish a calm and untroubled routine and diet, to avoid pessimistic and gloomy people, and to take care of himself. He promises that if he wishes to rest at the seaside, the medical commission will grant him leave.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-166, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 398.

Note: Gabriel Pondoev is mentioned by his last name in the source.

1945

April 29

He is discharged from the hospital. When he arrives home, he finds chaos and has to reorganize everything again.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-165, 74; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 394.

1945

April 29

In his diary, he writes in Russian the name, surname, and patronymic of the man who jumped from the third floor of the medical complex and survived. His name is Ivane Giorgievich Tsitsishvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 75; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 394.

1945

April 29

In his diary, he notes an article published by Vano Shaduri in the magazine Mnatobi regarding World War II, titled "Leningrad and Georgian Culture", which discusses him and includes the poem "Leningrad".

Source: MGL, d-165, 75; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 394.

1945

April 29

He learns that there was a discussion about him in a radio program and is curious about what was said.

Source: MGL, d-165, 75; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 394.

1945

April 29

Regarding the publication of the Book "Lyric", which contains translations of his poems, he writes down the phone number of Mikheil Davitashvili, an employee of the Literature and Arts Department at the publishing house "Zarya Vostoka", in his diary.

Source: MGL, d-165, 75; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 394.

Note: Mikhail Davitashvili is mistakenly mentioned in the source by the initial "Sh". and his last name.

May

1945

May 1

In the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, materials from the discussion surrounding Giorgi Natroshvili's report "Georgian Poetry During the Great Patriotic War" are published, including Besarion Zhghenti's speech "The Main Trends in Georgian Poetry". In his remarks, Zhghenti notes that Galaktion Tabidze was among the foremost Georgian poets who affirmed the vitality of their work from the very first days of the Great Patriotic War.

Source: The Main Trends in Georgian Poetry, newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1945, №15 (May 1), p. 3.

1945

May 1

In the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, Giorgi Jibladze's article "For Creative Mastery" is published, in which he responds to Galaktion's collection "Gold in the Azure of Adjara". Jibladze points out that this Book has sparked diverse opinions. In his view, while it contains some weak lines and artistic images, overall, the Book is a testament to Galaktion's great poetic talent. The critic also gives high praise to the poet's lyric poetry from the period of the Great Patriotic War.

Source: The Main Trends in Georgian Poetry, newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1945, №15 (May 1), p. 3.

1945

May 9

In 1943, he makes certain revisions to two of his poems "The Forests of Bryansk" and "Listen to the Native Melodies...", resulting in the creation of a new work dedicated to the Soviet Union's victory in World War II, titled "Listen to the Native Harps".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №45-a, p. 1207; №7804; №181-d., p. 15; №3957-3958; №1283; №28897-50, p. 69; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 239.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "Forests," "Bryansk Forests," and untitled (with the beginnings: "To the native melodies..." and "To the native tunes...").

1945

May 9

He writes a poem "Glory".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3418-3419; №1282-1285; №5508; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 241.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (with the opening lines: "Glory once more...", "Look at the city, look at the village...", "Glory to the city and the village...").

1945

May 9

He writes a poem "Victory Celebration".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2362; №734; №1284; №6238-6241; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 243.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "May the Voice Resound Forever," "Song of May 9th," "Let the Voice Resound," "Song for Georgia's Heroes," and untitled (with the beginnings: "May the voice resound forever...", "Listen to the native melodies...").

1945

May 9

Early in the morning, he revises the poem "Tell Me, Black Swallow," written on March 30, 1945, while in the hospital. By making significant changes to the text, he creates a new version of the work dedicated to the Soviet Union's victory in World War II. This poem, titled "Victory," is submitted to the editorial office of the newspaper Komunisti on the same day.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №32; №416; N 777; №3417; №1282; №5507-5508; №6233-6234; №6408; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 231.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Morning of Victory,” “Tell Me, Black Swallow,” “Do You Remember, Before...,” “May 9, 1945,” and untitled (with the beginnings: “Do you remember, before, the year before last...,” “In spring, a spark of life ignited...,” “Do you remember? Before, the year before last...”).

1945

May 9

He writes a poem “Today I Took Down the Coloured Map”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3135; №3476; №4075; №4917; №5512; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 228.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Today We Took Down the Coloured Map,” “1945, May 9,” and untitled (with the beginnings: “The coloured map, I took it down today...,” “Today I took down the coloured map...,” and “The shining coloured map...”).

1945

May 9

The poem “Victory,” dedicated to the Soviet Union’s victory in World War II, is published in the newspaper Komunisti.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1945, №91, p. 3.

Note: In the newspaper Komunisti, the poem includes a note: “1945. May 9. Morning”.

1945

May 9

The poem “Celebration of Victory” is published in the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba.

Source: newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1945, №16, p. 1

1945

After May 9

He writes a poem “During That War, We All...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, N 233-a, p. 6316; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 252.

Dating: It is dated based on the end date of World War II.

1945

After May 9

He writes a poem “The Return of the Svan”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5166-5168; №5188; №4032; №791¹; №1869-1872; №3898-3901; №4028-4031; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 253.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Morning in the Mountains,” “Two Eagles,” “The Sixth Poem,” “The War Survivor,” “Return to Svaneti,” “He Saw the Cities of Europe,” and untitled

(with the beginnings: “On the brightening horizon, a solitary sky...,” “When the soul merges with nature...,” “A people with an extraordinary fighting spirit...,” “He saw the cities of Europe...”).

1945

After May 9

Nodar Kakabadze visits him with friends, but the poet is not at home. Upon exiting the building, they see Galaktion in front of the house, drunk. When the young people tell him that they were at his place and didn't find him, the poet mistakes them for thieves and says, “I'm just a poor poet; I have nothing, what do you want to find?” To prove that they are not robbers, one of the startled young men starts reciting a poem by Verlaine in French. Galaktion finishes the phrase in French as well. At the end of their brief conversation, the poet tells the young people that being a writer is the most impoverished and thankless occupation.

Source: N. Kakabadze, One Meeting with Galaktion, Artistic and Literary Collages, Tbilisi, 1991, p. 143-145.

Dating: According to the author of the recollection, the incident occurred when the war had just ended. World War II concluded on May 9, 1945.

1945

After May 9

He is at the “Olympia” dining hall with Varlam Zhuruli. Suddenly, he hears nearby young people starting to recite his poems. Galaktion approaches them and asks if they know whose poems they are reading. When he receives an affirmative answer, he tells them that he is Galaktion. One of the young men responds that this is impossible, as the king of poets should not be in such a basement. Galaktion returns to his table and soon leaves the dining hall with Varlam Zhuruli.

Source: K. Khoperia, First Meeting with Galaktion, Saliteraturo Gazeti, 1997, №10, May, p. 8.

Dating: According to the author of the recollection, the incident took place after the end of World War II.

1945

Until May 15

He writes an untitled poem “I pity this street...”.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 61; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 421.

1945

May 15

He is in Kutaisi and writes the poem “We Have Not Lost a Single War”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2513; №3400; №8837; №2039; №5520-5521; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 245.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “To Mamia Gurieli,” “Mamia,” and untitled (with the beginning: “For me, this moment is a harsh one...”).

1945

May 15

In his diary, he outlines the plans for the following day: to meet with Shalva Apkhaidze, to deliver a poem to Grigol Tsetskhladze, and to pass a letter to Eremia Astvatsaturian.

Source: MGL, d-167, 63; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 422.

1945

May 15

At 8 a.m., while he is still asleep, Ilia Agladze and Kirile Lortkipanidze visit his home. Before Nino Kvirikadze can grasp what is happening, they enter his room and congratulate him on becoming a laureate. Galaktion finds it difficult to believe at first.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 510.

1945

May 17

The newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Morning of Victory" ("Do you remember, before, the year before last...").

Source: G. Tabidze, Победа, newspaper Заря Востока, May 17, N 21, p. 3.

1945

May 17

Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Victory" is published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka in a translation by Boris Serebryakov.

Source: Победа (стихи) Г. Табидзе, Перев. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1945, 17 мая, N 97.

1945

May 20

He receives a letter from Sosiko Pantskhava. In the letter, Sosiko writes that he searched for him extensively in the city's streets and various institutions but could not find him. Finally, he decided to send a letter. He provides the address of his aunt and asks him to write a recollection about Romanoz Pantskhava and deliver it there.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-471; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 295.

1945

May 21

Nino Kvirikadze notes in the notebook that Galaktion's "Selected Works" is delayed.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 510.

Note: In the source, "the book" is mentioned, but it likely refers to "Selected Works," which was published before June 26, 1945.

1945

May 23

He has his photo taken by the reporters from the Soviet Telegraph Agency.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 511.

1945

May 23

In his personal library, he comes across the poetry collection "Letters" (Poems), gifted by the writer and translator Kolau Cherniavsky in 1927. He browses through the Book and writes an untitled poem dedicated to Cherniavsky "I came across your Book by chance..."

Source: Autographs: MGL, №8491; NFh-1423; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 246.

1945

May 24

Veriko Anjaparidze reads Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Morning of Victory" at her anniversary evening, and the audience is left in awe.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 76; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 394.

1945

May 26

In his notebook, without a title, he writes the first stanza of the poem "Victory", dedicated to the Soviet Union's triumph in World War II.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 77; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 395.

1945

May 26

The newspaper Komunisti requests him to submit the poem.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 511.

1945

May 27

While walking with Nino Kvirikadze, he is asked to present identification, which he does not have with him. As a result, he leaves Nino as "collateral" and goes himself to retrieve the documents.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 511.

1945

May 29

Postcards featuring works by nine Georgian classic writers - Shota Rustaveli, Davit Guramishvili, Rapiel Eristavi, Grigol Orbeliani, Ilia Chavchavadze, Akaki Tsereteli, Vazha-Pshavela, Nikoloz Baratashvili, and Galaktion - are published.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 511.

1945

May 30

He is asked to submit a poem for publication in the newspaper Boets.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 511.

1945

May 30

In connection with the opening of the Philharmonic, Galaktion's literary and creative evening is included in the summer program.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 511.

1945

May 31

In his diary, he notes that the next morning he needs to see Dimitri Arakishvili and that he should go to the public library at 6 PM.

Source: MGL, d-165, 79; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 395.

1945

After May

In his notebook, he writes a list of images and photographs printed in issues 1-21 of the magazine Ogonyok from 1945.

Source: MGL, d-123, 7; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 558;

June

1945

June 1

He meets the tall composer Kote Potskhverashvili near the opera theatre. As they approach the bust of Akaki Tsereteli, Galaktion thinks that Akaki was an even greater figure, drawing colossal attention. He feels awkward next to Kote, who is limping, unwell, and holding a small bottle of medicine. The composer mentions that he is not working because he is going to die anyway and doesn't want to write an opera. Zakaria Paliashvili also wrote an opera but could not save himself and passed away. Galaktion recalls a cartoon from an old humorous magazine depicting Kote Potskhverashvili's spot no longer being in the pantheon, with his feet left beyond the grave. He reflects on the composer's heartache: "I should not have written what I had written" and contemplates the general apathy of people. At that moment, six tiny female singers approach the trolleybus stop, and Kote stands among them, prompting someone to exclaim, "Gulliver in Lilliput".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 4-6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 400.

Note: Kote Potskhverashvili is mentioned in the source by the initial of his first name and the last name, while Zakaria Paliashvili is mentioned by his last name only.

1945

June 2

He writes a poem "Today is the Precious Day of Victory Celebration".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3464-3465; №3479-3483; №755-761; №6223-6232; №6350-6351; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 232.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "Victory Day," "Children's Song," "To Defend the Caucasus," "Victory Day Dawned," and untitled (with the opening line: "I felt the fresh light of this May...").

1945

June 10

Amiran Gabeskiria writes on the page of the desk calendar for this day that Galaktion Tabidze's literary-musical broadcast has been rescheduled for June 17. He also makes a note about the same event on the calendar page for June 17.

Source: MGL, d-165, 81, 85; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 396;

1945

June 12

He buys a permanent pen.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 82; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 396.

1945

June 14

A notice is published in the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba announcing that on June 18, a commemorative evening dedicated to Niko Lortkipanidze will be held at the Writers' House. Georgian writers will participate in the event, and Galaktion Tabidze will recite a poem dedicated to Niko Lortkipanidze.

Source: The commemorative evening dedicated to Niko Lortkipanidze was announced in the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1945, №20 (June 14), p. 1.

1945

June 22

Giorgi Jibladze says that the evening planned for the publication of his "Selected Works" at the Writers' Union should be held on a large scale.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 400.

Note: Giorgi Jibladze is mentioned by his last name in the source.

1945

June 22

In the diary, he writes about an acrostic dedicated by Simon Tabidze to Mamuka Orbeliani, which was submitted to the editorial office by Nino Orbeliani, from an 1886 issue of the magazine Teatri. He also notes that the magazine features a poem by Alexandre Kazbegi.

Source: MGL, d-167, 8-9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 400.

1945

June 22

In the diary, he notes the authors of the materials to be used for the evening event planned regarding the publication of his “Selected Works” at the Academy of Arts: Academician Korneli Kekelidze, Vasili Barnov, Ia Ekaladze, Valerian Gunia, the hermit, David Kldiashvili, Shalva Dadiani, Zakaria Chichinadze, and Sandro Shanshiashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-167, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 400.

1945

After June 22

In Igor Belza’s Book “V. I. Shebalin”, published as part of the Stalin Prize Laureates series, he makes annotations and highlights.

Source: MGL, t-270, И. Бэлза, “В. Я. Шебалин”, Moscow-Leningrad, 1945.

1945

June 23

In the diary, he writes down the address of a stenographer who will be available to record the evening event at the Academy of Arts.

Source: MGL, d-167, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 400-401.

1945

June 24

In relation to the evening event at the Academy of Arts, he notes in his diary the names of the enthusiasts – Tariel Vardadze and Eter Andronikashvili – who will keep the posters and invitation cards.

Source: MGL, d-165, 87; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 396.

1945

June 25

A meeting with Galaktion Tabidze is held at the Academy of Arts with the academy’s collective. The event goes much better than the poet expected. Galaktion enjoys the presentations by Besarion Zhghenti and the students. He thinks it would be worthwhile to publish the stenography of this material as a separate edition, with well-done alphabet and clichés, and he should take care of this task as well.

Source: G. Tabidze's records, MGL, d-165, 88, MGL, d-167, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 396, 402.

1945

June 25

At the Writers' Union, in the editorial office of the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, he finds a card under the glass of one of the tables regarding the funeral committee for Ivane Ioseliani, in which he is also mentioned alongside Ivane Tsulukidze, Polikarp Kakabadze, Akaki Gatsrelia, and Nikoloz Kandelaki.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 401.

Note: Polikarp Kakabadze, Akaki Gatsrelia, and Nikoloz Kandelaki are mentioned in the source by the initials of their first names and their last names.

1945

June 25

At the Art Academy, a meeting is held with Galaktion regarding the release of his "Selected Works". The event unexpectedly goes very well for the poet, with Besarion Zhghenti and the students performing excellently. Galaktion believes that a grand evening has taken place and thinks it would be great to have a separately published stenogram with clichés and an alphabet index, which should be prepared soon, alongside his other tasks.

Source: MGL, d-167, 11, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 400, 403.

1945

June 25

During the meeting with the staff of the Art Academy, Ilia Khoshtaria delivers a speech. The poet hopes that he will also speak at the planned evening event organized by the Writers' Union.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 402.

1945

June 25

At the pavilion of Laghidze waters, he accidentally bumps his foot against a woman, who calls him "brutish" because of it. This is the first time Galaktion perceives discomfort caused by impaired vision.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 401-402.

1945

After June 25

He writes an undated and untitled poem “Though I recall many acquaintances, the Avalianis...,” dedicated to the memory of the prose writer Ivane Ioseliani.

Source: MGL, d-660, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 624;

1945

Until June 26

He receives ten author copies of his “Selected Works” from the State Publishing House. He doesn’t know what to do, as he can’t give them all away as gifts, and many are asking for a copy. Everyone says it is a magnificent book.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-167, 13-14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

1945

June 26

On Saakadze Street, now known as Rustaveli Avenue, a man heading towards the trolleybus is reading Galaktion’s “Selected Works” and nearly gets hit by a car. The poet writes in his notebook that he will never forget this incident.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-167, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

1945

June 26

Venera Urushadze mentions that he promised to gift her a copy of the “Selected Works.”

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-167, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403;

Note: Venera Urushadze is mentioned by her first name in the source.

1945

June 26

A saleswoman scolds Galaktion for not greeting her at the cinema. The poet responds that it’s impossible that he saw her and didn’t greet her. It turns out that the woman is joking. She saw Galaktion in a film shot on May 9, in which he beautifully recited a poem dedicated to victory.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-167, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

1945

June 26

The second bookstore informs that his “Selected Works” is selling very well, and mainly young people are purchasing it.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-167, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

1945

June 26

The artist Davit Gvelesiani is a nuisance and drains his energy, as he believes he is rightly called a “living corpse”. He cannot understand why he has taken it upon himself to paint a portrait of Galaktion.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-167, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404;

Note: Davit Gvelesiani is mentioned in the source by his last name.

1945

June 26

In the diary, he notes the address of his Armenian translator, Oganés Karapetian, who is an employee of the newspaper Sovetikan Vrastan.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-167, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404;

Note: Oganés Karapetian is mentioned in the source by his last name.

1945

June 26

Lena Sturua says during a phone conversation that Galaktion is a great poet and that only the future will be able to appreciate him.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-167, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404.

1945

June 26

While walking down the street with his “Selected Works” in hand, an unknown person stops him, takes the book, admires it with love, and tells him that all of Georgia appreciates Galaktion, but he himself does not appreciate his own worth.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-167, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404.

1945

June 26

The Presidium of the Union of Writers of Georgia, chaired by Giorgi Jibladze, passes a resolution to hold an evening event on July 2nd in honour of the publication of Galaktion Tabidze’s selected works. The program will include: an opening speech by Giorgi Jibladze; a presentation on the poet’s work by Shalva Radiani; speeches by Akaki Gatsserelia, Besarion Zhghenti, and Shalva Radiani; and readings of poems by Galaktion Tabidze, Veriko Anjaparidze, Sergo Zakariadze, Pierre Kobakhidze, and Tamar Chavchavadze.

Source: National Archives of Georgia, Repository 8, Description 1, Case 997, Sheet 1; Sh. Baramidze, “In the Constellation of Genius Poets”, collection “Georgia’s Herald”, №65-66, Tbilisi, 2008, 1994, p. 197-198.

1945

June 26

At the store located on Beria Square, he meets Davit Dondua, who tells him that an elderly man requested his “Selected Works” but found the price – one hundred roubles – too expensive. However, the man opened the book, read the first poem, “Everyone Has Their Own Keepsake”, became emotional, sighed, and declared that he would gladly pay several thousand roubles for this Book just for that poem. He purchased the Book and left satisfied.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-167, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 402.

1945

June 26

At the store located in Beria Square, now known as Freedom Square, a buyer of Galaktion Tabidze’s “Selected Works” asks the seller if they are not ashamed to value Galaktion at only one hundred roubles. The seller responds that they are not valuing Galaktion himself, but rather the book.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-167, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 402.

1945

June 26

Iosif Imedashvili goes to the State Publishing House’s warehouse. He is irritated that Galaktion Tabidze’s “Selected Works” was given a plain cover, and he insists on changing it with a better one.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-167, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 402.

1945

June 26

Young people are collectively acquiring Galaktion Tabidze’s ‘Selected Works’.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-167, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 402.

1945

June 26

The manager of the state publishing house, Meliton Tevdoradze, informs the poet that his “Selected Works”, despite the high price, are selling very quickly. More than 2,000 copies were sold in two weeks.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 402;

Note: Meliton Tevdoradze is mentioned by his last name in the source.

1945

June 26

The bookseller at the Armenian market, located on today's Leselidze Street, tells the poet that he has never sold as many books as the number of copies of his "Selected Works" that have sold.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

1945

June 26

On the very first day of the release of the "Selected Works", the bookstore next to the newspaper Komunisti sells 40 copies and requests another 60 copies.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

1945

30 June

He writes an untitled poem "And It Began in the Magazine Mnatobi."

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-165, 90; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 397.

1935

After June

He writes a poem "The Profitability of Poetry".

Source: MGL, d-98, 56; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 209-210;

July

1945

June 29 – July 2

A poet, who went to the state bank to withdraw money, discovers that the cashier hasn't had him sign his documents. Irritated that he now has to run around to the accountant due to someone else's negligence, he calls the cashier a 'fool,' and then regrets that by uttering this word, he has created a new enemy.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1945

From June 29 to July 3

He is delighted by the success of his new “Selected Works”. He recalls an untitled poem written in 1943, “Listen to the Native Melodies...”, which features the refrain “This is the genius of Galaktion”. He writes the text of the poem in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-167, 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1945

From June 29 to July 3

In connection with Solomon Tsaishvili receiving an award in a competition announced on the theme of Tbilisi, he spontaneously writes an epigram: ‘Let my Solomon revive / Your voice, Solomon!’ Then he thinks that if Solomon were to find out, he might change his friendly attitude towards him to one of hostility.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-167, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405;

Note: Solomon Tsaishvili is mentioned by his first name in the source.

1945

From June 29 to July 3

In the magazine Mnatobi, Levan Asatiani intends to publish the words spoken in Russian by Akaki Tsereteli, while Galaktion suggests that it would be better to print the Georgian translation. He then recalls that in Fyodor Tyutchev’s book, alongside the Russian text, there are French texts, and nothing would be harmed in Akaki Tsereteli’s case if the text were published in the original language. He fears that with this thoughtlessness, he might offend Levan Asatiani.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-167, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405-406.

1945

From June 29 to July 3

In his diary, he writes that the usual carelessness of artists has become an inseparable part of his character, yet he thinks that he should also be able to hold himself together like everyone else.

Source: MGL, d-167, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 406.

1945

From June 29 to July 3

He writes an untitled poem “I Have Given You the Sun in a Pink Robe...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-167, 19; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 406.

1945

From June 29 to July 3

In his diary, he writes excerpts about his work from Sandro Shanshiashvili's speech. The speaker notes that the waves of life are crashing Galaktion back and forth, and even a great genius can slip at this time. He mentions that he holds him in high esteem and even led the first praise when it was warranted, but he criticizes his latest Book "Gold in the Azure of Adjara". Everyone knows the poet's virtues and faults, but critics deliberately remain silent because he is a recipient of the Order of Lenin, a National Poet, and an academician, yet the truth must be told to elevate Soviet literature. He wonders why Giorgi Natroshvili can see his flaws but cannot see Galaktion's. He points out that no matter how many variations and emotions the poems may have, they must all connect to a single theme; comparisons, epithets, metaphors, and conclusions must all stem from this theme. Otherwise, regardless of how adorned the poetry is with beautiful gems and rhymes, it remains formalistic.

Source: MGL, d-167, 21-27; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 408-409.

1945

July 3

Elene Bakradze-Kartvelishvili tells that Peter Sharia summoned her, spoke at length about Galaktion's personal qualities and his 'Selected Works,' and mentioned that there is no poet like him in Russia, but the Book contains a lot of unnecessary content. Galaktion explains to his interlocutor that since he handed the Book over to Shalva Radiani, no one has asked him anything, and they edited it without consulting him or even giving him the opportunity to review it. The poet believes that an evening at the Writers' Union is necessary.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 29; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 410;

Note: Peter Sharia and Shalva Radiani are mentioned by their last names in the source, while Elene Bakradze-Kartvelishvili is mentioned by her first name.

1945

July 3

He is shaving his beard at the 'Hygiene' salon. A young female barber talks to him about religion and ironically adds that she has debt to Kashveti Church because she lit a one-rouble candle without paying for it.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 29; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 410.

1945

July 5

A notice is published in the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba announcing that on June 25, a meeting between Galaktion Tabidze and artists was held at the Tbilisi State Academy of Arts. Besarion Zhghenti delivered a lecture on the poet's work. Poems dedicated to Galaktion were recited by poets: Giorgi Kuchishvili, Andro Tevzadze, and Marika Baratashvili, as well as by students of the Academy of Arts, Gigla Pirtskhalava and Mikheil Kvividze. At the end of the evening, Galaktion himself recited his poems.

Source: G. Tabidze's Evening at the Academy of Arts, newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1945, №22 (July 5), p. 4.

1945

July 5

An unknown person rings the bell at the entrance, asking for alms. He says he is 'on a mission,' has made a vow before God, and will dedicate everything he collects to the Lord.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-209, p. 5. AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 338;

1945

July 8

A literary-musical program about Galaktion Tabidze is being held on the radio.

Source: MGL, d-165, 94; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, p. 397.

1945

July 3-9

He writes an untitled poem "Maybe I Will Be Able in the Cold Tomb...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 30; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 410-411.

1945

July 3-9

The lawyer D. Lortkipanidze tells about the strange events that happened to Ivane Ioseliani and his own sayings. He mentioned that he said about Ioseb Grishashvili, "What a talentless person he is", and about Paolo Iashvili, "He is a great fool", but he likes his poem "Letter to Mother".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 30-32; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 411.

1945

July 3-9

He writes an untitled poem "You paint me, the Painter...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 32; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 411-412.

1945

July 3-9

In the morning, as he walks up Daniel Chonkadze Street, his briefcase becomes heavy, and he finds a simple trick to lighten the load. Later, he writes in his diary that he wants to expand on this idea.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 33; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 412.

1945

July 3-9

He meets Domenti Okroshidze, who has acquired Galaktion's "Selected Works", but he only gives it to his daughter and no one else, as the Book published in 1927 was torn while lending and returning it.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 34; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 412.

1945

July 9

He arrives in Mtskheta and watches the sunset, which begins there and ends in Avchala.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 36; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 413.

1945

July 10

Nino Nakashidze tells that Vasil Tsereteli had fallen in love with her acquaintance, but was turned down. He said "There are plenty more women in Georgia" and soon afterward married. They were well-matched, but once he declared that he would live with her, but he fell in love with someone else. The wife kicked him out of the house with beatings.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 36-37; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 413-414.

1945

July 10

In his diary, he writes that there is a lot of discussion about Chito Takaishvili.

Source: MGL, d-167, 38; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 414.

1945

July 10

He learns that Irakli Abashidze is being appointed as the assistant director of the children's literature publishing house.

Source: Galaktion's record, MGL, d-167, 38; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 414.

Note: Irakli Abashidze is mentioned by his first name in the source.

1945

July 10

He learns that Simon Chikovani has returned to Tbilisi.

Source: Galaktion's record, MGL, d-167, 38; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 414.

Note: Simon Chikovani is referred to as 'Simonik' in the source.

1945

July 10

A literary evening for Galaktion Tabidze at the Writers' Union is scheduled for July 16, and the poet is surprised why it was postponed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 38; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 414.

1945

July 10

In his diary, he writes the list of members of the presidium and the board for the meeting to be held at the Writers' Union on July 11, among whom he is included.

Source: MGL, d-167, 38; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 414.

1945

July 11

He sends a short letter to the Zarya Vostoka publishing house, stating that, in his opinion, it would be better to publish the poems without dates. He explains that it is difficult to determine even the approximate dates of many poems, and the chronology does not work out anyway.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-149; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 109-110.

1945

July 11

He meets Varlam Makharoblidze, the director of the Tsageri Regional Museum, who shares his thoughts on traveling in Racha-Lechkhumi with Galaktion. He brings a plan and promises to inform him of the details soon. Otar Egadze mentions that the Tsageri Regional Committee or some organization should mediate with the Writers' Union about organizing the evening. Then, the Writers' Union should coordinate with the Central Committee, and two people should be assigned to handle the organization. He suggests Alexandre Sigua, who will go there and arrange everything. During their conversation, Sharukh Charkviani joins them, and Galaktion writes in his diary that he was missing one firebrand.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 39; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 414.

Note: Alexandre Sigua is mentioned by his last name in the source, while Sharukh Charkviani is mentioned by his first name.

1945

July 11

In connection with the publication of “The Selected”, he writes in his diary a list of participating writers and reciting actors for the evening to be held at the Writers’ Union, which was postponed to July 16: Alio Mashashvili, Konstantine Chichinadze, Grigol Abashidze, Ilya Mosashvili, Konstantine Gamsakhurdia, Davit Sulikashvili, Konstantine Lortkipanidze, Akaki Beliashvili, Leo Kiacheli, Yakinthe Lisashvili, Razhden Gvetadze, Giorgi Natroshvili, Sergo Zakariadze, and Pierre Kobakhidze. He notes that it is essential to have stenograms and that he should coordinate this with his wife, Nina Kvirikadze.

Source: MGL, d-167, 38-39; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 415.

Note: Alio Mashashvili, Konstantine Chichinadze, Grigol Abashidze, Ilya Mosashvili, Konstantine Gamsakhurdia, Konstantine Lortkipanidze, Davit Sulikashvili, and Akaki Beliashvili are mentioned in the source by their abbreviated last names; Leo Kiacheli is referred to by the initial of his first name and his last name; Yakinthe Lisashvili, Razhden Gvetadze, and Giorgi Natroshvili are mentioned by their last names; and Nina Kvirikadze is mentioned by her first name.

1945

July 11

In his diary, he notes that he has some matters to coordinate with the publishing house ‘Zarya Vostoka’ and with the Stalin Culture and Recreation Park located near the funicular, which has a special edition.

Source: MGL, d-167, 39; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 416.

1945

July 11

He drafts the text of an application to the Main Directorate of Georgian Literature and Publishing (Main Literary Board) for permission to print materials dedicated to him with a circulation of 300-500 copies.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-167, 39; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 416.

1945

July 13

The poem “A Song for the Heroes of Georgia” is published in the newspaper Komunisti.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1945, №137, p. 3.

1945

July 15

Along with an appeal to the Adjara State Publishing House, he sends a letter to someone named Andro. He asks him to include the project in the plan and take an active role in publishing his book.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-73; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 67.

1945

July 16

A creative evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze is held at the Writers' Club. The opening speech is delivered by Giorgi Jibladze, the Executive Secretary of the Georgian Writers' Union, who briefly characterizes Galaktion's work and his role in the development of modern Georgian poetry. The next speaker notes that Galaktion introduced new motifs into Georgian lyric poetry, aided by his knowledge of the best traditions of Georgian and world poetry. The speaker also highlights his contributions during the war years, when he emerged as a fervent "poet-tribune", inspiring the Soviet people to fight. Akaki Gatsserelia spoke about Galaktion's first two books, one of which is romantic while the other is symbolist, filled with new forms and lyrical masterpieces. Regarding his activities during the Soviet era, the speaker states that the October Revolution infused his poetry with a completely new vitality, powerful pathos, and a sense of joyous celebration, gradually transforming Galaktion from an individualist creator into a troubadour of the Soviet state. Vano Tsulukidze noted that Galaktion Tabidze integrated the formal achievements of Russian and European poetry into the national context and spoke about the musicality of his verse. In the second part of the evening, the Republic's Honoured Artist, Sergo Zakariadze, recited Galaktion's "Mary". Following this, Galaktion himself took the stage and read his recent poems dedicated to the great victory of the Soviet people.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's evening, newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1945, №24 (77), August 2, p. 1.

1945

July 11-19

In his diary, he notes that he must deliver Russian translations of 15 of his poems, written at various times, to Simon Chikovani, who is editing an anthology of Georgian poetry to be published in Moscow. He calculates that the total number of lines in the translations will amount to 500. The poet lists several poems to be included in the anthology: "The Mountains of Guria", "I and the Night", "Blue Horses", "My Heart Today is Black Sea", "You Sleep!" ("Lullaby"), "In the Mountains", and "Oath to the Motherland".

Source: MGL, d-167, 38; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 415.

1945

Until July 20

He writes an untitled satirical poem "Though you were left without a car, Ilo...".

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 634;

1945

July 20

In the dining room, an unknown intellectual tells that in the morning, Evgeny Lebedev was reading Galaktion's poems translated by Nikolai Tikhonov and others on the Moscow radio.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 43; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 417.

Note: Evgeny Lebedev is referred by his last name in the source.

1945

July 22

An evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze is held at the funicular.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-167, 42; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 416.

1945

Until July 22

He addresses a request to the first secretary of the party's Kutaisi City Committee, Grigol Narsia, asking for a plot of land to build a house in the city where he spent his childhood and youth and published his first book. Narsia receives his proposal with great enthusiasm and promises assistance. Galaktion chooses a plot near the Rioni River, in an area called Tchoma, and begins organizing the construction. However, when he goes back to the city committee, Grigol Narsia greets him with a completely different attitude and sends him away with a refusal.

Source: Hurt by the people of Kutaisi, Galaktion Tabidze, Artinfo, April 28, 2020. HYPERLINK "https://artinfo.ge/2020/04/quthaiselebisgan-gulnatkeni-galaktion-tabidze/"
https://artinfo.ge/2020/04/quthaiselebisgan-gulnatkeni-galaktion-tabidze/;

1945

July 23

At the plenum of the Soviet Writers of Georgia, the chairman of the presidium, Simon Chikovani, 'regrets to note' that when the poet describes the landscapes of Adjara with a romantic tone, he is at his height, but when he shifts to describing contemporary reality, 'a vagueness settles in his inspiration,' and we receive an inadequate work from him. He then mentions Galaktion in a positive context while discussing poems written on the theme of war.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's evening, newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1945, №25 (78), August 2, p. 2.

1945

After July 23

After the Galaktion Tabidze evening held on July 22 in the Stalin Cultural and Recreation Park, on the funicular, a special newspaper Galaktion is published in Russian, which includes Vasili Barnov's "To Galaktion Tabidze", Shalva Dadiani's "A Great Creator", Ia Ekaladze's "A Bell – Once in a Century", Davit Kldiashvili's "Beauty and Pride of Georgian Lyric Poetry", Sandro Shanshiashvili's "A Great Lyricist", and Giorgi Kuchishvili's "To Galaktion Tabidze".

Source: MGL, t-669, The newspaper "Галактион" printing press, July 22, 1945, p. 1-2.

Note: The articles and poem are translated from the 1927 published literary bulletin "Galaktion".

Dating: According to the resolution on the newspaper print, the printing permission was granted by the editor, Vakhtang Sologhashvili, on July 23, 1945.

1945

After July 23

In the special Russian newspaper Galaktion Korneli Kekelidze's speech, delivered at the jubilee evening dedicated to the 50th anniversary of the poet's birth and the 35th anniversary of his literary activity at the State Opera and Ballet Theater, is published under the title "Our Beloved and Great Galaktion".

Source: MGL, t-669, К. Кекелидзе, "Наш любимый и славный Галактион", The newspaper "Галактион" printing press, July 22, 1945, p. 1.

1945

After July 23

In the special Russian newspaper Galaktion, a translated article by Irakli Andronikashvili, titled "The National Poet of Georgia", is published, which was originally printed in the 1943 Russian newspaper Boets RKKA ("The Fighter of the Red Army of Working Peasants"). The author writes that the people expressed great love for the poet and his unusually musical and deeply sensitive poems during the jubilee evening dedicated to the 50th anniversary of the poet's birth and the 35th anniversary of his literary activity, held at the State Opera and Ballet Theatre. On that day, not only the theater but the entire Rustaveli Avenue was filled with admirers of the creator. He notes that, just like Shota Rustaveli, Iliа Chavchavadze, Akaki Tsereteli, and Vazha-Pshavela, Galaktion Tabidze is referred to by his first name alone. He briefly summarizes the biographical details and the motivations behind the poet's work.

Source: MGL, t-669, Ираклий Андроников, Народный Поэт Грузии, newspaper "Боец РККА", 1943, №286; The newspaper "Галактион" printing press, July 22, 1945, p. 1.

1945

After July 23

In the special Russian newspaper Galaktion, Shalva Radian's article "The Founder of a New Poetic Culture" is published. The author notes that Galaktion Tabidze created a new poetic direction, uniting the best cultural traditions of Europe and Georgia; his work played a significant role in the development of Georgian poetry, enriching it with musical harmony and diversity, giving it a unique resonance, and it is no coincidence that he is considered the founder of the musicality of 20th-century poetry.

Source: MGL, t-669, Шалва Радиани, "Основположник новой поэтической культуры", the newspaper "Галактион" printing press, July 22, 1945, p. 1.

1945

After July 23

In the special Russian newspaper Galaktion, Akaki Gatsereia's article "The Central Figure of New Georgian Poetry" is published. The author notes that Galaktion Tabidze, through his poetry, is a worthy continuator of the great ancestors' traditions - Shota Rustaveli, David Guramishvili, Nikoloz Baratashvili, Akaki Tsereteli, Iliа Chavchavadze, and Vazha-Pshavela. His emotional inspiration, the refinement of poetic culture, and innovative qualities have no equal in contemporary times. His influence on 20th-century Georgian poetry is immense. Although several generations have tried to emulate him, none have succeeded in enriching poetry in such a way with poetic technique, artistic language, and rhythm. Therefore, Galaktion Tabidze's work is infinitely loved by both ordinary readers and those with refined taste and high expectations.

Source: MGL, t-669, Акакий Гацерелия, "Центральная фигура в новой грузинской поэзии", the newspaper "Галактион" printing press, July 22, 1945, p. 1.

1945

After July 23

In the special Russian newspaper Galaktion, a fragment from Daria Akhvlediani's memoirs about Akaki Tsereteli is published. In response to the author's question about his opinion on young poets, Akaki answers that Galaktion Tabidze has a great future ahead of him, as he brings many new elements to the treasure of Georgian poetry.

Source: MGL, t-669, Дарья Ахвледяни, "Акакий Церетели о Галактионе", the newspaper "Галактион" printing press, July 22, 1945, p. 2.

1945

After July 23

In the special Russian newspaper Galaktion, a stenogram of the speech delivered at the meeting with the staff of the Academy of Arts, titled "The Great Book", is published in connection with the release of Galaktion Tabidze's "Selected Works".

Source: MGL, t-669, "Великая книга", The newspaper "Галактион" printing press, July 22, 1945, p. 2.

1945

After July 23

In the special Russian newspaper Galaktion, a jubilee address sent by the literary circles and readers of Leningrad in 1934, on the occasion of the 25th anniversary of his literary activity, is published, with the signature of Alexander Prokofiev.

Source: MGL, t-669, "Великая книга", А. Прокофьев, Адрес Ленинградцев, The newspaper "Галактион" printing press, July 22, 1945, p. 2.

1945

After July 23

In the special Russian newspaper Galaktion, a Chronology of Galaktion Tabidze's life and work is published.

Source: MGL, t-669, "Жизнь и творчество Галактиона Табидзе", The newspaper "Галактион" printing press, July 22, 1945, p. 2.

1945

July 25

An article by Giorgi Natroshvili titled "The Source of Creative Inspiration" is published in the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba. The article is dedicated to the impact of Lavrenti Beria's well-known Book “On the History of Bolshevik Organizations in Transcaucasia” on Georgian literature. The article notes that the mentioned Book provided a creative impetus for the birth of numerous artistic works. Among these works, the author of the article highlights Galaktion’s poems: “Gori”, “Forty Years Ago”, and “The Serious Disease”.

Source: G. Natroshvili, The Source of Creative Inspiration, newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1945, №24 (July 25), p. 2.

1945

July 25

A lengthy article about the evening dedicated to the National Poet Galaktion Tabidze is published in the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, covering the event that took place on July 16 of this year at the Writers’ Club.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s evening, newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1945, №24 (77), July 25, p. 4.

1945

July

He writes an untitled poem “The artist paints me...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №181-d., p. 30; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 247; For dating: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 482.

August

1945

August 2

The newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba publishes a speech delivered by Simon Chikovani on July 23 at the plenum of the Soviet Writers of Georgia, in which he critically evaluates Galaktion Tabidze’s new Book “Gold in the Azure of Adjara”. This section of the plenum review is titled “Irrelevant Lyricism and Issues of Artistic Mastery”.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s evening, newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1945, №25 (78), August 2, p. 2.

1945

August 2

In his diary, he notes that he has a collection of his selected works to give to Varlam Dondua.

Source: MGL, d-168, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 424.

1945

After August 2

He writes an untitled poem “The Voice of Your Childhood, Dedication...” dedicated to Lado Gudiashvili, but then crosses out the dedication.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-168, 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 430.

Note: The poem was neither published during the author's lifetime nor in subsequent collections.

1945

After August 4

Korneli Kekelidze gifts his Book "Essays from the History of Old Georgian Literature" to him with the inscription: "To the pride of Georgian poetry, the National Poet, Academician Galaktion, with love".

Source: MGL, t-60, K. Kekelidze, "Essays from the History of Old Georgian Literature", II, Tbilisi, 1945.

1945

After August 6

He writes a poem "May and Peace".

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 538;

1945

August 9

He writes three versions of the poem "Sails".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-169, 2-3, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 432-434.

Note: The poem was neither published during the author's lifetime nor in subsequent collections. It is included in the list of poems titled 'Almost Ready Materials' from the diary dated July 16, 1946.

1945

August 9

He participates in the event held at the Rustaveli Theatre commemorating the 30th anniversary of Vazha-Pshavela's passing and recites a poem dedicated to Vazha.

Source: The 30th Anniversary of Vazha-Pshavela's Death, newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1945, №27 (August 17), p. 1.

1945

August 2-12

In his diary, he writes lines from folk poems on the theme of the sea. He notes that the sea is not loved in Georgia because it does not suit our nature, and he thinks about organizing a reading of new poems 'inspired by the sea motifs.'

Source: MGL, d-168, 6-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 425-426;

1945

August 2-12

In his diary, he writes about the poem "The Sailor" by Yan Sashin from the July 24, 1945 issue of the Russian newspaper Pionerskaya Pravda.

Source: MGL, d-168, 11-13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 426-427.

1945

August 2-12

He writes an untitled poem “The Birds Are Crying Over the Sea...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-168, 14-15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 428-429;

Note: The poem, previously published under the title “The Birds Are Crying Over the Sea”, is likely dated to the 1940s.

1945

August 2-12

He writes a poem “Don’t Hesitate to Raise Your Voice”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-168, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 429-430;

1945

August 12

In his diary, he writes the text of an appeal to the Main Directorate of Literature and Publishing (“Main Literary Board”). He requests that his photograph be printed in a run of 2,000 copies for upcoming events.

Source: MGL, d-168, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 430.

1945

August 12

In his diary, Galaktion Tabidze writes an appeal to the Main Directorate of Literature and Publishing (“Main Literary Board”), requesting that, for a literary evening, the publishing house “Technique and Labour” prints two photographs of the National Poet of Georgia and full member of the Academy of Sciences, Galaktion Tabidze, in a run of 4,000 copies.

Source: MGL, h-24551-150, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 110.

1945

After August 12

In his diary, Galaktion Tabidze notes the quantity of food and cigarettes he is entitled to receive through ration cards.

Source: MGL, d-168, 20-21; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 431.

1945

August 13

On Elbakidze Hill, he meets Vasil Kavzharadze, who was on his way to ask him for money. However, out of hesitation, he says nothing during their meeting and later sends him a letter. In the letter, he explains that he is relying on the corn harvest but cannot wait until October and urgently needs to borrow 1,300 roubles. He writes that, regardless of Galaktion's response, the chance to shake his hand and greet him is worth more than any amount of money.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-484-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 297.

1945

August 23

Galaktion Tabidze, along with Simon Chikovani, Shalva Dadiani, Leo Kiacheli, and other writers, signs Ketevan Iremadze's obituary, which is published in the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba.

Source: Ketevan Iremadze, newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1945, №28, p. 4.

1945

Until August 25

Galaktion Tabidze writes in his diary about the submission of his Book "Lyrics" to the publishing house "Zarya Vostoka". He notes that the translator of the Book is Giorgi Tsagareli, and the editor is Vladimir Elsner. He tries to clarify whether Elsner or Ryurik Ivnev could be suitable speakers about his poetry. He intends to organize the book's presentation at either the Rustaveli Theatre or the Conservatory and to involve the press and radio in the process. He also plans to pick up 50 copies from the publisher and distribute them at the Academy of Sciences. However, he expresses concern that, as often happens, these plans might not materialize despite being written down.

Source: MGL, d-440; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 133-134.

1945

After August 25

The publishing house "Zarya Vostoka" is printing a collection of Galaktion Tabidze's poems titled "Lyrics", with a circulation of 5,000 copies. The Book is edited by Vladimir Elsner, with the cover designed by Severian Ketskhoveli, and it includes a portrait of the poet created by David Kutateladze. The poems have been translated into Russian by Giorgi Tsagareli.

Source: G. Tabidze, Lyrics, Tbilisi, 1945.

1945

After August 25

He writes an untitled poem beginning with "Above, the sky shines pure...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1400; №6803; №8090; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 279. For clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 695.

Note: The poem is also found under the following titles: "The Eagle", "Above, the Sky Shines Pure", and "Eternal Remembrance of Heroes".

1945

August 28

Nino Kvirikadze leaves him a short note saying that she has gone out for dinner.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 512.

September

1945

September 6

A report is published in the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba about the discussion held around Simon Chikovani's lecture titled "Soviet Literature in 1944-45". It is noted that Ilia Khostaria, a participant in the discussion, did not agree with the assessment given by Simon Chikovani regarding the poems written by Galaktion Tabidze, Alio Mashashvili, and Viktor Gabeskiria during the war period.

Source: "Soviet Literature in 1944-45". Debate Over Comrade S. Chikovani's Lecture", newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1945, №29 (September 6), p. 3.

1945

September 12

He reads Alexei Zhemchuzhnikov's poetry collection, makes underlines and comments.

Source: GTSM, 1335, А. М. Жемчужников, Стихотворения, Moscow, 1901.

Dating: The date is written next to Nino Kvirikadze's record.

1945

September 12

Nino Kvirikadze attributes Galaktion's poem to Alexei Zhemchuzhnikov's poetry collection: "To our beloved ancestors by hand / We have built the castle and the hall, / Not a single war, not a single war, / Not a single war have we lost".

Source: GTSM, 1335, А. М. Жемчужников, Стихотворения, Moscow, 1901, p. 188.

1945

After September 12

In the anthology of Russian translations of Georgian patriotic poetry, four poems by Galaktion Tabidze are published: "My Native Land" translated by Vladimir Derzhavin, "Everyone Has a Keepsake" by Nikolai Tikhonov, "The Oath" by Sergei Shervinsky, and "Oh, Homeland" by Mikhail Svetlov.

Source: MGL, t-249, Антология грузинской Патриотической поэзии, "Заря Востока", 1945, p. 143-150.

Note: The Russian titles of the mentioned poems are: "Земля родная моя!", "Каждый имеет любовь свою", "Присяга", "Родина"

1945

After September 12

In the anthology of Russian translations of Georgian patriotic poetry, he makes annotations and comments. On Levan Asatiani's preface, he notes that the omission of contemporary poets is audacious. He replaces the last two stanzas of Vera Zvyagintseva's translation of Rapiel Eristavi's poem "The Homeland of the Khevsur" with his own translation, remarking that it would be better this way.

Source: MGL, t-249, Антология грузинской Патриотической поэзии, "Заря Востока", 1945, p. VII, 63.

1945

September 14

An article by the Czechoslovak poet Ondra Lysogorsky titled "One Month in Georgia" is published in the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, in which the author discusses his experiences during a one-month stay in Georgia. He notes that he met several Georgian poets, though he was not yet able to meet some of them. Among them, Galaktion Tabidze is mentioned, about whom, according to the author of the article, he has heard many interesting things.

Source: O. Lysogorsky, "One Month in Georgia", newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1945, №30 (September 14), p. 2.

1945

After September 25

He comes across the Russian magazine Akhali Samkaro. In the end, he begins writing an untitled poem "My Nurturing Mother...".

Source: MGL, t-629, magazine "Новый Мир", 1946, September, №9, Moscow.

October

1945

October 6 or later

Galaktion Tabidze reads the October 6 issue of the newspaper Komunisti, which features an article titled "In the Homeland Village of Nikoloz Baratashvili". He is particularly interested in this publication because it discusses the village of Marabda, the legacy of nine brothers Kherkheulidze, and the ancestors of Nikoloz Baratashvili. Additionally, the article provides information about the event held in Marabda to commemorate the 100th anniversary of Nikoloz Baratashvili's death.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-402, p. 1-2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 529.

1945

After October 12

He reads the collection dedicated to the 100th anniversary of Nikoloz Baratashvili's death. At the end of the book, under the title "Baratashvili's Rhyme", he writes that the rhymes of Baratashvili and Grigol Orbeliani do not follow Shota Rustaveli's tradition - the true, incomparable musical rhymes marked by Georgian accents. He thinks that this might have been influenced by the poetics of Catholicos Anton, the excessive lightening of rhyme by Besiki and Alexandre Chavchavadze, or the loss of the sharpness in Rustaveli's rhymes, which came to be considered tedious. He notes that Baratashvili relies solely on internal rhythm and completely departs from Rustaveli's tradition. He writes that there are two different Meranis - Avtandil's and Baratashvili's. It was necessary to merge them, and he succeeded in doing so because "Blue Horses" preserves Rustaveli's rhyme while using Baratashvili's rhythm. However, he notes that this scheme needs further development and deepening.

Source: MGL, 641, Nikoloz Baratashvili, 1845-1945, Tbilisi, 1945.

1945

After October 12

At the end of Nikoloz Baratashvili's poetry collection, he writes an untitled poem "In my hand, I hold an unfolded letter...".

Source: MGL, 641, Nikoloz Baratashvili, 1845-1945, Tbilisi, 1945.

1945

Until October 21

He writes a poem dedicated to Nikoloz Baratashvili titled "I Stand Holding a Lyre Close to My Heart".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №590; №625; №704; №4975; №6344; N. Kvirikadze's manuscript, №1295; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 258.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "Baratashvili" and untitled (with the opening line: "I stand holding a lyre close to my heart...").

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1945

October 21

In the newspaper Sabtchota Mastsavlebeli, a poem dedicated to Nikoloz Baratashvili titled "I Stand, and My Heart Holds the Lyre" is published.

Source: Newspaper Sabtchota Mastsavlebeli, 1945, №14, p. 1.

1945

October 21

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Nikortsminda" is published.

Source: Стою и у сердца держу свою лиру (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1945, 21 октября, №209.

November

1945

November 5

Ilia Khoshtaria gifts his Book of poems with the inscription: "To the great poet of the Georgian people, G. Tabidze, as a keepsake from the author".

Source: MGL, t-234., Ilia Khoshtaria, poems, Tbilisi, 1945.

1945

November 29

The Secretary of the Union of Soviet Writers, Dmitry Polikarpov, sends a letter to the Chairman of the Georgian Writers' Union, Simon Chikovani, regarding the poetry of Galaktion Tabidze, prepared for publication by Zarya Vostoka (translated by Giorgi Tsagareli). He notes that the translation is not very successful and that the selected material is not well chosen. One of the poems, "A Few Days in Petrograd", is clearly dedicated to the October Revolution, but its political meaning is ambiguous. The author of the letter believes that such a Book would give Russian readers a misleading impression of the Georgian poet's work. Therefore, the addressee is asked to review the Book carefully before its publication.

Source: MGL, WUF №15.

Note: In the source, only the initial of Dmitry Polikarpov's name is mentioned, while for Simon Chikovani, only his first name and patronymic are provided. The discussion concerns the poem: "Кружилась вьюга птицей смелой..."

December

1945

December 2

The newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi publishes an article by G. Gugushvili titled "Galaktion Tabidze", which reviews Galaktion's poetry from the Soviet period.

Source: G. Gugushvili, Galaktion Tabidze, newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi, 1945, №238 (December 2), p. 4.

1945

December 2

The newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi publishes an article by Mikheil Alavidze titled "Galaktion Tabidze and Kutaisi", which discusses the poet's attitude towards Kutaisi.

Source: M. Alavidze, Galaktion Tabidze and Kutaisi, newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi, 1945, №238 (December 2), p. 4.

1945

December 2

In the newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi, a poem titled "Inscription on G. Tabidze's Book of Poems" is published under the pseudonym "Giorgi Giaseli", written by Giorgi Samkharadze.

Source: Newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi, 1945, №238 (December 2), p. 4.

1945

December 2

In the newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi, a poem titled "To Galaktion Tabidze" by Ruta Berodze is published.

Source: Newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi, 1945, №238 (December 2), p. 2.

1945

December 5

In the Russian newspaper Molodoy Stalinets, a translation by Vladimir Derzhavin of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Flags" is published.

Source: Знамена (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. В. Державин, Молодой сталинец, Тбилиси, 1945, 5 декабря, №14.

1945

December 6

He is in Kutaisi and writes an untitled poem: "I have seen many ruins...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №703; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 259.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "To Youth".

1945

December 6

At the Lado Meskhishvili Theater in Kutaisi, a youth meeting with Galaktion Tabidze is held. When the poet reads his poem "I and the Night", Dodo Antadze shouts from the stage, "Indeed, you are two in this world". After the evening concludes, admirers of poetry carry Galaktion in their arms to the hotel.

Source: L. Nutsunidze, Unforgettable, newspaper Kutaisi, December 4, 1982, N 232, p. 2.

1945

December 9

The poem "To Youth" ("I have seen many ruins...") is published in the newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi.

Source: Newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi, 1945, №243, p. 1.

1945

Until December 14

He writes a list of the birds and animals found in the Caucasus in his diary.

Source: MGL, d-170, 2-3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 434;

1945

Until December 14

He writes in his diary about his brother's stories regarding skilled individuals from various professions.

Source: MGL, d-170, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 435.

1945

Until December 14

In his diary, he writes a list of Georgian writers translated into Armenian: Ilia Chavchavadze, Lavrenti Ardaziani, Lalioni, and Egnate Ninoshvili. He thinks that for some reason, the Armenians are avoiding him. He believes this issue can be resolved and suspects that the Armenian translator and critic Suren Avchyan is not generous towards him because he is gathering materials for the Armenians.

Source: MGL, d-170, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 435.

Note: Suren Avchyan is mentioned in the source by his last name.

1945

December 14

He writes a poem “Dynamo”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-170, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 436.

1945

After December 14

He writes an untitled poem “At noon - when on the road...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2495; №244-d., p. 9-10; №5496; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 24.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “At Noon, When by the Sea” and untitled (with the beginning: “At noon, when by the sea...”).

1945

After December 14

He writes an untitled poem “Gradually, the southern night will descend from the sky...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-170, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 437.

Note: The poem was later published under the title “The West Trembles, Colouring the Sea Red”.

1945

After December 14

He writes an untitled poem “Oh, what an era we have to live in...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-170, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 438.

1945

After December 14

He writes an untitled poem “The sunbeam addressed the sea...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-170, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 438.

Note: The untitled poem “A Breeze Blows from the High Mountain...” exists in a three-stanza version.

1945

After December 14

Under the title “Paris”, he writes in his diary a poem by Ilia Chavchavadze, which is dedicated to the anniversary of the fall of the Paris Commune.

Source: MGL, d-170, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 438-439.

1945

December

He is in Kutaisi, where the “Galaktion’s Days” are being held. The poet is hosted on the stage of the Kutaisi Theatre. The event is held with great attendance. Galaktion reads poems, including “I and the Night”, “The Moon of Mtatsminda”, and “The Blue Horses”.

Source: L. Nutsubidze, Seen and Heard, magazine Gantiadi, 1993, № 3-4, p. 110.

1945

December

In the Kutaisi Theatre, he holds a meeting with the youth. Emerging poets read poems dedicated to him. Galaktion praises Lili Nutsubidze’s poem. He thanks the young woman and kisses her on the forehead. The meeting is concluded by Galaktion himself with a recitation of “I and the Night”. As he utters the last lines of the poem – “We are two on this earth, I and the night, I and the night” – the electricity suddenly goes out, plunging the hall into darkness. The actor Dodo Antadze calls out to Galaktion, who is standing in the middle of the stage, “Ah, sir, it seems you’ve succeeded; indeed, it is just the two of you left!”.

Source: L. Nutsubidze, Seen and Heard, magazine Gantiadi, 1993, № 3-4, p. 111.

1941-1945

On the street, he meets the writer Vano Ioseliani and the poet Akaki Gachechiladze, and they sit down somewhere for dinner. Galaktion and Vano reminisce about the days of the Petrograd Revolution. While discussing Flaubert and Dostoevsky, Galaktion reveals such a depth of knowledge about world prose that his conversation partners are left astonished. Suddenly, he catches sight of a bouquet of flowers in a window across the street and loudly recites a stanza from Russian poetry about roses and Carmen.

Source: A. Gatsrelia, Reeds and Gobelin, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 49-50.

Note: This could have been a phrase from Alexander Blok, who had an entire cycle on the theme of Carmen.

1941-1945

He writes a poem “In Europe”.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 204.

Dating: The first half of this poem is included with minor changes in the poem “From Zugdidi to Berlin”, which the poet wrote between 1941 and 1945.

1941-1945

He often visits the family of photographer Vasil Totochia. His overcoat pockets are usually filled with hard-to-find delicacies of the time, such as sausage and vodka. When the Totochias set the table, he unexpectedly pulls out his stash from his pockets to contribute. Once, the head of the family decides to play a prank - he secretly removes the sausage from Galaktion's coat pocket while it hangs on the rack. When Galaktion attempts to surprise everyone by taking out the sausage, he finds the pocket empty. Until the host reveals the hidden sausage, the poet believes he must have eaten it and forgotten.

Source: N. Pilpani, Two Photographs of Galaktion, newspaper Kutaisi, January 8, 1983, N 6, p. 4.

1945

Galaktion Tabidze's "Lyrics" is published in Tbilisi in Russian, which includes poems translated by Giorgi Tsagareli, and the artistic design is made by Severian Ketskhoveli.

Source: Табидзе Г.В. Лирика, Пер. с груз. Г. Цагарели, Ил. С.Н. Кецховели, Тбилиси, Заря Востока, 1945.

1945

He is visited by the collective of the newspaper Leninis Drosha from the Transcaucasian Military District. He examines a bundle of the newspaper's latest issues, and his attention is drawn to the notes of new marching and tactical songs. He praises the editorial initiative to attract talented non-professional soldier authors.

Source: P. Shamatava, The Day Begins With Victory, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 291-292;

1945

The day after Galaktion Tabidze's visit to the editorial office of the newspaper Leninis Drosha, Petre Shamatava sends Captain Boris Shetsiruli to Galaktion's home to ask him for a few poems for the newspaper. Galaktion warmly welcomes the journalist and offers him some poems.

Source: P. Shamatava, The Day Begins With Victory, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 296;

1945

Galaktion's poems and Shalva Radiani's article about his life and work are published on the third page of the newspaper Leninis Drosha. The editorial office delivers several copies of the newspaper to the poet's home, and he expresses his gratitude.

Source: P. Shamatava, The Day Begins With Victory, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 296;

1945

Soviet soldiers are very fond of his poems published in the newspaper Leninis Drosha, and they send Galaktion letters filled with love and gratitude. Among them is a letter from the commander Vakhtang Kordzaia from the active army.

Source: P. Shamatava, The Day Begins With Victory, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 296.

1945

While at the sanitary agitation theater, they are filmed on video.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 68; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 197.

1945

Shalva Radiani's Book "Georgian Literature of the Twentieth Century" is published, in which one chapter is dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze. The critic reiterates his views on the poet expressed in his earlier works.

Source: Sh. Radiani, "Georgian Literature of the Twentieth Century", 1945, p. 236-251.

1945

He translates two stanzas of his poem "The Idea of Genius Harmony" into Russian.

Source: MGL, d-656, 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 332.

1945 or later

He writes an autobiography.

Source: MGL, d-659, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 456;

After 1945

He writes an untitled poem "Though I recall many acquaintances, the Avalianis...".

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 624;

1945 or later

In the edition of the Georgian folktale "The King and the Peasant Woman", he underlines words and notes rhymes such as: "ხელმწიფე – მწიფე-მწიფე, ხე მწიფე", "დაბერდა – გადაფერდა", "მომეწონება – ხსოვნება, გონება", "მოუცადა – უწადა", "თელვა – ელვა", "ყიდავას – იღვას", "ქება მოთელა – იმოტელა".

Source: MGL, t-235, "The King and the Peasant Woman", Tbilisi, 1945.

1945 or later

He reads the Russian translation collection of his poems titled "Lyrics" and adds the dates of composition to the poems.

Source: GTSM, 1629, Табидзе Г. В., Лирика, Пер. с груз. Г. Цагарели, Тбилиси, Заря Востока, 1945.

1945

He writes an untitled poem "There Was a Small Oak...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5077; №533, G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 178.

Note: The poem is also found titled "A Small Oak Stood on the Summit".

1945

He reads Egnate Ninoshvili's collection of short stories, making highlights and notes.

Source: MGL, t-677, Eg. Ninoshvili, "Gogia Uishvili, Decree, Paliastomi Lake, Mose the Writer", Tbilisi, 1934.

1945

On the cover of Egnate Ninoshvili's collection of short stories, he writes that he should have a separate notebook for notes about the Academy of Sciences. He notes that Konstantine Gamsakhurdia's affairs put the Academy in great embarrassment and that an even bigger scandal is expected if Ioseb Grishashvili is elected as an academician. He plans to recall the details of the election of poets as kings, Maxim Gorky's words, and how Galaktion sounds proud. He is interested in who determines the program for his poems and considers having good readers to be of great importance.

Source: MGL, t-677, Eg. Ninoshvili, "Gogia Uishvili, Decree, Paliastomi Lake, Mose the Writer", Tbilisi, 1934.

1945

He familiarizes himself with the aviation terminology dictionary compiled by Vukol Beridze, making underlines and annotations.

Source: GTSM, 195, Aviation Terminology Dictionary, compiler V. Beridze, Tbilisi, 1940.

1946

Until 1946

He goes to the Gelati Monastery with Davit Kasradze. They find the church door open. They are greeted by Father Mate Kereselidze, a former publisher and ally of Philimon Khoridze. He is delighted to meet Galaktion and tells him that he knows his work well, particularly liking the poem "Creation", and refers to him as the "new god" of poetry. Galaktion blushes at this. Then the monk shows them around Gelati and speaks about the history of the church. The poet gazes in awe at the monastery and its surroundings, and suddenly feels the urge to sing. He asks Davit Kasradze to sing "You Are the Vineyard". Kasradze takes the lead, with Mate Kereselidze joining in the second voice, but Galaktion tries to add a bass part, which Kasradze shyly stops, suggesting they sing another time. Galaktion feels hurt and tells him that Ilya also didn't sing but was the first toastmaster at the table. Kasradze adds that during Ilya's toasts, his singing flaws were covered by the songs of Ilya Tsinamdzghvrishvili's disciples. Galaktion responds that at that time, symphonies were echoing in Ilya's heart because he was thinking of the 'recluse'.

Source: D. Kasradze, First Meeting, A Toast to Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 227-228.

January

1946

January 23-24

From 9 p.m. to 3 a.m., he reads William Shakespeare's play "Romeo and Juliet", translated by Boris Pasternak, together with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze.

Source: G. Tabidze's inscription on the book's title page, MGL, t-461, Вильям Шекспир, "Ромео и Джульетта", Перевод с английского Бориса Пастернака, Moscow-Leningrad, 1944.

1946

January 23-24

In the 1946-1950 plan of the Georgian Academy of Sciences, he makes highlights and notes. He marks the publications: “History of Georgia” and Arnold Chikobava’s “Georgian Language”.

Source: MGL, t-384, План научно-исследовательских работ Академии Наук Грузинской ССР на 1946-50 гг., Tbilisi, 1944.

1946

January 25

In his diary, he writes that Sergo Eristavi has passed away and was buried the day before at the Vake cemetery, noting that he had not been ill and died completely unexpectedly. He hears that many people attended the funeral, and Shalva Dadiani spoke there. In his diary, he writes about how those present at the procession joked about the speaker, pretending that the deceased had wiggled his moustache at the speaker’s words and shouted from the coffin, “I’ll come to you soon, and we’ll go drink wine together!”.

Source: MGL, d-168, 23; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 431.

1946

January 25

He writes a poem “Elegy” (“I spend sleepless nights: once again with joy...”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №175; №66-a, p. 1538; №3782; №242-d, p. 12; №242-d, p. 13; №242-d, p. 14; works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 254.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Sleepless Nights” and untitled (“I avoided wine...”, “I have begun my reckoning...”, and “I did not drink wine, but now I have started...”).

February

1946

After February 7

In the 53rd volume of the Great Soviet Encyclopaedia, an article and portrait about Galaktion Tabidze are published. The article notes that the early period of the prominent Georgian poet’s work is associated with the ideas of the bourgeois-democratic revolution of 1905. His first Book was published in 1914. During the period of reaction, influenced by the symbolists, his poems are characterized by motifs of sadness, hopelessness, and individualism, but he soon writes that he is ready to spread his wings in anticipation of the coming storm. After the Great October Revolution, he unconditionally aligns himself with the proletariat and the revolution. He writes a cycle of poems titled “Epoch”, “Pacifism”, and “Revolutionary Georgia”. During the Great Patriotic War, he publishes two collections of poems – “My Native Land” and “Homeland, My Life”, which are infused with patriotism. Galaktion Tabidze is a master of words; his poems are distinguished by expressiveness, a variety of images, musicality, originality of rhythm, and composition. In 1933, he was awarded the title of National Poet of the Republic, in 1936 he was awarded the Order of Lenin, and in 1944 he was elected a full member of the Georgian Academy.

Source: Табидзе Галактион, Большая Советская Энциклопедия, т. 53, Москва, 1946;

1946

February 8

He writes an untitled poem “When one passes along the Black Sea shore...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5241; №3318; №5490; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 308. For clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 688-689.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “By the Black Sea Shore” and untitled “When one passes along the Black Sea shore...”.

1946

Until February 9

He writes a poem “The Voice of the Creators” (“You are happy! You have the right to speak...”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №447; №4924; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 317.

Note: The poem is also found under the following titles: “February 9” and “Today I am Proud!”.

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1946

After February 15

In the Russian-language collection “Homeland” published by the ‘Zarya Vostoka’ publishing house, translations of eight poems by Galaktion Tabidze are featured. Among them are translations of the poems “Everyone Has Something to Remember” and “And The Straws Were Rustling, Rustling...” translated by Nikolai Tikhonov; “My Native Land” translated by Vladimir Derzhavin; and the poems “On Every Line”, “Let It Be a Toast for Him”, “When the Enemy Is Amused...” (three stanzas), “Our Shining Golden Age”, and “Flags Quickly!” translated by Giorgi Tsagareli.

Source: Collection “Родина”. Поэты Советской Грузии (1921-1946), Tbilisi, 1946, p. 160-168.

1946

February 24

The newspaper Sakhalkho Ganatleba publishes Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Homeland”.

Source: G. Tabidze, Homeland, newspaper Sakhalkho Ganatleba, February 26, 1946, №8, p. 3.

1946

February 24

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “A Toast to the Homeland” by Boris Serebryakov is published.

Source: Гост на Родину (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Перев. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1946, 24 февраля, №42.

1946

Until February 25

Under the title “My Native Land”, he summarizes events related to this poem in 21 points in his diary: the poem opened the collection “Georgian Writers of Soviet Georgia, dedicated to the 20th anniversary of Georgia’s annexation, published in 1941; along with other poems, it was published as a separate Book under this title in 1941; it was included in the Book “Homeland, Life” in 1943; in the 1942 Russian edition titled “My Native Land”, and in the 1946 Russian collection “Homeland”; it appeared in the selected poems of 1944 in the “Anthology of Georgian Poets” published in Moscow; a translation of the poem by Vladimir Derzhavin was published in the Russian newspaper Pravda on February 25, 1941, while Mykola Nachibin’s Ukrainian translation appeared in the same date’s issue of the Kyiv newspaper Komsomolets Ukrainy, and it was also translated into Armenian; the poem was broadcast several times on the radio in Tbilisi, Moscow, and other cities; the radio choir performed a song written by Valerian Tsagareishvili, read by Pierre Kobakhidze and Tamar Chavchavadze; on November 29, 1943, during an anniversary evening at the opera, the poet himself recited it, and during the same evening, Besarion Zhghenti noted in his presentation that this poem played a leading role in Georgian poetry; it was read at the Tbilisi Sanitary Theater and at the Japaridze Club, as well as in Gori and Kutaisi; it was published in regional newspapers.

Source: MGL, d-171, 1-5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 440-441.

1946

Until February 25

He writes an untitled poem “Somewhere Lazista Is Moaning...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-171, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 445.

1946

Until February 25

He writes an untitled poem “Thank you, city, for naming me, I am the genius of Georgia...”.

Source: Nino Kvirikadze’s record in G. Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-171, 23; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 445.

1946

February 25

Together with his wife, he attends Geno Kelbakiani’s comedy “The Appropriate Reward” at the Marjanishvili Theater, in which Galaktion Tabidze’s books are mentioned twice. They return home excited. Nino Kvirikadze notes that the Georgian intelligentsia deeply understands Galaktion’s greatness and that they plan to stage performances in Armenian, for young audiences, and other theatres.

Source: Nino Kvirikadze’s record in G. Tabidze’s notebook, MGL, d-171, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 441.

Note: Geno Kelbakiani is mentioned by his last name in the source.

1946

February 25

He has 400 roubles, of which he spends 20 roubles on cigarettes, 7 on the theater, and 7 on the cinema.

Source: Nino Kvirikadze's record in G. Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-171, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 441.

1946

February 25

In the Russian newspaper Sovetskaya Abkhazia, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Victory" by Boris Serebryakov is published.

Source: Победа (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Перевел с груз. Борис Серебряков, Советская Абхазия, Сухуми, 1946, 25 февраль, №42.

1946

February 26

He spends 20 roubles on cigarettes, 25 on shaving, 5 on the trolleybus, 80 on 200 grams of cocoa, 15 on milk, and 10 on bread, and he calculates that he spent 202 roubles in two days.

Source: Nino Kvirikadze's record in G. Tabidze's notebook, MGL, d-171, 6-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 441.

1946

February 28

He is on an excursion in Upper Dimi with Nino Kvirikadze, and his wife is writing a poem titled "To Gatunia" in a notebook.

Source: MGL, d-171, 20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 445.

March

1959

March 4

In the newspaper Sovetskaya Abkhazia, the poem "Abkhazia, Abkhazia!" is published.

Source: G. Tabidze, "Abkhazia, Abkhazia!", Sabtchota Abkhazeti, 1940, №140.

1946

March 9

The chairman of the Committee for Physical Culture and Sports, Alexandre Parulava, promises to arrange a meeting with him by April 5. In the meantime, he advises organizing a meeting with the Young Leninist Communist League (YLCL) and calls there himself.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-172, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 446-447.

Note: Alexandre Parulava is mentioned by his last name in the source.

1946

March 9

The secretary of the Tbilisi Committee of the Young Leninist Communist League (YLCL), Mamia Megrelishvili, promises to arrange a meeting with him by April 5, either at the Palace of Pioneers or at the Young Audience Theater, where the evening will be ticketed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-172, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 447.

Note: Mamia Megrelishvili is mentioned by his last name in the source.

1946

March 9

The Alexandre Japaridze Scientific Library plans to hold a meeting with Galaktion Tabidze at the San-Agit Theater on March 25, for which the entire library staff will be working. They believe they are avoiding publicity, which they dislike, and think they should find some way to prepare an effective idea and confront the cowardly organizers who are reluctant to print the poster. They agree that the participants should be announced on the poster, as an original poster will unexpectedly create a buzz and get everyone talking. They think that "Akaki and Galaktion" will be the poster for the major exhibition next year.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-172, 1-3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 447-448.

1946

March 13

Despite their commitments, the Alexandre Japaridze Scientific Library does nothing for four days to prepare for the evening with Galaktion Tabidze. Galaktion is taken to the Tbilisi Executive Committee to meet Ivane Buchashvili, who oversees the city's libraries. He asks why a loud poster 'Akaki and Galaktion' is necessary since the whole country knows him, and that is enough. He explains that it is important to note the literary heritage and parallels. Buchashvili promises to discuss this matter with the chairman of the Political Education Committee, Valerian Khatiashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-172, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 448.

Note: Ivane Buchashvili is mentioned by his last name in the source.

1946

March 13

Due to the evening event to be held at the Alexandre Japaridze Scientific Library, he goes to meet with the chairman of the Political Education Committee, Valerian Khatiashvili, and hands over the program, which assigns Simon Mchedlidze to clarify the matter, and coordinate with Simon Tsverava.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-172, 4-5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 448.

1946

March 14

He calls Simon Mchedlidze regarding the evening event to be held at the Alexandre Japaridze Scientific Library, but he is in a meeting and cannot be reached. Later, he meets him on Rustaveli Avenue and learns that Akaki Tsereteli's name will not be on the poster. He is dissatisfied and thinks that the matter should be approached differently.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-172, 6-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 449.

1946

Until March 18

In his notebook, he writes a draft of a speech in which he states that, on behalf of the Georgian intelligentsia, he supports Lavrenti Beria's candidacy for membership in the highest state body.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-480, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 335;

1946

After March 18

In the Book "Bouquet" published by the Children's Literature Publishing House, Galaktion Tabidze's poem "My Native Land" is included.

Source: Collection "Bouquet", Tbilisi, 1946, p. 240-241;

1946

March 25

The Alexandre Japaridze Scientific Library is organizing a meeting between readers and Galaktion.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-611, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 65.

April

1946

Until April 1

In his notebook, he drafts a poster for an event indicating that on April 1, 1946, a meeting with the National Poet of Georgia, Academician Galaktion Tabidze, will take place at the Marjanishvili Theater. The speaker will be Simon Tsverava. The event will feature participation from writers and actors, including Alexandre Abasheli, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Pierre Kobakhidze, Veriko Anjaparidze, and others. The last part of the evening will showcase the final act of Geno Kelbakiani's four-act comedy "The Appropriate Reward".

Source: MGL, d-467, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 229.

Dating: The date for the upcoming event is set for April 1, 1946, so the text was created prior to that.

1946

April 3

He writes a congratulatory letter to the newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi.

Source: M. Alavidze, Galaktion's Life and Poetry, magazine Gantiadi, 1992, № 11-12, p. 123.

1946

April 3

He sends a letter to Shota Kuridze, the former editor of the newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi. In the letter, he writes that the newspaper plays an important role in strengthening Georgian poetry and congratulates it on its 25th anniversary.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-154; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 68; For dating: M. Alavidze, Galaktion's Life and Poetry, magazine Gantiadi, 1992, № 11-12, p. 123.

1946

April 20

He receives a letter from Z. Natroshvili, a resident of the village of Zemo Machkhaani, who introduces himself under the pseudonym "Alexandre Machkhaneli". Natroshvili writes that since 1945, he has been working on an epic poem titled "Galaktion Tabidze" and has completed 30 chapters but needs more biographical information to continue. He mentions that he has read everything Galaktion has published and everything written about him but is dissatisfied with the lack of biographical details and the absence of any substantial poetic work about Galaktion. He offers to send several chapters of the poem if the recipient wishes and notes that if Galaktion provides him with notes about his life, he could complete the poem by 1950.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-484-b; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299.

Note: In Galaktion's archive, numerous poems dedicated to him are preserved, but nothing by this author has been found.

1946

April 22

He writes an untitled poem: "Ruined temple, standing by the Black Sea shore...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №901; №6807; №1286; №5485; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 276.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "Sonnet," "Ruins Standing on the Heights," "By the Black Sea," "Ruins by the Sea," and untitled ("Ruined temple, standing on the heights...").

1946

April 27

A letter arrives at the address of the Georgian Writers' Union from Khukhuti Bghazhba, the responsible secretary of the Soviet Writers' Union of Abkhazia. He informs that on May 16 of the current year, the Abkhazian Writers' Union plans to hold a literary evening dedicated to Galaktion's work at the Sokhumi State Theatre. Since the evening is intended to take place with the poet's participation and will require his travel to Sokhumi, he asks for confirmation of the event's date.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-452-d; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 298.

1946

April

He writes a poem “The Eucalyptus Sapling”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №736; 3321; 5494; N. Kvirikadze’s manuscript, №5243; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 16.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “The Trunk of the Eucalyptus is a Sapling to Me” and untitled “Your remembrance...”.

May

1946

After May 4

The Book “Essays on Artistic Creativity” by Giorgi Jibladze is published, which includes an essay dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze. The author discusses Galaktion’s poetry according to the approaches developed in Soviet criticism. The critic distinguishes two periods in the poet’s work and thematically characterizes each of them.

Source: G. Jibladze, “Essays on Artistic Creativity”, 1946, p. 55-62.

Dating: The Book is signed for publication on May 4, 1946.

1946

Until May 5

He sends a letter to Sergo Jinchvelashvili, in which he promises to publish the material sent by him and to work on the publication of Akaki Tsereteli’s memoirs.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-221; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 259.

Dating: The fact is mentioned in Sergo Jinchvelashvili’s letter dated May 5, 1946.

1946

After May 5

He receives a letter from Irakli Topadze, who notes that Tbilisi has grown weary without Galaktion and wonders where he has been for so long. He writes that he has reread Galaktion’s latest Book several times and finds it flawless in every way. He is amazed by the variety of poetic forms, which he believes have elevated Georgian poetry to new heights, and calls the author a high priest of poetry. He mentions being deeply moved by the poems “On Irmigal” and “The Man Who Dared”, in which the author seems to directly address him. He writes that he wanted to inform Galaktion about the conferences but knows he would not be interested in an environment where people do not speak sincerely. He inquires about Galaktion’s grown beard, asks him to send a photograph, and promises to paint him again upon his return.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-221; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 259-260.

1946

May 7

He writes an untitled poem “I saw you – shoulders bent...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №645; №4004; №6794; №4129; №8358; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, 1968, p. 17.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “In the Vineyards”, “Khelkhvavi” (name of choral harvesting song), “Memory”, and an untitled poem beginning with “I saw you: shoulders bent...”.

1954

December 28-31

He writes a poem titled “The New Truth” (“Our lyre has found...”).

Source: Autograph, MGL, №292-d, p. 11-12; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 224; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 655.

1946

May 7

He writes an untitled poem: “Unforgiven! In your heart, one...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №646; №8358; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 16.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Romance” and untitled “When I look at you – in my heart, one...”.

1946

May 15

In the Russian newspaper Sovetskaya Abkhazia, translations of Galaktion Tabidze’s poems “Caucasus”, “Everyone Has Something to Remember”, “Kazbek”, “Victory”, and “Toast to the Motherland” are published.

Source: Newspaper “Советская Абхазия”, 1946, №96, p. 3.

1946

May 15

The newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti publishes Galaktion’s poem “Homeland”.

Source: Newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti, 1946, №95, p. 3.

1946

May 15

The Russian newspaper Sovetskaya Abkhazia publishes an article by Khukhuti Bghazhba, titled “The National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze”, which reviews the path of the poet’s creative evolution.

Source: Newspaper “Советская Абхазия”, 1946, №96, p. 3.

1946

May 15

The newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti publishes Khuta Berulava's poem dedicated to Galaktion, titled "The Dear Guest".

Source: Newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti, 1946, №95, p. 3.

1946

May 15

The newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti publishes Shalva Tabidze's poem dedicated to Galaktion, titled "To the National Poet".

Source: Newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti, 1946, №95, p. 3.

1946

May 15

The newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti publishes a notice that Galaktion's "Selected Works" was recently released. It consists of five sections and includes an essay by Shalva Radiani titled "The Works of Galaktion Tabidze".

Source: Newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti, 1946, №95, p. 3.

1946

May 15

The newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti publishes an announcement from the board of the Union of Soviet Writers of Abkhazia, stating that on May 16, a grand literary evening dedicated to Georgia's National Poet, Galaktion Tabidze, will be held at the Summer Theater of the Abkhazian State Philharmonic. Simon Tsverava will deliver a presentation on Galaktion's works, and the poet himself will also speak. The event will conclude with a concert segment.

Source: Newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti, 1946, №95, p. 3.

1946

May 15

The newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti publishes an article by Khukhuti Bghazhba titled "The Pride of Contemporary Georgian Poetry". The author reviews the stages of Galaktion's poetic career, noting that he played a pivotal role in the development of modern Georgian poetry.

Source: Kh. Bghazhba, "The Pride of Contemporary Georgian Poetry", Newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti, 1946, №95, p. 3.

1946

May 17

He travels to Sokhumi.

Source: N. Venadze, The National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze, in Sokhumi, Newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti, 1946, №99 (May 26), p. 2.

1946

May 17

The Russian newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazia publishes a notice that on May 17, an evening dedicated to the works of Georgia's National Poet, Galaktion Tabidze, will be held at the Summer Theater of the Sokhumi State Philharmonic.

Source: Newspaper "Советская Абхазия", 1946, №97, p. 4.

1946

May 17

A literary evening dedicated to Galaktion's works is being held at the Sokhumi State Theater.

Source: N. Venadze, The National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze, in Sokhumi, Newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti, 1946, №99 (May 26), p. 2.

1946

After May 18

In the directory of the South Ossetian Scientific Research Institute, he makes highlights and comments.

Source: MGL, t-315, Известия Юго-Осетинского научно-исследовательского института академии наук Грузинской ССР, Выпуск I (V), Stalinir, 1946.

1946

After May 18

He examines the cover of the South Ossetian Scientific Research Institute's directory and sees a subtle reference to his own work in the otherwise standard graphic design. The Book features an illustration of seven volumes, four stacked vertically and three horizontally. In his mind, he draws a parallel to the publication of his collected works - of the planned seven volumes, four have already been published, and three are still pending. On the Book cover itself, he writes this observation, noting that the lower section also depicts an inkwell with two pens resting on it, symbolizing that the writing continues.

Source: MGL, t-315, Известия Юго-Осетинского научно-исследовательского института академии наук Грузинской ССР, Выпуск I (V), Stalinir, 1946.

1946

After May 18

In response to the statement in the introductory letter of the South Ossetian Scientific Research Institute's directory that the history of the Georgian people includes a notable chapter of the struggle for the country's liberation, he writes that every page of Georgia's history is magnificent.

Source: MGL, t-315, Известия Юго-Осетинского научно-исследовательского института академии наук Грузинской ССР, Выпуск I (V), Stalinir, 1946, p. 3.

1946

After May 18

In the introduction of the South Ossetian Scientific Research Institute's directory, under the phrase about extensive work being conducted in the field of archaeology, he writes a note emphasizing that great caution is needed during excavations, as much can be lost.

Source: MGL, t-315, Известия Юго-Осетинского научно-исследовательского института академии наук Грузинской ССР, Выпуск I (V), Stalinir, 1946, p. 3.

1946

After May 18

At the end of the introductory letter of the South Ossetian Scientific Research Institute's directory, he adds Giorgi Kuchishvili's words: "To Galaktion, glorified by the people".

Source: MGL, t-315, Известия Юго-Осетинского научно-исследовательского института академии наук Грузинской ССР, Выпуск I (V), Stalinir, 1946, p. 3.

1946

May 19

He writes an untitled poem: "Thank you, Abkhazia...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4635; №6550-6551; №108-a, p. 2955; №1645-∞; №5524; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 17.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "Thank You, Abkhazia" and untitled ("A song of gratitude...").

1946

May 20

His evening is taking place in the Grand Hall of the Abkhazian State Philharmonic. At the end of the event, he reads poems from the Abkhaz cycle. Afterwards, he explores the Sokhumi Botanical Garden, the Bagrati Fortress, and the Besleti Bridge with Dimitri Guliashvili and other poets, taking photos along the way.

Source: N. Venadze, The National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze, in Sokhumi, newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti, 1946, №99 (May 26), p. 2; Kh. Bghazhba, Unforgettable meetings, newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti, November 2, 1973, N 215, p. 3.

1946

May 20

He speaks with a correspondent from Sabtchota Abkhazia, expressing gratitude for the literary evening held in his honour and announcing that the Abkhazian State Publishing House plans to publish a collection of his poems in the near future.

Source: N. Venadze, The National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze, in Sokhumi, Newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti, 1946, №99 (May 26), p. 2.

1946

May 20

He returns to Tbilisi from Sokhumi.

Source: Newspaper “Советская Абхазия”, 1946, №100, p. 1.

1946

May 21

The newspaper Sovetskaya Abkhazia publishes a translation of the poem “Thank You, Abkhazia...”.

Source: Советская Абхазия, Сухуми, 1946, №99.

1946

May 21

The newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti publishes an article titled “Georgia’s National Poet Galaktion Tabidze in Sokhumi”, signed by N. Venadze. It discusses the poetry evening dedicated to Galaktion held in Sokhumi on May 17 and notes that the poet spent several days in Abkhazia, meeting with representatives of the local intelligentsia and touring the sights.

Source: N. Venadze, The National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze, in Sokhumi, Newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti, 1946, №99 (May 26), p. 2.

1946

May 21

The newspaper Sovetskaya Abkhazia publishes an article titled “Georgia’s National Poet Galaktion Tabidze in Sokhumi”, which recounts the poetry evening dedicated to Galaktion held in Sokhumi on May 20. It mentions that during his stay in Sokhumi, the poet wrote several poems; the Abkhazian State Publishing House is preparing a new collection of his works, and work is also underway in Moscow to publish a one-volume collection of Galaktion’s writings.

Source: Newspaper “Советская Абхазия”, 1946, №100, p. 1.

1946

May 26

The newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti publishes Galaktion’s untitled poem “Thank You, Abkhazia...”.

Source: Newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazeti, 1946, №99 (May 26), p. 2.

June

1946

April 1 – June 9

He writes an untitled poem “I Conclude with These Words...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-173, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 451.

1946

April 1 – June 9

He writes an untitled poem “It Rotates Equally...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-173, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 451.

1946

April 1 – June 8

He writes a poem “Giorgi”, dedicated to Giorgi Kuchishvili.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-173, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 451-452.

1946

April 1 – June 8

He begins writing a poem titled “Mother by the Breast”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-173, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 452.

1946

April 1 – June 8

He writes an untitled poem “I Didn’t Want to Confess to You...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-173, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 452.

1946

April 1 – June 8

He is working on the fourth volume of his works, citing and explaining lines from the following poems: “The Path of Victory” (“Victory will bring us together again...”), “Hey, Homeland!”, “Oath”, “Connection Between Hearts”, “A New Page of History”, “As a Lyre In Front Of Me”, “Lullaby”, and “Light in the East”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-173, 16-21; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 453-454.

1946

April 1 – June 8

He writes an untitled poem “O Heart of My Poems!”...

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-173, 23; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 454.

1946

April 1 – June 8

He writes an untitled poem “Oh! Wounded by Those Hopes!”...

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-173, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 454.

1946

Until June 10

He writes a poem “The Book”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №515; №768; №713; №2036; N. Kvirikadze’s manuscript, №4636; №5250; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 18.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “With the Book!” and untitled (with the beginnings “In the arena of these choices...” and “There is turmoil outside...”); For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 532.

1946

Until June 11

He writes a poem “The Sea Breeze”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5490; №5471; N. Kvirikadze’s manuscript, №5252. G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 10.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “The Great Oak” and untitled “The sea breeze rushes swiftly...”. For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 532.

1946

Until June 11

He writes an untitled poem “My girl!...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, N. Kvirikadze’s manuscript, №5252. №5254; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 9; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 533.

1946

Until June 11

He writes an untitled poem “Some were ringing, some were ploughing...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, N. Kvirikadze’s manuscript, №1387; №5251; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 10.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“Some things were heard...”); For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 533.

1946

June 16

His brother, Abesalom Tabidze, has him sign a humorous document stating that Galaktion will arrive in Chkvishi on June 30 and will bring with him the manuscripts, which he will present to the Abkhazian State Publishing House after processing them.

Source: MGL, d-572, 20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 368-369.

1946

Until June 17

He writes an untitled poem “Here is an old man with a strong waist...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3318; №5490; N. Kvirikadze’s manuscript, №2506; N. Kvirikadze’s manuscript, №5470; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 11.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “An Old Man Came on the Ship” and untitled (“An old man came slowly...”; “An old man came on the ship...”); For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 533.

1946

Until June 17

He writes an untitled poem “There is a string on the land...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2027; №5482; N. Kvirikadze’s manuscript, №1876; N. Kvirikadze’s manuscript, №5258; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 11.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Decorated in Abkhazian”; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 534.

1946

Until June 17

He writes a poem “That Joy”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5183; №5494-5495; №2028; N. Kvirikadze’s manuscript, №5245; N. Kvirikadze’s manuscript, №1882; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 12.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“From the beginning, what beauty...”); For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 534.

1946

Until June 18

He writes a poem “The Ancient Tskhumi is Silent”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3319; №5491; N. Kvirikadze’s manuscript, №2488; N. Kvirikadze’s manuscript, №5468; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 26.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“The night is calm and quiet...”); For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 535.

1946

Until June 20

He writes an untitled poem “There have been bitter days...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2027; №5482; N. Kvirikadze’s manuscript, №1877; N. Kvirikadze’s manuscript, №5246; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 13.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “There Have Been Days of the Sea” and untitled (beginning with: “There have been days of the Black Sea...”; “There have been days of the sea...”); For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 535.

1946

Until June 20

He writes an untitled poem “That space is airy...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3314; №5478; N. Kvirikadze’s manuscript, №2508; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 14.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “The Golden Trireme”; “The Gazelle Looked for a Long Time” and untitled (“That space is airy...”); For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 535.

1946

June 24

He writes a poem titled “The Noise of the Lion” (“In the forest, whether it’s day or dark...”).

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-251, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 30;

1946

June 26

He writes a poem “Look, What a Sky!”

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-251, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 30;

1946

After June 26

In the anthology of contemporary Russian literature, he makes emphases and sketches, while he writes rhymes on the margin.

Source: MGL, t-416, Современная Литература, Хрестоматия для 10-го класса средней школы, Moscow, 1946.

1946

Until June 29

He writes a poem “Beethoven is Different...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5516N. Kvirikadze’s autograph, №1875; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 14; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 53.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“Many are the bearers of voices...”).

1946

Until June 29

He writes an untitled poem “Once... 20 years ago”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, N. Kvirikadze’s manuscript, №4688-4689; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 12; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 537.

1946

June 31

He writes a draft of a request for the subscription to French-language literary-artistic journals for the following year.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-596, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 518.

July

1946

After July 4

He receives a letter from his brother. Abesalom informs him that Petre Charaia had a work titled "Abkhazia and the Abkhazians", which Mose Janashvili included in its entirety in a Book of the same title published in Russian. He advises Galaktion, since he is writing on the topic of Abkhazia, to obtain and familiarize himself with this book. He reminds him that Akaki Tsereteli's "Fosterer" is also written about the Abkhazians. He suggests that Galaktion visit him in Samtredia with his wife and work there. He sends his regards to Nina Kvirikadze.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, h-24551-333; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 176.

1946

July 16

He writes a poem "Juga and Asinda".

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №400, p. 45.

Dating: The text is first mentioned in the list compiled for the fourth volume.

1946

After July 16

In his diary, he outlines the plan for the fourth volume of his works in twelve points: I. Addition of a preface ("Golden Harp"). II. Sea Lyrics. III. Abkhazia with Historical Monuments. IV. The Present of Abkhazia. V. Motifs of Friendship Among Nations. VI. Folklore. VII. Motifs in Art. VIII. On Art – "Art is long, life is short" (Ars longa, vita brevis). IX. Poems: "Juga and Asinda", "Bambura Mura". X. Merkheula. XI. Conclusion – "My Native Land". XII. Conclusion – "Thank You, Abkhazia". He notes that the numbering of the poems should be done in Roman numerals from beginning to end, while dates and locations should be in petit font.

Source: MGL, d-174, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 459;

1946

After July 16

He writes an untitled poem "There Are Other Countries...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №766; 108-a, p. №2954; №3316; №4779; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 65.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "They Don't Have the Sea"; "The Sea and the Mountains" and untitled ("And there are other countries...").

1946

After July 16

He writes an untitled poem “From the Sea, the Abkhaz Speech Resonates...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 460.

1946

After July 16

He writes the first six stanzas of the untitled poem “Grandma’s Glasses”: “The whole hour has passed - at the edges of the box...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 460-461.

1946

After July 16

He edits the last stanza of the poem “Thank You, Abkhazia”, dated May 19, 1946, titled “The Song of Gratitude...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 460-461.

1946

After July 16

In his diary, he writes about issues to clarify regarding the sea: the territory that the sea occupies in Georgia; republics that do not have access to the sea; the sea in the folklore and literature of Abkhazia and Adjara; the theme of the sea in “The Knight in the Panther’s Skin”; the sea and atomic energy; and “New Athos” from the 1910 “Caucasian Calendar”.

Source: MGL, d-174, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 460-461.

1946

After July 16

In his diary, he notes the themes for poems to be written: Somewhere, Tkvarcheli, Enguri, Bzipi, New Athos, “The Whinnying of the Horse”, Rapid Kodori, Erlakhi, Ketvani, Abriskili, Makhajiroba, Lute, “Apkhiartsa” (a musical instrument similar to Lute), agricultural gardens, the nature of Abkhazia, the giant sea, heroism, and love.

Source: MGL, d-174, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 461-462.

1946

After July 16

In his diary, he notes the toponyms for which he already has poems or intends to create them: Paris, Versailles, Tuileries, the Elysian Fields, the Bois de Boulogne, Père Lachaise, Notre-Dame, Trianon, Moscow, Petrograd, Kyiv, Nezhin, Ukraine, Donbas, Sokhumi, Bedia, Ritsa, Gali, Mtsara, Gudauta, Esheri, Drandi, Ilori, Mokvi, New Athos, Tamishi, Tkvarcheli, Gulripshi, Tbilisi, Batumi, Kutaisi, Gori, Tianeti, Kazbegi, Dzaugi, the Georgian Military Road, Gelati, Mtskheta, the railway from Sokhumi to Moscow, Khaerize, Psyrtskha, Gagra, Kilasuri, Reims, Warsaw, Berlin, and the station Negoreloe. He also lists the names of the ships he has travelled on: “Georgia”, “Abkhazia”, “Ukraine”, and “Daland”.

Source: MGL, d-174, 19-20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 462.

1946

After July 16

He writes a poem “The Whinny of the Horse”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 23; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 463.

1946

After July 16

He writes an untitled poem “I Love the Glint of Dew in the Morning Sun...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 24-25; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 464-465.

1946

After July 16

While writing poems, he notes the time and counts how many lines he writes in a minute. He then calculates the average and determines that he writes 2,400 lines in one hour.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 25; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 465.

1946

After July 16

He writes a poem titled “Apkhyartsa”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 24-25; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 470-471.

Note: The poem was later published, with an estimated date of 1941-1945. However, it is believed that it should be dated to 1946.

1946

After July 16

In his diary, he outlines a 12-point plan for the Book to be published by the Abkhaz State Publishing House: the inclusion of a preface (“Golden Lyre”), sea lyricism, Abkhazia with historical monuments, contemporary Abkhazia, themes of friendship among nations, folklore, the saying “Art is long, life is short” (Ars longa vita brevis), poems such as “Juga and Asinda” and “Bambura Mura”, miscellaneous works, a conclusion titled “My Native Land” and a final section titled “Thank You, Abkhazia”. He expresses the desire for the numbering of the poems to be done in Roman numerals from beginning to end, while dates and places should be noted in a petit font.

Source: MGL, d-174, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 459;

1946

July 19

He writes an untitled poem “The memory saw in your shadow...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №569; №4634; №6557; №3321; №5494; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 16.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Eucalyptus”, “To the Eucalyptus”, “Under the Shadow of the Eucalyptus”.

1946

July 25

He writes a poem “Bold and Strong Hand”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2515; №3535; №2040-2041; №5521-5522; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 20.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Inscription on the Abkhazian Translation of The Knight in the Panther’s Skin” and untitled (“Bold and Strong Hand...”).

1946

July 25

He writes a poem “The Sea Has Roared”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3354; N. Kvirikadze’s autograph, №1294; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 22.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “The Sea Has Roared” and untitled (“The sea has roared with a dull roar...”).

1946

July 31

He writes an autobiography in Russian.

Source: MGL, d-659, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 453-455.

1946

July 31

He drafts a request in Russian, asking for a subscription to French-language magazines for the year 1947.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-596, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 518.

August

1946

August 6

He learns that the Academy of Sciences plans to acquire cars for its members in the month of August. Because he is ill and cannot oversee the distribution, he sends a letter to Mirdat, an employee of the Academy of Sciences, asking him to ensure that no one is left off the already compiled list during the distribution of the cars.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-74; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 68-69.

1946

After August 10

In Ivane Ioseliani's collection of short stories, he makes highlights and comments.

Source: MGL, t-59, Iv. Ioseliani, stories, Tbilisi, 1946, p. 5, 9, 25, 157, 159.

1946

After August 14

Above the preface of Polio Ireteli's collection of stories, it is written: "Polio loves Mu...raba". After reading the story "Isako Sings," he recalls Isako, whom he knew well. Isako worked at the city's administration, danced excellently, and helped everyone, including Shio Mghvimele. He mentions that they also used to drink together on the historical balcony mentioned in the story in 1921-1922. He also knew Isako's son, who was a very brave man, but would end every party with a scandal, and then he would get away with it, while Galaktion would end up tangled in the trouble.

Source: MGL, t-58, P. Ireteli, stories, Tbilisi, 1946, p. I, 162.

1946

August 23

He buys folders.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-592, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 489.

1946

August 23

He makes a note that the previous night, Alpez Kheladze's wife got crazy.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-592, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 489.

1946

August 24

In his diary, he writes that in the August heat, people, especially women, often talk to themselves while walking in the street.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-592, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 489.

1946

August 24

He makes a note that at midnight, his brother Abesalom got up and was about to go shopping at the market until Nino Kvirikadze convinced him otherwise.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-592, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 489-490.

1946

August 24

He makes a note that the state publishing house is supposed to release his Book in the last quarter of the current year, but he has nothing ready yet. He thinks that something has severely hindered his progress. He also mentions that he has a Book about Abkhazia partially prepared.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-592, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 490.

1946

August 25

He makes a note about his current work, indicating that he is preparing the fifth and sixth volumes of his writings, as well as a Book titled "The Art of Poetry".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-615, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 101-102.

1946

August 26

He receives a letter from Giorgi Kuchishvili from Kvishkheti. The letter informs him that their mutual acquaintance, Kote Vepkhvadze, performed surgery on him, and now he is resting in Kvishkheti. He writes that he has many visitors, but the letter from Galaktion made him the happiest. It reminded him of their travels together in the regions of Georgia. He hopes that Galaktion's work on the Book about Abkhazia will be successfully completed. He expresses satisfaction that Galaktion's brother, Abesalom, has moved to Tbilisi to live. He inquires about him and Galaktion's wife, Nino Kvirikadze.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-464; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 285.

1946

August 29

He sends a reply letter to Giorgi Kuchishvili. He writes that their fate is very similar. He notes that it is rare to find a poet as humble and honest as Giorgi Kuchishvili. Galaktion recalls the times they spent together. He sends his greetings to his wife and brother.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. XII, Tbilisi, 1975, p. 550.

1946

August 30

He writes an autobiography.

Source: MGL, d-659, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 463-466.

1946

August 31

He writes an autobiography in Russian.

Source: MGL, d-659, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503-505.

September

1946

July 17– September 2

He writes a plan for the poem “Symphony for Giorgoba” dedicated to Giorgi Kuchishvili. He intends to showcase the nature of his native village and how it reflects in Kuchishvili’s work. Under the title “Street Symphony”, he plans to combine three periods: the old, the revolutionary, and the industrial-collective.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 28; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 472.

Note: Giorgi Kuchishvili is mentioned by his first name in the source.

1946

July 17– September 2

He writes one stanza of the untitled poem dedicated to Giorgi Kuchishvili “Symphony for Giorgi”, “And the storm broke in...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 28; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 472.

1946

July 17– September 2

He writes an untitled poem “From the sea echoes the speech of Abkhaz...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 30; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 474.

Note: The title “Enguri” is crossed out.

1946

July 17– September 2

He writes the first five stanzas of the poem titled “From the Ark” “Greened Crook” for the poem “Jackal-Fox”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 32, 34; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 474-475.

Note: The title “Conversation in the Zoo” is crossed out.

1946

July 17– September 2

In the diary, he draws portraits of Titsian Tabidze.

Source: MGL, d-174, 32, 50; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 474.

1946

July 17– September 2

He thinks he should revive the poem “Yellow Leaf”, which was printed in the magazine Ganatleba. He read it at an evening event in Kutaisi, boldly like a rebel. The audience listened with rapt attention and rewarded him with thunderous applause. Akaki Tsereteli, who attended the evening, praised him and asked if he was from Racha, as the people from Racha speak so expressively. He thought that Galaktion Tabidze was not just reading the poem but singing it, and that it was a true Georgian recitation.

Source: MGL, d-174, 35-36; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 475-476.

1946

September 3

From 1908 to 1946, he outlines the contents of 46 folders to organize materials reflecting his life and creativity. Among them are: magazines and newspapers, iconographic materials, correspondence, handwritten works of others, handwritten and printed poems about him; letters and messages from the front, evenings of front-line soldiers at the Writers’ Palace; the 1918 jubilee at the Conservatory, the 1923 jubilee at the Rustaveli Theatre, jubilee celebrations at the Opera Theatre in 1928, 1933, and 1943, the 1938 jubilee at the Writers’ Union, the 1934 evening in Leningrad, the 1940 evening in Saguramo, evenings at the Batumi Pedagogical Institute, in Gori, Abkhazia, Kutaisi, Moscow, at Tbilisi University, in Beria’s club, in Nadzaladevi, in Navtlughi, at the Philharmonic and on the funicular, at the Ilia Chavchavadze school, in the Palace of Pioneers; materials from the seminar and the magazine Paskunji; materials about cinema and painter-sculptors, musical works, and materials from artists and readers who participated in his evenings; insights into how artists, sculptors, and actors understand his poems; materials from Chkhorotsku, Kutaisi, and Baghdati; and travels in Kakheti, Donbass, and Paris.

Source: MGL, d-174, 37, 39; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 476-477.

1946

September 3

To organize literary materials, he outlines the contents of 50 folders: the first Book of poems – 1914, “Artistic Flowers” – 1919, “John Reed” – 1924, a monograph on a bibliophile – 1921, poems – 1927, “Epoch” – 1930, “Revolutionary Georgia” – 1931, “Pacifism” – 1930, Volume I of works – 1937, Volume II – 1935, Volume III – 1940, “Akaki Tsereteli” – 1940, “Lyrics” – 1940, “My Native Land” – 1942, “Land of My Life” – 1943, “Gold in the Azure of Adjara” – 1944, a selection – 1945; editions of poems in Russian – 1933, 1937, 1938, 1940, 1942, 1945; “Galaktion Tabidze’s Magazines”, the magazine Lomisi, the bulletin “Galaktion” – 1927, materials from the magazine Mnatobi, documents from the Writers’ Union and the Academy of Sciences; materials from the 1944 Decade of Georgian Literature and Art in Moscow, a description of Moscow; materials on the theater, about Tbilisi, Svaneti, Meskheta, and Pshavi-Khevsureti; unfinished poems should be stored separately, including poems such as “The Shepherd”, “Memories of the Days When I was Young”, “Amirani”, “The Strong Disease”, “Thoughts by the Desk”, “Juga and Asinda”, “The Secret of the Fortress”, “Cafe of Three Palms”, “Getera”, “The Grave Digger”, “Elguja’s Return”, and “John Reed”.

Source: MGL, d-174, 40-41; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 477-478.

1946

September 3

To organize the historical materials of his poems, he outlines the contents of 46 folders: “Blue Horses”, “The Moon Over Mtatsminda”, “Pirimze”, “Snow”, “Mary”, “I and the Night”, “Peach Flowers”, “From the Themes of Autumn”, “After the Storm”; regarding “Lart poetique” – 57 poems from the 1927 book, poems from Volumes I, II, and III of his works, from the poem “A Conversation About Lyricism”, from the Book about Abkhazia, from “Gold in the Azure Adjara”, from the newspaper “Day of Poetry”, from the magazine Lomisi, from Galaktion Tabidze’s Journal, and others; poems written about friendship among nations, plans, enemies, contracts, the teaching period, radio, the Gurjaani evening, the 1905 revolution, posters from World War II; Russian translations of poems dedicated to him, a Russian magazine, materials from the newspaper Komunisti; Armenian translations, folders related to Azerbaijan, Ukraine, and Ossetia; plans for books for Moscow, State Publishing House, and Children’s Literature Publishing House; photos, manuals, fellow poets, Rustaveli Theatre, Marjanishvili Theatre, and the Opera Theatre; materials related to the sea theme and Georgian schools; materials about him and Akaki Tsereteli, as well as about him and Shio Mghvimeli.

Source: MGL, d-174, 42-43; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 478.

1946

Until September 6

He addresses a statement to the rector of the Tbilisi Medical Institute, Konstantine Eristavi. He informs him that his nephew, Vasil Tabidze son of Prokles, studied in the first year of the Medical Institute’s Faculty of Medicine last year. He passed all the exams in the first semester but was unable to do so in the second semester due to illness. He submits a medical certificate and requests that his nephew be reinstated to the first year.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-282; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 137;

1946

September 6

At the Third Congress of Soviet Writers of Georgia, Petre Sharia reads a report titled “Paths of Development of Georgian Soviet Literature”. The speaker sharply criticizes the “Academic Group”, the “Tsisperkantselis” group, and the Futurists group, after which he mentions Galaktion Tabidze, stating that he is the greatest representative of Georgian poetry in the first half of the twentieth century, who broke through the anti-revolutionary front of writers and turned towards the Soviet platform. According to Sharia, Galaktion “took a commendable step that his older spiritual brother, Alexander Blok, took in Russian literature”.

Source: P. A. Sharia. “Paths of Development of Georgian Soviet Literature” (Report read at the Third Congress of Soviet Writers of Georgia on September 9, 1946). Revised stenographic record. Publisher Komunisti, Tbilisi, 1947. p. 10 – 12.

1946

September 7

Nino Kvirikadze presents him with Leonid Leonov’s Book “Articles from the War Years”, inscribed: “To my Gatunia, from his Nutsiko”.

Source: MGL, t-348, Л. Леонов, “Статьи военных Лет”, Moscow, 1946.

1946

September 7

Tamara Chavchavadze reads Galaktion Tabidze’s poems for half an hour on the morning radio, including “My Song”, “Hey, Homeland”, “The Present of the People”, “The Tomorrow of the People”, “The Great Future of the People”, “The Foundation of New Tbilisi”, and “Gori”. The poet is very pleased with the broadcast.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-155, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 318-319.

1946

September 7

At the III Congress of Soviet Writers of Georgia, the chairman of the Writers’ Union, Simon Chikovani, delivers an introductory speech. He presents a seven-year report on the activities of the Writers’ Union since the II Congress held in 1939. He notes that during World War II, Georgian writers worked selflessly to defeat fascist Germany. From the older generation, he primarily mentions Galaktion Tabidze and his poem “Homeland, Life!”

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, September 18, 1946, №188, p. 3.

1946

After September 7

He reads Leonid Leonov’s Book “Articles from the War Years”, making highlights and notes.

Source: MGL, t-348, Л. Леонов, “Статьи военных Лет”, Moscow, 1946.

1946

Until September 8

He writes an untitled poem “Reality and Dream...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-175, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 501;

1946

September 8

In his diary, he notes a phrase from Parmen Loria's speech at the III Congress of Writers of Georgia, expressing astonishment at the sensations caused during the evening event held in the Writers' Union for the young poet Ana Kalandadze, stating that this occurs in a country "where Iliia, Vazha were, and where Galaktion is.

Source: MGL, d-175, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 502.

Note: Parmen Loria is referenced in the source by his last name.

1946

After September 10

In the preface to Johann Wolfgang Goethe's poetry collection translated by Khariton Vardoshvili, he emphasizes the lines of the poems and the notes. He numbers the rhymes and writes that translators always make use of others' rhythms and rhymes, noting that the Book contains three hundred such rhymes. The author likely thought no one would pay attention to this matter. Galaktion counts how many blank verses and rhymed lines are in the collection. He mentions that the "chimerical" rhymes make up one-third of the rhymed part – 600 lines, which is a new development in Georgian poetry, and he calls it "Kharitonism".

Source: MGL, t-32, Johann Wolfgang Goethe, poems, translated by Khariton Vardoshvili, Tbilisi, 1946, p. 25-26, 1-9, 24, 30-49, 61-67, 80-86, 92-145, 148, 153-154, 160, 162.

1946

September 7-11

He participates in the Third Congress of Soviet Writers of Georgia.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, September 18, 1946, №188, p. 3.

1946

September 7-11

In the diary entry about the Third Congress of Soviet Writers of Georgia, attention is drawn to the role of Georgian poetry, the relative lag of prose compared to poetry, and literary criticism. The participants mentioned include Petre Sharia, Leo Kiacheli, Simon Chikovani, Konstantine Chichinadze, Grigol Abashidze, Ioseb Grishashvili, and Sandro Abasheli. It is noted that Petre Sharia dropped his pencil, and Sandro Abasheli rushed to pick it up.

Source: MGL, d-167, 48; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 418.

1946

September 7-11

On one of the posters displayed at the III Congress of Soviet Writers in Georgia, he finds lines from Vladimir Mayakovsky's poem 'What Are They Telling You?' which discusses the necessity of saving every penny. He cannot recall the original words of the author, but he does not like the Georgian text; he writes it in his diary and corrects it in his own way.

Source: MGL, d-167, 47; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 418;

Note: In the original, the title of the poem is "Не юбилейте".

1946

September 7-11

At the III Congress of Soviet Writers in Georgia, a speaker ironically remarks that in one of the author's poems, he encountered the word "კესანე" (kesane), whose meaning he did not know. He hints to the audience that poets should not use such obscure words. In response, Galaktion writes in his notebook that in 1893, a poem titled "Kesane" by Bachana was published in the newspaper Kvali, where it was explained that "Kesane" is a mountain flower. The poet additionally notes that Bachana has a lengthy discussion about this poem with Chola Lomtadze in his work "From the Diaries of the Fortress".

Source: MGL, d-167, 48-49; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 418-419.

1946

September 11

He writes an untitled poem "Fast Flowing of the Wave onto the Wave...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №22-ც, p. 22; №3975; №4117-4118; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 23.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "The Disguised Night," "Near the Baths of Tbilisi," "Near the Metekhi Bridge," and untitled ("Everything the night heard...").

1946

September 19

For a collection of poems to be published by the children's literature publisher, he notes in his diary 50 poems and 1,400 lines written on children's themes, the poem "The Wolf and the Sheep", the first volume of stories – children in the Civil War – and from the Book "Gold in the Azure of Adjara", the poem "The Shepherd", totalling 1,720 lines.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-176, 1-2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503-504.

1946

After September 19

He receives a copy of the magazine Mnatobi with the inscription "To Comrade Galaktion Tabidze" and makes highlights. On the last page, he counts how many poems, lines, titles, and paragraphs are in the magazine. He thinks that 20 pages are needed to publish his poems, especially if he includes the poem "The Sea Has Roared".

Source: MGL, t-550, magazine Mnatobi, 1946, July, №7.

1946

September 20

He is traveling by bus from Sokhumi to Dranda. He notices that there are many dark-skinned women on the bus. He appreciates the politeness and cheerful conversation of the Megrelians.

They pass the Kelasuri Bridge and Gulripi. The village of Dranda is completely destroyed, and a club has been opened in the ancient church. In the harbour, there is a beautiful small ship with masts called “Amra”, which means “Sun” in Abkhaz.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-176, 6-8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 505-506.

1946

September 23

In Dranda, he finds the garden of the Academy of Sciences, which he believes is the finest in the Soviet Union, both in terms of its plants and its location. He thinks it would be a shame if the best garden in the Soviet Union were not located in Georgia.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-176, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 507.

1946

Until September 24

In Sokhumi, he submits the collection “The Sea Has Roared” for publication to the Abkhazian State Publishing House.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-176, 40; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 512.

1946

September 24

He finds a pencil at the Sokhumi airport and keeps it.

Source: V. Javakhadze, “Unknown. Apology of Galaktion Tabidze”, Tbilisi, 2020, p. 163.

1946

September 24

After an hour and a half flight, he returns from Sokhumi to Tbilisi. He thinks it was a wonderful flight and recalls Theophile Gauthier’s poem “Symphony of Bright Whites”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-176, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 507.

1946

September 24

From September 25 to October 1, he plans to review the Book “The Sea Has Roared”, which is to be published in Abkhazia, for one last time, making some cuts to the material and adding new poems. At the same time, he needs to compare the fourth volume of the stories with the original texts and speak with the director of the State Publishing House, Nikoloz Kiknadze.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-176, 13-14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 507.

Note: Nikoloz Kiknadze is mentioned in the source by his last name.

1946

September 25

In his diary, he writes that Alexandre Abashidze's Book is ready for publication, Konstantine Gamsakhurdia's 40-page Book is being urgently prepared, and that Ioseb Grishashvili is being elected as an academician of the Georgian Academy of Sciences.

Source: MGL, d-176, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 507.

1946

September 25

He begins writing an untitled poem "Like a Brown Flag...".

Source: MGL, d-176, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 508.

1946

September 27

Giorgi Jibladze gifts his Book "Essays on Artistic Creation" with the inscription: "To the great Georgian poet, Galaktion Tabidze, with deep respect".

Source: GTSM, 277, G. Jibladze, Essays on Artistic Creation, Tbilisi, 1946.

1946

September

He writes an untitled poem "Congratulations, children...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1963; №1964; №3277; №147-d, p. 2; №4105; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 31.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "The Beginning of the School Year" and untitled ("Waiting for victory...").

1946

After September

Based on Tchola Lomtadze's story published in issue №8-9 of the magazine Mnatobi in 1929, he writes an untitled poem "Turn off the Light, Turn off...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-179, 3'; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 522-523.

October

1946

October 12

He submits the fourth volume of the stories to the State Publishing House.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-177, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 514;

1946

September 25 – October 21

For a collection of poems to be published by the children's literature publisher, he writes a list of poems in his diary in 17 points: "Homeland, Life", "My Native Land", "Morning of Victory", "The Horse", places from the poem "Amirani", "Children in the Café", "To the Georgian Woman in War", "The Flyer", "Children by the Sea", "Stanzas", "Elguja's Return", "Rest", "Lullaby", poems from the Civil War period, "Peach Flowers", "White Winds", and poems on the theme of sports.

Source: MGL, d-176, 19; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 508.

1946

September 25 – October 21

In his diary, he writes a list of complete and incomplete sets of Russian and Georgian periodicals published in 1945, including Izvestia, Pravda, Zarya Vostoka, Literaturnaya Gazeta, Sovetskoe Iskustvo, Komunisti, and Literatura da Khelovneba.

Source: MGL, d-176, 20-28; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 508.

1946

After October 21

He writes a poem titled "Eugene's Garden".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-176, 30; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 510.

Note: In the title, "Timotheus" is crossed out.

1946

After October 21

In his diary, he writes that the fourth volume of stories to be published by the State Publishing House should not have a title for any of the poems.

Source: MGL, d-176, 32; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 511.

1946

After October 21

In his diary, he writes that his name "Galaktion" has been changed to "Galaqtion" in Mnatobi. He feels it may be insignificant, but it still does not please him.

Source: MGL, d-176, 35; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 511.

1946

After October 21

He writes an untitled festive poem "To Kiziqian Shanshiashvili...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-176, 36; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 511-512.

1946

October 22

He is in Sokhumi, reading Nikolai Braun's collection of Russian poems, "My Bright Side". He makes underlining and annotations. On one of the poems, he writes a note expressing his confusion about what people are waiting for and why they waste precious time during the summer.

Source: GTSM, 347, Николай Браун, "Мой светлый край", Moscow, 1945.

1946

October 24

At 11:11 in the morning, he is in Tbilisi, at the station. He writes a poem "From Avchala to Tbilisi" ("With the Great Dawn's Glow...").

Source: Autograph, MGL, №8835; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 181.

1946

October 22-25

In his diary, he writes draft of a dispatch to be sent to Pischuk at the Abkhazian State Publishing House in Sokhumi. He informs that he was unable to meet him and hopes they will see each other in Tbilisi.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-176, 43; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 513.

1946

October 22-25

In his diary, he writes a draft about a dispatch to be sent to Khukhuti Bghazhba at the Abkhazian Writers' Union in Sokhumi. He informs that he was unable to meet him and that the Book "The Sea Has Roared" has already been submitted for publication.

Source: MGL, d-176, 41; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 512.

1946

October 25

He prepares a dispatch to be sent to Ivane Tuskadze at the Regional Committee in Sokhumi. He informs that he was unable to meet him and that the Book "The Sea Has Roared" has already been submitted for publication.

Source: MGL, d-176, 40; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 512.

Note: Ivane Tuskadze is mentioned in the source by his last name.

1946

October 25

He prepares a dispatch to be sent to Dimitri Gulia at the Abkhazian Writers' Union in Sokhumi. He informs that he was unable to meet him and that the Book "The Sea Has Roared" has already been submitted for publication.

Source: MGL, d-176, 42; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 512.

1946

October 30

At 6:15 in the morning, he writes a poem titled “Giorgi Kuchishvili” dedicated to the 60th anniversary of Giorgi Kuchishvili’s birth.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №6658; №644; №108-a, p. 2988; №108-a, p. 2994-2995; №6659-6660; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 23.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “The Poet-Orator,” “To Giorgi Kuchishvili (on the occasion of his 60th birthday),” “The Poet’s Speech of 1908,” and untitled (“Seventy years, then what...”; “When in Georgia...”).

1946

October 30

He makes a request to the Tbilisi Heating Department to provide 8 cubic meters of firewood for personal use.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-155; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 110.

1946

October 31

In the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, a poem titled “To Giorgi Kuchishvili on his 60th Anniversary” dedicated to a friend’s jubilee is published.

Source: newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1946, №42, p. 2.

1946

October

The poem “Man” is published in the magazine Pioneri.

Source: Magazine Pioneri, 1946, №10, p. 6.

1946

October

The poem “Where the Waves Now Sleep” is published in the magazine Mnatobi.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1946, №9-10, p. 68.

November

1946

November 1

He is surprised that the editor of his fourth volume of stories, Giorgi Natroshvili, has not managed to review the Book in 20 days. Alexandre Tcheishvili, the head of the literary department at the State Publishing House, reassures him that Natroshvili is well-versed in fiction and is a writer himself. He thinks he is very fortunate to have such an editor for his Book and writes about this in his diary.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-177, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 515.

1946

November 3

He sends a letter to the director of the Fiction Literature Publishing House in Moscow, asking for an update on the progress of his book's publication. He writes that the contract was signed back in May 1944. He considers it necessary to add 5,000 lines of poems from the last two years to the Book and mentions that, upon receiving confirmation, he will send the drafts of these additional word-for-word translations. He is also interested in knowing who the editor will be and whether anything else is needed from him as the author.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-76; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 69.

1946

November 5 or before

He writes an untitled poem "Fill Up, O Sun, This Autumn...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-174, 44; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 479.

Note: The poem was later published under the title "Fill Up, O Sun!".

1946

November 5

He is at the cinema and writes a second version of the untitled poem "Fill Up, O Sun, This Autumn..." under the title "Autumn".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-174, 45; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 479-480.

Note: The poem was later published under the title "Fill Up, O Sun!".

1946

After November 5

He writes a letter to Sophia Khitarova, the director of the State Literary Publishing House in Moscow. He requests to be informed about the progress of the book's publication, for which the contract was signed in May 1944. If possible, he would like to add another 5,000 lines to the Book and asks to be notified about who will be the editor and how he can assist.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-174, 46-47; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 480;

Note: Sophia Khitarova is mentioned in the source by her last name.

1946

After November 5

He writes an untitled two-stanza poem dedicated to Giorgi Kuchishvili "Sixty Years, Then... What Kind!"

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-174, 48; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 481.

Note: The second stanza is a variant of the last stanza of the poem "The Poet – the Tribune".

1946

After November 5

He writes three versions of the poem "Symphony for Giorgi's Birthday" dedicated to Giorgi Kuchishvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-174, 49-53; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 481-484.

1946

After November 5

He writes a version of the poem "The Poet – the Tribune" titled "The Poet's Speech of 1908" dedicated to Giorgi Kuchishvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-174, 54-55; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 485-486.

1946

After November 5

He writes an untitled poem "My Nurturing Mother...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-174, 56; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 486.

1946

After November 5

In his diary, he writes the Greek introduction from Homer's "Odyssey" in Georgian and Russian letters and translates it into Georgian. He reminisces about how their Greek teacher used to explain this phrase and provides a dialogue between students who did not understand Greek.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-174, 58-60; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 487-489.

1946

After November 5

He is working on the selected Russian poems to be published by the State Literary Publishing House in Moscow. He notes the translations by Giorgi Tsagareli of poems written on Georgian themes from the collection "Lyrics" published in 1945, the books "Selected Poems" printed in 1937 and 1940, and the Russian collection "My Native Land" published in 1942.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-174, 62-64; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 489-490.

1946

After November 5

In his diary, he writes that for the selected Russian poems to be published by the State Literary Publishing House, his Georgian selection published in 1945 contains 15,543 lines, with 1,378 lines removed, leaving 18,365 lines. He is interested in how many of these lines are translations. He notes in his diary that Ruric Ivnev translated the poem “Nine Generals”.

Source: MGL, d-174, 66; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 491.

1946

After November 5

In his diary, he summarizes the anticipated expenses: 400 roubles for three frames and their transportation, 750 roubles for transporting the tiles, 50 roubles for bricks, 2,000 roubles for the carpenter, 1,500 roubles for nickel beds, and 300 roubles for the electric heater, totalling 5,400 roubles. He notes that he receives 700 roubles from the Academy of Sciences, adds two months’ pension of 400 roubles, and totals 2,100 roubles in income.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 68; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 491.

1946

After November 5

He plans to hold a creative evening and summarizes his income for the month: pension – 1,000 roubles, Academy stipend – 1,400 roubles, and Mnatobi honorarium – 7,725 roubles, totalling 10,125 roubles. In addition, he has 7,000 roubles, bringing his total to 17,125 roubles.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 69; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 492.

1946

After November 5

He prepares a budget for the expenses needed to hold events over the course of a year: 50 speakers, 50 artists, and 50 composers at 500 roubles each, as well as 50 singers and 50 actors at 300 roubles each, along with 500 roubles for other expenses.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 69; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 492.

1946

November 7

He still has not received a response from the editor, Giorgi Natroshvili, regarding the fourth volume of his works. When Galaktion learns that he is also the editor of his friend Giorgi Leonidze’s book, he begins to have doubts and decides to submit his friend’s Book to the publishing house first, and then his own. Indeed, this is what happens.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-177, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 515.

1946

After November 7

He discovers the fourth volume of his works, edited by Giorgi Natroshvili and submitted for publication. He is astonished to find that instead of 11,000 lines, only 2,000 lines remain in the manuscript, while the others are roughly crossed out in pencil. He is angry that Giorgi Natroshvili is distorting the book, with Aleksandre Tcheishvili facilitating this, while Niko Kiknadze is pleased that the Book will be of a smaller volume, making its printing cheaper for the publishing house. Initially, Galaktion considers taking the issue to the Central Committee for discussion, but he worries this might delay the publication of the book.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-177, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 515;

Note: Giorgi Natroshvili, Aleksandre Tcheishvili, and Niko Kiknadze are mentioned by last names in the source.

1946

November 10

He meets a delegation of Lithuanian writers at the Writers' Union, gifts them his own books, and notes down the names of those he has presented them to.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-637, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 447-448.

1946

After November 10

He promises Petre Sharia to gift him the Russian-language "Selected Works" that he is currently preparing for publication.

Source: MGL, d-174, 70; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 492.

Note: Aleksander Pomorski and Yuri Verkhovski are mentioned by last names in the source.

1946

After November 10

He notes in his diary that the Academy of Sciences lacks funds and that significant savings are necessary. He needs to go to the Academy and the publishing house "Zarya Vostoka", as Aleksander Pomorski and Yuri Verkhovski are supposed to translate his poems. He is also interested in what time Yuri Verkhovski's evening event at the Writers' Union begins.

Source: MGL, d-174, 70; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 492.

Note: Aleksander Pomorski and Yuri Verkhovski are mentioned by last names in the source.

1946

After November 10

He wants to review the proof corrections of his fourth volume of works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-174, 70; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 492.

1946

After November 10

He is curious about when the September-October issue of Mnatobi will be released, which began printing his poems from the cycle “The Sea Has Roared”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 70; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 492.

1946

After November 10

He thinks that it is not yet necessary to hold the evenings. Although he has a plan ready for the industrial institute based on industrial themes, he is not in a hurry to conduct this evening either. He believes that the evenings held in various organizations should have different colours. He has planned the following evenings: for pioneers, in the mountaineering club, Svaneti, Khevsureti, Mtskheta, Armenians, Zarya Vostoka, Komunisti, State Publishing House, for composers, the Arts Committee, railways, children, teachers, geographers, universities, agricultural institutes, builders, about old Tbilisi, new Tbilisi, and trade unions. In his opinion, they will turn out to be grand evenings.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 70-71; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 492-493.

1946

Until November 15

He divides the 2,000 lines left in the fourth volume of his works by the editor into parts, resulting in 5,200 lines. He types this version and prepares it for re-submission. Although reprinting costs him 700 roubles, in this way, the volume of the Book is less damaged.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-177, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 515.

1946

Until November 15

He sends the poem “Heroic Ruins” to Tamar Abashidze for the creation of the Russian literal translation.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-177, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 515.

1946

Until November 15

He agrees with Besarion Zhghenti on quickly selecting materials for the “Selected Poems” to be published in Moscow. He believes that the main focus should be on the publication of the Russian book, for which many translations are needed, at least 5,000 lines from 125 poems. He thinks that poems from the 1944 selection should be included among them. It is essential to find translators and expedite the process. He supports translator Pati Tvaltvadze's suggestion that Boris Pasternak and other translators should also be involved in this work.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-177, 1-2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 515-516.

Note: Pati Tvaltvadze is mentioned by last name in the source.

1946

Until November 15

He plans to prepare 3,000 lines for the Children's Literature Publishing House, which promises to publish the book, and to conclude the matter with that.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-177, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516.

1946

Until November 15

They do not have paper for the Book "The Sea Has Roared", which is to be published by the Abkhazian State Publishing House, and he thinks that the book's editor, Giorgi Jibladze, will help with this matter, but he still has no hope for anyone except himself.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-177, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516.

1946

Until November 15

In his diary, he writes that he needs to review the materials removed by the editors from the IV volume of his works, which is to be published by the State Publishing House, and the Book "The Sea Has Roared", which is to be published by the Abkhazian State Publishing House. He must also select the texts necessary for translation for the Russian Book "Selected Poems". He notes the poems and works removed from the books: "Akaki Tsereteli", "Juga and Asida", "The Secret of the Fortress", "Three Palms", "Amirani", "Memories of the Days When It Flashed", "From Dzaugi to Berlin", "The Disease", "A Conversation About Lyricism", "A Woman Fought on the Barricades", "Victory Day", "Class Struggle".

Source: MGL, d-177, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516.

1946

Until November 15

He plans to buy notebooks and organize the poems removed from the published books in them, as these poems are his currency.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-177, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516.

1946

Until November 15

He thinks he should review and organize the 1946 newspapers according to materials from Moscow, Kyiv, Belarus, and others.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-177, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516.

1946

Until November 15

In his diary, he writes that the Armenians are very fortunate, as articles about them are published every day in newspapers because they have their own people everywhere. He notes that the Georgians have no one to rely on and must do everything themselves.

Source: MGL, d-177, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516.

1946

Until November 15

In his diary, he writes that before being elected as an academician of the Georgian Academy of Sciences, Ioseb Grishashvili is trying to make appearances everywhere.

Source: MGL, d-177, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

1946

Until November 15

In his diary, he writes that shorthand is the best tool for recording large works, as thoughts are expressed much faster than the pen can write. Two concise lines can encompass a massive poem. Speed must have been particularly essential for Fyodor Dostoevsky, as he was creating different kinds of grand canvases.

Source: MGL, d-177, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

1946

November 17

On the occasion of Galaktion Tabidze's birthday, poetry readings and a presentation about his work are held on the radio for one hour.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-177, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 519.

1946

November 18

He attends an event at the Rustaveli Theatre dedicated to the 100th anniversary of Alexandre Chavchavadze's death, which is held in a rather tasteless manner. Ioseb Grishashvili's performance is very lacklustre, which may not bode well for his selection as an academician.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-177, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 520.

1946

After November 18

He makes emphasis and comments on Mikheil Chikovani's Book "Georgian Folklore".

Source: MGL, t-216, Mikheil Chikovani, "Georgian Folklore", Tbilisi, 1946, p. III-IV, 1-2, 12-14, 342, 351, 414.

1946

November 15-20

In his diary, he writes that the fourth volume of his works has gone through the first stage of abbreviation and distortion, to the point that it has almost lost its original form. He learns that the manuscript has been handed over to the technical editor, Beno Gordeziani, for sending to the printing house, and that Gordeziani is deceiving him by claiming that the Book has already been sent to print. Galaktion suspects that this Futurist is trying to delay the process, but he feels powerless to change anything.

Source: MGL, d-177, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

Note: Beno Gordeziani is mentioned by last name in the source.

1946

November 15-20

The state publishing house transfers the honorarium for the fourth volume of the works to his bank account.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-177, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

1946

November 15-20

The response from Tamar Abashidze, to whom the poem "Heroic Ruins" was given for translation into Russian, is delayed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-177, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

1946

November 15-20

He is dissatisfied that Nunu Ebanoidze, whom he asked to retrieve Ivane Ioseliani's Book from the "Federation" publishing house, has not fulfilled the task.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-177, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

Note: Nunu Ebanoidze is mentioned in the source by the first name.

1946

November 15-20

Abesalom Tabidze, who was asked to bring his poetry collection from 1914, a portrait of his mother, and a map of Georgia published under the editorship of Ivane Javakhishvili, returns empty-handed. He laments that even his close friends do not fulfil his requests, which causes the matter to deteriorate.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-177, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517-518.

Note: Abesalom Tabidze is referred by his first name in the source.

1946

November 15-20

In Moscow, he hands over a complete list of translations of poems and some of the translations to Besarion Zhghenti for the "Selected Works". He also provides the "Georgian Selected" and the fourth volume of his works, highlighting the poems that need to be translated. However, the progress is slow. He thinks that many literal translations are necessary, as the Russian Book is the main focus at this stage. He quotes a line from Alexander Pushkin's untitled poem, "The monument I have for me erected", which states: "My name will fill great Russia...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-177, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 518.

1946

November 17-20

In his diary, he writes that the arrival of the Lithuanian writers' delegation and the meeting held at the Writers' Union on November 10 were beneficial for him and were well covered in the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba.

Source: MGL, d-177, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 519;

1946

November 17-20

He begins to take care of family matters – paying 450 roubles for electrical connectors and 100 roubles for a washbasin. He plans to buy palm trees, curtains, and two nickel beds, install three tile stoves, set up an electric heater in the study and the entrance, and dreams of a piano, a carpet, and a sofa. He wants to have a painting of an eagle by Severian Ketskhoveli, which is depicted on the cover of the Russian poetry collection "Lyrics", translated by Giorgi Tsagareli. He thinks it's time to properly arrange his home since he doesn't know what will happen elsewhere.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-177, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 520.

Note: Severian Ketskhoveli and Giorgi Tsagareli are mentioned by last names in the source.

1946

November 17-20

He wants to celebrate the New Year with his poems – "So, Glory to the Sun", "Rejoice, Fireplace", and "This New Year" – which will be performed by a choir, broadcasted on the radio, and published in all newspapers and magazines.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-177, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 520.

1946

November 25

A celebration is held at the Rustaveli Theatre to mark the 60th birthday and 40 years of literary activity of poet Giorgi Kuchishvili. Galaktion feels troubled because the honouree cannot attend the evening due to his hospitalization. Along with other poets, he reads a poem dedicated to Kuchishvili. At the end of the evening, Kuchishvili's thank-you speech is transmitted via a special radio line to the audience present in the hall. After the event concludes, a melancholic Galaktion walks along Rustaveli Avenue with Simon Tsereteli. Tsereteli offers to visit Kuchishvili in the hospital, but Galaktion hesitates to impose on him.

Source: S. Tsverava, the Price of Friendship, newspaper Soplis Tskhovreba, November 1, 1973, N 256, p. 3.

1946

After November

He writes a poem "Atomic Energy" ("What is atomic energy? Don't worry about it!...").

Source: MGL, a-1726, AE in 25 books, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 325-326;

December

1946

December 3

He submits an application for a subscription to the following Russian-language newspapers and magazines: Pravda, Izvestia, Komsomolskaya Pravda, Kultura i Zhizn, Peterburgskaya Gazeta, Uchitelskaya Gazeta, Sovetskoe Iskusstvo, Zvezda, Znamya, Knizhnaya Letopis, Letopis Gazetnykh Virezok, Letopis Zhurnalnykh Statei, Letopis Retsenzii, Literatura v Shkole, Novy Mir, Oktyabr, Ogonyok, and Zarya Vostoka. He also subscribes to the Georgian-language newspaper Komunisti.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №432.

1946

December 5

They take his passport and a 600-ruble accreditation from his pocket.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-158; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 111.

Dating: This is mentioned in the statement of December 10.

1946

December 7

He reads the Russian newspaper Literaturnaya Gazeta, takes notes, and analyses different manners of reading a text. He notes that impatient, rushed reading is useless and even harmful, likening it to disorganized parroting or mindlessly flipping through a book. Reading without attention means thinking about other matters, so to train focus, it is necessary to read a short text for just 4–5 minutes. Skipping through a text results in inconsistent and superficial reading, making it preferable to read a small passage thoroughly. Continuous, uninterrupted reading resembles that of a deacon's monotonous recitation - passive and quickly exhausting - so a 10-minute break is necessary. Abandoning a Book unfinished, he observes, weakens one's willpower.

Source: MGL, t-660, newspaper "Литературная Газета", December 7, 1946, №49, p. 1.

1946

December 10

He addresses a statement to the head of the People's Militia of Stalin District. He informs them that on December 5, his passport and 600-ruble accreditation were taken from him. He requests the issuance of a new passport.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-158; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 111.

1946

Until December 13

He writes a poem "Abkhazian, War-Hardened".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №191; №563; №764; №1301; №2022; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 32.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "The Abkhaz Hero Has Returned," "The Abkhaz Veteran," and untitled (beginning with: "He sits on a horse, a white poplar..."; "The Abkhaz, a veteran..."; "He flew, following somewhere far away...").

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1946

Until December 13

He writes an untitled poem, "We Remembered Our Youth...".

Source: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 30.

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1946

Until December 13

He writes an untitled poem, "Not Above Native Worries...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №553; №3315; №5479; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 31.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "The Caucasian Sailor," "Song of a Dying Sailor," and "Sailor's Song".

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1946

Until December 13

He writes an untitled poem, "My Youth, the Smiling Day..."

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4738; №5504; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 247.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "It Will Remain in the Memory of Descendants," "My Youth," and "Reflections by the Kodori".

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1946

Until December 13

He writes an untitled poem, "A Traveler to Many Lands..."

Source: Autographs: MGL, №738; №3484; №2075; №5476; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 279.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "Abkhazia, Oh Abkhazia" and "A Traveler to Many Lands."

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1946

Until December 13

He writes an untitled poem, "My Beautiful Homeland..."

Source: Autographs: MGL, №744; 753; №108-a, p. 2964-2965; №1287-1288; №5487-5488; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 271.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "The Mahajiri," "The Mahajiris on the Ship," "Mohajiri," and "The Mahajiris".

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1946

Until December 13

He writes an untitled poem, "On Turquoise Waves..."

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5192; №2025; №3313; №5476-5477; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 278.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "On Turquoise Waves".

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1946

Until December 13

He writes an untitled poem, "Morning. To School. Ink... Bag..."

Source: Autographs: MGL, №566; №70-a, p. 1782; №2490; №199-a, p. 5416; №2032; №5501; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 268.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "Morning, To School, Ink, Bag," "Morning. To School," and untitled ("Morning. To School. Ink. Bag...").

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1946

Until December 13

He writes an untitled poem, “The West Trembles, It Reddens the Sea...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2495; №244-d, p. 11; №2030; №5497; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 277.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “The West Trembles, It Reddens the Sea,” “It Reddens the Sea in the Radiance of the Sky,” and untitled (“Gradually, the Southern Night Descends from the Sky...”).

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1946

Until December 13

He writes an untitled poem, “Victory, Abkhazia...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №350; №5341; №5190; №3321; №5494; N. Kvirikadze’s autograph, 1884; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 281.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Sanatorium,” “Greetings, Abkhazia” and untitled (beginning with: “Greetings, Abkhazia!.”; “Greetings, Elbrus!.”).

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1946

Until December 13

He writes an untitled poem “It Dawned in Nine Hundred and Forty-Six...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №8798; №4917; №5512; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 30.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “It Dawned in Nine Hundred and Forty-Six...”.

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1946

Until December 13

The magazine Mnatobi publishes a report by Petre Sharia, the secretary of the propaganda affairs of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Georgian SSR, titled “Paths of Development of Georgian Soviet Literature”, in which the author reviews the current state of Georgian literature. Regarding Galaktion, Petre Sharia notes that he is the greatest Georgian poet of the first half of the twentieth century, who transitioned to the positions of Soviet literature faster than his “contemporaries” and repeated the bold and commendable step taken by his senior spiritual brother in Russian literature – Alexander Blok.

Source: P. Sharia, Paths of Development of Georgian Soviet Literature, Magazine Mnatobi, 1946, №9-10, p. 36.

Dating: The magazine is signed for publication on December 13, 1946.

1946

Until December 13

In the magazine Mnatobi, under the collective title “The Sea Has Roared”, the following untitled poems are published: “The Sea Has Roared...”, “On Turquoise Waves...”, “Traveler in Many Directions...”, “We Have Created, This Is Ours...”, “Victory, Oh Abkhazia, Yours...”, “The West Is Shivering, the Sea Turns Red...”, “Morning. Towards School. Ink... Bag...”, “Dawn of 946...”, “My Youth, with a Smiling Day...”, “Where the Wave Is Now Shining...”, “Not Above My Native Concerns...”, “Do You Remember How They Welcomed, Mary...”, “I Am Not Orphaned in This World...”, “The Colour of Lily Has Spread...”, “Memories Saw in Your Shadow...”, “We Remembered Our Youth...”, “In the Garden of Wealth...”, “My Beautiful Homeland...”, “Abkhazian, War-Hardened...”, “Listen to the Native Tunes...”.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1946, №9-10, p. 68-79;

1946

December 21

In Gori, he revises his poem “Gori” for an event dedicated to Stalin’s birthday. He notes that this poem opened the 1939 collection “Georgian Writers to the Leader”. He also writes down the list of participants in the event.

Source: G. Tabidze’s inscriptions, GTSM, 558, collection “Georgian Writers to the Leader”, Tbilisi, 1939, p. 1-6, 291.

1946

December 21

He participates in an event in Gori dedicated to Stalin’s birthday, which is also attended by: Veriko Anjaparidze, Nata Vachnadze, Leo Kiacheli, David Suliashvili, Sandro Shanshiashvili, Shalva Apkhaidze, Nikoloz Chachava, Rezo Margiani, Givi Gachechiladze, Mikheil Kavsadze, and others. In his diary, Galaktion writes that he performed brilliantly, but all the other participating writers and party workers also claimed to be genius.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-167, 50-51; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 418-419.

1946

Until December 25

For the sixth volume of his works, he establishes a work plan in 12 points. He writes that he needs to select the roots of 60 words for 60 poems and 30,000 new rhymes, which amounts to 500 rhymes per poem. To write these rhymes cleanly, he needs a separate notebook of 150-200 pages. To avoid tiring the reader, he should reduce new inventions, while clear innovations are necessary and pleasant for the reader. He plans to use dictionaries, calendars, the history of Kartli, folklore, musical terms, encyclopaedias, magazines, and grammar. He notes that if he writes 500 rhymes in one day, it will take two months to reach 30,000, so he must find a way to write a thousand rhymes per day. While the overall rhyming of the poems is difficult, it is a significant novelty, and he should not deviate from this principle. He considers it necessary to develop a five-month calendar plan, starting from January 1, 1947. Utilizing all previous experiences should become a solid foundation for his work.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-130, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 46.

1946

From September 8 to December 28

He writes an untitled poem "The Glorious Name...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-155, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 319;

1946

From September 8 to December 28

He writes in his diary that Grigol Orbeliani published poems in the magazine Tsiskari under the pseudonym "Old Seminarist" in the 1870s.

Source: MGL, d-155, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 321.

1946

From September 8 to December 28

In his diary, he notes that writer Givi Meladze, who works in the press department of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Soviet Union as a diplomatic attaché, utilized the French publication L'Année des poètes, which contains biographies of poets, while writing the essay "Poetry of Europe Fighting for Freedom".

Source: MGL, d-155, 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 321.

Note: Givi Meladze is mentioned in the source by his last name.

1946

From September 8 to December 28

In the diary, he writes a list of 18 writers united in the party group of the Writers' Union. The names in the list are: Irakli Abashidze, Grigol Abashidze, Shalva Apkhaidze, Dimitri Benashvili, Razhden Gvetadze, Alexi Gomiashvili, Shalva Dadiani, Sandro Euli, Giorgi Leonidze, Revaz Margiani, Alio Mashashvili, Giorgi Natroshvili, Shalva Radiani, Demna Shengelaia, Alexandre Tcheishvili, Simon Chikovani, Yakinthe Lisashvili, and Giorgi Katchakhidze.

Source: MGL, d-155, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 322.

Note: The writers in the source are mentioned with the initials of their first names and their last names.

1946

From September 8 to December 28

He travels to Kaspi and records brief notes in his diary about the factories, organizations, collective farms, and workers there. He speaks about the last words of Arsen, a beloved folk hero, who, legend has it, requested that three thousand roubles hidden in a large rock in Kaspi be distributed to the poor. He remarks that the great rock of Kaspi symbolizes profound teachings and that, through these words, the entire Georgian people speak. He references Goethe's last words, "Light, more light", and Ilia Chavchavadze's final words, "What are you doing?" concluding that the last words of great people reveal the essence and aspirations of their lives.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-155, 20-23; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 322.

1946

From September 8 to December 28

In his diary, he notes his translation of Yakub Kolas's poem "To the Forests of Belarus", remarking that the poet uses the address form. He then reflects on who else has used this form, noting that he himself used it in his poem "Mary".

Source: MGL, d-155, 24-25; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 324-325.

1946

From October 31 to December 28

Iona Vakeli responds to his poem "The Poet-Tribune", dedicated to the 60th anniversary of Giorgi Kuchishvili's birth.

Source: MGL, d-155, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 321;

Note: The source does not specify the form in which Iona Vakeli responds.

1946

December 30

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "To Our Happy Homeland".

Source: Нашей отчизне счастливой (Стих) Г. Табидзе, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1946, 30 декабря, №257, с.3.

1946

December

In his diary, Galaktion Tabidze notes a quote from Shalva Radiani's article "Two Poets", published in issue №11-12 of the 1931 edition of the magazine Mnatobi. The quote remarks that, following the defeat of the 1905 revolution, Galaktion, like other poets of the time, displayed a sense of pessimism. Galaktion reflects that Radiani, as editor, interpreted his collected works through this perspective and suspects that this may have influenced Radiani's editorial choices for those volumes. Galaktion regrets overlooking this factor at the time.

Source: MGL, d-179, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 523-524.

1946

December

In his diary, Galaktion Tabidze notes page 181 from Shota Dzidziguri's article "The Georgian Literary Language", published in issue №11-12 of the 1931 edition of Mnatobi. On this page, the discussion centres on the use of regional vocabulary and the creation of neologisms in literature. He cites passages from the article where these trends are negatively evaluated.

Source: MGL, d-179, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 523-524.

1946

Galaktion Tabidze sends a letter to Giorgi Kuchishvili, reminiscing about the many good times they've spent together. He recalls a particular night when they were searching for saboteurs in a garden, only to end up apprehending their neighbour, Averina, by mistake.

Source: A. Ratiani, Recollections about Galaktion, Magazine Mnatobi, 1996, № 9-10, p. 126.

1946

Benedikte Chikobava is assisting Galaktion Tabidze with creating Russian prose translations of his poems and helping to edit both new and previously translated works.

Source: G. Chikobava, Close to Galaktion, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 4.

1946

As a member of the Academy of Georgia, on the occasion of the 25th anniversary of Georgia's incorporation into the Soviet Union, Galaktion Tabidze is granted a limit-free allocation of a total of 4,000 roubles worth of goods from a store, for which he pays only 900 roubles. This includes: two kilos of sugar, two kilos of butter, one kilo of chocolate candies, two kilos of pure chocolate, 50 oranges, 10 kilos of apples, three kilos of lard, three kilos of fish, two kilos of sausages, and two kilos of cheese.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-178, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 521.

1946

He writes a fragment from the poem "Grandma's Glasses" without a title: "Grandma stood – full of abundant memories...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-179, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 522.

1946

He writes in his diary about the issues of the magazine Mnatobi in which his poems and articles dedicated to him were published.

Source: MGL, d-179, 2-12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 523-529.

1946

In his diary, he writes that none of his poems were published in the magazine Mnatobi in 1935. At that time, the main editor was Giorgi Kurulashvili, and the responsible secretary was Levan Asatiani. Therefore, everything is understandable.

Source: MGL, d-179, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 526.

Note: Giorgi Kurulashvili is mentioned in the source by the initial of his first name and his last name.

1946

In his diary, he writes that none of his poems were published in the journal Mnatobi in 1936, and this is understandable for him. In issue №12 of Mnatobi that year, there is a lengthy citation from Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Press" from the cycle "Revolutionary Georgia" in the article "Poetry of Friendship among Peoples", written by Akaki Tatarishvili, the People's Commissar of Education of Georgia, which is dedicated to the 15th anniversary of Georgia's annexation and primarily reflects on the disgraceful years of Menshevik democracy.

Source: MGL, d-179, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 526-527.

Note: Akaki Tatarishvili is mentioned in the source by the initial of his first name and his last name.

1946

In his diary, he writes that the article "Shota Rustaveli and Socialist Modernity" by Besarion Zhghenti published in issue №12 of the magazine Mnatobi in 1937 is a superficial piece. It includes the title of his poem "Our Time Awaits a New Rustaveli" and notes that Galaktion Tabidze's profound poetic attitude toward his surroundings sometimes breaks through in Rustaveli's stanzas.

Source: MGL, d-179, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 527.

1946

In his diary, he writes that in 1937, none of his poems were published in the magazine Mnatobi either. In the poet's opinion, the editorial team and the magazine's responsible secretary, Levan Asatiani, deliberately chose not to publish the list of publications for that year.

Source: MGL, d-179, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 527.

Note: Levan Asatiani is mentioned in the source by his last name.

1946

In his diary, he writes that none of his poems were published in the magazine Mnatobi during the years 1944-1945.

Source: MGL, d-179, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 529.

1946

He places an order at the bookbinding workshop to bind newspapers and magazines from 1945: Komunisti, Zarya Vostoka, Pravda, Izvestia, Literaturnaya Gazeta, Literatura I Iskustvo, Ogonyok, and several books.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-153; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 111.

1946

He writes an untitled poem "Far Away Lies the Vaulted Resting Place...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №5236; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 176.

1946 or later

He reviews the Book “The Stalinist Constitution in the Poetry of the Peoples of the Soviet Union”. On the back endpaper, he writes lines from Ana Kalandadze’s poem “With the Red of the Poppy”. “The white mist swirls the mists – isn’t this ‘Blue Horses’?”

Source: GTSM, 147, “Сталинская Конституция в поэзии народов СССР”, Moscow, 1937.

Dating: This poem by Ana Kalandadze was written in 1946.

1946 or later

He reads the Book “The Language of Giorgi of Mtatsminda”, prepared by Akaki Shanidze and Ivane Javakhishvili, and makes notes.

Source: GTSM, 658, A. Shanidze, Iv. Javakhishvili, “The Language of Giorgi of Mtatsminda Based on the Lives of Ioane and Euthymius”, Tbilisi, 1946.

After 1946

He makes notes on the text of the anthem of Soviet Georgia, authored by Grigol Abashidze and Alexandre Abasheli. He points out that the text of the anthem was already outdated as early as 1946. Additionally, it contains conceptual inconsistencies and technical flaws.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-548, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 239-241.

1947

Until 1947

In the elegantly designed 1947 reference-calendar, the Ukrainian translation of Galaktion’s poem “The Oath” is published.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-486-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301-302.

Dating: This is mentioned in Giorgi Nazarenko’s letter dated May 21, 1948.

January

1947

Until January

He writes an untitled poem, “Such is the Novelty of Days...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4076; №4923; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 64.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “With My First Poem, I Cast My Vote for Stalin”.

Dating: The poem was first published on January 1, 1947, in the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba. It is dated according to the first publication.

1947

January 1

The poem “New Year’s” is published in the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba.

Source: Newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1947, №1, p. 1.

1947

January 1

In a notebook, he draws a ship against the backdrop of mountains and the rising sun with coloured pencils, replacing masts with the date 19-,1-1. -47. Below is written “Aurora”, accompanied by a facsimile of G. Tabidze and the date 1947. At the end of the drawing, there is a large inscription in red and blue letters reading “Background - Exit”.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s sketch and record, MGL, d-188, p. 4; AE, Book XXV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 293.

1947

Beginning of January or later

In his diary, he writes about the report of the Leningrad Writers’ Reporting and Election Meeting from the October 11, 1946 issue of the newspaper Izvestia. At the meeting, Alexander Prokofiev presented a report on the activities of the Leningrad branch of the USSR Writers’ Union, discussing political mistakes and the significant goals facing Soviet literature. The meeting adopted a resolution with measures to improve operations and elected a new governing body.

Source: MGL, d-155, 10-11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 320;

1947

Beginning of January or later

In his diary, he writes that he needs to manage to study the literary processes that have been taking place over the past three months in Moscow, Tbilisi, Leningrad, and Kiev.

Source: MGL, d-155, 10-11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 320;

1947

January 11

A poem titled “I Give My Voice to Stalin” is published in the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba.

Source: G. Tabidze, “I Give My Voice to Stalin”, Literatura da Khelovneba, 1947, №2, p. 1.

1947

January 14

He reads Niko Lomouri’s Book “Christian Lezgians”, purchased in 1928, and makes highlights and comments throughout the text. He notes that the subtitle “Photographic Stories” should refer to revolutionary events, meaning stories taken directly from real life. He wonders why Niko Lomouri frequently mentions the name “Svimon” in his stories. He writes that the Kartlian language does not resemble Egnate Ninoshvili’s style, and that laconicism is not characteristic of Niko Lomouri, Lalion, or Melania.

Source: G. Tabidze’s inscription on the Book cover, MGL, t-678, N. Lomouri, “Christian Lezgians”, Tbilisi, 1928, p. 3, 5, 11.

1947

January 14

Impressed by the ending of Niko Lomouri's story "Christian Lezgians", he notes that the author employed a rare method to "bypass" censorship - having the protagonist speak the truth, advocating for physically confronting the bandit rather than writing complaints. The crowd echoed him, saying that they no longer resembled their forefathers in bravery and had become cowardly like women. But in the end, the protagonist was depicted standing silently with his head bowed, saying nothing further, while the crowd was shown in complete silence, holding their breath.

Source: MGL, t-678, N. Lomouri, "Christian Lezgians", Tbilisi, 1928, p. 20.

1947

Until January 20

He receives a letter from Giorgi Kuchishvili informing him that the previous day two women called him asking for Galaktion Tabidze's residential address. He replied that Galaktion Tabidze lives on the lower floor but is currently in the hospital. They asked him to deliver a letter to Galaktion Tabidze, which he now sends to him. He promises to visit him in two days.

Source: MGL, 24551-466, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 287.

Dating: According to the time of Giorgi Kuchishvili's death.

1947

Until January 20

Along with Giorgi Kuchishvili and Vakhtang Gorganeli, Galaktion travels to Gurjaani, where a literary evening is dedicated to him. On the way, they stop near the village of Manavi, buy food from an elderly vendor, and set up an impromptu table on the meadow. The vendor recognizes Galaktion and invites him to her home. The poet declines the invitation but inquires why she is wearing black clothing. The woman replies that her children were killed in the war. Distressed by her words, Galaktion touches the hem of her dress as a sign of respect, encourages her, and says goodbye. At the evening event held in Gurjaani, Gigla Mebuke delivers a speech. After the event concludes, Galaktion thanks him and asks him to also speak at the upcoming events planned in Tbilisi.

Source: V. Gorganeli, like it was just yesterday, magazine Drosha, 1993, № 8-9, p. 20-21. G. Mebuke, some information about Galaktion, magazine Literaturnaya Achara, 1967, №5, p. 93-96.

Dating: It is dated according to the time of Giorgi Kuchishvili's death.

1947

January 20

Galaktion's friend and neighbour, the poet Giorgi Kuchishvili, has passed away.

Source: "In Memory of Giorgi Kuchishvili", Newspaper Komunisti, 1947, №17, p. 4.; Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-180, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 8.

Note: Galaktion Tabidze and Giorgi Kuchishvili lived at №4 Zhores Street (now Marjanishvili Street).

1947

After January 20

He meets Ilia Agladze, who tells him that everyone he informed of Giorgi Kuchishvili's death was moved to tears, just like him.

Source: MGL, d-155, 38; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 327;

1947

After January 20

He writes an untitled poem "A Poet's One Verse...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-174, 76; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 498;

1947

January 21

He is a member of the government funeral commission for Giorgi Kuchishvili. He disapproves of Petre Sharia's arbitrary interference in the commission's work and the strange, submissive obedience of the deceased's family to all of Sharia's demands. Initially, the commission members agree with Galaktion's proposal to hold the poet's funeral at the Didube Pantheon on Friday, January 24, since January 22 – Lenin's Memorial Day – is a holiday, which would prevent them from handling organizational matters and publishing the death notice in time. The family agrees as well, but when they inform Petre Sharia of the plan over the phone, he categorically insists that the funeral be scheduled for January 23.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-180, p. 7-9; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 8.

Dating: The record states: "Today is Tuesday", and the Tuesday following the day of Giorgi Kuchishvili's death falls on January 21.

1947

January 21

He records in his notebook his impressions of Giorgi Kuchishvili's death and the work of the funeral commission. He notes that officials intrude rudely into private homes, expressing concern that the dying Giorgi Kuchishvili was tended to through the night by the women Lortkipanidze and Chkhikvadze, whom, according to Konstantine Lortkipanidze, Kuchishvili's wife, Vasasi, had called. He is troubled that neither he nor other neighbours were informed about Kuchishvili's critical condition. Reflecting on the reasons behind such behaviour, he concludes that henceforth, he no longer sees any truly honourable family left in Georgia.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-180, p. 7-9; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 8, 9.

Dating: The entry states, "Today is Tuesday", and the Tuesday following Giorgi Kuchishvili's day of death falls on January 21.

1947

January 21

An obituary is published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, stating that the poet Giorgi Kuchishvili passed away the previous morning after a long illness. It also notes that a government commission was formed to organize the poet's funeral, consisting of the following members: Chairman Viktor Kupradze, Simon Chikovani, Akaki Khorava, Galaktion Tabidze, and Secretary Alexandre Gomiashvili.

Source: “Скончался поэт Георгий Кучишвили”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, January 21, 1947, Tuesday, №16, p. 4.

1947

January 22

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, an article dedicated to the memory of Giorgi Kuchishvili is published, signed by 65 members of the Writers' Union, with Galaktion Tabidze listed fourth among the signatories.

Source: “Памяти Георгия Кучишвили”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, January 22, 1947, Wednesday, №17, p. 4.

1947

Until January 23

He writes an untitled poem, “In My Childhood Days...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5236; №2027; №5482; №5499; N. Kvirikadze's manuscript, №1878; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 262.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “In My Childhood Days”.

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1947

Until January 23

He writes an untitled poem, “Like the Ruler of the Invaluable Throne...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5195; №5198; №1285; №5481; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 264.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Tkvarcheli”.

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1947

Until January 23

He writes an untitled poem “I Have Seen Many Times...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2520; №3421; №3314; №5478; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 270.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Vesper”.

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1947

Until January 23

He writes an untitled poem “We Stand on the Ship with Roses...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2516; №6534; №4924; №4931; №5519-5520; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 27.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Along the Path We Cleared,” “Along the Path I Cleared,” and untitled (“I Stood on the Ship with Roses...”).

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1947

Until January 23

He writes an untitled poem “The Love of the Sea...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №561; №3136; №8115; №4917; №5512; №8344-8345; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 217.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “On the Friendship of Peoples,” “The Love of the Sea,” “Love for the Sea,” “The Friendship of Peoples,” and untitled (“The Friendship of Peoples, This Wish...” and “The Love of the Sea!.”).

Dating: The poem was first published in Mnatobi magazine, issue No. 11 of 1946, which was signed for printing on January 23, 1947.

1947

January 23

He attends the funeral of his friend, Giorgi Kuchishvili, and bids him farewell to his final resting place with tears in his eyes. With deep sorrow, he recalls the words from a poem published in “Galaktion Tabidze’s Journal”: “Let Galaktion, by last name Tabidze and title King-Poet, adorn my procession...”.

Source: M. Garikuli, Our Galaktion, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 41. S. Tsverava, “The Price of Friendship”, newspaper Soplis Tskhovreba, November 1, 1973, N 256, p. 3.

1947

After January 23

The magazine Mnatobi publishes a continuation of Galaktion Tabidze’s cycle of poems titled “The Sea Has Roared”, which includes untitled poems: “In My Childhood...”, “I Have Seen Many Times...”, “How Wonderful...”, “We Stand on the Ship with Roses...”, “At Noon, When on the Sea...”, “By the Black Sea...”, “The Love of the Sea...”, and “Like a Possessor...”.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1946, №11, p. 24-28;

Note: On the partition of the magazine pages, unlike other authors, only the name “Galaktion” is indicated.

1947

January 20-24

He writes an untitled poem dedicated to the death of his friend, the poet Giorgi Kuchishvili, “The Black Raven Will Not Triumph...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2479; №108-a, p. 3012; №108-a, p. 3013; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 35; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 546.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “You Sang to the Hero” and untitled (beginning with: “Today, my being has not overcome...”; “In the poet’s heart, there is no dwelling...”; “What is the question of being or not being?..”).

1947

After January 24

He writes a prose sketch “What Was and Was Not”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 75; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 496-497.

1947

After January 24

He writes a stanza from the untitled poem “Grandmother’s Glasses”, which begins with “Andukaphar For hunting...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 75; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 498.

1947

After January 24

He writes a poem “A Page of History” (“You Wrote History in the Alphabet...”).

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 77; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 498.

1947

January 25

In the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, a poem titled “You Sang to the Hero” dedicated to his friend, Giorgi Kuchishvili, is published.

Source: newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1947, №4, p. 2.

1947

After January 27

On the title page of Sandro Shanshiashvili’s Book of selected works, he writes: “Sandro Shanshiashvili’s selected works in one volume. Shanshiashvili, meaning “მზია-მზია-მზიაშვილი” (“Always Hungry-Hungry-Hungryashvili). The ‘selected’ also comes from here – “დამშეული” ‘starving.’” He underlines lines of poems and adds question marks.

Source: MGL, t-211, Sandro Shanshiashvili, Selected Works, Tbilisi, 1947, p. 7-8, 15, 17, 37, 41, 66, 70, 75, 77-78, 83-84, 86-88, 90-96, 104-105, 115, 120-121, 130, 135, 137-141, 176-149, 168-169.

1947

After January 27

On the title page of the first volume of Vazha-Pshavela's poems, he writes notes pointing out that the previous four pages are blank, the inscription "Poems" does not correspond to "Vazha-Pshavela," and that Akaki Shanidze is a full member of the Academy of Sciences. He wonders whether Shanidze or Alexandre Abasheli contributed more effort as an editor. He believes that Vazha-Pshavela's portrait should have been printed in a more prominent place than on page six. In the writer's biography, he underlines passages and adds comments, noting poems with themes of the sea and hunger.

Source: MGL, t-51, Vazha-Pshavela, poems, volume 1, Edited by Alexandre Abasheli and Akaki Shanidze, Tbilisi, 1946, p. VI, IX, 3, 5, 6-7, 9, 11-12.

1947

Until January 28

He writes an untitled poem, "I Will No Longer Walk This Earth..."

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2092; №3558; №4043; №8938; №3326; №5-55, p. 46; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 51.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "New Year," "I Will No Longer Walk This Earth," and untitled ("I Would No Longer Walk...").

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1947

Until January 28

He writes a poem "The Midge Was Disbanded".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5244; №2027; №5482; N. Kvirikadze's autograph, №1879; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 41.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "The Oak", "The Midge in the Oak", "The Abkhaz Sings Many Songs", and untitled ("Let us sing, for time is ancient...").

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1947

Until January 28

He writes a poem "Dnieper".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2096; №2824; №3559; №7682; №28897-50, p. 76; №7583; №2016; №4621; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 100.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "Dnieper's May" and "Leselidze", as well as untitled versions (starting with: "Now, the unbearable pain feels...", "I have searched, I have found...", "Killer, marauder, dark...").

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1947

Until January 28

He writes a poem "Aragvi".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №634; №3560; №7589; №8151; №3323; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 97.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “To Aragvi” and “Naneishvili”, as well as untitled (“I have searched, I have found...”).

1947

Until January 28

He writes a poem “Freedom of a Woman”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3555-3556; №4618; №4936; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 141.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “March 8” and untitled (“Freedom of a woman – it is a firm foundation...”).

Dating: The fourth volume of the eight-volume collected works, where this poem is first published, was signed for printing on January 28, 1947.

1947

Until January 28

He writes a poem “Behold, the Line of Mighty Mountains”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №7593; №8153; №2087; №3325; №2087; №1927; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 112.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Labadze” and untitled (starting with: “The mountain and field that reach the eyes...” and “And the enemy desires this region...”).

Dating: The fourth volume of the collected works, where this poem is published for the first time, is signed for printing on January 28, 1947.

1947

Until January 28

He writes a poem “Distant Clouds, Distant Sails”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №747; №108-a, p. 2962-2963; №5504; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 269.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Our Kodori” and untitled (beginning with: “Distant clouds, distant sails...”; “Swift Kodori...”).

Dating: The fourth volume of the eight-volume collected works, where this poem is first published, was signed for printing on January 28, 1947.

1947

Until January 28

He addresses a statement to the director of the Georgian State Publishing House, Niko Kiknadze. He explains that the disagreements between him and the publishing house are unending, despite the matter being one that should be resolved solely between the author and the editor. He writes that he is compelled to refuse the publication of the fourth volume of his collected works by them.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-254; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 111-112.

Dating: The fourth volume of the eight-volume collected works mentioned here was signed for printing on January 28, 1947.

1947

Until January 28

He writes a poem “Beautiful Abkhazia”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5501-5502; №2032-2033; №2491; №7720; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 248.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles “New Tbilisi,” “New Sukhumi,” and untitled (“Beautiful Abkhazia...”).

Dating: The fourth volume of the eight-volume collected works, where this poem is first published, was signed for printing on January 28, 1947.

1947

Until January 28

He makes revisions to the untitled poem written in 1941 “From the House in Varazis Khevi...” and creates a new version of the work, which he includes in the fourth volume of his eight-volume collection under the title “On the Venetian Bridge”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №136; №743; №5499-a; №1286; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 260.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “On That Venetian Bridge” and untitled (beginning with: “From the House in Varazis Khevi...”; “On That Venetian Bridge...”).

Dating: The fourth volume of the eight-volume collected works, where this poem is first published, was signed for printing on January 28, 1947.

1947

Until January 28

He writes a poem “The Infantry Began to March”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №181; №2496; 2028-2029; 5495-5496; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 261.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “The Horseman,” “If It Comes to Riding a Horse,” and untitled (beginning with: “Our Flag, Comrades!.”; “The Infantry Began to March...”).

Dating: The fourth volume of the eight-volume collected works, where this poem is first published, was signed for printing on January 28, 1947.

1947

Until January 28

He writes a poem “With an Iron Chain”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №754; №2028; №5495; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 268.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “It Is Said,” “The Kind-Hearted Neighbour,” and untitled (“It Is Said on the Ship of Existence...”).

Dating: The fourth volume of the eight-volume collected works, where this poem is first published, was signed for printing on January 28, 1947.

1947

Until January 28

He writes a poem “Once, Said Chardin”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №557; №742; №3317; №1287; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 265.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Like a Falcon” and untitled (“Once, Said Chardin...”).

Dating: The fourth volume of the eight-volume collected works, where this poem is first published, was signed for printing on January 28, 1947.

1947

Until January 28

He writes a poem “Why Do I Need Life in This World”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №24-d., p. 1; №4936; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 270.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“Why Do I Need Life in This World...”).

Dating: The fourth volume of the eight-volume collected works, where this poem is first published, was signed for printing on January 28, 1947.

1947

Until January 28

He writes a poem “I Know the Dnipro Up Close”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2095; №3561; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 263.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“I Know the Dnipro Up Close...”).

Dating: The fourth volume of the eight-volume collected works, where this poem is first published, was signed for printing on January 28, 1947.

1947

Until January 28

He writes a poem “The Return of the Meskhi”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2021; №3889; №4028; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 280.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Behold, the Clouds Dispersed in the Sky” and untitled (“Behold, the Clouds Dispersed in the Sky...”).

Dating: The fourth volume of the eight-volume collected works, where this poem is first published, was signed for printing on January 28, 1947.

1947

Until January 28

He writes a poem “For Shackling a Human in Chains”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №8146; №1263; №2089; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 282.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“For Shackling a Human in Chains...”).

Dating: The fourth volume of the eight-volume collected works, where this poem is first published, was signed for printing on January 28, 1947.

1947

Until January 28

He writes a poem “Abkhiartsa!”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №767; №108-a, p. 2967; №2036; №5515; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 283.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Abkhiartsa, How You Resounded!” and untitled (“Abkhiartsa, How You Resounded...”).

Dating: The fourth volume of the eight-volume collected works, where this poem is first published, was signed for printing on January 28, 1947.

1947

Until January 28

He writes a poem “Karaia”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4959; №2014; №4905; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 62; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 567.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “In Karaya,” “The Hunter’s Poem,” “The Hunter,” and untitled (“It Fluttered, Spread Its Wings...”).

1947

Until January 28

He writes a poem “The Eagle”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1280; №5510; №6407; №8330; G. Tabidze, G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 69.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “You Were Compared to the Storm,” “Stalin,” and untitled (“The Grace of His Wings...”).

Dating: The fourth volume of the eight-volume collected works, where this poem is first published, was signed for printing on January 28, 1947.

1947

After January 28

He addresses a statement to the Georgian State Publishing House, requesting them to send him one thousand author copies of the fourth volume of his collected works.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-279; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 112.

Dating: The fourth volume of the eight-volume collected works, where this poem is first published, was signed for printing on January 28, 1947.

1947

After January 28

The fourth volume of Galaktion's collected works is published by the State Publishing House with a print run of 5,000 copies, edited by Shalva Radiani.

Source: G. Tabidze, works, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1947.

1947

After January 28

In the fourth volume of his collected works, he underlines and comments on the lines of the poems, makes corrections, and specifies how many lines of certain poems should be combined into a single line.

Source: MGL, t-131, G. Tabidze, works, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1947.

1947

After January 28

He drafts a preparatory plan for the fifth volume of his collected works. He notes that it is necessary to revise the poems "The Year 1940" and "Three Palms"; compare the fourth volume of his collected works with the collection "The Sea Has Roared" to identify unpublished poems; gather poems published in magazines and newspapers; review the poem Akaki Tsereteli; create a second version of "The Return of Imeri"; and compile an exact list of accumulated materials.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-590, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 477-478;

1947

After January 28

In the fourth volume of his collected works, he underlines, counts, and corrects the lines of the poems, adding bibliographic notes about where the poem was published, who translated it, or which actor recited it. He notes that the poem "Hey, Homeland" was recited in 1944 in Moscow by Vasily Kachalov, with music composed by Dimitri Arakishvili, and Korneli Kekelidze remarked, "We must remember our homeland, poetry, and humanity". For the poem "The Cup," he writes that it was brilliantly recited by Pierre Kobakhidze and translated into Russian by Sergei Shervinsky. To the first stanza of "Chango, As Before, I Still Await," he adds lines from Nikoloz Baratashvili's poem "The Fate of Kartli": "Irakli knows that Georgians consider misfortune as nothing". Regarding "The Times of Devotion to the Homeland Reign," he notes that it was widely published and translated into Russian. About "The Army Marches with Song," he highlights an interesting parallel with "A Discussion on Lyricism". For "Elguja's Return," he recalls someone claiming that the author of this poem could not write an epic and adds a new stanza: "Today, when the native nature is calm and serene, Elguja's return feels entirely different".

Source: MGL, t-132, G. Tabidze, works, vol. IV, Tbilisi, 1947. p. 5-52, 55-56, 58-61, 64-80, 85, 91, 94-95, 113-119, 133, 293-298.

February

1947

February 6

He delivers a speech and reads a poem at a voter assembly of Tbilisi's 7th electoral district, where Lavrentiy Beria is running as a candidate for deputy in the Supreme Council of the Georgian SSR.

Source: “На предвыборном собрании в Сталинском избирательном округе”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, February 6, 1947, Wednesday, №29, p. 1. “Памятный день. Сталинский избирательный округ гор. Тбилиси”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, February 10, 1947, Monday, №32, p. 2.

1947

After February 7

He reads Alexandre Abasheli's poems dedicated to Nikolai Nekrasov in the magazine Mnatobi, as well as translations of Nekrasov's poems by Alio Mashashvili and Vasil Gorgadze. He highlights the rhymes and notes that his own rhymes have been used.

Source: MGL, t-554, magazine Mnatobi, 1947, №12, p. 3-8.

1947

After February 7

He reads the magazine Mnatobi, making highlights and annotations. Regarding Alio Mashashvili's poem “What Was I Then?”, he writes that it is absolutely meaningless.

Source: MGL, t-555, magazine Mnatobi, 1946, December, №12, p. 7.

1947

After February 7

In the magazine Mnatobi, he reads Mariam Garikuli's memoir “The Path Traversed”. He notes that he also remembers the People's Theater building and was acquainted with all the individuals mentioned in the memoir - Mariam Demuria, Giorgi Laskhishvili, Shakro Bilanishvili, Grigol Rtskhiladze, and Ilia Agladze. He considers it magnificent that Mariam Tateishvili-Ratiani chose the pseudonym “Garikuli” (meaning “The Outcast”) due to her exclusion from the stage. He writes that Geronti Kikodze's time as editor of Sakhalkho Gazeti must have been the period when he was writing his monograph on cholera. Regarding Paolo Iashvili, he notes that at the writers' congress, Grigol Rtskhiladze nearly hit him on the head with a chair. He believes that the main virtue of this memoir is its sincere and just narration - Akaki stepping off the tram, Ilia on Andreev Street, the story of Ekaterine Gabashvili, Irodion Evdoshvili as a theater enthusiast, Ilia Agladze as an editor, the February days in Kutaisi, and the tram on Rustaveli Avenue. However, the description of the courtyards in Samtredia is a masterpiece.

Source: MGL, t-555, magazine Mnatobi, 1946, December, №12, p. 86-101.

1947

February 21 or before

He listens to a beautiful romance composed by Mariam Machavariani based on his poem “Everyone Has Something to Remember” and is impressed by her musical talent.

Source: MGL, t-860, Galaktion Tabidze, Selected works, Tbilisi, 1944.

1947

February 21

He gifts his “Selected Works” to Mariam Machavariani with the inscription: “To Mrs. Mariam Machavariani – as a token of admiration for her musical talent, after listening to the most beautiful romance, with deepest respect, G. Tabidze. February 21, 1947”.

Source: MGL, t-860, Galaktion Tabidze, Selected works, Tbilisi, 1944.

1947

February 23

In the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, a poem “Today is a Precious Day Signifying Victory” is published.

Source: newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1947, №8, p. 1.

1947

February 23

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation by Boris Serebryakov of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Today is a Precious Day Signifying Victory”, dedicated to the Soviet Army, is published, signed as “National Poet of Georgia”.

Source: Нар. поэт Грузии (Стихи посвященные Советской Армии) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1947, 23 февраля, №41, с.2.

1947

February or later

He writes an untitled poem “Unforgettable to My People...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, t-581; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 189; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 798.

1947

February or after

He becomes familiar with the Russian artistic-literary magazine Oktomberi and makes highlights throughout the text. Next to the table of contents, he writes a list of authors - Vasil Barnovi, Davit Kldiashvili, Valerian Gunia, Trifon Ramishvili, Gandegili, Zakaria Chichinadze, Kote Makashvili, Niko Nikoladze, Shio Mghvimeli, Bachana, Ekaterine Gabashvili, Anastasia Eristavi-Khoshtaria, Anastasia Tumanishvili-Tsereteli, Melania, Shio Aragvispireli, Dutu Megreli, Romanoz Pantskhava, Valerian Shalikashvili, Lado Aleksii-Meskhishvili, Simon Khundadze, Iakob Pantskhava, and Grigol Gvelesiani. He notes that all of them possessed the profound sense of public duty that led two leading figures - Ilia Chavchavadze and Akaki Tsereteli - to acts of selfless dedication. The older generation of Soviet literature in the following years established a living connection between pre-revolutionary and new literature.

Source: MGL, t-632, magazine “Октябрь”, 1947, №2, Moscow.

March

1947

March 1

He compiles a list of his own poems that relate to the theme of Georgian ornamentation.

Source: MGL, d-478, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 323.

1947

March 1

A meeting is held in the literature section of the Georgian Society for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries, dedicated to reading the English translations of the anthology of Georgian poetry prepared by Venera Urushadze. Along with other works, Venera Urushadze reads the English translations of Galaktion Tabidze’s poems.

Source: “В литературной секции Грузинского общества культурной связи с заграницей”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, 1947, March 8, Saturday, №50, p. 2.

1947

After March 3

He reads the Russian magazine Zvezda, highlighting passages and making comments. At the end, he writes down the years and locations where his literary evenings took place: in 1921, The Evening of the King of Poets and another event at the Conservatory; in 1923, at the Georgian Club; in 1928, at the Rustaveli Theatre; in 1933, at the Opera Theatre; in 1938, at both the Rustaveli Theatre and the Writers’ House; and in 1943, once again at the Opera Theatre.

Source: GTSM, 1441, magazine “Звезда”, 1947, 3 март.

1947

March 8

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes a notice that a meeting was held in the literature section of the Georgian Society for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries, dedicated to reading the English translations of the anthology of Georgian poetry prepared by Venera Urushadze and discussing the translator’s work. Along with other works, Venera Urushadze read the English translations of Galaktion Tabidze’s poems.

Source: “В литературной секции Грузинского общества культурной связи с заграницей”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, 1947, March 8, Saturday, №50, p. 2.

1947

Until March 9

He compiles a list of participating writers, organizations, and museums for the evening events scheduled at the Tbilisi State Conservatory.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-155, 39-45; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 327-328.

1947

Until March 9

For the decade of evening events at the Tbilisi State Conservatory, he compiles a list of songs based on his poems, arranged by Valeri Jvaridze. The list includes: "Leselidze", "Everyone Has Something to Remember", "My Native Land", "For the Homeland, For Stalin", "I and the Night", "Mary", "Blue Horses", "The Gravedigger", and "Two Bells".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-155, 46-47; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 328.

1947

Until March 9

For the decade of evening events at the Tbilisi State Conservatory, it is noted that 275 chairs are needed, along with a Writers' Union booth, a facsimile, and a separate poster for each evening.

Source: MGL, d-155, 49-51; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 328.

1947

Until March 9

He prepares an invitation for the evening events to be held in the small hall of the Tbilisi State Conservatory, indicating that from March 9 to 19, there will be ten evenings dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze, the National Poet of Georgia and a full member of the Academy of Sciences. Tickets are being sent for the first evening of the decade. Those who do not wish to attend should return their tickets by March 9, while those who wish to attend other evenings should notify the Academy of Sciences or the Conservatory by phone.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-155, 53; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 329.

1947

March 9

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation by Boris Serebryakov of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "February 9" ("The Voice of the Artists") is published.

Source: 9 февраля, (Стих) Г. Табидзе, Перевел Б. Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1947, 9 марта, №31, с.1.

1947

After March 18

He becomes familiar with the Russian magazine Sabtchota Tsigni. In the editorial preface, he makes highlights and writes that the term "fiction" applies only to prose, while poetry is a more complex art form. L'Art poétique - is the art of poetics, and as the French poet said, without poetry, everything else is just literature. Only fiction is art, not all forms of literature. He mentions

Alexandre Kazbegi, who is not a poet but creates works of fiction. He thinks the same can be said about Gabriele D'Annunzio's adventure. He is interested in whether anyone knows what is happening abroad in this regard.

Source: MGL, t-559, magazine "Советская Книга", 1947, №1.

1947

After March 18

He writes a poem "Georgian Tea".

Source: G. Tabidze's inscription on Alexei Nedogonov's poem "The Flag Over the Village Council" ("Флаг над сельсоветом"), MGL, t-710, magazine "Новый Мир", 1947, №1, p. 5.

1947

After March 18

He reads the Russian magazine Akhali Samkaro, highlights lines from poems and articles, and writes down his impressions. In Alexei Yugov's article "Grammar in Defence of History", he mentions that he worked for 15 years on his work "The Word". He writes about the fact that Khariton Vardoshvili spent 3 years translating Johann Wolfgang Goethe's poems but failed to achieve any success, whereas Yugov is different.

Source: MGL, t-710, magazine "Новый Мир", 1947, №1, p. 207.

1947

Until March 23

In his diary, he records the dates of the new moon for each month of 1947. He notes that some people go crazy during each new moon. He specifies the method for calculating the new moon and concludes that the new moon will occur on March 23.

Source: MGL, d-155, 53; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 330.

1947

March 24

He writes an untitled poem, "If They Ask Me: – What Do We Want, That...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4953; №456-ᄁ, p. 47-50; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 37.

Note: The poem is also found untitled, with different openings: "If They Ask What Do We Want, That..." and "If They Ask – What Is Needed...".

1947

After March 26

He reads the Russian magazine Akhali Samkaro, making notes and comments.

Source: MGL, t-711, magazine "Новый Мир", 1947, February, №2.

1947

After March 26

On the inside cover of the Russian magazine Akhali Samkaro, he writes two versions of the poem “The Unknown Shepherd’s Grave”.

Source: MGL, t-711, magazine “Новый Мир”, 1947, February, №2.

1947

March or later

He writes an untitled poem “The Light of Dawn Lit in the Sky...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, t-96; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 190. For dating and clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 798.

1947

March or later

He writes an untitled poem “The Passionate Young Man...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, t-96; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 190. For dating and clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 798.

1947

After March 31

He reads the magazine Mnatobi, making highlights and annotations.

Source: MGL, t-581, magazine Mnatobi, 1947, January-February, №1-2.

1947

After March 31

He writes an untitled poem beginning with “I can no longer win your heart by any means...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, t-581, magazine Mnatobi, 1947, January-February, №1-2, p. 289.

April

1947

April 4

He grants his spouse, Nino Kvirikadze, power of attorney to withdraw his 1000 roubles from the savings account at the state bank.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-632, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 371.

1947

April 6-7

He writes a poem “Bridge”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №690; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 36.

1947

April 9

He sends a letter to the director of the State Publishing House, Niko Kiknadze, stating that he reviewed the fourth volume of his collected works and was surprised to find that the volume number and the years 1941-1945 are not indicated in the book, despite Alexandre Cheishvili being aware of their necessity. He requests that these issues be corrected if the Book is not yet bound, but if doing so would delay the book, they should not bother.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-165; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 70.

1947

After April 25

He comes across the Russian artistic-literary magazine Oktyabr, making highlights and notes.

Source: MGL, t-631, magazine “Октябрь”, 1947, February, №4, Moscow.

May

1947

May 3

He is in Kojori and writes the poem “Kumisi”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №6519; №456-d, p. 19; №4927; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 63.

1947

May 5

He addresses a statement to the Georgian Academy of Sciences. Since he needs to transfer from the Second Hospital of Tbilisi to continue his treatment in Kojori, he requests that a light vehicle be provided from 9 AM to 2-3 PM on May 6.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-158; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 112.

1947

May 6

He writes a letter to his brother, Abesalom Tabidze, informing him that he is going to Kojori, but all the good summer houses are fully booked, and he can only find a place in the territory of horses and boars. He mentions that he seemed thin during their last meeting and advises him to see a doctor, bathe in water, exercise, and take care of himself. He requests that if any of his students say anything original or interesting about his work while writing their literature assignments, he should transcribe it and keep it, as he is interested in the opinions of non-professionals.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551.10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 13.

1947

May 7

He makes a note about a flock of sheep he encountered on the road and describes the characteristic behaviour and attire of the shepherd.

Source: MGL, d-651, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 232-235.

1947

May 7

He writes an untitled poem, “Even on My Feet, I Am Beautiful...”.

Source: MGL, d-651, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 235.

1947

April 9

In Sokhumi, he sends a letter to Vano Tuskadze, the head of the district committee, apologizing for not being able to visit. He informs him that he has handed the Book “The Sea Has Roared” to the publishing house and thanks him in advance for its publication.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-165; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 70.

1947

May 17

In the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, Sandro Shanshiashvili’s letter titled “Talents and Admirers” is published, in which the author accuses Soviet critics Besarion Zhghenti and Shalva Radiani of misinterpreting the works of Galaktion Tabidze and Ioseb Grishashvili. Shanshiashvili debates Beso Zhghenti regarding the assessment of Galaktion’s pre-revolutionary poetry. He finds the critic’s view unacceptable, arguing that the second Book of Galaktion’s poems is an incomparable treasure of pre-revolutionary Georgian poetry. The author accuses Zhghenti of attempting to rehabilitate Galaktion Tabidze’s literary past and notes that theoretical justifications should not be sought for Galaktion’s symbolist lyricism, which is portrayed with ambiguity.

Source: S. Shanshiashvili, “Talents and Admirers”, newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1947, №19 (May 17), p. 4.

1947

May 17

He writes a poem “Udzo”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №456-ᄀ, p. 20; №4926; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 50.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“You Still See Udzo from Afar...”).

1947

May 19

He notes to find out whether the fourth volume of his works has been published, if a price has been assigned, and how much it costs; he also inquires about the planned distribution of the book.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-614, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 83.

1947

After May 19

The State Publishing House, under the editorship of Giorgi Natroshvili, is printing the fourth volume of Galaktion Tabidze's works (1942–1945) with an edition of 5,000 copies.

Source: G. Tabidze, works, IV, Tbilisi, 1947;

1947

Spring

He reviews a collection of Kolau Cherniavski's poems, which the author gifted to him in 1927, with a dedication reading: "To the King of Georgian Poets". On the title page of this book, he writes the second stanza of the untitled poem, "I Happened to Come Across Your Book," written on May 23, 1945, dedicated to Cherniavski.

Source: MGL, t-708, Колау Чернявский, "Письма" (стихи), Тифлис, 1927.

June

1947

June 23

He is in Kojori.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-575, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 388.

1947

June 23

He makes a note about his relationship with the radio. He tries to recall when he first appeared on the radio, in which of his poems the radio is mentioned, what broadcasts were dedicated to his poems in Russian and Georgian, and which songs based on his poems were aired on the radio.

Source: MGL, d-575, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 388.

1947

June 27

He writes an untitled poem, "The Days Have Gathered Around Me...," inspired by a poem by the Russian writer Denis Davydov, which has a similar beginning.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №1134; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 36. For clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 548.

1947

June 28

He writes a poem "Come Toward Betania!"

Source: Autographs: MGL, №50-☐, p. 21; №456-☐, p. 50; №4928; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 38.

Note: The poem is also found untitled ("Come Toward Betania...").

1947

End of June

In Shovi, he sends a letter to Vano, telling him how he was treated in a peaceful environment in Kojori and expressing his wish for the same conditions there.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-87; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 70-71.

July

1947

Until July

He reads the 1904 edition of Vakhushti Batonishvili's Book "The History of Georgia" and writes the poem "I Stand on the Cliff of Khomli" on its last cover.

Source: Autograph, MGL, Nt-620; 6750; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 38.

1947

From May 6 to July 1

He is resting in Kojori with his spouse, Nino Kvirikadze. The director of the Kojori sanatorium, Professor Arkadi Gotsiridze, arranged a private room for them with two balconies and wonderful views, where they settled comfortably. Breakfast, lunch, and dinner were brought to them at the room.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-87; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 70-71.

Dating: A card written to his brother shows that he arrived in Kojori on May 6.

1947

July 1

In his notebook, he makes a note that the fourth volume of his collected works will be ready soon. He aims to prepare the book's cover photos, a bibliographic note for the press, a special letter for the radio, and dedication inscriptions for the copies he will give as gifts by July 9.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-190, 49; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 154.

1947

July 1

He writes an untitled poem, "A Poet Like Me Is Suddenly Recognized...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №233-a, p. 6313; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 39.

1947

After July 1

He writes an untitled poem dedicated to Giorgi Akhvlediani, "I Send You This Book...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №233-a, p. 6314-6315; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 52. For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 565.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "To Giorgi Akhvlediani".

1947

July 3

He addresses a statement to the accounting department of the Georgian Radio Committee, requesting that his royalty, due to him, be sent through his nephew, Vasil Tabidze.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-159; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 112.

1947

July 4

He opens an account Book in the savings bank and deposits 6,860 roubles into the account.

Source: G. Tabidze's excerpt from the storage ledger notebook, 300, p. 38; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 380.

1947

July 17

He practices typing on a typewriter.

Source: MGL, d-567, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 348.

1947

After July 17

He becomes acquainted with Mark Zhivov's Russian-language brochure "Contemporary Polish Literature", and his attention is drawn to the final stanza of the poem "Red Army" by the Polish poet Lucjan Sienwald, which is cited by Zhivov. As a result of the creative impulse drawn from these lines, he writes an untitled poem on the brochure, "Our Century Shines...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №6262; G. Tabidze, G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 74; М. Живов, "Современная польская литература" (стенограмма публичной лекции прочитанной 17 июля 1947 года в Лекционном зале в Москве), "Правда", 1947.

1947

July 19

In the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, Besarion Zhghenti's letter titled "For the Genuine History of Literature" (in response to Sandro Shanshiashvili) is published. The critic responds to Sandro Shanshiashvili, who accused him of attempting to rehabilitate Galaktion's pre-revolutionary works. According to Besarion Zhghenti, Sandro Shanshiashvili's fervour is inexplicable, especially considering that Galaktion has shown no desire to return to his old creative positions. The critic notes that if anyone is worthy of reproach today, it is primarily Shanshiashvili, who does not critically engage with his older works and includes pieces in his selected works that have no connection to "the high moral consciousness of the Soviet people".

Source: B. Zhghenti, For the Unfailing History of Literature (In Response to Sandro Shanshiashvili), newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1947, №28 (July 19), p. 4.

1947

Until July 21

He travels to Shovi from Kutaisi with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, and poet Giorgi Samkharadze. On the way, they pass through Khvanchkara, arriving at their destination in the evening and settling in the “Kurzali” sanatorium in Shovi. The poet shares stories about their visit to Khvanchkara and the treatment prescribed for him by Professor Arkadi Gotsiridze with the chief doctor of the sanatorium, Lado Gasviani.

Source: M. Alavidze, Galaktion’s Life and Poetry, magazine Gantiadi, 1992, № 11-12, p. 123. G. Mebuke, records about Galaktion Tabidze, Tbilisi, 1982, p. 60-61.

1947

July 21

From Shovi to Tbilisi, he sends a letter to his brother, Abesalom Tabidze, informing him that he and his wife, Nina Kvirikadze, are resting well.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze’s letter, h-24551-337; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 176.

Dating: The letter dated July 23, 1947, states that this happened “the day before yesterday”.

1947

After July 23

He is in Shovi and receives a letter from his brother. Abesalom informs him that there are terrible heatwaves in Tbilisi and that he will stay for another three or four days to pick up the notebooks before heading to Chkvishi. He plans to return to Tbilisi again on August 22-23 to start working.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze’s letter, h-24551-337; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 176.

1947

After July 25

On the back cover of Pavel Antokolsky’s selected poems, he writes an untitled poem: “The Candle of Sioni Was Flickering and the Wall Was Crumbling...”.

Source: MGL, t-248, Павел Антокольский, Избранное, Moscow, 1947.

1947

July

He types the poem “I Stand on the Cliff of Khomli” on a printing machine. After finishing the printing, he begins to correct the text with a pencil.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4929; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 38.

1947

From the end of June

The medical staff at the Shovi sanatorium meticulously follows the treatment instructions prescribed for Galaktion by Professor Arkadi Gotsiridze, and they do everything possible to keep the poet away from alcohol.

Source: G. Mebuke, records about Galaktion Tabidze, Tbilisi, 1982, p. 61.

August

1947

August 1

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka reports that today at 9:20 PM, the poetry of the National Poet Galaktion Tabidze will be broadcast on the radio.

Source: Newspaper “Заря Востока”, August 1, 1947, Friday, №152, p. 4.

1947

August 1

The poetry of the National Poet Galaktion Tabidze is being broadcast on the radio.

Source: Newspaper “Заря Востока”, August 1, 1947, Friday, №152, p. 4.

1947

August 5 or earlier

He is in Shovi, reading “The History of Georgia” by Niko Berdzenishvili, Ivane Javakhishvili, and Simon Janashia, making highlights and comments. He notes that the materials are preserved in the Academy’s Institute of History, the Georgian Museum, the Georgian Institute of Art History, and the Metekhi Museum. He also states that the Georgian alphabet originated no later than the 7th century BCE.

Source: MGL, t-574, N. Berdzenishvili, I. Javakhishvili, S. Janashia, “History of Georgia”, a textbook for senior high school classes, Tbilisi, 1946.

1947

August 5 or earlier

In the History of Georgia textbook, on the genealogical chart of the main branch of the Bagrationi royal house, he writes various lines from his poem “It is War”, including: “The map of Europe hangs like blue lines and dashes...”

Source: MGL, t-574, N. Berdzenishvili, I. Javakhishvili, S. Janashia, “History of Georgia”, a textbook for senior high school classes, Tbilisi, 1946.

1947

August 5

He is in Shovi, reading the 1946 edition of “The History of Georgia”. He reflects on the history of the Georgian alphabet and writes the poem “Hymn – The Georgian Alphabet” directly on the book.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №108-a, 3017; №6520, №6535, №6540, №6544, №6545; Nt. 574; N 2414; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 45.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Praise of Praises,” “Hymn to the Georgian Alphabet,” “A New Page of History,” “Praise of Praises to the Georgian Alphabet,” and “The Georgian Alphabet”.

1947

After August 9

On the front cover of the second volume of the Book “The History of the Civil War in the Soviet Union”, which covers the 1917 proletarian revolution, he writes that he will gather all the literary and artistic materials related to this topic from his works, review the books and manuscripts in his archive, have paper frames, photos, and posters prepared, and organize an exhibition at the Writers’ Union.

Source: MGL, t-316, “История гражданской войны в СССР”, том второй, Великая Пролетарская Революция (Октябрь-Ноябрь 1917 года), Moscow, 1947.

1947

August 10

He writes an untitled poem “On the Night of August First...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №6668, №136-d, p. 18; №4109; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 39.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Buba” and “Snow in August”.

1947

After August 11

He receives a letter from his brother, Abesalom, who informs him that he returned to Samtredia from Tbilisi the previous day. He had been waiting, hoping that perhaps Galaktion and Nina had returned. He is glad to hear that they are resting well. He writes that he will return to Tbilisi on August 25, but before that, he and his wife, Tatiana, will visit the children in Chkvishi.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-349; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 94, 180;

1947

August 17

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes an interview with the Honoured Artist and Stalin Prize laureate, sculptor Silovan Kakabadze. He states that he has completed work on a stone sculpture of Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Newspaper “Заря Востока”, August 17, 1947, Sunday, №163, p. 3.

1947

August 17

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes an interview with the Honoured Artist, composer Shalva Mshvelidze. He states that he is working on an oratorio titled “The Great Caucasus”, dedicated to the 30th anniversary of the October Socialist Revolution, which will incorporate poems by Galaktion Tabidze and others.

Source: Newspaper “Заря Востока”, August 17, 1947, Sunday, №163, p. 3.

1947

After August 21

He familiarizes himself with the collection “Poems About Moscow”. In the end, he notes that 28 hectares of grapefruit plantations occupy the estate yards of landlords and generals.

Source: GTSM, 1170, Сборник “Стихи о Москве”, Moscow, 1947.

Dating: The Book was signed for printing on August 21, 1947.

1947

Until August 24

Along with Nino Kvirikadze, he travels from Shovi to Baghdati, visiting his wife’s village. He is pleased with the warm welcome he receives from Nino’s mother, Ekaterine Gvinjilia-Kvirikadze. Upon returning to Tbilisi, he dedicates and sends her the poem “Thank You, Mother” in manuscript form.

Source: N. Salaghia, You are the only one, Nino... Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 391.

1947

Until August 24-25

He is vacationing in Shovi with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze. Following the instructions of the resort director, Simon Kurashvili, carpenter Nikoloz Vachadze is crafting a special round wooden table for the poet in a pine grove on the mountain slope. During the process, Nikoloz Vachadze tells Galaktion about the Nikortsminda Cathedral and its intricate carvings. The intrigued poet wishes to visit the cathedral but is unable to do so. Inspired by the carpenter’s narrative and his own imagination, He writes a poem “Praise to Nikortsminda”.

Source: I. Kukava, From the Archive of Memory, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 404; M. Alavidze, Galaktion’s Life and Poetry, magazine Gantiadi, 1992, № 11-12, p. 126; P. Nishnianidze, From Galaktion’s Life, Tbilisi, 1964, p. 63-68.

Note: According to Mikheil Alavidze’s recollection, Galaktion did visit Nikortsminda. However, Nino Kvirikadze’s memoir suggests that he did not see the cathedral and wrote the poem without having visited it.

1947

August 24-25

He travels from Shovi to Kutaisi and settles in the hotel “Kutaisi”.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-192, p. 7; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 197. Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-191, p. 27; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 189.

1947

August 26

He sends a telegram from Kutaisi to the Academy of Sciences' accounting department, requesting that his due salary be sent to the address of the "Kutaisi" hotel.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-192, p. 7; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 197.

1947

August 26

A meeting is held with Galaktion and representatives of the Kutaisi City Committee, Young Communists, the newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi, and the Kutaisi Writers' Union. The introductory speech is delivered by Associate Professor Giorgi Samkharadze, the executive secretary of the Kutaisi branch of the Writers' Union of Georgia. Attendees recite their own poems dedicated to Galaktion, and the poet gives a speech. The event is concluded by the Komsomol secretary, who states that Galaktion is the foremost writer in the entire Soviet Union, and therefore, in Europe as well.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-192, p. 11; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198, 199.

Note: Akhvlediani, Gvetadze, and Glurjidge read their own poems dedicated to Galaktion. The authors' first names or initials are not indicated in the record.

1947

After August 26

A notice about the meeting with Galaktion held in Kutaisi on August 26 is published in the Chronology of the newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-192, p. 11; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 199;

1947

After August 26

He visits the Kutaisi automobile factory.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-192, p. 13–16; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 199.

1947

Until August 28

He returns to Shovi from Kutaisi with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze.

Source: M. Alavidze, Galaktion's Life and Poetry, magazine Gantiadi, 1992, № 11–12, p. 126.

1947

Summer

The administration of the Shovi resort hosts an evening event where Giorgi Samkharadze gives a speech. Galaktion delivers a thank-you speech, which is transcribed by Georgian Radio. The poet reads his new poems and presents the resort director with his own photograph, accompanied by a poem dedicated to him. After the event, a banquet is held, during which Galaktion recites "Nikortsminda" and other new poems.

Source: P. Nishnianidze, From Galaktion's Life, Tbilisi, 1964, p. 63–68. G. Mebuke, records about Galaktion Tabidze, Tbilisi, 1982, p. 61.

1947

Until August 24

He dedicates the untitled poem “May We Always Have People Everywhere...” as a token of gratitude to the director of the Shovi resort, Simon Kurashvili, and the head physician of the same resort, Vladimir Gasviani.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №136-d, p. 24-25; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 44; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 553.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “May We Always Have People Everywhere,” “To Simon Qurashvili and Vladimir Gasviani,” and untitled (beginning with: “With Your Care...”; “I Was Stirred Again by Your Attention...”; “May We Always Have a Human...”; “I Am Leaving... But...”; “From You, I Received a Grove as a Gift...”; “A Table Dedicated by You Stood Before Me...”; “A Table Gifted by You Stood Before Me...”; “To My Beloved...”).

1947

Until August 24

He is in Baghdati and writes an untitled poem, “Though I Am a Poor Poet, I Have Nothing...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1070; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 51; Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 391.

1947

Until August 24

Director Alexandre Jaliashvili is making a documentary film titled “Soviet Georgia”. The director plans to show Galaktion on Mtatsminda in one shot. The poet is asked to write a poem in response to Ilia Chavchavadze’s poem “Spring” (“The tree puts on its leaf...”) so that a song can be composed based on it, which will be featured in the film, performed by Vladimir Germesashvili.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1973, N 10, p. 3.

1947

August 24

In response to Director Alexandre Jaliashvili’s request, he begins working on an untitled poem, “The Leaf Rustles in the Forest...”. According to the director’s vision, the poem is a response to Ilia Chavchavadze’s work “Spring”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №195; №342; №647; №648; №3270; №3825; №3921; №4952. №136-Ⓞ, p. 27; N 01-Ⓞ, p. 6-7; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 41.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “The Leaf Rustled in the Forest,” “Inscription on Ilia Chavchavadze’s Book,” and untitled (beginning with: “The Leaf Rustled in the Forest...”; “Every One of Your...”; “The Cry of Our Eagle...”).

1947

August 25 or later

He makes a note titled “Nikortsminda. Hydroelectric Station”, in which he recalls how his poem “Praise Upon Praise to Nikortsminda” was created. According to Galaktion, while he was in Shovi, a carpenter from Nikortsminda was making him a work desk and, at the same time, telling him about the carvings of Nikortsminda. According to the poet, he promised the carpenter that he would definitely write a poem about the church, and he fulfilled that promise. According to Galaktion, caring for historical monuments is one of the most important tasks of modern times.

Source: MGL, d-626, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 206-207.

1947

August 26

He is in Kutaisi and writes an untitled poem, “When in Perkhuli...”

Source: Autograph, MGL, №6809; №6810; №110-a, p. 8017; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 55.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Tamari” and untitled (“But Tamar...”).

1947

August 28

He travels from Shovi to Kutaisi once again with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, and Associate Professor Dimitri Kopaliani.

Source: M. Alavidze, Galaktion’s Life and Poetry, magazine Gantiadi, 1992, № 11-12, p. 126.

1947

August 25-29

He revises the poem “Praise of Praises to Nikortsminda” and sends it under the title “Nikortsminda” to the editorial office of the newspaper Industrialuri Kutaisi for publication.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №3461-3462; №3461; №43-a, p. 6888; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 56.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (beginning with: “Respect, Modesty...”; “What Hand Built...”).

1947

August 29

The newspaper Industriuli Sakartvelo published a notice stating that on August 26, the Kutaisi City Committee of the Young Communist League and the editorial office of the newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi organized a meeting of young intelligentsia with the National Poet of Georgia, Academician Galaktion Tabidze. The meeting was opened with a brief introductory speech by Giorgi Samkharadze, the chairman of the Kutaisi branch of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia. The announcement noted that Galaktion Tabidze read poems written in recent days, and the attendees welcomed him with love and warm feelings. A welcoming speech was given by the secretary of the Kutaisi City Committee of the Young Communist League, and poems dedicated to Galaktion were read by poets Silovan Akhvlediani, Archil Gurjidze, and Vasil Gvetadze.

Source: Newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi, 1947, № 165, p. 2.

1947

August 30

In the newspaper Industrialuri Kutaisi, the poem “Praise to Nikortsminda” is published under the title “Nikortsminda”.

Source: Newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi, 1947, №166, p. 1.

1947

August 30

He congratulates the editor of the newspaper Simartle, Sh. Javakhadze, on the publication of the newspaper’s fifth issue and wishes that the name of the fighting press continues to be carried with honour. He concludes the letter with two lines from his poem about the press: “The press is the heart of the restless masses / The press is the heart of millions”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-160; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 71.

1947

August 30

The newspaper Industriuli Sakartvelo publishes a portrait of Galaktion Tabidze painted by Ucha Japaridze, along with the poem “Nikortsminda”.

Source: Newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi, 1947, № 166, p. 2.

1947

August 30

He participates in a festive evening dedicated to the release of the fifth issue of the newspaper Simartle, held at the Culture House of Kutaisi District.

Source: Newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi, 1947, № 169, p. 2.

1947

August 31

The newspaper Industriuli Sakartvelo publishes a lengthy announcement stating that on September 1, at 8 PM, a major literary evening and concert dedicated to the work of the National Poet of Georgia, Academician Galaktion Tabidze, will be held at the Lado Meskhishvili State Theater in Kutaisi. The announcement includes a long list of speakers.

Source: Newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi, 1947, № 167, p. 2.

1947

August

He writes a poem “Shoda”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3557; №4072; №7430; №7745; №136-d., p. 13; G. Tabidze, G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 66.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “By the Fireplace,” “The Fire is Pensive,” “The Carved Door,” “The Hearth Head from Trialeti,” and untitled (“The Sky is Calm...”).

1947

August

He plans a meeting with readers at the Shovi resort. He intends to prepare several posters for the event, arrange the ticketing, and take photos of the meeting.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-538, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 196.

September

1947

September 1

He notes that, on assignment from the Central Committee, the Writers' Union of Kutaisi organized a major literary evening in his honour. He met with fellow writers, and similar gatherings took place in Shovi and Baghdadi as well. He mentions that he accumulated a substantial amount of material from these meetings and evenings.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-194, p. 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 209.

1947

September 1

While in Kutaisi, he sketches a deer grazing in the forest in his notebook, noting the date and location beneath the drawing.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's sketch and record, MGL, d-192, p. 18; AE, Book XXV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 296.

1947

September 1

A literary evening dedicated to the works of Galaktion Tabidze, the National Poet of Georgia and an academician, is held at the Lado Meskhishvili State Theatre in Kutaisi.

Source: Newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi, 1947, № 169, p. 2.

1947

September 3

The newspaper Industriuli Sakartvelo reports that on August 30, a celebratory evening was held at the Kutaisi District Culture House in honour of the 500th issue of the newspaper Simartle. The event featured the participation of the National Poet and academician, Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi, 1947, № 169, p. 2.

1947

September 3

The newspaper Industriuli Sakartvelo reports that on September 1, a creative evening dedicated to Georgia's National Poet and academician Galaktion Tabidze was held at the Lado Meskhishvili State Theatre in Kutaisi. The event opened with a welcoming speech by the esteemed poet

Domenti Tomashvili, followed by an address on Galaktion Tabidze's work delivered by Associate Professor Giorgi Samkharadze. Several poets shared their own verses dedicated to Galaktion, including Mikel Pataridze, Silovan Akhvlediani, Archil Gurjidze, Vasil Gvetadze, Shota Nizharadze, and Vakhtang Gogolashvili. Galaktion himself recited some of his own poems. The audience warmly received the National Poet, and the evening concluded with a concert.

Source: Newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi, 1947, № 169, p. 2.

1947

September 6

He writes a poem "Moscow".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №23; N. Kvirikadze's autograph, 4964; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 40.

Note: The poem is also found untitled ("I Still Remember Moscow...").

1947

Until September 12

The poet, who has recently returned from the countryside, is visited by the assistant of director Alexandre Jaliashvili, who asks him to deliver the promised poem, which a song will be written for and later included in the documentary film. Since the poet does not consider the poem complete, he tells the guest that the work is not yet finished. The director's assistant explains that the film crew is in a hurry. After this, the poet writes the poem "The Leaf Rustles in the Forest..." on the spot, a poem he had started working on a few days earlier.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №195; №342; №647; №648; №3270; №3825; №3921; №4952. №136-d, p. 27; N 01-d, p. 6-7; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 41.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "The Leaf Rustled in the Forest," "Inscription on Ilia Chavchavadze's Book," and untitled (beginning with: "The Leaf Rustled in the Forest..."; "Every One of Your..."; "The Cry of Our Eagle...").

1947

September 12

He completes the work on the untitled poem "The Leaf Rustles in the Forest..." at the request of director Aleksandre Jaliashvili.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №195; №342; №647; №648; №3270; №3825; №3921; №4952. №136-d, p. 27; N01-d, p. 6-7; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 41.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "The Leaf Rustled in the Forest," "Inscription on Ilia Chavchavadze's Book," and untitled (beginning with: "The Leaf Rustled in the Forest..."; "Every One of Your..."; "The Cry of Our Eagle...").

1947

September 19

He notes that the February Revolution descended upon Kutaisi like a hawk. At the time, he was living with the artist Theodor Chudetsky in a house owned by Jibo Ivashvili. Both were struggling financially, and whenever they came into some money, they would spend it in restaurants, only to resume their battle for survival the next day. Galaktion recalls that, during this period, he was out of touch with his family. Together with Beglar Akhospireli, he had been sentenced to two weeks' imprisonment for disturbing public order and awaited arrest daily. As fate would have it, the February Revolution intervened, and Police Chief Lavrenti Makharadze himself was arrested and escorted from the station in a carriage. The crowd wanted him punished, but the man riding alongside him, Evgeni Gegetchkori, addressed the public, preventing any violence. Galaktion recalls standing among the crowd, watching the former police chief, once proud as an eagle, now huddled in the carriage. At that moment, his eyes met Makharadze's, and the poet thought to himself, "You who intended to arrest me, now find yourself imprisoned". Standing beside Galaktion, Beglar Akhospireli shouted these very words to the police chief, echoing Galaktion's unspoken thoughts.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-629, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 317-318.

1947

September 21

He is in Abkhazia, in New Athos, and writes the poem "New Athos".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №110-a, 8020; №8021; №8022; №8352-8353; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 41.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "Two Beginnings," "Philosophy," "Here, the Heart is Both a Slave and a Master," and untitled (beginning with: "Here, Visible Dreams..."; "War is Replaced by Peace...").

1947

September 21

Together with Khukhuti Bghazhba, he travels to the New Athos resort house to visit Andria Chochua, the Chairman of the Supreme Council of Abkhazia. They stay in a small house built beside the Athos Monastery, offering a breathtaking view. In his notebook, He writes a poem "This Visible Dream is Haunted by Spirits..." Then, tearing out the page, he gifts the poem to Bghazhba.

Source: Kh. Bghazhba, Unforgettable Evenings, newspaper Sabtchota Apkhazeti, November 2, 1973, N 215, p. 3.

1947

September

The ninth issue of the children's magazine Oktombreli, dedicated to Stalin, is published under its new title, Dila. This issue includes an excerpt from Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Gori".

Source: Magazine Dila, 1947, September, №9, p. 8.

1947

September 21

Together with Khukhuti Bghazhba, he tours war-torn Sokhumi, observing the new construction projects amidst the devastation. Seeing a ruined house, he is moved to write the poem “A Ruined House in Sokhumi”.

Source: MGL, d-244, p. 8; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 542. Kh. Bghazhba, Unforgettable Evenings, newspaper Sabtchota Apkhazeti, November 2, 1973, N 215, p. 3.

Note: In the source, Khukhuti Bghazhba is mentioned only by his last name.

1947

September 21 or later

A literary evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze is held in Sokhumi.

Source: MGL, d-244, p. 8; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 542. Kh. Bghazhba, Unforgettable Evenings, newspaper Sabtchota Apkhazeti, November 2, 1973, N 215, p. 3.

Note: In the source, Khukhuti Bghazhba is mentioned only by his last name.

1947

September 21 or later

He writes an untitled poem “The Mountain Is Called New Athos...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №8483; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 188; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 798.

1947

September 23

He is at the Sokhumi airport and writes on a cigarette box: “I write with the pencil I found here a year ago”.

Source: V. Javakhadze, “Unknown. Apology of Galaktion Tabidze”, Tbilisi, 2020, p. 163.

1947

September 27

He writes an untitled poem dedicated to the director of the Kutaisi Automotive Plant, Boris Bukia, “I Dedicate This Book to You, Inspired by...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №9-a, p. 82, 83; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 59.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “September 27. Bukia” and untitled (beginning with: “I Send You This Book, Completely Filled...”; “It Is Finished. Now the Side...”).

1947

September

Akaki Gatsserelia publishes an article titled “The Stress in Georgian Poetry” in the magazine Mnatobi, in which he particularly emphasizes that Galaktion Tabidze is the only poet who uses prosodic nuances in a long rhythmic period - within the stanza.

Source: Akaki Gatsserelia, “The Stress in Georgian Poetry”, magazine Mnatobi, 1947, №9, p. 90-111.

Dating: The note in the notebook is placed after the entry dated January 4.

October

1947

After October 1

In Giorgi Bakradze's Book "Bibliography of Georgian Periodicals", he numbers the newspapers and magazines of interest to him starting from 1903 and makes underlines.

Source: MGL, t-17, G. I. Bakradze, "Bibliography of Georgian Periodicals" (1819-1945), Publication of the Book Chamber, Tbilisi, 1947, p. 18-30, 39-50, 52, 55, 58, 62, 70-80, 83-84, 89, 91-92, 96, 110-112, 121, 136, 138, 145, 157-158, 165, 169-170, 181, 183-184, 189-190, 192, 200.

1947

October 7

He is in Moscow on an assignment from the Academy of Sciences and begins writing a letter to the Ukrainian poet Pavlo Tychyna. He inquires about the addressee and expresses surprise that they have neither seen each other nor communicated for quite some time.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-164; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 71.

1947

October 12

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes a report stating that on September 28, works by Georgian artists were sent by airplane to Moscow for the Union-wide exhibition commemorating the 30th anniversary of the "Great October Socialist Revolution", including a bust of Galaktion Tabidze created by the sculptor Silovan Kakabadze.

Source: "Произведения художников Грузии отправлены в Москву", newspaper "Заря Востока", October 12, 1947, Sunday, №203, p. 3.

1947

After October 15

Three poems by Galaktion Tabidze are published in the poetry collection "Georgian Poets to Kutaisi": "From Tskaltubo to Kutaisi...", "Do You Remember?", and "How Captivating You Are, How Magnificent!".

Source: Collection "Georgian Poets to Kutaisi", Kutaisi, 1947, p. 17-19.

1947

After October 15

In the poetry collection "Georgian Poets to Kutaisi", he makes underlines and critical comments on the lines of the preface by Giorgi Samkharaidze. At the beginning, he notes that there is a sense of betrayal of truth in the book.

Source: MGL, t-196, "Georgian Poets to Kutaisi", Kutaisi, 1947, p. III-XI, 15, 98-99.

1947

After October 15

In the collection “Georgian Poets to Kutaisi” published by the newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi, the following poems are printed: “From Tskaltubo to Kutaisi...”, “Do You Remember?”, and “How Enchanting You Are, How Magnificent!”.

Source: MGL, t-196, “Georgian Poets to Kutaisi”, Kutaisi, editor R. Gvetadze, compilers: G. Samkharadze and M. Alavidze. 1947, p. 17–19.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on October 15, 1947.

1947

After October 15

He reads the collection “Georgian Poets to Kutaisi”, working on the preface with pencils of various colours and adding comments in which he notes that the Book does not reflect the truth.

Source: MGL, t-196, “Georgian Poets to Kutaisi”, Kutaisi, editor R. Gvetadze, compilers: G. Samkharadze and M. Alavidze. 1947, p. 17–19.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on October 15, 1947.

1947

Until October 16

He sends the poem “The Night Shimmers Like Silver...” from the cycle “Goliath Steps” to Parmen Loria in Batumi for publication in the newspaper Sabtchota Adjara, along with a letter. In the letter, he mentions that Alexandre Gomiasvili is editing this cycle of his poems and considers him the only remaining friend by his side at that time. He expresses his sorrow over being ostracized by the entire city of Tbilisi. Galaktion sends his regards to the poets of Adjara and particularly highlights the young poet Giorgi Salukvadze.

Source: Parmen Loria’s letter, G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299-300; P. Loria, Recollections about Galaktion, newspaper Sabtchota Adjara, October 12, 1973, N 199, p. 4.

Dating: Parmen Loria’s response letter is dated October 16, 1947.

1947

After October 16

From Batumi, he receives a response letter from Parmen Loria. The sender promises to publish the sent poem and encourages Galaktion, assuring him that the people do not ostracize or forget him. While a few individuals may express negative sentiments towards him, this cannot diminish the immense love the people have for him.

Source: Parmen Loria’s letter, Autograph, MGL, 24551-455; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299-300.

1947

After October 16

He sends the poem “No Longer Have I Time For...” to Parmen Loria in Batumi for publication in the newspaper Sabtchota Adjara.

Source: P. Loria, Recollections about Galaktion, newspaper Sabtchota Adjara, October 12, 1973, N 199, p. 4.

1947

October 18 or later

In his diary titled “Notes”, he writes that in 1939, his poem “Gori” was used to open the Book “To the Leader: Georgian Writers”, dedicated to the 60th anniversary of Stalin’s birth. He then quotes articles published eight years later in the Russian newspapers Pravda and Izvestia, in which the ideas expressed in his poem are reiterated.

Source: MGL, d-152, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 310-311.

Note: He refers to the article “Великая животворная сила советского патриотизма” (“The Great Life-Giving Force of Soviet Patriotism”), which was published in the newspaper Pravda on October 18, 1947, in issue № 276 (10667), and to V. Poltoratsky’s article “В одном городе” (“In One City”), which appeared on the same day in Izvestia, issue № 246.

1948

After October 18

He receives a lengthy letter from the translator Igor Postupalsky in Moscow. Since the State Publishing House of Artistic Literature has decided to publish a Book of Galaktion’s poems in Russian translation, the correspondent asks if the poet would like to involve him in this project. He informs that he does not know Georgian but can only translate through dictionaries. However, he is familiar with Georgian culture and poetry. Recently, he prepared Russian translations for a one-volume work by Alexandre Shanshiashvili. While not everything was successful, he managed to translate several poems very well, which makes him confident that he should proceed with this project. He inquires if Galaktion knows the Russian translations of his works by Maksym Rylsky, Pavlo Tychyna, Mykola Bazhan, Lekonte de Lisle, and others. He mentions that he has read several of Galaktion’s poems in Russian translation, published in periodicals, and is familiar with the Russian-language collections, thinking that most of them were translated poorly. Even many good poems have poor translations. In this regard, he believes Simon Chikovani was luckier. Postupalsky expresses interest in translating not just two or three poems by Galaktion but a larger body of work, making it a part of his life. He prefers to translate even difficult but the best poems. He also offers to take on the role of editor for this book, believing he can select and organize the material well, mentioning other books he has edited. However, he adds that he does not like interference from the author in the translation process. At the end of the letter, Postupalsky asks the recipient to notify Alexandra Ryabinina and Sofia Khitarova if he is interested in involving him as a translator and to send an official letter to the director of the State Publishing House of Artistic Literature, Anatoly Kotov, if he wishes to entrust him with the book’s editing.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-64; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 303-305.

1947

Until October 19

He reads the one-volume collected works of Vladimir Mayakovsky in Russian, making highlights and comments. He is curious whether Mayakovsky knew the Georgian language.

Source: MGL, t-352, Владимир Маяковский, Собрание Сочинений в одном томе, Moscow, 1936.

Dating: In the very first entry, it is mentioned that he requests the editorial office of Komunisti to publish the annotation and cover cliché of the fourth volume of Galaktion Tabidze's writings in the October 19 issue.

1947

Until October 19

He writes four versions of an untitled quatrain - "Is it a mountain or a field, or a battlefield? Stryphon, everything bears your hand..." - and adds critical notes to each.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, t-352, Владимир Маяковский, Собрание Сочинений в одном томе, Moscow, 1936, p. 5.

1947

Until October 19

On behalf of the editorial office of the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, he drafts the text of an announcement to be published in the October 19 issues of Komunisti and Zarya Vostoka, which includes the annotation and cover cliché of the fourth volume of Galaktion's writings.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, t-352, Владимир Маяковский, Собрание Сочинений в одном томе, Moscow, 1936, p. 5.

1947

Until October 19

In the collected works of Vladimir Mayakovsky, he notes that on one of the pages, the significance of the Russian artistic-literary group "LEF" (Left Front of the Arts), led by Vladimir Mayakovsky, is explained. He notes that Mayakovsky seriously considers his birth year, 1893, as the beginning of his new poetics.

Source: MGL, t-352, Владимир Маяковский, Собрание Сочинений в одном томе, Moscow, 1936, p. 6.

1947

Until October 19

In the collected works of Vladimir Mayakovsky, he writes about the poem "Left March (To the Sailors)", noting that the refrain was not popular in Russian literature and is not found in the poetry of Alexander Pushkin, Mikhail Lermontov, or Fyodor Tyutchev. It later appeared in the works of Valery Bryusov, whereas in Georgia, it has been present since the 5th century.

Source: MGL, t-352, Владимир Маяковский, Собрание Сочинений в одном томе, Moscow, 1936, p. 31.

1947

After October 20

On the back cover of Akaki Gatsserelia's Book "The Death of Baratashvili", he writes his biographical details: "Beginning period: 1. The head of the column and the Bagrationi. 2. The ruins of Bagrati Cathedral. 3. Memories from the poems. What is happening in Tbilisi? 1. The poetry of comparison. 2. The reaction... Tbilisi Seminary and others".

Source: MGL, t-38, Akaki Gatsserelia, "The Death of Baratashvili", Tbilisi, 1947.

1947

After October 20

In the anthology "The October Star", he makes underlines and sketches on the lines of various authors' poems, numbers the stanzas of particular interest to him, and adds two pages with the titles, line numbers, and page counts from his Book "The Sea Has Roared".

Source: MGL, t-96, Collection "The October Star", Sokhumi, 1947.

1947

October 22

He receives a delayed telegram from V. Ermolov, a collaborator at Literaturnaya Gazeta, asking for the submission of poems to be translated. Galaktion sends the poems and requests that the texts not be shortened during translation.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-161; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 72.

1947

After October 22

On the title page of Sandro Euli's collected works, he writes about the pseudonyms, noting that it is appropriate to state Sandro Euli as Kuridze, Alio Mashashvili as Mirtskhulava, Yakinthe Lisashvili as Khomeriki, and Iona Vakeli as Megrelishvili. The editor comments that between 1909-1918, Sandro Euli published his poems under his real surname, Kuridze, and that the name "Euli" was adopted after the October Revolution. He also makes underlines and brief comments on Lavrosi Kalandadze's biographical-critical review and the table of contents.

Source: MGL, t-48. Sandro Euli-Kuridze, Collected Works (Poetry), Tbilisi, 1947. p. III-VII, IX, XVII, XXIV, 307-312.

1947

October 23

He addresses a short letter to the young writers, apologizing for not being able to attend their conference due to urgent matters and wishing them success.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-162; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 72.

1947

October 25

He sends a letter from Sokhumi to Vano Tuskadze, the head of the district committee, apologizing for not being able to visit. He informs him that he has handed the Book “The Sea Has Roared” to the publishing house and will soon send the manuscripts, thanking him in advance for its publication.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-2759; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 69-70;

1947

October 25

He reads the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba. He writes the title of his own poem “October Symphony”, next to Grigol Abashidze’s poem “Mtkvari Symphony” and makes highlights.

Source: MGL, t-687, newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, October 25, 1947, №40, p. 1.

1947

After October 25

He reads the Russian magazine Khalkhta Megobroba. He makes highlights and notes, writing rhymes. He annotates a paragraph from Pyotr Skosyrev’s article “Thirty Years of Multinational Soviet Literature”, which states that the Civil War in Russia (1917–1923) led to the formation of literary schools and groups that did not understand the grand tasks of the proletarian revolution. He notes that during this time in Georgia, groups such as the Tsisperkantselis, Futurists, Proletarians, and Leftists were formed.

Source: MGL, t-713, magazine Дружба Народов, 1947, №15, Moscow, p. 268.

Dating: The magazine was signed for printing on October 25, 1947.

1947

October 26

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka reports that the weekly children’s magazine Oktombreli is reissuing from its ninth issue under the new title Dila, and that the issue features a poem by Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: “Детский журнал “Дила”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, October 26, 1947, Sunday, №213, p. 4.

1947

August-October

He writes a poem “The Insight of Thirty Years”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №1976; №1977; №5752-5753; №3282; №2459-2460; №5915-5923; №6353-6356; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 52.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “With the October Flag,” “The Insight of 45 Years,” “The 37th Year’s Path of Struggle,” and untitled (beginning with: “The world is no longer, in youth...”; “The insight of thirty years, illuminated by distance...”).

November

1947

November 5

An exhibition of Georgian painters and sculptors opens at the Tretyakov Gallery in Moscow, dedicated to the 30th anniversary of the October Revolution. Among other exhibits, the sculpture titled “The National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze”, created by sculptor Konstantine Merabishvili, is showcased.

Source: Newspaper “Молодой сталинец”, 1947, №145 (December 5), p. 4.

1947

November 7

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes a translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “The Seventeenth Year” by Georgy Kreytan.

Source: Семнадцатый год (Стих) Г. Табидзе, Перевел Георгий Крейтан, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1947, 7 ноября, №222, с.5.

1947

November 13

The Russian newspaper Molodoi Stalinetz publishes a translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “October Song” by Boris Serebryakov.

Source: Октябрьская песня (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Перевел с грузинского Б. Серебряков, Молодой сталинец, Тбилиси, 1947, 13 ноября, №136.

1947

15 November

In the notebook, he writes that he needs 2 common notebook s, envelopes, and papers, handkerchiefs, and cologne.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №400, p. 1.

1947

November 15

In the notebook, he writes that a session dedicated to the 30th anniversary of the October Revolution was supposed to be held at the Institute of Marxism-Leninism, but it was postponed due to the death of Simon Janashia. He learns that the day before Simon Janashia’s death, he had been at the museum, where preparations were underway for a major exhibition, and he had said that Ivane Javakhishvili’s portrait had been placed in the best spot.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №400, p. 3-4.

1947

November 15

In the notebook, he writes that Academician Simon Janashia passed away at 5 a.m. on November 15, 1947.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №400, p. 1.

1947

After November 15

He writes the untitled poem “I remember his crossing with joy...”.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №400, p. 11.

Dating: The text in the notebook is preceded by an entry from November 15.

1947

After November 15

In the notebook, he writes in Russian about the literary life of the past year.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №400, p. 16.

Dating: The text in the notebook is preceded by an entry from November 15.

1947

After November 15

He writes an untitled poem “The great rainbow of the great dawn...”.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №400, p. 19.

Dating: The text in the notebook is preceded by an entry from November 15.

1947

November 18

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes an obituary for the late Simon Janashia, signed by Galaktion Tabidze, a full member of the Academy of Sciences of the Georgian SSR, along with other colleagues from the Academy.

Source: “Академик С. Н. Джанашиа”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, November 18, 1947, Tuesday, №229, p. 2.

1947

Until November 22

He withdraws 6,835 roubles from his savings account and is left with 25 roubles.

Source: Excerpt from G. Tabidze’s storage ledger notebook, 300, p. 38; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 380.

1947

November 25

He is at the home of the writer Mariam Garikuli, who lives nearby. He dedicates a poem titled “Utandar” to Mariam’s young grandson, Utandar Ratiani, whose father died in World War II.

Source: Autographs: MGL, N. Kvirikadze’s autograph, №8224; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 43.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“Glory to Iberia...”). For dating and clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 557.

1947

After November

He reads the magazine Bolshevik, makes highlights, comments, and sketches.

Source: MGL, t-639, magazine Bolsheviki, 1947, November, №11.

1947

After November

On the cover page of the magazine Bolshevik, he writes a 62-point plan for evenings related to theatre. The plan includes mentions of travelling and other actors, performances from Kutaisi and Tbilisi theatres, publications in the magazine Teatri da Tskhovreba, Akaki Tsereteli's jubilee at the Opera Theatre, the disruption of his first stage appearance in Kutaisi, performing on stage alongside Akaki and Akaki's opinion about his poetry readings, a trip with Akaki to the village of Mukhrani, a journey with Davit Kldiashvili, evenings in Poti, Chiatura, Batumi, and Ozurgeti, an evening dedicated to Egnate Ninoshvili, organ-players, and a meeting with Konstantin Balmont. He read his poems "The Mountains of Guria" and "The Moon of Mtatsminda" at the theatre, witnessed the staging of a different play instead of the one approved by the censors, and was involved in an incident during Irodion Evdoshvili's evening. He writes that he has restored some of the posters from the evenings.

Source: MGL, t-639, magazine Bolsheviki, 1947, November, №11.

1947

After November

On the last page of the magazine Bolshevik, he writes an untitled humorous poem "Chikovani's Idiocy...".

Source: MGL, t-639, magazine Bolsheviki, 1947, November, №11.

December

1947

Until December 1

During the days of Ilia Chavchavadze, as Galaktion steps out from the Writers' Union, he nudges Mukhran Machavariani, who is standing nearby, and invites him to join him. Mukhran feels awkward, sensing that Galaktion is leading him to drink, and he has not a single coin in his pocket to treat him. On their way, they encounter Rezo Japaridze and Rezo Inanishvili, whom Mukhran invites, hoping that they might at least have some money. They head to a basement on Veliaminov Street (now Dadiani Street), known for its delicious khachapuri and good Kakhetian wine. Galaktion orders pie and wine. At the table, they reminisce about Ilia, and Mukhrani recites Galaktion's poem "Ilia Who Was Killed in Tsitsamuri". Galaktion is pleased with Mukhrani's reading and kisses him. Later, Inanishvili and Japaridze urge Mukhrani to recite his own poem dedicated to Ilia, but Mukhrani, feeling shy in Galaktion's presence, declines. Galaktion encourages him, and Mukhrani gathers the courage to recite his poem aloud. Galaktion's eyes fill with tears, and he tells Mukhrani that from this day forward, they must be friends, as Mukhrani's eyes remind him of his late friend, Giorgi Kuchishvili.

Source: M. Machavariani, One meeting, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 232; 1947

December 5

The newspaper Molodoi Stalinets publishes an article titled “On the All-Union Artistic Exhibition”, noting that on November 5 and 6, a Union-wide exhibition was held in Moscow to commemorate the 30th anniversary of the October Revolution, featuring participation from Georgian painters and sculptors. Accompanying the article is a photograph of a sculpture by one of the exhibition participants, Konstantine Merabishvili, titled “The National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze”.

Source: Newspaper “Молодой сталинец”, 1947, №145 (December 5), p. 4.

1947

December 19

At 3:25 p.m., he is near the Philharmonic, in a park. He eats chocolate, observes the chocolate wrapping paper, which features waves, and then writes the untitled poem “Wave, my beautiful wave...” on the same paper.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №693; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 43.

1947

December 20

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka reports that on December 22, a scientific session will be held at the Museum of Georgia, dedicated to the 30th anniversary of the “Great October Socialist Revolution”, organized by the Shota Rustaveli Institute of Georgian Literature History. The session will feature a presentation by Shalva Radiani titled “Galaktion Tabidze and the 19th Century Georgian Poetic Traditions”.

Source: “Научная сессия Института истории грузинской литературы”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, December 20, 1947, Saturday, №251, p. 4.

1947

December 20

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka reports that on December 22, at the Zakaria Paliashvili Opera and Ballet Theatre, a concert by the Georgian Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra will feature the premiere of Olga Baramishvili’s romantic cantata “To the Creator of Victories”, which is based on Giorgi Tsagareli’s translation of a poem by Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: “Симфонические концерты”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, December 20, 1947, Saturday, №251, p. 4.

1947

December 22

At the scientific session of the Shota Rustaveli Institute of Georgian Literature History, dedicated to the 30th anniversary of the “Great October Socialist Revolution”, Shalva Radiani presents a report titled “Galaktion Tabidze and the 19th Century Georgian Poetic Traditions”. This session takes place at the Museum of Georgia.

Source: “Научная сессия Института истории грузинской литературы”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, December 20, 1947, Saturday, №251, p. 4.

1947

Until December 25

He writes a new version of the untitled poem “I leave for a few days...”, titles the poem “Guest,” and then prepares the text for publication in the collection “The Sea Has Roared”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №134-a, p. 3754; №5567; №6555; №3320; №5492; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 125; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 558.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Evening” and untitled (“I leave for a few days...”).

1947

Until December 25

He submits the collection titled “The Sea Has Roared” to the Abkhazia State Publishing House for printing.

Note: “The Sea Has Roared”, Book One. Sokhumi, published by the Abkhazian State Publishing House, 1948. Edited by G. Jibladze.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on December 25, 1947.

1947

Until December 25

He writes a new version of the untitled poem “Someone cracked my skull open...”, titles the poem “The Ruined House in Sokhumi,” and then prepares the text for publication in the collection “The Sea Has Roared”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №70-a, p. 1795; №5666; №763; №5511; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 126; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 559.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Hallucination,” “At the House Ruined by the Germans in Sokhumi,” “Like Tumour,” and untitled (with the beginnings: “Someone cracked my skull open...”; “Like a magnificent freshwater crab...”; “Like a magnificent tumour...”).

1947

Until December 25

He writes a new version of the untitled poem “Oh, how many times must I thank you again...”, titles the poem “Where Else Is It?”, and then prepares the text for publication in the collection “The Sea Has Roared”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №6556; №5580; №5492; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 119; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 560.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (with the beginnings: “Where else is there relief...?” and “Where else is there joy...?”).

1947

Until December 25

He writes a new version of the untitled poem “Decorated with flowers...”, titles the poem “Stream, Stream,” and then prepares the text for publication in the collection “The Sea Has Roared”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №746; №1559; №2028; №5495; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 122; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 560.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“Stream, Stream...”).

1947

Until December 25

He writes a poem “Aha, under that shadow”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №6554; №3320; №5492; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 102.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“Aha, under that shadow...”).

Dating: The collection “The Sea Has Roared,” in which this poem was first published, is signed for printing on December 25, 1947.

1947

Until December 25

He writes a poem “Ornament”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4622; №3321; №3323; N. Kvirikadze’s autograph, №5464; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 118.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “January of Orchids,” “The Warmth of the Ornament,” and untitled (“The forests erupted like a blizzard on the windowpanes...”).

Dating: The collection “The Sea Has Roared,” in which this poem was first published, is signed for printing on December 25, 1947.

1947

Until December 25

He writes a poem “Eternal Glory to the Heroes”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №765; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 120.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“Are they the sea, or the mountain and the field...”).

Dating: The collection “The Sea Has Roared,” in which this poem was first published, is signed for printing on December 25, 1947.

1947

Until December 25

He writes a poem “The Ninth Symphony”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2041; N. Kvirikadze’s autograph, №8822; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 120.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“Where the waves of the sea are...”).

Dating: The collection “The Sea Has Roared,” in which this poem was first published, is signed for printing on December 25, 1947.

1947

Until December 25

He reads Ilia Stekolnikov’s Book “Lightning and Thunder”, making highlights and notes.

Source: MGL, t-646, И. С. Стекольников, “Молния и Гром”, Moscow-Leningrad, 1947.

1947

Until December 25

On the front endpaper of Ilia Stekolnikov’s Book “Lightning and Thunder”, he writes that Aphkhazia’s State Publishing House has nearly completed the printing of his Book “The Sea Has Roared”.

Source: MGL, t-646, И. С. Стекольников, “Молния и Гром”, Moscow-Leningrad, 1947.

Dating: The Book was signed for printing on December 25, 1947.

1947

Until December 25

He drafts a statement addressed to the President of the Georgian Academy of Sciences, Nikoloz Muskhelishvili, stating that he is working on a Book that requires a trip to Moscow for material clarification and requesting a two-month official mission with the appropriate recommendation.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record in the book. MGL, t-646, И. С. Стекольников, “Молния и Гром”, Moscow-Leningrad, 1947, p. 2.

Note: The request likely concerns the 1950 publication of “Selected Poems” by Galaktion Tabidze in Moscow, edited in Russian by Igor Postupalsky, since the poet’s works had not been published in Moscow since 1940.

1947

Until December 25

On the back endpaper of Ilia Stekolnikov’s Book “Lightning and Thunder”, he writes that in 1921–1922, the Georgian press published an article titled “The Sea and the Georgians” by Arthur Leist, a German writer and close friend of Ilia Chavchavadze. The author noted that Georgia has beautiful sea coasts, yet sea motifs are absent in Georgian literature - even in Shota Rustaveli’s immortal “The Knight in the Panther’s Skin”, where the sea is only briefly mentioned. The conclusion was that Georgians do not love the sea. Galaktion thinks that determining the accuracy of Arthur Leist’s view is a task for researchers, but it is undeniable that after Rustaveli, the sea theme was absent in Georgian literature. This movement began with 20th-century Georgian literature. These motifs are present in his first and second books, as well as in volumes I, II, III, and IV of his collected works. Additionally, they have been published as a separate book, “Gold in the Azure of Adjara”, and recently, in the magazine Mnatobi, he published the poetry cycle “The Sea Has Roared”.

Source: MGL, t-646, И. С. Стекольников, “Молния и Гром”, Moscow-Leningrad, 1947.

1947

Until December 25

He writes a poem “The Idea of the Genius of Harmony”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №560; №8801; 4918; 5513; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 121.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Song for the Great, Universal, Genius of Harmony,” “The Idea of the Genius of Harmony,” and untitled (“How it lit up in the storm...”).

Dating: The collection “The Sea Has Roared,” in which this poem was first published, is signed for printing on December 25, 1947.

1947

December 31

He writes an untitled poem “Tomorrow, the burning will begin...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №7987; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 44; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 563.

1947

Winter

At the Pioneer Palace, he attends a performance of the play “A Winter’s Tale” by the students of Makharadze, currently in the Ozurgeti district, along with Ioseb Grishashvili, Irakli Abashidze, and Ioseb Noneshvili. He stands in a circle around the Christmas tree, singing and enjoying the festivities with the children.

Source: Ts. Maminashvili, recollection, Natanebi Farm, October 26, 1973, N 30, p. 4.

1947 or earlier

Gigla Mebuke is writing a new report on Galaktion’s work and has asked the poet to read it at his home. Galaktion enjoys it but has some remarks regarding his “Tsisperkantselis”. He recalls his collaboration with the Social Democrats in the newspapers of Kutaisi and questions how the editors of those publications would approach him for collaboration if he were indeed a Tsisperkantseli. He is surprised by Mebuke’s references to his Futurist and Symbolist phases and requests the removal of analyses of poems written before the Soviet period from the already drafted report, suggesting that it should start directly with the Soviet era. Galaktion provides a plan that outlines the dates of his anniversaries, noting 1908 and 1914 as the years of his first publications and the release of his first book. Mebuke realizes he will have to write a new report, which dampens his spirits.

Source: G. Mebuke, some information about Galaktion, magazine Literaturuli Ajara, 1967, №5, p. 93-96.

Dating: Galaktion requested Mebuke to complete this report by January 20, 1947, and if not earlier, he would ensure it was finished by the end of 1947.

1947

He writes a poem "Praise of Praise".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №554; №5839-5840; №3314-3315; №5478-5479; №5841⁵; №5909-5911; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 47; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 564.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "At the Batumi Port," "Praise to Rustavi," "Letter to the Builders of Rustavi," "Progress," "Sail!" and untitled (with the beginnings: "I know, O Sea..."; "I want to dedicate my praise to you..."; "I know, O Sea, what you want..."; "I want to dedicate my praise to you!..."; "As for my homeland, should I not praise...").

1947

Sculptor Silovan Kakabadze is creating a bust of Galaktion Tabidze from sandstone.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-212, p. 5; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 354.

1947

He has his photo taken with the students of the acting school affiliated with the State Film Production, including Leila Abashidze, Otar Koberidze, and others.

Source: O. Koberidze, unforgettable evening, newspaper Tvalta, 1998, №18, May 13, p. 7.

1947

The report by Petre Sharia "Paths of Development of Georgian Soviet Literature", presented at the Third Congress of Georgian Soviet Writers, is published. In his report, the speaker states that Galaktion Tabidze is one of the greatest representatives of Georgian poetry in the first half of the twentieth century, who broke through the anti-revolutionary front of writers and rushed to the Soviet platform.

Source: P. A. Sharia, "Paths of Development of Georgian Soviet Literature", Report read at the Third Congress of Soviet Writers of Georgia on September 9, 1946. Processed stenographic record, publisher Komunisti, Tbilisi, 1947. p. 10 – 12.

1947

He reads Petre Sharia's report "Paths of Development of Georgian Soviet Literature". He highlights the parts where Sharia harshly criticizes the literary groups such as the "Academic Group", the "Tsisperkantselis", and the Futurists, as well as the phrases discussing Galaktion's transition to the Soviet platform.

Source: P. A. Sharia, "Paths of Development of Georgian Soviet Literature", Report read at the Third Congress of Soviet Writers of Georgia on September 9, 1946. Processed stenographic record, publisher Komunisti, Tbilisi, 1947. p. 10 – 12.

1947

He writes an untitled poem "Today, for the First Time, I Take the Pen in My Hand...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №2802; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 188; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 797.

1947

He writes an untitled poem “Today, When It Is Calm...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, t-132; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 188; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 797.

1947

He familiarizes himself with the reference Book of the Academy of Sciences of the Union Republics. He makes highlights and writes that the Russian Academy was founded during the reign of Catherine I in 1725, and its first session took place on November 12 of the same year.

Source: GTSM, 170, Академии Наук Союзных Республик, Moscow-Leningrad, 1947.

1947

He sends a letter to the Moscow State Literary Publishing House, inquiring about the progress of publishing the collection of translations of his poems. He deems it necessary to add 10,000 lines of new literal translations that are currently being prepared. He plans to travel to Moscow personally and writes that he is in a hurry for the book’s publication, as 1948 marks the 40th anniversary of his literary career.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-164-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 73.

1947

He sends a brief letter from the seminary to his old acquaintance, the teacher Terenti Vepkhvadze. He writes that he was unable to translate Vladimir Gilyarovsky’s poem himself and had someone else translate it. He adds that the translator wouldn’t mind if someone else edits the translation.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-75; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 72;

1947

In the foreword to the collection of Alexandre Abasheli’s poems, Besarion Zhghenti makes highlights and comments.

Source: MGL, t-5, Alexandre Abasheli, poems, Tbilisi, 1947, p. V-XXXIV.

1947

He reads Vakhushti Bagrationi’s Book “Geography of Georgia”, making highlights and notes in the table of contents.

Source: MGL, t-620, Vakhushti Batonishvili, “Geography of Georgia, Tbilisi, 1904.

Dating: Inside the book, a poem dated 1947, “I Stand on the Cliff of Khomli”, is written.

1947

He reads the Russian bibliographic magazine “Book Chronology” and, at the beginning, under the title “Towers”, he writes two lines of a poem: “I wonder if there is a land somewhere / adorned with so many towers”.

Source: MGL, t-568, magazine “Книжная Летопись”, №2, Moscow, 1947.

1947

He reads Yuri Kolinsky’s Russian brochure “Velázquez”. He highlights one of the author’s ideas - that Velázquez overcame the inner stillness of man, felt, and depicted the complexity of his world - and writes that the same can be said about his poem “Elguja’s Return” and the epic “Juga and Asinda”.

Source: MGL, t-636, Ю. Колпинский, “Веласкес” (1599-1660), Moscow-Leningrad, 1947.

1947 or later

He writes a poem “Four Aragvis”.

Source: MGL, d-123, 11; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 560;

1947 or later

He writes an untitled poem, “Do you remember? The army that happened near Dzaugi...”.

Source: MGL, d-123, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 560;

1947 or later

He writes a poem “Kobuleti”.

Source: MGL, d-123, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 560;

1947 or later

He writes an untitled poem “I Ask My Friends...”.

Source: MGL, d-123, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 561-562;

1947 or later

He writes a poem “South Ossetia”.

Source: MGL, d-123, 14; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 562-564;

1947 or later

He writes a poem “Liakhvi and Mtkvari: At the Source of the Liakhvi”.

Source: MGL, d-123, 15; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 565-568;

1947 or later

He writes a poem “Mtskheta”.

Source: MGL, d-123, 16; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 569-871;

1947 or later

He writes a poem “In the Mtskheta Region”.

Source: MGL, d-123, 16; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 571;

1947 or later

He writes a poem “The Builders of the Jvari Monastery”.

Source: MGL, d-123, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 572-573;

1947 or later

He writes an untitled poem “Oh, Mary, when you asked me for a picture...”.

Source: MGL, d-123, 19; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 573-574;

1947 or later

He looks through the catalogue of the Tretyakov State Gallery and makes notes. Under the reproduction of Sergei Orlov’s sculpture “Alexander Nevsky”, he writes that in Alexander’s yard, the grass still grows up to the waist because no one has been invited over the past year and no one has passed through his yard. Therefore, he cannot give his vote to such an inhospitable man.

Source: GTSM, 1441, Государственная Третьяковская галерея, Каталог, Moscow, 1947, p. 198.

1948

1948

Beginning

In the anthology of Georgian Soviet poetry, ten poems by Galaktion Tabidze are published: “My Native Land”, “Recollection of Sevastopol”, “We Poets of Georgia”, “Whose Is This Roar”, “On High Mountains I Built a Palace Newly”, “A City Underwater”, “The Passenger Waited for the Tram by the Pole”, “Peaks of New Mountains”, “From Tskaltubo to Kutaisi...”, and “This Is a Native Wind”.

Source: Anthology of Georgian Soviet Poetry, Tbilisi, Sabtchota Mtserali, 1947, p. 283-298.

1948

Beginning

He writes lines “Agitated squares...” to add to the poem “Three Palms”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 78; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 498-499;

1948

Beginning

In response to the 1948 publication of the “Anthology of New Literature”, He writes a poem “Page 381 of the Book”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 79; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 499.

1948

Beginning

He writes a poem “To the Poet” (“May You Be Called Ungifted...”).

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 79; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 499;

1948

Beginning

He finishes the poems: “Glasses on the Forehead, or the Generations Coming and Going”, “King Irakli on Horseback (The Neighing of the Horse)”, “The Greened Cornfield”, “Shine, O Sun, This Autumn”, and “The Year 1908”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-174, 79; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 499.

January

1948

January 1

The translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Happy New Year!” is published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka.

Source: С Новым годом! (Стих) Г. Табидзе, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1948, 1 января, №1, с.3.

1948

January 1

He reads the newspaper Komunisti, makes highlights and sketches on the article about the launch of the Khrameshi hydroelectric power station, and on Giorgi Leonidze’s poem Samgori.

Source: MGL, t-692. newspaper Komunisti, January 1, 1948, №1, p. 1-2, 4.

1948

January 2

On the page for January 2 in a desk calendar, which notes that Shio Aragvispireli passed away on this day in 1926, he writes a brief memory about the writer using different coloured pencils and ink, mentioning that he died at the age of 59.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-201, p. 1-2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 281-282.

1948

January 4

In the notebook, he writes that he is in Batumi and it is a dreadful day.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №400, p. 20.

1948

January 4

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, Pavel Khuchua’s letter “About Symphony Concerts” is published, noting that a significant event was the romantic cantata “To the Creator of Victories”, composed by Olga Baramishvili for baritone, choir, and orchestra, in celebration of the 30th anniversary of the “Great October Socialist Revolution”. The letter states that the text was written by Georgia’s National Poet Galaktion Tabidze, and the translation was done by Giorgi Tsagareli.

Source: “На симфонических концертах”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, January 4, 1948, Sunday, N 3, p. 2.

1948

January 4

On the page for January 4 in the desk calendar, which notes that Adam Mickiewicz was born on this day in 1799, he writes that excellent articles about this author were published in the 1893 issue of Kvali, along with a translation of the poem “Where Are You, My Youth?” He also mentions that he passed away at the age of 56.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-201, p. 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 282.

1948

After January 4

In the notebook, he notes the title of Akaki Gatsrelia’s publication in the magazine Mnatobi “The Stress in Georgian Poetry,” which includes examples from Galaktion’s poetry.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №400, p. 25.

Dating: The entry in the notebook is placed after the January 4th entry.

1948

After January 4

He is considering publishing a Book in Russian titled “The Art of Poetry,” outlining where he should gather materials for the Book and noting that it will be one large volume.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №400, p. 27.

Dating: The entry in the notebook is placed after the January 4th entry.

1948

After January 4

In the notebook, he writes the first stanza of Mikhail Lermontov’s poem “Fairy Tale for Children”.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №400, p. 29.

Note: The text does not include the author’s name or title, but it has been identified through quotations.

Dating: The entry in the notebook is placed after the January 4th entry.

1948

January 5

On the page for January 5 in the desk calendar, which notes that the talented Nikoloz Shengelaia passed away on this day in 1943, he describes several noteworthy episodes from their relationship and mentions that the renowned film director died at the age of 41.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-201, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 282.

1948

Until January 6

Galaktion Tabidze's Book "The Sea Has Roared" has already been printed, and the author is visiting the proofreader. Galaktion writes to the Abkhazia State Publishing House that the errors he discovered on pages 30 and 43 are minor and can be corrected directly on the pages. Accordingly, he writes that he is looking forward to the distribution of the book.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-76-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 73.

1948

January 6

He writes an untitled poem "Our Sea Is Restless...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №503-d, p. 17; №7768; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 191.

For dating and clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 799.

1948

January 6

The State Publishing House of Sokhumi begins printing Galaktion's Book "The Sea has Roared".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-490, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 433; G. Tabidze, National Poet of Georgia, "The Sea Has Roared", Sokhumi, 1948;

1948

January 6

He is in Sokhumi and notes in his notebook that he is still writing with the same pencil he found at the Sukhumi airport almost two years ago.

Source: V. Javakhadze, "Unknown. Apology of Galaktion Tabidze", Tbilisi, 2020, p. 163.

1948

January 8 or later

He reads the newspaper Norchi Lenineli and writes the untitled poem "O Sea, O Sea, Bichvinta..." on the front page's margin.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №7713-7714; G. Tabidze, G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 78. G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book VII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 103.

1948

January 9

He writes an untitled poem "May Many More Come to Us...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 191. For dating and clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 799.

1948

January 9

On the page of the desk calendar noting that Nikolai Nekrasov was born on January 8, 1878, and Galileo Galilei on the same date in 1642, he writes a brief reminiscence about how, as a child, he read a weak translation by Anton Purtseladze of Nekrasov's poem "Thoughts at the Entrance to the Chapel" in an old issue of Mnatobi. He believes that if Nekrasov had travelled to the Caucasus, he would have transformed like Pushkin, Lermontov, and Griboedov. He recalls having read a poem about Galileo Galilei, translated by Zakaria Chichinadze, during his childhood. He thinks it would be wonderful to collect and publish the poems, stories, and critical writings of this Georgian figure.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 283.

1948

January 9-10

He is in Abkhazia, writing the poem "Conversation with the Waves".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №2747; G. Tabidze, G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 79.

1948

January 10

In his notebook, he writes that someone was sent by the enemies, but he removes the mask, both from himself and from the senders.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №400, p. 31-33.

Dating: The entry in the notebook is placed after the entry dated January 4.

1948

January 10

On the page of the desk calendar noting that Alexei Tolstoy was born on this day in 1883, he recounts an episode of meeting and befriending him at the Anti-Fascist Congress in Paris in 1935.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 7; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 283.

1948

After January 10

He is writing the poem "At Dusk, Under the Two-Hundred-Year-Old Sycamore, They Set the Table" ("At Dusk, If the Sycamore is Two Hundred Years Old...").

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №400, p. 34-39.

Dating: The entry in the notebook is placed after the entry dated January 10.

1948

After January 10

He is writing an untitled poem "You know what I'll tell you, my friends, lend me your ear...".

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №400, p. 40.

Dating: The entry in the notebook is placed after the entry dated January 10.

1948

After January 10

He is writing an untitled poem “There was a deep philosopher, his name was Spinoza...”.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №400, p. 46.

Dating: The entry in the notebook is placed after the entry dated January 10.

1948

February 11

He writes a poem “Caucasus”.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s autograph, MGL, №2797-2798; G. Tabidze, G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 80.

1948

February 11

He writes a poem “The Diligence”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №8103; №706; N. Kvirikadze’s autograph, №2796; G. Tabidze, G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 81.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Melancholy Journey,” “Again Youth,” and untitled (“I Sail on the Sea of Life...”).

1948

January 11

On the page of the desk calendar noting that Vasily Kikvidze died on this day in 1919, he writes that he had a poem about him, which he can no longer find.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-201, p. 8; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 283.

1948

January 12

On the page of the desk calendar noting that American writer Jack London was born on this day in 1876, he writes that he died at the age of 40. He also mentions that he really likes London’s “Martin Eden” and “The Sea-Wolf”, stating that Jack London had a tremendous influence on him, and that “Ephemera” (which includes the line “My blue horses at the horse races...”) written in 1922 was created under the influence of this American writer.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-201, p. 9; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 283-284;

1948

January 13

On the calendar page, he writes that a few days ago, the Georgian lawyer and writer Alexandre Kancheli passed away, which has saddened all his acquaintances.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-201, p. 10; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 284.

1948

January 14

On the calendar page, which notes that on this day in 1876, the passionate revolutionary Lado Ketskhoveli was born, he adds that he lived only 27 years. He also mentions that in his childhood he had an illegal magazine titled Brdzola, which featured a drawing of Lado Ketskhoveli behind bars in Metekhi prison, accompanied by an obituary regarding his murder.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 11; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 284.

1948

January 15

On the calendar page, which notes that on this day in 1795, Alexander Griboedov was born, he adds that the Russian poet passed away at the age of 34, while he himself had already published "Damask-work Book" by that age. He recalls having read all of Griboedov's works in his childhood, sketching his portraits in notebooks, as well as portraits of other writers and notable figures: Byron, St. Nino, Darwin, and these drawings were appreciated by Varlam Makharoblidze.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 12; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 285.

Note: "Damask-work Book" is a collection of poems published in 1927.

Note: Varlam Makharoblidze is referenced by his last name in the source.

1948

January 16

On the page of the desk calendar for January 16, it notes that on this day in 1847, Nikolai Zhukovsky, the founder of Russian aviation, was born. It also mentions that the first aviator was seen in Kutaisi in 1914. He flew for a total of 30 minutes, leaving a remarkable impression on Konstantine Gamsakhurdia, who was present at the time.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 13; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 285.

Note: Konstantine Gamsakhurdia is mentioned by his last name in the source.

1948

After January 16

He reads Parmen Tsakhelis's collection of poems and epics. At the beginning of the book, he writes that the life and work of the great poet must be studied, including Zakaria Tchichinadze's memoir in the Book "Akaki Tsereteli", his activities at the Kutaisi Georgian Gymnasium, and announcements in the newspaper Samshoblo about Tsakheli's attendance at literary evenings, which he needs to find.

Source: GTSM, 285. P. Tsakheli, Verses and Poems, Tbilisi, 1948.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on January 16, 1948.

1948

After January 16

He makes comments on Tina Jibladze's preface in Parmen Tsakheli's collection of verses and poems. He does not consider it correct that Tsakheli's work is portrayed as focusing solely on the past glory of the homeland, as he also wrote poems reflecting contemporary events, including those from 1905, which are not included in the Book and need to be found. He notes that in 1949, it will be 30 years since the poet's passing. He considers it necessary to determine how the influence of Akaki Tsereteli's poetry is reflected in Tsakheli's poems, which are written in a light and simple language. He thinks that writing "light poetry" is the duty of every poet.

Source: GTSM, 285. P. Tsakheli, Verses and Poems, Tbilisi, 1948.

1948

January 17

On the page of the desk calendar for January 17, it is noted that in 1945 on this day, Soviet troops liberated the capital of Poland, Warsaw. He also recounts that he was in Warsaw in 1935, remembering a female train attendant who frequently opened the door to the Soviet delegates' compartment with various offers, leading Galaktion to suspect that she was spying on them.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 14; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 285.

1948

January 18

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka reports that on June 7 of this year, it marks the 100th anniversary of the death of Besarion Belinsky, and a republican committee has been established to widely celebrate this occasion, with Galaktion Tabidze as a member.

Source: newspaper "Заря Востока", January 18, 1948, Sunday, N 13, p. 1.

1948

January 18

On the page of the desk calendar for January 18, on which it is noted that in 1654 on this day, Ukraine joined the Russian state, he writes the lines "Even Cain himself would have pity if he walked the path of Ukraine", and adds that he vividly remembers Kyiv and Nezhin.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 15; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 286.

Note: Galaktion Tabidze arrived in the cities of Ukraine, including Nezhin, in July 1918, during the ongoing battles there.

1948

January 19

On the page of the desk calendar, it notes that on this day in 1865, Valentin Serov was born. He adds that the Russian painter passed away at the age of 56 and recalls his magnificent painting depicting dreamlike children gazing at the sea.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 16; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 286.

1948

January 20

On the page of the desk calendar for January 20, it notes that on this day in 1848, Alexander Kazbegi was born. He adds that the Georgian writer passed away at the age of 45. He recalls how he was captivated by reading Kazbegi from childhood and remembers the December issues of the newspaper Kvali in 1893, dedicated to Kazbegi's death. He expresses surprise that the 100th anniversary of the writer's birth went uncelebrated.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 17; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 286.

1948

January 20 or later

He reads the introduction to the novel "Father of Giotto", published in the January 20 issue of the Leo Kiacheli newspaper Komunisti and jots down ironic comments in the margins of the newspaper page.

Source: MGL, d-637, 19; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 460.

1948

January 22

On the page of the desk calendar for January 22, it is noted that on this day in 1798, Erekle II passed away. Surprised, he adds that 150 years have gone by since this date without any commemoration.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 18; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 286.

1948

January 22

He is in Sokhumi, writing the poem "To Youth".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №682; №695; №1137; №7240; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 106; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 575.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "Youth Must Still Revolve with Desire Among the People" and untitled with the following beginnings: "Youth must still revolve with desire among the people..."; "Youth always revolves in the native people..."; "Youth! It must still revolve with desire among the people..."; "In times of peace, the rustling of forest leaves must accompany the books..."; "Youth, still with desire..."

1948

January 22

He is in Sokhumi, writing the poem "Again, to Youth".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №578; №2889; №3940; №7240; G. Tabidze, G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 80.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "City Underwater" and untitled with the following beginnings: "I sail on the sea of life..."; "I sail on the sea of life..."

1948

January 23

He meets with the students of the Sokhumi Pedagogical Institute, and inspired by this encounter, He writes a poem "To Youth".

Source: newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, 1953, №126 (October 13), p. 2.

1948

January 24

The State Museum of Abkhazia sends the first publication of the museum's works with an inscription.

Source: MGL, t-427, Труды Абхазского Государственного Музея, в. Сухуми, 1947.

1948

After January 26

The magazine Mnatobi publishes the first part of Sergei Tchilaia's monograph titled "Georgian Romanticism and G. Tabidze". It states that Galaktion Tabidze's influence is significant not only on his subsequent generations but also on his contemporary poets. Furthermore, it notes that Galaktion's work derives from the legacy of Nikoloz Baratashvili. The critic explains the motif of melancholy in Galaktion's lyricism by pointing out that during the poet's early career, his homeland was in a colonial state. According to the article's author, Baratashvili's despair was caused by the failure of the 1832 conspiracy, while Galaktion's was a result of the prevailing reaction after the 1905 revolution. The critic sees romantic tendencies in Galaktion's first Book and symbolist elements in the second, concluding that his poetry became a unifying line between romanticism and symbolism. Tchilaia asserts that the pre-Soviet period of Galaktion Tabidze's work is already a part of history, while after the victory of the revolution, a vital force of optimism, perspective, and love for life took root in his creations.

Source: Sergi Tchilaia, Galaktion Tabidze, Magazine Mnatobi, 1948, № 1, p. 101-115.

Dating: This issue of the magazine is signed for printing on January 26, 1948.

1948

January 27

While in Abkhazia, he writes an untitled poem "That a Poem May Be of Unyielding Power...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №3478; N. Kvirikadze's manuscript, a-416, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 191. For dating and clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 799.

Note: The poem is also found untitled with a different opening line ("Greetings to the Ever-Passionate Forces.").

1948

January 27

On the page of the desk calendar for January 27, it is noted that on this day in 1756, Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart was born. He writes lines from his poem "Reconciliation", in which this genius composer is mentioned.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 19; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 286.

1948

January

He writes a poem “Glorify, Homeland, Glorify!”

Source: Autograph, MGL, №1058; G. Tabidze, G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 75.

February

1948

February 3

He submits a two-page typed autobiography in Russian to the Writers' Union.

Source: MGL, WUF №69-70.

1948

February 4

He writes a humorous poem “Somewhere There Is Washington, New York...”

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-604, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 34.

1948

February 5

He compiles a list of his own works in 17 entries in Russian for submission to the Writers' Union.

Source: MGL, WUF №20.

1948

February 7

In Sokhumi, a collection by Galaktion Tabidze is being published, titled “The Sea Has Roared”, Book One. It contains 67 verses and 1 poem: “The City Underwater”, “Ritsa”, “Abkhazia, Abkhazia!” “On Turquoise Waves”, “Vesper”, “Tkvarcheli”, “How Could I Not Love”, “On That Venetian Bridge”, “Sharden Speaks”, “Makhajirs”, “Lullaby”, “The Girl”, “Here, Under That Shadow”, “As a Guest”, “Where Else?” “Eucalyptus”, “Ornament”, “Greetings, You Abkhazia!”  (“The Colour of the Lily is Spread...”), “An Owner of Millions”, “Stream, Stream”, “The Horseman”, “The Sea Turns Red in the Sky's Glow”, “The Sea Has Roared”, “Roses”, “Sharda Amta”, “Our Kodori”, “Thoughts Near Kodori”, “Somewhere Else...” “Dedicated Millions”, “War Desires”,  (“– Whose Is This Roar...”),  (“Commander's Far-Sighted Gaze...”),  (“Moscow Will Not Spare...”),  (“A Wind So Fierce Has Blown...”), “A New Page in History”, “Near Tkvarcheli”,  (“...Great Knowledge Will Shine...”), “So Glory to the Sun”,  (“Time Points Us...”), “New Year” (“The Mountains Sing Near the Valleys...”), “May 9, 1945”, “Glory”, “Sunrise in Georgia”, “Victory Day”, “To Stalin”, “The Destroyed House in Sokhumi”, “Union of Hearts”, “Dawn of Nine Hundred Forty Six”, “Today I Removed the Coloured Map”, “The Thought of the Genius Harmony”, “Abkhazian, War-hardened”, “Eternal Glory to Heroes”, “Abkhartsa”,  (“Restlessness is Outside...”), “I Am Not an Orphan on This Earth”, “Morning”, “The Poet and the Masses”, “Dimitri Gulia's”, “The Look of Meskhi”, “Great Shota”, “On the Path We Walked...”, “A Bold and Mighty Hand”, “A Motif of Ilya”, “The Ninth Symphony”, “Loudly!”, “Thanks to Abkhazia”, “Zhuga and Asida”, “My Native Homeland”.

Source: “The Sea Has Roared”, First Volume. Sokhumi, published by the Abkhazian State Publishing House, 1948. Editor: G. Jibladze. Cover artist: Ucha Japaridze. The Book is signed for printing on 25/XII 1947. Print run: 4,000.

Note: The title of the poem “Sharda Amta” is placed in quotation marks.

1948

After February 7

He dedicates his Book “The Sea Has Roared” to Klimenti Gogiava with an inscription.

Source: K. Gogiava, I Love the Rain of Abkhazia, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 197.

1948

February 10

He writes a poem titled “From Shovi, the Arrow Flew” (“Though life has made me shed many tears...”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1846; N. Kvirikadze’s autograph, №54; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 185.

Note: The poem also appears untitled (“Life has made me shed many tears...”).

1948

After February 11

Having returned from Sokhumi to Tbilisi, he learns that the Academy of Sciences has sent his salary to the Sokhumi post office. Therefore, he sends a telegram requesting that the amount credited to his name on February 11 be returned to Tbilisi to his apartment address at 4 Zhores Street.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-259; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 90;

1948

After February 14

He receives a letter from Ioseb Botsvadze in Sokhumi. He informs him that nothing has changed since his departure from Sokhumi, except for the worsening weather. He writes that Galaktion’s Book has not yet been released for sale, and that interested readers are bombarding the director of the Abkhazian State Publishing House with questions. Apologizing, he reminds him that Galaktion promised to gift the Book with his poetic dedication. He asks to be informed when the materials for his poetic beginnings will be ready, so he can plan his two-day visit to coincide with that time. He also inquires about when they plan to celebrate the 100th anniversary of Alexander Kazbegi’s birth in Tbilisi. He sends greetings to the poet’s wife, Nino Kvirikadze.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-486; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301.

1948

February 19

He buys a week’s supply of groceries together with Nino Kvirikadze.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-201, p. 20; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 287.

1948

February 21

In the morning, Ioseb Imedashvili contacts him by phone and informs him that an article by Mikheil Bakhtadze has been published in the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, in which Galaktion's words, written into a cantata, are mentioned.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 21; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 287.

Note: Mikheil Bakhtadze is referred to by the initial of his first name and his last name in the source.

1948

February 21

Ioseb Imedashvili requests that he provide his complete bibliography..

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 21; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 287.

1948

February 21

Ioseb Imedashvili promises to send his Book "The Sea Has Roared", which was published in Abkhazia.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 21; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 287.

1948

February 21

He begins to take care of compiling his complete bibliography.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 21; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 287.

1948

February 21

On the page of the desk calendar for February 21, it is noted that on this day in 1944, Lieutenant General Konstantine Leselidze passed away. He writes that a poem about Leselidze was published in the newspaper Komunisti, and the same poem, untitled, is included in the poet's fourth volume and in the collection "The Sea Has Roared". The poem was translated into Russian by Riurik Ivnev, and this beautiful translation is featured in the monograph written by Mikheil Davitashvili about Konstantine Leselidze.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 22; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 287.

1948

February 21

He decides to ask Riurik Ivnev for the translation of the poem "Nine Generals", which is about Konstantine Leselidze.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 22; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 287.

1948

February 21

He attends a meeting of the Vissarion Belinsky Jubilee Committee at the Academy of Sciences. He notices that Viktor Kupradze clearly has a Russification agenda, Ioseb Grishashvili is caught up in organizational routine, Alexandre Kutelia is philosophizing extensively, while Nikoloz Muskhelishvili is behaving foolishly. Niko Ketskhoveli, Giorgi Jibladze, Vladimir Matchavariani, and Vasil Egnatashvili hold themselves well. Besarion Zhghenti and Sergei Danelia are in their usual roles. Galaktion, however, remains silent, believing that there is no need to assert himself among these people.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 23; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 287-288.

Dating: The entry for February 22 states that this "happened yesterday".

1948

February 22

On the page of the desk calendar for February 22, it is noted that on this day in 1944, the Soviet Army liberated the city of Kryvyi Rih. He writes that he had composed a poem about this event.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 23; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 287.

1948

February 23

On the page of the desk calendar, it is noted that on this day in 1945, Alexei Tolstoy passed away. He writes that he and Tolstoy were together at the Anti-Fascist Congress in Paris in 1935. He remarks that the Russian writer always walked separately and that the writers did something bad to his poster.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 24; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 288.

1948

February 25

He is concerned with purchasing groceries.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 25; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 288.

1948

February 27

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "The Communist Manifesto" is published.

Source: О коммунистическом Манифесте (Стих) Г. Табидзе, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1948, 27 февраля, №42, с.1.

1948

Until February 29

One of Galaktion's poems is translated into Slovak.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-486-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301-302.

Dating: This is mentioned in Giorgi Nazarenko's letter dated May 21, 1948.

1948

January-February

The State Publishing House of Abkhazia, under the editorship of Giorgi Jibladze, is publishing Galaktion Tabidze's Book "The Sea Has Roared".

Source: G. Tabidze, "The Sea Has Roared", Sokhumi, 1948;

March

1948

March 15

He writes a short autobiography.

Source: G. Tabidze, autobiography, MGL, d-659, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 466-467.

1948

March 17

The Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia writes a characterization of Galaktion Tabidze in Russian. The document is signed by the chairman of the union, Simon Chikovani, and the executive manager, Irodion Kavzharadze.

Source: MGL, WUF №60.

1948

After March 19

He makes underlines and comments on Nikolai Piksarov's booklet "Gorky and Science".

Source: MGL, t-388, Н. К. Пиксанов, "Горький и Наука", Moscow-Leningrad, 1948.

April

1948

April 3

He reads the April 2 issue of the newspaper Pravda, which published information about the awarding of Stalin Prizes for notable works in literature and cinematography in 1947. He notes that no Georgian received a prize, nor did any worthy poet from across the Soviet Union. He believes that the Stalin Prizes were awarded to completely unknown writers, and the only one who truly deserved a prize was Ilya Ehrenburg.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 25; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 288.

1948

April 3

He begins to study the biographies and works of the writers who were awarded Stalin Prizes.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 25; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 288.

1948

Until April 5

He writes a poem “Khrami-river Hydroelectric Plant”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №954-957; №6662; №5079-5083; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 104.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Rivers of Abkhazia,” “Rivers of Georgia,” and untitled (“The Light Bringer of the World...”).

1948

April 5

At the State Publishing House “Federation”, instead of the expected 9,000 roubles that were supposed to be granted to him, they give only 3,000 roubles.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-201, p. 27; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 288.

1948

April 5

He searches for but cannot find the receipt for the 12,000 roubles in royalties sent from the Abkhaz State Publishing House.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-201, p. 27; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 288-289.

Note: In January 1948, the Abkhaz State Publishing House published Galaktion’s Book “The Sea Has Roared”.

1948

April 5

He goes to attend a meeting of the Society for Georgia’s Relations with Foreign Countries, but the meeting does not take place.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-201, p. 27; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 288.

1948

April 5

In the evening, he searches in vain for bread in the stores, but it is not available anywhere.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-201, p. 27; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 288.

1948

April 5

He regrets that he hasn’t written a single line throughout the day.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-201, p. 27; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 288.

1948

April 5

In his diary, he writes that he is having an unfortunate day. After being cooped up for nine days, he went out to the city for the first time and encountered five unpleasant incidents in one day, leaving him in a very bad mood.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 27; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 288.

1948

April 5

In his notebook, he writes a letter addressed to the president of the Society for Georgia's Relations with Foreign Countries, requesting that the society's presidium take measures to translate and publish his collected works in foreign languages, such as French, in honour of the 40th anniversary of his literary debut. He offers to submit a Book proposal upon request, stating that translators can refer to the 1944 edition of his "Selected Works", the fourth volume of his writings, and poems written after the war.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-202, p. 16-17; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 297.

1948

April 5

The actor Pierre Kobakhidze reads Galaktion's poem "Mary" at the Marjanishvili Theatre, receiving great acclaim from the audience.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 28; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289.

Note: Pierre Kobakhidze is mentioned by first name in the entry.

1948

April 5

He addresses the Presidium of the Society for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries of Georgia and requests that, in connection with the 40th anniversary of his literary debut, his works be translated and published in foreign languages, such as French. He mentions that translators can refer to his "Selected Works", published by the State Publishing House in 1944, the fourth volume of his "Works" published in 1946, and his post-war poems. He writes that he can submit the plan upon request.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-165; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 112-113.

1948

April 6

In his diary, he writes that his poem will be published in the newspaper Komunisti in a week.

Source: MGL, d-201, p. 28; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289.

1948

April 6

He is working on the poem "The Years of the Century", adding a few stanzas, but he is dissatisfied with the pace of his progress.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 28; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289.

1948

April 6

He finds the receipt for the royalties sent from the Abkhaz State Publishing House, which he thought was lost, and receives 12,000 roubles.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 28; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289.

1948

April 6

He orders a new outfit from the tailor.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 28, 29; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289.

1948

April 6

In his diary, he writes that a meeting of the Society for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries will take place the next day, and he intends to attend.

Source: MGL, d-201, p. 28; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289.

1948

April 6

Since bread is not available, Galaktion and Nino Kvirikadze buy corn flour.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 28; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289.

1948

April 7

He attends the meeting of the Society for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries. In the presidium, he listens to the speaker Nikoloz Mikava, who announces that the society has spent one million and three hundred thousand roubles. Many tasks have been accomplished, but little is visible. Cultural connections have been established with all of Europe, Asia, and America. The speaker notes that "The Knight in the Panther's Skin" has been translated in many places and mentions that Galaktion's poems have also been translated. He is pleased with Vladimir Matchavariani's speech, which calls for introducing Georgia's contemporary poetry to foreign audiences, noting that this is of utmost importance to him.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 29; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289.

Note: Nikoloz Mikava is mentioned by his last name in the source, while Vladimir Machavariani is referred to as Vova and by his last name.

1948

April 7

He continues to work on the poem "The Years of the Century", but his progress is still slow.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 29; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289.

1948

April 7

He orders a coat for Nino Kvirikadze, paying 1,300 roubles for the fabric.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 29; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289.

1948

April 7

In the morning, he listens to the poems "Songs of Labour" by the poet Varlam Zhuruli, read by Pierre Kobakhidze and Medea Chakhava on the radio. He thinks the broadcast turned out well, as the poems were thematically selected. He believes that Varlam Zhuruli shows his influence in terms of rhythm, meter, and thematic structure, which does not diminish the poet but rather adds depth and grace to his work. He wonders what Varlam Zhuruli himself thinks about this.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 5; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 282.

Note: Pierre Kobakhidze and Medea Chakhava are referenced by name and by their initials of last names in the source.

1948

April 8

He compares the lists of poems submitted to the editors with the tables of contents of the fourth volume and the Book "The Sea Has Roared", discovering that 92 poems he submitted are not included in the fourth volume, while 70 poems are missing from the collection "The Sea Has Roared".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 30; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289.

1948

April 9

On the page of the desk calendar for April 9, which notes that Charles Baudelaire was born on this day in 1821 and died in 1967, he adds that he passed away at the age of 46.

Source: MGL, d-201, p. 30-a; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289.

1948

April 10

He works on the poems dated 1941: "We Shall Win", "It Is the Ninth of May", and "The Blacksmith", noting that the poems are finally revised.

Source: MGL, d-201, p. 31; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

1948

April 11

He spends the entire day, until 4 am the next morning, working on and revising forty old poems.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 32; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

1948

April 11

He pays 1,800 roubles to the tailor for the making of Nino Kvirikadze's coat.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 29; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289.

1948

After April 13

In the magazine Literaturuli Dziebani an article by Shalva Radiani titled "The Work of Galaktion Tabidze" is published, in which the critic reiterates his views on Galaktion's work expressed in his earlier writings.

Source: Sh. Radiani, "The Work of Galaktion Tabidze", magazine Literaturuli Dziebani, 1948, IV, p. 1-48.

Dating: The magazine is signed for printing on April 13, 1948.

1948

April 14

On the page of the desk calendar for April 14, which notes that Vladimir Mayakovsky died on this day in 1930 and that the French fable writer La Fontaine also died on the same date in 1695, he writes about an incident at the bakery, where there is no bread, but a picture of Vladimir Mayakovsky is hanging on the wall. When asked when there will be bread, the baker replies with the same mournful expression as in Mayakovsky's portrait, saying that bread will be brought tomorrow. Galaktion notes that Mayakovsky died 18 years ago, that he sang of the future, and also said "tomorrow". He then writes a stanza of a poem, posing the question, "Why tomorrow, why not today?"

Source: MGL, d-201, p. 33; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

1948

After April 14

He reads Maksime Ramishvili's Book "Grape Varieties of Guria, Samegrelo, and Adjara", making highlights and notes.

Source: GTSM, 131. M. Ramishvili, "Grape Varieties of Guria, Samegrelo, and Adjara", Tbilisi, 1948.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on April 14, 1948.

1948

April 15

He purchases 20 meters of coarse calico and 10 meters of silk for 632 roubles.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 34; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

1948

April 16

He wants to buy the new telephone directory but learns that it has not been published yet.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 34; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

1948

April 16

He plans to negotiate the publication of his poems with the editorial offices of the magazine Mnatobi and newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 34; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 291.

1948

April 16

He is trying to figure out how to make a call to Moscow.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 34; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

1948

April 16

He picks up the new suit that was ordered from the tailor on April 6.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 28; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 289.

1948

March 18

The newspaper Norchi Lenineli publishes an article about the esteemed teacher Toma Peradze, highlighting among his notable students the National Poet and Academician Galaktion Tabidze, alongside a printed photograph of him.

Source: Newspaper Norchi Lenineli, "Mentor to Many Generations", March 18, 1948, №12, p. 2.

1948

April 19

He makes a note about Razhden Kaladze, stating that his family was known from the very beginning for its malice, ingratitude, and intolerance. This was primarily reflected in the public speeches of the family's head, Razhden. When speaking publicly, he would always attack someone, sometimes even Philippe Makharadze. Galaktion notes that this corrupt man disappeared from the horizon of Tbilisi, but left behind his heirs, his wife Aneta and son Karlo, who were later joined by daughter-in-law Tamar Abakelia. The family firmly continued the path of evil begun by Razhden. According to Galaktion, Tamar Abakelia spares no effort to present herself as a great sculptor. She never misses an opportunity to invite foreign guests and show them her apartment, decorated in a European style. The guests leave and praise her as the most beautiful Georgian woman. However, Galaktion believes she is not beautiful at all. Her gaze reveals pride that is entirely unmerited. He thinks that perhaps foreign guests, who seek exoticism in our country, might like Tamar Abakelia for her mannerisms. The poet points out that her success as a sculptor is greatly aided by her husband, Karlo Kaladze. Galaktion characterizes him as talentless, arrogant, and cynical, but at the same time, as a diplomat and a schemer. Kaladze's circle consists of similar degenerates, who fought against old writers. They are always together and manage to take control of the leadership of literary and social organizations. When necessary, they skilfully hide behind the names of deserving writers, and when given the chance, they attack the same writers. Galaktion indicates that he himself has experienced their behaviour. He notes that Karlo Kaladze even used his mother's death for his own purposes and had 29 Georgian writers announce her death in a necrology.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-633, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 381-384.

1948

April 19

On the page of the desk calendar for April 19, which notes that Lord Byron, born in 1788, died on this day in 1821, he adds that it marks the 160th anniversary of his birth. He mentions that Givi Gachechiladze's translations of Byron's poems were broadcast on the radio, translated into Georgian with Galaktion's rhythms and structure. He recalls that in the seminary, Giorgi Leonidze saw a Book by Byron with Galaktion's inscription: "At least one in Georgia".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 36; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

Note: In the source, Giorgi Leonidze is mentioned only by his last name.

1948

April 22

He speaks with his former classmate and friend from the Kutaisi Theological Seminary, Genadi Mikhelidze.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 36-a; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

1948

April 23

Under Sandro Shanshiashvili's inscription on the Book "Shota's Ring" - gifted on April 23, 1928, to Galaktion Tabidze as a member of the literary corporation "Aripioni" with the note "To Aripioni Galaktion Tabidze" - he adds his own inscription. "Don't pee, Sandro Shanshiashvili!"

Source: MGL, t-604, Sandro Shanshiashvili, "Shota's Ring", the Book of ballads and legends, Tbilisi, 1928.

1948

April 22-24

He attends a special Plenum of the Writers' Union Board.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-177, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 520.

1948

April 25

In his diary, he records his impressions of the Writers' Union Board Plenum. He notes that it felt entirely superficial; the Presidium and the Writers' Union Chairman, Simon Chikovani, are performing poorly. They are protected from above, concealing the wrongdoings revealed at the Plenum. Among the opposition – Konstantine Gamsakhurdia, Konstantine Chichinadze, Alexandre Baramidze, Viktor Gabeskiria, Solomon Tavadze, Dimitri Benashvili, Giorgi Jibladze, and Alexandre Kutateli – some expressed genuinely critical positions, while others simply cast sidelong glances at the attendees. He concludes that he has no hope left for the Writers' Union, as all within it have washed away their consciences.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-177, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 520.

1948

Until April 27

The Society for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries of Georgia translates and publishes a Book in Vienna, which includes a poem by Galaktion.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-203, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

Dating: The information appears in the diary entry dated April 27, 1948.

Note: The title of the Book is not specified in the source.

1948

April 27

He wears his new suit for the first time, feeling good and pleased with the attention, respect, interest, and affection he receives from people. He recalls a Russian proverb that suggests people are welcomed according to their attire.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-203, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299.

1948

April 27

In his diary, he writes that the "Book Chamber" will publish a bibliography for an anniversary celebration, and the head of the chamber has assigned this task to researcher Tina Nakashidze, a loyal and experienced professional in the field. He notes that the head of the Book Chamber is a very good person. He adds that Tina Nakashidze is compiling a list of poems included in textbooks published by the state publishing house. In addition to enriching his bibliographic records, Galaktion is also interested in this work to determine from which publications he is eligible to receive royalties.

Source: MGL, d-203, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299.

1948

April 27

In his diary, he notes that, through a private order or via the "State Publishing House" №2 store, it is possible to have frames made for the exhibition at "Dinamo". He also writes that the Art Fund, located at 8 Shio Chitadze Street, prepares frames at a low cost and that a very good man, Andro Javakhishvili, works there as the director.

Source: MGL, d-203, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299.

1948

April 27

He receives the medical commission record books together with Nino Kvirikadze, which he believes can be of great benefit.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-203, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299.

1948

April 27

In his diary, he notes that books can be printed in small batches using collotype, and that despite the high cost, 50 copies of a 50-page Book cost 500 roubles, which is negligible compared to the benefits of the book.

Source: MGL, d-203, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299.

Note: Collotype refers to printing using a glass plate.

1948

April 27

In his diary, he writes that reprinting a large Book on the printing machine, such as the fifth and sixth volumes, costs 3 roubles for every 30 lines. Accordingly, printing 3,000 lines, or 100 pages, amounts to 3,000 roubles.

Source: MGL, d-203, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299.

1948

April 27

He meets Ipolite Vartagava and learns that he has finished writing his memories about Galaktion.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-203, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299.

1948

April 27

He learns that Dr. Lado Gasviani, whom he considers an outstanding person, has published a Book titled "Shovi", the entire print run of which has been taken to Racha. In his diary, he notes that this Book contains one of his poems, which is needed for the bibliography.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-203, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299.

1948

April 27

He purchases 100 sheets of photo paper, the size of a postcard, for 24 roubles at the store "Kultsakoneli" on Rustaveli Avenue. He notes that 100 sheets of larger-sized photo paper cost 120 roubles.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-203, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299.

1948

April 27

He retrieves three photographs taken and printed from the 1908 issue of the magazine Chveni Kvali at the Karl Marx Public Library: a poem by Galaktion published in the newspaper, the cover, and a portrait of Lado Darchiashvili. He considers the staff of this institution – photographer Didebulidze and bibliographer Tamar Matchavariani – to be exceptionally attentive, which he appreciates.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-203, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

1948

April 27

He meets Teo Kekelidze and Lado Japaridze, who are old friends, and notes that such friendship is rare.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-203, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

1948

April 27

In the evening, Abesalom Tabidze brings a poem dedicated to Galaktion by the young poet Nodar Dumbadze from the Women’s Railway School, which evokes deep emotions in the poet. He considers the poem to be youthful, sincere, and emotional. He notes that Dumbadze refers to him as the “Messiah of Poetry”, who has inspired many poets. He highlights the lines: “Just as the mighty Rioni has thundered in Imereti since ancient times, / If asked who I know to be a master of poetry, / I will say: Galaktion surpasses them all”, “I still want to be there for a long time, / Where you are and your night”, and “I have named my poetry / only and exclusively Galaktion”, among others. He also praises Dumbadze’s second poem, “Georgia”. In his diary, he writes that this author enjoys popularity among the youth.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-203, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

1948

April 27

At the Society for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries of Georgia, he meets Nikoloz Mikava and agrees to select 50 poems for translation into foreign languages. Nikoloz Mikava promises that some of the poems will be translated in Georgia, while others will be translated in England, America, and Vienna. Galaktion suggests distributing the selected poems by year as follows: 1908-1917, 1918-1928, 1928-1938, 1938-1948.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-203, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

1948

April 27

He receives the October-December 1947 issue of the Russian-language publication “Chronology of Newspaper Articles”, which contains an entry on page 43: “Табидзе Г. 29492, 31345”. Galaktion does not know what these numbers mean and wants to find out, as he believes this information is necessary for the bibliography.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-203, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

Note: In analytical bibliographies, every publication is assigned a number, and these numbers correspond to Galaktion's publications.

1948

April 27

He browses through the Book "Niko Tskhvedadze" by Varlam Kajaia, published by Tbilisi State University Press, and reads a letter from Abesalom Tabidze on page 77, which describes the years 1908–1914 in detail. He thinks he will use this Book for the exhibition.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-203, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

1948

April 27

He receives confirmation that the department store will receive the coat by May 16.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-203, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

1948

April 27

At the end of the day, he lists 19 items in his diary, noting how many tasks he has completed, clarified, or advanced, referring to them as "reconnaissance flights". He wishes to be even more active and increase this number to 100, ensuring that he does not exhaust himself. He begins the list with a proverb: "People are welcomed according to their attire..." and cites the rest: "but they are dismissed according to the measure of their intelligence".

Source: MGL, d-203, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

Note: The proverb is Russian and goes: "По платью встречают, по уму провожают".

1948

April 27

In his notebook, he writes that Alexandre Gomiashvili deliberately paused in the middle of his speech.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-204, p. 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301;

Note: The source does not indicate where Gomiashvili delivered a speech.

1948

April 28 or earlier

He needs to clarify the status of the publication of his "Selected Works" in Moscow and requests Nikolai Tikhonov to provide the address of the Moscow State Publishing House where Fyodor Golovenchenko works, in order to contact him.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-203, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301.

1948

April 28

On the page for April 22 in his desk calendar, which contains information that the poet and Order of the Red Banner recipient Alio Mashashvili (Mirtskhulava) was born on this day in 1903, and that the great Russian commander Mikhail Kutuzov died on the same day in 1813, he adds a note of exclamation: “Oh, oh!” and ironically remarks that Mashashvili is mentioned alongside Kutuzov.

Source: MGL, d-201, p. 36-g; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

1948

April 28

The head of the Book Base, Meliton Tevdoradze, offers to sell photo paper at cost price, which will be possible after the May holidays.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-203, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301.

1948

April 28

He searches his archive for poems dedicated to him and notes in his diary that he has currently found 111 poems, although they are incomplete. He mentions that the list includes only the titles of the poems. He plans to include the last names of the authors in the bibliography after he locates the poems.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-203, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301.

1948

April 28

He notes in his diary that the number of poems dedicated to him has increased with the addition of works by three young poets: Levan Partsvania, Nodar Dumbadze, and Davit Kvirikvaia. He mentions that he has a list featuring 169 authors and that, on average, he receives five poems dedicated to him each year.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-203, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301.

1948

April 28

He arranges for an intercity phone call to Fyodor Golovenchenko in Moscow for the evening of May 30 at 6:00 PM.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-203, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301.

1948

April 28

He finds the cover of the 1908 “Akaki Collection” in his archive. In his diary, he writes that he needs the Almanac “Pirveli Talgha” and a photo of the seminary from that time for the exhibition. He notes that he already has other exhibition materials prepared.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-203, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301.

1948

April 28

He examines the quality and quantity of the exhibition materials from 1908 and records the results in his diary. He notes that he currently has only 31 exhibits in his possession, which include photographs, magazines, letters, and others.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-203, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301.

1948

April 28

He writes a new version of the poem "The Unveiling of the Monument" ("On the Occasion of the Unveiling of Rustaveli's Monument").

Source: Autograph: MGL, №329; №919; №3469; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 132.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "To a Fellow Poet", "Inscription in Pencil on the Monument to Shota Rustaveli", and "The Monument to Shota Rustaveli in Tbilisi".

1948

April 29

For the exhibition, he acquires a photo titled "House on Press Street", which depicts the building that housed the editorial offices of the newspapers "New Trace" and "Amirani", where his first poems were published. He notes that the photo is accompanied by a negative.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-203, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301.

1948

April 29

In his personal archive, he selects 14 poems dedicated to him for a jubilee exhibition, all of which can be linked to the year 1908. In his diary, he records the last names of these poems' authors.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-203, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301.

1948

April 30

He has a telephone conversation scheduled with Fyodor Golovenchenko in Moscow for 6 p.m. In his notebook, he notes that the call confirmation needs to be made by 7.

Source: MGL, d-201, p. 37; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

Note: Fyodor Golovenchenko is mentioned in the source by his last name.

1948

April 30

He writes an untitled poem "The Fish Said to the Fish".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-204, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 302-303; Autographs: MGL, №71-d., p. 3; N. Kvirikadze's autograph, №2796; G. Tabidze, G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 82.

1948

After April 30

He is preparing to hold his own evening event at the Marjanishvili Theatre. In his notebook, he records the phone numbers of actors from the Marjanishvili Theatre, as well as contacts from the Philharmonic and the radio station.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-204, p. 5; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 303.

1948

April

In the magazine Iskusstvo, a reproduction of Galaktion Tabidze's bust, created by Silovan Kakabadze in 1947, is published.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-212, p. 4, 5; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 354.

May

1948

May 1 or later

He reads an article by Giorgi Jibladze in the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, in which Jibladze harshly criticizes Giorgi Leonidze for the manifestation of symbolism in his poem "Samgori". The publication cites several stanzas from the poem, and in one instance, Galaktion writes on the edge of the newspaper, suggesting how a particular stanza could have been written better.

Source: G. Jibladze, "Fragments of Symbolism (Notes on Giorgi Leonidze's Poem "Samgori")", Literatura da Khelovneba, №17, May 1, p. 3-4. GTDA, №457, p. 4.

1948

May 5

Besarion Zhghenti, the deputy editor-in-chief of the publishing house Zarya Vostoka, sends a telegram to Alexandra Ryabinina at the Moscow State Publishing House regarding Galaktion Tabidze's Book scheduled for publication in Moscow. The message states that the edited materials for the Book have been sent to Moscow through the translator, Pati Tvaltvdze.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-204, p. 18; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 306.

1948

May 6

On a desk calendar page, he writes that it's interesting that Maxim Gorky's decision was to have his first story published in the reactionary newspaper Kavkaz. He notes how much a good comrade can mean and recalls how, in 1908, his friend Kote Vepkhvadze talked him out of publishing a poem in Russian in Kavkaz. With irony, he adds that it would have been a splendid debut.

Source: MGL, d-201, p. 37; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 290.

1948

May 6

At the Academy of Sciences, he writes a petition addressed to the President of the Georgian SSR Academy of Sciences, Academician Nikoloz Muskhelishvili, requesting a one-month research trip to Moscow to conduct literary studies and seeking reimbursement for necessary expenses.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-204, p. 14; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 305.

1948

May 6

In his notebook, he writes a stanza from a poem by the 19th-century Russian poet Ivan Aksakov, which expresses that the church bell calls Christians to evening prayer. He also notes that the following day is Sunday, a day of rest from work.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-204, p. 15; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 305;

1948

May 8

He purchases the Book Bibliography of Georgian Periodicals (1819-1945), published by the Book Chamber of Georgia in 1947, which he finds very unsatisfactory. He remarks that the Book is terrible and suggests that the erroneous information included in it must be due to the mischief of Ioseb Grishashvili.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 38; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 291.

1948

May 8

He listens to his wife, Nina Kvirikadze, discussing philosophical issues with the maid, and writes about it in his diary.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 39; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 292.

1948

May 8

Grigol Orakhelashvili hands over Beso Zhghenti's review of his research on Galaktion Tabidze. Upon reading it, Galaktion reflects that it is "a pity".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 39; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 292.

1948

After May 8

He begins to work on the Book "Bibliography of Georgian Periodicals", published by the Book Chamber of Georgia in 1947, and writes down noteworthy information in his notebook.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-204, p. 6, 9-12; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 303, 304;

Until May 10

At home, they come across a letter left by Sonya Tabidze, in which she requests that he attend a meeting with her school's teaching staff and students.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-76; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 74.

1948

May 10

He sends a reply to Sonya Tabidze, apologizing for being unable to attend the evening with her school's teaching staff and students due to illness. He asks her, if possible, to provide the texts of the lectures and poems, which he would be happy to read.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-76; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 74.

1948

May 10

Nino Kvirikadze gifts him a notebook inscribed with the words: "From Nino Gatunia".

Source: Nino Kvirikadze's record, MGL, d-212, p. 27-a; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 359.

1948

May 5–11

He is preparing for a trip to Moscow and writes a list of 38 names of Russian writers in his notebook, expressing his desire to find out their addresses.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-204, p. 20, 21; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 306.

1948

May 5–11

In his notebook, he briefly describes the discussions initiated in Moscow under the guise of formalism, bowing to foreign influences, and combating Russian nationalism. He notes that the first strike was launched by Andrei Zhdanov against Mikhail Zoshchenko and Anna Akhmatova, after which the "discussion" deepened. He points out that musicians were not spared from criticism, recalling the campaign waged against Vano Muradeli. He writes that the prevailing sentiments in the debate were those of folk traditions, simplicity, clarity, nationality, and melody. He observes that those targeted by the criticism were typically forced to admit their mistakes, yet in practice, they continued along the old paths. He reflects that such discussions have few positive aspects, as they yield no real results; however, they often bring many to light, who fall into a trap, naively believing that their opposition does not pertain to state affairs, and if it does, it is an unintentional mistake. In reality, these discussions are preparations by the state for further actions. He recounts asking a woman to whom society shows solidarity, to which she replied that today it does not matter to whom society shows sympathy.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-204, p. 22; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 307.

Note: Melos - a concept that defines the melodic, song-like essence in a musical composition.

1948

May 11

Simon Chikovani, the chairman of the Writers' Union of Georgia, sends a telegram to Fyodor Golovenchenko and Alexandra Ryabinina at the Moscow State Publishing House, stating that a contract was signed in 1944 between the Writers' Union of Georgia and the Moscow State Publishing House for the publication of Galaktion Tabidze's selected works in Russian. On behalf of the Presidium, Simon Chikovani requests that the recipients expedite the book's publication, noting that the Presidium is interested in ensuring that the Book of the National Poet Galaktion Tabidze is released in Russian with high-quality translations and formatting. He concludes by expressing that he looks forward to their response.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-204, p. 24; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 308

1948

Until Mid-May

He sends a telegram to the State Literary Publishing House in Moscow, informing them that a contract for the publication of his "Selected Works" was signed with the publisher on May 25, 1944, but the process has been severely delayed. Nearly four years have passed, and the Book has not been published. He informs them that he plans to travel to Moscow in mid-May and, if there are no objections from the publisher, he intends to bring an additional 5,000 lines to add to the book, bringing the total to 15,000 lines. He mentions that this year marks the 40th anniversary of his literary career and that it would be desirable for his Russian translations to be published, if not in the summer, then at least by the beginning of September.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-152. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 73.

1948

May 13

The Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia issues a guarantee letter for the withdrawal of 2,500 roubles.

Source: MGL, WUF №24.

1948

May 16

He goes to the department store to buy a new coat.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 40-a; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 292.

1948

After May 17

In Sergi Tchilaia's Book "Literary Letters", the article "Galaktion Tabidze" is published. The author reviews the poet's work starting from 1908 and distinguishes two periods - the time of reaction and the period following the Socialist Revolution. The author discusses the mystical-decadent mood characteristic of the poet's early period, which was likely influenced by the "Tsisperkantselis" group. This influence led to the vague and aimless poems found in the 1919 collection. He discusses in detail the poet's inspiration from Nikoloz Baratashvili's poems. He notes that after the 1917 Revolution, the source of his optimistic poetry became the revived homeland, and the Soviet era gave rise to his bright lyricism.

Source: S. Tchilaia, "Literary Letters", Tbilisi, 1949, p. 124-171.

1948

After May 17

He reads Sergi Tchilaia's Book "Literary Letters" and, in an article about it, highlights the lines stating that Galaktion Tabidze established a new era in Georgian literature with his brilliant lyricism and gave a new sound to Georgian poetry.

Source: S. Tchilaia, "Literary Letters", Tbilisi, 1949, p. 124.

1948

Until May 18

He prepares materials for a Russian Book to be published in Moscow. He titles his notebook "Flags Quickly" and compiles chronological lists of selected poems from the years 1908-1917 and 1917-1930 from the first and second volumes of his works. His wife, Nino Kvirikadze, helps him with the compilation of the titles. Next to the titles of the poems dated 1929, he notes that the poems listed afterward have not yet been submitted for translation.

Source: MGL, d-228, p. 1; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 448-459;

1948

Until May 18

While compiling the list of selected poems for the Book of Russian translations, he notes in his notebook that Valerian Gaprindashvili based an entire Book of "Sunsets" on one of his poems, "Blue Horses".

Source: MGL, d-228, p. 11; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 459;

1948

Until May 18

Under the title "Ars Poetique", he writes a stanza that concludes with the lines: "Novel, poem - whether a verse or a letter, / Every line is politics, / Sewn together with threads of white!"

Source: MGL, d-228, p. 17; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 454;

1948

May 18

He travels by bus to Tbilisi airport with Nino Kvirikadze.

Source: MGL, d-205, p. 1;

1948

May 18

At 8:30 a.m., he departs from Tbilisi airport for Moscow. On a piece of paper, he writes that the propeller of the Douglas airplane has started, and the plane has begun to taxi from the aerodrome. He notes that the sun shines through the window, and the airplane circles around the aerodrome before taking off from the ground nine minutes later. The poet describes in detail how Tbilisi gradually recedes to the left, with Mount Mtatsminda appearing white, the Mtkvari River, and countless houses. He writes that they rise above the clouds, and beneath their airplane, two eagles are soaring in circles, noting that this is not a fantasy.

Source: MGL, d-205, p. 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 310.

1948

May 18

On the page, he writes that at 9:15 a.m., the airplane lands at the Sokhumi aerodrome, where three or four years ago he found a pencil that brought him happiness. He jots down lines from his poem dedicated to “the beautiful Abkhazia”, titled “Thank You, Abkhazia”: “Greetings to Abkhazia, its sun and its strength. Before it, I humbly bow down in reverence”.

Source: MGL, d-205, p. 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 310.

1948

May 18

He writes on the page that it is ten minutes to ten, and the airplane has taken off from the Sokhumi aerodrome, landing in Rostov at 12:25 p.m.

Source: MGL, d-205, p. 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 311.

1948

May 18

He writes on the page that at 1 p.m., the airplane took off from Rostov, and at 5 p.m., it landed at Vnukovo airport in Moscow.

Source: MGL, d-205, p. 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 311.

Dating: In the entry, the date is indicated as the 18th of July instead of May.

1948

May 18 or later

In his notebook, he writes a poem in Russian, stating that the airplane, proudly flying above the clouds, took one hour to travel from Georgia to Moscow. The poet greets Moscow like an old friend and apologizes for not having seen it for a long time. He asks if it remembers the year 1917, when the poet sang to the revolution by the Spassky Gate.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-227, p. 7; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 445.

Dating: Galaktion arrived in Moscow on May 18.

Note: The Spassky Gate is located in Moscow.

1948

May 18 or later

In his notebook, he writes a one-stanza poem about Amiran and the Georgian people, which begins with the line “When chained to the rock...”.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-227, p. 7; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 446;

1948

May 19

In the Moscow State Publishing House, he discusses with Alexandra Ryabinina, the head of the Soviet Union’s People’s Literatures Editorial Board, the reasons for the delay in publishing the Book specified in the 1944 contract. She explains that editing responsibilities were assigned to Beso Zhghenti, who was charged with selecting and organizing the materials. Pati Tvaltvadze delivered the Book to Ryabinina, marking the titles of the poems she intended to translate in the table of contents. Ryabinina commented that she did not find Tvaltvadze’s work reliable and subsequently rejected it. Concerning the telegram from Beso Zhghenti dated May 5, Ryabinina noted that she reprimanded him for marking the titles in the table of contents, emphasizing that this does not constitute proper editing. She expressed no surprise that the incriminating telegram he received was not shown to Galaktion by Zhghenti.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-206, p. 1-2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 312.

1948

May 19

He discusses the publication of a new book of translations of his poems with Alexandra Ryabinina. He suggests creating print copies of the poems in Tbilisi. They talk about the identity of the new editor but cannot reach an agreement. Ryabinina proposes candidates for translators, while Galaktion promises to draft a new plan for the book. Ryabinina emphasizes the need to establish a new contract since the honorarium has increased since 1944, and it’s better to terminate the old contract. She notes that the contract must be signed by Fyodor Golovenchenko, who is expected to arrive from Tashkent in a week. She asks Galaktion to introduce her to his wife, Nino, and provides her own phone number and address.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-206, p. 2-4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 312-313.

1948

After May 19

He outlines a new plan for the Book of translations to be published in Moscow, arranging the material chronologically. He notes the works that have been translated by Giorgi Tsagereli and compiles a list of the remaining materials to be translated.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-227, p. 3–5, 8, 10–13; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 443–448;

1948

After May 21

He receives a letter from Giorgi Nazarenko, a lecturer at Taras Shevchenko University in Kyiv. He informs him that he recently read Levan Asatiani’s Book “The Life of Akaki Tsereteli”, in which the relationship between Georgian and Ukrainian writers of the 19th and 20th centuries is well depicted. Impressed by this, he developed a desire to transcribe the translation of Galaktion's poem "Oath" from the 1947 Ukrainian almanac and send it to the poet. Additionally, he inquires whether the Slovak translation of one of his poems, sent by the addressee on February 29, has been received. He expresses the wish for these materials to be included in Galaktion's bibliography.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-486-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301-302.

1948

May 22

He goes to the Union of Soviet Writers, where he wishes to meet with Alexander Fadeev, the deputy chairman of the organizational committee, Pyotr Skosirev, the editor of the magazine Druzhba Narodov, and Nikolai Tikhonov, the deputy general secretary of the Writers' Union. However, none of them are in Moscow; their duties are being handled by Anatoly Sofronov, the secretary of the Writers' Union.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-206, p. 5; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 313.

1948

May 22

An article by Ana Agladze about the sculptor Silovan Kakabadze's studio is published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, in which Galaktion Tabidze's bust is mentioned among the sculptor's finest works.

Source: Newspaper "Заря Востока", May 22, 1948, Saturday, №102, p. 3.

1948

May 23

In his notebook, he notes that Giorgi Jibladze has also arrived in Moscow. He expresses hope that his arrival is related to the publication of Galaktion's book.

Source: MGL, d-206, p. 5; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 313.

1948

May 23

In his notebook, he writes that the translator, Pati Tvaltvadze, claims to have translated two thousand lines of his poems. He notes that the translator has received a fee, so he should present these translations, which are subject to verification. He mentions that he will handle the translations of the remaining poems himself. He believes that the most important thing is to prepare the book, while the publication will be easy.

Source: MGL, d-206, p. 5; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 313.

1948

May 24

He speaks on the phone with Viktor Goltsev, offering him to edit his book. Goltsev does not decline but mentions that he is very busy, as he is editing the books of Karlo Kaladze, Sergo Kldiashvili, and literary essays at the personal request of Kandid Charkviani. He inquires whether Galaktion's Book is included in the plans and expresses a desire to meet with Giorgi Jibladze.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-206, p. 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 314.

Note: Galaktion's Book was not included in the plan.

1948

May 24

He speaks on the phone with Giorgi Jibladze, offering him to edit the translations Book to be published in Moscow. Jibladze gladly agrees and says he will help in any way he can.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-206, p. 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 314.

1948

May 24

He writes a poem "How Wonderful It Is, My Homeland".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №8170; №8212; G. Tabidze, G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 82.

Note: The poem is also found untitled, with a different beginning: "How wonderful it is, Oh glacier...".

1948

May 24

In his notebook, he notes that it is necessary to visit the Writers' Union, which won't be harmful, as everything is legally in order.

Source: MGL, d-206, p. 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 314.

1948

After May 24

He makes underlines and comments on the lines of poetry in Khuta Berulava's Book "The Breath of the Sea".

Source: MGL, t-23, Khuta Berulava, "The Breath of the Sea", Sokhumi, 1948, p. 7, 21, 41, 83, 100-101, 123, 144, 221-224.

1948

May 25

At 9:30 in the morning, he listens to Anatoly Olkhon's poems on the radio.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-208, p. 1; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 330.

1948

May 25

In the morning, he talks to Giorgi Jibladze, who appreciates Galaktion's proposed chronological division of the book. The poet learns about Jibladze's phone conversation with Goltsev, during which Jibladze informs him that he has already spoken with Viktor Goltsev. Galaktion feels uneasy about this, suspecting Goltsev's goodwill, and dislikes that the plan is prioritized over the contract. Jibladze advises Galaktion to reach out to Sonia Khitarova, believing she is the best executor. However, Galaktion doubts this assessment, recalling that Khitarova herself signed the 1944 contract, yet the Book was never published. These suggestions lead him to question Jibladze's intentions and suspect that he might be siding with his opponents. He contemplates ways to overcome these obstacles and hopes for support from the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia, which, according to Jibladze, he has. He concludes that Jibladze came to Moscow solely for the purpose of advancing his Book project.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-206, p. 7-8; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 314-315.

1948

May 25

In the afternoon, Galaktion hands Alexandra Ryabinina the plan for the upcoming Russian translation book, reflecting his vision: the chronological arrangement of the poems, the role of the editor, and the number of lines. Ryabinina calls Sophia Khitarova and transfers the materials to her. However, Giorgi Jibladze is absent from the meeting, resulting in a loss of two days for them.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-206, p. 8; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 315.

1948

May 25

In the evening, Giorgi Jibladze visits Galaktion, apologizing for his absence from the meeting and promising assistance in finalizing the contract on May 27.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-206, p. 8; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 315.

1948

May 25

In the evening, he writes in his notebook about the day's impressions. He notes that today marks the expiration of the contract signed in 1944 for a duration of four years. He remarks that Arkadi Deev, the literary consultant for the almanac Druzhba Narodov and the National Commission of Writers, is a good man, but concludes from his own experience that he cannot be trusted. He also mentions that Khitarova is a good woman, yet he feels she does not inspire much confidence either. He suspects that there is a significant and silent connection between them and speculates that both may be Armenian. He believes that the almanac Druzhba Narodov shows indifference towards him and concludes that vigilance is necessary.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-206, p. 10; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 315.

1948

After May 25

He receives a letter from Sofio Khitarova, an editor at the State Literary Publishing House in Moscow. She informs him that she has been appointed as the editor for his Russian-language one-volume edition, but she is encountering significant difficulties due to the disorganized material she received for editing. Many poems are missing transcripts, translators are not always specified, and lines from poems are omitted in the excerpts. She writes that the Book will be divided into six sections: “Lyrical Poems of the Past Years,” “The Era,” “Journey Through Europe,” “Lyrical Poems of the War Period,” “The Clusters of Life” (Post-War Lyrical Poems), and asks whether this structure will be acceptable to Galaktion. The addressee provides numerous examples where the dates of poems differ between the material presented by Galaktion and other sources, and requests that he provide final answers regarding each of these discrepancies.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-495-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, 1948

May 28

For half an hour, he enjoys listening to a radio program about Vissarion Belinsky, read by the announcer Alexander Kiselev.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-206, p. 15; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 316.

1948

Until May 29

The editorial office of Zarya Vostoka publishes a collection of poems by Georgian poets, translated into Russian by Nikolai Tikhonov, titled “Poets of Soviet Georgia”. It includes translations of Galaktion’s poems “Autumn in the Trenches” (“And the straws whispered, whispered”),  (“In the evening, when fog covers Mount Mtatsminda”), “You, with steel-cold eyes,” and “Everyone Has Something to Remember”.

Source: MGL, t-431, Николай Тихонов. “Поэты советской Грузии”, Tbilisi, 1948, p. 126–132.

1948

May 29

In the “New Books” section of the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, an announcement is published about the release of Nikolai Tikhonov’s collection of selected translations titled “Poets of Soviet Georgia”. The announcement notes that the collection includes poems by 18 poets, and Galaktion Tabidze is mentioned in the alphabetical list of poets.

Source: newspaper “Заря Востока”, May 29, 1948, Saturday, №107, p. 3.

1948

After May 29

In the collection of poems by Georgian poets translated into Russian by Nikolai Tikhonov, “Poets of Soviet Georgia”, next to the title of the translation of Alexandre Abasheli’s work “The Date of the Poem”, he writes the lines of his own poem: “Time, mark the time! Write down the poem/ every minute, day, and hour”.

Source: MGL, t-431, Николай Тихонов. “Поэты советской Грузии”, Tbilisi, 1948, p. 2, 3.

1948

May 30

Giorgi Jibladze attaches a positive resolution to the list of selected poems prepared by Galaktion for the Russian-language publication of the collection.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-207, p. 40; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 330.

1948

May 30

In the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, Simon Chikovani's article "The Current State of Georgian Soviet Literature and Our Tasks" is published, addressing the issues and challenges facing Georgian poetry, prose, drama, and criticism. Chikovani disputes critic Sergi Tchilaia's perspective on Galaktion Tabidze's relationship with literary tradition. He argues that Tchilaia presents a biased view of Galaktion's pre-revolutionary poetry, questioning Tchilaia's notion that Galaktion is the direct heir to the literary traditions of XIX-century Georgian classics. Chikovani emphasizes that in his early work, Galaktion showed little interest in social and national issues, setting him in stark contrast to XIX-century Georgian poets. According to the author, it is unjustified to speak of "encounters" between the works of Nikoloz Baratashvili and Galaktion Tabidze, as such encounters typically occur only among poets active within the same period. If a contemporary poet writes works similar to Baratashvili's, he would be considered an epigone rather than a like-minded peer. However, Chikovani insists that Galaktion cannot be accused of imitation, as he rarely followed Baratashvili's style and belonged to a fundamentally different poetic world. Chikovani argues that one cannot speak of a genetic connection between Galaktion and Baratashvili solely because Galaktion sometimes exhibits Baratashvili's tones or artistic motifs derived from the Romantic poet's work. While Baratashvili is a poet of clear classical thinking, Galaktion is, by contrast, an impressionist. Chikovani maintains that, unlike Baratashvili, early Galaktion Tabidze was unfamiliar with social issues or the philosophical generalization of personal impressions and experiences. To illustrate this viewpoint, the critic compares and analyses two poems: "Evening on Mtatsminda" and "Mtatsminda's Moon". According to Chikovani, the primary influence on Galaktion's early work is found not in national literary traditions but in the poetry of European Decadence. The fact that Galaktion references the names of Georgian literary classics in his early poems does not indicate a profound connection between his poetry and their work. The article further suggests that, although some of Galaktion's early poetry includes non-symbolist elements, these demonstrate a closer genetic link to Akaki Tsereteli's work than to Baratashvili's lyricism. To Chikovani, a testament to Galaktion's spiritual closeness with Akaki is that Akaki's name is mentioned in "Mtatsminda's Moon" even before Baratashvili. Chikovani also points out that Galaktion's early lyrical connection to Akaki's poetry was fragmentary; eventually, Galaktion chose an opposite creative path, aligning himself with Russian-European symbolism.

Source: S. Chikovani, "The Current State of Georgian Soviet Literature and Our Tasks", newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1948, №21 (May 30), p. 2.

1948

May 31

In his notebook, he notes that the contract will be made with the translators and not with him as the author, but he is forced to agree to this condition.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-206, p. 10; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 315.

1948

Spring

In the morning, he meets Korneli Sanadze near the statue of Rustaveli, and they head towards Betania by car. In Betania, Galaktion lies down under a tree in the church's enclosure and dozes off. Later, they enter the church, where the poet lights a candle by the fresco of Queen Tamar. In the churchyard, Sanadze lays out a meal, and they have a feast. Then, the artist sets up his easel and makes a sketch of the sleeping Galaktion under the tree. By five o'clock, they return to the church, and Galaktion goes again to the fresco of Queen Tamar. They return to Tbilisi via Tskneti from Betania.

Source: K. Sanadze, Betania – Ateni; A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 268-270.

1948

Spring or later

Galaktion receives Korneli Sanadze, and they have a long conversation about poetry and art. Galaktion is very pleased with his time in Betania, and Korneli now suggests a two-day trip to the surroundings of Kintsvisi. However, Galaktion has business at the publishing house and declines the two-day outing, but he agrees to a one-day trip to Ateni by train.

Source: K. Sanadze, Betania – Ateni; A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 268-270.

1948

Spring or later

On Sunday morning at six o'clock, Galaktion meets Korneli Sanadze at the railway station, and they set off for Ateni. They go from the railway station in Gori to the bus station. In the street, people stop to let Galaktion pass. At the bus station, all tickets are sold out, but when they hear Galaktion's name, tickets mysteriously appear. One kilometre before the village of Ateni, Korneli stops the bus, asks Galaktion to get off, and look around. They continue on foot towards the Sioni Church of Ateni. After admiring the frescoes, they lie down on a haystack in the churchyard and fall asleep. Suddenly, they hear a commotion. It turns out that the locals, having recognized Galaktion, have laid out a feast and are waiting for them to wake up. Revelry, dancing, and singing begin. At five in the evening, the hosts drive the guests to the bus station and bid them farewell.

Source: K. Sanadze, Betania – Ateni; A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 270-274.

June

1948

June 1

He intends to copy selected poems from his first, second, third, and fourth volumes, as well as from the collection "Gold in the Azure of Adjara", into that common notebook for the Russian edition of the anthology. In Russian, he writes: “Galaktion Tabidze, Selected Works. Compiled and chosen by G. Tabidze. Moscow, June 1, 1948”.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-207, p. 1; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 317.

1948

June 2

In his notebook, he writes a one-stanza poem in Russian, expressing that he has both enthusiasm and enough money for two people, meant for the well-being of his loved ones and friends.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-208, p. 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 331;

1948

June 7

He attends the opening of an exhibition dedicated to the 100th anniversary of Vissarion Belinsky’s death at the Maxim Gorky Scientific Library of Moscow State University.

Source: MGL, d-208, p. 9–15; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 331–333.

1948

June 8 or earlier

In his notebook, he writes that in the application regarding the appointment of an editor for the Book to be published in Moscow, it is specified that Comrade Giorgi Jibladze, the deputy secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia for agitation and propaganda, is preferred for the position of editor.

Source: MGL, d-208, p. 19; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 334.

1948

June 8 or earlier

While in Moscow, he writes in his notebook in Russian a statement on a rough copy, noting that in 1918, he was accepted as a member of the Russian Social Democratic Workers’ Party (Bolsheviks) on the strong recommendation of a Bolshevik who worked at the newspaper Pravda, though he does not remember their name. He mentions that the party’s district committee was then located on one of the streets near the current Dzerzhinsky Square. He is curious if the list of party members from 1918 is preserved and whether Galaktion Tabidze’s name is included there. If the list is preserved and his name is mentioned, he is interested in knowing if it is possible to obtain a copy of it.

Source: MGL, d-208, p. 20; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 334.

1948

June 8

He makes an entry titled “By the Pushkin Monument,” in which he notes that the Pushkin monument in Moscow once appeared larger, as it was set in a surrounding of relatively low buildings and was elevated. Now, however, it is overshadowed by multi-story buildings. The poet recalls that in 1917, the monument was draped in red fabric, and meetings were held there with soldiers who had fled from the front. According to Galaktion, during one such meeting, a person with an intellectual appearance climbed onto the pedestal of the monument. He was speaking about the revolutionary struggle in Petrograd. Some soldiers found his words unappealing and considered him an unreliable individual. They dragged him down and decided to take him to the Soviet to identify him. Galaktion points out that the crowd would have harmed him if not for the sudden intervention of a man wearing a Caucasian coat (Chokha) from Imereti. The Imeretian man stood beside the orator and politely prevented those wishing to attack him. Despite a military man from the Soviet later declaring the orator to be a trustworthy person from Petrograd, the crowd still demanded his execution. However, the Imeretian man skilfully kept the people at bay, telling them that he personally knew the orator as an honourable person. Eventually, it was determined in the Moscow Soviet that the orator had done no wrong, and the crowd calmed down. The Imeretian man then told the guards that he knew the orator from afar, that he was originally from the Caucasus, and that they had no personal or familial connection. The Imeretian also mentioned that the revolution should not cause people to lose their conscience and honour. Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-641, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 107-109.

1948

June 8 or earlier

In his notebook, he writes a five-line untitled poem "We have traversed the land and the water".

Source: MGL, d-208, p. 21. AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 334.

Note: These lines have not been published by the poet.

1948

June 8

He sends an urgent telegram to Tbilisi, addressed to Alexandre Gomiashvili, the secretary of the Writers' Union, asking whether the promised funds have been sent via telegraph. He indicates the address as the "Moscow" hotel.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-208, p. 22. AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 334-335.

1948

June 8

He attends a session at the Academy of Sciences dedicated to the 100th anniversary of the death of Vissarion Belinsky, and walks back to the "Moscow" hotel, stopping by the statue of Gogol along the way. In his notebook, he describes the statue of Gogol. He reflects that Belinsky must have written his last letter to such a Gogol – sick, lost in thought, slumped weakly in his chair. He writes that the statue conveys nothing optimistic; the sculptor has richly adorned its pedestal with negative, grotesque characters that embody Gogol's creative realism. In his notebook, he notes that on this day dedicated to Belinsky, the entire country recalls the scientist's exemplary work, "Letter to Gogol".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-208, p. 23, 24. AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 335.

1948

June 8

In his notebook, he writes about a memory from 1917 when, after visiting Elene Bagrationi with Irakli Amirejibi, they walked home at night and stopped by Gogol's monument. He notes that thirty years have passed since then, and now, returning on foot from an academy session, he stands once again by the same monument, next to the same tree – his old familiar tree – which is still alive. He observes that “his” old Arbat is now brighter and wider, and every house there feels familiar to him. These houses are now surrounded by buses, trolleybuses, and trams, with a metro station nearby – all things that did not exist during Gogol's time. He imagines that Gogol's monument is thinking about the same changes.

Source: MGL, d-208, p. 23, 24. AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 335.

1948

June 8

In his notebook, he writes an untitled poem in Russian.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-208, p. 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 331.

Note: The poem begins with “Ради ближних моих...”.

1948

June 8

He carefully examines the exhibition dedicated to the 100th anniversary of the death of Vissarion Belinsky at the Maxim Gorky Scientific Library of Moscow State University. In his notebook, he meticulously lists the materials on display, sketching the arrangement of the exhibited portraits and books.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-208, p. 9–15; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 331–333.

1948

June 9

He notifies the State Literary Publishing House in Moscow in writing that he can have 10,000 lines of his book's excerpt translations prepared by translators in Tbilisi before September. He requests that the appropriate amount be issued, which he will pay to the individuals working on the task. He promises to provide, along with the excerpts in September, a list of how much was paid to each translator.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-166; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 74.

1948

After June 11

He makes underlines and comments on the lines of poetry in Ioseb Grishashvili's Book “In the Old Theatre”.

Source: MGL, t-31, I. Grishashvili, “In the Old Theatre”, Tbilisi, 1948, p. 7, 43, 47-49, 57.

1948

Until June 12

He sends a telegram to his brother, Abesalom Tabidze, informing him that he has safely arrived in Moscow with his wife.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, h-24551-339; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 178-179;

1948

After June 12

He receives a letter from his brother, who informs him that he has received his telegram but seems to have forgotten the promised daily letters. He writes that the exams will end on July 1 and he will be free. He asks him to have Nina inquire whether a fabric similar to flax can be found in Moscow, from which they used to make sails. He wishes him victory but adds that he is already victorious and his name is inscribed in history.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, h-24551-339; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 178-179;

1948

June 16

He flies out from Moscow's Vnukovo Airport at 7:10 AM and arrives in Tbilisi at 4:00 PM.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 41; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 292.

1948

June 17

He attends the meeting of the Academy of Sciences, during which Petre Sharia is released from his position as a member of the Academy's Presidium and removed from his role as Director of the Institute of Philosophy. In his place, Viktor Kupradze is elected as a member of the Academy's Presidium, while Savle Tsereteli is temporarily appointed as the Director of the Institute of Philosophy.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 42; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 292.

1948

June 18

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, an article by Revaz Gabichvadze, the responsible secretary of the Soviet Union of Composers of Georgia, is published. In it, he states that more than 30 composers are working on creating chamber vocal and instrumental pieces, with the majority of these compositions being based on texts by Galaktion Tabidze, Alexandre Sajaia, Revaz Margiani, and Ioseb Noneshvili.

Source: “Творческие задачи композиторов Грузии”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, June 18, 1948, Friday, №121, p. 3.

1948

June 18

He is in Mushtaidi Park. After returning home, He writes a poem “When the Sounds of Peace Are Heard”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №614; №4213; №4220; №2849-2850; №8327; №5907; G. Tabidze, G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 83.

Note: The poem is also found untitled, with the following beginnings: “He, when he hears my May joy...”; “When he hears our excitement in May...”; “When he hears our May excitement...”; “When he hears the friendship of the people...”; “When the sounds of peace are heard...”.

1948

June 19

In the newspaper Komunisti, Sergi Tchilaia publishes an article “An Old Debate in a New Form”, which responds to Simon Chikovani’s article “The Current State of Georgian Soviet Literature and Our Tasks”. Tchilaia disagrees with all of Chikovani’s criticisms of his interpretation of Galaktion Tabidze’s work. While Tchilaia does not deny that Galaktion’s pre-revolutionary poetry has ties to symbolism, he argues that the dominant influence in his work remains the tradition of classical literature. According to Tchilaia, this connection to classical traditions explains the poet’s rapid transformation following the revolution. Tchilaia also accuses Chikovani of factual inaccuracies. He disputes Chikovani’s assertion that the only Georgian poet Galaktion dedicated a poem to before the revolution was Akaki Tsereteli, pointing out that Galaktion had referenced Shota Rustaveli, Nikoloz Baratashvili, and Ilia Chavchavadze even before Tsereteli. Additionally, Tchilaia disagrees with Chikovani’s conclusions from comparing Baratashvili’s “Thoughts at the River Mtkvari” and Galaktion’s “New Wave”. Tchilaia argues that Galaktion infused Baratashvili’s social perspective with new meaning, linking his fighting spirit to the ideals of the revolution. In the conclusion of his article, Tchilaia states that none of Chikovani’s interpretations of Galaktion’s work are acceptable. He criticizes Chikovani for inadvertently adopting the position of the “Tsisperkantselis” literary group, who argued that Galaktion was not a national poet and that his decadent poetry had no roots in Georgian literature. Given this, Tchilaia finds it inconsistent and unserious for Chikovani to praise Galaktion’s poetry as grand, as it is inconceivable to consider a poet great if he lacks national essence and is labelled a decadent.

Source: S. Tchilaia, “An Old Debate in a New Form”, newspaper Komunisti, 1948, №121 (June 19), p. 3.

1948

June 23

After rising early and working, he drifts into a midday nap. In his dream, he is traveling by train with his mother, who is searching for something and tells her son that she cannot find the money intended for him. Galaktion points out that the wallet is on the bed. His mother repeats the word “Charmandina” three times. Upon waking, Galaktion records his dream in writing.

Source: MGL, d-627, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 246.

1948

June 23

He is not at the office and leaves a letter for someone named Nikoloz. He asks him to translate as much as possible quickly and promises to deliver the money in person. He instructs him to call in the evening or the following morning.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-77; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 74-75.

1948

After June 24

In the magazine Mnatobi, an article by Sergi Tchilaia titled “Galaktion Tabidze” is published. The author discusses Galaktion’s poetic evolution, noting that an interest in social issues was far from foreign to the early Galaktion. As evidence, the critic references several of Galaktion’s pre-revolutionary poems, suggesting that, where the source of the lyrical subject’s melancholy is elusive, it can often be explained within a social context. Sergi Tchilaia reiterates the perspective, popularized in Soviet criticism of the 1930s, that the poem “First of May” was written by Galaktion in 1908 and recited at an underground gathering. The critic sees Galaktion’s particular affinity for the colour blue as a hallmark of his romantic worldview. Tchilaia also interprets the theme of death in Galaktion’s early work as a symbolist-romantic motif, though he notes that Galaktion never pursued this theme to the extremes characteristic of European Romanticism and Symbolism, nor did he adopt Novalis’s radicalism. On the matter of Galaktion’s relationship with literary tradition, Sergi Tchilaia contrasts him with the Tsisperkantselis, arguing that, unlike them, Galaktion maintained a constant connection with the robust current of Georgian poetry. When discussing his Soviet-era work, the critic points out that Galaktion Tabidze’s connection with Romanticism persisted even in the post-revolutionary era, though this Romanticism had taken on new meaning suited to the modern age.

Source: S. Tchilaia, Galaktion Tabidze (Georgian Romanticism and G. Tabidze), Mnatobi, 1948, №6, p. 153-169.

Dating: The magazine was signed for publication on June 24, 1948.

1948

After June 24

In the magazine Mnatobi, a review by Davit Shamatava of Galaktion’s Book “The Sea Has Roared” is published. The reviewer positively evaluates the poet’s new collection and discusses individual poems that reflect the history and contemporary life of Abkhazia. However, according to Davit Shamatava, the Book also contains “a number of obscure and incomprehensible passages”.

Source: D. Shamatava, Galaktion Tabidze – “The Sea Has Roared”, magazine Mnatobi, 1948, №6, p. 176-179.

Dating: The magazine is signed for publication on June 24, 1948.

1948

June 26

He converses with the conductor of the Folk Ensemble, Mikheil Kavsadze, and writes down stanzas of the Kakhetian “Mravalzhamieri” (a toasting song “wishing long life”) from him, in which a talkative and lazy wife is mentioned. Kavsadze tells him he is not a formalist, is 70 years old, has no money, and needs treatment for his eyes. He laments that people who know nothing about folk singing are destroying the Georgian national spirit. The well-known conductor wonders if Galaktion has read his article published in the newspaper Zarya Vostoka.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-206, p. 11, 15; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 316-317.

1948

June 27

He sends a letter to Beno Chikobava. He writes that his excerpt translations are very good, as they maintain both the conceptual and cultural correspondences, and when necessary, synonyms are provided in parentheses. He asks him to add transcription to the titles of the poems and to continue working in this manner.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-167; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 75.

July

1948

July 1

He notes in his notebook that from April 1 to July 1, he spent 7,000 roubles.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-212, p. 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 354.

1948

July 2

He notes in his notebook that there is a photo laboratory in the Teacher’s House.

Source: MGL, d-212, p. 10; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 355.

1948

July 2

He notes in his notebook the text of a telegram to be sent to Academician Pavlo Tychyna of the Ukrainian Academy of Sciences, in which he expresses heartfelt gratitude for the magnificent Book and promises to send a detailed letter in the future.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-212, p. 12; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 356.

1948

July 2

He notes in his notebook the text of a telegram to be sent to Ivane Papaskiri, the director of the Abkhazian Publishing House, and his assistant Pischik, stating that the publishing house Saktsigni wishes to purchase the full print run of the Book “The Sea Roared”, and requests the urgent processing of the documents. He also requests the immediate transfer of the author’s royalties to his home address.

Source: MGL, d-212, p. 13; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 356.

1948

After July 2

He writes in his notebook the text of an announcement stating that, in connection with the 30th anniversary of the Komsomol, it has been decided to publish a collection of works by Georgian writers about the Leninist Komsomol and Soviet youth. The editorial board of the collection requests that those wishing to participate submit their material by August 20.

Source: MGL, d-212, p. 16-17; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 356.

1948

July 3

He notes in his notebook the address of Kolau Nadiradze: Clara Zetkin Street №17.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-212, p. 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 355.

1948

July 3

He goes to the Writers’ Union and, before the meeting begins, notes excerpts of conversations among the writers in his notebook, mentioning that Simon Chikovani has gone to the Central Committee of the Communist Party.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-212, p. 8, 20; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 355, 358.

1948

July 3

The meeting of the Writers’ Union begins at 12 o’clock, chaired by Simon Chikovani. In addition to Galaktion, the attendees include the responsible secretary Alexandre Gomiashvili, Irakli Abashidze, Giorgi Leonidze, Ilia Mosashvili, Giorgi Natroshvili, Davit Suliashvili, and Leo Kiacheli. Shalva Dadiani is absent from the meeting as he is in Ukraine. The agenda includes discussing Galaktion Tabidze’s request to organize a celebratory evening at the Opera House in honour of the 40th anniversary of his debut in the literary field.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-212, p. 9; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 355.

1948

Until July 4

He reads Alexandre Ghlonti’s recently published Book “Georgian Fairy Tales and Legends”.

Source: Al. Ghlonti, Meetings with Galaktion, magazine Drosha, 1979, N 10, p. 7; 1948

Until July 4

He meets Alexandre Ghlonti on Rustaveli Avenue, who invites him to a restaurant. Galaktion steers the conversation towards his interlocutor's recently published Book "Georgian Fairy Tales and Legends" and expresses interest in two tales that do not traditionally conclude with the phrase "Trouble there, but joy here", but rather with the words: "Only this and the fortress of Gori have left". This phrase inspires Galaktion with the desire to write a poem.

Source: Al. Ghlonti, Meetings with Galaktion, magazine Droscha, 1979, N 10, p. 7. Al. Ghlonti, Meetings with Galaktion, Mravalkari (Philological Etudes), Tbilisi, 1991, p. 153; 1948

July 4

He is working on the poem "Only this and the fortress of Gori have left" and notes at the beginning of the text that it is an exclamation used to signify the favourable conclusion of any matter.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-209, p. 9. AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 341.

1948

July 4

He tries to reach the editor of the newspaper Komunisti by phone, Valerian Khatiashvili, but is told that he is not available. In Galaktion's opinion, Khatiashvili is being arrogant because the execution of a matter conceived by the poet depends on him. As a result, Galaktion becomes very angry and thinks that he "will let him have it".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-209, p. 11; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 343.

1948

July 4

He speaks on the phone with Nikoloz Chachava, who invites him to participate in a literary evening in Gori the following day, and Galaktion agrees to attend.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-209, p. 11; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 344.

1948

July 4

He calls the editor of the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, Giorgi Natroshvili, to inquire whether the decision of the Writers' Union regarding Galaktion's anniversary evening on October 11 at the Opera House will be published in the newspaper. His interlocutor replies that he and Simon Chikovani, the chairman of the Georgian Writers' Union's board, will coordinate the publication with the Central Committee of the Communist Party before it is announced in the newspaper. Galaktion asks Natroshvili not to publish any statement without his consent. He suspects that his adversaries want to deceive him in Gori in order to seize the initiative in the Central Committee and sabotage the evening's event.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-209, p. 11; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 343-344.

1948

July 4

He contacts Giorgi Jibladze, the deputy secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia in charge of agitation and propaganda, thanking him for his support and informing him that the matter of holding his evening at the Opera House on October 11 was positively resolved the day before at the Writers' Union. Jibladze responds that he spoke with representatives of the Writers' Union about this issue the previous day. Galaktion expresses the hope that they will come to Jibladze to coordinate the publication of the announcement regarding his evening and has faith in his understanding.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-209, p. 11; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 344. Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-209, p. 11; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 343-344.

1948

July 4

He speaks on the phone with Simon Chikovani, the chairman of the board of the Writers' Union of Georgia, who relays information received from Nikoloz Chachava, stating that the literary evening in Gori will not take place the next day, but rather the following day, on Friday.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-209, p. 12; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 344.

1948

July 4

He speaks on the phone with Tina Nakashidze, an employee of the Book Chamber, who informs him that the newspaper Stalineli is being published in Gori, with Shalva Chubinidze as the editor. His interlocutor provides the phone numbers for the editor, the editorial office, and the printing house of this newspaper. She also reminds him that she is awaiting materials for the bibliography.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-209, p. 12; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 344-345.

1948

July 5

At 5 PM, he travels to Gori on the third-class carriage of the Tskhinvali train. During the journey, he writes down individual exclamations he hears in the carriage in his notebook.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-209, p. 13, 14; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 345.

1948

After July 8

He reads Olga Chechetkina's book "India Without Miracles" and writes the untitled poem "War – a passing wind..." on the inside cover of the book.

Source: MGL, t-456, Ольга Чечеткина, "Индия без чудес", Moscow, 1948. Autograph, MGL, Nt-456; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 128; For dating and clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 592.

1948

July 15

He has new bookshelves, which brings him great joy.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 43; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 292.

1948

Until July 16

For his speech at a meeting with readers, he describes the incident that inspired his poem "Bambura Mura". According to his notes, this event occurred in 1916, and he wrote the poem shortly afterward, on the fourth day. However, when he read it to his peers, they criticized it for its lack of aesthetic quality. Subsequently, the publishers also refused to print it for the same reason. Now, he wishes to have it published as a historical document.

Source: MGL, d-230, p. 1-3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 463-464;

1948

July 16

He attends a literary evening featuring participants such as Vakhtang Gorganeli, Marijani, Ioseb Nonashvili, Ioseb Grishashvili, actress Elene Sibila, and the singing sisters, the Tarkhnishvili sisters.

Source: MGL, d-230, p. 1-3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 464.

1948

July 16

He notes in his notebook that the meeting is scheduled for July 17 at 7 PM at 105 Plekhanov Street, in the Pioneer Park.

Source: MGL, d-230, p. 1-3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 465.

1948

July 16

He receives a letter from Elene Sheri. The sender writes that her neighbour, engineer Lia Mebuke, is eager to attend his evening, and she is sending this letter on her behalf. Unfortunately, however, she is suffering from leg pain and is once again unable to seize the opportunity. She asks that if he is able to reach her home the following day, he should stop by for a very important matter. At the end of the letter, she mentions that her children's Book has arrived from Moscow.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-458-8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 281.

1948

Until July 17

From July 17 to 28, he plans events at the Teachers' House and intends to find 10 good speakers.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-226, p. 9; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 441.

1948

July 17

He writes in his notebook that there has been no announcement published in the newspaper Komunisti regarding the death of Ilia Agladze.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-210, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 348.

1948

July 18

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, an article dedicated to the memory of Ilia Agladze is published, signed by 58 members of the Writers' Union, including Galaktion Tabidze, who is the seventh signer.

Source: “Памяти И. С. Агладзе”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, 1948 წ., 18 July, Sunday, №143, p. 4.

1948

July 18

He attends the memorial service for Ilia Agladze at the Writers' Union and the burial at the Didube Pantheon.

Source: “Памяти И. С. Агладзе”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, July 18, 1948, Sunday, №143, p. 4.

1948

After July 23

He makes underlines and comments in the Orthographic Dictionary compiled by Varlam Topuria and Ivane Gigineishvili. He adds a note to the sample of the Georgian alphabet, mentioning that the old alphabetic characters Iota (ი), Khari (ხ), and Ubjrgu (უ) are missing.

Source: MGL, t-472, V. Topuria, I. Gigineishvili, Orthographic Dictionary, Third Edition, Tbilisi, 1949.

1948

After July 23

In the Orthographic Dictionary compiled by Varlam Topuria and Ivane Gigineishvili, he reviews word forms such as ფრენს – ფრენა, შფოთავს – შფოთვა, მშფოთარი. He writes that ფრინველი is the correct form, not მფრინველი, because the folk form contradicts the rules of grammar. On the other hand, the forms მფრინავი and თვითმფრინავი exist. He points out that a similar situation applies to the spelling of his own name.

Source: MGL, t-472, V. Topuria, I. Gigineishvili, Orthographic Dictionary, Third Edition, Tbilisi, 1949.

1948

July 26

The magazine Mnatobi publishes the second part of Sergi Tchilaia's article “Galaktion Tabidze”, in which the author reviews the poet's work from 1908 onward. He concludes that Galaktion has traversed a broad and tumultuous path, overcoming petty-bourgeois hopelessness, lack of prospects, and mysticism. Through this journey, he embraced the healthy sentiments of revolutionary romanticism and socialist realism, which flourished in the grand Soviet era.

Source: Sergi Tchilaia, “Galaktion Tabidze”, Magazine Mnatobi, 1948, № 6, p. 153–169.

Note: The title of the publication notes that this is the second part, while the first was published in the first issue of the same magazine earlier that year.

1948

July 26

In the bibliography section, the magazine Mnatobi publishes a letter by Davit Shamatava titled “Galaktion Tabidze – The Sea Has Roared”, in which the author reviews a collection of poems published by the State Publishing House of Abkhazia, edited by Giorgi Jibladze. He concludes that the Book is multifaceted and interesting, featuring new landscapes and new characters. Additionally, he describes the poetic work as “a good initiative in artistic literature for showcasing this beautiful region of Abkhazia”.

Source: Davit Shamatava, “Galaktion Tabidze – The Sea Has Roared”, Magazine Mnatobi, 1948, № 6, p. 176–179.

1948

July 27

In his notebook, he writes that on October 11, 1948, it will mark 40 years since his debut in the literary arena. He notes that everyone in the Writers’ Union knows about this date but does not want to celebrate it. The leadership is focused on the anniversary of Alexandre Kazbegi and wishes to overshadow Galaktion’s jubilee with this prominent name. He mentions that the Writers’ Union is preparing for Sandro Shanshiashvili’s 40th anniversary, but Galaktion believes that his own 40 years of literary work are just as significant as the “ineptly spent years” of Sandro Shanshiashvili. He asserts that every honest Georgian should raise their voice against the suppression of his literary jubilee. He intends to complete the preparation of his Book to be published in Moscow by August 15, ensuring nothing obstructs the preparations for this important date. He plans to engage in a spirited struggle for a better future and writes: “My faith in my truth is with me. Forward! Forward! Forward! Long live action, courage, life! Long live the joyful struggle for a better future... Long live tomorrow!”

Source: MGL, d-213, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 359-360.

1948

July 27

He addresses the Presidium of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia with a statement. He writes that on October 11 of the current year (September 28 according to the old style), it will mark the 40th anniversary of his debut in the literary field and expresses hope that the Presidium will adopt resolutions to appropriately celebrate this day.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-173; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 113.

1948

July 27

He addresses a letter to the Presidium of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia, requesting that all necessary measures be taken to appropriately commemorate the 40th anniversary of his literary debut.

Source: MGL, WUF №25.

1948

Until July 28

In Tbilisi, on Mtatsminda, he is filmed by Merab Jaliashvili for the documentary “In the Rays of October”. In these scenes, the poet is shown cutting hay.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 270, p. 68; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 197.

Note: The title of the film is written in Russian in the source: “В лучах Октября”

1948

July 28 or earlier

For the Book “Selected Poems”, he sends 2,000 lines each to be translated by Beno Chikobava and Davit Sherman. He notes that what remains to be translated includes poems written up until 1917, a part of the second volume, and materials from the post-war period.

Source: MGL, d-213, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 360.

1948

July 28

Along with Nino Kvirikadze, he goes to the cinema and watches Alexandre Jaliashvili’s feature-length film “Soviet Georgia”, which shows footage taken in Shovi in August 1947. Galaktion appears during hay harvesting, and the narrator announces, “National Poet Galaktion Tabidze”. The poet is pleased with this footage and considers the film a kind of poster, an excellent advertisement that is essential for showcasing the 40th anniversary of his literary debut on October 11. He believes that this film represents his victory. In his notebook, he writes: “Long live hay harvesting! Long live the clearing of the stage for war!”.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-213, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 360.

1948

July 28

In his notebook, he writes that his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, imagines herself as Galaktion’s saviour and is hindering his work. The poet considers this to be utter foolishness and feels that he can no longer handle the constant anxiety.

Source: MGL, d-213, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 360-361.

1948

July 28

He gathers one hundred poems, essays, and articles written about him by various writers, intending to showcase them at an exhibition dedicated to his art. In his notebook, he notes that the ideas of “A hundred writers” and “Exhibitions” continue to preoccupy him.

Source: MGL, d-213, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 361.

1948

July 28

He reads the July 26 issue of the magazine Mnatobi, which includes excellent articles by Sergi Tchilaia and Davit Shamatava about his work. He reflects that this is a significant victory.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-213, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 361.

1948

July 28

In his notebook, he writes that October 11 will mark the 40th anniversary of his debut in the literary arena, a day that will serve as the culmination of his career. However, he notes that he still has many battles to face before then and must dedicate all his time and energy to preparing for this significant day.

Source: MGL, d-213, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 360.

1948

July 28

In his notebook, he writes that the Book he is preparing for publication in Moscow is crucial for his future. Therefore, he needs to free himself from minor tasks to fully concentrate on its preparation.

Source: MGL, d-213, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 360.

Note: This refers to the Book that was published in Moscow in 1950: Табидзе Г. В. Избранные стихи, пер. с груз, под ред. И. Поступальского, разд.: Эпоха. Революционная Грузия; Воспоминания о Европе; Родина, жизнь моя; Стала страна, словно солнце; Из лирики прошлых лет; Из поэм, Москва, Гослитиздат, 1950.

1948

July 28

Nikolaz Akerman, an employee of the public library, takes two thousand lines from Galaktion’s poem “Epoch” to make word-for-word translations for the Book “Selected Poems”, which is to be published in Moscow.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-213, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 360; Nino Kvirikadze’s record, MGL, d-211, p. 7; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1948

Until July 29

At the end of each month, he has to stand in line at the medical commission to obtain a certificate for a white bread ration card.

Source: MGL, d-213, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 363.

1948

July 29

In the editorial office of the magazine Mnatobi, he talks with the responsible secretary, Nika Agiashvili, and praises the article by David Shamatava titled “Galaktion Tabidze – The Sea Has Roared”, to which Nika Agiashvili responds ambiguously that more could have been said, and said better. Galaktion thinks that, of course, it was possible to do so, but he is still satisfied, as complete silence about the newly published Book is bad. He hopes that someday someone will speak and write better about this book.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-213, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 361.

1948

July 29

In the editorial office of the magazine Mnatobi, he speaks with the responsible editor, Irakli Abashidze, and tells him that October 11 marks the 40th anniversary of his literary debut, which should be celebrated in one way or another. Irakli Abashidze expresses regret that he was not aware of this and notes the date. He also inquires whether Galaktion has informed Simon Chikovani, the chairman of the Georgian Writers’ Union and the editor of Mnatobi, about this, to which Galaktion replies that he has not mentioned it to Chikovani.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-213, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 361.

1948

July 29

At the Georgian Writers’ Union, the responsible secretary, Alexi Gomiashvili, officially informs that October 11 marks the 40th anniversary of his literary debut. Gomiashvili notes the date and acknowledges that he was not aware of it. He mentions that the secretary for agitation and propaganda of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, Rostom Shaduri, is currently on leave and promises to discuss this matter with him as soon as he returns. Previously, Shaduri had asked why Galaktion’s evening was not being organized, where it would be possible to exchange ideas. Gomiashvili had replied that such an evening would be a discussion and not a celebration. Galaktion also agrees that a jubilee signifies a summation and is distinct from a discussion.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-213, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 361-362.

1948

July 29

Simon Tsereteli, who has moved to work at the Writers' Union of Abkhazia, informs that a collection titled "The Gardens of Abkhazia" has been published, which features several poems by Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 362.

Note: The collection titled "Gardens of Abkhazia" has not been published in Russian and Georgian. It is likely that the discussion pertains to a collection published in the Abkhaz language.

1948

July 29

In the Writers' Union of Georgia, he speaks with Simon Tsereteli, the responsible employee for relations with the Writers' Union of Abkhazia, who offers to arrange a summer house in Abkhazia, should the poet agree.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 362.

1948

July 29

In the Writers' Union of Georgia, he talks with Andro Tevzadze, the head of the publishing house "Art", who asks Galaktion for cooperation on various matters. Galaktion thinks that Andro Tevzadze is a useful person and wonders why he and the artist Shalva Beritashvili are going around together.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 362.

1948

July 29

In the Writers' Union of Georgia, he speaks with the young writer Lado Avaliani, praising his novella about Nikoloz Baratashvili, as he believes the young man needs encouragement.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 362.

1948

July 29

At the Georgian Writers' Union, he meets Boris Chkheidze, who exhausts him with endless talk about himself and his complaints about various people.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 362.

1948

July 29

He goes to the Literary Repository to see Alio Mashashvili and requests a loan of 7,000 roubles. Alio Mashashvili asks for a guarantee document, even suggesting one from the magazine Mnatobi. Galaktion suspects that Mashashvili is trying to get rid of him, as Mnatobi is not a financial organization and does not issue guarantees. The poet resolves to secure a guarantee document at any cost to obtain the loan. While at the Literary Fund, he notices Akaki Siradze, whom he considers a very good man, but he feels that, like Mashashvili, Siradze does nothing in the Literary Fund.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 362.

1948

July 29

At the Literary Fund, he meets Iona Vakeli and praises his poems. Iona Vakeli is pleased and smiles, but when it comes to helping Galaktion with a loan, he is unable to assist either.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 362.

1948

July 29

In the Literary Fund, he notices Konstantine Kapaneli's (Chanturaia) brother, who is sitting modestly in the waiting room, and who was once appointed as a senior for Ivane Javakhishvili. He behaves politely with Galaktion, but in the poet's opinion, no good will come from him.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 362-363.

1948

July 29

In his diary, he writes that a lot of time is wasted at the end of each month to collect the white bread coupon, and adds that this issue must be resolved the next day without fail.

Source: MGL, d-213, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 363.

1948

July 29

During his visit to the State Publishing House, the businesslike and polite Alexander Miasnikov gives him five kilograms of excellent paper. There, Galaktion sees the idle Gobrone Agareli and Mikheil Iashvili, reminiscent of Gerhart Hauptmann's characters – Schlüch and Jau. He reflects that the State Publishing House is an inactive organization.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 363.

1948

July 29

Nino Kvirikadze's brother Kalistrate arrives in Tbilisi from Baghdati and informs Galaktion that Mikheil Pataridze can prepare the word-for-word translations for the Book to be published in Moscow.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 363.

Note: It refers to the Book that was published in Moscow in 1950: Табидзе Г. В. Избранные стихи, пер. с груз, под ред. И. Поступальского, разд.: Эпоха. Революционная Грузия; Воспоминания о Европе; Родина, жизнь моя; Стала страна, словно солнце; Из лирики прошлых лет; Из поэм, Москва, Гослитиздат, 1950.

1948

July 29

In his notebook, he notes that in connection with the 40th anniversary of his literary debut, he should not forget to contact Simon Khantadze, an employee of the postal-telegraph trade union's republican committee, and Vanion Daraselia, the editor of the newspaper Tsitelarmieli.

Source: MGL, d-213, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 363.

1948

Until July 30

Mark Zlatkin, an employee of the artistic literature department at the publishing house "Zarya Vostoka", informs him that a Russian-language edition of his poems is included in the publisher's 1949 plans.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 364.

Note: The Book was indeed published in 1950.

1948

July 30

At the Writers' Union, he waits for Giga Natroshvili, the editor of the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, and listens to the conversations of the staff. When Natroshvili arrives, Galaktion informs him that October 11 marks the 40th anniversary of his literary debut. In response, Natroshvili admits he was unaware of this and that the date must be celebrated. He asks if a formal request has been submitted to the Writers' Union's office. Galaktion replies that it has, but officially no one else has been informed; only Irakli Abashidze and Alexandre Gomiashvili are aware of the situation.

Source: MGL, d-213, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 363.

1948

July 30

On July 27, he writes a letter addressed to the Presidium of the Writers' Union, informing them that October 11, 1948, marks the 40th anniversary of his literary debut, which is already known in public circles. He expresses hope that the Presidium will take all necessary measures to ensure that this date is appropriately celebrated.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 364.

1948

July 30

The female typesetter at the Writers' Union mistakenly prints Galaktions's name as "Galaqion" instead of "Galaktion", prompting him to point out that his name is spelled "Galaktion" on nearly forty of his books, not "Galaktions". Consequently, she reprints the announcement. The apologetic woman expresses her regret for making the error, explaining that she has always printed the name correctly until now.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 364.

1948

July 30

On July 27, he submits a statement to the Secretariat of the Writers' Union Presidium, notifying them that October 11, 1948, marks the 40th anniversary of his literary debut. The female secretary confirms receipt of the statement with a stamp and assures him that the matter will be discussed at the very next meeting.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 364.

1948

July 30

Upon leaving the Writers' Union's Executive Committee office, he encounters Alexandre Gomiashvili, the responsible secretary of the committee. He informs Gomiashvili that he has submitted a request regarding the upcoming 40th anniversary of his literary debut, which will be celebrated on October 11, 1948. Gomiashvili expresses his satisfaction, while Galaktion hopes that the Executive Committee will resolve the matter favourably. Having submitted this request and engaged in discussions with specific individuals about his jubilee date, he feels a sense of contentment, as if a heavy burden has been lifted from his shoulders.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 364.

1948

July 30

He meets Kolau Nadiradze at the Writers' Union, promising to provide him with his poems for word-for-word translations into Russian.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 364.

1948

July 30

Kalistrate Kvirikadze brings N. Kiknadze to Galaktion, who promises to provide him with his poems for word-for-word translations into Russian.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 364.

Note: This woman is referred to only by her first initial and last name throughout Galaktion's notes, making it impossible to identify her.

1948

July 30

He writes in his diary that Otari Chelidze has submitted a poem to the Writers' Union.

Source: MGL, d-213, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 364.

1948

July 30

He learns from Besarion Zhghenti that Zarya Vostoka will not wait until 1949 and will simultaneously publish Galaktion's Book in Tbilisi, which is also set to be released in Moscow. Galaktion is pleased to see a capable individual handling the matter and promises that the translations will be ready on time.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 364.

1948

July 30

He notes in his diary that Lado Sirbiladze has a lot of paper at the editorial office of the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, which is being used for printing Kazbegi's book. Galaktion hopes that there will be enough left for his Book as well.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 365.

1948

July 30

He goes to the bookstore with Kalistrate Kvirikadze, where both of them purchase the second volume of the Book "The History of the Civil War in the USSR", published in Russian.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 365.

1948

July 30

The cardiologist Rekvava, with whom Galaktion is receiving treatment at the medical complex, gives a pragmatic, non-medical piece of advice to Galaktion and his wife, Nino Kvirikadze: if they go to the medical commission separately, both will receive a bread card. Indeed, the strategy works, and both of them are issued a bread card.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 365.

1948

July 30

News comes from Mukhrani that his dog Murikela is doing splendidly there.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 365.

1948

July 30

He writes in his notebook that the chairman of the Writers' Union, Simon Chikovani, will attempt to prevent the celebration of his jubilee, while he himself will strive to ensure that it does not happen.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 365.

1948

July 30

His brother-in-law, Kalistrate Kvirikadze, sees N. Kiknadze home, who is set to perform word-for-word translation of Galaktion's poems into Russian. He witnesses an emotional scene as Kiknadze encounters with Galaktion's book. The brother-in-law recounts this to Galaktion, who then makes a note of this story in his notebook.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 365.

Note: This woman is referred to only by her first initial and last name throughout Galaktion's notes, making it impossible to identify her.

1948

July 30

On the table lies open the novel "The Storm" by Ilya Ehrenburg, for which he was awarded the Stalin Prize. Suddenly, a phrase catches his eye about how little Louis has decided to fly, while Lansié remarks, "We would fly on Pegasus, but what a materialist generation this is; they prefer a motor".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 365.

1948

July 30

The following day, he plans to send a telegram to Pavlo Tychyna.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 365.

1948

July 30

The Georgian writers Shalva Dadiani, Levan Asatiani, and Alexandre Baramidze, who were supposed to attend the ceremony for laying the foundation stone of the statue of David Guramishvili in the Ukrainian city of Mirgorod, were not even on site when Simon Chikhovani sent a telegram from Tbilisi demanding Shalva Dadiani's return. Galaktion cannot comprehend the reason behind this urgent summons and makes a note of it in his diary.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 365.

1948

July 31

He believes that Rostom Shaduri, the secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party for agitation and propaganda, will support the organization of his jubilee. In his diary, he notes that Shaduri is in Moscow and may return to Tbilisi on August 5. He wishes for Alexandre Gomiashvili, the responsible secretary of the Writers' Union's Executive Committee, and the Presidium to be aware that Shaduri is on his side.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 366.

1948

July 31

He begins preparations for the celebration of the 40th anniversary of his literary debut. In his notebook, he writes down poems dedicated to him by Shio Mghvimeli, Varlam Rukhadze, Giorgi Kuchishvili, and Daria Akhvlediani. He notes that Shio Mghvimeli's poem is magnificent. He also writes a second poem by Giorgi Kuchishvili, along with titles of other poems dedicated to him, including "You Among Us...", "The Resilient Dirigible", and "From the Testament". He also marks that his own article about Galaktion published in the magazine Mnatobi is of significant importance.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 366.

1948

July 31

He travels to the savings bank with Nino Kvirikadze by tram. On the tram, Nino complains because someone has jumped a queue in front of them, and at the savings bank, she reproaches him for the fact that they could have avoided the queue and approached the teller without any hassle.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 368.

1948

July 31

He enters the department store located on Kirov Street, now known as Leonidze Street, with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze. The sales clerk mistakenly serves him beer instead of lemonade, which causes Nino to become upset and argue with him before leaving. On their way to the Writers' Union, she confronts him again and continues to argue. Later, when Galaktion discusses translations with Giorgi Tsagereli, Nino interrupts their conversation and tells Tsagereli how weak and incompetent Galaktion is. This provokes the poet's indignation.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 368.

1948

July 31

He goes to the Writers' Union with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, where she becomes upset upon seeing another woman speaking to Galaktion.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 368.

1948

July 31

He goes to the cinema with Nino Kvirikadze, where he becomes irritated by his wife's casual behaviour. He imagines that Nino is on the verge of brushing her elbow against the man standing next to them in line and, while seated in the box, seems to be trying to catch the attention of the man sitting behind them. Galaktion gets up and leaves the box. His wife follows him and does not leave him alone, even for a moment.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 368.

1948

July 31

He cannot find his glasses, and instead of helping him, his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, irritates him with sarcastic remarks.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 368.

1948

July 31

David Sherman, the translator, takes the new translations of Galaktion's poems home with him and asks for his feedback. During the process of reading, Nino Kvirikadze intervenes, which causes Galaktion's displeasure. Sherman receives a fee of five hundred manats, which Galaktion pays for the creation of the word-for-word translations.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 368.

1948

July 31

In his diary, he describes his relationship with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze. He writes that the troubles seem endless, with his wife getting on his nerves twelve times in one day, not leaving him alone for a moment, and not missing an opportunity to cause him any discomfort, which is unbearable. He notes that this is happening at a time when he is preparing for his jubilee. The poet writes that his wife cynically interferes with everything, making life impossible. He expresses his astonishment at how he manages to accomplish anything under such circumstances. He recalls that Nino only calmed down for a short while when he bought her two hundred grams of butter during this time of hardship.

Source: MGL, d-213, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 368.

1948

July 31

At the Writers' Union, Vano Tsulukidze shares a story of which he was a witness: the chairman of the Georgian Writers' Union, Simon Chikhovani, has been criticized in Moscow at the Union of Soviet Writers and at the editorial office of Literaturnaia Gazeta because of Galaktion, and no one agreed with his opinion about the poet.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 368.

Note: The entry does not reflect Simon Chikhovani's opinion about Galaktion.

1948

July 31

In his notebook, he writes that he is scheduled to meet with Giorgi Jibladze, the deputy secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia for agitation and propaganda, on Monday, August 2, at 12 o'clock.

Source: MGL, d-213, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 368.

August

1948

August 1

He listens to a radio broadcast featuring the performances of the Ishkhneli sisters, including "It's a Dark Night", "Once Again You, and Once Again You", and "Suliko", commissioned by the railway workers. In his notebook, he writes that this commission should not be from the railway workers, and the voice on the radio sounded “awful”. In his opinion, it resembled a provocation and could be another trick by the “formalists”. He speculates that it might be connected to a futurist who works at the radio station and believes that this individual must be exposed.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-209, p. 3. AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 337.

1948

August 1

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes a notice stating that no one received the first prize in the competition for the best lyrical song. The second prize was awarded to composer Alexi Matchavariani for the song “Don’t Worry, Mother”, which was created based on the poem by Giorgi Leonidze. An additional second prize went to composer Revaz Gabichvadze for the song “Rustavi”, written to the text by Karlo Kaladze, while the third prize was awarded to Otari Taktakishvili for the song “To New Tbilisi”, based on the text by Varlam Zhuruli. The jury also recommended the performance of “May’s Song”, a work created by Shalva Taktakishvili based on a poem by Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: “Итоги конкурса на лирическую песню”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, August 1, 1948, Sunday, №153, p. 2.

1948

August 2

In his diary, he writes that the materials for the Russian anthology from 1917 to 1921 are prepared for Moscow.

Source: MGL, d-213, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 369.

1948

August 2

N. Kiknadze visits Galaktion, bringing several poems to be prepared for word-for-word translations into Russian.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-213, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 369.

Note: This woman is referred to only by her first initial and last name throughout Galaktion’s notes, making it impossible to identify her.

1948

August 2

The translator Areta Bakhtadze visits him at home and brings the prepared word-for-word translations of the material of the Book “Gold in the Azure of Adjara”. Galaktion thinks that she is a diligent woman, though family troubles hinder her. He is curious about how the translations turned out.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-213, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 369.

1948

August 2

He meets with Giorgi Jibladze, the deputy secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia for agitation and propaganda, and his editor for the Russian translations. Jibladze praises the plan for working on the Book and believes it is right to celebrate the 40th anniversary of Galaktion's literary debut. He apologizes for not being able to attend the meeting scheduled for Tuesday, August 3, at the Writers' Union, as he has to fulfil the duties of his superior, Rostom Shaduri, who is on vacation. He promises to discuss the matter with Simon Chikhovani. Galaktion tells him that no one in Moscow at the Union of Soviet Writers or at the editorial office of Literaturnaia Gazeta agreed with Simon Chikhovani's opinion about him, to which Shaduri responds that he was not aware of this. Jibladze mentions that he has included several references to Galaktion in his newly published Book "Art and Reality" and promises to gift him a copy with an inscription. The poet thinks that Jibladze does not seem enthusiastic about organizing his jubilee but suspects that he will gradually get involved, as he never turns down a well-prepared task.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 369.

1948

August 2

He meets with Gachechiladze, an employee of the propaganda sector at the Central Committee of the Communist Party. Gachechiladze greets Galaktion with warm words, saying, "You are our life, our adornment and pride". Meanwhile, Valodia Chiaureli, who is present, casts a sidelong glance at the poet.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 369.

1948

August 2

In his diary, he writes that Shalva Dadiani, who was summoned by the Presidium of the Writers' Union via telegram from Ukraine, has returned to Tbilisi.

Source: MGL, d-213, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 369.

1948

August 2

In his diary, he writes that Davit Nakhutsrishvili's son, Giorgi, must be a good person, and not just because he praises Galaktion, but on his own merit.

Source: MGL, d-213, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 369.

1948

2 August

In his diary, he writes about the satirical poem “The Father of the Son-in-Law Told the Father of the Son-in-Law”, written about Sandro Shanshiashvili and Razhden Gvetadze. He expresses the suspicion that it may be an attempt to remove Simon Chikhovani from the chairmanship of the Writers’ Union’s board.

Source: MGL, d-213, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 369-370.

1948

August 3

A session of the Presidium is held at the Writers’ Union, where the proposal to celebrate Galaktion Tabidze’s 40th anniversary of literary work on October 11 is unanimously accepted. In his diary, he notes that besides the members of the Writers’ Union’s board, other writers also attended the meeting. The positive resolution of the issue is supported by Giorgi Jibladze, the deputy secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia for agitation and propaganda.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-213, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 370.

1948

Until August 6

He writes a poem titled “Only This and The Fortress of Gori Have Left”.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 278.

Dating: In Nino Kvirikadze’s diary dated August 6, 1948, it is mentioned as a “newly written poem”.

1948

August 6

He writes a poem “Only This and The Fortress of Gori Have Left”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №6742; №7615; №7616; №7617; №6027; №6404; N. Kvirikadze’s autograph, №2364-2365; G. Tabidze, G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 84.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Every New Victory...”.

1948

August 6

He travels to Gori with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, and several writers: Simon Chikhovani, Shalva Dadiani, Irakli Abashidze, Revaz Margiani, Giorgi Shatberashvili, Nikoloz Chachava, and Akaki Belishvili. The meeting is held in the city’s culture and recreation park. The event is opened with a welcoming speech by the chairman of the Writers’ Union, Simon Chikhovani. Both Simon Chikhovani and Irakli Abashidze read their own poems. At the end of the gathering, Galaktion reads poems from the fourth volume of his works.

Source: Sh. Nutsubidze, Gori Hosted Galaktion, newspaper Gamarjveba, November 1, 1973, №131, p. 3. Sh. Chubinidze, Only This and the Fortress of Gori Have Left, newspaper Gori, №144, December 12, p. 4.

1948

August 6

In the afternoon, he and his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, visit Stalin's House Museum and the newspaper Stalineli. They stay at the editorial office for an hour, during which he gifts the fourth volume of his works to the staff with an inscription and gives advice to the editorial board members. He shares stories about his meeting with Maxim Gorky and promises to visit their editorial office again on the day of the jubilee issue's release. Afterward, he sits down at a table in the editor's office and writes the poem "Only This and The Fortress of Gori Have Left".

Source: Sh. Nutsubidze, Gori Hosted Galaktion, newspaper Gamarjveba, November 1, 1973, №131, p.

1948

August 7

He visits the editorial office of the newspaper Stalineli in Gori with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, where he presents his fourth volume of works to the editor, Shalva Chubinidze, with an inscription.

Source: Sh. Chubinidze, Only This and the Fortress of Gori Have Left, newspaper Gori, №144, December 12, p. 4.

1948

August 7

He visits Stalin's house-museum. Among the exhibits, a mirror and a portrait capture his attention. He explores the exhibition dedicated to Stalin's childhood.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-580, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 416-417.

1948

August 7

In Gori, he observes the construction of the street named after Stalin.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-580, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 416-417.

1948

August 7

He visits the Gori Historical-Ethnographic Museum and notes that it will be necessary to study it thoroughly in the future.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-580, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 416-417.

1948

After August 7

He receives a letter from his brother, who informs him that he returned from Kislovodsk on August 5 but suffered from pain throughout the month. He writes that he has not seen Beno Chikobava but hopes that he will translate Galaktion's poems.

Source: Abesalom Tabidze's letter, h-24551-338; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 178.

1948

August 8

He writes a poem "The Hundred-Year-Old Sycamore".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №602-603; №6688; №6558-6561; №604; №6390; №4909; №74-☐, p. 25; №1798, №2029; №2496; №5496; G. Tabidze, G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 96.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "Under the Sycamore Tree," "The Hundred-Year-Old Ones," and untitled ("Here, indeed, is the sycamore...").

1948

August 8

He reads the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, making highlights on Giorgi Natroshvili's article about Alio Mirtskhulava's selected works and on the bibliography of a new collection of short stories by Georgian Soviet writers.

Source: MGL, t-664. newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, August 8, 1948, №31, p. 3-4.

1948

August 8

He annotates Zakaria Edili's article "Attention to the Historical Monuments of Saingilo", published in the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, which discusses the neglect of churches and the destruction of arks, writing that it is an outrageous matter.

Source: MGL, t-664. newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, August 8, 1948, №31, p. 4.

Note: Zakaria Edilashvili is mentioned in the source under the pseudonym Z. Edili.

1948

August 18

He hears someone in the street shouting, "Cursed be my homeland, which has sacrificed a Georgian man!" He thinks that whoever is shouting is either drunk or a provocateur, as these words are being yelled near the Writer's House. This incident reminds him of the past when he was in the hospital, and futurists were shouting outside his ward.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-553, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 285-286.

1948

August 19

In his notebook, he writes that Nina Kvirikadze transcribed three poems from the manuscript of the seminar published in 1908 under his editorship for the layout of a Russian Book in just one hour.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-211, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 352.

1948

August 19

N. Kiknadze takes seven of Galaktion's poems for the purpose of creating word-for-word translations.

Source: Nino Kvirikadze's record, MGL, d-211, p. 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 352.

Note: This woman is referred to only by her first initial and last name throughout Galaktion's notes, making it impossible to identify her.

1948

August 20

He goes to the Writers' Union and hands over his poem "The Young Woman of the Steppes" to Alexandre Gomiashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-640, 142; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 103.

1948

August 22

He notes materials for bibliography from the seventh-grade textbook "Native Literature".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-214, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 376.

1948

August 22

He writes in his notebook that Mnatobela, meaning Irakli Abashidze, does not want to publish any of Galaktion's somewhat difficult works in the magazine Mnatobi. Therefore, caution is required on his part. He plans to find a way to address the matter indirectly. It is also important to consider the factor of Konstantine Lortkipanidze, who has no official position in the Mnatobi editorial office but assists Irakli Abashidze.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-215, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 380-381.

1948

August 22

He writes in his notebook that Alio Mirtskhulava has appropriated 400 meters of material for writers, and his situation is dire. He also notes that there is a staff turnover happening at the State Publishing House, the Federation, and the Children's Literature Publishing House.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-215, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 380-381.

1948

August 22

In his notebook, he writes that the translation of Alexandre Kazbegi's works is being delayed for his jubilee celebration.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-215, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 380-381.

1948

August 24

He works on the materials for the first volume, noting that in the untitled poem "I Will Cast My Fateful Net into the Sea", it would be better to use the word "soul" instead of "heart".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-216, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 382.

Note: He is referring to the second line of the second stanza in the poem "Here the Flag of Poetry Flutters": "Ah, the heart of the siren has risen".

1948

August

He organizes the Georgian materials for a Book that is to be published in Russian.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-211, p. 4-5; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 352-353.

1948

August

He reads the second part of Sergi Tchilaia's letter "Galaktion Tabidze" published in Mnatobi and is left with the impression that Tchilaia has sided with Radiani and is betraying Galaktion.

Source: MGL, d-213, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 369.

1948

August

He writes a poem "Goodbye, Until 1953".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №3519; G. Tabidze, G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 210; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 585.

September

1948

September 2

He addresses the accounting department of the Georgian Academy of Sciences with a statement. He writes that from the funds taken for his business trip, 700 roubles are deducted monthly. He requests that the deductions be suspended for two months, after which he will repay the full amount in one instalment.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-168; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 114.

1948

After September 6

He receives a letter from Mikheil Pataridze, from the village of Baghdati in Imereti. The letter informs him that, as promised, the Russian excerpt translations of the poem “Conversation about Lyrics” and the poems “Gori” and “The Young Mokhevian Woman” have been prepared. The materials are sent with a week’s delay because no one could be found to take them to Tbilisi. He mentions that he omitted a few lines from the poem, but not in a way that would harm the text. He expresses admiration for certain episodes, such as those about the Svan village of Lalaeri. He writes that if Galaktion needs further help, he can either contact him directly or provide the materials to his son Ramaz, who lives in Tbilisi. He sends his regards to the addressee’s wife, Nino Kvirikadze.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-449; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 302.

1948

September 8

A first-year student of the literary faculty at the Kutaisi Pedagogical Institute, Tina Zibzivadze, dedicates her own poem to him in his notebook.

Source: MGL, d-202, p. 9, 10, 12, 14; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 296-297.

1948

September 8

Pavel Kandelaki, the Deputy Head of the Department of Arts, informs him that the decision regarding the allocation of the Opera House for the anniversary celebration must be made by Dimitri Benashvili. Galaktion, along with Nino Kvirikadze, goes to see Dimitri Benashvili, who states that timely publication of books is more important than organizing creative evenings.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 513.

1948

September 8

He is at the Sergi Ordzhonikidze Culture and Recreation Park with Nino Kvirikadze, where his creative evening and exhibition are scheduled to take place on September 12.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 513.

1948

September 8 or later

Tina Zibzivadze, a first-year student at the literary faculty of the Kutaisi Pedagogical Institute, writes variations of phrases next to the poem she dedicated to him in his notebook.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-202, p. 8, 11, 13; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 296-297.

1948

September 9

At 8:00 AM, he is at the printing house with Nino Kvirikadze, where the poster for his creative evening on September 12 is being prepared. He corrects mistakes on the printed draft. They then head to the museum to visit Chito Kalandadze, who is not there, but they meet him on the street upon returning and discuss the negatives. The next task is to print pictures for the exhibition. Grigol Meskhi teaches them that there is a laboratory at the Palace of Pioneers. They meet a familiar photographer from Kutaisi there, who promises to print the photos by 12:00 PM the next day. They also arrange for Silovan Kakabadze's bust to be delivered to the park at 11:00 AM. By this time, the issue with the museum's negatives remains unresolved, as the employee has taken them home. At 4:00 PM, they realize that the printing of the poster was stopped because the director's resolution was missing. Finally, the director sends the resolution, and by 5:00 PM, the poster is ready. They then go to the Deserted Market to buy nails, pass by the paper shop, purchase bread, and head home, where they have the beans they cooked the day before.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 513-514.

1948

Until September 12

He addresses a statement to Andro Tevzadze, the director of Saktsigni. He writes that on September 12, his creative evening and exhibition will be held at the Sergi Ordzhonikidze Culture and Recreation Park, for which they need 300 sheets of good-quality paper and requests that the payment be issued to the cash account.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-257; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 114.

1948

Until September 12

In his notebook, he notes that he needs to find out whether his portrait and the bust made by Silovan Kakabadze were brought to his jubilee exhibition at the Orjonikidze Club. He is curious if posters will be printed, whether there will be representatives from radio and the press, and if tickets will be sold.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-220, p. 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 419.

1948

Until September 12

He addresses a statement to Shalva Mamaladze, the chairman of the Artists' Union. He informs him that on September 12, a creative evening and exhibition of Galaktion Tabidze will be held at the Ordzhonikidze Club and requests that artists be assigned for the artistic decoration of the theater hall and exhibition. He also asks for stands and Galaktion-related exhibits to be lent for a few days.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-258; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 114.

1948

Until September 12

He addresses a statement to the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia. He informs them that on September 12, a creative evening of Galaktion Tabidze will be held at the Ordzhonikidze Club and requests that a speaker and several writers be assigned to participate in the event.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-237; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 115

1948

September 12

In his notebook, he lists tasks to be completed. He plans to request funding for a business trip from the Academy of Sciences and to prevent the state publishing house from printing his name incorrectly. He thinks it is necessary to provide feedback on Samson Pirtskhalava's significant work concerning the language of contemporary Georgian poetry.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-480, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 332-333.

1948

September 12

His anniversary evening and exhibition are held at the Orjonikidze Club.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-220, p. 4-12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 414.

1948

September 12

He writes a poem dedicated to the anniversary exhibition held at the Orjonikidze Club, mentioning that he has never had such a magnificent exhibition before.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-220, p. 4, 5, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 415, 416.

1948

September 12

At the anniversary exhibition held at the Orjonikidze Club, the sculpture "Galaktion Tabidze" by Severian Kakabadze is on display, which makes the poet particularly satisfied.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-220, p. 4, 5, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 415, 416.

1948

September 12

At the anniversary exhibition held at the Orjonikidze Club, a photo correspondent from the newspaper Zarya Vostoka takes photos of the exhibition, including shots of Galaktion Tabidze surrounded by children.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-220, p. 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 416.

1948

September 12

He is satisfied with his performance in front of the children at the anniversary exhibition held at the Orjonikidze Club and writes about it in his notebook.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-220, p. 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 416.

1948

September 12

In his notebook, he writes his impressions regarding his anniversary exhibition held at the Orjonikidze Club. He notes both the positive and negative aspects and expresses satisfaction with the public's interest.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-220, p. 8, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 416.

1948

September 12

In his notebook, he draws Mtatsminda and adds the inscription: "The moons of Mtatsminda. Moons of Mtatsminda".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-220, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 416.

1948

September 12

In his notebook, he writes a humorous verse titled "Cherry and Quince...". On one page, he draws the face of a girl, and on the opposite page, he sketches himself holding an album and a pen.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-220, p. 16,17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 417;

1948

September 12

In his notebook, he writes a draft recommendation. He advocates for Mikhail Vadbol'ski, urging that based on the submitted documents, assistance should be provided in processing materials related to Galaktion and in creating a monograph, which the poet sees as a necessary task.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-220, p. 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 417.

1948

September 12

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, an announcement is published stating that on the current day, a large outing for school students is being held in the Culture and Recreation Park named after Orjonikidze. The text mentions that during the day, they will meet with the National Poet Galaktion Tabidze and the prominent figure of Georgian theatrical arts and literature, Shalva Dadiani. In the evening, around 20 writers, poets, and artists will participate in the school students' celebration, including the hero of the Soviet Union, colonel, and writer Dmitri Medvedev.

Source: “Встреча работников литературы и искусства со школьниками”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, September 12, 1948, Sunday, №183, p. 4.

1948

September 12

Along with Shalva Dadiani, he participates in the Tankist's Day celebration held in the Culture and Recreation Park named after Orjonikidze, where they meet with school students.

Source: “Празднование дня танкистов”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, September 14, 1948, Tuesday, №184, p. 4.

1948

September 12 or later

He plans to organize a creative evening and exhibition in the central park of culture and recreation named after Orjonikidze. The Komunisti printing house intends to publish a one-time newspaper with a print run of 5,000 copies, edited by the park's director, in connection with this event.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-214, p. 5, 8-15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 374, 375.

1948

September 12 or later

At the event celebrating Galaktion Tabidze's artistic contributions at the Sergo Ordzhonikidze Club, speeches were delivered by Shalva Dadiani and Iona Vakeli.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-249, 26; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 18.

1948

After September 12

In the notebook, Iona Vakeli writes down words that, according to Galaktion Tabidze, he spoke on September 12, 1948, during a meeting with young people at the Sergo Ordzhonikidze Club. Vakeli stated that Georgian poetry is at the forefront of the world and that there is no other poet like Galaktion Tabidze anywhere else in the world.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-472, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 307.

1948

September 14

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka reports that a warm gathering of Georgian writers and the workers of Gori was held, opened by Simon Chikovani, the chairman of the Writers' Union. The announcement states that speeches were delivered by Levan Asatiani, Shalva Dadiani, and Akaki Beliashvili, while Simon Chikovani, Galaktion Tabidze, Revaz Margiani, and others read their own poems.

Source: “Писатели в Гори”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, September 14, 1948, Tuesday, №184, p. 3.

1948

September 14

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes a report that the Tankmen Day was celebrated cheerfully and vibrantly in Tbilisi. During the day, school students met with the National Poet Galaktion Tabidze and prominent figures of the arts, including Shalva Dadiani, Pierre Kobakhidze, and others, at the Orjonikidze Cultural and Recreation Park. There is also a photograph taken by photo correspondent V. Tarkhov of Galaktion with the children.

Source: “Празднование дня танкистов”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, September 14, 1948, Tuesday, №184, p. 4.

1948

After September 15

He receives a letter from Vasil Gorgadze, who apologizes for not attending his creative evening and for not being able to inform him by phone about his inability to attend. He writes that he is currently in Sukhumi and has been tasked with organizing literary evenings on the theme “Homeland, the Great Leader Stalin, and his Comrade-in-Arms Lavrenti Beria in Georgian Soviet Poetry”. He informs him that the evenings are decorated with citations from Galaktion's poems, among which the most brilliant is “My Native Land”. He sends his regards to Nino Kvirikadze.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-478; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 256-257.

1948

September 17

By the decision of the Executive Committee of the City Council of the town of Tskhakaia, the street in the city of Mtskheta has been named after the National Poet and Academician of the Georgian SSR, Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Newspaper Avangardi, “A Literary Evening Dedicated to the Works of G. Tabidze”, 1948, №95/96, p. 2.

Note: The city of Senaki was known as Tskhakaia from 1933 to 1989.

1948

September 18

He arrives in the city of Tskhakaia, where, organized by the Local District Committee of the Party, a literary evening dedicated to his work is held at the summer theater of the Culture House.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-201, p. 44; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 292; Newspaper Avangardi, "A Literary Evening Dedicated to the Works of G. Tabidze", 1948, №95/96, p. 1.

Note: The city of Senaki was known as Tskhakaia from 1933 to 1989.

1948

September 18

He is in the city of Tskhakaia (now Senaki), writing the poem "Two Lelós".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №392; №607-613; №1965; №1966; №2687; №3571; №1513-1515; №5589-5592; №6536; №3295-3305; №7860-7875; №8453-8457; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 85.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "Because of the Events in Spain," "Red Farm," "Art Among Us and Abroad!," "Barbarian," and untitled with the following beginnings: "The bearer of lights, we scored a Leló..."; "Hand in hand, we scored a Leló..."; "Dressed in every flaw..."; "Your name, drinker of blood, is Capital..."; "What does the saboteur want..."; "We are creating a new time for the poet..."

1948

September 18

He writes a poem "A Farewell Poem for Not Being Able to Attend Kazbegi Days".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1048; 4203-4204; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 95.

Note: The poem is also found untitled, with the following beginnings: "As I cannot attend Kazbegi Days, so sunny..."; "Kazbegi Days, sunny days, that I cannot attend..."

1948

September 18

He is in the city of Tskhakaya (now Senaki) and, after the anniversary evening dedicated to him, writes a thank-you poem titled "Thank You, Thank You Very Much!".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №6341; №188-ღ, p. 23; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 85.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "Thank You, Thank You Everyone" and untitled with the beginning: "A man's heartlessness oppresses him..."

1948

September 18

In the city of Tskhakaia, now known as Senaki, He writes a poem "Thank You, Thank You Very Much!" inspired by the impressions from a jubilee evening dedicated to him.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-220, p. 23; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 418;

1948

September 18

He reads the newspaper Zarya Vostoka and notes in his notebook that the construction of a building at the intersection of Marjanishvili Street and Plekhanov Avenue is expected to be completed by the end of the year.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-220, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 415.

Note: Plekhanov Avenue is currently known as David Agmashenebeli Avenue.

1948

September 19

In the newspaper Avangardi, Galaktion Tabidze's poems are published: "My Song", "I Write About a Poet from Meskheta", "Lyre, Many Good Times", and "Homeland".

Source: Newspaper Avangardi, 1948, №95-96 (September 19), p. 3.

1948

September 19

The newspaper Avangardi publishes a decision from the Executive Committee of the City Council of Tskhakaia, now known as Senaki, regarding the naming of Mtskheta Street after the National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Newspaper Avangardi, 1948, №95-96 (September 19), p. 3.

1948

September 19

The newspaper Avangardi features an article by Valerian Uchaneishvili titled "The People's Beloved Poet", which briefly discusses Galaktion Tabidze's poetic development in accordance with the established approaches of Soviet criticism.

Source: V. Uchaneishvili, "The People's Beloved Poet", newspaper Avangardi, 1948, №95-96 (September 19), p. 3.

1948

September 23

In the State Dramatic Theater of Tskhakaia, now known as Senaki, a meeting is held with the student youth. The meeting is opened with an introductory speech by Valerian Uchaneishvili, the school inspector of the education department. The students read Galaktion Tabidze's poems, after which the poet himself takes the stage and reads an impromptu poem titled "Thank You, Thank You Very Much!"

Source: Pioneer-Students' Meeting with Poet G. Tabidze, newspaper Avangardi, 1948, No. 97 (September 23), p. 1.

1948

September 19

After the meeting with the students at the state dramatic theater of Tskhakaia, he takes several photographs with the children, as well as with Vladimir Tsirghvava, the editor of the newspaper Avangardi, and his children.

Source: Vladimir Tsirghvava's archive; G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-257, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 73.

Note: The city of Senaki was known as Tskhakaia from 1933 to 1989.

1948

September 19

In the regional newspaper Avangardi, a notice is published that on September 18, the National Poet and Academician of the Georgian SSR, Galaktion Tabidze, visited the city of Tskhakaia. A literary evening dedicated to the works of the award-winning bard was held at the summer theater, opened by the head of the Local District Committee of the Party. The attendees warmly welcomed the poet, who thanked the city's community and read several poems.

Source: Newspaper Avangardi, "A Literary Evening Dedicated to the Works of G. Tabidze", 1948, №95/96, p. 1.

Note: The city of Senaki was known as Tskhakaia from 1933 to 1989.

1948

September 19

In the regional newspaper Avangardi, Galaktion Tabidze's poems "My Song", "Homeland", "I Write About a Poet from Meskheta", and "Lyre, Many Good Times" are published. On the same page, there is a portrait of the poet and a decision from the Executive Committee of the City Council of Tskhakaia, naming one of the streets after Galaktion Tabidze. The newspaper also features an article by Valerian Uchaneishvili titled "The People's Beloved Poet", which provides a brief overview of Galaktion's work, stating that the main themes of his poetry are patriotism and love for the homeland.

Source: Newspaper Avangardi, "A Literary Evening Dedicated to the Works of G. Tabidze", 1948, №95/96, p. 2.

Note: The city of Senaki was known as Tskhakaia from 1933 to 1989. Valerian Uchaneishvili served as the school inspector of the Education Department of the District Committee of Tskhakaia.

1948

September 19

A meeting with Galaktion Tabidze is held at the state dramatic theater of Tskhakaia with students in attendance. The poet reads several poems to the audience, including "Thank You, Thank You Very Much", which he wrote the day after the literary evening that took place previously.

Source: Newspaper Avangardi, "A Literary Evening Dedicated to the Works of G. Tabidze", 1948, №97/98, p. 1.

Note: The city of Senaki was known as Tskhakaia from 1933 to 1989.

1948

September 20

He leaves a statement with the editor of the magazine Mnatobi, Irakli Abashidze, regarding the poems with a total of 640 lines: “To Youth,” “Again, to Youth,” “Red Farm,” “The Young Mokhevian Woman,” and “Only This and the Fortress of Gori”. He requests that 5,000 roubles be issued in the honorarium statement.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-170; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 115.

1948

September 23

In the newspaper Avangardi, the poem “Thank You, Thank You Very Much” is published, along with a notice stating that on September 19, a meeting took place in Tskhakaia (now Senaki) between students and the poet, during which Galaktion read this poem to the children and shared that he wrote it after the conclusion of the literary evening held the previous day.

Source: Newspaper Avangardi, 1948, №97-98, p. 1.

1948

September 23

In the newspaper Avangardi, a notice is published stating that on September 19, a meeting was held with the National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze, at the Dramatic Theater in Tskhakaia, now known as Senaki.

Source: Pioneer-Students’ Meeting with Poet G. Tabidze, newspaper Avangardi, 1948, №97 (September 23), p. 1.

1948

September 23

In the newspaper Avangardi, Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Thank You, Thank You Very Much!” is published.

Source: Newspaper Avangardi, 1948, №97 (September 23), p. 1.

1948

September 23

He cannot sleep at night, smoking a cigarette and contemplating how fate mocks him, undermining his faith in humanity, culture, and art – everything that is precious to him. This fate, crafted by people, including those close to him, even strips away his respect for himself. His heart aches at the thought that all those who once cherished his work with sincerity have now grown indifferent toward him.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-217, p. 5, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404-405.

1948

September 24

He wakes up in a terrible mood and records his nightmares in his diary.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-217, p. 5, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404-405.

1948September 24

Tatiana, the wife of Abesalom, arrives at Galaktion's house, where his ailing brother Abesalom is staying, accompanied by Kalistrate Kvirikadze, Galaktion's brother-in-law.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-217, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1948September 24

The translator Nikolaz Akerman, who performs word-for-word translations of his poems visits him at home.

Source: MGL, d-217, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1948September 24

He regrets that his nephew Vasiko is quite clumsy and is unable to do anything.

Source: MGL, d-217, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1948September 24

He feels as if he is experiencing a nightmare as he realizes that his brother Abesalom's condition is worsening and that he must be taken to the hospital.

Source: MGL, d-217, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1948September 24

He learns from his step-child, Nunu Ebanoidze, that she is not satisfied with her job at the university.

Source: MGL, d-217, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1948September 24

Korneli Kekelidze visits Galaktion at his home to see his brother Abesalom, accompanied by his wife, Minadora Kasradze.

Source: MGL, d-217, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1948

September 24

In the evening, when he turns on the light and opens the window, he hears two young people across the street call his name loudly and mockingly. The poet's heart aches at the thought that he is being openly ridiculed for the first time in his life. He reflects that he deserves this, as he cannot rise above the oppressive fate that has befallen him. In his diary, he writes that some have long been trying to bring him to this state. He cannot fathom enduring such humiliation and believes he must fight against this injustice.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-217, p. 6, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1948

September 25

His seriously ill brother, Abesalom Tabidze, is taken to the hospital for treatment.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-217, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1948

September 25

At five o'clock in the afternoon, as he approaches home from the hospital with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, someone from the upper floor throws a lamp shade, which shatters with a loud crash. His wife informs him that the glass was thrown from Chkhikvadze's apartment, and the poet concludes that this cannot be a coincidence.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-217, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1948

September 25

He finds that tasks are piling up and decides that he needs to work more actively.

Source: MGL, d-217, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 407.

1948

September 27

He writes a statement that he is traveling to Moscow for literary matters and requests his one-and-a-half month's salary.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-170; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 115.

October

1948

From August 3 to October 2

In his notebook, he writes a memory about taking a photograph in 1915 in the Imereti office of magazines and newspapers in Kutaisi, alongside Konstantine Balmont and Varlam Rukhadze. He describes in detail the interior of the Imereti office.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-219, p. 1-2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 412, 413;

1948

From August 3 to October 2

He is planning an event to be held on October 11 at the Opera Theater and notes in his notebook that the anniversary committee should prepare an introductory speech. He writes down the names of Sergo Zakariadze and Ilia Bakhtadze, whom he wishes to include in the anniversary committee. He contemplates a theme titled "Kazbegi and Galaktion" and hopes for the existence of a film called "I and Akaki". He is preparing to speak at the anniversary of Kazbegi and for the opening of the seasons at the Opera and Marjanishvili Theatres.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-219, p. 3-5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 413, 414;

1948

From August 3 to October 2

He writes a draft for his autobiography in the third person in his notebook.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-219, p. 6-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 414;

1948

October 2

The night in Tbilisi is marked by such a strong wind that it uproots trees and tears roofs off houses. A similar storm rages within Galaktion's soul, for his brother, Abesalom Tabidze, has passed away just two minutes before the first hour.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-217, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 406, 407.

1948

October 2

He writes a poem dedicated to the memory of his brother titled "To the Memory of Abesalom".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1047; №3346; 15-ღ, 14-18; s-21, p. 97; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 117; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 588-589.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "To the Memory of Abesalom Tabidze," "To the Memory of My Brother and Teacher," and untitled with the following beginnings: "Our family's soul was the great Ilya..."; "Your disciples". In the manuscript (№3346), the poem is preceded by an epigraph with the words of Ilya Chavchavadze: "Do not think of soulless life / As a gift from the sky...".

1948

October 2

He writes an untitled poem dedicated to the memory of his brother, beginning with “How shall I comfort myself...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №8429; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 123; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 588.

1948

After October 2

He corrects the poem dedicated to the memory of his brother, To the Memory of Abesalom, and creates a new untitled version of the work, beginning with “Our family’s soul was the great Ilya...”. He types this new untitled version on a typewriter, and after completing the typing, he begins proofreading the text once again.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1047; №3346; 15-d, 14-18; s-21, p. 97; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 117; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 588-589.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “To the Memory of Abesalom Tabidze,” “To the Memory of My Brother and Teacher,” and untitled with the beginning: “Your disciples”.

1948

After October 2

In mourning, Galaktion lets his beard grow and decides that in honour of his brother’s memory, he will never shave it off.

Source: Ip. Vartagava, Days from the Past, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 210.

1948

October 3

In his notebook, he writes the text for his brother’s obituary.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-217, p. 19; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 408, 409.

1948

October 3

Together with his brother’s wife, Tatiana Tsintsadze, and his nephews, Vasil and Nodar Tabidze, he publishes a notice in the newspaper Komunisti regarding the death of his brother, Prokle (Abesalom) Tabidze.

Source: newspaper Komunisti, №197, October 3, p. 4;

1948

October 4

He addresses a statement to the Literary Fund, requesting a loan of 3,000 roubles due to the death of his brother.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-177-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 115-116.

1948

October 3-6

At his home, located at number four on Marjanishvili Street, the funeral wake for his brother, Abesalom Tabidze, is held starting at seven o'clock. Heartbroken, Galaktion sobs quietly and weeps silently.

Source: newspaper Komunisti, №197, October 3, p. 4. Ip. Vartagava, Days from the Past, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 210;

1948

October 6

Through the newspaper Komunisti, Simon Chikovani, Alexandre Gomiashvili, Shalva Dadiani, Giorgi Leonidze, Leo Kiacheli, Ilia Mosashvili, Irakli Abashidze, Giorgi Natroshvili, and Davit Suliashvili express their condolences for the death of his brother, Prokle (Abesalom) Tabidze.

Source: newspaper Komunisti, №199, October 6, p. 4;

1948

From October 2 to October 7

In his notebook, he writes a plan for the arrangements related to the civil wake and burial of his brother, Abesalom Tabidze. He deems it necessary to film the delivery of the mourning wreaths, to describe and photograph the wreaths themselves. Therefore, he intends to purchase several rolls of film from the newspaper Komunisti or the literary fund. He also wishes for either Beso Zhghenti or Shalva Dadiani to attend the funeral of his brother from the Writers' Union.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-220, p. 20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 417.

1948

October 7

At five o'clock, the body of Abesalom Tabidze is taken from Galaktion Tabidze's apartment at number four on Marjanishvili Street for burial at the Vake Cemetery. Before the burial, Galaktion secretly places an envelope in the coffin with the deceased.

Source: newspaper Komunisti, №197, October 3, p. 4. S. Kubaneishvili, Galaktion in the native village, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 286;

1948

October 7 or later

In his notebook, he notes that during the funeral of his brother, Abesalom Tabidze, all the teachers of Tbilisi gathered at the Vera Bridge.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-220, p. 22; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 417.

1948

After October 7

The journalist and poet Alexandre Natroshvili visits Galaktion's home for an interview. Galaktion invites him into his study and answers over thirty questions. He then asks Natroshvili about his background and whether he has any siblings. He is pleased to learn that the guest has nine siblings and reflects sadly on his late brother, Abesalom. When asked why his early work contains pessimistic themes, he explains that before the revolution, the country was under a reactionary regime, which naturally influenced his poetry. He also reads Natroshvili's poems, praises them, and offers advice. Later, he gifts Natroshvili a large-format photograph of himself, inscribed: "To the young poet Alexandre Natroshvili as a token of respect". After sharing a meal, he writes down Natroshvili's address, gives him his own phone number, and invites him to call, visit, or write whenever he has free time. He promises to send his favourite works.

Source: A. Natroshvili, Meetings with Galaktion, New Shiraki, 1979, N 124, p. 3-4.

Note: The author of the memoir notes that the interview was published, but does not mention the name of the newspaper.

Dating: We date this to the period following the burial of Galaktion's brother, Abesalom Tabidze.

1948

After October 8

He makes a note about the Georgian surgeon Grigol Mukhadze. He mentions that Mukhadze was a spiritually whole and strong-willed person. According to Galaktion, thanks to the great care of Grigol Mukhadze and his doctors, he quickly recovered from a serious illness and spiritual exhaustion.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-641, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 125;

1948

After October 9

He reads a Russian collection of works by Alexander Pushkin. He makes underlines and notes.

Source: GTSM, 139. А. С. Пушкин, Сочинения, Moscow, 1948.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on October 9, 1948.

1948

October 11

Despite the decision made by the Writers' Union Board on August 3, the 40th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's literary work arrives on October 11 without any arrangements being made to celebrate the occasion.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 370.

1948

October 11

To address the issue of celebrating the 40th anniversary of his literary work, he meets with Simon Chikovani, Sergi Tchilaia, Kandid Charkviani, and Rostom Shaduri, along with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 370-371.

1948

October 11

He attends a meeting held at the Academy of Sciences and is surprised to see that Petre Sharia and Shalva Nutsbidze, whom everyone thinks are at odds with each other, support the proposals put forth by one another.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-213, p. 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 371.

1948

October 11

In his diary, he writes that he lost the first round in the battle for celebrating the anniversary and begins the second round. He notes the words of Alexandre Gomiashvili, stating that Galaktion's anniversaries have never been chronologically accurate, and that the celebration will take place before December. In the meantime, the anniversary of Sandro Shanshiashvili will be held, while that of Alexandre Kazbegi has already taken place and will not interfere.

Source: MGL, d-213, p. 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 371

1948

Until October 12

He writes down the recipe for "egg-nogg", which is needed for vocal improvement.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-217, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 407.

1948

October 12

In the diary, he writes a memoir about the "Tsisperkantselis" and other literary groups of the 1910s and 1920s. He notes that the "Tsisperkantselis" often left typographical errors unchanged, even intentionally distorting words to make the text incomprehensible. According to them, a poem that everyone could understand was not a poem. In Galaktion's view, it was precisely the typographical errors that made Razhden Gvetadze's "The Messiah of the Donkeys" and Giorgi Saganeli's "Melancholy" incomprehensible. He recalls the case of the poet Raud Gogokhia, whose real name was Razhden, but after the typesetter mistakenly arranged his name, he adopted this form "Raud" as his pseudonym. Galaktion writes that a member of a group, who was correcting posters, noticed that the typesetter had written “Tchidosnuri salamurebi (reed pipes)” instead of “jadosnuri (magical) salamurebi”, but deliberately left it uncorrected. The poets, fascinated by this “discovery”, named one of the cafes “Tchidosnuri Salamurebi”. He writes that at one time, Georgian and Russian leftist groups flourished in Tbilisi like mushrooms. In the magazine Meotsnebe Niamorebi, Aleksei Kruchyonykh, who was destroying the Russian language, was shamelessly declared the Lenin of Russian literature. Futurists, Imaginists, Symbolists, and Decadents fought for supremacy. Galaktion writes that this era was one of complete degradation, of the corruption of language purity, confusion, and incomprehensibility. All these groups were collectively referred to by the people as “Futurists”. He recalls how Ilia Zdanovich walked around with a huge top hat to attract attention. One group introduced the idea of walking without a hat in opposition to the proverb “I am a man, and I wear a hat”. Galaktion recalls the material poverty in which elderly writers such as Vasily Barnov, Shio Mghvimeli, Zakaria Chichinadze, Shio Aragvispireli, Kote Makashvili, the hermit, Ekaterine Gabashvili, and others lived. He notes that Paolo Iashvili was often invited as a master of ceremonies at various events, which was a lucrative job. He recalls that no one knows how Grigol Robakidze, who had no other job except for rare lectures, managed to make a living.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-213, p. 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 371.

1948

October 12 or later

In his diary, he writes a recollection about how, upon returning to Tbilisi from Russia in 1918, a gendarme came to visit him at the “Prima” hotel, conducted a search, and carefully examined his writings, page by page, scrutinizing and searching through his works.

Source: MGL, d-213, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 373-374.

1948

After October 14

He reads a collection of poems and short stories by young writers, making highlights and notes in the table of contents.

Source: GTSM, 189. Young writers, Poems and Stories, Tbilisi, 1948.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on October 14, 1948.

1948

October 17

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, an article by Galaktion’s brother, the esteemed teacher Prokle Tabidze, is published titled “A Guide to Georgian Literature is Needed”. In the article, it is stated that this year marks the 40th anniversary of the literary career of poet Galaktion Tabidze. His works are widely known, and students learn his poems from a young age, but there is no comprehensive critical analysis of this poet’s oeuvre, nor is there a Book accessible to both teachers and students. The educator notes that the works of other writers have also not been adequately discussed and adds that it is essential to establish a commission composed of experienced literary scholars and educators tasked with creating such a guide to Georgian literature.

Source: “Нужен учебник грузинской литературы”, newspaper “Заря Востока”, 1948, October 17, Sunday, №208, p. 3.

Note: In the source, the author’s name is presented with an initial and last name: P. Tabidze. Prokle, also known as Abesalom Tabidze, the brother of Galaktion Tabidze, passed away on October 2 of the same year.

1948

October 19

Nino Kvirikadze gifts a notebook with a factory inscription on the cover reading “Album of Poems”, inscribing the date in the corner of the cover and dedicating it “from Nutsia”.

Source: MGL, d-231, cover, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 466.

1948

After October 19

In the notebook, he notes the address of the painter Nikoloz Kandelaki.

Source: MGL, d-231, p. 1; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 466.

1948

After October 19

In the notebook, he records the address of the Metalworkers’ Club and the name of its janitor – Apollon.

Source: MGL, d-231, p. 1; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 466.

Note: The discussion revolves around a club for artisans working with metal.

1948

October 20

He writes the number “1908” on a page and adds that if this number is reversed, it will result in 8061.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-503, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 28.

1948

October 21

He plans to visit the literature cabinet at the Palace of Pioneers to meet with Ketevan Ananiashvili. He believes that Ether Shushania can also assist in gathering bibliographic materials.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-200, p. 90; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 280.

1948

October 26

He brings a request signed by the chairman of the Writers' Union to the management of the Marjanishvili Theatre, asking for the theatre hall to be allocated for the evening dedicated to the People's Poet Galaktion Tabidze on November 9. The theatre management agrees. The poet is interested in the terms under which the theatre will be provided and begins to prepare the poster for the event.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-221, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 420.

1948

After October 26

The director of the Marjanishvili Theatre, Ivane Gvinchidze, coordinates the arrangements for Galaktion's evening at the theatre with the Central Committee of the Communist Party, which results in a three-day delay in printing the poster.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-221, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 420.

1948

After October 27

In the magazine Mnatobi, under the common title "Three Poems" and signed "Galaktion", the following poems are published: "To Youth", "Again to Youth", and "Only This and the Fortress of Gori Have Left".

Source: G. Tabidze, "Three Poems", magazine Mnatobi, 1948 №10, p. 3-5.

Dating: The magazine is signed for printing on October 27, 1948.

1948

October 29

In connection with organizing his evening at the Marjanishvili Theater, Galaktion meets with Giorgi Jibladze, the Deputy Secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia for Agitation and Propaganda, at the initiative of the theatre's director Ivane Gvinchidze.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-221, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 422.

1948

October 29

He reads the newspaper Sakhalkho Ganatleba, making highlights and notes. Next to the slogan "Proletarians of all countries, unite!", he writes: "This is my opinion, this is my impression!".

Source: MGL, t-671. newspaper Sakhalkho Ganatleba, October 29, №671, p. 1.

1948

October 30

He works on the text of the anthem "My Native Land" and selecting music for it based on folk motifs.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-221, p. 4, 5, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 420-423.

1948

October 30

During a phone conversation with Grigol Orakhelashvili, he learns from Sergei Tchilaia that, following Sandro Shanshiashvili's anniversary, they can no longer hold a grand celebration for Galaktion Tabidze; the government and the party have mandated that the Writers' Union organize a small event instead. Galaktion suddenly understands why Giorgi Jibladze had informed Ivane Gvinchidze, the director of the Marjanishvili Theatre, that Galaktion would be hosting a small evening with the Writers' Union. The poet is very agitated, thinking it impossible to maintain his composure in such circumstances, yet he ultimately concludes that it is essential to fight for a grand evening.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-221, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 422, 423.

1948

October 30

He familiarizes himself with Grigory Fesechko's Russian collection "Elementary School for Learning to Play the Violin". Under the title on the cover, he writes in Russian: "In a car named after Stradivarius".

Source: MGL, t-680, Г. Ф. Фесечко, "Начальная школа обучения игре на скрипке" – Пособие для учащихся педагогических училищ, первая позиция, под редакцией В. Н. Рисмкого-Корсакова, Leningrad, 1948.

1948

October 30

In the Russian collection Elementary School for Learning to Play the Violin, next to the printed Soviet Union anthem, he writes lines from his own poem: "Oh, flag of the brotherhood of nations, flag of equality, oh, my native land, my sunlit land". He writes that the word "people" appears seven times in the text, "freedom" three times, "glory" four times, "let" three times, and "our" eleven times. He criticizes the rhymes, noting that it could have been written better; the music is good, but not suitable for an anthem.

Source: MGL, t-680, Г. Ф. Фесечко, "Начальная школа обучения игре на скрипке" – Пособие для учащихся педагогических училищ, первая позиция под редакцией В. Н. Рисмкого-Корсакова, Leningrad, 1948, p. 68-69.

1948

October 30 or after

On the back endpaper of the Russian collection “Elementary School for Learning to Play the Violin”, under the title “100 Veterans of Georgian Literature”, he compiles a list of 115 writers and members of the Georgian Academy of Sciences.

Source: MGL, t-680, Г. Ф. Фесечко, “Начальная школа обучения игре на скрипке” – Пособие для учащихся педагогических училищ, первая позицияб под редакцией В. Н. Рисмкого-Корсакова, Leningrad, 1948, p. 68-69.

1948

October 30 or later

He calculates how many people can fit in the Marjanishvili Theatre, and according to his calculation, the number is 799.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-222, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 423-424.

1948

October 30 or later

In the notebook, he details how many instances were required to obtain permission for organizing an evening at the Marjanishvili Theatre. The theatre’s director, Gvinchidze, requested documentation from the Writers’ Union, which had already been submitted to him. He contacted Giorgi Jibladze at the party’s Central Committee, who in turn reached out to the chairman of the Writers’ Union, Simon Chikovani. Chikovani then contacted Dimitri Benashvili in Main Literature Department, and Benashvili reverted back to Jibladze, who once again contacted Chikovani, who in turn reached out to Benashvili again. The account states that this process lasted for a week until he himself intervened in the matter. After this, the repertoire committee finally approved the text of the poster to be sent to the printing house, which was to be printed in 150 copies. He hurried to the printing house to assemble the poster, taking paper and clichés, but was told that it was already too late, and assembling the poster was promised for the following day. He paid a substantial bribe to the poster assembler to ensure that he worked diligently and created a good poster.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-222, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 424.

1948

October 30 or later

He provides a detailed list of the locations where the poster is to be displayed.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-222, p. 2-4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 425-428.

1948

October 30 or later

In the third person, he presents a fragment about the premonition of war from his own poem titled “We, the Poets of Georgia”.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-222, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 428.

1948

October 30

He makes a note about the event to be held at the Marjanishvili Theatre. He writes down a plan of tasks to be completed, which include: agreeing on the program with Simon Chikovani and Ivane Gvinchadze; mobilizing the youth; inviting members of the Academy of Sciences; compiling lists of members from the Writers’ Union, Artists’ Union, Composers’ Union, and cultural-educational institutions, and inviting them.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-503, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 27-28;

1948

October 30

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Once Again Youth” by Semen Sher is published under the pseudonym S. Borisov.

Source: “Самое главное”, (Посвящается молодежи), Галактион Табидзе, Перевел с грузинского С. Борисов. newspaper “Заря Востока”, October 30, 1948, Saturday, №217, p. 3.

Note: S. Borisov is the pseudonym of Semen Borisovich Sher (Shern).

1948

September-October

He writes a pun about Marika Baratashvili: “Oh, Mari! May your dress be as well cared for as a child”.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-220, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 417.

1948

October

In the magazine Mnatobi, under the collective title “Three Poems for the Leninist Komsomol”, the following poems are published: “Youth”, “Once Again Youth”, and “Only This and the Fortress of Gori Have Left”.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1948, №10, p. 3-5.

November

1948

November 2

He writes a poem “The Hour” at night.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1414; №3393; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 95.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Integrals of My Poetry”.

1948

November 2

He makes a note titled “The Tragedy of the Artist”. He mentions that an artist who compromises comforts himself by believing that he can always return to the right path. However, once he strays from his true course, he continues down an easier path, content with cheap applause and recognition. When he eventually decides to return to his old path, he can no longer find it. Along with the correct course, he also loses his false facade, as people grow tired of him and no longer applaud. He is left alone, and this marks the beginning of his tragedy. When the cart turns over, the true path of art will appear, but by then the artist will be grey-haired and powerless to do anything.

Source: G. Tabidze, “The Tragedy of the Artist”, MGL, d-647, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 202.

1948

November 2

He writes an untitled poem beginning with “How the burden confuses a man...”.

Source: MGL, d-647, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 201.

1948

Until November 3

He receives permission for printing his creative evening posters from the Main Department of Literature. They inform him that it will be a grand evening.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-200, p. 91; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 281.

1948

Until November 3

The Abkhazian Publishing House prints an extracurricular reading Book for non-Georgian schools for grades V–VIII titled “Fictional Literature”, which includes the poem “To Homeland” under the heading “To Homeland”.

Source: MGL, t-88, G. Tabidze, “To Homeland”, “Extracurricular Reading Book for Non-Georgian Schools, Grades V–VIII – Fiction”, edited by I. Botsvadze, compiled by N. Basilaia, 1948, p. 27-28,

Note: The text states the title of the poem as “To Homeland”, while in the table of contents, it is listed as “Hey, Motherland!”

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on November 3, 1948.

1948

Until November 3

In the publication of the Abkhazian Publishing House titled “Extracurricular Reading Book for Non-Georgian Schools for Grades V–VIII – Fictional Literature”, he highlights individual rhymes from Alexandre Abasheli’s poem “January 22”, dedicated to Lenin, and notes that the latter has taken them from him. It provides critical commentary on the folk poems dedicated to Stalin and the works of Ioseb Grishashvili. He points out that while the Book officially lists 15 authors, the actual number is much higher.

Source: MGL, t-88, G. Tabidze, “To Homeland”, “Extracurricular Reading Book for Non-Georgian Schools, Grades V–VIII – Fiction”, edited by I. Botsvadze, compiled by N. Basilaia, p. 4, 10, 174-176, 1948.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on November 3, 1948.

1948

Until November 4

He is planning to hold an evening at the conservatory.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-200, p. 92; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 281.

1948

November 4

The evening planned to be held at the conservatory does not take place.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-200, p. 92; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 281.

1948

November 6

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “This Will Be, Will Be” by Boris Serebryakov is published.

Source: Это будет, будет (Стих) Г. Табидзе, Перевел с грузинского Б. Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1948, 6 ноября, №222, с.1.

1948

Until November 9

He personally corrects a printed statement on a typewriter, announcing that a meeting with Galaktion Tabidze will be held at the Marjanishvili Theatre on November 8. In the text of the statement, the poet changes the date, replacing the 8th with the 9th of November. He also corrects the misspelled version of his own name, “Galaktioni,” and changes the title “People’s Writer” to “National Poet”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-503, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 21;

1948

Until November 9

He is planning to hold a jubilee evening at the Marjanishvili Theater.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-200, p. 93; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 281.

1948

November 9

An evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze is held at the Marjanishvili Theatre. The hall is packed, but the main speaker does not arrive, and the event is on the verge of being cancelled. They ask Iona Vakeli to fulfil this duty. Despite being a writer and not a critic, he delivers a commendable speech. Grateful, Galaktion visits him several times and repeats, "You saved me".

Source: A. Khintibidze, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 313.

1948

November 10

Due to the fact that the event dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze, held on November 9 at the Kote Marjanishvili Theatre, was conducted without the department's official approval for the theatre's allocation, and because the Repertoire Committee approved the program without prior coordination, the evening was held in a disorganized manner. The designated speaker did not appear, and out of the actors scheduled to participate in the concert, only three attended. Therefore, Pavle Kandelaki, the Deputy Head of the Arts Affairs Department, issues an order to ensure that such actions are not repeated.

Source: MGL, WUF №26.

1948

November 12

In his diary, he writes that 40 days have passed since the death of his brother Abesalom Tabidze.

Source: MGL, d-200, p. 94; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 281.

1948

November 17

He writes a poem "Today I Have Turned".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №1420; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 123; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 589.

1948

November 19 or later

He arrives in Moscow and settles into the House of Arriving Scientists on Gorky Street.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-223, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 429;

1948

November 19 or later

Upon arriving in Moscow, he notes the name of Aleksandra Ryabinina, an employee of the State Publishing House of the Soviet Union, in his notebook.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-223, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 429;

1948

November 22

The event he planned for this day is not taking place at the Opera Theater.

Source: MGL, d-200, p. 95; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 281.

1948

After November 22

He receives a letter from Igor Postupalsky, the editor for his upcoming Russian-language translation book, from Moscow. He writes that he expects to arrive in Moscow in the early days of January 1949 and asks to be informed of the arrival time a couple of days before departure. He mentions that he is reading the excerpts of Galaktion already provided to him and has many questions. He requests that, in addition to the new excerpts, he take with him to Moscow: all Russian-language editions of his poems, even if there is only one copy, the main Georgian editions, so they can verify the text with the original if needed, the titles and opening phrases of the poems he wants to include in the edition, and the initial draft of the distribution of material by books or years. He also asks to temporarily find: a Georgian-Russian dictionary, a Georgian language guide for beginners, and a Georgian-Russian grammar book. He requests that, if he meets Vladimir Elsner, he discusses the translations with him, and if he meets Giorgi Tzagareli, he asks him if there are any remaining copies of the Book of his translations of Galaktion published by Zarya Vostoka.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-64; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 303-305.

1948

Until November 29

He addresses a statement to the Secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, Rostom Shadur. He reminds him that this year marks the 40th anniversary of Galaktion's literary career, and the Presidium of the Writers' Union has passed a resolution to commemorate this date appropriately. He writes that he considers it necessary to hold the evening event at the Opera House on November 29. The organization of the event will be ensured by the Writers' Union.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-175; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 76.

1948

November 19-30

He knows that his Book is already included in the plans and thinks that rushing the process could ruin things. Therefore, he prioritizes finalizing the contract.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-223, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 429;

1948

November 19-30

In his notebook, he writes that Ilia Vekua's colleague Sulakvelidze stayed in Moscow for one night and then departed for Leningrad to purchase books. He notes that he is a good person.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-223, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 429;

1948

November 19-30

He recalls seeing a strange round figure rolling swiftly in the strong wind at Krasnodar Airport, which he initially thought was an animal. As it was explained to him, this was the plant "tumbleweed", which the Russians call "perekatipole". He remembers that this word was beautifully used in Maximilian Voloshin's poem "Autumn" and writes down an excerpt that he had forgotten.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-223, p. 2-4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 429, 430;

1948

November 19-30

His suitcase lock gets damaged, and he receives help in resolving the issue from Rashid Narulaev, who lives in his room, and a small trader from the Tishin market, who, as it turns out, has a son in Abkhazia. Galaktion is so grateful to them that he writes about it in his notebook.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-223, p. 5-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 430;

1948

November 19-30

He shares the room with Rashid Narulaev, a philosopher and employee of the Baku Academy of Sciences, who has published an impressive Book on Nizam.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-223, p. 5-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 430;

1948

November 19-30

In his notebook, he writes down what Larisa, the duty officer at the hotel, said: that her sister lives in Tbilisi in the family of Ivane Javakhishvili.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-223, p. 5-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 430;

November 19-30

In his notebook, he writes that during his stay in Moscow in 1918, he was accepted as a member of the Communist Party at the editorial office of the newspaper Pravda, located on Tverskaya

Street, based on the recommendation of a fellow newspaper employee, a Megrelian revolutionary, whose last name he can no longer remember.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-223, p. 11-14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 431;

1948

November 19-30

In his notebook, he recounts a memory from 1918 when a beautiful woman sat next to him in a Moscow cinema and held his hand in the darkness. Galaktion compared her in his imagination to the mysterious characters created by Theophile Gotié and Alexander Blok, but Titsian Tabidze told him that she might be a prostitute, which broke his heart.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-223, p. 14-15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 431, 432;

1948

November 19-30

In his notebook, he writes that Moscow is changing very quickly. A person who leaves the city for just a month may return to find so many new developments that he might not recognize many places at all.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-223, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 432;

1948

November 19-30

While in Moscow, Galaktion examines the manuscripts of his Book one last time. He is ready for submission, and the director of the State Publishing House, Nikoloz Kiknadze, signs the contract. The Book is sent to the printing house, and they visit the editors.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-223, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 432;

1948

November 19-30

In his notebook, he writes down the content of the poem "War and Art".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-223, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 432.

December

1948

Until December 1

In his notebook, he writes the text of a telegram to be sent from Moscow to Kandid Charkviani, the First Secretary of the Communist Party of Georgia. It states that 1948 marks the completion of Galaktion's 40 years of creative work. The poet requests permission for the Writers' Union to hold a literary evening at the Opera Theatre on December 20. He mentions that the proceeds from the event will be donated to the party for cultural purposes. He asks for instructions to be given to Rostom Shaduri, the Secretary of Agitation and Propaganda of the Central Committee of the Communist Party regarding the organization of the evening at the Opera Theatre.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-223, p. 28, 29; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 434;

1948

Until December 1

In his notebook, he writes the text of a telegram to be sent to Rostom Shaduri, the Secretary of the Agitation and Propaganda Department of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia. It discusses the upcoming evening to be held at the Tbilisi Opera Theatre and mentions that the poet will return to Tbilisi from Moscow in two days.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-223, p. 30, 31; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 434;

1948

Until December 1

He meets with Alexander Fadeev, the General Secretary of the Union of Soviet Writers.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-223, p. 30, 31; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 434.

Dating: This is noted in an entry made before December 1, 1948.

1948

After December 2

He receives a brief letter from Mikheil Pataridze. The letter states that if the addressee's son, Ramaz, brings this letter to him, it means they are in difficulty, and it hints that they need the honorarium for the 1,800 lines of Galaktion's poem translations.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-480; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 302-303.

Note: In the source, the son's name is not specified.

1948

Until December 3

He returns to Tbilisi from Moscow.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-223, p. 30, 31; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 434.

Dating: In an entry made before December 1, 1948, it is mentioned that he will be in Tbilisi "the day after tomorrow".

1948

Until December 3

During a meeting in Moscow, the Russian writer and journalist Simon Evgeniev tells him that there is a great demand for poems written on the theme of Europe and that the poems on this topic composed by Galaktion, who participated in the 1935 Paris Anti-Fascist Congress, are valuable material for the press, especially Literaturnaia Gazeta.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-223, p. 37; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 435.

Note: The source only mentions the last name "Evgeniev".

1948

After December 10

Akaki Gatsserelia's Book "Literary Essays" is being published, which includes a critical article on Galaktion's work first published by the critic in 1938.

Source: A. Gatsserelia, "Literary Essays", 1948, p. 179-194.

Dating: The Book was signed for print on December 10, 1948.

1948

December 25

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, Boris Serebryakov's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Greetings to Youth" is being published.

Source: Привет молодежи (Стихотворение) Галактион Табидзе, Перев. Борис Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1948, декабрь, №256, с. 2.

1948

December

The grieving Galaktion, with his hair and beard grown out, accidentally encounters Ipolite Vartagava, who offers his condolences for the loss of Galaktion's brother. Not wanting to reopen his wounds, Vartagava steers the conversation towards poetry. Galaktion replies that he now dedicates even more time to writing poems and takes his leave.

Source: Ip. Vartagava, Days from the Past, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 210-211;

1947 or 1948

He is recorded on videotape.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 68; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 197.

1948

He is recorded on videotape in Gori.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 68; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 197.

1948

The Georgian SSR Musical Repository is publishing the sheet music for Shalva Taktakishvili's composition set to Galaktion Tabidze's poem "May Song" (Winter, freezing the heart, has vanished...). The text is accompanied by Shalva Taktakishvili's own Russian translation.

Source: Shalva Taktakishvili, Song of May, Georgian SSR Musical Fund, Tbilisi, 1948.

1948

The publishing house Zarya Vostoka is releasing a collection of Boris Serebryakov's selected translations titled "Poets of Georgia", which includes poems by Galaktion Tabidze alongside works of other renowned Georgian authors.

Source: Поэты Грузии, Избр. переводы Б. Серебрякова, Тбилиси, Изд-во и тип. "Заря Востока", 1948.

1948

In the collection "Poets of Soviet Georgia", translated by Nikolai Tikhonov, next to the title of Alexandre Abasheli's work "The Date of the Poem", Tikhonov writes lines from his own poem: "Time, mark the time! Write down for the poem / Every minute, day, and hour".

Source: MGL, t-431, Николай Тихонов. "Поэты советской Грузии", Tbilisi, 1948, p. 2, 3.

1948

In his notebook, under the name of the National Poet of Georgia, he writes a draft of a letter to be sent to the Moscow publishing house Sovetskiy Pisatel (Soviet Writer), requesting that the publication of his Book "Poems and Verses" be included in the 1949 publishing plan. He also intends to send this same request to the publishing houses Ogonyok, as well as to the state publishers of Ukraine, Belarus, Armenia, Azerbaijan, the South Ossetian Autonomous Republic, Abkhazia, Adjara, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, and Bulgaria.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-225, p. 1-3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 436.

1948

Together with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, Galaktion arrives late at the meeting in the Writers' Union to discuss the Russian translations of Alexandre Kazbegi's stories. The audience stands up, and Beso Zhghenti, sitting at the presidium, specifically descends to greet him. Galaktion also spots and greets Alexandre Natroshvili, who is with the staff of the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti.

Source: A. Natroshvili, Meetings with Galaktion, newspaper Akhali Shiraki, 1979, N 124, p. 3-4;

1948

He writes a draft of a letter to be submitted to the State Publishing House, in which he mentions that he had previously requested the inclusion of the fifth volume of his works in the 1948 publishing plan. This volume contains poetry from the period of World War II, along with several earlier poems. He emphasizes that these materials address current issues of contemporary relevance, and their publication is being delayed. He requests that, if it is not possible to publish the volume, these materials should at least be published as a separate book.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-630, 19; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 349-350.

1948

He later adds to the entry from September 10, 1942, about his collaboration with the radio, stating that the matter has been abandoned.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-151, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 302.

1948

He addresses a statement to the State Publishing House. He writes that he has prepared the fifth volume of his works, which includes pre-war, war, and post-war poems, approximately 10,000 lines, and requests that it be published in the first quarter of 1949.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-177; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 116.

1948

He addresses a statement to the Moscow State Literary Publishing House, requesting that the publication of his Russian-language "Selected Works", consisting of 5,000 lines of poems and poems already translated, be included in the 1949 publishing plan.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-176; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 116.

1948

At 12:40 AM, he dedicates a humorous poem to Nino Kvirikadze titled "My Nino, 40 Minutes of 48 Years...".

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 513.

1948

He writes an untitled poem "As if a torrent from the mountain...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №188-ᄁ, p. 4; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 123; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 590.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "Exhibition" and untitled, with a different beginning: "Sculpture, book, book...".

1948

He writes a poem "Anthology of New Literature. 1948. Page 381 of the Book".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №108-a, p. 3019; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 124; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 590.

1948

He writes a poem "Glorify, Peace!"

Source: Autographs, MGL, №585; №923; №1096; №2282; №3134; №7628; №450-ᄁ, p. 18; №5512; №7556-7557; №1844-1845; №7558; №7005; №7526-7558; №1834-1845; №6976-7005; G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 156; For dating and clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 591.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Edge of the Sea, Edge of the Sky,” “Hymn,” and untitled with the following beginnings: “The giant of the sea, the edge of the sky...”; “Fight, whether you forge or disregard...”; “Fight, whether you strike with the sword...”; “To the young man – the sword!”; “Again and again...”; “Again... the guests – they sing to the tune of Lileo”.

1948

He reads Tevdore Kikvidze’s Book “A Short Story”, making highlights and notes.

Source: GTSM, 266. “A Short Story”, work of T. K-idze, Tbilisi, 1889.

Dating: Next to the book’s publication date, he writes: “1948-1889=59”.

1948

He reads the Anthology of Georgian Soviet Poetry, making highlights and notes.

Source: GTSM, 150, Anthology of Georgian Soviet Poetry, Tbilisi, 1948.

1948

He reads the 1948 directory of the Georgian Academy of Sciences and writes a list of full members elected in 1941 and 1944.

Source: GTSM, 351, Academy of Sciences of the Georgian SSR – 1948, Tbilisi, 1948.

1948

He makes a note about the Society for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries of Georgia. He mentions that the existence of such organizations is of vital importance in the contemporary world. He points out that to strengthen the organization’s work, it is necessary to introduce more systematization into the work process.

Source: MGL, d-647, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 195-196.

Dating: In the note, 1947 is referred to as the previous year.

1948 or later

He reads Marika Baratashvili’s Book of poems, making highlights and notes. Next to the first poem, “Song of the Mountaineers”, in the collection, he writes a question about what compelled the author to open the Book with this poem and provides several possible answers. The author might regard it as her best poem, it could be autobiographical and cherished due to a personal memory, others might have suggested opening the collection with it, starting with a more patriotic poem might have been too formulaic, or the theme of this poem might set the tone for the entire book.

Source: GTSM, 283, Mariam Baratashvili, poems, Tbilisi, 1948, p. 3.

1948 or later

Galaktion’s step-child, Nunu Ebanoidze, is the captain of the basketball team at Tbilisi University and, having just returned from a competition, is unable to prepare for her political economy exam. As a result, her mother, Nino Kvirikadze, asks Galaktion to call the university rector, Niko Ketskhoveli, and tell him that Nunu is sick. Galaktion fulfils the request but finds himself in an awkward situation, as the supposedly ill Nunu goes to the university that same day. She accidentally meets the rector, they talk about the competition, and there are no signs of illness.

Source: Inesa Merabishvili's recollection, Kviris Palitra, February 14, 2022;

1948 or later

He sends a letter from Moscow to Anatoly Kotov, the director of the Fiction Publishing House, and Aleksandra Ryabinina, the head of the Soviet Union's National Literatures Editorial Board. He asks them to inform him as soon as possible whether the publication of his Book has been included in the plan and when it will be necessary for him to travel to Moscow.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-265; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 69.

Dating: Anatoly Kotov was the director of the Fiction Publishing House starting from 1948 and is mentioned in Galaktion's archival documents from that time.

1948 or later

In the Book "The Sea Has Roared", he adds the titles of the poems along with the volume in which the works were previously published or notes if they were never published.

Source: MGL, t-125, G. Tabidze, "The Sea Has Roared", Sokhumi, 1948, p. 5, 11-15, 21, 23, 25, 29, 32-37, 39, 41-42, 51, 57, 59, 74-75, 86, 89, 92, 95, 99-100, 105, 123-124.

1948 or later

He reads Alexander Egolin's Book "Thirty Years of Soviet Literature" in Russian. He highlights passages and makes comments. In the introduction, next to the phrase about Friedrich Engels' attitude towards literature, he writes that Engels did not know Georgian literature but was well-acquainted with Russian literature.

Source: GTSM, 268, A. Еголин, Тридцать лет Советской литературы, Moscow, 1948.

1948 or later

He reads Khuta Berulava's collection of poems. He highlights passages and makes notes. Next to the title of the poem "I Was Climbing the Stairs of Vardzia", he writes: "Idealization of the past". Nearby, he cites the first line of his own poem "Marble": "Climb the stairs where the sphinx caresses the stones". At the end of the book, he writes Val. Matchavariani's phrase: "It drove me out of my mind".

Source: GTSM, 796, Khuta Berulava, poems, Tbilisi, 1948.

1948 or later

He reads Shalva Dadiani's memoirs about Akaki Tsereteli, taking notes on paragraphs, while on the cover, he writes the titles of his own poems.

Source: MGL, t-621, Shalva Dadiani, "Akaki", recollections, Tbilisi, 1948.

1949

January

1949

January 1

In the Russian newspaper Batumskiy Rabochi, Boris Serebryakov's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "New Year's Song" is being published.

Source: Песня нового года (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Перев. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Батумский рабочий, Батуми, 1949, 1 январь, №1.

1949

January 1

The poem "Many Happy New Years!" is published in the newspaper Komunari.

Source: G. Tabidze, "Many Happy New Years!", Komunari, 1949, №1.

1949

January 1

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, Boris Serebryakov's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "New Year's Song" is being published.

Source: Песня Нового года (Стих) Г. Табидзе, Перевел с грузинского Б. Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1949, 1 января, №1, с.2.

1949

After January 1

