He reads Leo Kiacheli's novel "Giotto's Father" in the magazine Mnatobi, highlights lines, and writes notes.

Source: MGL, t-557, magazine Mnatobi, 1948, №5, p. 3-11.

1949

January 4

He types out what he has done and the results achieved during the past year. It is noted that he worked on the fifth volume of his works and the Russian-language "Selected Works", which is to be published by the Moscow State Publishing House. It is also mentioned that this year, his Book "The Sea Has Roared" was published in Abkhazia.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-185; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 116-117.

1949

After January 10

Together with Nino Kvirikadze, he watches the German director Hans Steinhoff's film "Rembrandt's Life", which makes a strong impression on him. He says that the only true happiness for an artist is the full realization of the talent granted by God, and the circumstances that hinder this can be considered a misfortune.

Source: I. Kukava, From the Archive of Memory, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 406.

1949

January 21

The poem “In Memory of Lenin” is published in the newspaper Gantiadi.

Source: G. Tabidze, “In Memory of Lenin”, Gantiadi, 1949, №6-7.

1949

January 26

The medical commission writes the diagnosis that he has pronounced neurosis, hypertension, and cardiosclerosis.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 515.

1949

28 January

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a report delivered by the General Secretary of the Communist Party of Georgia, Kandid Charkviani, on January 25, 1949, is published, in which Galaktion Tabidze is mentioned. The report states that Georgia’s best Soviet poets created remarkable poems during the Great Patriotic War about Soviet fighters, the heroic Leningrad, the epic of Stalingrad, and the defence of the Caucasus.

Source: Отчет Центрального комитета КП (б) Грузии, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1949, 28 января, №19, с. 3.

1949

31 January

The Commission of the Georgian SSR Academy of Sciences presents a Book titled “Explanatory Dictionary of the Georgian Language” with the inscription: “To Galaktion Tabidze, a full member of the Academy of Sciences of the Georgian SSR, from the Commission”.

Source: MGL, t-183, Georgian SSR Academy of Sciences, Explanatory Dictionary of the Georgian Language, Sample Section, Tbilisi, 1948.

1949

After January 31

In the Book Explanatory Dictionary of the Georgian Language presented by the Commission of the Georgian SSR Academy of Sciences, he makes underlines and provides corresponding titles or lines from his poems to the defined words: “Ah, my harp, companion, everyone has something to remember,” “The monument must be built for those days,” “The theater shines,” “They carried the flag,” “In the dewy grass,” “Blue horse,” “Peach blossoms,” “Every band and contraband,” “When the dawn broke, it passed”.

Source: MGL, t-183, Georgian SSR Academy of Sciences, Explanatory Dictionary of the Georgian Language, Sample Section, Tbilisi, 1948, p. V-IX, 2-31, 36, 43, 47, 50-51, 56, 71-72, 94.

February

1949

Until February

In his notebook, he writes notes about Siberia and begins working on a poem titled “Larix Sibirica”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, Nd-231, p. 3,4; №231; №427; №643; №651; №2513; №4960; №8385; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 60.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Larix Sibirica” and untitled, with the following beginnings: “Today, my dream and my lyric...”; “Oh, do not remind me...”; “Oh, do not remind me...”; “As long as the great pipes of the factories...”; “What was lost in the depths that it sought...”; “What he wears on his body...” “Larix Sibirica” refers to a species of Siberian larch.

Dating: It is dated based on the entries in the notebook.

1949

Until February

In his notebook, he writes down the names of the proposed editors for the sixth volume of his works and the number of copies. He believes that seven copies are too few for a complete volume. He learns from Sandro, a worker at the state publishing house’s printing press, that the press is overloaded with textbooks, and in order for his Book to be printed on time, an order from the Central Committee of the Party is required. Galaktion thinks that it would be better for the Book to be printed at the Academy of Sciences’ press.

Source: MGL, d-231, p. 6–8; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 466, 467.

1949

Until February 15

In the notebook gifted to him in October of the previous year, Nino Kvirikadze writes to him to imagine her every time he writes a poem, and signs it: “Your Nutsia”.

Source: MGL, d-231, p. 8; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 468.

1949

Until February 15

He writes stanzas that he plans to add to the poem “Homeland, Life”.

Source: MGL, d-231, p. 8; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 468.

1949

Until February 15

He works on an untitled poem “On the Shore, to the Sound of the Waves”.

Source: MGL, d-231, p. 9, 10; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 468, 469;

1949

February 15

He writes a list of the verses and poems prepared for printing in the sixth volume, noting that he has completed work on them, and specifies the number of lines for each.

Source: MGL, d-231, p. 12; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 469.

1949

February 15

He sets the principles for the layout of his volume for the printers. He demands that every poem be printed in the centre of the page, with equal spacing on both the left and right sides. Each new chapter should start on a new page, even if there is significant empty space left at the end of the previous chapter.

Source: MGL, d-231, p. 14; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 470.

1949

February 17

He writes an untitled poem “When He Feels That I Have Money in My Pocket...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №1962; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 194; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 800.

1949

February 18

He visits the family of the writer Mariam Garikuli, who lives nearby, where he witnesses how Mariam’s daughter-in-law, Guliko (Ketevan) Metreveli-Ratiani, and Mariam’s niece, Margarita Tserodze, sing old Georgian songs to cheer up the ailing writer. Galaktion greatly enjoys their performance and asks them to sing the song “Ah, Shawm Player,” written to the poem of Ivane Kereselidze. The ladies fulfil the poet’s request and repeat it several times at his request. Afterward, Galaktion dedicates an impromptu piece titled “To Guliko (Ketevan) and Margarita”.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 132. L. Kalandadze, Memorial Lines, Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, September 20, 1963, p. 4.

1949

February 18

On a piece of paper, he writes down a painter’s apt expression about people who are fond of talking a lot.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-600, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 9.

1949

February 21

Gobron Tsitskishvili (Agareli) dedicates and writes down the poem “Little Lark” in his notebook.

Source: MGL, d-231, p. 20; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 471.

1949

February 21

In the notebook gifted to him in October, Nino Kvirikadze writes: “Always remember your ‘Nutsia’!”

Source: MGL, d-231, p. 8; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 468.

1949

February 24

In the Russian newspaper Molodoy Stalinets, Galaktion Tabidze's poems "You Gave Us Life, To the Soviet Country", and a passage from his poem are published, translated by Boris Serebryakov.

Source: Ты подарила нам жизнь, Стране Советов, Отрывок из поэмы, Г. Табидзе, Перев. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Молодой сталинец, Тбилиси, 1949, 24 февраль, N.24.

March

1949

Until March 2

In the notebook, he writes that Petre Sharia mockingly asked Giorgi Akhvlediani how his heart was.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 36; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 479;

1949

March 2

He is being treated at the Institute of Cardiology.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 37, 38; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 480;

1949

After March 5

In Lavrenti Beria's Book "On the History of Bolshevik Organizations in Transcaucasia", in Chapter III, which discusses Stalin's assessment of the era of reaction, he writes an autobiographical fragment. This fragment mentions that during the October Revolution, his poem titled "The Drums Are Beating Quickly" was often heard. He states that this poem has a whole history and has been translated into all the languages of the Soviet Union. At that time, he was studying at the Tbilisi Theological Seminary, where Stalin had studied 10 years earlier. In 1908, he was the editor of the underground manuscript journal Shuki, around which revolutionary seminarians had gathered.

Source: MGL, t-25, Lavrenti Beria, "On the History of Bolshevik Organizations in Transcaucasia", Tbilisi, 1949, p. 132-133.

1949

Until March 8

On the first page of his notebook, he writes in Russian that every day is exceedingly precious.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 1; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 472.

1949

Until March 8

In his notebook, he writes a list of hills, mountains, and mountain peaks he has climbed, totalling 62 hills and mountains.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 4–9; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 472–474.

1949

Until March 8

In his notebook, he outlines memories from his childhood under the title “On the Rioni”, in a schematic list of 41 points.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 10–13; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 474–475.

1949

March 8

In his notebook, he writes that in the evening at Alexandrov’s Garden, he met a certain Severiane Liparteliani, who suggested that he shave off his beard.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 14; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 475.

Note: Alexandrov Garden, named after Emperor Alexander II, was known during the Soviet period as Kommunar’s Garden. Currently, the upper part of the garden is named after April 9th, while the lower part bears the name of Giorgi Leonidze.

1949

Until March 10

He receives a telegram from the State Publishing House of Fiction in Moscow regarding his translation book. They request that he bring the material.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-67; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 306-307.

Dating: This is mentioned in Igor Postupalsky’s letter dated March 10, 1949.

1949

March 10

In his notebook, he writes that a feature film “The Life of Rembrandt” is on at the cinema and sketches the scene from the theater.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 15; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 475;

1949

March 10

In his notebook, he writes a small childhood memory, recalling a beggar who once told him an unusual word, “Canasta”. He suggests looking for this word in the works of Simon Kaukhchishvili and Korneli Kekelidze. Nino Kvirikadze tells him a riddle she heard from her elderly grandfather, in which similar-sounding words appear, and he writes this riddle down in the notebook. He also notes materials about Kozman Athoneli.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 16–18; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 475, 476.

Note: “Canasta” is one of the variations of the card game, but we believe that in this context, it should not be understood in that sense.

1949

March 10

He receives treatment at the Institute of Cardiology. In his ward, a patient, Akaki Baghaturia, begins reading the poet's verses aloud. Interested patients from other wards also enter, giving Galaktion an ovation. The poet is greatly pleased by this.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-617, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 136.

1949

After March 10

He receives a letter from Igor Postupalsky, the editor of his upcoming Russian-language translation book, from Moscow. The letter mentions that Postupalsky had expected his arrival in Moscow back in January, but he neither arrived nor contacted him. He inquires if there are any health problems or if the translation of the excerpts has been delayed. He informs him that it would be desirable for him to come to Moscow and bring the complete material by the end of March so that work can begin in April, with the Book ready for printing by the summer. He mentions that he has found a self-teacher for the Georgian language, has learned to read, and can now decipher much of the Georgian text himself, but he lacks a Georgian-Russian dictionary.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-67; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 306-307.

1949

March 11

The patient of the Institute of Cardiology, Akaki Baghaturia, writes his address on a piece of paper for Galaktion.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-617, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 136.

1949

March 11

In his notebook, he writes that he met Mitrophan Laghidze in Alexandrov Garden. He notes the details of their meeting and conversation, and adds a rhyme: "გურული - ჩაბალახით მობურული" ("Guruli – covered with hay").

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 19–22; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 476, 477.

1949

March 11

In his notebook, he writes down the address of Akaki Baghaturia and notes that books should be sent to him.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 42; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 481.

1949

After March 11

In his notebook, he writes the titles of 10 poems to be published in the sixth volume: “Reed Farm”, “Akaki Tsereteli”, “Juga and Asida”, “Bambura Mura”, “Seashore”, “May 9”, “1941” (“Motherland, Life!”), “1942”, “The Wife of Mokhevi”, and “Khramkhesi”. Later, he replaces “Reed Farm” with the poem “Two Lelos”.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 28; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 478.

1949

After March 11

In his notebook, he notes that on May 1st, he is scheduled to attend an event in Batumi with Korneli Kekelidze, Akaki Shanidze, Giorgi Akhvlediani, and other representatives of the Academy of Sciences.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 31; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 478.

1949

After March 11

At the Radium cinema, he plans to hold an exhibition titled “Galaktion”. He counts the number of seats in the cinema and concludes that, aside from the gallery, there are approximately 800 seats in the theater.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 42; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 481.

1949

March 13

In his notebook, he writes Vasil Kapanadze’s words: “The most important thing is for Galaktion to be healthy; otherwise, compared to him, we are as insignificant.

Source: MGL, d-231, p. 21; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 471;

Note: The name of Kapanadze is not mentioned in the source.

1949

Until March 25

The cardiologist of the Cardiology Institute, Givi Korinteli, diagnoses that the function of the heart muscle is impaired.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 46; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 481; For dating: it is dated based on the entries in the notebook, the poet was discharged from the hospital on March 25.

1949

Until March 25

In his notebook, he writes a poem related to the deep pain in his heart.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 37; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 479, 480.

1949

Until March 25

In his notebook, he writes information from Russian newspapers about the grave of Henry Barbusse.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 47, 48, 56; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 481, 482; For dating: it is dated based on the entries in the notebook.

1949

Until March 25

In his notebook, he writes critical views from Russian newspapers about Mikhail Lukonin's poem.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 47, 48, 56; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 481, 482; For dating: it is dated based on the entries in the notebook.

1949

Until March 25

In his notebook, he writes information from Russian newspapers about Pavel Lubaev's translation of the "Knight in the Panther's Skin" into Mordvinian.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 47, 48, 56; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 481, 482; For dating: it is dated based on the entries in the notebook.

1949

March 25

In his notebook, he writes an excerpt from a newspaper stating that on March 26, a plenary session of the governing board of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia will take place, during which the results of the work of Georgian Soviet literature in 1948 will be discussed.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 55; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 483.

1949

March 25

He is discharged from the Cardiology Institute, where he was treated for 24 days. Upon discharge, he was made to sign a document concerning his loss of work ability. He is nervous, believing that his literary enemies will use this document against him, aiming to prevent him from continuing his work at the Writers' Union.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 37, 38; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 480;

1949

March 25

In his notebook, he writes in Russian the poem "Eucalyptus" by Anatoly Lensky.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 39, 40; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 480, 481.

April

1949

April 4

He listens to the symphonic poem “Tamara” by the 19th-century Russian composer Mily Balakirev on the radio.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 36; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 479.

1949

After April 5

He reads Ivan Turgenev’s Book “Spring Torrents”, making highlights and notes. At the end, he writes that not only do they fail to understand his poetry, but they also struggle to spell his name correctly.

Source: GTSM, 945, И. Тургенев, “Вешние воды”, Moscow, 1949.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on April 5, 1949.

1949

April 7

He hands over the poems to Grigol Abashidze, the editor of the sixth volume of his works.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 515.

1949

April 10

In his notebook, he writes that the second Women’s Railway School plans to organize a literary evening at the workers’ club in Nadzaladevi, the director of which is Sandro Euli’s cousin, Kuridze. The teacher Tamar Tsagereli is working on the event, assisted by the wife of the critic Lavrosi Kalandadze and Mariam Garikuli’s daughter, Tsutsuna Kalandadze. He notes that the head of the Nadzaladevi club is Ilia Gomiashvili, the brother of the famous artist Archil Gomiashvili. He writes that a wall newspaper and a special manuscript journal will be published. He also mentions that the filming will be directed by Davit Rondeli, who is a relative of Tamar Tsagereli. He is pleased that a special topic, “Galaktion Tabidze as the creator of a new era in Georgian literature”, will be added, based on Sergi Tchilaia’s new book.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 1; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 485.

1949

April 15

He watches the film “A Life’s Story”, which is based on the life of Giuseppe Verdi, at the cinema.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 486.

1949

April 15

At the cinema, before the film begins, two female students enter the loge and he gets acquainted with them. One of them, named Tsopurashvili, has chosen Galaktion Tabidze’s works as the subject of her thesis, with one chapter focusing on his innovation. She discusses his innovativeness in general, but feels she needs to develop this theme further and asks for advice. Galaktion feels regretful that he didn’t manage to say much to the student before the film started.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 486, 487.

1949

April 15

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a report is published stating that from March 26 to April 1, the Presidium of the Georgian Soviet Writers' Union held a plenary session, during which they discussed "Georgian Soviet Literature of 1948". The article mentions that Carlo Kaladze gave a report on poetry, in which he referred to Galaktion Tabidze's patriotic poetry but did not mention any specific works of his.

Source: Грузинская советская литература 1948 года. На пленуме правления Союза советских писателей Грузии, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1949, 15 апреля, №72, с. 2.

1949

April 16

In his notebook, he writes about his impressions of a film he saw the previous day. He notes that the film's introduction included the phrase: "Яркий драматизм Верди". He begins to search for the appropriate Georgian equivalents for the word "Яркий". He believes that the word's full range of meanings fits the description of Verdi's dramaticism in the translation. He observes that in Georgia, people often confuse pessimism with dramaticism. He poses the question: What is pessimism, what is dramaticism, and what is the difference between them? Is Shakespeare's dramaticism pessimistic? He recalls that when his Book was released, criticism split into two factions: the first, represented by Alexandre Abasheli and Khomleli, noted the dramaticism in his works, while the second group, including Mikheil Tsulukidze, Akaki Papava, and others, spoke about his pessimism.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 486.

1949

April 16

In his notebook, he describes a meeting at the cinema, where student women asked him a question about his innovativeness. He reflects on what it means to be an innovator. He expresses regret that there has not been a single constructive letter about his innovativeness. He believes that regarding this matter, Akaki Tsereteli's phrase about him – that he was the introducer of many novelties in Georgian literature – should be expanded upon.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 486, 487.

1949

After April 16

Teacher Tamar Tsagareli tells about the work done for the upcoming literature evening at the Workers' Club of Nadzaladevi. She asks him to attend the event along with other writers. Galaktion is somewhat confused, unsure of whom he could approach with this request.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 5; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 487, 488.

1949

After April 16

In his notebook, he writes about the Georgian contribution to Byzantine literature.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 5; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 488.

1949

After April 16

In his notebook, he writes that with the demolition of the brick fence near Zhores's house number 4, an "illegal" street has emerged, which poses certain dangers to the residents, as the privacy of the yard has been violated and criminals are roaming there. He is also dissatisfied with the condition of the house's facade, believing it needs reconstruction, as it does not match the architecture of the nearby Book Chamber.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 6, 7; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 489, 490.

1949

April 23

He hands over the remaining part of the material to Grigol Abashidze, the editor of the sixth volume of his works.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 515.

1949

April 27

At the editorial office of Zarya Vostoka, he meets Boris Korneev, who tells him that he will soon return to the position of head of the literary department of the publishing house. Galaktion, a bit puzzled, finds it strange that Korneev had been temporarily removed from his duties. The poet speculates that perhaps Korneev had encountered some conflict due to his poems, which were being published under the name "Galaktion" alone. He is glad that the former colleague is being reinstated in his position and maintains his favourable attitude toward the poet.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-628, 27; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301.

1949

April 29

In his notebook, he writes an application addressed to the housing management, stating that he is a full member of the Georgian Academy of Sciences and a national poet. He mentions that he resides at 4 Zhores Street and does not have a storage space for various items, so he requests permission to build one in the yard of his residential building.

Source: MGL, d-235, p. 24; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 509.

1949

March-April

In his notebook, he notes down the address of the musician Iliko Kurkhuli.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 472.

1949

After April 30

He reads N. Bokuchava's Book "On the Issues of Vocal Art", making highlights and notes.

Source: GTSM, 309, N. V. Bokuchava, "On the Issues of Vocal Art", Tbilisi, 1949.

Dating: The Book was signed for printing on April 30, 1949.

1949

April

In his notebook, under the title "The Cannon", he describes the square near the Tbilisi railway station as the face of the capital. Coachmen sleep on the cabs of their carriages, a shopkeeper sits in front of an empty store reading trippy stuff. Cart drivers from Racha talk loudly, shouting "yes-yes" repeatedly, and a policeman blows his whistle in an agitated manner for some reason. Suddenly, the booming sound of a cannon is heard, announcing the arrival of 12 o'clock to the city.

Source: MGL, d-234, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 500, 501.

1949

April

In his notebook, he writes down the phone numbers of writers.

Source: MGL, d-234, p. 5, 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 501.

1949

April

In his notebook, he notes that the typist charges 21 kopecks per page for printing up to 300 pages, and 16 kopecks per page for anything over 300 pages.

Source: MGL, d-234, p. 7; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 501.

1949

Until May

He writes a poem "The Oil Towers" ("Instead of Roses and a Woman...").

Source: Autograph, MGL, №2481; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 159; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 792.

May

1949

Until May 1

He takes his poem "Song for May 1st" to the editorial office of the newspaper Komunisti for publication.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 10; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 491.

1949

May 1

He attends the May Day evening event in the hall of the Academy of Sciences. At the insistence of Akaki Shanidze, he takes a seat at the presidium. Sitting in a prominent position makes him uneasy, as he is no longer accustomed to being the centre of attention and feels uncomfortable. It is the first time he has been invited to sit at the presidium table in the Academy of Sciences, and it is a great honour for him. To calm his nerves, he takes out manuscripts of his poem from his pocket and glances at them. When Akaki Shanidze realizes that it is a May Day poem, “Song of May 1st”, he asks him to read it aloud in front of the audience, which is unprecedented in the Academy of Sciences. Galaktion feels awkward, and Akaki Shanidze suggests that he read the poem himself. He briefly scans the poem and suggests a few changes, which Galaktion agrees to. After the speaker finishes his presentation, Akaki Shanidze, the vice-president of the Academy, asks for the floor and informs the audience that Galaktion has written an impromptu poem and plans to read it. The audience becomes lively, and there is a request for Galaktion to read the poem himself. The chairman of the Writers’ Union, Simon Chikovani, announces that the National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze, will read the poem “May 1st”. Galaktion approaches the podium, and in the sudden silence that falls in the hall, he reads the poem slowly and confidently. Ovarions follow. The academicians shake his hand. Giorgi Akhvlediani offers him the opportunity to speak at every May Day event. Overwhelmed with emotion, Galaktion writes in his notebook: “For the first time, the poet’s voice was heard from the Academy’s podium... I have triumphed”.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 8–13; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 490–494. G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-467, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 233;

1949

May 1

In his notebook, he notes the names of the academicians who attended the session held at the Academy of Sciences.

Source: MGL, d-467, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 233.

1949

May 1

Georgia’s radio broadcasts Galaktion’s poem “First of May”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-467, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 233.

1949

May 1

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Song of the First of May” by Boris Serebryakov is published.

Source: Песня Первого Мая (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1949, 1 мая, №85.

1949

May 1

In the newspaper Komsomolskaia Pravda, a translation of the May Day poem is published.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 13; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 494.

1949

After May 1

Translations of the poem “Song of May 1st” are published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka and in the Armenian newspaper Khorurdayn Vrastan (“Soviet Georgia”).

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 13; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 494.

1949

May 2

The poem “Song of May 1st” is broadcasted on the radio.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 13; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 494.

1949

May 4

He writes an untitled poem dedicated to his friend, the writer Giorgi Kuchishvili “Giorgi, now...”.

Source: Autographs, MGL, №7721; №8827; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 291.

Note: The poem is also found with the title “To G. Kuchishvili”.

1949

May 5

He writes and submits a new application to the Housing Department, requesting permission to build a storage shed in the yard of his residence at 4 Zhores Street.

Source: MGL, d-235, p. 24; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 509;

1949

Until May 6

He begins working on palindromes in his notebook.

Source: MGL, d-235, p. 1; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 502;

Note: A palindrome is a word, phrase, or sentence that reads the same forwards and backwards.

1949

Until May 6

In his notebook, he writes down phrases heard about the difficulty of climbing the steps of Vera Hill. As they say, it’s easier to climb in Bakhmaro or on Yalbuzz than to ascend there, and that a person who has climbed Mount Mkinvartsveri is less exhausted than when climbing the steps of Vera Hill.

Source: MGL, d-235, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503;

1949

Until May 6

He meets an old acquaintance, the publisher Vasil Gadilia, to whom he hands over the 1908 memoirs plan.

Source: MGL, d-235, p. 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503;

1949

Until May 6

In his notebook, he notes that the publishing house Zarya Vostoka should pay 1319 roubles and 90 kopecks for 1182 lines, and the publishing house Molodoy Stalinets should pay 1319 roubles and 80 kopecks for 12790 lines.

Source: MGL, d-235, p. 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503;

1949

May 6

The artist Vasily Shukhayev is completing a portrait of Galaktion Tabidze for the upcoming art exhibition scheduled for November.

Source: MGL, d-235, p. 7; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503;

1949

May 6

He is heading to the editorial office of the newspaper Komunisti.

Source: MGL, d-235, p. 7; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503;

1949

May 6

In the editorial office of the newspaper Komunisti, the artist Alexei Balabuyev offers to paint a portrait of Galaktion at any time.

Source: MGL, d-235, p. 7; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503;

1949

May 6

In his notebook, Galaktion sketches an open Book and a flower using red and blue pencils. He captions it "The Book of the State Publishing House" and dates it May 6, 1949.

Source: MGL, d-235, p. 9; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503.

1949

May 6

In his notebook, Galaktion sketches a man reading a Book with red and blue pencils. He captions it "The State Publishing House" and dates it May 6, 1949.

Source: MGL, d-235, p. 10; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503.

1949

May 9

In his notebook, Galaktion writes several versions of an untitled poem, beginning with the line “I didn’t drink wine, but now I have started”. He titles it “The Song of the King of Poets”, then removes the title. He signs two versions of the poem and dates it May 9, 1949.

Source: MGL, d-235, p. 12–14; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 504–506.

1949

May 9

He meets the artist Lev Logach.

Source: MGL, d-235, p. 18; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 507.

1949

May 9 or later

In his notebook, he writes that Viktor Goltsev has written an article titled “The Poetry of Giorgi Leonidze”, for which Goltsev is compared to a wryneck bird.

Source: MGL, d-235, p. 15; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 506.

1949

May 9 or later

He recalls his mother’s words about the advantages of being a master: if something goes wrong, you can blame someone else, but if it goes well, you take the credit for the success.

Source: MGL, d-235, p. 16; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 506.

1949

May 9 or later

And in his notebook, he writes materials about Tbilisi.

Source: MGL, d-235, p. 17; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 506.

1949

May 9 or later

He writes a schematic plan for the recollections of the years 1900–1917.

Source: MGL, d-235, p. 18, 19; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 506, 507.

1949

May 8

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Song of May 9” by Boris Serebryakov is published.

Source: Песня Девятого Мая (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1949, 8 мая, №89.

1949

May 9

The poem “Great Army!” is published in the newspaper Tkvarcheli Magharoeli.

Source: G. Tabidze, “Great Army!”, Tkvarcheli Magharoeli, 1949, №59.

1949

May 9

He goes to the Workers’ Club in Nadzaladevi, where “Press Day” is being celebrated. The organizers request his presence at the presidium and ask him to read a poem. He reads the poem “Press”, which was published in the first volume of his works.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 14; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 494.

1949

May 9

He revises the poem “Elegy”, written on January 25, 1946 (“I spend sleepless nights: once again with joy...”), creating a new untitled version “I did not drink wine, but now I have started...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №175; №66-a, p. 1538; №3782; №242-d, p. 12; №242-d, p. 13; №242-d, p. 14; works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 254.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Sleepless Nights” and untitled (“I avoided wine...”, “I have begun my reckoning...”, and “I did not drink wine, but now I have started...”).

1949

May 9

The translation of the poem “Song for the Ninth of May” is published in the newspaper Zarya Vostoka.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 14; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 494.

1949

May 9

The translation of the poem “Victory Day” (Gori) is published in the newspaper Molodoy Stalinets.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 14; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 494.

1949

After May 9

Teacher Tamar Tsagareli takes an invitation card and program prepared for the literary evening scheduled for May 15 at 5 pm at the Nadzaladevi Workers’ Club to Galaktion. Galaktion learns that nearly all of the school’s students are eager to read their own poems, and the teacher and director are struggling to review the poems. Student Meri Mikaberidze brings a cliché from Galaktion’s third volume of works to be added to the program.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 15, 16; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 494, 495.

1949

May 10

In the Russian newspaper Molodoy Stalinets, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Our Victory" by Boris Serebryakov is published.

Source: Наша победа (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Молодой сталинец, Тбилиси, 1949, 10 мая, №57.

1949

May 10

Galaktion meets Genadi Mikheladze, with whom he studied at the theological seminary.

Source: MGL, d-235, p. 18; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 507.

1949

May 10 or later

In his notebook, Galaktion writes about stem-compound words, searches for the roots of these words, and creates new abstract nouns.

Source: MGL, d-235, p. 21; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 507.

1949

May 10 or later

In his notebook, Galaktion writes that two poems have been removed from his new book: "The Horse" and "Remember Forever".

Source: MGL, d-235, p. 22; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 507.

1949

May 10 or later

In his notebook, Galaktion writes that at the upcoming event at the Nadzaladevi club, a photo session should take place with the speakers, singers, and those reading poems, as well as a performance. Additionally, his own photos should be taken with various groups, with the speakers, during his speech at the podium, and at the moment of receiving flowers.

Source: MGL, d-235, p. 24; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 508.

1949

Until May 12

In his notebook, Galaktion writes that Niko Kiknadze, the director of the publishing house, includes the sixth volume of Galaktion Tabidze's works in the 1949 publication plan. Alexandre Cheishvili informs the writers at the Writers' Union about this plan, and the first secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, Kandid Charkviani, approves it.

Source: MGL, d-238, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 522.

1949

May 12

The sixth volume of the works is handed over to the production sector of the publishing house, one of whose departments is headed by Yarlov.

Source: MGL, d-238, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 523.

1949

May 12 or later

In the notebook, he writes quotes from Griboedov, Lenin, and Vazha-Pshavela about education, along with his own comments. After that, he writes excerpts from his own poems on the topic of the book, noting that he has an unpublished poem about the book. At the end of the entry, he mentions that he has submitted the sixth volume of his works to the state publishing house for printing.

Source: MGL, d-238, p. 1; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 521, 522.

1949

May 12 or later

He takes the layout of the sixth volume of his works to the editorial office of the newspaper Komunisti to editor Grigol Abashidze. He enthusiastically says that it will be a wonderful Book and begins to ask questions.

Source: MGL, d-238, p. 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 522.

1949

May 12 or later

The editor of the sixth volume of Galaktion's works, Grigol Abashidze, attaches a resolution to the Book and hands it over to Niko Kiknadze for typesetting, who starts counting the lines.

Source: MGL, d-238, p. 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 522.

1949

May 12 or later

He writes a poem in his notebook about the sixth volume.

Source: MGL, d-238, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 523.

1949

May 14

The manuscript of the sixth volume of the works will be handed over to the printing house of the newspaper Komunisti for typesetting.

Source: MGL, d-238, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 523.

1949

May 15

A literary evening and banquet dedicated to Galaktion are held at the Nadzaladevi Workers' Club, organized by the Railway Women's Secondary School. The event lasts until 3 a.m. The poet is gifted with an inkpot painted by Palekh artists and a silver pen. Additionally, six reports and ten poems dedicated to him and his work are presented.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 17; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 494, 496.

Note: Palekha is a village in Russia, known for the production of small-sized lacquered and painted items.

1949

After May 15

At the Second Sviri Secondary School in the Zestaponi district, teacher Tamar Tsagareli and student Meri Mikaberidze visit to deliver an invitation. The poet's wife, Nino Kvirikadze, welcomes them into the poet's study. Galaktion, absorbed in his work with a candle lit, is so focused that he doesn't even notice the guests' arrival. After a while, he opens the window, greets the familiar teacher, and asks about the reason for the visit. He agrees to attend the event and recites a newly written poem: "On the road of life, a wave strikes me, like a sailor's wave..." Impressed by this, Meri Mikaberidze writes a poem dedicated to Galaktion on the same day and recites it during their meeting at the school.

Source: M. Mikaberidze, unforgettable episode, newspaper Sakhalkho Ganatleba, March 19, N 21, p. 4. G. Tabidze's record, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 494-496.

Dating: The diary entry is made following the one from May 15, 1949.

1949

May 16

In his notebook, he writes that he will never forget the literary evening on May 15, held at the Nadzaladevi Workers' Club, organized by the second railway women's school. He believes that the people love him. The only unpleasant memory is that he was thirsty, and the water was brought to him three hours late. Despite the magnificent banquet and gifts, he feels upset that the photo and film recording could not be arranged.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 17; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 496.

1949

May 16

The sixth volume will be handed over to the printing house of the Komunisti editorial office.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516.

1949

After May 16

He revises the poem "The Voice of the Creators", written in the early part of 1946, and creates a new version of the work.

Source: Autographs: MGL, N°447; N°4924; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 317.

Note: The poem is also found under the following titles: “February 9” and “Today I am Proud!”. The poem was published after the poet’s tragic death in the April 3rd issue of Literaturuli Gazeti (Nº14).

1949

After May 16

In his notebook, he writes information about the polemic between Konstantine Chichinadze and Shalva Abkhazishvili on the pages of the magazine Mnatobi, concerning metaphors and worldviews. He recalls his own thoughts on dramatism and pessimism. He then remembers the polemic surrounding Pushkin’s phrase, “Talent is vain, talent is accidental”. He feels a desire to search for Besarion Belinsky’s letter and a poem by Patriarch Filaret of the Russian Church.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 18; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 496, 497.

Note: The poet mistakenly remembers the author of the poem as Patriarch Avakum.

1949

After May 16

In his notebook, he writes nine different meanings of the word “გადააქცა” (“transformed” or “turned into”).

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 19; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 497.

1949

After May 16

In his notebook, he writes that representatives from the first secondary school of the town of Chiatura have contacted him and wish to organize an evening event in his honour.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 19; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 497.

1949

May 22

He is in Mtskheta with Nino Kvirikadze, and they are climbing Sarkineti, where important historical material was discovered as a result of excavations.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516.

1949

May 23

He writes a draft for the poem “To the Youth”.

Source: MGL, d-236, p. 15; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 515, 516;

Note: The entry appears to be made under the dictation of Nino Kvirikadze, as indicated by its content.

1949

Until May 25

He receives a letter from Grigol Orakhelashvili, who plans to write his biography against the backdrop of the historical events unfolding in the country. Along with the letter, he sends the first draft of the theme “The Great October Socialist Revolution,” which is 70 pages long. He strongly requests that anything that is not liked be removed and returned promptly with corrections, as he cannot begin work on the second theme, “Industrialization,” without this.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-84-8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 313-314.

1949

May 25 or later

He receives a letter from Grigol Orakhelashvili, who is writing his biography against the backdrop of the historical events taking place in the country. He writes that he does not plan to have the text typed out until the final corrections are made because it is expensive. He informs that he wanted to submit the themes “Socialist Industrialization,” “Cultural Revolution,” and “Collectivization of Agriculture” together, but he has decided to submit the first theme first to see if there is anything that needs to be changed or transferred to the other themes. He writes that he has already included individual elements of his 1925-1933 biography in the chapter “Socialist Industrialization” and plans to include other biographical facts from these years in the following chapters. Therefore, there will be no overlaps or contradictions. He asks for feedback on his approach.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-84-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 313.

1949

May 26

He hands over the revised poem “Akaki Tsereteli”, intended for inclusion in the sixth volume of his works, to Zakaria Papukashvili, who is responsible for printing and binding, at the Komunisti newspaper press.

Source: MGL, d-238, p. 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 524.

1949

May 26

He goes to Chiatura to attend the literary evening scheduled for the next day.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516.

1949

May 27

He attends the literary evening in Chiatura and has one more day left to attend another evening.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516.

1949

May 27

He is in Chiatura. He writes a poem “Black Gold City”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №167-168; №527; №605; №8175-8177; №2743; №7621; №316-Ⓞ, p. 22; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 132.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Meeting in Chiatura”; “Meeting with the Old Miner”; and without a title (beginning with: “Do you remember, the labour in the vast...”; “Our flag is fluttering...”; “You used to say...”; “Black gold is shimmering...”).

1949

May 27

On the initiative of the administration of Chiatura’s First Secondary School, the Parents’ Committee, and the Literary Study Circle, a meeting with Galaktion Tabidze is organized at the school. The hosts meet the guest at the Shorapani Railway Station, escort him to a flower-decorated car, and take him to stay at the family home of Alexandre Shanidze. The festive meeting begins at 7:30 PM. From the new theater building in Chiatura, the students shower the poet with flowers as they lead him to a beautifully decorated stage. They dedicate an acrostic poem “Long live Galaktion!” to him. The poet reads “Mtatsminda’s Moon” and the impromptu poem “The City of Black Gold”. Later, the students crown him with a laurel wreath. The poet is immensely happy and promises that he will visit them every year on May 27. The people of Chiatura see him off at the Shorapani station. A large crowd gathers at the station as well. During the farewell, Galaktion gently caresses the forehead and hand of Nata Mumladze, a teacher of the Georgian language and literature, and repeats his promise that he will gladly visit them every year.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 19; MGL, d-237, p. 22; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 497, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 518, 519; N. Mumladze, unforgettable meeting, newspaper Chiaturis Magharoeli, November 2, 1973, N 215, p. 2-3.

1949

May 28

Galaktion is still in Chiatura, while at home, Nino Kvirikadze receives a notice from the newspaper Pravda about the payment of royalties.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516.

1949

After May 28

In his notebook, he notes that on May 28, the newspaper Chiatureli Magharoeli published an article by A. Peradze and M. Tabagari titled “A Day in the Life of the Manganese City”, which describes his visit to Chiatura.

Source: MGL, d-237, p. 35, 36; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 520.

1949

Until May 31

He notes in his notebook that the hall of the “Alpinists’ Club”, located in Kirov Park, accommodates 80 people.

Source: MGL, d-237, p. 29; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 520.

Note: It is dated according to one of the subsequent entries.

1949

May 31

At State Publishing House, he meets Simon Tsverava, who has recently arrived from Abkhazia, where he heads the Writers' Publishing House. Galaktion tells him that he plans to publish the second part of his Book dedicated to Abkhazia, "The Sea Has Roared". Simon Tsverava responds that the first Book is good, but the cover design, specifically Ucha Japaridze's illustration, was not well received at Abkhazia's State Publishing House.

Source: MGL, d-237, p. 34; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 520.

Note: It is dated according to the entries in the notebook.

1949

End of May

He records various notes in his notebook about the miners.

Source: MGL, d-237, p. 24–27; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 519.

Note: It is approximately dated to the time of Galaktion's stay in Chiatura.

1949

End of May

In his notebook, he writes: "100 Veterans of Georgian Literature, Galaktion Tabidze", and it seems he is considering gathering material for this.

Source: MGL, d-237, p. 2,3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

Note: It is dated according to the entries in the notebook.

1949

End of May

He meets and records in his notebook the name of 78-year-old Chiatura miner Samson Kapatadze. He notes that he is a typical inhabitant of Upper Imereti and writes a verse dedicated to him right there.

Source: MGL, d-237, p. 5; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 518.

Note: It is dated according to the entries in the notebook. The poem was never published in this form by the poet.

June

1949

Until June 1

In his notebook, he writes untitled poems: "The Town of Imereti in the Full Heat" and "A Bunch of Flowers Collected in the Mountains".

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 59, 60; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 483;

1949

Until June 1

In his notebook, he writes the word “ღობჯღს” (meaning “flow”). He also notes the poem printed on page 36 of the 1927 Book “Poems”, the Russian-Georgian dictionary on page 1022, where the Russian meaning of the word is provided, and he plans to find its definition in Sulkhani-Saba Orbeliani’s dictionary as well.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 61; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 485.

1949

June 1 or later

In his notebook, he notes the work of Associate Professor Tamar Nutsubidze titled “The Black Sea”.

Source: MGL, d-232, p. 61; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 485.

1949

After June 1

In his notebook, he notes materials that are useful for working on the topic of industrialization.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-623, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 164.

Dating: One of the sources noted by the poet is printed in the June 1, 1949, issue of the newspaper კომუნისტი.

1949

June 3

The poem “The City of Black Gold” is published in the newspaper ჭიათურის მაგაროელი.

Source: G. Tabidze, “The City of Black Gold”, ჭიათურის მაგაროელი, 1949, №67.

1949

June 5

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Heartfelt Thanks!” dedicated to Alexander Pushkin, translated by Georgy Kreytan, is published.

Source: Сердечное спасибо! (Стихи, посвящ. А. С. Пушкину) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Г. Крейтан, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1949, 5 июня, №109.

1949

June 7

He requests the Georgian Academy of Sciences to intercede with the Mtskheta Rural Council to allocate a plot of land for the construction of a house and yard.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-179; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 117.

1949

June 7

He submits a request to the Mtskheta village council, asking for a plot of land to be allocated in Mtskheta for the construction of a residential house and yard.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-178; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 117.

1949

June 10

He rents a room with a kitchen from a resident of Mtskheta, Mrevlishvili, for three months at 400 roubles per month and signs a contract with him.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-180; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 117.

1949

June 21

He addresses a request to the Mtskheta Rural Council, asking for a plot of land to be allocated for the construction of a house and yard.

Source: G. Mebuke, records about Galaktion Tabidze, Tbilisi, 1982, p. 80.

1949

June 23

Samson Pirtskhalava gifts his Book “The Ancestors of the Georgians and Their Related Tribes in the Near East, 40-6 Centuries BC” with the inscription: “To the illustrious Georgian poet, dear Galaktion Tabidze, whose first poem I published in my magazine, I wholeheartedly dedicate this work of mine”.

Source: MGL, t-190, S. Pirtskhalava, “The Ancestors of the Georgians and Their Related Tribes in the Near East, 40-6 Centuries BC”, Tbilisi, 1948.

1949

Until June 25

In his notebook, he writes down the address of Gigo Khechuashvili.

Source: MGL, d-239, p. 1; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 525.

Note: It is dated according to the subsequent entries in the notebook.

1949

Until June 25

In his notebook, he describes the views of the new station in Likhi, noting that Likhi is covered with fog and the mountains are different. He adds that after sunrise, the mountains there “resemble the peaks of Pegasus”.

Source: MGL, d-239, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 525.

Note: It is dated according to the subsequent entries in the notebook.

1949

Until June 25

He reads Grigol Orakhelashvili’s work on his creative output and writes notes in his notebook. He mentions that a better poem could have been chosen for the topic of electrification, and expresses surprise that Orakhelashvili writes about his involvement in the construction of the Zahesi (Power Plant) canal. He is also puzzled by the lines from “Pacifism” that are oddly included in a discussion about land excavation, given that the poem essentially advocates for the end of pacifism.

Source: MGL, d-239, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 525.

Note: It is dated according to the subsequent entries in the notebook.

1949

June 25

He goes to the Writers’ Union, where there is no one on the balcony except for “gossiping” women.

Source: MGL, d-239, p. 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 525.

1949

June 25

He goes to the State Publishing House, where he talks to Akaki Shanidze about Galaktion’s complaint that in the 8th-grade textbook, there are ten poems by other poets, but only one of his. Shanidze responds that this doesn’t mean anything and shares a story about King Erekle and a peasant. King Erekle told his host, the peasant, that he was happy because he had ten sons, to which the peasant replied, “I wish I had just one child, like you”. This anecdote causes laughter among those present. Galaktion is so pleased with the exchange that he writes it down in his notebook.

Source: MGL, d-239, p. 7; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 526.

1949

June 25

He goes to the editorial office of the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, where he only meets the young poet Vakhtang Gorganeli. His eyes catch a letter sent from Moscow to the newspaper’s complaints department, and he thinks to himself that there is no one to read it.

Source: MGL, d-239, p. 14; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 527.

Note: Gorganeli is referred to in the source as “some Gorganeli”.

1949

June 25 or later

He reads a letter from Rodion Korkia, head of the Theater, Dramaturgy, and Criticism Office of the Georgian Theater Society, addressed to Geronti Kikodze. In the letter, Korkia informs him that on July 7 at 2 p.m., a meeting of the active members of the Soviet Theater, Dramaturgy, and Criticism Office of the Georgian Theater Society is scheduled. He transcribes the letter word-for-word into his notebook.

Source: MGL, d-239, p. 15; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 528.

Note: It is dated based on the previous entries in the notebook.

1949

June 25 or later

Elene Tkeshelashvili writes in his notebook a poem dedicated to him, in which she asks for a poem to be written about peace, as Herbert Wells speaks of it.

Source: MGL, d-239, p. 8, 9; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 526, 527.

Note: It is dated based on the preceding and following entries in the notebook. The individual mentioned in the source could not be identified. It is likely referring to Herbert Wells' essays "Dreams of Armageddon" and "War and Socialism".

1949

June 25 or later

Ipolite Vartagava writes a brief characterization in the notebook, stating that Akaki Tsereteli recognized Galaktion as a "highly talented young poet". He is described as a calm, quiet, modest individual, uninvolved in any of the poet-writer groups. He lives and works in solitude, not being one for scheming, as his moral nature does not tolerate "trickery". He considers any kind of intrigue disgraceful, and so on.

Source: MGL, d-239, p. 11-13; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 527.

Note: It is dated based on the previous and subsequent entries in the notebook.

1949

After June 25

In the notebook, he notes the publications held in the "Akadem-Book" library: "Ecclesiastical Documents of Western Georgia", Volumes I and II, by Sargis Kakabadze, and the "Caucasus Calendar" from 1907.

Source: MGL, d-239, p. 8; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 526.

1949

From February to June 30

He continues working on the poem "Larix Sibirica" and writes several versions of the piece.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №231; №427; №643; №651; №2513; №4960; №8385; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 60.

Note: The poem is also found under the title Larix Sibirica and without a title (beginning with: "Today my dream and my lyric..."; "Oh, don't remind me..."; "O, don't remind me..."; "As long as there are large factory pipes..."; "It was lost in the depths of what it sought..."; "The one who wears it..."). Larix Sibirica is a species of Siberian larch.

Dating: The poet began working on the poem before February 1949, while the sixth volume of his works, in which this poem was first published, was signed for printing on June 30, 1949.

1949

Until June 30

He writes an untitled poem, "By the Shore, to the Sound of the Waves...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5821-5823; №5829-5830; №56-d., p. 9-10; №2041-2042; №5522; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 37.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “May it be so”, “A Woman from Abkhazia Played the Lute”, and without a title (starting with “Silence has Fallen...” and “With a Neck Craned, Endlessly Gentle...”).

1949

Until June 30

He submits the sixth volume of the collected works to the State Publishing House and begins editing the book.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in eight volumes, vol. VI, 1949, p. 380.

1949

Until June 30

He writes a poem “The Unknown Soldiers’ Tomb at the Pass”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2081; №2011; №4908; G. Tabidze, G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 67.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “The Brothers’ Grave at the Mamisoni Pass”; “At the Sentinels,” and without a title, with the opening: “At the sentinels, the army stands firm...”.

Dating: The sixth volume of the eight-volume collected works, in which this poem was first published, was signed for printing on June 30, 1949.

1949

Until June 30

He writes a poem “Flags Up!”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №288; №289; №1129; №4146; №4946; №2366; №4017; G. Tabidze, G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 70.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Flags to the Sky”; “The Thirtieth Year,” and without a title, with different openings: “Flags up!..”; “Flags to the sky!...”

Dating: The sixth volume of the eight-volume collected works, in which this poem was first published, was signed for printing on June 30, 1949.

1949

Until June 30

He writes a poem “Oh, the tree of truth”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №5838, s-74, p. 6; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 116.

Dating: The sixth volume of the eight-volume collected works, in which this poem was first published, was signed for printing on June 30, 1949.

1949

Until June 30

He revises the untitled poem written on October 7, 1939, “The Mountains of Abkhazia are covered by clouds...”. As a result of working on the text, a new version of the piece is created, the untitled poem “Where the Mountain of the Hellenes is – Gimmetti...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, N; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 129. For dating and clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 603.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Free Admiration,” “Greece,” and without a title, with different openings: “The Mountains of Abkhazia are covered by clouds...”; “I see that the long-awaited prayer has been fulfilled...”; “Here, raise the happiness...”; “Neither a storm nor a fog...”; “Once again, this meeting (not with clouds) with a new city, new fields...”; “To the 22nd of October”; “Powerful, not satisfied with the enemy...”; “We see that the long-awaited prayer has been fulfilled...”; “Let the new eloquence chase...”.

1949

Until June 30

He writes an untitled poem “We don’t want...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №3442; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 104.

Note: The poem is also found without a title, with different openings: “This noise will pass...”; “We don’t want this noise!..”.

Dating: The sixth volume of the eight-volume collected works, in which this poem was first published, was signed for printing on June 30, 1949.

1949

Until June 30

He revises the poem “The Voice of the Creators”, written in the early part of 1946, and creates a new, extended version of the text titled “I Give My Voice to Stalin”. This new version includes not only the poem “The Voice of the Creators” but also two other works: “The News of the Days...” and “A Thousand Years – One Minute”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №447; №4924; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 317.

Note: The poem is also found under the following titles: “February 9” and “Today I am Proud!”.

Dating: The sixth volume of the collected works, in which the revised version of the poem was first published, was signed for printing on June 30, 1949.

1949

June 30

The State Publishing House signs the permission to submit the sixth volume of Galaktion Tabidze’s collected works for printing, after which the necessary printing work for the book’s publication begins.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in eight volumes, vol. VI, 1949, p. 380.

1949

After June 30

The sixth volume of Galaktion Tabidze's collected works is being published, which includes 63 poems and 3 poems. These works are: "To Youth", "Again to Youth", "On the Seashore, at the Sound of the Waves", "Our Borders Have Been Crossed", "When Peasantry Ended Weeding", "He Would Open the Newspaper", "Oh, Did I Feel the Glory of Time", "From Ancient Times", "When He Fights the Enemy", "The Attempt of the Power of the People", "For Some Reason, When the Roar of the Land Was Heard", "How Should I Not Praise My Country", "May Has Passed", "The New Year Begins", "I Felt the New Light of This May", "Glory to the City and Village Again", "Let the Voice Roar: Long May You Live", "Listen to the Native Melodies", "How Should I Not Praise, My Homeland", "A Light in the Land of the Darkness", "I Give My Voice to Stalin", "Raise the Flag, Up High, High", "The City of Black Gold", "Beyond My Homeland", "Moscow", "The Tomb of Unknown Soldiers", "On the Pass", "Man", "Where the Mountain of the Greeks Lies – Gimmeti", "Two Lelós", "Centennial", "The Hundred-Year-Old Elm", "Live Another Hundred Years", "By the Path We Made", "Glorify, My Homeland, Glorify", "The Anthem of the Georgian Alphabet", "Praise of Nikortsminda", "The Golden Cup with Ornaments", "Treasures in the Forests", "By the Hearth", "Glory to Ushba", "The Landslide", "I Stand on the Cliff of Khomli", "The Old Editor", "If They Ask Me", "Towards Betania", "Udzo", "Kumisi", "The Golden Harp", "And There Is Another Land That Has No Sea", "To the Mother of Many Children", "Wave, My Beautiful Wave", "How Wonderful It Is, My Homeland", "The Warrior", "Karaia", "Jackal and Fox", "Dawn", "Larix Sibirica", "The Faithful Horse", "If the Matter Is About the Horse", "The Horse Is Ready", "The Warrior Woman", Poems: "Akaki Tsereteli", "Juga and Asida", and "Bambura Mura". The Book ends with the poem "Only This and the Fortress of Gori Have Left".

Source: G. Tabidze, works in eight volumes, vol. VI, 1949.

Note: The Book editor is Grigol Abashidze. The volume consists of 380 pages, and the print run is 5,000 copies. The Book is signed for printing on June 30, 1949. The volume includes 66 works (poems and fragments of a poem), with 38 poems and the poem "Bambura Mura" being published for the first time. Other works had previously been published in periodicals or in the poet's collections.

1949

After June 30

He writes a short autobiography in Georgian and Russian.

Source: Source: MGL, d-659, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 450-451; MGL, d-659, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 452-453;

July

1949

July 1

The sixth volume of the collected works is compiled at the Komunisti newspaper's printing house, but the poem "Akaki Tsereteli" is missing, which was supposed to be delivered to the press by Zakaria Papukashvili. Galaktion learns about this from him and is forced to take the poem to the printing house himself. He is outraged that the person responsible for overseeing the printing and binding process has shown negligence, and that it will take a week to correct the mistake caused by this oversight.

Source: MGL, d-238, p. 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 524.

1949

July 1

He speaks with the editor of the sixth volume, Grigol Abashidze, who informs him that he will be leaving for Likani on July 2 for five days.

Source: MGL, d-238, p. 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 524.

1949

July 1

He reads Gerasime Pirtskhalava's article about Beso Zhghenti in the Komunisti newspaper and agrees with his view that Beso Zhghenti is an opportunistic critic. However, he believes that the author of the article, the Communist Party member Pirtskhalava, is melancholic, just like all other Georgian critics: Shalva Dadiani, Eremia Astvatsaturvor, Beso Zhghenti, Giorgi Abzianidze, Levan Asatiani, especially Giorgi Natroshvili, and Simon Chikovani. He notes that the article on melancholy in the encyclopaedia is well-written and recalls the Book by Russian Futurist poet Aleksei Kruchyonykh, "Malokholiya v kapote" ("Melancholy in a Cloak"). In its title, the term малохольный is combined with melancholy, referring to something abnormal, weak, foolish, or strange, often with connotations of eccentricity and deviation.

Source: MGL, d-238, p. 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 524.

Note: The source does not mention the names of Astvatsaturvor and Abzianidze, and Kruchyonykh is mentioned only by last name. The title of Kruchyonykh's book is incorrectly written. The correct title is "Малохолия в кукле" ("Melancholy in a Doll").

1949

July 1

He begins the construction of a garage, which excites him, and in his notebook, he writes that this is his first practical venture.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 23; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 498.

1949

July 1 or later

At the request of his cousin, Simon Tabidze, he contacts Viktor Kupradze. He explains that his cousin's daughter, Zeinab Tabidze, was deducted a grade in mathematics, causing her to lose her gold medal, and asks that the rights of a gold medalist be extended to her when taking the entrance exams for higher education. Viktor Kupradze agrees to meet the girl.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 23; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 498, 499.

1949

July 1

He arrives in Mtskheta to rest.

Source: MGL, d-240, p. 1; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 528.

1949

July 2

He sits in the café “Metro” on Lenin Street, which he calls “Café Rachunika”. In his notebook, he writes that marble is much more durable than paper, comparing their properties. He concludes that marble is immortal and expresses interest in the properties of Georgian marble.

Source: MGL, d-239, p. 8; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 526.

Note: Lenin Street is currently Merab Kostava Street.

1949

After July 2

He reads the Book “Poetry of Georgia”, published in Russian. He makes underlines and notes. Next to the table of contents, he notes that the poems were translated by 41 translators and alphabetically lists 44 poets whose works were not included in the publication.

Source: GTSM, 133, Поэзия Грузии, Moscow-Leningrad, 1949.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on July 2, 1949.

1949

After July 2

He meets Mikheil Chikovani, who tells him that he provided the folkloric material for the compilers of the anthology of Georgian poetry published in Russian. However, despite this, he is neither mentioned among the compilers nor has he received any honorarium. In Mikheil Chikovani’s opinion, all of this is part of Simon Chikovani’s tricks. He informs Galaktion that after the book’s distribution, a discussion of the anthology is planned at the Academy of Sciences. Galaktion believes that the discussion will not take place anytime soon, as the Book is only being distributed to the authors. He thinks the publishers are hesitant about something and are concealing the anthology from the broader public. He recalls what his nephew, Nodar Tabidze, said about the Book being sold at the university that the copies were quickly sold out.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-469, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 270.

1949

After July 2

The State Publishing House of the Soviet Union, Khudozhestvennaya Literatura, under the editorial work of Viktor Goltsev and Simon Chikovani, publishes the Book “Georgian Poetry” in Russian, which includes the works of other Georgian poets, alongside Galaktion’s poems: “The Mountains of Guria”, “I and the Night”, “Blue Horses”, “When the Evening...”, “Lenin”, “The Song of Rejuvenated Georgia”, “Abkhazia”, “May Day”, “Henri Barbusse at the Anti-Fascist Congress”, “In the Mountains”, “On the Thirtieth Anniversary of October”, and “Oath”.

Source: Поэзия Грузии, Москва-Ленинград, “Художественная литература”, 1949, p. 432-442.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on July 2, 1949.

1949

July 5

He starts building a garage.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516.

1949

July 7

Teacher Nikoloz Jibladze visits him and informs him that a meeting with the pioneers and students will take place with him on July 17 at 7 o'clock at the Plekhanov Club.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516.

1949

July 10

He is in Mtskheta. He checks the newspapers received from July 1 to July 9: Pravda, Izvestia, Komsomolskaya Pravda, Literaturnaya Gazeta, Uchitelskaya Gazeta, Molodoy Stalinetz, Zarya Vostoka, Komunisti, Literatura da Khelovneba, Sakhalkho Ganatleba, and Akhalgazrda Komunisti. He notes that one issue of Izvestia is missing, but all other newspapers were received in full, and three newspapers were even received in excess. He is curious as to why the daily newspapers are received on different days.

Source: MGL, d-240, p. 1; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 528, 529.

1949

Until July 14

He reads Anatoly Miller's Book "Essays on the Recent History of Turkey", making highlights. On the flyleaf of the book, he writes that a meeting with students should be organized at the Plekhanov Club. He is also interested in whether Party member Nikoloz Jibladze has any connection to Giorgi Jibladze. He writes down the list of speakers for the event to be held on July 17: Kale Bobokhidze, Vera Shubladze, Andro Tevzadze, Mariam Garikuli, Iona Vakeli, Iliia Khoshtaria, and Ana Ghviniashvili. He considers it necessary to invite all writers and the young pioneers from his yard at №4 Marjanishvili Street so that the event turns into a demonstration and a celebration. He fears that he might not have enough time since he also needs to prepare himself, and he is unsure whether the event organizers fully understand whom they are meeting.

Source: MGL, t-357, A. Ф. Миллер, Очерки новейшей истории Турции, Moscow-Leningrad, 1948;

1949

July 16

The construction and painting of his garage are completed.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516.

1949

Until July 17

In his notebook, he writes that on July 17, a literary circle will hold a meeting at the Children's and Students' Rest and Culture Park in Tbilisi, which will be attended by medal-winning Russian children. The organizer of the meeting is Nikoloz Jibladze, with whom Galaktion discusses the theses of the report, posters, and programs.

Source: MGL, d-233, p. 27; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 499.

1949

July 17

The meeting with the pioneers and students takes place with him at 7 o'clock in the Culture Park.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516.

1949

July 19

He submits a request to the chairman of the Mtskheta district council, stating that he wishes to settle in Mtskheta and asks for assistance in building a house.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-181; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 118.

1949

July 21

Galaktion Tabidze's poem "To Great Stalin" is published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, translated by Georgy Kreytan.

Source: Великому Сталину (Стих) Г. Табидзе, Перевел Г. Крейтан, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1949, 21 июля, №249, с.2.

1949

July 22

His wife, Nino Kvirikadze, falls ill.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

1949

July 23

He walks around the Mtskheta market and notes interesting sentences he hears in his notebook.

Source: MGL, d-241, p. 1; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

1949

July 23

He wants Nikoloz Marr's former students to tell him what Marr was like during lectures. He thinks that some materials on this subject can be found in Nikoloz Marr's Book "Iapetic Seminars". He recalls that Marr's former students are Varlam Dondua and Karpes Dondua.

Source: MGL, d-241, p. 1; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

1949

July 23

He travels by bus in Mtskheta, which stops in front of the garden of Ilia Mrevlishvili, located by the bank of the Mtkvari River. He gets off to visit the garden, which is full of fruit trees, a sight he greatly enjoys. He recalls how, from the riverside, the Russians arrived by boat and damaged the branches of the cherry trees.

Source: MGL, d-241, p. 1; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

1949

July 23

He recalls seeing the painting “Mtskhetoba” at the Pushkin exhibition, where a pipe-player is depicted, being listened to by peasants. He doesn’t remember the artist’s name and plans to find out by asking the director of the Tbilisi State Historical-Ethnographic Museum, Nikoloz Badriashvili.

Source: MGL, d-241, p. 1; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

Note: In the source, Nikoloz Badriashvili is mentioned only by last name. The author of the painting “Mtskhetoba” is Mose Toidze.

1949

July 23

While walking in Mtskheta, he recalls a folk poem about Arsen Marabdeli and writes one line in his notebook: “Arsena will return, like an ox, he will snort”.

Source: MGL, d-241, p. 1; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 533.

1949

July 23

In Mtskheta, Galaktion’s wife, Nino Kvirikadze, develops a fever. Prior to this, her daughter, Nino Ebanidze, had been ill with the flu.

Source: MGL, d-241, p. 1; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 533.

1949

July 23

In Mtskheta, at 8 Stalin Street, where Galaktion had rented a summer cottage, he meets two women, one of whom has been injured by an aggressive ox. Galaktion talks to these women and then to the ox’s owner, an old collective farmer, who leads the ox with its mouth bound and rope wrapped around its horns. The old man tells him that no one but him can handle the ox, as it is very stubborn and hostile, particularly toward intellectuals, women, and children. He refuses to slaughter it because it is a working animal, but he can’t sell it either, as everyone knows about its intolerable behaviour. Nino Kvirikadze is frightened by the old man’s account and speaks with the housewife to clarify the details. In response, the housewife tells a story of another, even more aggressive ox, which had attacked workers building the new road in Mtskheta and nearly killed one of them.

Source: MGL, d-241, p. 2-4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 533.

Note: In Mtskheta, the former Stalin Street is now named after Konstantine Gamsakhurdia.

1949

July 27

The board of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia requests the chairman of the Mtskheta District Executive Committee to allocate a residential plot in Mtskheta for Galaktion Tabidze for individual construction.

Source: MGL, WUF №27.

Note: The chairman's surname is indicated as Javakhishvili.

1949

July 29

He submits a request to the Stalin district housing department, stating that in his apartment located at 4 Marjanishvili Street, the ceiling of the kitchen and bathroom has been washed away and collapsed due to water leaking from the upper floors, and items have been damaged. He requests appropriate action.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-182; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 118.

1949

July 29

His wife, Nino Kvirikadze, is hospitalized. They suspect she has typhus, but it turns out to be an inflammation.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

1949

Until July 31

He begins working on an untitled poem starting with the line "In the eyes, a delicate glow of the sky flickers". Initially, he writes the title as "Child on the First of May", then changes it to "May and the Children".

Source: MGL, d-242, p. 1, 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 534-536.

Note: The work is a version of the poem "The Future", which the author did not publish during his lifetime.

Dating: It is dated based on the subsequent entry in the notebook.

1949

Until July 31

In the notebook, he writes a phrase that Nino Kvirikadze's mother, Ekaterine Gvinjilia-Kvirikadze, said to her granddaughter, Nino Ebanidze: "Oh, how fast you are!" He then notes the meaning of the foreign word: (pots-motovebuli) – fast. He connects it with the word (motor) and begins writing a poem titled “Motto”.

Source: MGL, d-242, p. 5; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 536.

Note: In the source, Ekaterine Gvinjilia-Kvirikadze is referred to as Nunu’s grandmother.

Dating: It is dated based on the subsequent entry in the notebook.

1949

Until July 31

He is composing a poem dedicated to Pierre Kobakhidze, which he plans to write in the Book he intends to give him as a gift.

Source: MGL, d-242, p. 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 536.

Dating: It is dated based on the subsequent entry in the notebook.

1949

July 31

Due to a malfunctioning iron, the electrical wiring in the house catches fire. He is concerned and writes this incident in his notebook.

Source: MGL, d-242, p. 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 537.

1949

July 31

He goes to the hospital.

Source: MGL, d-242, p. 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 537.

August

1949

August 11 or earlier

Doctors diagnose his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, with disseminated subacute pulmonary tuberculosis and prescribe the medication streptomycin, which is unavailable.

Source: MGL, d-243, p. 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 538.

Note: “Disseminated” refers to the disease having multiple foci of various sizes, shapes, and densities.

Dating: The entry is dated according to the next dated entry.

1949

August 11

Galaktion goes to the First Deputy Chairman of the Council of Ministers of the Georgian SSR, Zakaria Ketskhoveli, to find streptomycin for his wife, Nino Kvirikadze. However, he does not meet him at the office. Galaktion writes a request for the medicine and leaves it in the reception.

Source: MGL, d-243, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 538.

Note: Zakaria Ketskhoveli (brother of Niko Ketskhoveli) is referred to by initials in the source.

1949

After August 11

To find tuberculosis medicine for his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, Galaktion meets Zakaria Ketskhoveli, the First Deputy Chairman of the Council of Ministers of the Georgian SSR, who advises his wife to obtain a ticket for treatment in Tsemi, Kechkhobi, or Gagra.

Source: MGL, d-243, p. 5; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 538.

Note: In his autobiographical essay, Niko Ketskhoveli writes that their last name originates from Kechkhobi.

1949

After August 11

In the notebook's verso, he writes for the bibliography about a publication from March 8, 1948, in the newspaper Norchi Lenineli, which features a photo of him and Ilia Peradze, a teacher and educator of many generations.

Source: MGL, d-243, p. 1; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 537, 538.

Note: The source incorrectly indicates the date of the newspaper publication. The publication in the newspaper Norchi Lenineli was actually published on March 18.

Dating: The date is based on the earliest entry recorded in the notebook.

1949

Until August 13

He reads the poster for a literary evening, which is scheduled to take place on August 13th at 9 o'clock at the Voroshilov Club for Medical Workers. He writes this information, along with the names of the speakers, in his notebook.

Source: MGL, d-243, p. 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 538, 539.

1949

Until August 13

In his notebook, he writes that the worth of his poetry translations is largely determined by the quality of the poems themselves, because "gold is gold, even in mud". He also notes a quote from Leo Tolstoy, who said that Lermontov's poem "Borodino" gave him the impulse to write the enormous novel "War and Peace".

Source: MGL, d-243, p. 7; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 539.

Note: The titles of Mikhail Lermontov's poem and Leo Tolstoy's novel are not mentioned in the source.

Dating: The entry is dated according to the next dated entry.

1949

Until August 13

In his notebook, he writes that he is the founder of the publication of poetry in cycles in Georgian literature and lists his books in which poems are published as cycles. He believes that if criticism does not recognize this fact and deviates from this path, it will be false, unacceptable, misleading, and will lead into a dead-end.

Source: MGL, d-243, p. 9-15; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 539-541.

Dating: It is dated according to the previous dated entry in the same notebook.

1949

August 15

In order to request a sanatorium ticket for his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, he waits for a long time for the Minister of Health, Alexandre Khelidze, and writes a one-stanza poem titled “To Khelidze” in his notebook.

Source: MGL, d-243, p. 8; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 539. AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 539;

1949

August 17 or later

Nino Kvirikadze is in Tbilisi’s First Hospital with a diagnosis of military tuberculosis. Galaktion does not leave her side, and Doctor Alexandre Tzulukidze is compelled to set up a writing desk in the ward. While there, the poet writes two short poems for his wife.

Source: N. Salaghaia, “You are still the only one, Nino...,” Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 389; N. Ebanoidze, Recollections about Galaktion, Tskhvediani, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 395-396.

Note: The title of one of the poems, “The Slope”, is mentioned in another memoir, and we date it based on the time it was written.

1949

August 17 or later

Upon returning from the basketball sports competition in Moscow, Galaktion proudly tells his stepdaughter, Nunu Ebanoidze, that his mother, Nino Kvirikadze, was snatched from the clutches of death and reads him the poem “The Slope”, which was written in the hospital.

Source: N. Ebanoidze, Recollections about Galaktion, Tskhvediani, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 395-396.

Dating: It is dated according to the time the poem was written.

1949

Until August 18

In Avlabari, he overhears a conversation between two women. One asks the other about the identity of the writer who just passed by, and the other responds, “They say he is a fortune teller”.

Source: MGL, d-243, p. 16; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 541; For dating: It is dated according to the following entry in the same notebook.

1949

August 18

He sends a telegram addressed to the director of the “Abkhazia” Hotel in Sokhumi, requesting that a room be reserved for August 21, as he plans to arrive and stay at the hotel with his wife. He signs it as Academician Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: MGL, d-243, p. 18; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 541.

1949

August 19

In his notebook, he notes that he needs to go to the doctor the next day.

Source: MGL, d-243, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 538.

1949

August 20

At one o'clock, he goes to his appointment with Doctor Dzidziguri. He sits in the waiting room, noting down the conversations of the patients: one patient asks another their age and remarks that at 60 years old, they are already beyond the boundary of life, no longer part of their circle, and belong to Peter and Paul, referring to the apostles. The other patient recounts that ants had swarmed him, one even crawling up to his chest, but he did not kill it; instead, he picked it up and set it down gently.

Source: MGL, d-243, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 538. For noting: The name of Dr. Dzidziguri could not be identified.

1949

August 20

His wife, Nino Kvirikadze, is discharged from the hospital.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

1949

August 20

At midnight, he travels to Sokhumi with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

1949

August 21

He arrives in Sokhumi with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, and settles in the “Abkhazia” Hotel.

Source: MGL, d-243, p. 18; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 541.

1949

August 23

He goes to the Abkhaz Regional Committee of the Communist Party to meet with Akaki Mgeladze, the First Secretary of the Communist Party of the Georgian SSR's Sokhumi City

Committee and the Abkhaz Regional Committee, in order to obtain a permit to build a house in Sokhumi.

Source: MGL, d-236, p. 14.

1949

Until August 26

He writes a poem titled “Akaki and Ilia by the Seaside”.

Source: MGL, d-236, p. 1; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 509, 510;

1949

Until August 26

In his office notebook, he makes a note titled “The Arrogant Tatar Walks in the Yard Like a Rooster”, which relates to the history of the poem “A Broken-off Balcony”.

Source: MGL, d-236, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 510, 511;

1949

26 August

In Sokhumi, at the “Gantiadi” Hotel, he writes an untitled poem “I love the rain of Abkhazia...”.

Source: MGL, d-236, p. 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 511;

1949

After August 26

In his office notebook, he attaches individual sheets from Sokhumi, containing notes: the poem “I Love the Rain of Abkhazia”, fragments of poems “The Sea Has Roared! The Sunny Sea Has Roared” and “The Sea Has Roared – A Breeze Blows from the Black Sea”, an incomplete translation of Maksim Tank’s poem “The Poet’s Word”, as well as an autograph of the untitled poem by Shalva Kashmadze, “When You Cross the Likhi Mountains”. Along with these, he also pins phone numbers written on separate sheets and various other notes.

Source: MGL, d-236, p. 3-8; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 511- 513;

1949

After August 26

He visits an art exhibition in Sokhumi. He writes down the titles of the paintings and the techniques used in the exhibited works, noting only Ucha Japaridze as the artist.

Source: MGL, d-236, p. 10-11; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 513- 514;

1949

After August 26

In 1948, he makes a sketch on the cover of the poetry collection “The Breath of the Sea” by Khuta Berulava, published by the Abkhazian State Publishing House.

Source: MGL, d-236, p. 9; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 513- 514;

1949

After August 26

He writes a poem in Russian dedicated to Avetik Isakyan.

Source: MGL, d-236, p. 12; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 514;

1949

After August 26

In the office notebook where he collects materials on the topic of Abkhazia, he attaches the cover of the 1949 poetry collection “Abkhazia” by Murman Lebanidze, published by the Abkhazian State Publishing House.

Source: MGL, d-236, p. 13;

1949

After August 26

In the office notebook where he collects materials on the topic of Abkhazia, he attaches a pass issued on August 23, 1949, for a meeting with Akaki Mgeladze, the First Secretary of the Communist Party of the Georgian SSR’s Sokhumi City Committee and the Abkhazian Regional Committee, at the Abkhazian Communist Party’s Regional Committee.

Source: MGL, d-236, p. 14;

1949

After August 26

He writes a poem titled “That Brotherly Peoples Do Not Want War”.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 563;

1949

August

He dedicates a one-stanza humorous poem titled “To Gogi” to Giorgi Chikobava.

Source: MGL, d-472, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

1949

August

He writes an untitled two-line poem “Geronti Gerontini Trembles”.

Source: MGL, d-476, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 312.

Note: The poem is likely dedicated to Geronti Kikodze.

September

1949

September 19

He visits the Sokhumi Botanical Garden with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze.

Source: Sokhumi Botanical Garden tickets, MGL, d-236, p. 16; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516.

1949

After September 19

In his office notebook, he attaches an excerpt from a condolence notice published in the newspaper by the Writers' Union, mourning the death of writer Giorgi Shatberashvili's father, Ivane Shatberashvili.

Source: MGL, d-236, p. 15; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516.

1949

After September 19

He begins writing a memoir about the poplar fence with thorny branches that separated the houses of his neighbours in Chkvishi, noting that no passage was provided for connecting the neighbours to each other.

Source: MGL, d-236, p. 20; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516.

Note: The entry is dated according to the latest dated document attached in the notebook.

1949

After September 19

In his office notebook, he attaches a wrapper from a children's chocolate candy, featuring an image of a child and a parrot.

Source: MGL, d-236, p. 20; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516.

Note: The entry is dated according to the latest dated document attached in the notebook.

1949

After September 19

In his office notebook, he attaches a newspaper excerpt about the trial of Hitler's army field marshal, Manstein.

Source: MGL, d-236, p. 21;

Note: The entry is dated according to the latest dated document attached in the notebook.

1949

September 21

He plans to collect everything written about trees and create a work in which all the stories of trees will be connected to one tree. He believes that this method will condense the emotion. It reminds him of his poem "Peach Blossoms".

Source: MGL, d-244, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 542.

1949

September 22

He believes that his portraits are the best and most hope-giving. He recalls the names of the artists and sculptors who have painted or sculpted him, or who have designed the covers of his books. These include: Iakob Nikoladze, Ucha Japaridze, Barbara Bebutashvili-Gabunia, Grigol Meskhi,

Davit Kutateladze, Davit Gvelesiani, Korneli Sanadze, Gogi Toidze, Silovan Kakabadze, Valerian Sidamon-Eristavi, Irakli Topadze, Vasili Krotkov, Theodor Chudetsky, Ioseb Sharlemani, Anatoly Yar-Kravchenko, Davit Kakabadze, Eteri Andronikashvili, Konstantine Khutsishvili, Kote Kavtaradze, Davit Tsereteli, Sergei Sudeikin, and Lado Gudiasvili.

Source: MGL, d-244, p. 3-5; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 542.

Note: In the source, Barbara Bebutashvili-Gabunia is referred to as Vava Gabunia, and Grigol Meskhi, Davit Kutateladze, Davit Gvelesiani, Korneli Sanadze, Gogi Toidze, Irakli Topadze, Vasili Krotkov, Theodor Chudetsky, Davit Kakabadze, Davit Tsereteli, Sergei Sudeikin, and Lado Gudiasvili are mentioned by their initials and last names. Valerian Sidamon-Eristavi, Konstantine Khutsishvili, and Kote Kavtaradze are mentioned only by their last names. Anatoly Yar-Kravchenko is noted as the “author of Volume VI”. Davit Kakabadze’s wife, artist Eteri Andronikashvili, is referred to as Kakabadze’s princess.

1949

September 22

He reviews the project for a house to be built in Sokhumi. In his diary, he notes that it will be either Galaktion’s villa or Nino’s cottage. He writes that there is a project for a small two-story, five-room house, with the lower floor made of stone or brick, and the upper floor made of chestnut wood.

Source: MGL, d-244, p. 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 542.

1949

September 22

He is enchanted by the rainbow that appeared in the western sky of Sokhumi after the rain at 7 a.m., watching it for a long time. He believes it is a wondrous sight and a harbinger of good things to come.

Source: MGL, d-244, p. 7; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 542.

1949

September 22 or later

In his diary, he writes that the Book by Ioseb Grishashvili has recently been released, and this information has already been published in Zarya Vostoka and Literaturnaya Gazeta. He believes that his sixth volume and Grishashvili’s Book should complement each other. He writes about his views on Ioseb Grishashvili and recalls their meeting in 1908.

Source: MGL, d-244, p. 15-25; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 544-548.

Dating: The text is placed after the entry dated September 22.

1949

September 22 or later

He recalls an episode from the Leningrad siege, when the engineer instructed a worker to replace a broken window with plywood. The worker, however, stood motionless for a long time, holding a pinch-bar in his hand. The engineer became afraid, wondering if the worker was planning to kill him. The worker then threw the pinch-bar and killed a huge rat.

Source: MGL, d-244, p. 8-14; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 543, 544.

Dating: The text is placed after the entry dated September 22.

1949

September 22 or later

He recalls that during World War II, when the Germans bombed Sokhumi, 45 houses were destroyed. In 1947, while touring the city with Khukhuti Bghazhba, he saw one of these destroyed houses and wrote the poem “The Destroyed House in Sokhumi”. He is very interested in hearing stories about the bombings from that time. He notes that there are no longer any destroyed houses in Sokhumi, as they have been replaced by new buildings. The Germans mainly bombed ships, but some shells hit the city’s buildings. He compares how quickly the sea erases the traces of a bombed and sunken ship, while it takes much longer for a city on land to return to its former appearance. He believes that caves and natural shelters should receive special attention, and that a park should be opened on the adjacent ridge. He also thinks that these caves could house a permanent exhibition titled “Georgian Writers in the Patriotic War”.

Source: MGL, d-244, p. 8-14; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 543, 544.

Dating: The text is placed after the entry dated September 22.

1949

September 22 or later

He writes separate lines for the poem “To Pushkin”.

Source: MGL, d-246, p. 1- 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 566, 567;

1949

September 22 or later

In his notebook, he notes that he has lost the Georgian originals of his six poems that were translated into Russian. He lists the titles of these poems and their translators: “Two Shores”, translated by Panteleimon Petrenko, “To the Liberated Brothers – Ukrainians and Belarusians”, “May Day”, translated by Boris Brik, “About John Reed”, and “Companion”, translated by Dmitri Streltsov.

Source: MGL, d-246, p. 1- 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 566, 567;

1949

September 22 or later

He writes a press release for publication, informing about the release of the sixth volume of his works.

Source: MGL, d-246, p. 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 567;

1949

September 22 or later

He writes the address of Akaki Gatsserelia.

Source: MGL, d-246, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 567;

1949

September 22 or later

He begins preparing materials for the seventh volume of his works, writing the titles of poems, a list of poems written recently, and notes for their revision. He plans to edit the poems and works from the collection “Gold in the Azure of Adjara” for inclusion in the seventh volume.

Source: MGL, d-246, p. 5-11; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 567-570;

1949

September 22 or later

In his notebook, he writes the address and phone number of the neurologist E. D. Demurova-Shaginyan.

Source: MGL, d-246, p. 11; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 570;

1949

September 22 or later

He believes that Ioseb Grishashvili’s poem “The Fox and the Crab” is autobiographical and reflects the author’s writing style. Therefore, he thinks everyone should pay special attention to this poem. According to the poem-fable, the fox challenges the crab to a race. The crab uses a trick, clinging to the fox’s tail and making it carry him the entire distance. Finally, when the fox shakes its tail, the crab jumps off, faces the fox, and says, “I’ve been here for a long time; I’ve outpaced you”.

Source: MGL, d-246, p. 11; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 570;

1949

September 22 or later

In his notebook, he angrily writes a phrase from Ioseb Grishashvili’s poem, containing an entire passage taken from him.

Source: MGL, d-246, p. 11; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 570-571;

1949

September 22 or later

In his notebook, he writes a statement by Akaki Tsereteli about him: “You ask me – who do I like in contemporary literature? I will answer: Vazha-Pshavela and Tsakheli, and among the younger ones – Galaktion Tabidze. He brings a tremendous novelty to our poetry”.

Source: MGL, d-246, p. 12; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 571;

1949

September 22 or later

In his notebook, he writes the address of Ioseb Imedashvili.

Source: MGL, d-246, p. 13; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 571;

1949

September 22 or later

He writes a letter to the President of the Academy of Sciences, Niko Muskhelishvili, attaching a copy of the decree from the Central Executive Committee of All Georgia, dated June 21, 1933. The decree states the following: 1. Galaktion Tabidze is granted the title of National Poet, 2. The Social Security Commissariat is tasked with assigning him a personal pension, 3. The Public Supply Commissariat is tasked with providing him with special supplies, 4. The Health Commissariat is tasked with sending him to a resort for the entire season, 5. The State Publishing House is tasked with publishing the complete academic collection of his works. The decree is signed by Committee Chairman Philip Makharadze and Committee Secretary Tengiz Zhghenti.

Source: MGL, d-246, p. 14; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 571;

1949

After September 22

He begins writing a poem titled “Half a Century, 1950” in his notebook.

Source: MGL, d-244, p. 26, 27; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 548, 549.

Dating: The text is placed after an entry dated September 22nd.

Note: The poem was not published during Galaktion Tabidze’s lifetime.

1949

After September 22

In the notebook, he writes a lengthy funagoria dedicated to Irakli Abashidze, titled “The Wandering Monument”, with the subtitle “Irakli”, and separately writes rhymes for this poem.

Source: MGL, d-244, p. 28-36, 43-50; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 549-553, 555-557.

Dating: The text is placed after the entry dated September 22.

Note: The poem was not published during Galaktion Tabidze’s lifetime.

1949

After September 22

In the notebook, he begins writing a poem titled “No to Slavish Labour”.

Source: MGL, d-244, p. 38; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 553.

Dating: The text is placed after an entry dated September 22.

Note: The poem was not published during Galaktion Tabidze’s lifetime.

1949

After September 22

In the notebook, he writes a poem titled “My Table in Shovi”.

Source: MGL, d-244, p. 39; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 554.

Dating: The text is placed after the entry dated September 22.

Note: The poem was not published during Galaktion Tabidze's lifetime.

1949

After September 22

In the notebook, he writes a poem titled "Let the Lezginka Play".

Source: MGL, d-244, p. 50; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 557.

Note: The poem was not published during Galaktion Tabidze's lifetime.

Dating: The text is placed after the entry dated September 22.

1949

September 23 or earlier

He is in Sokhumi and reads Alexander Olenich-Gneneko's book "In the Mountains of the Caucasus". He makes underlines and notes.

Source: MGL, t-600, A. Оленич-Гнененко, "В горах Кавказа", Moscow, 1949.

Dating: At the end of the book, he dates the poem "Who Can Count the Light in the Sky...", written in Sokhumi, as September 23, 1949.

1949

September 23

In Sokhumi, he writes an untitled poem "Who can count the light in the sky...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, t-600, A. Оленич-Гнененко, "В горах Кавказа", Moscow, 1949.

1949

September 23

In Sokhumi, he writes an untitled poem "Sakhokia, I wish...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, t-600, A. Оленич-Гнененко, "В горах Кавказа", Moscow, 1949.

1949

September 23

In Sokhumi, he writes an untitled poem "Holding a roulette in hand...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, t-600, A. Оленич-Гнененко, "В горах Кавказа", Moscow, 1949.

1949

September 27

In the evening, a meeting of the Presidium of the Sokhumi City Council is held, which approves the allocation of a plot of land on Mount Cherniavski for Galaktion Tabidze's construction.

Source: MGL, d-245, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 558.

1949

September 27

In the notebook, he writes the address and phone numbers of Leonid Gvatua, the head of the Sokhumi district.

Source: MGL, d-245, p. 1; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 558.

1949

September 27

In the notebook, he writes the address and phone number of Zurab Tavartkiladze, the chief architect of Sokhumi.

Source: MGL, d-245, p. 5; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 560.

1949

September 27

He writes in the notebook that the architect will come to him early in the morning.

Source: MGL, d-245, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 558.

1949

September 27

He plans to negotiate with Akaki Mgeladze, the first secretary of the Sokhumi City Committee, to have the construction of his house assigned to Sokhumsheni.

Source: MGL, d-245, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 558.

1949

September 28

He writes in the notebook the phone number of the architectural department of Sokhumi. He dreams of having a two-story house in Sokhumi, in Georgian style, with a Svan or other more traditional tower. In this regard, he mentions Michelangelo's idea of height, his own letter dedicated to Iakob Nikoladze, and his poems "In the Mountains" and "Talk About Lyricism". He recalls lines from the poem "The West trembles, the sea turns red". He thinks that it is not necessary to follow the convention, like Beso Zhghenti did when he selected his poem, of saying "Good night" in the morning and "Good morning" in the evening, as is common in the Writers' Union. He believes that, if one wants to focus on the future, a person should wish a peaceful evening in the morning and a peaceful morning in the evening. He then imagines what beautiful women from Gulripshi, Guria, and Mingrelia might think if you wish them a peaceful evening in the morning. He concludes that the fate of all innovators is similar and recalls the trial of Galileo Galilei.

Source: MGL, d-245, p. 3,4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 558, 559.

Note: In the source, Michelangelo Buonarroti is referred to by his first name, Beso Zhghenti is mentioned by his last name and initial, and Galileo Galilei is mentioned only by his last name.

1949

September 28

He writes in the notebook that his friend, the artist Davit Gvelesiani, has passed away and was buried in the Peter and Paul Cemetery.

Source: MGL, d-245, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 558, 559.

1949September 28

He writes rhymes and individual phrases.

Source: MGL, d-245, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 558, 559.

1949September 28

He goes to the Executive Committee of the Sokhumi City Council with the deputies to meet with Alexandre Chogovadze, who offers a ready-made standard design for the house and will charge all costs at cost price. He only adds 0.5 percent to hire an engineer to supervise the construction. Galaktion is doubtful about the standard project, but he likes that it is ready and that no time will be wasted.

Source: MGL, d-245, p. 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 560.

1949September 28

He receives an excerpt from the minutes of the session of the Executive Committee of the Sokhumi City Council of the Autonomous Republic of Abkhazia, which states that a plot of land of 600 square meters will be allocated from the land plot №385 of the Free Land Repository in the Sokhumi Mountain District №6 to Galaktion Tabidze, the National Writer of Georgia, living in Sokhumi. The resolution is signed by: Acting Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Sokhumi City Council, A. Zhvania, and Responsible Secretary of the Executive Committee of the Sokhumi City Council, K. Kharatashvili. The accuracy of the excerpt is verified by Alexandre Chogovadze.

Source: MGL, d-245, p. 7; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 560.

1949September 28

He goes with Zurab Tavartkiladze, the chief architect of Sokhumi, to coordinate the house project with Shota Getia, the second secretary of the Abkhazian Regional Committee.

Source: MGL, d-245, p. 5; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 560.

1949September 28

In the notebook, he writes that the width of the land plot allocated for his house in Sokhumi is 15 meters, while the neighbours' plots – Bokuchava's is 24 meters, and the general's is 2 ½ meters.

Source: MGL, d-244, p. 1; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 541.

Dating: It is dated according to the MGL D-245 records.

1949

September 28

A request for a loan to build a house is submitted to the Acting Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Sokhumi City Council, A. Zhvania. They promise that his request will be granted.

Source: MGL, d-245, p. 7; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 560.

1949

September 29

He submits a request to the Chairman of the Sokhumi City Council, A. Zhvania. He writes that with his own funds and a long-term loan taken from the communal bank, he wishes to build a five-room house with a kitchen in Sokhumi according to their engineering department's project, and requests the maximum loan amount available for workers of his category.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-183; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 118-119.

1949

September 30

He goes to meet with Leonid Gvatua, the head of Sokhummsheni, but Gvatua is away on a site inspection for coastal protection works. The employees of Sokhummsheni show him the construction project for his house and the land documents. On the same day, he meets with Alexandre Chogovadze and the author of the project.

Source: MGL, d-245, p. 8; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 561.

1949

September 30

He writes a request to the State Planning Committee of Georgia, asking for the allocation of iron materials needed for the construction of his house from the non-planned fund.

Source: MGL, d-245, p. 9, 10; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 561.

1949

September 30

He addresses the Ministry of Construction Production with a request for the Kaspi Cement Factory to allocate one wagon of cement, exceeding the plan, for the construction of his house.

Source: MGL, d-245, p. 9, 10; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 561.

1949

September 30

He learns that a Russian general will be living next to his house under construction, but the general plans to move elsewhere in a year or two.

Source: MGL, d-245, p. 11; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 562.

1949

After September 30

He buys 4 tickets for the economy class carriage to return to Tbilisi by train.

Source: MGL, d-245, p. 11; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 562.

October

1949

October 7

In Sokhumi, Sergo Datuashvili dedicates him a one-stanza poem.

Source: MGL, d-236, p. 22; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516.

1949

After October 7

In Sokhumi, he buys “Mimoza” photographic paper.

Source: Photographic paper “Mimosa” packaging, MGL, d-236, p. 24;

1949

After October 7

He writes a poem about Irakli Abashidze.

Source: MGL, d-236, p. 25; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

Note: The entry is dated according to the last dated document placed into the notebook.

1949

October 29

He submits a request to the State Publishing House of Georgia, asking for the inclusion of the publication of the seventh volume of his works in the plan for the following year, 1950.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-184; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 119.

November

1949

November 2

Besarion Zhghenti’s book “Contemporary Georgian Literature” is being printed, which includes an essay dedicated to Galaktion. The critic repeats the views expressed in his earlier works regarding Galaktion’s poetry.

Source: B. Zhghenti, “Contemporary Georgian Literature”, I, 1949, p. 404-428.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on November 2, 1949.

1949

November 6

A translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "To the Homeland, To October" is published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka.

Source: Родине, Октябрю (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1949, 6 ноября, №219, с.1.

1949

November 18

During his visit to the family of writer Mariam Garikuli, Galaktion, impressed by the melodies played on the piano by his daughter-in-law Guliko (Ketevan) Metreveli-Ratiani and his niece Margarita Tserodze, dedicates them an impromptu: "You were playing, you were singing...".

Source: A. Ratiani, Recollections about Galaktion, Magazine Mnatobi, 1996, № 9-10, p. 133.

1949

Until November 23

In the notebook, he writes the beginning of Alexandre Dumas' novel "The Count of Monte Cristo", in which the island of Rioni is mentioned.

Source: MGL, d-246, p. 1-4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 562, 563;

1949

November 23 and onwards

He writes a poem titled "1950".

Source: MGL, d-246, p. 8; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 563, 564;

1949

After November 23

He is ill, has a high fever, and cannot work.

Source: MGL, d-246, p. 9; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 564;

1949

After November 23

He sends a letter to the editorial office of the newspaper Zarya Vostoka. He informs them that due to a severe illness, he is unable to write or dictate a text to anyone. Therefore, he requests that this issue of the newspaper be published without his letter.

Source: MGL, d-246, p. 9; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 564;

1949

After November 23

He works on an untitled poem titled "The Forests, the Meadow, and the Hill".

Source: MGL, d-246, p. 9; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 564;

Note: The poem was not published during Galaktion Tabidze's lifetime.

1949

November 25

He receives an order for hospitalization at Aramiants's Hospital.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

December

1949

December 3

Grigol Orakhelashvili, who is writing Galaktion's biography against the backdrop of historical events in the country, leaves the next chapter of the work, "Cultural Revolution," with the letter. He informs that another chapter, "Collectivization of Agriculture," is still unfinished. He complains that, along with correcting students' notebooks at school, he is burdened with numerous public affairs. Since others are also working on Galaktion's life and work, he does not want his own chapters and subchapters to be used by others and asks Galaktion not to tell anyone. He plans to visit Galaktion next Saturday at 12 o'clock and consult with him about what needs to be corrected in the already written chapters.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-84-g; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 314.

1949

December 3

Grigol Orakhelashvili, who is writing Galaktion's biography against the backdrop of historical events in the country, leaves the next chapter of his work, "Cultural Revolution," with the letter. He informs that another chapter, "Collectivization of Agriculture," is still unfinished. He complains that, along with correcting students' notebooks at school, he is burdened with numerous public duties. Since others are also working on Galaktion's life and work, he does not want his own chapters and subchapters to be used by others and asks Galaktion not to tell anyone. He plans to visit Galaktion next Saturday at 12 o'clock and consult with him about what needs to be corrected in the already written chapters.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-84-g; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 314.

1949

December 5

A translation by Georgy Kreytan of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Teacher, Leader, Creator of Victories", dedicated to Joseph Stalin's 70th anniversary, is published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka.

Source: Учитель, Вождь, творец побед (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. Г. Крейтана, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1949, 5 декабря, №238.

1949

December 5 or later

In his diary, he notes that the publication of the list of committee members formed for the celebration of Stalin's 70th anniversary coincided with the publication in the newspaper Zarya Vostoka of his translation of the poem dedicated to Stalin, which made a strong impression on the public. He writes that people were talking about the poem in the editorial office of Zarya Vostoka, in the Writers' Union, in theatres, and even private individuals discussed it. He is pleased that he was the first to express words in the tone of a national poet, words that others will follow, and he believes that it is good to seize the initiative, as it always ends in victory.

Source: MGL, d-246, p. 2, 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 565.

1949

December 5 or later

In the notebook, he notes that Akaki Tsereteli's translator, Vakhtang Eristavi, received the first prize from the newspaper "Zarya Vostoka" for his translation of Baratashvili's "Pegasus".

Source: MGL, d-246, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 565.

Note: It is dated according to the previous entry in the notebook.

1949

December 13

In the notebook, he writes that he participated in the discussion held at the Central Committee of the Party and writes down the names of the other participants.

Source: MGL, d-246, p. 4; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 565, 566.

1949

After December 13

In the notebook, he notes that he must go to the Pioneers' Palace and the Writers' Union.

Source: MGL, d-246, p. 7; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 566.

1949

December 14

He sends a dispatch to the economist of the Sokhumi City Council's communal department, Alexandre Chogovadze. He asks for an urgent update on the status of the funds transfer and construction matters. He also sends greetings from his wife, Nino Kvirikadze.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-230; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 76.

1949

December 15

A meeting with him is organized at the Fourth Women's School.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

1949

After December 15

In the Russian anthology “To Great Stalin”, translations of Galaktion Tabidze’s poems are published: Georgy Kreytan’s “To Great Stalin”, “To the Homeland, to October”, and “Teacher, Leader, Creator of Victories”; Vladimir Derzhavin’s “My Native Land!”; Alexander Kochetkov’s “Glory to Stalin”; and Boris Serebryakov’s “They Are with Him”.

Source: Collection “Великому Сталину”, ред.: А. Абашели, Б. Жгенти, М. Златкин, С. Чиковани, Тбилиси, 1949, p. 205-218.

Note: The Russian titles of the mentioned poems are: “Великому Сталину”, “Земля моя родная”, “Слава Сталину”, “Родине, Октябрю”, “Учитель, вождь, творец побед”, “Все будет, будет”.

1949

December 19

He is invited to a meeting by the literary circle of the Pioneer branch.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

1949

Until December 20

The editorial board of the magazine Mnatobi is being changed, and Galaktion Tabidze, who had been a member since the magazine’s founding, is removed from the board.

Source: magazine Mnatobi, 1949, №11, p. 2.

Dating: It is dated according to the release time of the magazine’s eleventh issue.

1949

Until December 21

He writes a poem “From the Beginning with Devotion”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №314-315; №699; №700; №2316; №2402; №3988; №4077; №5797; №5800-5804; №5813; №1847; №8364; G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 158; For dating and clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 595.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Preface”; “Comrades,” and without a title, with different beginnings: “Comrades! Whoever I trusted with devotion from the beginning...”; “Do not scatter the delicate roses of May...”; “Youth! Trust with determination...”; “In every stormy moment – trust...”; “In every storm or hurricane...”; “Youth! Trust with determination...”; “From the very beginning with devotion...”; “From the beginning with devotion...”.

1949

December 21

A translation by Georgy Kreytan of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “To the Great Stalin” is published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka.

Source: Великому Сталину (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. Г. Крейтан, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1949, 21 декабря, №249.

1949

December 21

A translation by Georgy Kreytan of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "To the Great Stalin" is published in the Russian newspaper Molodoy Stalinets.

Source: Великому Сталину (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. Г. Крейтан, Молодой сталинец, Тбилиси, 1949, 21 декабря, №148.

1949

December 21

A translation by Georgy Kreytan of Galaktion Tabidze's poems "Teacher, Leader, Creator of Victories", dedicated to Joseph Stalin's 70th anniversary, is published in the Russian newspaper Sovetskaya Abkhazia.

Source: Учитель, вождь, творец побед (Стихи), Г. Табидзе, Пер. Г. Крейтан, Советская Абхазия, Сухуми, 1949, 21 декабря, №250.

1949

December 22

He goes to Gori.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

1949

After December 22

In the magazine Mnatobi, he reads the poetic address "To the Great Leader of the Peoples, Our Native Stalin", which was adopted at the solemn plenum of the Board of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia, held in Gori on December 22, 1949. He underlines the rhymes and lines, noting that they have been taken from his work.

Source: MGL, t-582. Magazine Mnatobi, 1949, December, №12, p. 9-12.

1949

After December 22

In the magazine Mnatobi, signed by Galaktion Tabidze – National Poet of Georgia, the poem "On the 70th Anniversary of Stalin" is published.

Source: G. Tabidze, "To Stalin", magazine Mnatobi, 1949, №12, p. 13-14;

1949

After December 26

He receives a reply from his future Russian-language translations Book editor, Igor Postupalsky, from Moscow. Regarding the translations of Balmont, he writes that he could not find these translations, but the main editorial team still considered their use unnecessary and untimely. He writes that due to illness and family circumstances, Galaktion was almost unavailable throughout the year, and because the book's preparation time was strictly determined, the editorial team had to rely on the editor's – meaning his – opinion in the selection of translators and translations, as well as in compiling the book. Thanks to this decision, the Book is already ready, has been approved by the reviewers of the translators' council, and is being printed. It is expected to be published in February. The addressee is confident that this edition will be much more complete and of much higher quality in terms of translations and design. Regarding sending Galaktion the hard copies of the book, Alexandra Ryabinina informs that, according to the decision of the main publishing and printing department, authors are no longer sent hard copies. She also informs that the book's volume is smaller than initially planned, but it is still a substantial volume and not just a booklet, and she does not rule out that the publishing house will soon plan the publication of a more complete collection. Since the Book is already at the printing house, adding new material is impossible, but if Galaktion wishes and sends new word-for-word translations to the addressee, they will certainly be used in periodicals for translation publications or for a new collection. Since this edition is already completed, she suggests considering new perspectives. In the publishing house Zarya Vostoka, the poetry department is headed by Besarion Zhghenti, who attaches great importance to Galaktion's work, and it would be good if a large volume of his Russian translations were published in 1951 for the anniversary of Soviet Georgia, as the poet wished, with 15,000 lines. The addressee believes that it would be preferable not to include everything that has been translated, but to focus on quality. Postupalsky believes that a large collection of Galaktion's works should definitely be published by the publishing house "Soviet Writer" as well. He advises that he speak promptly with the chief editor of this publishing house, Anatoli Tarasenko. He writes that if no other editor has been selected, the addressee can take on the editorial work for both of these editions. At the end of the letter, he kindly asks him to send his Georgian-language volumes and publications, as he plans to write a Book on Galaktion's works with the help of certain people. He advises that if he does not have these books at home and needs to find them in bookstores or publishing houses, he should ask for help.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-69; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 307-309.

1949

December 27

He returns from Gori.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

1949

December 31

A translation by Boris Serebryakov of an excerpt from Galaktion Tabidze's poem "It will be, it will be..." is published in the Russian newspaper Molodoy Stalinets.

Source: Это будет, будет... (Отрывок) Г. Табидзе, Пер. Б. Серебряков, Молодой сталинец, Тбилиси, 1949, 31 декабря, №152.

1949

The poet dedicates another impromptu poem, "There is, Utandar, a land..." to Utandar Ratiani, the grandson of the writer Mariam Garikuli, who lived nearby and to whom he had dedicated a poem titled "To Utandar" in November 1947. While composing the new poem, the poet first writes the final stanza and then creates the opening section of the poem.

Source: A. Ratiani, Recollections about Galaktion, Magazine Mnatobi, 1996, № 9-10, p. 133-134;
For clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 557.

1949

He walks in Saguramo with two grey-haired women when he meets Mukhran Matchavariani and warmly kisses him.

Source: M. Matchavariani, one meeting, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 233.

1949

An anthology titled “Georgian Poetry”, edited by Viktor Goltsev and Simon Chikovani, is published in Moscow and Leningrad in the Russian language, which includes poems by Galaktion Tabidze. The Book is artistically designed by Irakli Toidze and includes a brief bibliography of Russian translations of Georgian poets’ works.

Source: Поэзия Грузии, Антология, Ред. В. Гольцев и С. Чиковани; Примеч. В. Гольцева Груз. поэты в рус. переводах: (Краткая библиогр.) В. Гольцев, Ил.: И. Тоидзе, Москва; Ленинград. Гослитиздат, 1949.

1949

Korneli Sanadze draws another portrait of Galaktion Tabidze in pencil.

Source: O. Egadze, The poet’s image in the artist’s work, magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba, 1965, N 11, p. 71.

1949

He makes a note about Leo Kiacheli. He notes to investigate whether the village Kiachi actually exists; if it does, what connection it has to Leon Shengelaia; where the writer was actually born; why he did not choose the name of his real birthplace as his pseudonym; whether there is a religious undercurrent in Kiacheli’s work; what connection Kiacheli has with Simon Chikovani; and mentions that most writers of Mingrelian origin tend to be mystics.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-603, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 25.

1949

He writes a one-stanza poem titled “This Year and Many Fifteenth Mays”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-603, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 25.

1949

He writes a poem “To Ilia” (“Ilia, the Great Patriarch of Our Literature...”).

Source: Autograph, MGL, №1960; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 194; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 800.

1949

He writes an untitled poem “Behold, This Book with Which We...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 195; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 800.

1949

He writes an untitled poem “It Was Nine Hundred Nine, the Opera Seemed...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №51; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 195; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 800.

1949

He writes a poem “Logograph” (“It Stands with Five Parts...”).

Source: Autograph, MGL, №113-a, 8073; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 197; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 801.

1949

He reads the Calendar of the Georgian Church, making highlights and notes.

Source: GTSM, 156, Calendar of the Georgian Church for 1949, Tbilisi, 1949.

1949

He reads Mitrophan Laghidze’s book “The Production of High-Quality Fruit Waters in Georgia”, making highlights and notes.

Source: GTSM, 221, M. Laghidze, “The Production of High-Quality Fruit Waters in Georgia”, Tbilisi, 1949.

End of 1940s

Under the leadership of Tina Jibladze, an unofficial literary salon called the “Blue Evenings” is established, which is often dedicated to reading Galaktion Tabidze’s poems and discussing his poetry.

Source: A. Khintibidze, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 314.

1949 or later

He underlines the lines and title “Ketevan Iremadze” in Ioseb Noneshvili’s poetry collection “After the Storm”. On the title page, he writes that he is interested in which storm is being referred to, noting that after the Great Patriotic War, Ilya Ehrenburg wrote the Book “The Storm” (“Буря”). He thinks that this word has become outdated and is not fully adequate to convey the period. He mentions that he also used “storm” for the 1905 revolution, but that was in the past.

Source: MGL, t-191, Ioseb Noneshvili, “After the Storm”, Tbilisi, 1949, p. 5-8, 12, 126.

1949 or later

He writes an epigram dedicated to Ilo Mosashvili “Though You Remained Without a Car, Ilo...”.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 634;

1949 or later

He writes an untitled humorous poem “Hauptmann’s ‘The Sunken Bell’...”.

Source: MGL, d-625, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 193;

1949 or later

He notes that there is always a sense of dullness at the Writers’ Union whenever discussions revolve around literary creativity. The atmosphere only livens up when the conversation shifts to topics like honorariums, business trips, editorial appointments, award nominations, and similar matters. Galaktion expresses his surprise at how the writers manage to tolerate one another.

Source: MGL, d-625, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 193;

1949 or later

He reads Lev Tolstoy’s Book “Childhood. Boyhood. Youth” in Russian. He highlights passages and makes notes.

Source: GTSM, 164, Л. Н. Толстой, “Детство, отрочество и юность”, Moscow, 1949.

1949 or later

He reads the Book “Our Sea”, compiled by Elizaveta Vishnevskaya, making highlights and notes, and on the table of contents, he writes: “Only Sea”. He notes the artistic elements he likes - the blue colour of the cover and spine, the first page with sailing ships, the line at the beginning of texts and the anchor at the end, as well as the reproductions included in the book.

Source: MGL, t-360, Е. Д. Вишневская, “Наше Море”, Moscow, 1949.

1949 or later

At the end of Elizaveta Vishnevskaya’s compiled Book “Our Sea”, he writes that ethyl gasoline is a poison, should not come into contact with the body, as it can intoxicate the organism through the skin. The careless use of this gasoline is life-threatening; a vehicle driver must be well aware of the sanitary regulations regarding its storage, transportation, and use, which are published at all oil depots and gasoline dispensing stations.

Source: MGL, t-360, Е. Д. Вишневская, “Наше Море”, Moscow, 1949.

Until 1950

He writes an untitled poem “The Poison and Rust of the Poor Poet...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №6400; №4482; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 200; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 802.

Note: The poem is also found untitled with a different opening line (“The Poison and Rust of Poor Verlaine...”).

Until 1950

He writes a poem “Intervention” (“Whether It’s a Peaceful Village or a Mighty City...”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5362, 5365; №4407; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 201; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 802.

Until 1950

He writes an untitled poem “All Day, the Rain’s Net Hung...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №7809; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 202; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 802.

Note: The poem is also found untitled with a different opening line (“The Rain’s Net Began to Fall...”).

Until 1950

He writes an untitled poem “Like a Fairytale Beauty...”.

Source: MGL, Sh. Radiani’s manuscript, №28897-50, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 207; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 803.

Until 1950

He writes an untitled poem “Your Devotion by the Sea, Brother...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2513; №2040; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 213; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 805.

Until 1950

He writes a poem “By Boat – Toward Immortality” (“Who Will Speak to Me in a Foreign Word?..”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3528; №4777; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 216; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 806.

1950

Until 1950

He writes a poem titled “Portrait” (“The moments were dizzying...”).

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book XX, Galaktion Tabidze’s record, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 72.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1950 or earlier

He is editing the poem “Kolkhida”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №313.

Dating: The poem, with the changes included in this version, was published in 1950 in the seventh volume of the writer’s collected works.

1950s

Summer

He is resting in Tskhneti with Nino Kvirikadze and her grandchildren, Marina Pirtskhalava and Zurab Ebanoidze. They are walking in the forest and making an herbarium.

Source: N. Salaghaia, “You are still the only one, Nino...,” Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 391;

1950s

An evening is held at the Polytechnic Institute, and they lay his favourite yellow roses at his feet. Galaktion is pleased, but when a young speaker divides his work into two periods – before and after the revolution – Galaktion cannot contain himself and corrects him, saying, “I never had two periods, I am not a Symbolist”.

Source: I. Kukava, From the archive of memory, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 405.

January

1950

January 1

An excerpt from Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “New Year’s Song” is published in the Russian newspaper Za Bolshevitski Port”.

Source: Песня нового года (Стихи) Отрывок, Г. Табидзе, За большевистский порт, Потн, 1950, 1 января, №1.

1950

January 1

Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Forward!” is published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka in translation.

Source: Вперед! (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1950, 1 января, №1.

1950

After January 1

He notes the idea expressed in the editorial of the January 1, 1950 issue of the French magazine Les Temps Nouveaux, which states that the first half of the century is coming to an end - a period unparalleled in history in terms of the magnitude of events and social transformations.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-590, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 477.

1950

January 14

He writes a short satirical stanza: “The great with a great tale / Stands with a sack filled with cotton”.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 518.

1950

After January 17

The Russian newspaper Pravda quotes passages from Mikhail Bubenov's critical article about Valentin Kataev's new novel "For the Soviet Authorities". Bubenov attempts to criticize the renowned writer from an ideological perspective.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-249, 3-4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 7-8.

1950

After January 17

In his diary, he makes a note about the series of lectures delivered by Niko Marr in 1924, titled "The Pyrenean Guria".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-249, 3-4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 8.

1950

January 19

Ioseb Megrelidze gifts Niko Marr's Russian Book "The Georgian Language" with the inscription: "With the deepest respect to the dear Galaktion Tabidze, with love from the publisher, I. Megrelidze".

Source: GTSM, 243, Н. Марр, "Грузинский Язык", Staliniri, 1949.

1950

After January 19

He reads Niko Marr's Russian Book "The Georgian Language", making highlights and a sketch.

Source: GTSM, 243, Н. Марр, "Грузинский Язык", Staliniri, 1949.

1950

Until January 27

In his diary, he writes down Imeretian sayings, a proverb, and a phrase by William Shakespeare: "Man, man! False and treacherous".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 249, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 8.

Dating: The entry is placed before the January 27, 1950, entry in the notebook.

1950

January 27

In the notebook, he writes the text of an old song: "I love the rose, I love the iris...".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 249, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 9.

1950

January 27

In the notebook, he writes the fable "The Eagle and the Crow" from Alexander Pushkin's novel "The Captain's Daughter". In the fable, the crow advises the eagle to eat carrion like it, promising a long life, but the eagle realizes it cannot live by eating carrion.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 249, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 11.

1950

January 25

He is admitted for treatment at the Cardiology Institute.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-249, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 15.

1950

January 25

While receiving treatment at the Cardiology Institute, he makes a note in his notebook about the patients and medical staff.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-249, 30; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 19.

1950

January 27

In his notebook, he explains the term "electroencephalography".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-249, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 9.

1950

January 25 or later

In his notebook, he writes an excerpt in Russian from the article "G. N. Leonidze's Creative Evening" published in Literaturnaya Gazeta, specifically a phrase by the celebrant, Giorgi Leonidze, in which he thanks Joseph Stalin for granting the right to write to the people.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-249, 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 14.

1950

After January 27

In his notebook, he writes a phrase from "The Tale of the Beggar": "You told me the way!?! Here, I have given up the way, the way of peace!"

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-249, 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 9.

Dating: The text is placed after the entry dated January 27th.

1950

January 31

He writes a prose sketch titled "Cylinder on the Sea". He recalls how once, in Abkhazia, a poetry evening was almost ruined by a torrential rain. In response, Vasil Arabidze remarks that this was nothing compared to what happened to the actors. Kote Meskhi had planned a celebratory performance in Abkhazia, and the troupe was taken there by boat. He had entrusted his cylinder to David Mgaloblishvili, but during the storm, the cylinder fell into the water. The torrential rain ruined the anniversary celebration, which was supposed to be a source of income for the actor. Vasil Arabidze compares the turbulent life of the artist to a cylinder playing on the sea.

Source: MGL, d-626, 32; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 233.

February

1950

Until February 5

He writes a poem “The Forgotten Guest” (“Similar to the sources of the mad...”).

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 249, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 11-12.

Dating: It is recorded before the February 5, 1950 entry in the notebook.

1950

Until February 5

He notes instances of inappropriate and distorted use of foreign words in conversational speech.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 249, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 12.

Dating: It is placed before the entry dated February 5, 1950, in the notebook.

1950

Until February 5

He is told about a dialogue between a student of the noblemen’s gymnasium, Mitusha Eristavi, and his father, which he writes in the notebook. Mitusha had been assigned to write a composition by Silovan Khundadze but had been procrastinating and left the task for the last minute. In response, his father told him, “Start writing on time, or are you Galaktion Tabidze, that inspiration might strike you in one night and you’ll write “I and the Night?”

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 249, p. 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 13.

Dating: The entry is placed before the February 5, 1950, entry in the notebook.

1950

February 5

While receiving treatment at the Cardiology Institute, he writes an untitled poem: “I remember that hellish Barbarian...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-249, 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 13-14.

1950

January 20 – February 9

During Galaktion’s hospitalization, his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, receives a salary of three thousand roubles from the Academy. She gets three gold teeth, buys a dress, and sends their daughter on a trip to the Baltic coast. After Galaktion is discharged from the hospital, he only inquires whether Nino had enough money to buy firewood.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 249, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 15.

1950

Until February 9

While receiving treatment at the Institute of Cardiology, he learns that his doctor, Vakhtang Litanishvili, writes poetry and asks him to read his poetic works. The doctor agrees and brings his own poems to be read to him.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. XII, Tbilisi, 1975, p. 735-736.

1950

February 9

Dissatisfied with the negligence of the doctors, he discharges from the Cardiology Institute.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-249, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 15.

1950

February 12

He takes his poems for printing to an inexperienced typesetter, who prints them cheaply, at 2 roubles per page, but makes many mistakes in the process. He concludes that one should not choose a typesetter based on low cost and that, in general, anything that is cheap is of poor quality.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-251, 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 36.

1950

After February 13

In the magazine Mnatobi, the content of its 1949 issues is published, which shows that throughout the year, only one poem by Galaktion was printed, titled "To Stalin (on his 70th anniversary)".

Source: "The content of the 1949 issues of the magazine Mnatobi", magazine Mnatobi, 1950, №1, p. 195.

Dating: The magazine Mnatobi was signed for printing on February 13, 1950.

1950

February 14 or earlier

In his diary, he writes that the young poet Archil Sulakauri has several poems published in Mnatobi, and that people say he is a great enthusiast.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-250, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 20.

1950

February 14

He makes a note titled "How Kachalov Read My Poems," in which he recalls the declamatory mastery of actor Vasily Kachalov. According to Galaktion, as soon as his surname was announced, there was an extraordinary revival in the theater hall. The poet mentions that he will never forget the evening when the actor recited his poem "Everyone Has Something to Remember". Kachalov had the ability to reach the hearts of the audience, mesmerizing them with his unique lyricism. The actor made a particularly strong impression on the audience when reading the poem's finale, raising his voice. According to Galaktion, Kachalov read his poem "Oath" with the same passion, and it sounded like the ringing of a trembling sword. The poet emphasizes that he will never forget the artist's performing mastery.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-641, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 1090-111.

Note: Vasily Kachalov is referred to by his last name only in the record.

1950

February 14

On the tram, he meets his old acquaintance, the artist and architect Vladimir Tsilosani, and learns that he is building a large building directly in front of the Rustaveli monument. He remembers that it was Tsilosani who designed the cover of the magazine Mnatobi in 1924.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-250, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 20.

1950

After February 14

The Soviet Union celebrates its friendship with China with great fanfare. Sculptor Tamar Abakelia creates a "Friendship Cup", decorated with Georgian ornaments, which wins a competition dedicated to the event. The cup is made of crystal in China and is brought to Tbilisi by Tamar's husband, Karlo Kaladze, via airplane. To commemorate the occasion, the couple hosts a banquet at their summer residence in Tskhneti, where the Friendship Cup is displayed on a prestigious pedestal. Suddenly, the door opens, and the room full of guests is greeted by Galaktion, dressed in a raincoat, rubber boots, and a hat decorated with feathers. He looks over the elegantly dressed crowd, then at his own outfit, and with a puzzled expression, asks, "What am I doing here? But I must congratulate Tamariko and Karlo, right?" He slowly approaches the pedestal, takes the cup, it is filled with wine, he takes a sip, and suddenly the cup slips from his hand and crashes to the floor. The room gasps in shock, and Tamar Abakelia's heart sinks. In the eerie silence, only Galaktioni's voice is heard: "What did I want here?" as he disappears into the darkness.

Source: G. Abdaladze, Unknown, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 185 - 188.

Dating: The event is dated to the period following the signing of the Friendship Treaty between the Soviet Union and China.

1950

February 14-15

He notes in his diary that his spouse, Nino Kvirikadze, has a fever, and from 7 p.m. to the following morning at 9 a.m., he has had her temperature checked seven times. The diary records the readings, with the morning temperature being 37.1°C.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-250, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 20.

1950

February 15

He meets Shalva Mamaladze, the chairman of the Artists' Union, who talks about the events organized by the union. In response to Galaktion's suggestion to hold a poetry evening for him, Mamaladze promises to plan it for the spring.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-249, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 15 -16.

1950

February 15

In his notebook, he makes a note about how his evening at the Artists' Union should be organized. Specifically, he plans for 50 portraits of him, created by famous artists, based on photographs taken between 1900 and 1950.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-249, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 16.

1950

February 15

He goes to a female dentist named Shanidze at the Medical Center, who tells him that due to the delay in treatment, four of his teeth cannot be saved and will need to be extracted. Furthermore, nothing can be inserted in their place.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-250, 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 21, 24, 25.

Dating: It is evident from one of the entries that visits to the dentist began on February 15, and this entry is placed between the texts dated February 15 and 16.

1950

February 15

Twenty years after Vladimir Mayakovsky's suicide, he addresses him with the poem "Organized Persecution".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-250, 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 22.

Dating: The poem is placed between the entries of February 15th.

1950

February 15

Under the title "Student Life", Galaktion writes a lengthy entry about a young poets' anthology that the State University Press is planning to publish. He is particularly interested in understanding how well the youth have grasped the challenges of contemporary life and how they have managed to reflect it in their literature. He also wants to know which contemporary, progressive poet they are following. He wonders whether these young poets are entirely free and sincere in their expression or if they are influenced by someone or something. Galaktion acknowledges that his influence on young poets, and not only on them, is significant, but he fears that his colleagues will try to see this influence only in the weaker poets. He believes that if the circle of young poets is indeed led by Besarion Zhghenti, he, being an enemy of Galaktion, will try to separate him from the youth. For the poet, what matters most is what new ideas this generation brings. He recalls how he himself introduced a new spark through the almanacs "First Wave" and "Kolkhida" at the beginning of the century.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-250, 12-16; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 22-24.

Note: The conversation concerns the not-yet-published almanac "First Ray".

1950

February 15

He makes a note about Ivan Turgenev's attitude toward the then Prime Minister of France, Léon Gambetta, who appeared stern in photos from the early stage of his career but was always smiling in later ones. This transformation in his photographs reminds him of Vladimir Lenin.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-250, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 24-25.

Dating: The text appears among the entries dated February 15.

1950

February 15

In the street, he encounters a tipsy Varlam Zhuruli, who is speaking with students. Upon Galaktion's arrival, Zhuruli turns to the poet and says: "These are all your disciples".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-250, 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 24-25.

Dating: The text appears among the entries dated February 15.

1950

February 15 or later

He recalls Shalva Dadiani and Iona Vakeli's speeches at his creative evening in 1948 and makes a note to somehow obtain recordings of their performances.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-249, 26; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 18.

Dating: The text is placed in the notebook following the entry for February 15.

1950

February 15 or later

In his notebook, he writes about Polikarpe Kakabadze, highlighting his composure, intelligence, and diligence as personal qualities. He admires his play "Qvarkvare Tutaberi" and considers him one of the founders of modern Georgian drama.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 249, p. 25 G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 17.

Dating: It is placed in the notebook after the entry for February 15, 1950.

1950

February 16

It turns out that the female dentist, whose surname is Shanidze, knows Galaktion from Kutaisi and reminds him that she, along with ten other revolutionary girls from the diocesan school, participated in a gathering held in Sapichkhia in honour of Galaktion. The poet assumes this must have taken place in 1914.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-250, 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 22.

1950

February 16

He learns from Varlam Mikadze, the director of the Tbilisi University Press, that a collection of student works is being published, which includes poems by several followers of Galaktion's poetic school.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-250, 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 21.

Note: It is likely referring to the magazine "First Ray".

1950

After February 16

He underlines the lines from Murman Lebanidze's poetry collection.

Source: MGL, t-76, Murman Lebanidze, poems, Tbilisi, 1950, p. 3-5, 53.

1950

February 17

In his notebook, he writes down the honorariums from the past year and reports the amount of money deducted.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-249, 27; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 17-18.

1936-1950

Until February 19

He reads the memoirs of the French thinker and sociologist Saint-Simon.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-249, 28; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 18.

Dating: The information he reads in these memoirs is mentioned in the entry for February 19, 1950.

1950

February 19

He is running late and barely makes it to Ioseb Mchedlishvili's funeral. He recalls reading in Saint-Simon's memoirs that Duke Antonin de Lauzun also died of tongue cancer.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-249, 28; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 18.

1950

February 19

At Ioseb Mchedlishvili's funeral, he meets Beso Zhghenti. Beso tells him that for the anthology "Georgian Poetry" published the previous year in Moscow and Leningrad, he wrote an overview of modern Georgian poetry for the introduction, but his name was not included, and due to the small print run, he couldn't even get a copy of the book. Beso Zhghenti passes on Alexandra Ryabinina's words to Galaktion, saying that his Book will be published soon and will consist of 8,000 lines.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-249, 28; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 18.

Note: It is likely referring to the Book Табидзе Г. В. Избранные стихи... Москва, Гослитиздат, 1950.

1950

February 19

For the next day, he plans to visit the Federation to collect his honorarium and receive a copy of Beso Zhghenti's newly published Book as a gift. He also intends to pick up a certificate of Lenin's Order of Merit from the Executive Committee named after Stalin to present to the State Publishing House, as well as to visit the dentist.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-249, 29; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 18.

1950

After February 20

He makes highlights and comments in the published Georgian Language Explanatory Dictionary of the Academy of Sciences of the Georgian SSR.

Source: MGL, t-192, Georgian Language Explanatory Dictionary. Ed.: Arnold Chikobava, Tbilisi, 1950, p. 005-019, 025-030, 1-2, 19-20, 59-66, 277-278, 283-284, 569-578, 622, 956-958, 987-993, 1003

1950

February 22

He sends a letter to his treating doctor, Vakhtang Litanishvili, who had treated him at the Institute of Cardiology. He writes that he was pleased to read his poems. He apologizes for leaving the hospital without giving him the promised book. He promises that he will visit soon and read the poem they had discussed.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. XII, Tbilisi, 1975, p. 551.

1950

February 26

He writes two versions of the untitled poem "This Spring, Buba...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-251, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 28-29.

1950

Until February 27

He writes a poem "The Sands Remained".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №336; №8155; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 249.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "Toast," "The Sands Remained," and without a title, with the beginning: "That spring-filled cup...".

Dating: The poem is listed in the list of texts to be transcribed, prepared on February 27, 1950.

1950

February 12 - 27

He writes an untitled poem "Why Are They Fidgeting...".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 251, 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 37.

Dating: The entry is made between the entries for February 12 and February 27.

1950

February 27

In his notebook, he writes that Beno Chikobava will prepare his children's collection.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-251, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 33.

1950

February 27

He compiles a list of texts to be transcribed: "First of May" (a poem read at the Academy), "To Giorgi Kuchishvili" (both poems), "The Old Mountaineer", "On the Automobile" ("Sometimes there are holes..."), "Meeting in the Mountains", "By Stagecoach", "Inscription on an American Author's Book", "The Leaf rustled in the Forest", "Phasis", "The Sands Remain", "The Arrow from Shovi", "Oh, My Beautiful Heaven", "Let's Rise Higher", "For the Victory of Proletarian October", "The Little Lamb Led by Hand", "Look, What a Sky", "In Our Childhood Days", "The Happy Running of Children by the Sea", "Is it Day or Dark in the Forest?", "To a Friend Poet", "And the Giant of All Times", "The Nations", "The Renewal of Nature", "The Opening of the Rustaveli Monument", "Until Tomorrow", "Laziness, Leave Me Alone", "Autumn Is Coming", "Shota", "The Poet's Knee", and poems.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-251, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 33.

Note: The titles of the poems are not specified.

1950

Until February 28

He completes the printing of materials from the books "Gold in the Azure of Adjara" and "The Sea Has Roared". He compares the excerpts with the poem "Amirani" and finds poems to include in the seventh volume of his collected works: "The Leaf Rustle in the Forest", "A Sword Was Hidden in the Rock", "That One, That One Touch of the Breeze", "Nine February", "For an Hour, From Above, Below", "The Light", "The Mountain Was Covered", "Hidden Flags".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-251, 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 33.

1950

February 28

Nino Kvirikadze completes the printing of the materials for the seventh volume from the Book "Gold in the Azure of Adjara" and "The Sea Has Roared". The total is 2600 lines.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 518.

1950

February 28

He meets the artist Alexander Bazhbeuk-Melikyan, who invites him to his home, shows him his works, and introduces his sister. The elderly lady tells Galaktion that her mother knew Alexandre Kazbegi. Galaktion also learns that the host's daughter is studying at the Moscow Academy of Fine Arts. The poet likes the family, but he is deeply troubled by their living conditions. He cannot even imagine how an artist could paint in such a small room. When saying goodbye, the host gives him his painting “The Golden Maiden”. Upon returning home, Galaktion writes down these impressions in his notebook, concluding with the words: “We must help!”

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, d-250, 26; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 27.

March

1950

March 1

His wife, Nino Kvirikadze, congratulates him on the first day of spring and tells him about a dream she had. In the dream, Galaktion was so tall that he barely fit in the room and had bought boots for both himself and Nino. She remarks that it is a good omen. They recall that on this day, a price reduction on industrial goods has been announced. One after another, a milkmaid from Tskneti and a dairy vendor from Mukhrani come by. Neither has yet lowered the prices of their products, as they are waiting to see if the authorities will fulfil their promise and reduce the price of bread.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-250, 27-28; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 27-28.

1950

March 1

He continues working on the preparation of the seventh volume of his collected works and finds new verses to include in own poems.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-250, 27-28; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 27-28.

1950

March 1

He takes the tram to the dentist. The tram ticket price hasn’t been reduced yet, but there is a sign in the department store stating that all prices have been lowered. The dentist tells him that she has a ten-member family and that with these discounts, a thousand roubles a month will be saved.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-250, 27-28; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 27-28.

1950

March 1

He remembers and writes in his diary that in December 1949, the newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazia published his poem about Joseph Stalin on the front page.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-250, 29; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 28.

1950

After March 1

He receives a notification that he has been awarded the Lenin Order and is entitled to certain privileges, and immediately takes it to the State Publishing House.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-250, 30; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 27.

1950

March 3

He discovers that the list of previously unpublished poems in his volumes is missing “Twenty Years Ago” and “The Strong Disease”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-251, 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 32.

1950

March 3

He writes a poem “The Young Trees...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-251, 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 37;

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Inscription on a Book”.

1950

March 6

For the seventh volume of his works, he finds poems in old notebooks and compiles the following list: “The Roar of the Lion” (“In the Forest, Is it Day or Dark...”), “Negoreloe”, “The Happy Running of Children by the Sea”, “In Our Childhood, There Was Much”, “Look, What a Sky!”, “The Little Lamb Led by Hand”, “The Kremlin”, “The Teutons Tremble”, “The Paris Season”, “Now, Think Well”, “Now, Hesitation?”, “Lenin, Lenin!” (In Switzerland), “Protection of Ancient Monuments”, “Berlin”, “Abundant, Selfless”, “From Warsaw to Berlin, a Journey of Despair”, “In Montmartre, Your Eyes”, “In Versailles” (“You Were Resting, Witness to Many...”), “The Wind Will Cease. The Wind Will Cease”, and “From the Cabinet into the Masses”. He reflects that, had it not been for Shalva Radiani’s opposition, these texts would already have been published in the third volume of his works.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-251, 3-5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 30-31.

1950

March 6

For the seventh volume of his works, he compiles a list of poems from the Book “The Sea Has Roared” and indicates the page numbers. The list includes the following poems: “How Can I Not Love”, “Under That Shade”, “Guest”, “Where Else Is It?”, “Eucalyptus”, “Ornament”, “In the Rich Garden of Dreams”, “A River”, “Roses”, “Sharda Amta”, “Our Kodori”, “Somewhere”, “War Desires”, “Near Tkvarcheli”, “The Ruined House in Sokhumi”, “Today I Took It Down”, “The Idea of Genius Harmony”, “Eternal Glory to the Heroes”, “Restlessness Outside”, “The Poet and the Mass”, “The Glance of Meskhi”, “Noble Shota”, “Bold and Strong Hand”, “Ilia’s Motif”, “The Ninth Symphony”, “Loud Voice”, and he notes that they should be supplemented with “The Colour of the Lily”, “A New Page of History”, and “The Union of Hearts”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-251, 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 32.

1950

March 6

From the Book “Gold in the Azure of Adjara”, he selects the following poems to include in the seventh volume of his works: “Sunrise Over the Sea”, “Labour, with Science”, “Journey of Silver”, “Unsurmountable”, “Dream by the Adjaristskali”, “Symphony of Plants”, “The Fusion of Dreams and Reality”, “Nature – the Sculptor”, “Oh, Country, Please”, “Autumn Arrives”, “Woman in the Lemons”, “Move the Curtains”, “Our Old Flags”, and “Don’t Forget”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-251, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 32- 33.

1950

March 6

For the seventh volume of his works, he finds seven more poems and compiles the following list: “An Hour Has Passed”, “The Light of Rest Disperses”, “How Sweet Is Rest”, “A Sword Is Hidden in the Cliff”, “Hidden Flags”, “The Mountain Is Covered”, and “That Single Touch of the Breeze”. In the end, he notes the total number of lines in these poems.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-251, 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 34.

1950

March 6

He recounts the lines of the poem “1939” and determines that it consists of 580 lines, not 478.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-251, 23; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 35.

1950

After March 6

He writes an untitled poem “The Sound of Some Whisper...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 251, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 37.

Dating: The entry is made after the entries of March 6th.

1950

After March 6

In the diary, he writes about his former teacher, Phakadze, the calligraphy instructor, whose character strangely combined calmness with wrath and mercilessness.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 251, 25; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 38.

Dating: The entry is made after the entries of March 6th.

1950

After March 6

He writes an untitled poem “Shota was Wise...”, inspired by the words of Anton Katholikos about Shota Rustaveli.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 251, 27-28; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 39-40.

Dating: The entry is made after the entries of March 6th.

1950

After March 6

He recalls information he read in the newspapers of Kutaisi in 1911 about a successful woman living in America, with the surname Tabidze, and wonders how she might have ended up in America.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-251, 29; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 41.

Dating: With the same ink, there is an entry in the notebook made much earlier, on March 6th.

1950

After March 6

He reflects on Saint Nino, the Enlightener of the Georgians, believing that the groundwork for her work in Georgia had already been prepared.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 41.

Dating: With the same ink, there is an entry in the notebook made much earlier, on March 6th.

1950

March 24

He leaves the dairy shop near Vera Bridge feeling satisfied and in a good mood, walking along the shore towards the current Tamar Bridge, once known as the "Chelyuskin Bridge". He recalls an incident that happened years ago on this street: a peasant woman was carrying a basket with a chicken tied by its feet. The chicken managed to free its legs, suddenly flew up, and landed in someone's high-fenced yard. The woman circled the yard for a while, but couldn't retrieve the chicken and left empty-handed. Galaktion regrets that such misfortunes often befall the already struggling poor.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-252, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 41.

1950

After March 24

He writes an untitled poem "Let the edge of the mountain shine...".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 252, p. 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 46-47.

Dating: The entry was made after the March 24th entries.

April

1950

April 1 or later

He receives a letter from the son of the writer Daria Akhvlediani, Otar Akhvlediani, who is in the Rustavi colony. He informs that he has been sentenced to two years of imprisonment for losing his passport. He is suffering from hunger and unbearable conditions. He asks for a small amount of money to be sent if his mother Daria Akhvlediani's works have been published, or if they haven't been published, he requests poems to be sent, as someone promises to buy them. He asks for a response soon.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-251; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 315.

1950

April 6

Due to illness, he grants power of attorney to his nephew, Vasil Tabidze, to collect his salary from the Academy of Sciences.

Source: V. Javakhadze, “Unknown. Apology of Galaktion Tabidze”, Tbilisi, 2020, p. 154.

1950

April 18 or later

He receives a letter from the translator Elene Sheri. She is deeply disappointed that Galaktion’s first translator is no longer remembered by anyone. She has read in the newspaper that the publishing house Zarya Vostoka plans to publish Galaktion’s, Ioseb Grishashvili’s, and Valerian Gaprindashvili’s poems in Russian and has decided to contact Galaktion, as the most humble and noble person. She reminds the addressee that in the collection published by Zarya Vostoka in 1938, one-third of the material was translated by Elene Sheri herself. The addressee is very dissatisfied with the fact that her translations in that publication were printed with terrible mistakes, and she even negotiated for the re-publication of the poem “John Reed” that she had translated. Later, a version of this poem by Tsagareli was published, which Sheri believes is no better than hers. She asks if her translations of the poem “John Reed” and the poems “Mtatsminda,” “White Pelican,” and “Blue Horses” could be included in the new collection. She writes that her translation of “Blue Horses” was later translated by Antokolsky 12 or 15 years later, and a number of phrases were taken from her version. Sheri tells Galaktion how she lost her apartment eight years ago, how she is now living in someone’s shack under terrible conditions, and how her health has deteriorated severely. Because of this, she plans to move to Tskaltubo to live. Her pension is insufficient, and she asks if Galaktion could help her somehow with the publication of her translations. She suggests that he speak about this with the deputy chief editor of the publishing house Zarya Vostoka, Beso Zhghenti, or the secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party’s Agitation and Propaganda Department, Rostom Shaduri.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-458-8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 282-283.

1950

April 23

In his notebook, he writes that he can no longer find the letter from Elene Shervashidze, which was on his desk yesterday. He thinks that it might be a prank by his wife, Nino Kvirikadze.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-596, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

Note: In the entry, Nino Kvirikadze is referred to as “Kneina” (Princess).

1950

April 26

Together with Evgenov, Merab Klimiashvili, and Givi Gegelashvili, he spends a lot of time looking to purchase a car, and at three in the afternoon, he returns home with a new automobile.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-596, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

1950

April 26

He attends David Toradze's ballet "Gorda" at the Opera and Ballet Theatre. He is thrilled by certain scenes of the performance. During the ballet, Andro Tevzadze enters Galaktion's loge and tells him that all of his youth is by his side. The poet is greatly pleased by these words. However, he is not impressed by the libretto's author, Otar Egadze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-607, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 43-44.

1950

April 26

He tells Archil Sulakauri, who visits him, how he bought a car and how tiring all the trips were.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-596, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

1950

April 27

In his notebook, he notes that the issue of clothing and footwear needs to be resolved.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-596, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

May

1950

May 1

He plans to visit the public library to obtain the first printed texts of his individual works from periodicals; visit the state publishing house; deliver the seventh volume of his works to the printing house "Zarya Vostoka"; negotiate with the head of the printing house about the publication deadlines; obtain the stenogram of the latest plenary session of the Writers' Union; and accelerate the defence of Eteri Shushanashvili's dissertation.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-610, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 58-59.

1950

May 1

A poem "May is Coming" is published in the newspaper Avangardi.

Source: Newspaper Avangardi, 1950, №55, p. 1.

1950

May 1

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Peace and May" by Georgy Kreytan is published.

Source: Мир и Май (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Г. Крейтан, Заря востока, Тбилиси, 1950, 1 мая, №90.

1950

May 1

In the Russian newspaper Sovetskaya Abkhazia, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Greetings to May" ("How can I not praise my country.") by Boris Serebryakov is published.

Source: Сердце, пой! (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Советская Абхазия, Сухуми, 1950, 1 мая, №87.

1950

Until May 4

He plans the tasks to be completed on May 4. They include: to visit the State Publishing House (Sakhelgami) and the Writers' Union, buy newspapers, collect the official notice regarding the awarding of the Lenin Order, meet with Georgy Kreytan, go to the Academy of Sciences to collect his salary, and compare translations of his poems with the originals.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-610, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 61.

1950

May 4

He sends a letter to Korneli Kekelidze. He informs him that the addressee's former student, Eter Shushania, will defend her dissertation on Galaktion's work at the university in June and has a strong desire for Korneli Kekelidze to be the opponent. Galaktion recalls the historical evaluation of his work by the addressee at the opera theater and writes that it is also his great wish for Kekelidze to be his opponent.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-79; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 76-77.

1950

May 1-5

He writes a poem titled "For Peace".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-225, p. 5, 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 436, 437.

1950

Until May 5

He plans the tasks to be completed on May 5. They include: to go to the bathhouse, confirm the address of the State Literary Publishing House with Mark Zlatkin, visit the Writers' Union regarding the dacha issue, meet with Georgy Kreytan and Besarion Zhghenti, and return a Book to the Academy of Sciences library while borrowing a new one.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-610, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 61.

1950

May 5

He receives a certificate from the financial department of the Stalin district council of workers' deputies.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-187; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 119.

1950

May 5

He submits a request to the accounting department of the Moscow State Literary Publishing House. He sends a certificate taken from the financial department of the Stalin district council of workers' deputies and asks for the royalty for the Russian-language anthology "Georgian Poetry" to be transferred to the address: Tbilisi, Marjanishvili Street, №4.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-187; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 119.

1950

May 9

In the Russian newspaper Batumski Rabochi, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Our Victory" by Boris Serebryakov is published.

Source: Наша победа (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Батумский рабочий, Батуми, 1950, 9 мая, №91.

1950

After May 15

He makes highlights and comments in the collection "Literary Explorations" by the Academy of Sciences of Georgia. On the title page, He writes a poem "The Blackbird and the Partridge". In Grigol Kherkheulidze's article "The Poetry of Giorgi Leonidze," he pairs quotations with stanzas from his own poems, repeatedly noting that they are borrowed from him, Rustaveli, or the Bible. He also expresses the assumption that Grigol Kherkheulidze, Giorgi Leonidze, and Giorgi Abzianidze wrote the article together.

Source: MGL, t-70, collection "Literary Explorations", VI, Tbilisi, 1950, p. V-VIII, XXXII-XXXV, 35-39, 45-50, 186-221, 259, 270-271, 280.

1950

May 17

Dimitri Benashvili informs via telephone that the Tskhinvali Pedagogical Institute is hosting an evening of his poetry on April 20th, and he must attend.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 291, p. 21; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 325.

1950

May 20

From his apartment balcony, he sees a beautiful woman coming out of the large department store on Marjanishvili Street and feels a desire to meet her. He leaves his house and follows her. The woman heads to the bus station and boards a bus to Bolnisi. Galaktion asks the conductor to give him a seat next to her, and he follows the same bus. On the way, they introduce themselves. The woman turns out to be Eteri Maghradze, a distinguished beauty and educated woman from Bolnisi. The new acquaintances say goodbye to each other in the centre of Bolnisi. The woman goes home, and Galaktion heads to a restaurant. When leaving the restaurant, he injures his foot. The news quickly spreads through the district, and the district party committee gets involved. He is taken to the hospital, where they apply a bandage and attend to him carefully.

Source: Sh. Chakvetadze, “A Beautiful Woman”, “Galaktionology”, IX, 2022, p. 375. G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-254, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 51.

1950

May 24-28

He is transferred to Tbilisi, where the old bandage is removed and a new one is applied.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-254, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 51.

1950

Second half of May

He becomes aware of the student almanac “First Ray” published by Tbilisi State University and the information about this publication in the newspapers Komunisti and Zarya Vostoka.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-254, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 48.

1950

April-May

On a sheet of paper, he writes epigraphs for “Artistic Flowers” and adds a comment that he wanted to explain these quotes at a Writers’ Union plenary, where Simon Chikovani asserted his decadence. He points out that although these quotes are from symbolists, they are realistic, “slightly romantic in direction”.

Source: MGL, d-638, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 485.

1950

May

He makes a record of the expenses incurred during the illness.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-253, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 47.

1950

Spring

He travels by bus in the direction of Bagebi. A student sits beside him, who, upon recognizing Galaktion, leaps up in excitement. The poet perceives the reason for the young man’s astonishment and affectionately asks: “You recognized me, didn’t you, brother?” He then inquires whether the student reads his poetry. After receiving an affirmative answer, he states that, indeed, who else should the youth read if not Galaktion, for there is no other poet in Georgia. The astonished young man asks: “Why, isn’t Grishashvili a poet?” Galaktion responds discontentedly that Grishashvili is not even worth mentioning in comparison, and gets off at the university stop.

Source: J. Gvasalia, Galaktion Tabidze, collection “Faith”, Tbilisi, 1995, p. 11-12.

June

1950

June 1

He writes down Leon Nabatov’s phone number and four locations in Tbilisi: Vorontsov Monument, Griboyedov’s Tomb, City Hall, and Mtatsminda.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-254, 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 49.

1950

June 1 or earlier

They tell him about a discussion in one of the Writers’ Union circles regarding the student anthology “The First Ray”. They mention that someone, probably Simon Chikovani, said that the only outstanding figure in this journal is Archil Sulakauri, and he is the one sent from our side. Galaktion writes this account in his diary, adding that Archil Sulakauri is indeed a remarkable figure, but there are no fewer, if not more, refined poets in this anthology, such as Eter Basilashvili and others. In the poet’s view, some deliberately attempt to undermine the young poets who continue his line in poetry. Nonetheless, he believes that the student almanac has many supporters: students, the progressive intelligentsia, and the press. Galaktion is so intrigued by this discussion that he wishes to see the stenographic notes, if such a record exists.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-254, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 48.

Note: In the entry, instead of the almanac title “The First Ray”, it is written as “The New Ray”.

1950

June 4

He receives a bag and a letter from his nephew, Vasil Tabidze, at the hospital’s surgical department. The letter states that Nino Kvirikadze was unwell, which is why she could not visit. He wishes for a speedy recovery.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-441; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 247.

1950

June 7

He writes a miniature about a lefthanded boy.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-254, 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 51.

1950

June 7

They reopen the old plaster for the second time and apply a new layer once again.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-254, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 51.

1950

June 8 or later

He writes a poem "It is dawning, it has dawned".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 254, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 52.

Dating: The entry is made after the entries of June 8th.

1950

June 8 or later

He writes an untitled poem dedicated to Shota Rustaveli "To the generations that follow, for fate...".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 254, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 52.

Dating: The entry is made after the entries of June 8th.

1950

June 11 or later

He reads articles in issue 123 of the 1950 Zarya Vostoka newspaper, in which the renowned history of the Kutaisi State Academic Theatre is narrated and the contributions of the esteemed actor Lado (Vladimir) Meskhishvili are discussed.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 273, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 245.

1950

Until June 14

He writes an untitled poem beginning with "Renew, renew...".

Source: G. Tabidze's inscription on the Book cover, MGL, t-647, П. Хучуа, "Декада Советской Музыки Закавказских Республик", Tbilisi, 1948.

Dating: The poem was first published in Collected Works, Volume VII (Tbilisi, 1950, p. 8), which was signed for printing on September 14, 1950, p. 8.

1950

June 23

For the third time, they reopen the old plaster and apply a new layer.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-254, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 51.

1950

After June 26

He sends a Russian-language telegram to the address of the Bolshoi Theatre in Moscow, expressing his sorrow over the death of Antonina Vasilievna Nezhdanova.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-216, p. 35; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404;

1950

June

He writes an untitled poem “My reader asked me...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-254, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 48-49.

Note: Initially, the poem began with the words: “Once Akaki asked me...”.

1950

June

He edits the poem “Ucha and Biki” written in the notebook during August-September of 1948.

Source: MGL, d-216, p. 35; G. Tabidze, AE, §. XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404;

1950

June

His wife, Nino Kvirikadze, gifts him Vladimir Mezentsev’s Book with a Russian inscription: “To Gatunia, from Nino”.

Source: GTSM, 193, B. A. Мезенцев, “Ветер”, Moscow, 1948.

July

1950

July 3

He writes a children’s miniature about how a little boy used his ability to mimic animal sounds to prevent the cat from eating his breakfast.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-254, 7-8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 49-50.

1950

July 3

He signs the Stockholm appeal.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-254, 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 50.

1950

July 3 or later

He writes an untitled one-stanza poem “How could I not be reminded...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 254, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 50.

Dating: The entry is made after the entries of July 3rd.

1950

July 7

They reopen the plaster, prescribing the massages and baths.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-254, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 51;

1950

July 7

In the first half of the day, he gives the driver the Book to be passed to Beno Chikobava, and then waits for three hours in vain for the driver's return, hoping he would bring the doctor for medical procedures. It turns out that after delivering the book, the driver had gone somewhere and hadn't thought at all about the fact that Galaktion, after breaking his leg, could hardly walk properly.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-254, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 51;

1950

July 8

The driver asks for the car for an hour to take his cousin to the wedding, but he only returns at 4 a.m., drunk. Galaktion's insomnia and anxiety affect him so much that his whole body trembles. His wife, Nino Kvirikadze, takes the keys from the driver, scolds him for being late, and tells him that Galaktion will no longer lend the car.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-254, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 52.

1950

July 10

His step-daughter, Nunu Ebanoidze, asks to lend the car to the driver, Misha, for two hours, but he returns again at 4 a.m.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-254, 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 53.

1950

July 12

In the morning, the driver takes the surgeon, Meskhi, to Galaktion, and then returns the doctor afterward, disappearing until midday.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-254, 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 53.

1950

July 14

The driver takes the car to Saburtalo for washing and repairs, and only returns in the evening.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-254. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 53.

1950

July 16

In the morning, the driver tells him that the car has a part damaged due to "bumping around here and there". His audacious tone irritates Galaktion.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-254, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 54.

1950

After July 17

He underlines and makes notes on the stanzas of Aleko Shengelia's poetry collection "I Love". He writes that the poem "Native Feeling" is a well-thought-out and excellent poem.

Source: MGL, t-209, Aleko Shengelia, "I love", Sokhumi, 1950, p. 5, 8-9, 11-14, 18-19, 21-23, 28, 58, 60-61, 136.

1950

July 27

In the morning, at 10:25, he departs with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, in the "Pobeda" car, heading toward Kutaisi. They first stop in Mtskheta to visit a household, then pass through Saguramo and continue on the road toward Gori. The old car shakes a bit as they drive. They pass through the villages of Shavsheti and Ruisi, where they have breakfast at a collective farmer's land. The farmer complains that while the collective farm's land is large, part of the profits go to the collective farm's chairman and part to the clerk. They continue on their journey, passing through Urbnisi, Gomi, Osiauri, Khashuri, Surami, Khunevi, and Moliti. By 4 p.m., they reach Zestaponi and continue toward Kutaisi. He makes entries in his diary about this journey.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-255, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 54 -62.

August

1950

After August 1

He is on vacation and receives a letter sent from Tbilisi by Beno Chikobava. The letter informs him about the status of the publication of his seventh volume and the prospects for the publication of a new Russian-language collection by the Zarya Vostoka publishing house. It states that he picked up the first seven forms of the seventh volume from the editor Aniko Gvinishvili on July 27, made corrections, and returned them the next morning. On the current day, he was again at the editorial office to collect the rest of the material, but Gvinishvili told him that she still needed to review it and scheduled an appointment for August 5. Regarding the Russian-language collection, he writes that on July 29, he visited Mark Zlatkin, but he was out of Tbilisi and they couldn't meet. He visited again on the current day and was told that it would be ready in three days. He writes that as soon as he sees it, he will inform about the situation.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-247; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 317-318.

1950

August 7

He sends a dispatch to Beno Chikobava in Tbilisi.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-248; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 318-320.

Dating: This is mentioned in Beno Chikobava's letter dated August 7.

1950

After August 7

He is on vacation and receives a letter sent from Tbilisi by Beno Chikobava. The letter informs him that the remaining forms of Galaktion's seventh volume, including the table of contents, were handed over to Aniko Ghviniashvili on August 5, she corrected them, and returned them on the current morning. She mentions that there were quite a few mistakes. On August 5, he also met with Mark Zlatkin and handed over Galaktion's letter. The director of the Zarya Vostoka publishing house suggests publishing Soviet-era poems in a volume of that size. According to him, the Moscow edition is large, but they do not have the same resources. They plan to publish the Book in connection with the 30th anniversary of the establishment of Soviet power, and Beno Chikobava advises the addressee to write something about the Sovietization or the 30-year struggle of the Soviet people if he feels inclined. Chikobava asked Zlatkin to show the hard copies of the Moscow edition, but Zlatkin replied that Beso Zhghenti has them and suggested that he speak to him about the new edition. Chikobava met with Beso Zhghenti, who did not have the hard copies with him and promised to show them in two days, but told him that only a small portion would be useful for the new book. Mainly, new translations will be needed, and Russian poets will arrive in the fall to do the translations. Beno promised that he and Galaktion would select materials for the Book and submit them in a few days. He suggests that they present the poems selected for the one-volume edition. He also writes that it would be good to add some poems from the seventh volume to the texts they have selected for the one-volume edition. At the end of the letter, he asks if the addressee agrees to pass this material to Beso Zhghenti for selection, and urges him to send a dispatch urgently. He writes that nothing will be sent without the addressee's consent. Regarding the size of the book, he advises that he should request at least 3,000 lines.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-248; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 318-320.

1950

After August 16

He is on vacation and receives a letter sent from Tbilisi by Beno Chikobava. The letter states that he met with Beso Zhghenti the previous day, showed him the poems that he had selected with Galaktion for the one-volume edition, and that Zhghenti liked them very much. He mentions that a total of 70 poems were handed over, with more promised for submission. Zhghenti promised to make a selection from these poems in five days. Regarding the volume, Zhghenti himself suggested that it should be up to 4,000 lines. They decided that the material should be selected and the word-for-word translations prepared before the arrival of the Russian poets in the fall. Since the translations are being produced in Georgia, Galaktion will also be able to keep track of the progress. The letter further states that Beso reviewed the hard copies of the Moscow edition and that some of the translations are better than the older ones. The translators include Nikolai Tikhonov, Bugayevski, Mukhina Zviagintseva, Tsagareli, Postupalsky, and others. He writes that he plans to meet with Beso Zhghenti again on August 20-21, and if Galaktion agrees, the preparation of the word-for-word translations for the already selected poems can begin. He adds that work on the seventh volume is progressing well.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-327; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 320-321.

1950

August 17

He notes that Natchkebia, the head of the communal department of the Sokhumi Executive Committee, promised to summon the head of the repair office regarding the construction of the poet's summer house. He notes that the plot allocated to him is still registered in his name, but the project that was supposed to initiate the construction has been lost.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-586, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 448.

1950

August 17

He writes an application addressed to G. Natchkebia, the head of the Communal Department of the Executive Committee of Sokhumi, requesting that the department's repair office build a house – two rooms with a kitchen – at his own expense, on the plot of land allocated to him.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 256, p. 41; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 70.

1950

August 17

While in Sokhumi, he writes a poem "Again on the Knight in the Panther's Skin" ("The paper is restless...").

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 261, 57; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 108-109.

1950

August 22

He plans to meet the winter better prepared than the previous year: to have the rooms repaired, stock up on fuel, and organize the heating systems. He makes a note about these plans in his diary.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-256, 5-6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 63.

1950

August 22

He submits an application to G. Natchkebia, the head of the Communal Department of the Executive Committee of Sokhumi, requesting that the repair office build a house for him.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 256, p. 32; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 69.

1950

August 22 or later

In his diary, he writes down the composition of the Writers' Union of Abkhazia.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 256, p. 33-34; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 69.

1950

August 23

The head of the Communal Department of the Executive Committee of Sokhumi, G. Natchkebia, hands Galaktion Tabidze's application for a house to be built over to Chanturia, an employee of the Housing Department.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-256, 41; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 70.

1950

Until August 24

He drafts a letter addressed to the director of the "Ritsa" Hotel in Sukhumi, requesting a room to be reserved for him, as he will arrive in Sukhumi on the 24th.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-603, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 23.

1950

August 24

He receives a refusal regarding the application he submitted to G. Natchkebia, the head of the Communal Department of the Executive Committee of Sokhumi, about having his house built by the repair office.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 256, p. 41; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 70, 71.

Note: This is likely what the entry in the notebook "Refusal on August 24" refers to.

1950

Until August 25

He sends a telegram to Leonid Gvatua, the head of Sokhummsheni (Sokhumi Construction). He informs him that he has transferred ten thousand roubles to Sokhummsheni and that he will arrive there on the 25th.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-603, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 23.

1950

August 26

He waits for the chief architect, Zurab Tavartkiladze, until 1 o'clock.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-256, 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 63.

Note: In the source, only Tavartkiladze's last name is mentioned.

1950

August 26

He waits for the painter, David Kutateladze, until 1 o'clock.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 256, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 63.

1950

August 26-27

He meets the painter, David Kutateladze, who tells him that it would be better if his portraits were framed in glass frames.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 256, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 64.

1950

August 26-27

He recalls the sinking of the ship “Titanic” and concludes that nothing is more precious than life, because the millionaires found in the ocean’s waves would probably have paid any amount to a beggar for the plank of wood they were clinging to, though the beggar himself would not have given it up for any amount of money.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 256, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 64.

1950

Until August 27

During the journey from Surami to Kvirili, he writes that the distance is 68 km and describes the surroundings.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, d-256, 35-36; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 69.

Dating: A few pages later, a similar entry made with the same ink is dated August 27th.

1950

Until August 27

He writes a letter to the director of the state publishing house, Niko Kiknadze, requesting the remaining honorarium for the sixth volume to be transferred to him, as he is planning to travel to Abkhazia for medical treatment in the coming days.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-603, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 23.

1950

August 27 or earlier

He is in Sukhumi and writes down in his notebook, in Russian, the name, surname, and patronymic of the popular theater and film actress Anastasia Zueva.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-256, 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 64.

Note: It is likely that the poet saw some film with this actor’s participation.

1950

August 27

He writes the address of a construction company in Sokhumi, located at Number 5, Shota Rustaveli Street.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 256, p. 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 64.

1950

August 27 or later

He writes untitled poems: “My godfather visited me...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 256, p. 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 65.

1950

August 27 or later

He writes untitled poems: “Hey, hero fathers!”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 256, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 65.

1950

August 27 or later

He writes a poem “Against the Obstacles of Life”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 256, p. 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 67.

1950

August 27 or later

He writes a poem “For the Winter”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 256, p. 21; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 67.

1950

August 27 or later

He writes a poem “Hero of Heroes Stalin!” but crosses it out completely and stops writing.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 256, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 65.

1950

August 27 or later

He writes an untitled poem: “On the way, I say to the Gurian woman...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 256, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 66.

1950

August 27 or later

In his diary, he writes about the fusion of two beginnings – lyrical and revolutionary dramatism – in such a way that neither overshadows the other. As examples, he mentions Goya and Botticelli, Shelley and Byron, Mayakovsky and Esenin, but adds that in their case, this is very distant, while in Galaktion’s poetry, it is central.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 256, p. 22; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 66-67.

1950

August 27 or later

On the 18th anniversary of the Revolution, he writes about the year 1917 as a turning point in human history, marking the beginning of a literary epoch that no one can turn back from. He lists the poems dedicated to the Revolution: “Flags Quickly”, “Hidden Flags”, and “Flags Up, High Up, Higher”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 256, p. 24; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 68.

1950

August 27 or later

He arrives in Abkhazia. This is reported to the writer Ivane Tarba by Shota Akobia, an employee of the newspaper Sabtchota Abkhazia and the city executive committee, who believes that Galaktion Tabidze's evening should be celebrated grandly in Abkhazia.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 256, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 68.

1950

August 29

In his diary, he writes the last name of the deputy chairman of the planning committee – M. Pachulia.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-256, 43; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 71.

1950

August 29

He writes an untitled poem: "You who have come to me with bouquets of roses..."

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-256, 43; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 71.

1950

August 29

He thinks that somehow, the artwork of Sergei Sudeikin should be revived in the Café "Chimerion". A portrait of Oscar Wilde should be painted, wearing a mask, with raised hands and holding a book. Additionally, the background should feature golden five-pointed stars on a blue backdrop.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-256, 50; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 72

1950

August

He visits the Writers' Union branch in Kutaisi.

Source: D. Khurodze, small recollections of the Great Galaktion, magazine Gantiadi, 1993, №7-8, p. 137.

1950

August

Together with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, and her niece, the young teacher Eteri Kvirikadze, he travels to Tskaltubo to treat a fractured leg. At the request of Boris Bukia, the then-director of the Kutaisi Automobile Factory, he stays in a house provided by the factory specialists, located away from the healing springs. Every day, he travels to the fifth bathhouse for water treatments in his personal "Pobeda", driven by a hired chauffeur. The sanatorium staff greets him with great respect, and he expresses deep gratitude. The treatment proves so effective that by the time he leaves the sanatorium, he no longer requires any crutches.

Source: Murtaz Kankadze, What Does Not Settle With Forgetfulness (Galaktion and Tskaltubo), Mtserlis Gazeti, October 1-31, 2017, №7, p. 9.

1950

August

On his way to the baths in Tskaltubo, he stops the driver at the entrance of the sanatorium, and despite his difficulty walking, he enters the freshly ploughed cornfield with the help of crutches, savouring the incredible scent of the soil.

Source: Murtaz Kankadze, What Does Not Settle With Forgetfulness (Galaktion and Tskaltubo), Mtserlis Gazeti, October 1-31, 2017, №7, p. 9.

1950

August

In the park in front of the Tskaltubo sanatorium, he talks to the elderly janitor for a long time. When reminded that it's time to leave, he enthusiastically says, "He was a very interesting collocutor".

Source: Murtaz Kankadze, What Does Not Settle With Forgetfulness (Galaktion and Tskaltubo), Mtserlis Gazeti, October 1-31, 2017, №7, p. 9.

September

1950

Until September 1

His step-daughter, Nunu Ebanoidze, has a daughter, whom they name Marina. Galaktion is very happy and considers her his own granddaughter.

Source: N. Salaghaia, "You are still the only one, Nino...", Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 394;

1950

September 12

The newspaper Komunisti publishes an announcement that on September 22, at 1:00 PM, Eter Shushania will defend her dissertation "The Poetic Development Path of Galaktion Tabidze" for the degree of Candidate of Philological Sciences at the open session of the Scientific Council of the Institute of Georgian Literature, named after Shota Rustaveli, at the Georgian Academy of Sciences. The official opponents appointed are Academician Korneli Kekelidze and Associate Professor Sergi Tchilaia.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1950, №202 (September 12), p. 4.

1950

Until September 14

He reads Pavle Khutchua's Book "The Soviet Music Decade of the Transcaucasian Republics: Georgian Music", published in Russian in 1949. (A brief review)" and on the cover, he writes an untitled poem "Renew, renew...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1175; №7284; №647; №1850; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 180; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 630.

Note: The poem also appears under the title “Oh, Homeland! Renew!”. The title of Pavle Khuchua’s Book is: “Декада советской музыки закавказских республик: Грузинская музыка (Краткий обзор)”, Тб., 1949.

1950

Until September 14

He writes a poem titled “You Must Know” (“You must know what our life is for...”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №493; №503; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 175; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 632.

Note: The poem also appears untitled, beginning with: “Now I understand...” and “You must know what it was for...”.

1950

Until September 14

He writes a poem titled “All the Atoms in the World” (“Would anyone in their right mind ask...”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №335; №8308; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 187; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 632.

Note: The poem also appears under the title “An Inscription on an American Author’s Book” and untitled “Would anyone in their right mind ask...”.

1950

Until September 14

He writes a poem titled “The Bridge of Mestia” (“The Bridge of Mestia, oh, the Bridge of Chelti!”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №316; №327; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 171; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 632.

Note: The poem is also found under the following titles: He also writes poems titled “A Memory of the Bridge of Mestia” and “The Svan in Love”.

1950

Until September 14

He writes a poem “Here We Have Arrived” (“Here we have reached the summit of the crevasse...”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №367; №4775; N. Kvirikadze’s manuscript, №334; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 192; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 633.

Note: The poem also appears under the title “The Old Mountaineer” and untitled “We have reached the summit of the crevasse...”.

1950

Until September 14

He writes a poem “The Great Book” (“Let’s lift it high, my friends...”).

Source: Autograph, MGL, №337; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 184; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 633.

Note: The poem also appears untitled “Let’s lift it high, my friends...”.

1950

Until September 14

He writes a poem “The Hidden Flags”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №43-a, p. 6880; №6881; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 90.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Derelict”.

Dating: The seventh volume of the eight-volume collected works of G. Tabidze, in which this poem was first published, was signed for printing on September 14, 1950.

1950

Until September 14

He writes a poem “The Trembling Event”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3324; N. Kvirikadze’s autograph, №5465; works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 168.

Note: The poem is also found without a title, starting with: “Teuton trembles – ancient and old...”.

Dating: The seventh volume of the eight-volume collected works of G. Tabidze, in which this poem was first published, was signed for printing on September 14, 1950.

1950

Until September 14

The seventh volume of Galaktion Tabidze’s collected works is approved for production by the State Publishing House and the editing of the Book begins.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in eight volumes, vol. VII, 1950, p. 345.

1950

September 14

The State Publishing House signs the authorization to submit the seventh volume of Galaktion Tabidze’s collected works for printing, after which the necessary printing work for the book’s publication begins.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in eight volumes, vol. VII, 1950, p. 345.

1950

After September 14

The seventh volume of Galaktion Tabidze’s collected works is being published, which includes 109 poems and fragments from five poems. These works include the following poems: “In the name of the entire Georgian people”, “New Year”, “First of May”, “From the very beginning with dedication”, “Great Book”, “For the victory of October”,  (“Is it day in the forest or dark...”), “The Kremlin”, “Well, think carefully”, “By many meetings”, “Work closely connected with science”, “We are full of sunny days”, “How many”, “My beautiful heaven”, “All atoms in the whole world”, “That which caresses the future”, “Clarity”, “By the call of the homeland”, “Look!”, “The road to victory”, “Horse”, “Homeland, do you hear how they are calling you?”, “Shuddering of the created”, “You should know”, “Here, under that shadow”, “Guest”, “Where else is it?”, “Eucalyptus”, “Ornament”, “Owner of the millions”, “Cursed!”, “Roses”, “Charda Amta”, “Our Kodori”, “Today I took down the colourful map”, “The idea of the genius harmony”, “Eternal glory to the heroes”, “Book”, “Poet and the Mass”, “Bold and great hand”, “Ilia’s motif”, “Ninth Symphony”, “New page”, “Union of hearts”,  (“The colour of the lily spreads...”), “Seedling of Eucalyptus”, “Ultraviolet rays over the mountains”, “Renewal of nature”, “Happy running of childhood on the sea”, “In our childhood years”, “What a sky!”, “The child was on the road”, “Mosquito-Anopheles”, “Various dreams have come true”, “The linden by the sea”, “It’s spring”, “The whole hour”, “I remember the summer”, “Made from one tree”, “This summer Buba”, “The sands remained”, “The arrow from Shovi has reached”, “Aha, we have arrived”, “Sunrise over the sea”, “Unsurmountable”, “Symphony of plants”, “Dream by the Adjaristskali”, “The fusion of dreams and reality”, “Nature is a sculptor”, “The sky you have”, “Woman in the lemons”, “Move the curtains”, “Our old flags”, “The ruined house in Sokhumi”, “Protection of ancient monuments”, “The bridge in Mestia”, “Morning in Svaneti”, “Hidden flags”, “Light”, “The time of longing will come”, “In Colchis”, “Folk motifs”, “Autumn is coming”, “Day by day life became difficult”, “You remember the sky”, “The incomprehensible country”, “It is a single touch of the breeze”, “The leaf rustled in the forest”, “The ascent sounds”, “Ascent”, “The last winter”, “The poet-tribune”, “You would sing to the hero”, “It dawns, it’s dawned”, “The opening of the monument”, “To a foreign poet”, “In the train”, “Wall”, “Let it Roar”, “Giant of all times”, “From the cabinet – to the masses”, “Berlin”, “Generous, selfless”, “On your spread it comes and goes”, “In Montmartre”, “You were resting”, “Paris season”, “Negoreloe”, “In Europe”, “My native land”; Poems: “Four Days”, “Union for Construction”, “Amirani”, “Explosion”, “1950”.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in eight volumes, vol. VII, 1950.

Note: The editor of the Book is Grigol Abashidze. The volume contains 345 pages, and the print run is 5,000 copies. The Book is signed for printing on September 14, 1950. The volume includes 114 works, of which 48 poems are published for the first time, along with fragments from the poem “Four Days”.

1950

After September 14

The State Publishing House, under the editorship of Grigol Abashidze, is printing the seventh volume of Galaktion Tabidze’s works with a circulation of 5,000 copies.

Source: G. Tabidze, works, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 1950.

1950

After September 14

In the seventh volume of the works, he underlines the lines of the poems, numbers the poems and stanzas, and corrects phrases and words.

Source: MGL, t-141, G. Tabidze, works, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 1950.

1950

After September 14

In the seventh volume of the works, he numbers the stanzas of the poem “From the Beginning, with Devotion,” adds other stanzas, and writes a new version of the poem titled “So, Long Live Our Great Constitution”. At the end of the book, he corrects a line in the poem “My Native Land” – changing “Carefree Tseretloba” to “Uncompared Tseretloba”.

Source: MGL, t-162, G. Tabidze, works, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 1950, p. 15-19, 342.

1950

September 16

In the process of preparing the seventh volume for publication, he calculates the number of lines of poems and verses.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 261, p. 61; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 110.

1950

September 21

In Alexandre Abasheli’s Book “Golden Steps”, he highlights and comments on the lines of the poems. After reading the poem “The Song of the Young Collective Farmer”, he writes a humorous untitled poem “There are many poets among us...”. At the end of the book, he ironically notes that at first, he thought the author, S. Abasheli, was Simon Abasheli.

Source: MGL, t-6, A. Abasheli, “Golden Steps”, Tbilisi, 1950, p. 3-10, 20-21, 24, 31, 43, 47-49, 57, 62-63, 70, 107, 108, 110-111, 117, 132.

1950

September 22

At the open session of the Scientific Council of the Shota Rustaveli Institute of Georgian Literature at the Georgian Academy of Sciences, Eter Shushania successfully defends her candidate dissertation on the topic “The Poetic Development Path of Galaktion Tabidze”. The official opponents of the dissertation, Academician Korneli Kekelidze and Associate Professor Sergi Tchilaia, give a positive assessment of the dissertation’s work.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1950, №202 (September 12), p. 4; G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-511, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 74.

1950

September 22

Eter Shushania attends the defence of her candidate dissertation, “The Poetic Development Path of Galaktion Tabidze”, at the Georgian Academy of Sciences.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-511, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 74.

1950

September 22 or later

In a notebook, he makes a note about the progress of the defence process of Eter Shushania's dissertation on his work.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-511, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 74-75;

1950

September 26

After a walk, when he returns to the "Ritsa" hotel, he is handed a telegram sent from Moscow by someone to the security service, but the address is not fully indicated, and it is returned. Galaktion cannot understand why he is given this "strange telegram" and writes about it in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-257, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 73.

1950

Until September 27

While in Sokhumi, he learns that Ilo Tsirghvava, the editor of the newspaper Avangardi from Tskhakaia, has photos of him taken after the anniversary events held in Tskhakaia on September 18-19, 1948.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-257, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 73.

Note: The city of Senaki was named Tskhakaia from 1933 to 1989.

1950

September 26-27

He is in Sokhumi, at the "Ritsa" hotel, and writes a poem "Dew on the Vine" ("Why do you remind me, dew scattered on the vine...").

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3821; №3822; №3978; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 170.

Note: The poem is also found untitled "Why do you remind me, on the vine...". There is an opinion that the poem was written after March 9, 1956.

1950

September 27

He thinks that the telegram handed to him the previous day was intended for the person who stayed in his hotel room before his arrival and tries to clarify this with the hotel administrator or at the post office.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-257, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 73.

1950

September 27

He goes to see the chief engineer of Sokhumi, Sergi Tsintsabadze, to arrange for a specialist who will check the foundation for the construction of his house and carry out the measuring work.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-257, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 73.

1950

September 27

He buys a stack of paper so that the typist can print Eter Shushania's dissertation in three copies.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-257, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 73.

1950

End of September or later

From the Sokhumi hotel "Ritsa", he sends a dispatch to Beno Chikobava in Tbilisi. He writes that he forgot to leave the Book of his poems translated into Russian in Moscow for him and asks him to retrieve it from the translator, Giorgi Tsagareli.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-163; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 81.

October

1950

October 1

He submits a request to the State Publishing House of Abkhazia. He writes that in 1948, they published his first Book "The Sea Has Roared" and asks for the inclusion of the publication of the second book, with the same format and number of lines, in the plan for 1951.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-188; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 119-120.

1950

October 8

In his notebook, he notes that on October 21, he is scheduled to meet with Shota Basilaia, the deputy director of the Pedagogical Institute. On the same day, at 7 PM, a meeting will be held at the Pedagogical Institute, where Ioseb Botsvadze will give a report, and four lecturers and students will participate. The institute's authorities promise that they will organize an exhibition and have young poets read both Galaktion's and their own poems.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-258, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 74.

1950

October 8

He is in Sokhumi and writes an autobiographical miniature: how, on a moonlit night, his mother sings the song "Where Has My Husband Gone..." and how her lute echoes the same melody.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-259, 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 86-87.

1950

October 9

He is drawing up the program for the literary evening with great enthusiasm.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 258, p. 2-4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 74 -76.

1950

October 9

He is in Sukhumi and notes in his notebook that he will need books, photographs, and publications about it.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-258, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 74.

Note: Presumably, all of this was needed for holding the meeting.

1950

October 9

He is in Sokhumi and writes the poem "Intelligentsia" ("I love this temple...").

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-258, 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 74.

1950

After October 10

He receives a letter from his future Russian-language translation Book editor, Igor Postupalsky, in Moscow. The letter informs him that the preliminary copy of his Book was signed off a month ago and was approved by the editorial team. However, since the Book is being printed in Germany, there is a slight delay. Postupalsky advises him to urgently send a notification to the chief accountant of the State Literary Publishing House, Valentin Maslennikov, specifying the address where the royalty should be sent. He mentions that as soon as the Book is signed off for distribution, the royalty will be issued immediately. Postupalsky requests that as soon as the Book is in hand, Galaktion carefully evaluate the work of the translators and editors. If desired, they can begin considering the publication of an expanded edition, first with Sabtchota Mtserali and later with the State Literary Publishing House.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-66; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 310.

1950

Until October 14

While at the Sokhumi Pedagogical Institute, he meets lecturer David Tevzadze, and they head toward the rector's office. Tevzadze offers Galaktion the opportunity to hold a creative evening at the institute, as he hopes that the head of the department, Ioseb Botsvadze, and the director of the institute, Rostom Tsulukidze, will support the idea. Galaktion suddenly changes the subject of conversation and starts discussing the delayed construction of his house in Sokhumi. They later plan a meeting with the rector. For the meeting, Galaktion along with Tevzadze displays his previously published Georgian and Russian collections, letters from the 1920s and 1930s, and press responses on specially arranged boards in the institute's club one week before. The exhibition is visited by many people before its official opening, and Galaktion himself frequently attends it.

Source: D. Tevzadze, Galaktion - Resident of Sokhumi, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 298-300.

Dating: From the note, it is clear that these events took place at least one week before the evening of October 21.

1950

October 16

He writes a short autobiography in Russian.

Source: MGL, d-659, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 505-506.

1950

October 19

He writes a poem titled "October 19" ("Nothing at all, nothing at all...").

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3428; №3994-3995; №4096; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, VI, 1968, p. 204.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "October 19" and untitled "Nothing at all, nothing at all...".

1950

October 21

In the Russian newspaper Sovetskaya Abkhazia, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Youth" by Boris Serebryakov is published.

Source: Молодежи (Стихи), Г. Табидзе, Пер. Б. Серебряков, Советская Абхазия, Сухуми, 1950, 21 октября, №209.

1950

October 21

In Sokhumi, he attends an evening dedicated to him with his wife. After welcoming words from professors and teachers, Galaktion reads poems written before the Revolution, which are met with applause and ovations from the crowd in the hall and the people gathered in the institute's yard. The evening features young poets: Nodar Khundadze, Otar Shamatava, Amiran Mikautadze, and Alio Kobalia. After the event, they are invited to a banquet held at the homes of Eleonora Kandelaki and Sergo Akirtava. The party leaves an unforgettable impression on him, and during the celebration, he spontaneously writes an untitled poem "I forgot my fever..." which he gifts to David Tevzadze.

Source: D. Tevzadze, Galaktion - Resident of Sokhumi, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 300-301.

Dating: The poem is dated at the end with the date written by the poet: "October 21".

1950

October 22

While in Sukhumi, poetry-loving students, along with the head of their department and the institute's director, invite him to their home. Before the table is set, the students recite their poems to Galaktion, who is deeply impressed. Davit Tevzadze proposes the idea of establishing a student poets' circle named after Galaktion Tabidze. With the approval of the institute's director, Rostom Tzulukidze, the Galaktion Tabidze Circle for Aspiring Poets is founded at the Sukhumi Pedagogical Institute, led by Davit Tevzadze. At the feast, the poet, full of enthusiasm, delivers toasts and recites the poem "Let This Be a Toast".

Source: D. Tevzadze, Galaktion - Resident of Sokhumi, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 301-302.

1950

Until October 23

He visits the Sokhumi Pedagogical Institute several times and shows interest in the manuscript journal of the student writers' circle.

Source: D. Tevzadze, Galaktion - Resident of Sokhumi, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 302.

1950

October 23

Another group of students hosts him. The meetings are marked by the recurring phrase from Galaktion, "I am a resident of Sokhumi", which particularly delights the young people.

Source: D. Tevzadze, Galaktion - Resident of Sokhumi, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 302.

1950

After October 25

He completes preparations for the winter season. He is satisfied that the artisan has repaired the stove, the telephone is working, and all payments have been made for the year.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 259, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 89.

Dating: The previous and following entries are from October 1950, but in this entry, the 25th is mentioned in the past tense.

1950

After October 25

After a year and a half of work, he hands over the fifth volume of his works to the publishing house, and they immediately begin the compilation of the text.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 259, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 89.

Dating: The previous and following entries are from October 1950, but in this entry, the 25th is mentioned in the past tense.

1950

After October 25

He decides to set up a bookshelf by the bedroom door and to definitely arrange a study.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 259, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 89.

Dating: The previous and following entries are from October 1950, but in this entry, the 25th is mentioned in the past tense.

1950

After October 25

He decides to order large envelopes from the state publishing house for his manuscripts.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 259, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 89.

Dating: The previous and following entries are from October 1950, but in this entry, the 25th is mentioned in the past tense.

November

1950

November 2

Translator Georgy Kreytan calls several times, but Galaktion is not at home. Finally, he visits to read to him his translation of the poem "October and the World" for the newspaper Zarya Vostoka, but cannot find him. Since the matter is urgent, he leaves a note saying that he is taking the translation to the newspaper, and if Galaktion is interested in reading it, he can either visit the editorial office or meet the translator directly.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-487-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 321-322.

Note: The title of the poem is not specified in the source, but this particular poem was published on November 5, 1950.

1950

November 5

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "To October and the World" by Georgy Kreytan is published.

Source: Октябрю и миру (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. Г. Крейтан, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1950, 5 ноября, №249.

1950

November 7

In the Russian newspaper Tkvarchelskiy Gornyak, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "To October and the World" by Georgy Kreytan is published.

Source: Октябрю и миру (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Г. Крейтан, Ткварчельский горняк, Ткварчели, 1950, 7 ноября, №136.

1950

November 15

He, together with his wife Nino Kvirikadze, goes to the hospital located at 5 Niko Marr Street and is admitted for treatment.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d- 261, 74; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 119.

1950

November 17

He recalls what Akaki Tsereteli said about his first collection of poems in 1914, calling it a novelty. He believes that this Book contains both thematic and technical novelties, and he is once again amazed by the materials published in it. In his opinion, the novelty is that the face of the poet, as represented in his work, is drawn from life itself. In the poem "I and the Night", nature is evident, but without the presence of a human. He writes that the frequent representation of the moon's face, rather than the sun's, is due to it being a symbol of masculinity. He notes that the poem "In the Forest" is innovative in form. He plans to study the collection thoroughly from this perspective.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-260, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 89.

1950

November 19 or later

In the newspaper Komunisti, he reads Eremia Karelshvili's review of Ilya Mosashvili's play "His Star", which was staged at the Shota Rustaveli Theatre. In the review, it is mentioned that the role of Professor Zedginidze's wife, Darejan, was exceptionally performed by Tamar Chavchavadze. He then writes an excerpt from the article in his diary.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-261, 39; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 97.

Dating: The review was published on November 19.

1950

November 23

He finishes correcting the poem "Peace and the Virtue Among Men".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-640, 143; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 105.

1950

November 28

He writes a poem "The Sorrows of Osepa" ("He asks for money...").

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-261, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 91-92.

Note: The title "Sakula's Tavern" is crossed out in the autograph.

1950

November 28

He continues transcribing the poem "Peace and the Virtue Among Men".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-640, 143; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 105.

1950

November 28 or later

He recalls what was said to him in Moscow about how some hypocrites use the high level of his poetic technique to undermine other poets, and writes about it in his diary. He then adds that Mayakovsky indeed has an excellent technique, but that doesn't mean others should imitate him.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-3, p. 21; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 92.

Note: The entry was made after the poem dated November 28, 1950.

1950

November 30

He talks to the director Shota Aghsabadze, who is in the room next to his in the hospital. According to his conversation partner, actors are divided into four categories based on talent and mastery: artisans, those in between artisans and artists, artists, and geniuses.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d- 261, 40; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 97-98.

1950

November or later

He reads Zurab Chumburidze's article "The Explanatory Dictionary of the Georgian Language, Vol. I" in the magazine Mnatobi.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 261, p. 76; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 121.

December

1950

Until December

He makes plans for the upcoming months and notes them in his notebook. For December 1950, he has scheduled the preparation for the publication of the eighth volume of his works; for January 1951 – the transfer of this volume to the press, the signing of the contract, urgent assembly, and publication, as well as reviewing the collection of his works compiled by Beno Chikobava, finding a translator into Russian, and speeding up the process. In February, he plans to start working on the ninth volume and finish the fifth one. In March, he intends to rest in Tskaltubo for 20 days, in April, he will ensure the publication of the eighth volume and oversee the construction of his house in Sokhumi. In May, he plans to take the "Book of Peace" to Moscow. He hopes that the publishing house Zarya Vostoka will release his poems' Russian translations in the same month. He also plans to hold literary evenings at the Artists' Club, the Academy of Arts, the Conservatory, the University, and on the radio.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 261, 64; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 112-113.

1950

28 November – Until December 1

He drafts a plan for the literary evening to be held at the university and writes down the faculties. He learns that the university has its own stenographers, orchestra, choir, and radio, but he is unsure whether it has a photo laboratory.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 261, p. 32; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 94.

1950

28 November – Until December 1

He notes the name of Lena Kipshidze, the daughter of Professor Kipshidze, a friend of his wife Nino's daughter, Nunu Ebanoidze, in his diary.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 261, p. 34; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 94.

1950

28 November – Until December 1

He writes an untitled poem "Playing the very Devil...".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 261, p. 33; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 94-95.

1950

28 November – Until December 1

He writes an untitled poem "To Your Precious Picture...".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 261, p. 35; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 95.

1950

28 November – Until December 1

He writes a poem "A Poem to S. Abasheli" ("In us, there are many poets...").

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 261, p. 37; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 96.

1950

December 1

In the morning, he continues talking with the director Shota Aghsabadze, who is in the neighbouring ward. Aghsabadze shares how he staged Abesalom and Eteri at the Opera Theater with the efforts of conservatory students. He laments the prevailing rivalries within the theater. In his opinion, Abesalom's aria is performed better by Kekelia, his personal discovery, than by Davit Andghuladze, and even Beria favours Kekelia. Aghsabadze believes that his fall into the lower floor, resulting in broken limbs, was orchestrated by enemies who deliberately removed the flooring where he had to walk in the dark backstage. This hostility reminds Galaktion of Sergo Kldiashvili. The poet reflects that an artist in such a state should receive strong support from their family. When his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, introduces Galaktion to Aghsabadze's wife, Varia, the poet tells her that her husband needs more support. He advises her to find out who is plotting intrigues and to rally others against the malicious schemers.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d- 261, 42-43; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 97-100.

1930

December 1

In the evening, the conversation with Shota Aghsabadze continues. The latter is deeply upset because, the previous day, the radio discussed the performance of "Abesalom and Eteri", but the director Shota Aghsabadze's name was not mentioned. The director recalls a similar injustice that happened in Moscow, when, on a poster already printed with his name, Akaki Vasadze had paper pasted over it with his own surname added. Aghsabadze decided that a confrontation between two Georgians in Moscow wouldn't be helpful, so he kept quiet. In his view, Galaktion is in a similar situation, where other poets cannot come close to his stature, yet they appear much more frequently everywhere.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-261, 44; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 100-101.

1950

December 1

At night, while in the hospital, he listens to the Moscow radio program "Georgian Art", where beautiful Georgian melodies are played, followed by a reading of the translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "October and the World". Galaktion is hurt that Georgian radio does not show proper attention towards him. His wife, Nino Kvirikadze, tells him that it is necessary to establish contact with them and to engage in systematic work.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-261, 46; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 102-103.

1950

December 1

He fondly recalls the year 1944, when actor Vasily Kachalov read his poems on the radio, on stage, at the Officers' House, and in various other places.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-261, 46; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 102-103.

Note: Only the last name of actor Kachalov is mentioned.

1950

December 2

He is in hospital. He finishes transcribing his poem-oratorio "War, Peace, and the Virtue Among Men" and thinks that it turned out well.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-261, 1, 70; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 90, 103.

1950

December 2

In the new issue of the newspaper Zarya Vostoka, he reads about the staging of "Abesalom and Eteri", and this time, alongside Grigol Kiladze, Shota Aghsabadze is also mentioned. Aghsabadze's wife, Varya, visits him and then reads the newspaper herself, which helps to calm him. Galaktion also learns that the actors had protested the omission of Aghsabadze's surname the previous day and that the management had called him to apologize.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-261, 46; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 103.

1950

December 3

He is in the hospital and feels discomfort in the morning. He recalls Dr. Nino Eristavi's advice regarding a transplant and discusses it with Dr. Aldadanov. He responds that Dr. Khundadze, the one who should perform the operation, will return from his vacation by December 10th and will be able to do it then. Galaktion is satisfied with his attentiveness and promises to give him the seventh volume of his works as a gift. Aldadanov advises him to visit either Dr. Gabriel Pondoev or Kharadze for a consultation at least once a week after being discharged from the hospital.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-261, 47; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 104.

Note: Since the poet had a broken leg, it is possible that the discussion was about a bone graft.

1950

December 3

He writes a New Year's poem for the newspaper Zarya Vostoka.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-261, 47; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 104.

Note: It is likely referring to the poem "New Year's Toast", which was published in the January 1, 1951 issue of Zarya Vostoka.

1950

December 3

Varya, Shota Aghsabadze's wife, tells the poet that to prove how much Joseph Stalin valued Galaktion, when it was proposed to award the poet with the Order of the Red Banner for his work, Stalin requested that he be nominated for a higher award, the Order of Lenin.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-3, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 104.

1950

December 3

He recalls Jack Lindsay's Book "The World of the Future" in an article titled "The Soviet Diaries of the English Writer" published in the newspaper Novoe Vremia on November 7, 1950. The discussion revolves around whether the Soviet Union is attempting to disregard individual identities, levelling personalities, and blending them into a faceless mass. The English writer asserts that the Soviet Union is wrongly accused of such practices. Galaktion provides extensive quotes from this publication, adding his own commentary: "What is written about levelling – let it remain among us, it's somewhat true". Here, artists resemble each other, and this is facilitated by criticism and reviews.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-261, 48-50; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 104.

1950

After December 3

Beno Chikobava, who visited him at the hospital, recounts that Hugo Huppert, the famous Austrian poet and translator of "The Knight in the Panther's Skin", upon arriving in Tbilisi, said to him after reading his translation at the Writers' Union: "There is no poet in Europe comparable to Galaktion Tabidze".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 261, p. 75; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 106.

1950

After December 3

At the hospital, he is visited by his brother Abesalom's wife, Tatiana, and his nephews Vasil and Nodari.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 261, p. 75; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 106.

1950

After December 3

At the hospital, the seamstress brings a newly sewn coat, which Galaktion likes.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 261, p. 75; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 106.

1950

Until December 6

In the hospital, he makes a note titled "List of Virtues", in which he lists the "heroic deeds" against him by various literary circles. In the first paragraph, he recalls how he was not given the opportunity to participate in the creation of the Georgian national anthem. He could not understand why Alexandre Abasheli and Grigol Abashidze were selected as the authors. He believes that Taktakishvili's music is more of an elegy than an anthem and that offering it as a national anthem is inappropriate for the people who created "Midge of the Oak" and "To Lile". In the second paragraph, he describes how Irakli Abashidze befriended a whole group of reviewers and how they pair up to write reviews even of minor works. Galaktion notes that all reviewers remain silent about his influence on the poetry of the authors they review, although this influence is undeniable. In the third paragraph, he speaks about the article published by Zurab Tchumburidze in Mnatobi titled "Georgian Language Explanatory Dictionary, Vol. I". He believes that the author is biased because, in the encyclopaedia, he does not mention Galaktion Tabidze among the cited writers at all and refers to the classics in a "deaf" manner. On the other hand, he excessively praises the typographical error in the title of the published version of Lavrentiy Beria's report "The History of Bolshevik Organizations in Transcaucasia". In the fourth paragraph, the poet discusses an article by Mamia Duduchava titled "New Georgian Art", which was published in the same issue of Mnatobi. The article discusses the works of artists like Jacob Nikoladze, Gigo Zazashvili, Grigol Meskhi, and David Kakabadze but does not mention any portraits of Galaktion created by these artists. The poet begins to suspect that this, too, may be part of Irakli Abashidze's tricks and another attempt to "block" Galaktion. He ends this paragraph with an epigram about Mamia Duduchava ("Frightened, he fled..."). In the fifth paragraph, he analyses an article titled "The Bright Path" published by a fictional person, T. Jibuti, in the December 3 issue of the newspaper Zarya Vostoka. The article discusses a composition of the same name, presented by the actress Nino Zedginidze in the small hall of the Conservatory. The authors listed are Konstantine Chanturishvili and Ivane Gvichidze. Galaktion believes the purpose of the publication is not only to praise the actress and the authors of the composition but also poets such as Ioseb Grishashvili, Giorgi Leonidze, Simon Chikovani, and Ioseb Nonishvili, whose poems were used in the composition. The poet adds with frustration in his notebook, "What was to be highlighted about Galaktion Tabidze here?” In the sixth paragraph, he notes that it has been half a year since he gave Irakli Abashidze his poem “War, Peace, and Virtue Among Men”, and that Abashidze has become so arrogant that he refuses to publish it.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 261, p. 76; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 121.

Note: The poem is referred to in the source under the title “For Peace”, but that year Galaktion was finalizing the poem “War, Peace, and Virtue Among Men”, and it is likely that this is the one being referred to.

1950

December 6

He will rewrite the poem “Kitesa”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 261, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 124-127.

1950

December 7

He is discharged from the hospital.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, d- 261, p. 74; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 119.

1950

December 7

He writes an untitled poem, “It is autumn, on the path...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 261, 74; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 120.

1950

December 7 or later

He plans to contact the Shota Rustaveli Institute of Literature and Language, with the intention of establishing a literary circle in his name, similar to the one in Sokhumi.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, d- 261, 74; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 119.

1950

December 17

They film him as he casts his vote in the local council elections.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 270, p. 68; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 197;

1950

December 20

He recalls and writes in his notebook an amusing incident involving Akaki Tsereteli’s niece. He had taken her to the dentist to have a tooth extracted, and the frightened child begged him, “Give the doctor more money, maybe he’ll leave me alone and let me go”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 263, p. 27; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 138.

Note: The name of Akaki’s niece is not specified in the entry.

1950

December 23

He submits the poem "Peace and the Virtue Among Men" for printing to the editorial office of the magazine Mnatobi.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-640, 143; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 105.

1950

Until December 24

He writes an untitled poem "No, I Will Not Forget...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №2552. G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 147. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 128-129.

Dating: According to the entry from December 24, 1950, the poem had already been written.

1950

December 24

In the eighth volume of his works, he selects the following poems: "October 1950", "I saw you... with bent shoulders", "By the Docks" ("If a man has a tongue..."), "Fill, Sun, this autumn", "That Millstone!", "This Old Muse!" (excerpt: "She does not spare her rhymes..."), "Were you forging iron or breaking the plow", "To the Woman from the Mountains", "The one who looked at the sky being Drained", "The branch that reaches into the darkness", "But the dead feel!", "From Italy", "Ipati", "The Japanese think", "What do you take from the bosom, tell me, woman", "The Worn Disease", "Song of the Heart", "The Dew on the Vine", "An Extraordinary Winter in Batumi 1911", "In every hurricane or storm", "Every day is a new beginning!", "The enemy digs the grave with its teeth", "What fields have been crossed", "Lenin's Death!", "I and Akaki Tsereteli", "A Woman in the Collective", "The wars mixed the path and trace of the people!", "The fields grow, my heart, calm down", "Did I say: behold, Sculptor!", "Between Zhores' and Plekhanov's streets", "How did the Wave Reached the Opera House!", "The child fell asleep, the child does not stop smiling", "The wind, You are like My Brother", "What do we have in common?" "I paid the price of existence!", "Which generous feeling gave birth", "Who leaps like the tiger?" "In Georgia, every poet today!", "On your Mtatsminda", "Where the gold is genuine...", "From Mtatsminda", "Days change", "Autumn in Tbilisi", "A Drummer is happy", "I sang the song of the laurel", "Old Tskhumi is silent", "The sea ruins the cage", "The Birth of a book", "The sea breeze blows swiftly", "When It Passes the Black Sea coast", "The children's happy running on the sea", "The azure sea sparkles", "Thuja", "A young woman by the seashore" ("A mowing Woman"), "On the high mountain, the hut appears", "How the garden trembles!", "The Guard's Flag!", "The Love of the Sea", "What foolish triumph does he think of", "Two Forces", "My guests, what am I now?", "My Cabman", "The important thing is the thing they are silent about", "And how many friends I have had!", "What does it mean to be a poet?", "The days surrounded me!", "The one who holds the Lute" ("Khevsurian"), "Era of May! This", "What is the gold of Adjara?", "You are no longer here", "Down with the interventionist", "Paris, Rome, and London", "The Oceans never end", "Atomic Energy", "The rocky heights of Tbilisi", "What does the palace do, has it grown old?”, “If we break through the dark”, “The integrals of my poetry” (“The Hour”), “To hunt...”, “Why do I need to live in this world”, “Ahead of you, your pure path”, “Vazha said: it is not over”, “The floods have washed away the thicket”, “Here comes the ancient Tskhenistskali”, “From the high tower, the azure scarf”, “Oh, why am I not nineteen years old”, “Brothers, comrades, we have no Ilia”, “I have foreseen the year”, “Young people, crown bearers”, “The wolf asked the lamb”, “Dressed in the order of the flag”, “Autumn is here. On the path”, “Ah, we roll and roll these years!”, “The field is as pure as white”, “His name is Capital”, “O sky, O sea, Bichvinta”, “In Memory of Egn. Ninoshvili”, “We were pulling the old needle”, “The sunset on the sea”, “The time of the new year sprints forward”, “Fish”, “No, I will not forget the railway, the first one I saw”, “How futile the bullet struck the chest”, “She does not walk with others”, “Here, by this stone” (inscription), “By the New Year’s hearth”, “The Poplar stood at the summit”, “Oh, my poem, when it celebrates”, “Once upon a time”, “From Kobuleti”, “From Avchala to Tbilisi”, “Ars longa, vita brevis”, “The Third Bell”, “We used to rush on blue horses”, “Cling to the book, you workers!”, “But a chain of roses has formed!” “The homeland is great!”, “Academy”, and “Due to the Death of Akaki”. Additionally, he notes that twenty poems from the epic should be included in the volume.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 262, 3-9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 128-129.

1950

After December 24

He transcribes the poem “Galaktion’s feast granted Mashashvili a pardon” for inclusion in the eighth volume.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 262, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 129-130.

1950

December 27 or earlier

He begins treatment with the dentist Vladimir Zabelin.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 263, p. 29; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 138.

1950

December 27

Dentist Vladimir Zabelin promises that he will fix his teeth so well that by New Year’s, he will be able to eat fried chicken without any trouble.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 263, p. 29; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 138.

1950

December

The “Contents of the 1950 Issues of the Magazine Mnatobi” is published in the magazine Mnatobi, from which it becomes clear that in 1950, none of Galaktion’s poems were printed in the magazine.

Source: “The content of the 1950 issues of the magazine Mnatobi”, magazine Mnatobi, 1950, №12, p. 161.

1950

Winter

After the meeting at the Writers' Union, late in the evening, Galaktion takes his coat from the communal wardrobe, puts it on, and heads home. When he reaches into his pocket and cannot find his newspapers, he then examines the coat and realizes that he has put on someone else's. Upon returning to the wardrobe, he encounters a disappointed young writer, Karpe Mumladze, who had found someone else's old coat hanging instead of his new one and didn't know what to do. Galaktion returns the coat, apologizes, and they leave the building together. The young writer wants to see him off but cannot bring himself to speak.

Source: K. Mumladze, The Poet with the Steel-founders, magazine Drosha, 1973, N 1, p. 9.

February 27 1947 -1950

He writes a poem "Meeting in the Mountains" ("Here Stands the Blessed Ridge...").

Source: Autographs: MGL, №6635; №1394; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 185; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 33.

Note: The poem is also found untitled "Here Stands the Blessed Ridge...".

1950

He writes a poem "From Folk Motifs" ("In the rock, a sword is hidden...").

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book I, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 390; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 1972, p. 142.

1950

In Moscow, under the editorial work of Igor Postupalski, Galaktion Tabidze's "Selected Poems" is published in Russian. The collection includes the sections: "Epoch", "Revolutionary Georgia", "Memories of Europe", "Homeland", "My Life", "The Country Resembling the Sun", "Lyrical Poems of Past Years", and "From the Poems". The publication is accompanied by a list of the poet's books published in Russian.

Source: Табидзе Г. В. Избранные стихи, пер. с груз, под ред. И. Поступальского, разд.: Эпоха. Революционная Грузия; Воспоминания о Европе; Родина, жизнь моя; Стала страна, словно солнце; Из лирики прошлых лет; Из поэм, Москва, Гослитиздат, 1950.

1950

In Tbilisi, a summary of Eter Shushania's candidate thesis "The Creative Path of Galaktion Tabidze" is published in Russian.

Source: Шушания Э.Э., Творческий путь Галактиона Табидзе, Автореферат дис. работы на соискание ученой степени кандидата филологических наук, Акад. наук Груз. ССР. Ин-т истории груз. литературы им. Руставели, Тбилиси, 1950.

1950

He writes an untitled poem, "Today, we handed over to the state, not disordered...".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-259, 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 79-85.

Note: The poem is also found beginning with "Clean, not disordered...". Later, a note is added to the text stating that it has been used in the poem "Kitesa".

1950

He describes the roads and paths leading from Kutaisi to Ukimerioni, often noting who lives in these areas.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 264, p. 4-11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 139-149.

1950

He reads three poems by Gogi Chikobava, observes the peculiarities of the rhythm, and discusses literary movements with the author.

Source: G. Chikobava, Close to Galaktion, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 5.

1950

He writes a poems "War and Peace", "Send Us Weapons", "Kitesa", "Invention", as well as nearly three hundred lyrical poems, and prepares the eighth volume for publication.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 273, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 244.

Note: The titles of the poems are not specified in the entry.

1950

He completes the word-for-word translations of his own poems for the publishing house "Zarya Vostoka".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 273, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 244.

1950

He organizes literary evenings in various regions of Georgia.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 273, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 244.

1950

From the 25 roubles left in the savings bank in 1947, the amount grows to 275 roubles.

Source: Excerpt from G. Tabidze's storage ledger notebook, 300, p. 38; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 380.

1950

He writes a poem "Oh, Why Am I Not Fifteen" ("Oh, why am I not fifteen...").

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2856; №4003; №2467; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 173.

Note: The poem also appears untitled “Oh, why am I not fifteen...”.

1950 or later

He reads Nikoloz Chachava’s poetry collection “I Sing to Life”, highlights lines, and writes notes. In the very first poem “The Leader’s Book”, he writes down 28 points highlighting grammatical errors, incorrect rhymes, and tautologies. He concludes that the poem contains 28 lines and just as many ideological or linguistic mistakes. He believes that the main flaw of the Book is the lack of knowledge of the Georgian language and an obsession with formalism.

Source: MGL, t-623, Nikoloz Chachava, “I Sing to Life”, Tbilisi, 1950.

1950 or later

He writes an untitled poem “They tremble like reflections of the sun...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s inscription on the Book title page, MGL, t-618, “The Acts of the Apostles Based on Ancient Manuscripts”, compiler Ilia Abuladze, editor Akaki Shanidze, Tbilisi, 1948.

1950 or later

He reads the seventh Book of the collection “Monuments of the Old Georgian Language”, published by the Georgian Academy of Sciences - “The Acts of the Apostles” - and on the title page, he writes an untitled poem “They tremble, like the sun...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, t-618, p. 6930; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 189; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 635.

After 1950

In the office ledger, he writes a list of poems dedicated to the events of 1905 from his volumes of works.

Source: MGL, d-441, 1-4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 141-143.

After 1950

He makes a record about the initiatives that should be undertaken to honour and recognize his literary work. According to Galaktion, his seven-volume collected works should be published in one volume in both Russian and Georgian languages, and the opposite bank of the Mtkvari River should be named after him. On the same street, a special building should be constructed for Galaktion’s permanent exhibition; a library and a bibliographic office should be established; a monument to the poet should be erected during his lifetime; the state publishing house should be tasked with publishing a Book titled “The Works of Galaktion Tabidze”, which would compile articles about the poet by writers and critics from both older and newer generations; and the city of Samtredia should be renamed “Sagalaktiono”. For his outstanding contributions, the poet should be granted a pension of 10,000 roubles, along with a one-time allowance of 100,000 roubles. A grand jubilee evening should be organized at the Opera Theatre. The Ministry of Health should be tasked with providing the poet with special medical care. Assistance should be offered to help Galaktion set up a summer residence, and he should be provided with a suitable apartment. In all republics of the Soviet Union, efforts should be made to advocate for the publication of his works. Galaktion should be awarded a car, and a personal office and secretariat should be established at the state's expense. Museums dedicated to Galaktion should be opened in Chkvishi and Kutaisi. The Georgian Academy of Sciences should be entrusted with preparing an academic edition of the poet's complete works.

Source: MGL, d-627, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 267;

1951

1951

Beginning

In his diary, he writes that this year marks the anniversary years of Pavlo Tychyna, Nikolai Tikhonov, Alexander Fadeyev, and Ilya Ehrenburg, while the following year will be the anniversary years of himself and Yakub Kolas.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 262; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 127.

January

1951

January 1

In the Russian newspaper Sovetskaya Abkhazia, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "New Year's" is published.

Source: Новогоднее (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Советская Абхазия, Сухуми, 1951, 1 января, №1.

1951

January 1

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation by Georgy Kreytan of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "New Year's Toast" is published.

Source: Новогодний тост (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с грузинского Г. Крейтан, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1951, 1 января, №1.

1951

January 1 or later

He receives another letter from the son of writer Daria Akhvlediani, Otar Akhvlediani, from the Rustavi colony. He expresses his concern that this is the tenth letter he is sending and that Galaktion has not responded to any of them. He writes that two years ago, he handed over his mother's poems to the addressee for publication, hoping to earn a few pennies, but he still hasn't heard whether they were published. He asks either for the money to be sent or for the poems to be returned. He warns that if he does not receive a response again, he will be forced to inform the Writers' Union about the situation.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-252. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 316.

1951

January 1 or later

He writes about Giorgi Leonidze's poem "Your Name Will Stay with the Sun" from the newspaper Komunisti and adds critical comments. He notes that the poem discusses the village harvest and prosperity, but says nothing about the ongoing reconstruction in the city. Galaktion does not like the poem's graphic form and points out that some of the stanzas are conceptually imprecise and vague, while the rhymes seem to be borrowed from other sources.

Source: MGL, d-646, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 191-194.

Dating: Giorgi Leonidze's poem was published in the January 1, 1951 issue of the newspaper Komunisti.

1951

January 1 or later

While reviewing the materials to be included in the eighth volume, he discovers that he has written fifty poems, of which forty have already been published.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 150.

1951

January 1 or later

He meets Elizbar Ananiashvili who asks him for permission to translate his poems.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 150.

1951

January 1 or later

Since the winter sessions at the university end in late January, he considers that it would be better to hold the literary evening in February.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 2.; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 150.

1951

January 1 or later

Akaki Khorava, Besarion Zhghenti, Jano Bagrationi, Beno Chikobava, staff members of the Writers' Union, booksellers, and others are thrilled with the radio broadcast featuring his address to children and his New Year's poem.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 150.

Note: Jano Bagrationi is mentioned only by his last name, while the others are referred to by the initials of their first names and their last names.

1951

After January 1

He gifts his books with inscriptions to dentist Vladimir Zabelin.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 263, p. 29; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 138.

Note: The inscription is recorded in his notebook, but the specific books are not indicated.

1951

January 2

He is informed that the newsreel “Elections” is being shown in Tbilisi cinemas, and in one of the scenes, Galaktion is seen in a wide shot casting his vote.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 266, 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 151.

1951

January 2

He continues discussions with Beso Zhghenti regarding the volume of the eighth volume of his works. 3500-4000 lines seem insufficient, as a Book of this size would resemble a pamphlet.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 266; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 151.

1951

January 3

He completes the transcription of the poems “First Month of September” and “The Serious Illness”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 266, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 151.

1951

January 4

Leo Gvatua from Sokhumi informs that due to the rainy weather, the construction of Galaktion’s house has not yet started, but they will begin soon.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 266, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 152

1951

January 4

He takes three poems for printing and is promised that they will be ready in a week. In the meantime, he thinks about preparing more poems for printing. He is glad that the situation with the eighth volume is progressing.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 266, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 152

1951

January 4

The newspaper Leninskoye Znamya published in Tbilisi refuses to print the poem, and Galaktion makes a note about this in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 266, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 152

Note: The title of the poem is not mentioned in the note.

1951

January 4

The newspaper Zarya Vostoka does not print the translation of his poem by Sergei Serebryakov.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 266, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 152

Note: The title of the poem is not mentioned in the note.

1951

January 4

He falls ill with the flu.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 152

1951

January 4

He feels that he is the target of hostile attacks both at home and outside, as Karlo Kaladze and Akhvlediani threaten him, his sister-in-law Tatiana reproaches him for not visiting their house, his wife Nino is planning to buy a new coat, and he is waiting for the salary from Galaktion's Academy. At home, everything is disorganized, the driver is looking for an opportunity to use the car for his own needs. He reassures himself by thinking that the work on the book's publication is progressing.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 152

1951

January 5

He writes a four-line untitled poem about some Tiniko "You come and go...".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 152.

1951

January 6

In his diary, he writes down Vladimir Mayakovsky's poem "Манасею", inspired by the Georgian proverb "This is it, my Manaseo...".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 153.

January 9

He prepares a speech in support of Kandid Charkviani, in which he states that, along with other Georgian writers, he supports the proposal of the President of the Academy of Sciences to nominate Kandid Charkviani, the leader of Georgian Bolsheviks, as a candidate for the Supreme Soviet of Georgia.

Source: MGL, d-661, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 567-568.

1951

January 10

He attends the general assembly of the academicians, professors, scientific workers, and staff of the Georgian SSR Academy of Sciences, where the nomination of Kandid Charkviani as a candidate for the Supreme Soviet of the Georgian SSR is discussed, and he supports this proposal.

Source: The general assembly of academicians, professors, scientific workers, and staff members of the Academy of Sciences of the Georgian SSR nominated Kandid Nestorovich Charkviani as a candidate for the Supreme Soviet of the Georgian SSR., Newspaper Komunisti, January 10, 1951, №8, p. 3.

1951

January 10-11

At the opening of the XX Party Conference in Tbilisi, the First Secretary of the Central Committee of the Georgian Communist Party, Kandid Charkviani, delivers a report summarizing the work of the party's city committee, in which he criticizes the language of Vazha-Pshavela. His speech marks the beginning of an intensified struggle against formalism in literature. Sergi Tchilaia, the secretary of the Academy of Sciences' Party Bureau, criticizes Giorgi Leonidze and Simon Chikovani, and mentions Galaktion's use of the word "guide" in his poem "My Song" in a negative context. Galaktion disagrees with the critic's assessment, as similar cases of poetic license can be found in the works of Ilia Chavchavadze and Alexander Pushkin.

Source: A. Khintibidze, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 306-307;

1951

January 11

He is curious whether the poems to be included in the eighth volume of his works "First Month of September", "The Serious Illness", and the childhood poems have been reprinted.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 154.

1951

January 12

In his diary, he writes that Vladimir Lenin loved Jack London.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 154.

1951

January 13

Next to the information in the calendar dated January 13, which states that 150 years ago, in 1901, under Stalin's leadership, the local organization of the Russian Social-Democratic Party was formed in Batumi, he references the title of his poem "The Serious Illness", which reflects the events of that period.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 154.

1951

January 14

Next to the information in the calendar dated January 14, which states that in 1903, the tsarist executioners killed the revolutionary Lado Ketskhoveli in the Metekhi prison, he notes that he remembers the reaction of the newspapers of that time.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 154.

1951

January 15

He continues selecting poems for the work of his eighth volume.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 154.

1951

January 16

Due to the fact that the tires of the car serving him have worn out, they remove the plates and request the purchase of new tires.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 154.

1951

January 16

Shalva Radiani demands that the editorial board of the magazine Mnatobi decide on the issue of printing Galaktion's writings. Galaktion feels that direct rejection would be awkward for Radiani and wishes to have his opinion expressed through the members of the board. In his diary, he writes down the list of those members.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 155.

Note: The composition of the editorial board of Mnatobi: 1. Nika Agiashvili, 2. Levan Asatiani, 3. Shalva Apkhaidze, 4. Konst., Lortk., 5. Ilia Mosashvili, 6. Shalva Radiani, 7. Leo Kiacheli, 8. Simon Chikovani, 9. Otar Chkheidze, 10. Sergo Tchilaia, 11. Irakli Abashidze.

1951

January 16

He continues selecting material for the eighth volume of his works and submitting it for printing.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 156.

1951

January 16

He plans to send a telegram to Sokhumi regarding the construction of his house.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 156.

1951

January 16

In the afternoon, he is on his way somewhere by car when the inspector stops him and asks to step out, as the car's tires are worn out.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 263, 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 135.

1951

January 17

He leaves the Writers' Union with Marika Baratashvili, and they walk to Plekhanov Street on foot. Along the way, his companion reassures him not to take the inconveniences to heart. As a token of gratitude, Galaktion writes a short poem titled "To Marika Baratashvili".

Source: M. Baratashvili, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 100.

1951

January 21

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "In Memory of Lenin".

Source: Памяти Ленина (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1951, 21 января, №18.

1951

January 17

He buys a new car, a "Pobeda", with license plate number 57-51 ГН.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 155; G. Tabidze's diary entry, 263, p. 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 136.

1951

January 19

He meets the director of the State Film Industry garage, Japaridze.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 156.

1951

January 20

He revises the fable "Kuchkha and the Clock" into a poem and notes that it could be expanded into an epic titled "Grandmother's glasses".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, 22; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 155.

Note: It is written in the source that it "could be added to the stories about Grandmother".

1951

January 20

In the morning, he reads Shalva Radiani's article "For Marxist-Leninist Literary Studies" in the 1950 issue of the magazine Literaturuli Dzebani and does not like that the works of various authors dedicated to the theme of the homeland are simply listed without any analysis or evaluation. The magazine states: "It is enough to mention: G. Leonidze's "Homeland", "Song about the Leader", "Don't Worry, Mother", G. Tabidze's "Homeland, First of All", A. Mirtskhulava's "Hymn to the Homeland", "Homeland of the Leader", A. Abasheli's "Do Not Let It Go, Strike It", S. Chikovani's "Song about David Guramishvili", L. Kiacheli's "Mountain Man", I. Grishashvili's "Two Words", I. Mosashvili's "My Homeland", "Look, Georgian, Your Homeland", K. Kaladze's "Song of the Georgian Warrior", "Letter to Mother", I. Abashidze's "Captain Bukhaidze", A. Gomiashvili's "Three Songs about the Homeland", Sh. Apkhaidze's "To the Homeland", R. Gvetadze's "Life Begins Again", K. Lortkipanidze's "Green Button", Gr. Abashidze's "The Ridge of Victory", "On the Southern Border", S. Shanshiashvili's "Heroes of Krtsanisi", and others". According to Galaktion, simply naming them is not enough, and he calls such critics "enumerators". In the poet's opinion, it is important to highlight where innovation appears in each work.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 272, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 233-234.

1951

January 20

He writes an untitled poem that begins with "The enemy will overcome him..."

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, 22; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 155-156.

.

1951

January 21

He writes an untitled humorous poem about the overwhelming matters "Gvatua sends me a telegram..."

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, 23; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 156.

1951

January 21

In his notebook, he comments on his previous notes regarding the 1948 anniversary evening. He mentions that the event took place, but it was Nikoloz Chachava who carried out some task, and he questions, "Who is this Chachava?" and wonders whether the story brought up by Kandid Charkviani pertains to him. He also mockingly refers to the poet's book, calling it "Pentera".

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-221, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 423.

Note: Presumably, the reference is to Nikoloz Chachava's poetry Book "I Sing to Life", published in 1950.

1951

January 21

In his notebook, he writes that Sergi Tchilaia declares Sandro Shanshiashvili a primitivist and advocates for a fight against primitivism.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-221, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 423.

1951

January 22

He is dissatisfied that the painting of his portrait by the artist Ucha Japaridze has been postponed.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, 24; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 157.

Note: Ucha Japaridze began to paint his portrait in 1952.

1951

January 23

There is a strong storm in Tbilisi, and Galaktion writes in his notebook that such weather is probably something few people remember.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 25; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 157.

1951

January 23

He hands over his poems to the publishing house Samshoblo for printing.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 25; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 157.

1951

January 23

In his diary, he writes that the issue of printing his material in the magazine Mnatobi is still unclear.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 25; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 157.

1951

January 23

He travels to Abkhazia.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 26; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 157.

1951

January 24

He stays at the Abkhazia hotel, visits the area where his house is to be built, and is pleased to see that the necessary construction materials – stones, mortar, and gravel – are already on site.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 27; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 157.

1951

January 26

He sends a dispatch to Pavlo Tychyna in Kyiv, congratulating him on his 90th anniversary, wishing him a long life, and success in praising the Ukrainian people.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-193; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 77.

1951

January 28

He sends a telegram from Sokhumi to Nino Kvirikadze, informing her that he will be in Tbilisi at 2 PM on January 29.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551.166; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 55.

1951

January 29

He returns from Abkhazia.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 30; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 157.

February

1951

February 1

He meets the principal of the Gldani school, Shubladze, and the head of the academic department, Giorgi Tsintsadze.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 32; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 157.

Note: The school principal is mentioned only by his last name, Shubladze.

1951

Until February 2

He is informed that on Friday, February 2, at 2 PM, the chairman of the commission working with young writers, Simon Chikovani, will hold a meeting, and attendance is mandatory.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 263, p. 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 137.

Note: The members of the mentioned commission are: Nino Abashidze, Vera Buachidze, Rostom Bezhanishvili, G. Gogichaishvili, Tengiz Gogoladze, Vladimir Tordua, Murman Lebanidze, Karpe Mumladze, Elizbar Maisuradze, Lado Mrevlishvili, Elizbar Ubilava, Revaz Japaridze, Lado Urjumelashvili, G. Zedgenidze, M. Bakuradze, Bezhan Bardavelidze, D. Gogotchuri, Dodo Vadatchkoria, M. Todua, Revaz Inanishvili, Kartlos Kasradze, Mariam Kvatchadze, Zurab Nakopia, and Edisher Kipiani.

1951

February 6

Vladimir Tatishvili gifts his Book "Georgians in Moscow" with a Russian inscription: "To the National Poet of Georgia – Galaktion, with deep respect and gratitude for the immeasurable pleasure I always receive from the great, yet simple and profoundly humane poetry of our time's poet, Galaktion Tabidze".

Source: MGL, t-477, Вл. Татишвили, "Грузины в Москву" (1653-1722), Tbilisi, 1950.

1951

Until February 11

He begins building a house in Sokhumi.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-640, 86; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 63.

1951

February 11

He lists the issues to be resolved. Among them are: car repairs, a visit to the Zarya Vostoka publishing house regarding the book, and matters related to the magazine Mnatobi.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-640, 86; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 63.

1951

February 16

In the Russian newspaper Sovetskaya Abkhazia, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "The Day of Joy" by Boris Serebryakov is published.

Source: День радости (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Б. Серебрякова, Советская Абхазия, Сухуми, 1951, 16 февраля, №33.

Note: The poem begins with the words, "Патриоты родины! сегодня вся страна справляет торжество...". Its original Georgian text could not be located.

1951

February 18

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "The Day of Joy" by Boris Serebryakov is published.

Source: День радости (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с Груз. Б. Серебрякова, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1951, 18 февраля, №41.

Note: The poem begins with the words, "Патриоты родины! сегодня вся страна справляет торжество...". Its original Georgian text could not be located.

1951

February 24

In the Russian newspaper Bolshevistskaya Putyovka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Hurrah to this New Georgia..." by Boris Serebryakov is published.

Source: "Ваша" новой Грузии! (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Большевицкая путевка, Тбилиси, 1951, 24 февраля, №25.

1951

February 24

A meeting is scheduled at the Gldani school.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 158

1951

February 24

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Long Live to our Thirtieth Anniversary!" by Boris Serebryakov is published.

Source: Да здравствует наше тридцатилетие! (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с Груз. Б. Серебрякова, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1951, 24 февраля, №46.

1951

February 25

In the Russian newspaper Sovetskaia Abkhazia, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Long Live to our Thirtieth Anniversary!" by Boris Serebryakov is published.

Source: Да здравствует наше тридцатилетие! (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Советская Абхазия, Сухуми, 1951, 25 февраля, №40.

1951

February 26

He falls ill, and doctor David Tushuriani prescribes a ten-day bed rest.

Source: Nino Kvirikadze's record in his diary, 266, 41; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 158.

1951

February 28

He feels a little better and gets out of bed, but he is not fully recovered.

Source: Nino Kvirikadze's record in his diary, 266; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 158.

March

1951

March 5

Doctor David Tushuriani is dissatisfied with his health condition and prescribes another ten-day bed rest.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 158.

1951

March 5

He writes a poem "A Woman from Baghdati" ("The Khanistskali roared, rushed, and raged...").

Source: Autograph, MGL, №3866; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 193.

Note: The poem is also found untitled "A Woman from Baghdati".

1951

March 12

He calculates the family expenses and, concerned, discovers that the expenditure has already reached 6000 roubles since the beginning of the month.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 158.

1951

After March 22

Shalva Radiani's Book "Georgian Literature of the Twentieth Century" is being published, with one chapter dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze. The critic reiterates his views on Galaktion's poetry that he had expressed in his earlier works.

Source: Sh. Radiani, "Georgian Literature of the Twentieth Century", 1951, p. 253-276.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on March 22, 1951.

1951

March 27

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Long Live to our Thirtieth Anniversary!" by Boris Serebryakov is published.

Source: Да здравствует наше тридцатилетие! (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1951, 27 марта, №72.

April

1951

After April 16

The first monograph on Galaktion Tabidze's work is published – Sergi Tchilaia's Book "The Poetry of Galaktion Tabidze". The author develops his earlier views on Galaktion's poetry. He discusses the following topics: the poet's worldview, Galaktion's relationship with the 1905 revolution, his work during the period of reaction and World War I, Galaktion and symbolism, Galaktion and 19th-century Georgian poetry, the October Socialist Revolution and Galaktion Tabidze, the poet's post-revolutionary work, and the issue of Galaktion's poetic style.

Source: S. Tchilaia, Galaktion Tabidze's poetry, 1951, p. 4-100.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on April 16, 1951.

May

1951

May 1

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "First of May" ("Through the streets and squares, it moves like a blizzard...") by Boris Serebryakov.

Source: Первое Мая (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1951, 1 мая, №102.

1951

May 1

The poem "To Native Stalin" is published in the newspaper Bolshevikuri Drosha.

Source: G. Tabidze, "To Native Stalin", Bolshevikuri Drosha, May 1, 1951.

1951

May 1

In the Russian newspaper Bolshevik, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Greetings to May" ("How can I not praise my country...") is published, translated by Boris Serebryakov.

Source: Сердце, пой! (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Большевик, Гагра, 1951, 1 мая.

1951

May 8

In the Russian newspaper Molodoi Stalinets, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Greetings to May" ("How can I not praise my country...") is published, translated by Boris Serebryakov.

Source: Сердце, пой! (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Молодой сталинец, Тбилиси, 1951, 8 мая, N 54.

1951

May 22

An article titled “For the Certificate of Maturity” is published in the newspaper Zarya Vostoka. It describes the exam held at Tbilisi’s First Boys’ School, which was chaired by Principal Jaju Jorjikia and the teacher of Georgian language and literature, G. Kutubidze. The publication states that Jorjikia opened the exam packet and read the topics, while Kutubidze wrote on the board: “The main themes of Akaki Tsereteli’s work,” “The work of Leo Kiacheli,” and the free topic “On G. Tabidze’s epigraph: ‘My dear land, I defend your beloved homeland, I will defend your sweet language, I will defend your beautiful harp.’” The publication then mentions that the teacher was curious to see which topics the students had chosen. He walked around the desks and found that 45 students had chosen the first two topics.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-189; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 120.

1951

May 29

He submits a request to the Minister of Education of the Soviet Socialist Republic of Georgia. He describes the situation outlined in the article “For the Certificate of Maturity” published in Zarya Vostoka, which discusses the exam held at Tbilisi’s First Boys’ School, and expresses his astonishment at why his epigraph should be the title for the free topic, why an offensive statement about students not choosing this topic was made for the press, and why other writers were referred to by their full names, while Galaktion was only mentioned by his last name and initials.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-189; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 120.

1951

May 31

Galaktion Tabidze falls ill with the flu.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 266, p. 52. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 158.

1951

May

On the title page of the brochure “Newly Arrived Literature Information Bulletin” by the Academy of Sciences of the Georgian SSR, he writes the untitled poem: “I was smart, I became a cretin: / The temperature is elevated / by this kind of bulletin...”

Source: MGL, t-9, “Newly Arrived Literature Information Bulletin”, Tbilisi, 1951, May, №5.

June

1951

June 3

Galaktion Tabidze is diagnosed with angina and general weakness. The doctor prescribes inhalations and a strict diet.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 158

1951

June 14

After his illness, Galaktion Tabidze goes out of the house for the first time.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 52. G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 158.

1951

After June 16

In the magazine Mnatobi, a review of the seventh volume of Galaktion Tabidze's works is published, written by Sargis Tsaishvili and Revaz Tvaradze. The critics respond positively to the poet's new book, reviewing it thematically and focusing on the depiction of Stalin in Galaktion's poetry. They discuss the theme of the Great Patriotic War in the poet's lyrics, as well as the European cycle of poems, where capitalist Western societies are criticized. The young critics reproach the poet for his neglect of the purity of language. The reviewers note that there are occasional examples in Galaktion's works where the literary language is violated, as the poet sometimes uses archaic forms, vague expressions, and even dialectical words.

Source: S. Tsaishvili, R. Tvaradze, vol. VII of Galaktion Tabidze's works, Magazine Mnatobi, 1951, №6, p. 158-160.

Dating: The magazine was signed for printing on June 16, 1951.

1951

June 19

He notes in his notebook that the magazines Mnatobi refuses to publish his poem "For Peace", and the publishing house Sakhelgami declines to print his book. He believes that certain individuals are attempting to sabotage his upcoming 60th birthday celebration. He considers it necessary to rally the "railway workers" to strengthen his position and organize a "Peace Evening". Galaktion believes that the Writers' Union continues to follow Simon Chikovani's direction.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-225, p. 5, 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 436, 437.

1951

June 19

In the newspaper Komunisti, he reads Ivane Gigineishvili's article on Arnold Chikobava's "Explanatory Dictionary of the Georgian Language" and does not like it. He is troubled by the negative reception at the State Publishing House and the Writers' Union regarding the inclusion of his Book in the publishing plan.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-225, p. 5, 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 436, 437.

1951

June 19

He learns that Pyotr Pavlenko has passed away and writes down in his notebook, in Russian, a phrase he heard from him from the Old Testament and translates it into Georgian: “Surround me with many consumed offerings (i.e., the fattened calves)”.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-225, p. 5, 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 436, 437.

1951

June 19

He submits a request to the deputy director of the State Publishing House, Erasti Torotadze, asking that the royalty for the seventh volume of his works be transferred either fully or at least partially on the current or following day.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-80; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 77.

1951

June 19

Due to the intense heat, he drives out of the city by car.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-225, p. 5, 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 436, 437.

1951

June 19

The phone is not working.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-225, p. 5, 6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 436, 437.

1951

June 19 or later

He writes down a Russian pun about Giorgi Mdivani in his notebook.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-225, p. 7; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 436, 437.

1951

June 19 or later

In his notebook, he notes down the recipe for Sirolin, a traditional remedy for bronchitis.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-225, p. 9, 10; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 436, 438.

1951

June 19 or later

He writes a humorous poem titled “Pina to Mina” in his notebook, addressed to Mina Chkhikvadze, the cashier of the state publishing house, and Pina Goletiani, the chief accountant.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-225, p. 11, 12; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 438.

1951

June 20

He submits a request to the State Publishing House of Georgia, asking that 50 copies of the seventh volume of his works be sold to him at author's prices.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-190; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 121.

1951

June 20

He submits a request to the chairman of the board of the Society for the Dissemination of Political and Scientific Knowledge of Georgia, asking to be admitted as a member of the society.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-192; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 121.

1951

June 21

He submits a request to the State Publishing House of Georgia, asking that 100 copies of the seventh volume of his works be provided to him for his royalty account.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-191; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 121.

1951

June 21

He is traveling to Sokhumi.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 53; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 159.

1951

June

He makes critical notes about Simon Chikovani, recalling how, in 1944, he acted "improperly" to ensure that he, rather than Galaktion, received the Stalin Prize. He remembers the harsh criticism Chikovani directed at Galaktion's Book "Gold in the Azure of Ajara" in the Writers' Union and how he tries to present the linguistic distortions in his poetry as innovations. He writes that Chikovani has surrounded himself with futurists and opposes anyone who is not part of his circle. Chikovani, as editor of the Russian-language anthology of Georgian poetry, tarnished its quality, dismantled the cooperative atmosphere within the Writers' Union, leaving only factional meetings, and distributed Stalin Prizes exclusively to his supporters. He edits and promotes the books of untalented young writers and even attempted to disrupt the celebration of Galaktion's 40-year literary anniversary.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 272, p. 13; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 236.

1951

June

In his notebook, he makes a note titled G. Leonidze, asserting that Giorgi Leonidze believes himself to be superior to him. He claims that Leonidze deceives people at the Literature Museum, pretending to be humble when he needs to be, and proud when he chooses to be. He made a lot of money from books about Stalin, flaunts the title of “poet-academician”, yet, in reality, no one voted him into the Academy; it was Petre Sharashidze who got him in.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 272, p. 13; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 238.

July

1951

July 3

He writes rhymes for the word ‘Aragvi’.

Source: MGL, d-240, p. 2; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 529.

Note: It is dated according to the next recorded entry.

1951

July 3

He writes the lyrics of the folk song “Kvedrula Has Risen”.

Source: MGL, d-240, p. 3; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 528.

1951

July 3

He starts working on the text of a poem dedicated to Kandid Charkviani. Around one stanza, he makes a sketch, drawing the head of a man with devil’s horns, inside of which the text is enclosed.

Source: MGL, d-240, p. 3-6; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 528-531.

Note: The poem, in its revised form, was published in 1952 in the collection “Glory to Stalin”, on page 95, without a title, as “The heroic people, the beloved people...”. Later, it was revised again and, after the poet’s death, was published in an academic edition under the title “A Poem”.

1951

July 3 or later

He writes the list of Georgian writers who are laureates of the Stalin Prize: Konstantine Lortkipanidze, Giorgi Leonidze, Ioseb Noneshvili, Demna Shengelaia, Khuta Berulava.

Source: MGL, d-240, p. 7; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 531.

Note: In the source, the names of the writers are listed with initials.

Dating: It is dated according to the previous recorded entry.

1951

July 3 or later

He writes a 16-point list in which he records the materials collected in folders on various topics, including materials for the seventh, eighth, and ninth volumes, dissertations, academic publications, materials for the 60th anniversary celebration, translations of various poets, and other issues important to him.

Source: MGL, d-240, p. 8; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 531, 532.

Note: It is dated according to the previous recorded entry.

1951

After July 7

He reads the collection of poems translated into Russian by Pavlo Tychyna, “For Stalin, For the Homeland, For the World!” and makes highlights. On the back cover, he writes a quote from the July 7, 1951 issue of the Russian newspaper Literaturnaya Gazeta, which states that there is a clear tendency in Ukrainian literary criticism to consider contemporary leading Ukrainian writers as classics, whose work is free of any flaws and can only be evaluated with the help of enthusiastic epithets. He is interested in whether this is truly the case.

Source: MGL, t-432, Павло Тычина, “За Сталина, За Родину, За Мир!”, Moscow, 1951.

August

1951

August 21

In the Writers’ Union, he collects memories and articles about Akaki Tsereteli. He is promised that Akaki Gatsereia and Eremo Karelshvili will write letters. He notes that at 11 o’clock, in the presence of Beno Chikobava, the poems will be handed over to Marijani. He also notes that Beno Chikobava should be asked to check the punctuation marks in the poems and address other stylistic issues. He thinks that he needs to write the main idea and brief summary of each poem. In a notebook, he writes someone’s words about Lute to Marijani. He is interested in where and when Sergi Tchilaia’s Book about him will be published.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-225, p. 14–17; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 438, 439.

1951

August 21

At one o’clock, he takes the fountain pen for repair.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-225, p. 17,18; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 439.

1951

August or later

He visits the illustrator Alexandre Bandzeladze in the printing house, who is supposed to draw his portrait for the magazine Drosha. He is wearing a black fur coat, a large turban on his head, and a red chokha draped over his shoulder. Bandzeladze prefers to paint him in his contemporary attire, and Galaktion agrees. However, before the poet takes off his fur coat, hat, and chokha, photographer Otar Turkia takes several photos of him in this outfit from different angles.

Source: N. Agiashvili, Let The Toast Be His, And Let His Mention Be In Glory, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 176.

Dating: The magazine Drosha was published starting from August 1951.

1951

August or later

From the leading article “Through the Path Illuminated by the Party’s Wisdom”, published in the eighth issue of the magazine Mnatobi in 1951, which is likely written by Irakli Abashidze, he transcribes long quotes and occasionally adds his own comments: “Hm! Does this even need proving?”, “This is devaluation”, and similar phrases. Additionally, he lists the most pathetic and absurd statements in twelve sections and concludes with the two words: “What backwardness?”
Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 270, p. 20-23; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 182.

September

1951

September 2

In the Rustavi colony, Daria Akhvlediani’s manuscripts are sent by her son, the prisoner Otar Akhvlediani, and he has them signed with a note that they were received from Galaktion Tabidze, with the intention of handing them over to her son.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-254; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 316.

Note: The note is kept along with the letter.

1951

September 11

He has his photo taken with the students of the Medical Institute.

Source: Ts. Kuchuloria-Alania, Recollection about Galaktion, Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, April 2, 1993, p. 12.

1951

September 15 or later

He receives another letter from Otar Akhvlediani, the son of writer Daria Akhvlediani, from the Rustavi colony. Otar informs him that he has received “a part” of his mother’s poems and 125 roubles, which is equivalent to his survival. He apologizes for troubling him but asks if he could send his old clothes through the messenger of this letter, as everything he had is worn out.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-254; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 316.

1951

September or later

A meeting is organized at the 25th Secondary School, where 11th-grade student Nugzar Tsereteli recites a poem dedicated to him and hands over a typed copy of the poem. Galaktion hugs him and kisses him on the forehead.

Source: N. Tsereteli, Meetings with the Immortal Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 171-172.

Dating: According to the recollection, at this time, Nugzar Tsereteli was in the 11th grade, which could not have happened before September 1951.

October

1951

October 1

He is in Sokhumi and writes a poem “With Heart and Soul” (“The ronin of years, days, minutes...”).

Source: Autograph, MGL, №541; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 193.

1951

Until October 11

He learns that Beso Zhghenti has given poems for translation into Russian for Galaktion’s Russian-language Book to Vladimir Derzhavin and other translators.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 267, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 160.

1951

October 11

In his diary, he writes quotes from the speech made by Kandid Charkviani at the Soviet Writers’ Union’s Executive Committee’s plenary session dedicated to Rustaveli, which relate to Galaktion’s poem “Epoch”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 267, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 160.

1951

October 11

In Moscow, the Georgian translator Pati Tvaltvadze introduces Russian critic Iosif Grinberg to Galaktion, referring to him as the Patriarch of Poets.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 267, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 159.

1951

October 11

Unexpectedly, the Copyright Protection Department grants him 200 roubles as an honorarium.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 267, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 160.

Note: The source does not specify which publication the honorarium is for.

1951

October 11

Konstantine Kapaneli promises that he will write an article about him.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 267, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 160.

1951

October 11

He meets with the rector of the State University, Niko Ketskhoveli, and discusses holding his literary evening at the university. He asks for his guidance and suggests that a special issue of the university newspaper be printed for the occasion. Ketskhoveli promises to help.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 267, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 160.

1951

October 11

He meets with Varlam Mikadze, the responsible editor of the university newspaper, and discusses the printing of a special issue of the newspaper, posters, and programs for his jubilee evening planned at the university. Mikadze promises to do everything as instructed by Rector Niko Ketskhoveli.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 267, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 160.

1951

October 11

During discussions with the university administration about his jubilee evening planned at the institution, he senses that the students are persistently following him step by step.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 267, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 160.

1951

October 13

He speaks at the plenary session of the Writers' Union's Executive Committee, and is met with a warm round of applause.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-550, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 264.

1951

October 16

He reads the newspaper Komunisti and writes down a stanza from his poem "The Year 1940": "When the embankment is covered..." and a stanza from his poem "The Tale of One Night": "I swiftly emerged from the trench...".

Source: MGL, t-691. newspaper Komunisti, October 16, 1951, №2444, p. 3.

1951

October 17

He makes excerpts from the speeches of the First Secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia, Kandid Charkviani's report at the plenary session, as well as from the speeches of the Secretary of the Writers' Union, Sergi Tchilaia, and the Vice President of the Academy of Sciences, Rafael Agadze. He writes his conclusions alongside these excerpts. Against Sergi Tchilaia's views, he notes that Kandid Charkviani's speech was not harsh, that unhealthy relationships among Georgian scientists are not a new development, and that it is not just some, but everyone who fights for privileged positions. He agrees with Chikobava's correct opinion that Vazha-Pshavela, Ilia Chavchavadze, and Akaki Tsereteli should be recognized as creators of the Georgian literary language. He also argues that symbolists and futurists are still active, and it is incorrect to speak of them in the past tense. As for Sandro Shanshiashvili, he writes that he cannot be considered a representative of primitivism if by "primitively writing" one does not mean writing primitively. Regarding Agadze's speech, Galaktion writes that he does not reflect on his own words and comes across as if all Georgian scientists have issues with their relationships.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 269, p. 1-3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 162-166.

1951

October 23

He prepares the Russian word-for-word translation of the poem "For October".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-259, 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008. p. 88-89.

1951

After October 25

He reads the second issue of the magazine Drosha, in which Mikhail Mrevlishvili's short story "The Hero of His Portrait" is published. The author's approach to the theme reminds him of another writer, Germane Giorgadze, who often published feuilletons under the pseudonym "Germane Shubidze" in the newspaper Komunisti.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 183.

Dating: The issue of the magazine is signed for printing on October 25, 1951.

1951

October 26

In his diary, he writes that traveling from home to the Academy and the University and back costs 50 roubles for gasoline.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 55; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 159

1951

October 27

At 9 o'clock in the morning, the driver takes Galaktion's step-daughter, Nunu Ebanoidze, to the university. He is not seen for a while, and when he returns, he tells Galaktion that his mother is ill and he stopped by home. At 2 o'clock, the driver takes Galaktion's wife, Nino Kvirikadze, for lunch, and the poet writes all of this in his diary.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 266, p. 56; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 159.

1951

October 29

In his diary, he writes in Russian the name and surname of Natasha Korneyeva, the granddaughter of Boris Korneyev, the head of the arts and literature department of the newspaper Zarya Vostoka and a translator.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 267; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 162; For

1951

October 29

In his diary, he writes the name and surname of children's writer Tamar Chkhaidze.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 267; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 162;

November

1951

Until November 6

He writes a poem titled "Makhata" ("We were tormented by the old Makhata...").

Source: Autograph, MGL, №6662; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, VI, 1968, p. 202; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 641.

Note: The poem is also found untitled "We were tormented by the old Makhata..." and "We were tormented...".

1951

Until November 6

He revises the untitled poem "Rapid flow, wave upon wave...", written on September 11, 1946, creates a new version titled "By the Metekhi Bridge", and prepares it for publication in the fifth volume of his eight-volume collected works.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №22-d, p. 22, №3975; №4117-4118; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, VI, 1968, p. 23; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 641.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "By the Tbilisi Baths" and untitled "Everything the night listened to...".

1951

Until November 6

He writes a poem titled "To a Comrade" ("Many storms roared across the world...").

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3977; №4153; №4145, 4150; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, VI, 1968, p. 204; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 641.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "To Your Legal and Illegal" and untitled "To your legal and illegal...".

1951

Until November 6

He writes a poem titled "The Woman Mower" ("A young woman...").

Source: Autographs: MGL, №701; №3979; №3321; №5493; Na-390, p. 4; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 200; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 642.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "The Shepherd-Artist" and untitled, beginning with "The shepherd, enchanted..." and "A young woman...".

1951

Until November 6

He writes a poem titled “The Old Millstone” (“This millstone, this millstone...”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №540; №3992-3993; №4142-4143; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 206; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 643.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “The Millstone”.

1951

Until November 6

He writes a poem titled “Peace” (“The door of the Book or the gates of peace...”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №6417, p. 254; №6666; 4100; 6145-6145s; 4157; 4158; G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 254; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 644.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “May 1”, “With Stalin’s Flag”, “With Lenin’s Flag”, and an untitled poem “Praise upon praise...”.

1951

Until November 6

He writes a poem titled “By Nasakirali” (“Not a palace, but a golden pavilion...”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3986; №6662; №4147-4148; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. I, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 257; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 644.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “In Memory of Egnate Ninoshvili”, “In Guria”, and an untitled poem “Not a palace...”.

1951

Until November 6

He writes a poem titled “Red Square” (“There I stand, where the Mausoleum is...”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №6416; №6669; №7637; №131-a, p. 3965-3966; №8322-8323; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 209; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 645.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Dear Stalin”, “Lenin”, “To Lenin”, and untitled poems “Today we remember the International...”, “There I stand, where the Mausoleum is...”, and “There I stand, where the great...”.

1951

Until November 6

He writes a poem titled “Young People!” (“Young people! We carry the flag of the crowned...”).

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4009; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. I, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 58; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 645.

1951

Until November 6

He revises the poem “Prologue” (“A short, distant sound...”), written on June 19, 1935, creates a new version titled “The Distant Sound of the Locomotive”, and prepares it for publication in the fifth volume of his eight-volume collected works.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №544; №3987; №7637; №8422; №4328; №66-a, p. 1623-1624; №4164-4165; №1396-1399; №5237-5240; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. I, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 356; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 638.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “The Distant Sound of the Locomotive”, “Europe”, “Prologue”, and untitled poems “A short, distant sound...” and “The farthest sound...”.

1951

Until November 6

He revises the untitled poem “I saw you – shoulders bent...”, written on May 7, 1946, creates a new version titled “The Handshake”, and prepares it for publication in the fifth volume of his eight-volume collected works.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №645; №4004; №6794; №4129; №8358; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, 1968, p. 17.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “In the Vineyards”, “Khelkhvavi” (name of choral harvesting song), “Memory”, and an untitled poem beginning with “I saw you: shoulders bent...”.

1951

Until November 6

He revises the poem “Autumn” (“Fill it up, oh sun!..”), written on October 5, 1946, creates a new version titled “Fill It Up, Oh Sun”, and prepares it for publication in the fifth volume of his eight-volume collected works.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №108-a, p. 2984; №3991; №6518; №4107; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, VI, 1968, p. 199; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 640.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Fill It Up, Oh Sun, This Autumn” and an untitled version “Fill it up, oh sun, this autumn...”.

1951

Until November 6

He writes a poem “The Return of the Warrior”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1190-1191; №2694; №1869; №3690; №3961; №4127; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 249.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “August in Us”, “August in Tbilisi”, “The Machine in the Mountains”, “Rachveli”, and without a title, starting with: “I feel that in Tbilisi, it is a scorching month...”; “August is a good, beautiful month...”; “August in Tbilisi...”.

Dating: It is dated according to the date of submission for the production of the fifth volume of the eight-volume collected works.

1951

Until November 6

He revises the untitled poem “Well, Think Carefully”, written on April 15, 1935, creates a new version titled “Rustavi”, and prepares it for publication in the fifth volume of his eight-volume collected works.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4008; №4106; №6418; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 202; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 636.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “In Rustavi”, “The Monument at the Agreement Square”, “At Voltaire’s Monument”, “How Could You Not Be Offended?”, “Well, Think Carefully”, and untitled poems “Steel itself rings, sings...” and “Here steel rings, sings...”.

1951

Until November 6

He writes a poem “We Cut Off the Event and Triumphed!”

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4128; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 251.

Dating: It is dated according to the date of submission for the production of the fifth volume of the eight-volume collected works.

1951

Until November 6

He writes a poem “Young People!” (“Young people! The crown bearers...”).

Source: G. Tabidze, works, vol. V, 1952, p. 46; AE, Book VII, p. 259.

Dating: It is dated according to the time of submission for printing of the fifth volume of his works.

1951

Until November 6

He writes a poem “The Genius of the People, the Talent of the People”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4102; N. Kvirikadze’s autograph, №3967; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 46.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Academy”.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1951

Until November 6

He writes a poem “Evil Conversation”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №546; №2034; №4125; №5503; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 93.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“Sloping Heading...”).

Dating: It is dated according to the submission date for the production of the fifth volume of the eight-volume collection of works.

1951

Until November 6

He writes an extensive response regarding the comments made by the reviewer Kale Bobokhidze on the fifth volume of his works. Galaktion demands that the reviewer explain the basis for requesting the removal of three poems – “Invention”, “Nine Hundred Forty Years”, and “Flower of Light” – from the volume. Galaktion expresses doubts about the reviewer’s competence and asks for his qualifications to be checked. He cannot contain his irony regarding Bobokhidze’s remark about the words inscribed on King Erekle’s sword, quoted in his poem, “Evil Conversation”. Bobokhidze describes these words as “the acrobatic jargon of symbolists and futurists”. Galaktion considers the only valid comment in the review to be the “discovery” of a printing mistake made by the typesetter, for which the critic dedicated a quarter of the page to correcting.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 274; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 251-258;

1951

November 6

The State Publishing House grants permission for the production of the fifth volume of Galaktion Tabidze’s eight-volume collected works.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in eight volumes, vol. V, 1952, p. 243.

1951

November 6

A translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “To October and the World” is published in the Russian newspaper Bolshevistkaia Putiovka.

Source: Октябрю и миру (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Большеви́стская путе́вка, Тбилиси, 1951, 6 ноября, №133.

1951

November 7

A translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “To October and the World” by Georgy Kreytan is published in the Russian newspaper Leninski Put.

Source: Октябрю и миру (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Г. Крейтан, Ленинский путь, Цалка, 1951, 7 ноября, N 85.

December

1951

December 3

As a sign of respect, he presents a Book to the doctor, Ketevan Kandelaki, the head of the biochemical laboratory.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 270, p. 51; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 198.

Note: It is not mentioned which Book he dedicates to Ketevan Kandelaki.

1951

December 4

A translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Teacher, Leader, Creator of Victories”, dedicated to Joseph Stalin, is published in the Russian newspaper Bolshevistkaia Putiovka.

Source: Учитель, вождь, творец побед! (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Большеви́стская путевка, Тбилиси, 1951, 4 декабря, №145.

1951

December 8

He reads the newspaper Komunisti, notes the article “Results of the VII Republican Olympiad of Artistic Amateur Performance”, and makes highlights.

Source: MGL, t-693. newspaper Komunisti, December 8, 1951, №287, p. 1.

1951

After December 10

He reads Pavel Shaduri’s poem “The Rooster – The Translator” in the Donbas newspaper Literaturnaya Gazeta and translates it.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 270, p. 40; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 191-192.

1951

December 12

Sergi Tchilaia is preparing a Book about Galaktion Tabidze, which is planned to be published by Zarya Vostoka. The critic asks Galaktion to provide a New Year’s poem, which pleases the poet.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 270, p. 41; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 192.

1951

After December 12

He writes an untitled poem “New Year! You again, again...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 270, p. 43; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 194.

1951

After December 12

In his notebook, he writes when, where, with whom, or under what circumstances he was photographed on a film reel.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 270, p. 68; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 197.

1951

December 14

He quits smoking.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 270, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 170.

1951

December 15

The State Printing and Publishing Combine grants permission for the printing of the fifth volume of Galaktion Tabidze’s eight-volume collected works.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in eight volumes, vol. V, 1952, p. 243.

1951

December 16

The State Publishing House informs that in order to publish the fifth volume of his works, they need the photograph, which was displayed by the manager of the photo salon. Therefore, Galaktion sends his nephew, Nodar Tabidze, to him and asks for the photo to be sent or for the same photo to be reprinted.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 171.

1951

December 16

In his notebook, he writes that in 1924, his poem was published in the magazine Mnatobi, which was written based on the principle of Samaia.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 271, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 219.

Note: The poet does not mention either the title of the poem (which is also sometimes referred to as a poem) "Memories of the Days When It Flashed" or the issue number (№5) of the magazine Mnatobi, because after the publication of this poem, dedicated to the August 1924 anti-Soviet uprising, the authorities removed it from the magazine and arrested the author.

1951

December 16

In his diary, he writes about the poetic meter he introduced in the lyrical and epic genres called "Samaiani", which consists of rhymed stanzas made up of three lines, each containing an equal number of syllables. As an example of a five-syllable Samaiani, he cites his poem "Memories of Those Days When Lightning Flashed"; for an eight-syllable Samaiani, "Voices Resound of Marvelous Tales..."; and for a ten-syllable Samaiani, the poem about the seasons, "Garden, How Your Eyelashes Tremble...". Among his poems, he names the following as examples of Samaiani: "The People of Amirani", "The Return of Elguja", and "Serious Illness". Galaktion writes that such segmentation of a poem allows for maximum compression of expression. According to him, this type of laconicism was characteristic of the orators of Laconia (Sparta), and the term itself derives from this origin. In the second, third, fifth, and sixth lines, the dynamic shifts to a static state. The poet remarks that this form of verse does not appear in the works of Ilia, Akaki, or Vazha and wonders whether it might be found in the works of Besarion Gabashvili, Alexandre Chavchavadze, or Davit Guramishvili, or if it is referenced in Mamuka Baratashvili's "Trial". Galaktion then discusses Italian and French tercets and terzinas, adding that the Georgian Samaiani is older and distinguished by its innate simplicity. Additionally, the poet examines the integration of three traditional forms within Georgian culture: poetry, song, and dance, as well as their reflection in the fresco on the southern wall of Svetitskhoveli Cathedral.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 271, p. 1-2; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 219-220;

Note: Inspired by the fresco on the southern wall of Svetitskhoveli Cathedral, Iliko Sukhishvili choreographed the dance “Samaya”. The poet notes that the poem “Voices Resound of Marvelous Tales...” was published in 1910 in the magazine Teatri da Tskhovreba. Additionally, the poem about the seasons, “Garden, How Your Eyelashes Tremble...” is mentioned. However, neither this publication nor these specific poems have been located.

1910

December 16

Under the title “Structure of Lower Letters”, the poet discusses a technical innovation that is highly significant in connection with the so-called “printing aesthetics”. The issue concerns an unresolved problem in Georgian typography: fitting every letter between two horizontal lines, as is done in Russian, French, and English texts. The Georgian alphabet proved incompatible with this approach, but Galaktion considers it possible to compose a poem entirely using either equal letters (a, i, o, t, etc.) or only those with lower letters. As examples, he cites his own poems, “ღეღე-ღეღე” (from spring to spring) and the untitled piece “The Wind Carries the Hawk Away...”. The poet concludes that it would be both impossible and unnecessary to write an entire epic poem or novel using this method.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 271, p. 3-25; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 222-227.

1951

After December 16

He makes a note titled “Poets as Editors” and lists the editors of renowned journals and newspapers, referred to as “Kvatchi” (artful dodger) editors: Irakli Abashidze - Mnatobi, Grigol Abashidze - Droscha, Karlo Kaladze - Niangi, Giorgi Kachakhidze - Oktombreli, Niogol Chachava - Kedlis Gazetistvis, and Revaz Margiani - Dila. He then adds Giorgi Natroshvili, editor of the magazine Literatura da Khelovneba, describing him as the embellisher of this group.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 270, p. 59; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 205;

1951

After December 16

In the note titled “What Some Poets Are Like”, he presents dialogues to illustrate how certain poets, when asked to do one thing, end up doing something entirely different and fail to keep their promises.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 270, p. 59; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 205;

1951

After December 16

In his diary, he notes that phrases from his poems are often used as titles for contemporary writers' works and provides examples: the title of Alexandre Kutateladze's novel "Face to Face" is taken from the preface to his poem "Epoch"; the title of Sandro Euli's 1951 poetry collection, "Life is Joy", is derived from a line in a poem from "Epoch", which states, "Life is still joy". He also mentions that one of Yakinthe Lisashvili's books bears a line from one of his poems as its title, and there are numerous such instances with Ioseb Grishashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 60; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 206;

Note: It is possible he is referring to Yakinthe Lisashvili's 1926 Book "The Caravan of Waves", as Galaktion uses similar phrases in his works, such as "The Caravan of Clouds", "The Caravan of Mists", and "The Caravan of Thoughts".

1951

After December 16

From the fifth issue of the magazine Mnatobi in 1951, he copies a stanza from Alexandre Abasheli's poem "In Memory of I. Nikoladze" into his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 60; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 206;

1951

After December 16

From the ninth issue of the magazine Mnatobi in 1951, he copies a statement from the article "Andro Lomidze: New Short Stories", noting that Lomidze is almost the only one in Georgian Soviet prose who works with the theme of the sea.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 60; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 206;

1951

After December 16

He calls the accountant of the State Publishing House, and the phone is answered by Irakli Abashidze, who speaks in an official tone.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 60; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 206;

1951

After December 16

In his diary entry titled "Never Has There Been" vs. "Never Was", he wonders whether the double negative form is correct. To clarify this, he does not refer to the works of Ilia or Akaki, nor does he inquire about the stance of the Academy of Sciences. Instead, he observes how this form is used by writers. Based on his observation, he notes that in the eighth issue of Mnatobi, there are numerous instances of double negation, whereas in the ninth issue, it is the opposite.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 61; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 207;

1951

After December 16

In his diary, he notes that on December 20th, Professor Petre Sharia will give a lecture at the university on the topic "The Main Issues of Marxist-Leninist Ethics".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 61; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 206;

1951

After December 16

In the eighth issue of the magazine Mnatobi in 1951, he reads Givi Gachechiladze's article "Irakli Abashidze: A Song", which is essentially an apology for Irakli Abashidze. Since it is published in a magazine edited by Abashidze himself, Galaktion believes it to be self-promotion. In the diary entry where he discusses this, Galaktion titles it "Irakli Abashidze (i rak riba) (and a crab is a fish)", alluding to Abashidze by comparing him to a crab that engages in fishing when there are no fish.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 62; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 207

1951

After December 16

In the eighth issue of the magazine Mnatobi in 1951, he reads Solomon Tsaishvili's article about Estate Mtchedlishvili, in which the author recalls an article published about him in the 98th issue of the newspaper Droeba in 1885. The author of Droeba praises Mtchedlishvili's relentless literary battle against the immoral life of certain members of the clergy. It is also mentioned that one week after the publication of this article, on May 20th, Bosleveli was treacherously killed while heading towards the Bagrati Cathedral in Kutaisi.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 64; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 210;

1951

After December 16

He recalls an incident from the time of the Great Patriotic War, when the Russian writer and Supreme Soviet deputy Pyotr Pavlenko visited Tbilisi. During his visit, Irakli Abashidze, the secretary of the Writers' Union, asked for a military parade uniform so that he could appear as a participant in the war. In response, Pavlenko, speaking behind Abashidze's back, muttered a Russian proverb: "Even a crab tries to fish when there are no fish".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 63; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 207;

1951

After December 16

He reflects on the fact that Alexandre Kutateladze was nicknamed “Kokia” (a term suggesting a flat face) and notes in his diary that his physical appearance and literary style complement each other well. In general, he recalls the phrase “The face is the mirror of the soul”, and in this context, he also considers the appearances of other authors, including Sergo Kldiashvili and Karlo Kaladze.
Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 270, p. 63; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 209;

1951

After December 16

In the ninth issue of the magazine Mnatobi in 1951, he reads Nazim Hikmet’s 1927 poem “Sadness” and is puzzled by the fact that while such pessimistic poems by foreign poets are translated, Georgian poets are criticized for expressing sadness. In his notebook, he writes a quote from S. Tsulukidze, who speaks about Parment Tsakhelis’ poetry and emphasizes that when a poet writes about the bitterness of life, it does not mean that they have lost all hope or are a pessimist.
Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 270, p. 64; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 209;

1951

After December 16

He writes an untitled poem “And you rise, beloved sun...”.
Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 270, G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 209;

1951

After December 16

In the newspaper Komunisti, he reads what Britain and the United States say about the 1939 Soviet-Germany pact and notes it in his diary.
Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 270, p. 70; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 215;

1951

After December 16

In the newspaper Komunisti, he reads the statement by British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and the various reactions to it. He also notes that Eden considers it necessary to declare a ceasefire in order to reunify Korea.
Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 270, p. 71; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 215-216;

1951

After December 16

From the calendar, he writes that an International Commission for Cultural Relations has been established with the World Council and that steps are being taken to facilitate cultural exchanges between nations. He also notes plans to celebrate the anniversary milestones: the 150th anniversary of Victor Hugo's birth, the 500th anniversary of Leonardo da Vinci's birth, the 100th anniversary of Nikolai Gogol's death, and the 1000th anniversary of Avicenna's death.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 72; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 216;

1951

After December 16

He writes an untitled poem "The wing burst from the volcano, the sky erupted...".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 42; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 193;

1951

After December 16

He plans to talk to the director of the State Publishing House, Andro Tevzadze, regarding the fifth volume of his works. Before determining the price of the volume, it is necessary to clarify the author's honorarium. He is curious whether the accounting department is aware of the amount they intend to pay him and what price will be listed for the book.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 41; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 193-194;

1951

After December 16

He plans to adapt his poem "The Flower of Light" into a one-act opera and to include some of the poems from the sixth volume's cycle, "On the Centenarians".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 44; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 194;

1951

After December 16

He writes two versions of the poem "The Land of Mao Zedong" ("Mist Covers the Map...").

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 49; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 196;

1951

After December 16

In the newspaper Komunisti, he reads the information from the Georgian News Agency about the arrival of a delegation of Chinese literary figures led by Fin-Sue-Fin in Tbilisi on November 30th, and he notes it in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 51; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 198-199

1951

After December 16

In the newspaper Komunisti, he reads the information about the meeting held on December 3rd at the Georgian Writers' Union with a delegation of Chinese writers, and he notes it in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 51; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 198-199.

1951

After December 16

He writes a poem titled "March" ("He builds the railway station...").

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 54; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 201;

1951

After December 16

In his notebook, he writes words and poetic phrases that rhyme with the word "peace".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 54; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 199-200;

1951

After December 16

In his notebook, he writes about the composition of the Cinema Commission within the Writers' Union and expresses frustration that half of the six members are not part of the Writers' Union.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 57; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 203-204;

1951

After December 16

In the November 25th issue of the newspaper Komunisti, he reads that on November 26th, a jubilee evening dedicated to the 100th anniversary of Ekaterine Gabashvili will be held at the Rustaveli Concert Hall. He also comes across Sergi Tchilaia's article "Ekaterine Gabashvili" and expresses his impression in his diary with the words "It's nothing special".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 58; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 204;

1951

After December 16

In the November 25th issue of the newspaper Komunisti, he reads an article by the Chief Oncologist of the Ministry of Health of Georgia titled "Innovations in the Treatment of Malignant Tumours" and writes down the doctor's surname in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 58; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 204; For 1951

After December 16

In the November 25th issue of the newspaper Komunisti, he reads German Shubidze's feuilleton "The Investigator in Distress", about the violations and attempts to cover up crimes within the Kommuna artel, and he likes it.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 58; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 204;

1951

After December 16

He writes a poem "The Georgian Automobile is Rushing".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 41; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 191;

1951

December 20

Shalva Radiani uses a phrase to assess Galaktion, which he "borrows" from the writer Belov. G. Orjonikidze exposes the plagiarist, and as a result, Radiani is expelled from the graduate school. Orjonikidze informs Lavrentiy Beria about the matter, prompting Beria to assign the issue to Kandid Charkviani for clarification. Radiani is summoned to the Central Committee and asked about the reason. He is unable to provide a convincing answer. G. Orjonikidze is reinstated in the graduate school, but the issue related to Galaktion remains unresolved.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 272, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 234.

1951

December 20

In his diary, he writes that Shalva Radiani, Giorgi Abzianidze, Giorgi Leonidze, Grigol (Kitsa) Kherkheulidze, and Sergi Tchilaia formed a group against him in the magazine Literaturuli Dzebani, with the goal of promoting Giorgi Leonidze's name.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 272, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 234.

1951

December 20

In the entry "Is It Acceptable?" he writes that Givi Orjonikidze exposed Shalva Radiani for plagiarizing a phrase in his article about Galaktion from a Russian critic. As a result, Radiani was expelled from the graduate school by Orjonikidze. After the intervention of Lavrentiy Beria and Kandid Charkviani, Orjonikidze was reinstated, but Radiani was not punished for the plagiarism.

Galaktion suspects that Radiani sabotaged his proposal to read one of his poems at the Shota Rustaveli Institute of Literature. He also accuses Radiani of ignoring information about the Galaktion Tabidze Literary Circle at the university.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 272, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 234.

1951

December 20

In Mnatobi, Shalva Radiani has still not made a decision on the poem that was submitted for publication almost a month ago. Initially, he told Galaktion that he had not read it yet, and later he said that he would present his opinion to the editorial board.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 272, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 235.

Note: The title of the poem is not indicated in the autograph, but on the cover page of the notebook, it is written "The Sunrise in Georgia".

1951

After December 20

Under the title "Irakli Abashidze's Heinous Actions", Galaktion notes that Irakli Abashidze rejected the young and talented poet Mirza Gelovani simply because he admired Galaktion. When the war began, Abashidze saved many from going to the front, but the physically frail Mirza Gelovani was sent to war. Galaktion also recalls how, before the celebration of the "Knight in the Panther's Skin" days in Sokhumi, Abashidze arrived there several days earlier and had his photo along with his friends' photos published in the local press. When Galaktion expressed surprise at this behaviour, Abashidze responded, "Shouldn't we honour ourselves?" Galaktion also reflects on how Irakli Abashidze caused the disbandment of the magazine issue Chveni Taoba because of a letter by Yeremia Astvatsaturian, who had called Galaktion the founder of modern literature. When Abashidze became the editor of Mnatobi, he dissolved the old editorial board, which included Galaktion, and formed a new one, which has done nothing. As an editor, Abashidze blocks the publication of Galaktion's poems. Galaktion still hasn't received a response about the poem he submitted almost a month ago. Galaktion is convinced that no one regards Irakli Abashidze as a worthy writer. In his notebook, Galaktion notes Nino Nakashidze's remark when Abashidze was elected to the Writers' Union board, saying, "What kind of writer is that?"

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 272, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 235.

Dating: The entry is dated after December 20th.

1951

December 22

He finishes writing a new poem.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 170.

Note: The title of the poem is not specified in the note.

1951

December 22

He is in the hospital and hopes to be discharged soon.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 170.

1951

December 22

In the evening at 9:30 PM, he listens to a discussion on Georgian Radio in Russian, focused on the topic "The Use of Fictional Literature in Agitation", in which contemporary poets such as Giorgi Leonidze, Grigol Abashidze, and Leo Kiacheli are mentioned. He is astonished at how his poetry was overlooked, calls the program's text "shamelessly" composed, and wonders who the author is.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 27; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 185.

1951

December 22

He recalls his unforgettable speech at the Writers' Union on the topic of translations, unfortunately, which was not published by any of the newspapers.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 27; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 185.

1951

December 22

He reads Levan Asatiani's article "I. B. Stalin's Letters to Soviet Writers" published in Komunisti on December 21, as well as Ivan Tsulukidze's review titled "Georgian Revolutionary Poetry" in Zarya Vostoka on the same day, concerning Levan Asatiani's Russian-language Book "Georgian Workers' Revolutionary Poetry in Legal and Illegal Bolshevik Presses, 1901-1907". Galaktion draws attention to this coincidence and considers Levan Asatiani's article provocative in nature.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 27; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 185.

1951

December 22

In his diary, he ironically notes that the children's program cycle "Reveille" on Georgian Radio has become a platform for Ioseb Grishashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 27; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 185.

1951

December 22-23

In the newspaper Zarya Vostoka, he reads Nikolai Gribachov's poem "Rivalry", which describes the competition between the mountains, Kazbegi and Ararat.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 28; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 185.

Note: In the note, Gribachov is referred to by his last name.

1951

December 24

He believes that Georgian Radio is not paying him adequate attention and is curious about who the editor of the literary programs is. He wonders whether Sergi Tchilaia, Giorgi Natroshvili, Shota Dzidziguri, or Lado Sirbiladze might have contributed to this situation.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 29; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 185.

1951

December 24

In the magazine Ogonyok, he reads the Russian-language poem "Rioni" by Otar Kuprava and is surprised that he only knows this author through Russian publications and Mnatobi reviews, but has never read anything by him in Georgian. He then recalls the case of Vasil Baiadze, who, while writing articles for the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, also translated his own Russian-language poems. He thinks that such an approach has become a trend now.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 28; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 185;

1951

Until December 26

He writes the phrase: "The enemy of the national poet / is, for the first time, the enemy of the people".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 54; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 189;

1951

Until December 26

He dedicates an untitled calambour, "You are not a forehead..." to Ioseb Grishashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 41; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 193;

1951

Until December 26

He writes a satirical poem about Khariton Vardoshvili "For example, let's take...".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 54; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 202-203;

1951

Until December 26

The poem "There is a Country..." reflects on the ongoing political events in Korea.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 270, p. 25; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 183;

1951

December 28

An article titled “The Poetry of Galaktion Tabidze” by Sergo Maghlaperidze is published in the newspaper Industrial Kutaisi. It serves as a review of the Book “The Poetry of Galaktion Tabidze” by Sergi Tchilaia, published in 1951. The reviewer evaluates the work positively, recognizing it as the first monographic study about the great poet.

Source: S. Maghlaperidze, Galaktion Tabidze’s poetry, newspaper Industriuli Kutaisi, 1951, №256, (December 28). p. 3.

1951

December or earlier

To arrange a meeting with Galaktion and finalize the evening event in Batumi, the Union of Writers of Adjara sends a student from the Faculty of Philology, young poet Shota Rokhva, along with another poet friend of his, to Tbilisi. Galaktion, delighted, suggests that they visit Book editor Andro Tevzadze, thinking he should also be present at the meeting. Galaktion offers the boys a ride in his car, and together they head towards Tevzadze’s place. On the way, the poet offers them cigarettes and matches. The students already have matches, but suddenly Rokhva says that it would be nice for young poets to light their cigarettes from the match struck by Galaktion, so that his fire would pass on to them. Galaktion likes what he hears and asks, “What did you say, my friend? My fire, you say?” and laughs.

Source: Sh. Rokva, First Meeting with the Great Poet, newspaper Sabtchota Ajara, December 11, 1982, N 238, p. 4.

1951

December

He arrives in Batumi with his wife to organize a literary evening and settles in the “Intourist” hotel.

Source: P. Khalvashi, Close to Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 104.

1951

December

In Batumi, he has his photo taken with Andro Tevzadze and Pridon Khalvashi near the colonnades. At the hotel restaurant, he drinks very little and shares many fascinating stories about his time in Paris with the people at the table. He mentions that he dedicated the poem “To the French Academy on Our Stay There” to his impressions of Paris.

Source: P. Khalvashi, Close to Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 104.

1951

December

After lunch at Intourist, he heads towards the theater with his wife, Pridon Khalvashi, and Andro Tevzadze. On the way, Nino Kvirikadze complains to Khalvashi that Galaktion neglects his appearance and hygiene. She recounts how she once even tried to trim his nails while he was asleep, which startled him.

Source: P. Khalvashi, Close to Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 105.

1951

December

In Batumi, Pridon Khalvashi opens Galaktion's evening and invites him to the stage. The audience gives a standing ovation. The poet suddenly opens his collection and recites the poem "The Moon Over Mtatsminda". Khalvashi manages to record the moment on a tape recorder. After reading the poem, Galaktion leaves the podium and heads towards the exit, but Khalvashi stops him and the evening continues. At the end of the event, Galaktion signals for the curtain to be drawn and, visibly agitated, exclaims, "We made it, we made it!"

Source: P. Khalvashi, Close to Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 105-107. Sh. Rokva, First Meeting with the Great Poet, newspaper Sabtchota Ajara, December 11, 1982, N 238, p. 4.

1951

December

The day after the meeting in Batumi, Galaktion returns to Tbilisi by train, traveling in the same compartment as Pridon Khalvashi. Galaktion tells him a story from the 1920s, about an encounter he had in the Tsipa Tunnel with a woman who was a relative of a conversation partner, and about a train robbery he witnessed.

Source: P. Khalvashi, Close to Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 107-108.

1951

He places his Book in the hands of one-year-old Marina Pirtskhalava, affectionately called Kakina, and takes a photo of her.

Source: N. Ebanoidze, Recollections about Galaktion, Tskhvediani, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 395-396.

1951

While in Sokhumi, during a stroll along the seashore, he shows his wife's niece, Nazi Kvirikadze, how Vladimir Mayakovsky used to write poems. First, he dictates some rhyming words, and then, using those words, he composes the poem "The Beautiful Sky of Abkhazia...".

Source: T. Sanikidze, About Another Unknown Poem by Galaktion Tabidze, Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1955, №26, July 7, p. 6.

1951 or later

One winter day, near the Marjanishvili Bridge, Galaktion meets young poets: Jansugh Charkviani, Taniel Chanturia, Givi Gegechkori, Otar Tchiladze, Vakhtang Javakhadze, and Tamaz Bibiluri. He stops in front of the young men and says, "National poet... it doesn't sound good, does it? After all, I've written twenty-five volumes". The young poets respond with compliments. After a brief silence, Galaktion says, "Young people, let's go and drown ourselves in the Mtkvari". Jansugh

Charkviani jokingly replies that it's too cold now, and it would be better to postpone it until summer. Galaktion agrees.

Source: T. Bibiluri, Fragments, magazine Kldekari, 1993, №1, p. 123-124;

1951

Beno Chikobava is collecting poems and verses from Galaktion's various editions, and the poet is considering publishing them.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-261, 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 93.

1951

Composer Olga Baramashvili is writing a cantata based on the text by Galaktion Tabidze, "The Happiness of People - Peace".

Source: <http://www.nplg.gov.ge/bios/ka/00003518/> biographic dictionary, Olga Baramishvili.

1951

A significant amount of time is dedicated to writing and editing the poem "Paper".

Source: G. Chikobava, Close to Galaktion, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 10-11.

1951

He writes an untitled poem "Here, ancient as ancient...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4007; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 194.

1951

He writes an untitled poem "Last year, in front of our house, stood four hyenas...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №3810; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 195.

1951

He is drafting a letter to be sent to Nikolai Tikhonov, in which he informs the recipient that he is sending Kakhetian wine and wishes him good health.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-488, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 418;

1951 or later

He writes a poem "From the notebook".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 274, G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 256;

1952

January

1952

January 1

In the Russian newspaper Sovetskaya Abkhazia, Georgy Kreytan's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "New Year's Toast" is published.

Source: Новогодний тост (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Г. Крейтан, Колхозный путь, Тетрицкаро, 1952, 1 январь, №1.

1952

January 1

He writes an untitled poem "My reader!..".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №6324; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 199.

1952

January 15

Pati Nishnianidze, as a member of the Society for the Dissemination of Political and Scientific Knowledge of Georgia, selects the life and work of Galaktion Tabidze as the topic of her lecture. To coordinate certain details, she visits the poet at his home and reads aloud the lecture material. The poet listens attentively but firmly objects when it comes to dividing his work into two periods, stating that such a division is inappropriate. Upon parting, the poet asks her to inform him of the lecture date.

Source: P. Nishnianidze, From Galaktion's Life, Tbilisi, 1964, p. 135 -136.

1952

After January 16

In the magazine Mnatobi, Petre Bakhturidze's review of Sergi Tchilaia's Book "The Poetry of Galaktion Tabidze" is published. The reviewer gives high praise to Tchilaia's efforts, noting that Galaktion's poetry has not yet been thoroughly studied. Under such circumstances, he emphasizes the importance of a monographic study dedicated to the poet's work. According to Petre Bakhturidze, Sergi Tchilaia correctly addresses issues such as Galaktion's relationship with literary tradition, the poet's worldview, and the genesis of his early works. However, the reviewer also points out certain shortcomings in Tchilaia's work. Some sections of the Book are linguistically flawed, and at times, the author struggles to effectively select poems from Galaktion's work to illustrate his points.

Source: P. Bakhturidze, The Poetry of Galaktion Tabidze, Magazine Mnatobi, 1951, №12 p. 156-160.

Dating: The magazine was signed for publication on January 16, 1952.

1952

January 21

In the Russian newspaper Bolshevitskaya Putyovka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Immortal Lenin" is published.

Source: Бессмертный Ленин (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Большеви́стская путе́вка, Тбили́си, 1952, 21 января, №10.

1952

January or later

The fifth volume of the eight-volume collection of Galaktion Tabidze's works is published, containing 43 poems and 7 long poems. The included works are: "With Stalin's Flag", "Who Said It", "Red Square", "For Peace", "The Genius of the People, the Talent of the People", "In Every Storm", "At the Metekhi Bridge", "Paper", "Makhata", "Shine, Sun", "The Beginning of the School Year", "The Child Fell Asleep", "Four Seasons", "Rustavi", "My Guests", "Abyssinian", "The Enemy Must Be Defeated", "Let Everyone Know", "The Hut Replaced the Wooden House", "The Return of the Warrior", "We Routed the Invaders and Triumphed", "Khelkhvavi", "The Child's Smile Never Fades", "October 19", "Let's Forge Steadily", "Young People", "The Ashes of Feelings", "To a Comrade", "To the Woman from the Mountains", "Near Nasakirali", "The Distant Sound of the Locomotive", "Look, the Land", "With a Golden Boat", "Evil Conversation", "The Female Mower", "The Stone of the Old Mill", "Ipati", "The People and the Government", "Radio", "America, Thus Beats Your Heart", "England and the United States", "Europe, Do You Remember?" "There Was a Meeting of Indians". Long Poems: "The Serious Illness", "The Story of One Night", "The Flower of Light", "Kitesa", "The First Day of the New Year", "The Invention", "Nineteen Forty".

Source: G. Tabidze, works in eight volumes, vol. V, 1952.

Note: The editor of the Book is Andro Tevzadze. The volume consists of 244 pages, and the print run is 5,000 copies. The Book was submitted for production on November 6, 1951, and signed for publication on December 15 of the same year. The volume includes 50 works (43 poems and 7 long poems), with 28 poems and 3 long poems being published for the first time. Other works had already been published in periodicals or in the poet's collections.

February

1952

After February 2

In the collection "Glory to Stalin", two poems by Galaktion Tabidze are published: "To Stalin" and "Stalin".

Source: "Glory to Stalin", Tbilisi, 1951, p. 95-97.

1952

After February 2

In the collection "Glory to Stalin", he makes highlights and comments on the lines of the poems in the preface. Regarding Shalva Apkhaidze's poem "The Hope of the People", he writes: "Is it only hope?" He finds the phrase "The noble father of heroism" in the address to Stalin vulgar. On the same author's poem "I Sing to Him", he notes that the author speaks more about himself than Stalin and mentions that he is party-oriented. In the translation of Liviu Deleanu poem "People's Love", in the first two lines "When you see the Ural land reddened with great furnaces", he points out that the land can only be reddened on the surface, while furnaces in the Ural are mostly underground. Regarding Leonid Corneanu's poem "Carpet", he writes at the end that the stanza translated by Alexandre Abasheli is a masterpiece. He raises questions about the translated lines and word agreements in Ilya Mosashvili's translation of Pablo Neruda's poem "Joseph Stalin". He alters the stanza from Georges Amado's "Song of the Soviet Union" in Khariton Vardoshvili's translation. On the translation of Raúl González Tuñón's poem "Stalin" by Irakli Abasheli, he notes that the line "You will establish the era of peace in the land of labour" is ambiguous and unclear. He summarizes that, of the 142 poems in the book, 65 are heptasyllabic, 31 are octosyllabic, and 28 are dodecasyllabic.

Source: MGL, t-52, "Glory to Stalin", Tbilisi, 1951, p. 3, 7-14, 16-19, 21, 23-27, 30-31, 34, 40-41, 56-59, 65, 70-71, 77, 84-85, 91-98, 102-111, 116, 123, 126-129, 145-146, 157, 177-179, 199, 219, 226, 266-274, 278-282.

1952

After February 6

In the Russian-language Book "The History of Georgian Literature", authored by Alexandre Baramidze, Shalva Radiani, and Besarion Zhghenti, the chapter "Poets of Soviet Georgia" begins with an article about Galaktion Tabidze. It is noted that the National Poet and full member of the Georgian Academy of Sciences stands out for his rich creative imagination, refined taste, and great mastery. Over the course of 40 years of artistic activity, he went through a complex creative path to shape the main process of 20th-century Georgian poetic culture. A brief biographical overview and a photograph are included, and both his pre-revolutionary and later-period poems are discussed.

Source: MGL, t-261, А. Барамидзе, Ш. Радиани, Б. Жгенти, "История грузинской литературы", Moscow, 1952., p. 273-2779.

1952

February 24

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "My Homeland" by Boris Serebryakov is published.

Source: Моя страна, Отрывок из поэмы, Г. Табидзе, Перевел с грузинского Б. Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1952, 24 февраля, №47.

March

1952

Until March 1

At a meeting of the Writers' Union, the discussion revolves around the influence of Russian literature on Georgian literature. Some writers excessively emphasize this influence. Irritated by this, Galaktion rises to the podium and says, "Recently, I read in Izvestia that a Russian playwright is writing a comedy called 'The Alazani Valley.' What is comedic about the Alazani Valley?" He then ends his displeased remark with the words "Gogoli-Mogoli".

Source: A. Khintibidze, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 305-306.

Note: Galaktion's irritation with Gogol was caused by the fact that he was refused the opportunity to organize a poetry evening, as it was deemed more important to celebrate Gogol's anniversary instead.

Dating: The 100th anniversary of Gogol's death was celebrated on March 1, 1952.

1952

Until March 1

A representative of the Writers' Union visits Akaki Mgeladze at the Central Committee and reports how Galaktion had supposedly mocked the name of the Russian writer Nikolai Gogol. Writers are urgently instructed to provide explanations, confirming Galaktion's words. Who knows how the situation might have ended if it hadn't been suggested to the Secretary of the Central Committee to speak with the poet personally. Mgeladze summons Galaktion and asks, "Did you say 'Gogol-Mogol'?" Galaktion denies it and wittily remarks, "How could I say such a thing? That would be like saying 'Akaki-Bakaki', or even worse, 'Galaktion-Malaktion!'". Mgeladze, unsettled by the poet's irony, changes the subject and asks if there's anything he needs or how they could assist him. Galaktion responds, "They're planning my jubilee, but I don't have a suit". They issue him an order for a suit and see him off with great respect.

Source: A. Khintibidze, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 305-306.

1952

Until March 1

He writes a poem "To Marika Baratashvili" and calls the addressee to inform her that the poem is dedicated to her. Marika, out of modesty, cannot bring herself to ask for the poem and promises to send her child to collect it, but she is unable to do so.

Source: MGL, 1-1185, works in 12 volumes, vol. VI, p. 193;

1952

Until March 1

He is intoxicated, decides to drown himself and falls into the Mtkvari River from the Vera Bridge. He is rescued and taken to the hospital.

Source: M. Baratashvili, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 98-99;

Dating: According to recollections, this happened in the year of Gogol's 100th anniversary, which was celebrated on March 1.

1952

Until March 1

After writing a poem dedicated to Marika Baratashvili, which the recipient was supposed to retrieve through her son by visiting Galaktion, the poet and the poem's addressee meet for the first time on Machabeli Street. Marika brings up the poem, but Galaktion changes the subject. Marika Baratashvili assumes that the poet has lost the poem and chooses not to press the matter further to avoid putting him in an awkward position.

Source: M. Baratashvili, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 98-99;

1952

March 2

An article by Givi Meladze, titled “The Book on Galaktion Tabidze’s Creativity”, is published in the newspaper Komunisti. It is a review of Sergi Tchilaia’s Book “The Poetry of Galaktion Tabidze”. The reviewer notes that Galaktion is the first Soviet poet whose work has been the subject of a dedicated monograph, and that Sergi Tchilaia has largely succeeded in addressing the task at hand. The author thematically reviews the work and offers some observations. According to him, the Book does not show Galaktion’s relationship with Georgian Soviet literature, lacks a linguistic analysis of his poetry, and does not address the critical literature created about the poet’s works. In his final assessment, the reviewer concludes that Sergi Tchilaia’s work is a valuable contribution to Georgian criticism.

Source: G. Meladze, A Book about the works of Galaktion Tabidze, Newspaper Komunisti, 1952, №53 (March 2), p. 3.

1952

March 7

He writes a parodic poem about Sergi Tchilaia and Leo Kiacheli “We don’t have just one writer today...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 274,. G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 256.

1952

March 7

He reads the current issue of the newspaper Zarya Vostoka, which includes an obituary for Ketevan Bakradze-Ingorokva’s passing, signed by 15 members of the Writers’ Union and Simon Kaukhchishvili. Galaktion believes this is a faction, with all but 2-3 of the individuals being his literary enemies. He feels that they oppose him just as the “Tsisperkantselis” group, the magazine Tsisartkela, and other literary circles did in 1917 and the years that followed. Galaktion thinks that the majority of those who signed the obituary will prevent him from organizing a literary evening.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 275, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 259.

Note: The following writers sign the statement: Giorgi Leonidze, Leo Kiacheli, Geronti Kikodze, Konstantine Gamsakhurdia, Alexandre Abasheli, Sergi Tchilaia, Konstantine Chichinadze, Levan Asatiani, Simon Kaukhchishvili, Yakinthe Lisashvili, Khariton Vardoshvili, Akaki Gatserelia, Giorgi Natroshvili, Iona Vakeli, Alexandre Gomiashvili, and Ioseb Noneshvili.

1952

March 8

In the morning, his classmate Genadi Mikhelidze, who had studied with him at the Kutaisi Theological Seminary and later at the Tbilisi Seminary from 1900 to 1910, calls him. He tells Galaktion that he will visit him at 7 PM, and indeed, Mikhelidze comes to see him. He is writing his memoirs about Galaktion and has collected poems from 1905, a proclamation about Ippolit Grekov, the supervisor of the Kutaisi Theological Seminary, information about the gatherings, and various biographical facts. Galaktion recalls his own notes from that period and thinks about looking for them. He writes down Mikhelidze's phone number and is ready to collaborate with him.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 260.

Note: The first name of Ippolit Grekov is not mentioned in the record.

1952

March 8

In the newspaper Zarya Vostoka, there is a mention of the cantata "For Peace" written by Olga Baramashvili, based on Galaktion's poem. Galaktion imagines how pleased the author of the music would be to see a mention of it in the newspaper, for he is persecuted.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 260.

1952

March 8

In the evening, Nino Ebanoidze, the daughter of his wife, brings to him the poem "On the Road, Galaktion", dedicated to him by the geologist Valerian Mamukelashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 260.

1952

March 9

Without interruption, he watches the snow from the window of his house, gazing at the state publishing house and the small garden across from her, where the acacia stands – the one he and Giorgi Kuchishvili saved from drying out 15 years ago. He reads the news in the newspaper Zarya Vostoka about the literary evening dedicated to Giorgi Leonidze, held in Leningori (Akhalgori), at which Candidate of Philological Sciences Eter Shushania and Associate Professor Shota Dzidziguri gave presentations. As Galaktion reads this, an unpleasant feeling washes over him, and he thinks that Giorgi Leonidze has been unfairly glorified, and that Shushania and Dzidziguri have joined his camp, adding two more people to his faction.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 260-261.

1952

March 10

He dedicates an untitled poem to the construction of the New Bridge in the Vera district (now called Galaktion's Bridge): "I see, I see, how magnificently he moves..."

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 261.

1952

March 11

He learns from his nephew, Nodar Tabidze, that the university student Vakhtang Gogolashvili has given a public lecture titled "Folk Motifs in Galaktion Tabidze's Works", which sparked great interest among the audience. In his own archive, he discovers a poem dedicated to him by the same individual: "The sea stood by the sea..."

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 261.

1952

March 11

He learns from his step-daughter, Nino Ebanoidze, that during the entrance exams at Tbilisi University, more of his poems (eight) have been included than those of any other poet.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 261.

1952

Until March 14

He is ill and does not leave the house.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 262.

Note: In the entry from March 14, he writes, "This is how one should inquire about a patient".

1952

March 14

He receives the author's copies of the fifth volume of his works from the state publishing house, but the issue of royalties has not yet been resolved.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 262.

1952

March 14

The newspaper Zarya Vostoka sends him a royalty for the translation of his poem published there.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 262.

1952

March 14

He receives a poem dedicated to him from a regular Red Army soldier.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 262.

1952

March 14

Grigol Tsetskhladze calls him on the phone and tells him that if he decides to hold an evening, he should count on his help. Galaktion is pleased, as he is the only poet who personally expresses a desire to assist him.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 262.

1952

March 14

Kale Bobokhidze calls him, passing on greetings from Sergi Tchilaia and asking him to get in touch. Galaktion is surprised that Tchilaia, after writing a dreadful review of Galaktion's fifth volume, is now inquiring about his well-being through the embarrassed Bobokhidze, yet does not call himself. He decides not to contact Tchilaia, believing that Tchilaia either wants to align with his enemies or is interested in speaking at his evening. Galaktion thinks he will find a better speaker than Tchilaia, whose monograph was completely discredited, and he will not allow Tchilaia a chance for rehabilitation through his event. In this regard, Galaktion recalls a popular saying, which tells of the poem sent by Rostom Eristavi to King Solomon: "This cannot go on, Basila and Kvirika...".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 262.

1952

March 19

An actress from the Marjanishvili Theatre, Elene Kipshidze, a friend of his step-daughter, Nino Ebanoidze, visits the family and informs him that young actors from the same theatre wish to meet with him. The poet gladly accepts the offer, and they schedule the event for May 5th, Press Day.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 262.

1952

March 19

The poet Ilia (Kochoba) Arosia visits him at home.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 262.

1952

March 19

Lado Matchavariani's daughter, Leila, visits him.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 262.

1952

March 19

An unknown young Svan calls to inquire about his health on the phone.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 262.

1952

March 19

He speaks on the phone with Korneli Sandadze, who is painting his portrait. As his wife tells him, in the portrait, Galaktion gazes over all of Georgia.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 262.

1952

March 19

He speaks on the phone with Erasti Torotadze, the deputy director of the state publishing house, regarding the book's royalties, and they promise to settle it in five days.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 262.

Note: Torotadze is mentioned in the text only by first name.

1952

March 19

He learns that Kale Bobokhidze is still holding Andro Tevzadze's position at the State Publishing House.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 262.

1952

March 19

He speaks on the phone with Ioseb Grishashvili, who swears his friendship.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 262.

1952

March 19

Someone named Kote Alaverdov visits him and asks to be employed as a driver, but Galaktion finds it difficult to make a decision.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 262.

1952

March 19

He sees that in the newspaper Zarya Vostoka, Giorgi Leonidze's poem "Bershoulá", written five years earlier, is being published, and he thinks that people are probably receiving the news with irony. He himself is surprised by the grandiose manner in which the second-class Stalin Prize has been awarded. Literatura da Khelovneba advertise, and Beso Zhghenti is "dances Davlury", praising and glorifying Leonidze's poems "Bershoulá" and "Orange".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 262.

1952

March 19

He begins working on the staging of the poem "The Flower of Light".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 262.

1952

March 19

He sends a telegram to Leonid Gvatua, the head of the Sokhumi district, regarding the construction of his house in Sokhumi.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 262.

1952

March 20

He writes several poems, a memoir, and an epigram about Beso Zhghenti.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 262.

Note: The titles of the poems are not specified in the note.

1952

March 20

He calls Sokhumi at 12 o'clock and learns that the construction of the second floor has not started, despite the fact that 24,000 roubles has already been paid. In the evening, he speaks with the deputy of Sokhumsheni, who promises that they will receive the bricks by April 2nd and resume construction.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 263.

1952

March 20

He writes down the phone number of engineer Mikheil Chkhikvadze in his diary.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 263.

Note: The first name of Chkhikvadze is not specified in the source.

1952

March 20

He needs a suit, cardboard, scissors, and a pocket knife. His wife, Nino Kvirikadze, promises to take care of everything.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 263.

1952

March 23

In his notebook, he writes down the name and surname of the driver Kote Alaverdov and the phone number of someone named Lominadze, who lives on Chonkadze Street.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 47.

1952

March 24

He speaks on the phone with Beso Zhghenti, who informs him that the editing of his Russian Book has been entrusted to Elizbar Ananiashvili. Ananiashvili will translate part of the material himself, while the rest will be translated by Moscow-based translators. He will specifically travel to Moscow to have Russian poets translate the poems. Galaktion asks Zhghenti to arrange a meeting with Ananiashvili, as there are many details to discuss, and Zhghenti promises to do so. When he hears that the publication of Galaktion's seven-volume edition has been completed, Zhghenti praises it, noting that no living writer has had such a large volume of work published, even in the previous century. He suggests that, in honour of the anniversary, either all the volumes should be reissued since the entire print run has sold out, or all seven volumes should be published as a single book. Galaktion likes the second suggestion.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 264.

Note: In the note, Ananiashvili is mentioned only by his last name.

1952

March 24

He writes a parody about Beso Zhghenti: “რეტი. ტეტი. ბრეტი. კეტი. აი ბესოს ეტიკეტი.”
[“Reti. Tseti. Breti. Keti. Here's Beso's label.”]

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 264.

1952

March 24

He receives a telegram from architect Giorgi Gvatusia in Sokhumi, stating that the construction of the house has been halted due to a lack of bricks.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 275, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 264.

1952

March 29

He reads the Russian Book "The Artistic Word" and makes highlights. In the end, he writes that Solomon Zurgielidze passed away, whose last words were that death means nothing; what is more terrifying than death are the feelings of a dying person who sees how their loved ones await their passing with concealed joy.

Source: MGL, t-449, "Художественное слово", Moscow, 1950.

1952

March 30

At the end of the Russian Book "The Artistic Word", it is written that good poetry can only be created in a country where good people live.

Source: MGL, t-449, "Художественное слово", Moscow, 1950.

April

1952

April 6

In his notebook, he writes that at the Railway Workers' House, which many desired to take over, the father and son Chikobavas, with whose help a permanent exhibition could be organized, are involved.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-637, 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 457.

Note: By "father and son Chikobava", the poet is likely referring to Beno and Giorgi Chikobava.

1952

April 7

He submits a request to the chairman of the Stalin district council, stating that he lives on the second floor of 4 Marjanishvili Street, where he suffers from the cramped space and is disturbed by the noise from the street. He requests permission to build a three-meter-long glass extension on the side of the yard, where he could work in peace.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-194; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 121-122.

1952

Until April 17

In his apartment, located at Kote Marjanishvili No. 4, he plans to open an exhibition showcasing his work.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 277p. 28; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 272.

Dating: The record in the notebook is placed earlier than the record dated April 17.

1952

Until April 17

He writes a statement addressed to the Tbilisi Executive Committee, requesting that, due to public demand regarding the opening of an exhibition in his apartment, they provide him with a 3-4 room apartment elsewhere, even in a newly constructed building.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 277, p. 28; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 272.

Dating: The record in the notebook is placed earlier than the record dated April 17.

1952

Until April 17

The seven-volume collection of Galaktion Tabidze's writings is ready to be published as a single book. Only the preparation of commentary is needed.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 277, p. 28; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 272.

Dating: The record in the notebook is placed earlier than the record dated April 17.

1952

April 17

He revises the poem "Again, Youth", written on January 22, 1948, and creates a new untitled version of the piece, "On the Edge of Life, the Sailor...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №578; №2889; №3940; №7240; G. Tabidze, G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 80.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "The City Underwater", "Again, Youth", and without a title, starting with: "On the Edge of Life, the Sailor...".

1952

April 17

He completes the adaptation of the poem "The Flower of Light" into a play and plans to meet with Nodar Chkheidze regarding this.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 277, p. 32; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 273.

1952

April 17

He is curious about how the previous day's meeting at the Academy of Sciences concluded and writes about it in his diary.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 277, p. 32; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 273.

1952

April 17

He is curious whether there is any news from the publishing house Zarya Vostoka in Moscow regarding the publication of his "Selected Works".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 277, p. 32; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 273.

1952

April 17

At 4 o'clock, he plans to go to the Academy of Sciences to collect his salary, and at 5 o'clock, he is expecting Erasti Torotadze at home.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 277, p. 32; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 273.

Note: Erasti's last name is not mentioned in the entry.

1952

April 22

By the resolution of the Presidium of the Board of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia, Alexandre Abasheli is assigned the task of presenting a plan of events to commemorate the 60th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's birth.

Source: MGL, WUF №46.

1952

April 22

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, Boris Serebryakov's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "The Most Important" is published.

Source: Самое главное (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с гурз. Б. Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1952, 22 апреля, №96.

1952

April 23

At the Writers' Palace, he familiarizes himself with the Directory of the Soviet Writers' Union for 1950-1951 and numbers the writers' surnames.

Source: GTSM, 201, Справочник Союза Писателей СССР на 1950-1951 годы, Moscow, 1950.

Dating: According to Galaktion Tabidze's inscription.

1952

April 24

He speaks with Shalva Radiani, the director of the Shota Rustaveli Institute of Georgian Literature History, from whom he learns that the preparation of the academic edition of Galaktion's works by the institute depends on the vice-presidents of the Academy of Sciences, Alexandre Janelidze and Nikoloz Berdzenishvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 278, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 275.

Note: The first names of Berdzenishvili and Janelidze are not mentioned in the entry.

1952

April 25

Wearing new shoes, he goes to the laboratory at the medical complex to have a gastric juice test, but he is turned away because he was supposed to come on an empty stomach, and he has already eaten.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 278, p. 13; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 275.

1952

April 25

He finishes a poem about May Day.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 278, p. 13; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 275.

1952

April 25

He speaks with Shalva Radiani over the phone, who promises to meet Nikoloz Berdzenishvili at 2 o'clock and discuss the academic publication of his works with the Academy's president, Nikoloz Muskhelishvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 278, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 276.

1952

April 25

Alexandre Abasheli asks him when his anniversary date is. Galaktion replies that it is on November 17. Abasheli adds that the Presidium of the Academy of Sciences should commemorate it. Galaktion agrees but is not sure if they actually will.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 278, p. 13; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 276.

1952

April 25

The driver and the housemaid ask him for their salaries.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 278, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 276.

1952

April 26

He plans to undergo a gastrointestinal examination.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-493, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 450.

1952

April 26

He takes out a seven-volume edition of Gavrila Derzhavin's works, bound in covers, from the university's bookbinding workshop.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, t-300, Сочинения Державина, с объяснительными примечаниями Я. Грота, том первый, стихотворения, часть I, Saint-Petersburg, 1868.

1952

After April 26

He reads the first volume of Gavrila Derzhavin's works and writes on the back endpaper that he wondered whether Derzhavin might be superior to Alexander Pushkin, but immediately notes that this is nonsense.

Source: MGL, t-300, Сочинения Державина, с объяснительными примечаниями Я. Грота, том первый, стихотворения, часть I, Saint-Petersburg, 1868.

1952

April 28

In his notebook, he writes that Korneli Kekelidze is a good man. He describes the geologist Giorgi Dzotsenidze as a despicable person, a suspicious character who pretends to be a great man and disregards the work of poets. Galaktion is surprised that Dzotsenidze once received the Stalin Prize. He is outraged that Dzotsenidze attacked Giorgi Akhvlediani and other senior academicians.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-509, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 64-65;

1952

April

The Austrian Georgianologist Hugo Huppert, residing in Tbilisi, gifts the edition of two poems by Vladimir Mayakovsky – "Vladimir Ilyich Lenin" and "It's Good" – which he translated into Georgian, with a Russian inscription: "To my very dear Galaktion Tabidze, the National Poet of Georgia, as a sign of respect and friendship from his admirer and a patriot of Soviet Georgia".

Source: MGL, t-486, W. Majakowski, Zwei Dichtungen, "Wladimir Iljitch Lenin" "Gut und Schon", Nachdichtungen von Hugo Huppert, Moscow, 1940.

May

1952

Until May 1

He is making a note that on May 1, 1952, his poem “Patriots of May Day” will be published in the newspaper Zarya Vostoka, and it will resonate with the broader public.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-572, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 363.

1952

May 1

In the newspaper Komunisti, under the signature Galaktion Tabidze, National Poet of Georgia, he publishes the poem “May day” (“Forward, Forward to Communism...”).

Source: G. Tabidze, “May Day”, newspaper Komunisti, 1952, 1 May, N 104, p. 2.

1952

May 1

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, Boris Serebryakov’s translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “We Sing to May Day” is published.

Source: Мы песню поем Первомаю!... (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. Б. Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1952, 1 мая, №104.

1952

May 1

He plans to purchase a radio.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-509, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 66.

1952

May 1

In the Russian newspaper Batumski Rabochi, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “May Day” is published.

Source: Первое мая (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Батумский рабочий, Батуми, 1952, 1 мая, №87.

1952

May 1

In the Russian newspaper Bolshevik, Boris Serebryakov’s translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “Greetings to May” (“How could I not glorify my country...”) is published.

Source: Сердце, пой!... (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Б. Серебряков, Большевик, Гагра, 1952, 1 мая.

1952

May 3

In his notebook, he writes that his new publications have brought a sense of revival to the Writers' Union.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-518, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 105.

1952

May 4

An unknown woman brings a three-rouble coin to his home and hands it to the family members, saying it was sent from the Writers' Union - claiming that Galaktion Tabidze had dropped it the previous day. He wonders who sent it, why it wasn't delivered immediately, how they know it belongs to him, and what message they are trying to convey with this gesture.

Source: G. Tabidze's inscription on a three-rouble envelope, MGL, m-422.

1952

May 5

Andro Tevzadze informs him that during a discussion held at the Writers' Union, the poet Otar Tchelidze stated that the history of the first half of the century had ended, both in politics and literature, and that the future now belongs to the youth. This remark provoked irony among the audience. After the meeting, Ipolite Vartagava commented that Tchelidze was right, pointing out how poor Galaktion's poem published in the newspaper Komunisti was. However, Andro Tevzadze disagreed, arguing that it was an excellent poem.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 279, p. 4-5; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 277.

Note: Otar Tchelidze was likely referring to the poem "May Day", published on May 1, 1952.

1952

May 6

He learns from Vukol Beridze that his son, Vakhtang, has painted a portrait of Galaktion, and he is very pleased.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 279, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 278.

1952

May 6

After making a diary entry about Otar Tchelidze's speech at the Writers' Union, he writes a satirical verse about him: "This Tchelidze, Otar, will never become Shota".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 279, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 277.

1952

May 6

He goes to the State Publishing House and requests a Repository transfer. They promise to clarify by the evening whether the funds will be transferred during the current week.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 279, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 277.

1952

May 6

Alexandre Abasheli does not greet him. This is followed by an introductory word from Karlos Kaladze, and he begins to suspect that some movement is being initiated against him.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 279, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 277.

1952

May 6

In his diary, he notes that the previous day, Ioseb Imedashvili passed away.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 279, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 278.

1952

May 8

He attends an Azerbaijani evening at the Academy of Sciences with Viktor Kupradze and a mathematician. Viktor is thrilled when Galaktion promises to give him his books with an autograph. Their mathematician companion recalls the emotional details of Galaktion's evening in Leningrad in 1934, bringing tears to the poet's eyes. The event is opened by Nikoloz Muskhelishvili, with speeches by Paata Gugushvili, secretary-academician Giorgi Dzotsenidze, and Ioseb Grishashvili. Galaktion dislikes all the speeches and makes ironic notes about them in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 279, p. 22-26; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 279-280.

1952

May 9

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "May Ninth" is published.

Source: Девятое мая (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1952, 9 мая, №109.

1952

May 14

He plans to contact Murman Lebanidze on May 16 and notes down his phone number.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 298, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 362.

1952

May 14

A second-grade student from Lentekhi Secondary School, Tsiuri Kurasbediani, writes her name and surname in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 298, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 363.

1952

May 15

In the newspaper Komunisti, he reads an announcement from the Writers' Union about the formation of a 13-member jubilee commission, chaired by Giorgi Leonidze, to celebrate Alio Mirtskhulava's 50th anniversary. The commission has decided to hold the poet's jubilee evening at the Opera House on May 25. Galaktion finds the attention given to Alio Mirtskhulava's anniversary thought-provoking.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 298, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 363.

1953

May 15 or later

He listens to an aria from the opera "Rigoletto" on the radio and reflects that it greatly resembles Giuseppe Verdi's "Ninth Symphony", Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony", and the Georgian folk song "How Beautifully It Suits You."....

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 299, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 364.

Dating: The note is placed on the second page of the May 15 entry.

1952

May 16

He makes a list of artists who have painted or are supposed to paint his portrait.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 279, p. 27-32; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 280.

Note: The list includes the following artists: Tamar Abakelia, Elene Akhvlediani, Bliotkin, Shalva Beritashvili, Bazhbeuk-Melikov, Vepkhvadze, Serapion Vatsadze, Vadbolsky, Grigolia, Beno Gordeziani, GrigOlya, Gudiashvili, Gordeladze, Ucha Japaridze, Gigo Zaziashvili, Ap. Kutateladze, D. Kutateladze, Silovan Kakabadze, Sev. Ketskhoveli, Sergo Kobuladze, Nik. Kandelaki, Lado Keshelava, Sev. Maisashvili, Makashvili, Gr. Meskhi, Shalva Mamaladze, K. Maghalashvili, Vano Pataridze, Samson Nadareishvili, Doni Natsvlishvili, Korneli Sanadze, Giorgi Sesiashvili, Mose Toidze, Nina Tamamsheva (Ig. Urushadze, Sh. Kvashvadze), Al. Tsimakuridze, Datiko Tsereteli, Charlemagne, Ir. Shtemberg, Chernishkov, and Chudetsky.

1952

May 16

He begins renovating the balcony.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-623, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 160.

1952

May 16

He waits for a long time in the waiting area of the office for the chairman of the Writers' Union, Giorgi Leonidze, but in vain.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 279, p. 36; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 280.

1952

May 16 or later

A young artist, Amiran Dgebuadze, visits him at home and promises to paint his portrait against a landscape background and present it to him. Galaktion examines the landscapes painted by the artist, who leaves a good impression on him.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 279, p. 37; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 281.

1952

May 17

He notes that his home's balcony is gradually becoming more beautiful and that employees of the State Publishing House, the Printing Trust, and the Book Chamber couldn't take their eyes off the balcony the previous day. Their attention was drawn by three workers pouring cement on the balcony. By morning, the cement had dried, and the balcony was covered with blossoms that had fallen from the acacia tree in the yard. He writes that he preserved 42 of those acacia blossoms as a keepsake.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-629, 20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 325.

1952

May 17

He meets the writer Mikheil Kintsurashvili (Iasamani), who lectures on Ukrainian literature at the university, and learns from him that Galaktion's poems, a monograph about him, and his portraits are included in Ukrainian textbooks. Galaktion inquires whether it would be possible to connect with Ukrainian writers for his anniversary. Kintsurashvili promises to find out and suggests meeting at his home. In the telephone directory published by the communications office, only Kintsurashvili's phone number is listed. Therefore, Galaktion looks up his address in the Writers' Union membership list but is surprised to find a completely different phone number recorded there.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 283.

1952

May 17 or later

He meets translators and literary scholars Viktor Goltsev and Ivan Karabutenko, who have arrived in Tbilisi.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 279, p. 310; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 281.

Note: In the entry, Goltsev and Karabutenko are mentioned only by their last names.

1952

May 19

He listens on the radio to a song based on his poem "O Wind Traveling from Tskaltubo to Kutaisi", composed by Bidzina Ghoghoberidze and performed by the Tskaltubo Singers' Choir.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-493, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 453.

1952

May 22

At the Writers' Union, a slightly inebriated Aleksei Surkov delivers a speech, having earlier celebrated in Saguramo with Viktor Goltsev and Giorgi Leonidze. Unlike the other writers, Galaktion does not greet the speaker with applause, considering it disrespectful for him to address Georgian writers in such a state. Surkov's speech is mostly formulaic, but he raises the issues of restructuring the Presidium of the Writers' Union and the editorial board of the magazine Mnatobi. The debate is postponed to the following day.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 312; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 283-284.

1952

May 27

A commission is appointed to celebrate Galaktion Tabidze's 60th anniversary, consisting of Shalva Radiani, Sergi Tchilaia, and Alexandre Gomiashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 279, p. 41; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 281.

1952

May 28

He is at the Writers' Union, notices Giorgi Natroshvili, and wonders how he has the right to write and publish anything he wants. He also observes Kale Bobokhidze entering the room "confidentially".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 279, p. 49; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 282.

1952

After May 28

In the magazine Mnatobi, a list of new books published by the State Publishing House is printed, noting that the fifth volume of Galaktion Tabidze's works, edited by Andro Tevzadze, has been published at a price of 12 roubles.

Source: Magazine Mnatobi, 1952, №5, the third page of the cover.

Note: The issue of the magazine was signed for printing on May 28.

1952

May 30

He writes a letter addressed to Alexandre Gomiashvili, the director of the Georgian Literary Fund, requesting to be included in the list of writers eligible for a 50% discount when purchasing a house.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 281, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 295.

1952

May 31

Together with a large group of Georgian writers, he travels to the city of Stalinir, now Tskhinvali, where the local population warmly welcomes him and Giorgi Leonidze. A celebratory meeting is held in the conference hall of the House of Soviets. During the evening, Simon Tsverava delivers a speech on the development of Soviet Georgian literature. Galaktion then takes the podium, and after the hosts' prolonged applause, he recites the poem "Stalin". Suddenly, in the middle of the reading, his voice breaks, and he is unable to continue, signalling his condition with his hand to the audience. The listeners see him off with applause once again. During the event, Aza Tibilova dedicates a poem titled "To the National Poet, Galaktion Tabidze".

Source: G. Liakhvispireli, Galaktion is one – Meetings in Tskhinvali, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 352-356.

1952

May 31

After the meeting in Stalinir (Tskhinvali), he visits the Java Gorge with the group of writers. Following the visit, they are invited to a feast. Quite intoxicated, he delivers toasts about poetry and friendship directly in verse, then passes the turn (alaverdi) to Giorgi Leonidze.

Source: G. Liakhvispireli, Galaktion is one – Meetings in Tskhinvali, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 352-356.

1952

May

The State Publishing House plans to organize an exhibition dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze's anniversary at the Kote Marjanishvili State Academic Theatre.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 279, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 276.

1952

Spring

Mikheil Mrevlishvili, in the presence of several ladies, tells Galaktion that he has loved reading his poetry since childhood and that this love has never waned.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 291, p. 201; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 328.

June

1952

June 3

He submits a request to the President of the Academy of Sciences of Georgia, Niko Mushelishvili. He writes that he has a lot of work and requests a corner in the building of the Academy of Sciences.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-195; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 122.

1952

June 6

He looks for a box to pack materials for the evening planned at the Marjanishvili Academic Theatre.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 293.

1952

June 12

By the resolution of the Presidium of the Board of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia, a commission is established to commemorate Galaktion Tabidze's 60th anniversary, consisting of Ioseb Noneshvili, Alexandre Gomiashvili, and Simon Tsverava.

Source: MGL, WUF №47, №49.

1952

June 13

At 2 p.m., he plans to visit the Writers' Union regarding photographs, and at 8 p.m., he intends to go to the Dzerzhinsky Club.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 281, p. 21; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 297.

1952

After June 13

He compiles a list of exhibits for an exhibition planned at the Sergo Ordzhonikidze Club. The list includes sculptures of Ioseb Jughashvili, heroes of labour, miners, generals, academicians, actors, and others, as well as still lifes and paintings.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 284, p. 35-43; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 299-300.

Dating: Dated based on the time of a previous entry.

1952

June 15

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes Boris Serebryakov's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Rustavi".

Source: Рустави (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. Б. Серебрякова, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1952, 15 июня, №141.

1952

June 16

He reads a telegram sent from Moscow to Giorgi Leonidze, the chairman of the Georgian Writers' Union. The telegram recommends that the Tbilisi City Council distribute the Tskneti cottages based on the same principles used in Peredelkino near Moscow.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 282, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 304.

1952

Until June 17

He plans to travel to Stalinir (now Tskhinvali) on June 17 for a business meeting at a hotel.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 281, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 296.

1952

June 19

His step-daughter, Nunu Ebanoidze writes her friend, actress Elene (Lena) Kipshidze's address on a newspaper page and tells him to definitely visit and speak with her regarding the upcoming event at Marjanishvili Theater. Nunu Ebanoidze informs her that the theater troupe is rehearsing for the poet's evening. Galaktion memorizes the actress's address and drives with his chauffeur to see Lena Kipshidze. The poet and his driver diligently try to find the actress's residence, but it turns out that the address provided by his step-daughter is incorrect.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-640, 88; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 64-64.

1952

June 20 or later

At the Marjanishvili Theatre, he attends a performance of “The Mistress of the Inn”, a play by Carlo Goldoni, directed by Giga Lortkipanidze. He enjoys it and laughs a lot.

Source: G. Lortkipanidze, profession – Director, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 142-144.

Dating: The play “The Mistress of the Inn” was directed by Giga Lortkipanidze on June 20, 1952.

1952

June 26

In the Russian newspaper Molodoy Stalinets, Boris Serebryakov’s translation of the poem “A Child’s Smile Never Fades...” from Galaktion Tabidze’s cycle “Pacifism” is published.

Source: Улыбка на устах ребенка (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. Б. Серебряков, Молодой сталинец, Тбилиси, 1952, 26 июня, №77.

1952

June 29

At his apartment on Marjanishvili Street, he is visited by composer Alexi Matchavariani, who asks him to write the text for an oratorio. Galaktion agrees.

Source: Ts. Khetereli, My heart, my turmoil, newspaper Komunisti, August 15, 1981, N 188, p. 4;

1952

June 29

Composer Alexi Matchavariani visits him at home; he is composing an oratorio based on Galaktion’s poems.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 283, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 304.

1952

Until June 30

He prepares for his evening event scheduled for June 30 at the Marjanishvili Theatre and writes a list of Writers’ Union and Academy of Sciences members to whom he plans to distribute tickets.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 284, p. 3-9; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 305-306.

Note: Galaktion plans to invite the following members of the Writers’ Union to his evening event:

1. Alexandre Abasheli, 2. Iliia Abuladze, 3. Marika Baratashvili, 4. Aleksandre Baramidze, 5. Kale Bobokhidze, 6. Viktor Gabeskiria, 7. Mariam Garikuli, 8. Akaki Gatsereia, 9. Vaso Gorgadze, 10. Iona Vakeli, 11. Solomon Tavadze, 12. Andro Tevzadze, 13. Shalva Kashmadze, 14. Yakinthe Lisashvili, 15. Konstantine Lortkipanidze, 16. Marika Mikeladze, 17. Tsvarnami Mebuke, 18. Makvala Mrevlishvili, 19. Mikheil Mrevlishvili, 20. Ioseb Noneshvili, 21. Besarion Zhghenti, 22. Vladimir Tatishvili, 23. Giorgi Tsagareli, 24. Grigoli Tsetskhladze.

1952

June 30

He meets Alexi Matchavariani and begins working on the oratorio, but it gradually becomes clear that they have different visions for the process, leading them to discontinue their collaboration.

Source: Ts. Khetereli, My heart, my turmoil, newspaper Komunisti, August 15, 1981, N 188, p. 4;

July

1952

July 1

In the Russian newspaper Molodoy Stalinets, Boris Serebryakov's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "The Meeting" is published.

Source: Встреча (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Молодой сталинец, Тбилиси, 1952, 1 июля, №79.

1952

July 2

The Executive Committee of the Tbilisi City Council grants a plot of land in the Tskneti resort zone.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-202; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 125-126.

1952

After July 2

He writes a statement in which he mentions that on April 29, the Literary Repository of Georgia received a notice from the Secretary of the Soviet Writers' Union about the provision of long-term loans for writers to build summer cottages. Based on this notice, Galaktion Tabidze purchased a house from the Tbilisi City Construction Timber Trading market and the Executive Committee of the Tbilisi City Council allocated a plot of land in the Tskneti resort zone. The construction of the house costs 40,000 roubles, and he requests that half of this amount – 20,000 roubles – be provided as a long-term loan.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-202; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 125-126.

1952

July 3

He calculates the total number of lines in the collected one-volume edition of his works, which consists of the already published seven volumes, amounting to 50,100 lines.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 285, p. 1-2; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 309.

1952

July 6

In the newspaper Komunisti, he reads an article by Irakli Abashidze titled Yanka Kupala, dedicated to the 70th anniversary of Yanka Kupala (Ivan Lutsevich). He compares it to Lukash Bende's text published in the fifth volume of the Literary Encyclopaedia and notices that Abashidze neglects significant moments of Kupala's biography, such as his membership in the Ukrainian Academy and his status as a National Poet. Galaktion interprets this as a deliberate disregard not only for Yanka Kupala's achievements but also for his own merits and labels Abashidze's actions as "trickery".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 286, p. 2-3; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 310-311.

1952

July 6

He learns that the previous day, Grigol Abashidze had gone to the Tbilisi City Council and complained, saying, "Why is it that you're always focused on Galaktion and forget about other poets?"

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 286, p. 2-3; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 310-311.

1952

July 6

At 4 p.m., he listens to the broadcast Literatura da Khelovneba on the radio, featuring the recording of his evening event at the Marjanishvili Theatre, and cannot hide his indignation. The broadcast includes only his speech and that of actress Elene Kipshidze. His speech sounds terrible because it was recorded directly in the hall without his knowledge, losing the audience's reactions and ovations. He begins to suspect that this might be a provocation against him.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 286, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 312.

1952

July 6

While reviewing the sixth volume of his seven-volume collection in the Academy of Sciences Library, he discovers that pages 1-69 have been removed. He decides to check other libraries as well.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 287, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 316.

1952

July 7

He addresses the Writers' Union of Georgia with a statement, writing that he is experiencing financial difficulties and requesting a loan of 10,000 roubles for a period of 10 months.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-197; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 122.

1952

July 7

He addresses the director of the Communal Bank of Georgia, D. Demetradze, with a statement. He writes that the Tbilisi City Council has allocated him a plot of land in Tskneti for building a house. He informs that he has purchased a standard house and intends to install it, for which he needs a loan and requests the provision of 10,000 roubles for a short period.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-197; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 122-123.

1952

July 11

In the newspaper Norchi Lenineli, Galaktion Tabidze's poem "The Book" is published.

Source: Newspaper Norchi Lenineli, July 11, 1952, N 28, p. 1.

1952

July 15

He addresses the state publishing house with a statement, requesting the organization of an exhibition for his meeting day. For this, he needs 300 portraits, a magazine, a newspaper, and other materials to be mounted on cardboard and framed.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-199; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 123.

1952

Until July 17

He submits a request to the chairman of the Mutual Aid Repository of the Academy of Sciences, asking for a loan of one month's salary, amounting to 3,000 roubles, for a period of three months.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 284, p. 25; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 307.

1952

Until July 18

He addresses the President of the Georgian Academy of Sciences, Niko Muskhelishvili, with a statement. He writes that he has been allocated a residential plot in Tskneti and has already purchased a house to install there. Now, it needs to be transported and an additional lower floor constructed, for which he requests assistance through the technical base under the recipient's authority. He asks for an appropriate order to be issued and for the payment to the technical base to be deducted from his salary.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-196; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 123-124.

1952

July 18

The President of the Georgian Academy of Sciences, Niko Muskhelishvili, issues a resolution on Galaktion's statement, ordering that his request be fulfilled and assigning the technical base to carry out the specified work.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-196; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 123-124.

September

1952

September 3

He commissions engineer Petre Martirosov to make three windows and two doors for his Tskhneti cottage, paying him 600 roubles in advance. The agreement stipulates that if the work is not completed by September 5, the money must be refunded.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 287, p. 23; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 320.

1952

After September 3

The engineer Petre Martirosov, who had agreed to make the doors and windows for the Tskhneti cottage, fails to fulfil his promise. Altogether, he takes 1,000 roubles and does not return the money.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 287, p. 23; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 320.

1952

September 4

He addresses the Deputy Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Workers' Deputies of Tbilisi, Vakhtang Eпитashvili, with a statement. He writes that the construction of his house is underway on the plot allocated to him in the Tskneti resort area, but it is being obstructed by a village cooperative kiosk that was supposed to be relocated but remains in place. He requests the issuance of an appropriate order to resolve the issue. Vakhtang Eпитashvili issues a resolution on the same day, ordering the immediate relocation of the kiosk away from the writer Galaktion Tabidze's house.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-200; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 124.

1952

September

Apollon (Guguli) Kipiani, the assistant director of the Tbilisi State Opera Theatre, promises to gift him a program booklet at the season's opening.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 292, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 334.

October

1952

October 14

At the Writers' Union, Akaki Beliashvili inquires about the date of Galaktion's jubilee evening. When the poet responds, "November 17", Beliashvili repeats several times that it is good if it takes place before the cold weather sets in, which makes Galaktion smile.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 291, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 330.

1952

October 14

At the Writers' Union, he observes Demna Shengelaia, Sergo Kldiashvili, Akaki Beliashvili, and a curly-haired young man talking to each other. Leo Kiacheli enters, greets Galaktion with a handshake, and tells him that Demna Shengelaia and Marijani had a quarrel related to their trip to Kvareli.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 291, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 331.

1952

After October 14

In his notebook, he writes down Shalva Kashmadze's poem dedicated to him, "When You Cross the Likhi Mountain...".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 291, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 333.

1952

October 17

He writes an untitled poem "If somehow I pass through safely...".

Source: Autographs, MGL, №6808; №714; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 214.

Note: The poem is also found untitled with a different beginning: "In this nineteen forty-two...".

1952

October 20

He learns from the Writers' Union Presidium's announcement that a meeting with R. Kim, the author of the story "The Notebook Found in Sunchon", is scheduled for 3 o'clock.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 292, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 334.

1952

October 24

In his notebook, he writes down quotes from his own poem "I and The Night".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-469, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 250.

1952

October 24

In the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, he reads Akaki Topuria's article "A Grand and Captivating Theme". After reading it, he notes his observations about the article in his notebook. He believes that the publication deliberately neglects his contributions to the revolution while excessively highlighting Giorgi Leonidze's role. Galaktion points out that he was the first in Georgian poetry to mention Lenin and Stalin, which the article ignores. In his view, Akaki Topuria portrays the situation as if Georgian revolutionary poetry did not exist before 1934. He finds it inconceivable for an article discussing Georgian Soviet poetry not to mention his name. The poet suspects that the article is part of a larger conspiracy against him, orchestrated by members of the Writers' Union Presidium with the involvement of Giorgi Natroshvili. Galaktion notes that he now understands why the Presidium members were opposed to celebrating his jubilee.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-597, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 521-524.

1952

October 24

He writes an untitled verse: "My long-suffering homeland..."

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-469, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 250.

1952

October 25

He is visited by Revas Orjonikidze, an employee of the state publishing house, who informs him that the planned volume of his new book, as determined by the publisher, is expected to be 12 printing forms.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-588, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 462.

1952

October 27

At the state publishing house, he meets with publishing house employee Rezo Orjonikidze and discusses his upcoming book.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-588, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 462.

1952

October 29

He gifts the Russian-language book, authored by Alexandre Baramidze, Shalva Radiani, and Besarion Zhghenti, to his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, with the inscription: "To my Nino. This is good as well, dear Nino - if you can make a crow drop a walnut".

Source: MGL, t-261, A. Барамидзе, Ш. Радиани, Б. Жгенти, "История грузинской литературы", Moscow, 1952.

1952

October 29 or after

He reads the Russian-language Book “The History of Georgian Literature”, authored by Alexandre Baramidze, Shalva Radiani, and Besarion Zhghenti, making underlining and notes.

Source: MGL, t-261, А. Барамидзе, Ш. Радиани, Б. Жгенти, “История грузинской литературы”, Moscow, 1952.

1952

October 30

He speaks with the poet Savle Abuladze, who complains that certain things were incorrectly announced during his lectures.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 290; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 321.

1952

October 31

The board of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia petitions Akaki Mgeladze, Secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia, to commemorate Galaktion Tabidze’s 60th birthday and 45th anniversary of literary activity with a jubilee celebration and the publication of a single-volume collection of his works.

Source: MGL, WUF №52.

1952

October

While strolling in the courtyard of Tbilisi University, students Nargiza Mgeladze and Eteri Jijeishvili quietly follow him. Galaktion heads toward the zoo. Nargiza begins reciting the poem “The Wind Blows” aloud. Galaktion turns around, wraps his arms around the girls, and they continue walking, reciting the poem together. When the poem ends, Galaktion waits for Eteri to recite the next one. However, she gets flustered and cannot recall any poem. Galaktion takes her notebook, pulls a red pencil from his breast pocket, and prepares to write. Just then, the sound of a lion roaring comes from the zoo. Galaktion lifts his head and says sorrowfully, “An equal seeks an equal – perhaps they, too, took one away from him”. He then returns the notebook and, with a nervous stride, walks toward the zoo entrance.

Source: E. Jijeishvili, Since you’re following me, you must have had something to say, newspaper Sabtchota Ajara, December 11, 1982, N 238, p. 4.

1952

Until November

He reads Giorgi Salukvadze’s Book “Snow Avalanches on the Caucasus”. At the end, he writes that the literary circle at Tbilisi State University is organizing a grand exhibition dedicated to the 60th anniversary of the birth of the National Poet and full member of the Academy of Sciences, Galaktion Tabidze. The exhibition is titled “Soviet Georgia in the Works of the National Poet - Galaktion Tabidze”. The circle selected five Galaktionologists who are the most knowledgeable about the poet's work and entrusted them with the task of selecting texts for the exhibition. The exhibition is planned to be held in November.

Source: GTSM, 803, G. Salukvadze, "Snow Avalanches on the Caucasus", Tbilisi, 1952.

November

1952

November 5

Giorgi Abzianidze promises that he will begin writing a monograph about him in a year.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 291, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 325.

1952

November 7

He attends the November 7th demonstration, where Nikoloz Chachava and Ioseb Noneshvili are active, displaying their administrative talents. From a distance, he sees Polio Abramia and wants to ask him what kind of person Vano Tsulukidze is, but he is unable to reach him.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 291, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 325, 329.

1952

November 7

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, Boris Serebryakov's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "The Song of October" is published.

Source: Октябрьская песня (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. Б. Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1952, 7 ноябрь, №265.

1952

After November 7

In his diary, he writes that Nikoloz Chachava had the portrait of him, painted by Aleksandre Bandzeladze, repainted for the magazine Droscha. The portrait, however, was not liked by Mamia Duduchava and others.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 291, p. 287; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 329.

Dating: In the 1952 diary entry, November 7 is referred to in the past tense.

1952

After November 7

In his diary, he recalls a crucial meeting at the Writers' Union where Irakli Abashidze attacked him, saying he does nothing but drink wine, and how Grigol Chikovani agreed, stating that everyone knows this.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 291, p. 287; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 329-330.

1952

November 8 or earlier

After speaking with Irakli Abashidze, the director of the State Publishing House, Erasti Tsvitshivadze tells Galaktion that in order to publish his large single-volume edition, a special directive from the Central Committee of the Party is required.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 291, p. 2-3; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 324-325.

1952

November 8

He is disturbed by the intrigues orchestrated by Irakli Abashidze in the editorial offices of Zarya Vostoka and Mnatobi. He suspects that Abashidze is trying to sabotage Galaktion's jubilee evening and the publication of his large single-volume edition, and he does not hide his hostile attitude toward him. Galaktion is concerned that there is no one in the Presidium of the Writers' Union to support him.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 291, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 324.

1952

November 8

He calls Irakli Abashidze on the phone, but no one answers.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 291, G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 324.

1952

November 8

He recalls the literary evening held at the Kutaisi Theatre on October 5, 1911, organized by Alexandre Abasheli. He remembers how much Akaki Tsereteli enjoyed his melodic reading. He humorously describes how the hall emptied out and how Akaki Tsereteli waited until Abasheli gave him his honorarium.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 291, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 322.

Dating: November 7 is referred to with the word "yesterday", and the latest entries are from 1952.

1952

November 8

He recalls that Alexandre Abasheli "dishonestly" received the prize established by the newspaper Tem'i in 1912, a prize that should have rightfully gone to him. He also mentions how, in 1944, during the creation of the anthem of the Georgian Soviet Socialist Republic, Galaktion was "dishonestly" sidelined, and how Dimitri Tomasheli was greatly surprised that Galaktion was not asked to write the anthem.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 291, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 322.

Dating: November 7 is referred to with the word "yesterday", and the latest entries are from 1952.

1952

November 8 or later

In his diary, he writes that the members of the Writers' Union Presidium are hostile toward Savle Abuladze, the leader of the literary circle at the Teachers' House. He also regrets that he has been misled several times and believes that the situation must be corrected.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 291, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 325.

1952

November 8 and onwards

In his notebook, he writes down the names, surnames, and phone numbers of the members of the Writers' Union who are not supporting the celebration of his jubilee, or who are silent or opposed to it.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 291, p. 2-21; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 324-330.

1952

November 11

Someone named Ermokrati Talakvadze is the author of a poem titled "To Galaktion".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 293, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 340.

1952

First half of November

The administration of the Teachers' House in Khashuri plans to arrange a meeting with Galaktion Tabidze and informs him about it.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 294, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 345.

1952

First half of November

He sends a telegram to the Teachers' House in Khashuri, informing them that he will arrive in Khashuri on the morning of November 15.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 294, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 345.

1952

November 15

He arrives in Khashuri and goes to the Teachers' House, where he meets the chairman of the organization's administration, Zoia Chikovani, who shows him the invitation for the meeting scheduled with Galaktion on November 16. Galaktion notices that under the glass on Zoia's desk, there are also invitations for the 100th anniversary of Nikolai Gogol and for Ioseb Noneshvili's evening, and he realizes that a more elaborate invitation has been prepared for Noneshvili. Galaktion reflects on the frequent use of the name "Zoia" in Noneshvili's poetry. He has a poem about Zoia Kosmodemyanskaya, a poem about Zoia Rukhadze, and wonders if Zoia Chikovani might also be interested in him.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 294, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 345.

1952

November 15-16

The weather in Khashuri is windy, and the hotel is very dirty, with even Stalin's portrait covered in dust. On the desk of the chairman of the Teachers' House administration, there is no ink in any of the pens, and Galaktion is dissatisfied with Zoia Chikovani's reception.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 294, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 345.

1952

November 15-16

In the chairman's office at the Teachers' House in Khashuri, a teacher tells Galaktion that he is very interested in his early poems but cannot find them.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 294, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 345.

1952

November 17

He submits a request to the Presidium of the Board of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia for a creative assignment. By the decision of the meeting, he is granted a three-month assignment to collect materials for new works in various districts of Georgia. He is allocated a daily allowance of 50 roubles.

Source: MGL, WUF №50-51.

1952

November 19

He addresses the director of the state publishing house, Erasti Tsivtsivadze, with a statement. He notes that the Book he submitted to the publishing house together with Revaz Orjonikidze is more complete than all his previous editions. Nevertheless, it does not include poems that would disrupt the book's coherence and historical character. The Book is divided into five chronological sections: 1908–1917, 1917–1933, 1933–1941, 1941–1945, and 1945–1950. This structure better illustrates the poet's creative evolution, not only for scholars but also for the general readership.

The poet requests permission to personally oversee the proofreading and printing of the selected works.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-201; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 124-125.

1952

November 20

He attends a concert where a cantata titled “The Happiness of Peoples – Peace”, composed by Olga Baramishvili based on his poem, is performed. He plans to have the musical text of the cantata transcribed at the conservatory so that he can later use it for an exhibition.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-606, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 43.

1952

November 23

On Rustaveli Avenue, in a bookstore, he purchases Alio Mirtskhulava-Mashashvili’s selected poetry collection “The Leader of the Homeland”. The seller thanks him, saying that he is the only person who has bought the book. Upon hearing this, a few others also purchase the book, and the seller expresses gratitude to them as well.

Source: G. Tabidze’s inscription on the book, MGL, t-80, Alio Mirtskhulava-Mashashvili, Selected – “The Leader of the Homeland”, Tbilisi, 1952, p. 380.

1952

November 25

He attends a meeting invited by the editorial board of the magazine Mnatobi at the Writers’ Club, which addresses issues of literary criticism. The meeting, originally scheduled for 8 o’clock, begins at 9 instead.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 294, p. 19; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 346.

1954

November 29

The Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia requests the director of the Tbilisi Academy of Arts to lend either the original or a copy of the bust of Galaktion Tabidze, created by Jakob Nikoladze, for an exhibition related to the Writers’ Congress.

Source: MGL, WUF №66.

December

1952

Until December

During the construction of the Vera Bridge, Jansugh Charkviani, together with Otar Tchiladze and Givi Samsonadze, is drinking vodka. Galaktion approaches and orders 150 grams of vodka from the vendor. He takes two sips, swishes it around in his mouth, and spits it out. He rubs the remaining vodka into his beard and tells the surprised Jansugh that when passing Zemeli, he wants passers-by to think he is drunk.

Source: J. Charkviani, Brief Recollections about Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 101-102.

Dating: The event is dated according to the completion time of the Vera Bridge construction.

1952

December 4

In the newspaper Komunisti, an obituary titled “In Memory of Riazhden Gvetadze” is published, with Galaktion Tabidze’s signature alongside those of other writers.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1952, №286, p. 3.

1952

Until December 5

In his diary, he writes about two accounts by Polio Ireteli regarding Iakob Gogebashvili. In one, it is described how, in his final years, Gogebashvili often became cold and would sit at home wrapped in blankets. The second memory recalls how Iakob was served dinner at the Georgian club, drank little wine, and fell asleep there. By morning, he was carried in and taken home.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 294, p. 21-23; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 346-347.

Dating: The record in the diary is placed before the entry of December 5, 1952, written with the same pencil.

1952

Until December 5

In his diary, he writes about Valerian Gunia’s account of how, on the day of Dimitri Kipiani’s funeral, the police and the army blocked the procession’s path. They demanded that the procession take a different route, toward Vikro Street, but Gunia took the initiative, broke through the cordon, moved ahead, and the crowd followed him.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 294, p. 21-23; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 346-347.

Dating: The record in the diary is placed before the entry of December 5, 1952, written with the same pencil.

1952

December 5

In the previous day’s newspaper Komunisti, he reads the obituary of Razhden Gvetadze and cannot hide his irony at the words “immaculate and pure”, as he knew the deceased as a corrupt and depraved individual.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 294, p. 26; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 348.

Dating: The record in the diary is placed before the entry of December 5, 1952, written with the same pencil.

1952

December 5

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, Boris Serebryakov's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "The Law of Great Stalin" is published.

Source: Великий Сталинский Закон (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Б. Серебрякова, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1952, 5 декабря, №287.

1952

December 12

In the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, an article by Sergi Tchilaia titled "On the Remnants of Nationalist Superstitions" is published, in which the following individuals are criticized for "nationalist errors": Konstantine Gamsakhurdia, Ioseb Grishashvili, Giorgi Leonidze, Kolau Nadiradze, Galaktion Tabidze, Irakli Abashidze, and others. The author of the article expresses concern that Georgian poets are still including poems written before the revolution in new editions of their books that clearly express nationalist sentiments. Tchilaia considers Galaktion Tabidze's "Ephemera" to be such a work, particularly the lines from the poem: "A drop of blood in me is not of non-Georgian origin". According to the critic, in these words, the poet indirectly advocates for national exclusivity and uses a somewhat mystical concept of "Georgian blood". Tchilaia traces the origins of these views to bourgeois nationalism. While acknowledging that the poem was written long ago, the critic argues that the poet still deserves reproach because this work was included in the 1944 edition of his "Selected Works". Tchilaia also points out that nationalist and decadent themes are not foreign to Galaktion's later poetry, and the seventh volume of his works serves as evidence of this. At the end of the article, the critic clarifies that the examples he cited are individual mistakes and should not be confused with the mistakes found in the works of some other writers.

Source: S. Tchilaia, "On the Remnants of Nationalist Superstitions", newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba, 1952, №50 (December 12), p. 3.

1952

December 14 or later

Andro Tevzadze sends a brief note reminding him of the promise to submit a poem for his almanac.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-487; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 322.

Note: As Andro Tevzadze was the responsible secretary of the Adjara branch of the Writers' Union of Georgia, it is likely referring to the almanac "Ajara's Literary Youth", which was published in 1956.

1952

December 21

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, Boris Serebryakov's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Stalin" is published.

Source: Сталин (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер с груз. Б. серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1952, 21 декабрь, №300.

1952

December 5 -31

He writes a poem-memoir titled "On Which Side Is the People".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 295, p. 2-3; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 351-354.

1952

December 31

He writes an untitled poem "The former editor of a dubious source...".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 295, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 354.

1952

December

He writes an untitled poem "You step onto the stage...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №161-a, p. 4277-4278; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 73; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 647.

1951-1952

He fills out the creative report questionnaire for the years 1949-1951 in Russian.

Source: MGL, WUF №61, №65.

Dating: Since he is writing the report for the years 1949-1951, it is likely to be at the end of 1951 or the beginning of 1952.

1952

He writes a poem "Youth".

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book I, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 390; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 46.

1952

He examines his portrait, painted by Aleksandre Bandzeladze, at the State Museum of Georgian Art and is satisfied with it.

Source: Sh. Amiranashvili, Our Galaktion, A Toast To Him, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 15.

1952

On the road leading to Tchomi, there is a spring, the embellishment of which Galaktion requested from engineer Vladimir Jikia. The people of Kutaisi call it “Galaktion’s Spring”.

Source: L. Nutsubidze, Seen and Heard, magazine Gantiadi, 1993, № 3-4, p. 112-113.

1952

While strolling on Rustaveli Avenue, Galaktion encounters Grigol Meskhi and Jeneto Tchanturaia. Galaktion recalls the events from Kutaisi to Grigol and laughs out loud. He then tells Tchanturaia that when Grigol was painting his first portrait, Galaktion was wearing a worn-out jacket, and the artist had to lend him his own cloak.

Source: J. Tchanturaia, The Poet’s First Artist and Illustrator, newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, November 2, 1973, N 43-44, p. 5.

1952

The poet Gio Kanashvili, under the pseudonym “G. Kananeli”, dedicates a poem titled “Let Us Remember, Comrade – G. Tabidze”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 281, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 296.

1952

He addresses the Georgian Academy of Sciences with a statement, writing that due to a prolonged illness, he was unable to submit information about his work in 1951. He informs them belatedly that throughout that year, he was primarily working on the fifth volume of his seven-volume collected works.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-202; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 125.

1952

He writes an untitled poem beginning with “Look: The land rejoices, brilliant...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №223; №224; №6914-6915; №7282; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 292. For clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 692.

Note: The poem is also found untitled with different opening lines: “Look, the land rejoices, brilliant...”, “Come, let us recall our brilliant...”, “So let us toast our brilliant...”, and “You have crossed the impassable roads...”.

1952 or later

In his notebook, he writes a list of poems and publications dedicated to him, with the years indicated.

Source: MGL, d-437, 1-9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 119-122;

1952 or later

Drunk, he enters Aleksandrov’s Park. He sits down next to an unknown young man and begins a conversation. He says that life is no longer worth living because you can’t escape people; they are everywhere, watching you at every step, and the deeper you sink into the current, the more eyes you see on you. He tells the young man that a few days ago, some young people pulled him out of the river. He entered the river because it seemed like it was calling him. When the young man asks why he wanted to end his life, he answers: because life is no longer worth it, and he has already reached the limit beyond which he is only going nowhere fast. As he says these words, tears come to his eyes.

Source: S. Narimanidze, The Native Garden Slept, newspaper Sitkva Kartuli, March 25, 1993, №4, p. 10.

Dating: Since his jump into the Mtkvari River is mentioned, we can date this event to 1952 or a later period.

1952 or later

On behalf of the Writers' Union, he writes the text of a petition stating that the Writers' Union is initiating a request regarding the 60th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's birth and the 45th anniversary of his literary career. The petition calls for the publication of a collection of the poet's selected works, which will be based on the already published seven volumes of his works, poems printed in the press, and unpublished materials. The Book will be compiled according to a chronological principle and will include a preface and commentary. The project and layout of the Book will be submitted to the State Publishing House by the author.

Source: MGL, d-492, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 448;

1952 or later

He reads the Russian translation of "The History of Georgia" by Niko Berdzenishvili, Ivane Javakhishvili, and Simon Janashia, making underlining and comments. He writes on the back endpaper that information about Vani is located on page 37. He lists the portraits of himself that he needs in chronological order: He does not have a portrait from 1905-1907, which needs to be created, the seminary portrait with Badriashvili (1908-1912), the portrait published in the first Book (1913-1914), the Book portrait with Abesalom (1915-1917), the Book portrait with Giorgi Kuchishvili (1918-1921), the portrait from Volume II (1921-1925), the portrait from Volume III (1926-1930), the ornamented portrait (1931-1940), the portrait from Volume IV (1941-1945), and the portrait from Volume V (1946-1949).

Source: MGL, t-318, Н. Бердзенишвили, И. Джавахишвили, С. Джанашиа, "История Грузии", Часть I, С Древнейший времен до начала XIX века, Учебник для старших классов средней школы, Tbilisi, 1946.

After 1952

He writes an untitled poem "I do not expect rewards from anyone...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-501, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 21;

1953
January

1953

Until January 1

He plans to organize a documentary exhibition titled “1917: ‘Flags, Quickly!’” He believes that this exhibition will prove the falsehood of the views held by Beso Zhghenti and Shalva Radiani, who argue that the history of Soviet literature begins with the founding of the “Proletarian Writers’ Association”. Galaktion points out that Georgian Soviet poetry existed even before the establishment of this association. The association was founded in 1922 but quickly dissolved. He also thinks that the history of the magazine Mnatobi should be properly covered. Initially, the editorial work of Mnatobi was led by Sandro Euli, but he was removed from the magazine due to unsatisfactory results. According to Galaktion, the magazine’s situation improved once it was ideologically led by him, Polikarp Kakabadze, and Ivane Ioseliani. He notes that his poem “Troubled Wind” was published in the second issue of the magazine.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-493, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 451-452.

Note: The title of the poem is not specified in the source.

1953

Until January 1

He makes a note about the Main Pharmacy Department. He mentions that this organization forcibly took over the basement of a house on Zhores Street, which was intended to be used as housing for writers. He believes that writers definitely need basements, and they could even have their own club, but this is impossible as long as the basement is occupied by the Pharmacy Department.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-493, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 452.

1953

Until January 1

He notes the expected anniversary dates in January 1953.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-493, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 452.

1953

January 1

In the newspaper Komunisti, under the signature “Galaktion Tabidze, National Poet of Georgia”, the poem “Hymn to Peace” (“Look: the brilliant land is flourishing...”) is published.

Source: G. Tabidze, “Hymn to Peace”, Newspaper Komunisti, 1953, №1, p. 3.

1953

January 1

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "The Sun Shines for Us" is published.

Source: Солнце сияет для нас! Г. Табидзе, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1953, 1 январь, №1.

1953

January 1

In the Russian newspaper Molodoy Stalinets, Boris Serebryakov's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "New Year's Song" is published.

Source: Новогодняя песня (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Молодой сталинец, Тбилиси, 1953, 1 января, №1.

1953

January 1

In the Russian newspaper Sovetskaya Abkhazia, Boris Serebryakov's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "New Year" is published.

Source: Новый год (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Советская Абхазия, Сухуми, 1953, 1 января, №1.

1953

After January 23

He receives a letter from Igor Postupalsky from Moscow. Postupalsky informs him that his single-volume collection has been included in the publication plan of the State Literary Publishing House. The editor of the publishing house will likely once again be Sofia Khitarova, while an external editor has not yet been selected. He expresses his strong desire to be the editor of this book. Although certain circumstances interfered with his work on the previous book's editing, this time, many improvements can be made: adding poems and verses, replacing some poor translations with better ones, refining certain sections within existing translations, and involving new translators, such as Anna Akhmatova and Nikolai Zabolotsky. He asks that if Galaktion agrees, he should write to the publishing house's director, Anatoly Kotov, and Alexandra Ryabinina to confirm the decision. He also includes a draft text justifying his selection as the editor. However, if Galaktion prefers someone else for the role, he should urgently inform the same individuals to ensure that the Book does not fall into the hands of an unmotivated editor. Additionally, he should specify that the book's length should be 10,000 or 12,000 lines. He concludes the letter by stating that if he is appointed as the editor, he will be able to include Elizbar Ananiashvili's exceptional translations for Zarya Vostoka, in accordance with the publishing contract.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-65; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 310-311.

1953

January 31

Russian artists Evgenia Solonchenko and Aleksandr Morozov visit him and promise to paint his portrait for a collection of poems to be published in Russian.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-580, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 419.

1953

January 31

He addresses the management of the State Publishing House with a statement, writing that the costs of retyping his Russian Book will be covered from his Book royalties

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-203; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 126.

February

1953

February 1

In the Russian newspaper Sovetskaia Abkhazia, Boris Serebryakov's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Stalingrad" is published.

Source: Сталинград (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. Б. Серебрякова, Советская Абхазия, Сухуми, 1953, 1 февраля, №22.

1953

Until February 2

He receives news from Moscow that the State Publishing House of Fiction has included the publication of his Book in their plans, and the editor for the project will be Igor Postupalskiy.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-580, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 420;

1953

Until February 2

The translator Giorgi Tsagareli visits him, and Galaktion instructs him to send a letter on his behalf to Moscow, expressing approval for Igor Postupalskiy's appointment as the editor of his book.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-580, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 420.

1953

February 2

At Galaktion's request, Giorgi Tsagareli sends a letter to Moscow, to the State Publishing House of Fiction, stating that Galaktion Tabidze agrees to have Igor Postupalskiy appointed as the editor of his Russian-language collection.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-580, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 420.

1953

Until February 3

He notes on a piece of paper that he is scheduled to visit Elizbar Ananiashvili on February 3.

Source: MGL, d-580, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 419;

1953

Until February 3

Sculptor Boris Shebuev is making a bas-relief of Galaktion.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-580, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 419;

1953

Until February 3

He notes on the paper that he must to inform the editor of Zarya Vostoka, Mark Zlatkin, that the printing of the materials is starting anew.

Source: MGL, d-580, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 420;

1953

Until February 3

He plans to write a statement addressed to the Minister of Culture, Avtandil Gunia, stating that he will cover the costs of printing the Book materials on the printing press.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-580, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 420;

1953

February 5

He marries Nina Kvirikadze, at the Registry Office of Kalinin District in Tbilisi.

Source: Marriage Certificate, MGL, WUF №77.

1953

February 7

He discusses the publication of his poems with Simon Tsverava and promises to present additional texts in about a week and a half: "Epoch", "Revolutionary Georgia", "Pacifism", "Children Selling Cigarettes", "The Dream Near Sokhumi HPP", and a poem about the early days of collectivization.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-580, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 420.

1953

Until February 8

He is editing the poem "The Dream Near Sokhumi", which he plans to have published in the second issue of the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-580, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 420.

1953

February 8

He notes on a piece of paper that on February 9, Elizbar Ananiashvili will present his “Selected Poems” to the Zarya Vostoka publishing house for printing.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-580, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 420.

1953

Until February 11

He notes on a piece of paper that Amiran Gabeskiria has agreed to be the editor of his Book at the Soviet Literature Publishing House.

Source: MGL, d-580, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 420.

1953

Until February 11

He notes on a piece of paper that sculptor Boris Shebuev is ready to provide the photo of his bas-relief for printing in the book.

Source: MGL, d-580, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 420.

1953

February 11

He notes on a piece of paper that he is scheduled to meet Amiran Gabeskiria on February 12.

Source: MGL, d-580, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 420.

1953

February 13

The Literaturuli Gazeti publishes Galaktion Tabidze’s poems “Be Glorious, My Homeland” and “Immortal Is”.

Source: G. Tabidze, “Be Glorious, My Homeland”, newspaper Literaturuli Gazeti, February 13, 1953, N 1, p. 1.

1953

After February 13

He asks an unknown young man standing in front of the Writers’ House whether he happens to write poetry. After receiving a negative answer, the speaker praises him, saying that many people write poetry here, even though they don’t know Georgian properly, and writing poetry is very difficult.

Source: T. Jangulashvili, “Leap Toward the Sky”, magazine Tsiskari, 1992, №8, p. 103;

1953

February 24

Sergi Tchilaia, as agreed, sends an article about Galaktion Tabidze to Viktor Goltsev, the editor of the Russian magazine Druzhba Narodov.

Source: MGL, WUF №43.

Note: In the source, only Viktor Goltsev's first name and patronymic are mentioned.

1953

February 25

A translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Soviet Georgia" by Boris Serebryakov is published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka.

Source: Советской Грузии (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Перевод Б. Серебрякова, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1953, 25 февраля, N 47.

1953

February 25

A translation of a fragment from Galaktion Tabidze's poem, titled "My Country", by Boris Serebryakov is published in the newspaper Gamarjvebis Drosha.

Source: Моя страна (Отрывок из поэмы) Г. Табидзе, Перевод Б. Серебряков, Гамарджвебис дроша, Гагра, 1953, 25 февраля, №24.

March

1953

March 9

A translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Fire Set by Him Shines" by Boris Serebryakov is published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka.

Source: Горит огонь, его рукой зажженный (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Перевод Б. Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1953, 9 марта, №58, с. 1

1953

After March 9

He creates a list of images and posters based on the themes of his own poems and books.

Source: MGL, d-485, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 393-394;

1953

March 13

A translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Fire Set by Him Shines" by Boris Serebryakov is published in the Russian newspaper Sovetskaia Abkhazia.

Source: Горит огонь, его рукой зажженный (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Перевод Б. Серебряков, Советская Абхазия, Сухуми, 1953, 13 марта, №52.

1953

Until March 16

In the manuscript, he comes across Isidore Ramishvili's Book "The Tragedy of Tsitsamuri" and makes a summary of his conclusions in his diary. He evaluates the work positively and notes that the publication of such studies is essential in today's time.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-521; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 117;

Note: It seems that the author of the work asked Galaktion to provide a recommendation to the publisher.

1953

March 16

He writes a power of attorney for Kote Alaverdov, authorizing him to collect his salary for the first half of March on his behalf.

Source: V. Javakhadze, “Unknown. Apology of Galaktion Tabidze”, Tbilisi, 2020, p. 154.

1953

After March 23

He learns that on March 23, at an evening dedicated to Georgian Soviet literature held in Kyiv, Mykola Bazhan began his talk on the history of contemporary Georgian literature with Galaktion’s work, and he believes this is a victory.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 297, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 360.

1953

Until March 28

While staying at the treatment centre, Isidore Odishvili hands over his manuscript of the Book “The Tragedy of Tsitsamuri”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 297, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 356.

1953

March 28

He carefully reads Isidore Odishvili’s Book “The Tragedy of Tsitsamuri”, considers it a work of great historical significance, and writes that he shares Veriko Anjaparidze’s view on the necessity of publishing this book.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 297, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 356.

Note: The Book was indeed published in 1953.

1953

After March 28

He comes across the decision of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the Soviet Union regarding amnesty, which provided for the release of individuals sentenced to imprisonment for up to five years. In his notebook, he notes that this is a historic decision and will contribute to the country’s progress, the improvement of the population’s well-being, and the elevation of cultural awareness.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-521, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 117.

1953

March 29

He writes an untitled stanza: “The tragedy of Tsitsamuri stands vividly here once more...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-614, 41; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 92.

1953

March 29

He writes an untitled poem “Now is the time, worker Roma...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №317; №6375; №6548; №7292; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 215; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 648.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Now is the Time, Solomon, Roma” and untitled, beginning with: “Irakli! Brotherhood, conscience, labour!..”, “Now is the time, Solomon, Roma...”, “Currently is the time, Solomon, Roma...”.

1953

March 29 or earlier

At that time, Vladimir Chiaureli, the head of the Literature and Art Department of the Central Committee of the Georgian Communist Party, visits the ailing French journalist and politician Yves Farge at the treatment centre. During his visit, Galaktion, who is also undergoing treatment at the same facility, inquires about the celebration of his 60th birthday. He receives the response that this issue has not been removed from the agenda. Galaktion cannot understand why the matter would have been removed and thinks that supporters of Leonidze must have had a hand in it.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 297, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 361.

Dating: The entry is placed before the diary entry of March 29, 1953.

Note: Yves Farge passed away the following day.

1953

After March 29

He tries to recall the details of an illegal meeting held in a hut in a mountainous village near Kutaisi between 1903 and 1908. He remembers that the person delivering the report in Russian closely resembled Joseph Stalin. He attempts to verify whether Stalin was in Kutaisi during those years. In his memory, he recalls that the following people attended the meeting with him: Genadi Mikhelidze, Kipshidze, Baratashvili, and Makharoblidze, one of whom knew the way and led them all there.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 297, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 362.

Dating: The entry is placed after the diary entry of March 29, 1953.

April

1953

April 20

Galaktion Tabidze's collection "Poems" is submitted for production with the approval of the Children's Literary Publishing House Sablitgam, and the book's editing process begins.

Source: G. Tabidze, poems, 1953, p. 154.

1953

April 26

He reads the newspaper Komunisti, making highlights and a sketch.

Source: MGL, t-614. newspaper Komunisti, April 26, 1953, №99, p. 3.

1953

April 29

A translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Immortality" by Boris Serebryakov is published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka.

Source: Бессмертие (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Перевод Б. Серебрякова, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1953, 29 апреля, №101.

1953

After April 29

He receives a letter from his nephew, Vasil Tabidze, who works as a doctor in the village of Tsalka. Vasil writes that the weather is quite cold, and they try to keep warm by dancing the Lezginka. The local library lacks medical books. He has discovered that Turks and Georgians share many words with common roots. He has already learned a few phrases in Turkish and is making an effort to learn the language. He wishes him success and sends regards to Nina Kvirikadze.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-441; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 247.

May

1953

Beginning of May

He has been lying in the treatment centre for over a month and recalls with bitter irony the fact that a servant, who came to deliver a tray to the representative of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia visiting Yves Farge, took away an ashtray and has not returned it yet.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 297, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 361.

Dating: The entry suggests that more than a month has passed since Yves Farge's death, whereas he actually passed away on March 30.

1953

May 3

In his notebook, he writes that the 20th century began with “The Tragedy of Tsitsamuri”, and Georgian literature experienced it in its entirety.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 297, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 356.

1953

After May 3

He writes a satirical poem about Georgian criticism titled “Advice to Georgian Writers”, in which Beso Zhgenti is ironically mentioned.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 297, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 356.

Dating: The record is placed after the diary entry of May 3, 1953.

1953

After May 3

In his notebook, he writes a quote from the sanitary worker of the treatment centre, taken from Saltykov-Shchedrin’s poem “Two Angels”, which states that everything beautiful is transient.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 297, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 356.

Dating: The record is placed after the diary entry of May 3, 1953.

1953

After May 3

In his diary, he writes that washing parquet with water is not allowed.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 297, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 356.

Dating: The record is placed after the diary entry of May 3, 1953.

1953

After May 3

In his diary, he writes an untitled poem “You lift your forehead and tear through the darkness...” and indicates the year of writing as 1904.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 297, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 356.

Dating: The record is placed after the diary entry of May 3, 1953.

1953

After May 3

In his notebook, he writes that there are more than 4,000 libraries throughout Georgia and suggests selecting 10 people who would be responsible for documenting the publications from each period of his works, ensuring a complete bibliography.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 297, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 357.

Dating: The record is placed after the diary entry of May 3, 1953.

1953

After May 3

In his notebook, he writes that he needs a partition to place between his writing desk and the bookshelves, a good radio, a bell replacement, and the installation of a cabinet, a staircase for the bookshelves, a vacuum cleaner, a box for keys, cupboards for food, supplies, and medications, as well as chairs. He also mentions the need to purchase a travel bag or box, electrical installation in the bedroom, and tabletop games (chess, backgammon, and cards).

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 297, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 358.

Dating: The record is placed after the diary entry of May 3, 1953.

1953

After May 3

In his notebook, he writes that the bas-relief created by Boris Shebuev for the Russian-language "Selected Works" can also be used for the children's literature publisher's book, and that several photos of this bas-relief, printed on high-quality paper, will be needed for the exhibition. He considers asking Kutateladze or another artist to create several versions of his portrait and states that if Sergi Tchilaia does not manage to write the foreword for his Russian-language "Selected Works", the Book should not be delayed because of this. Sergi Tchilaia, claiming that Galaktion was influenced by certain writers, justifies those who write under Galaktion's influence. He is curious about who asked Ananiashvili to write the foreword for Tchilaia and what agreement he and Tchilaia made in Moscow. He plans to leave large empty spaces between the poems and stanzas in the Book and is ready to fight for the best quality paper. He is also wondering why the typed text wasn't reviewed, how many typesetters are working on the text, and whether a bribe is needed to speed up the process.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 297, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 358-359.

Dating: The record is placed after the diary entry of May 3, 1953.

1953

After May 3

In his notebook, he writes that for the Tskneti estate, he needs to build a fence from the direction of the children's sanatorium, iron beds, summer blankets and quilts, renovation of the bathroom and electrical wiring, a stove, a sofa with two armchairs, curtains, a radio, a television, the relocation of a large wardrobe and kiosk, setting up tables in the forest, hammocks, tidying up the alley, and planting trees.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 297, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 359-360.

Dating: The record is placed after the diary entry of May 3, 1953.

1953

After May 11

He reads Dmitry Gulia's Russian collection of poems. At the end of the book, he writes: "Here is Dmitry Gulia, there is Giorgi Gulia, if the first one is Kulia".

Source: GTSM, 279. Димитрий Гулиа, Moscow, 1953.

Dating: The Book was signed for printing on May 11, 1953.

1953

After May 17

He reads Grigol Chikovani's article about Davit Gachechiladze's children's poems in the magazine Mnatobi, makes highlights, and writes that the criticized thoughtless actions, mischief, lies, and boastfulness in the didactic poems are characteristic of futurists.

Source: MGL, t-557, magazine Mnatobi, 1953, №5, p. 151.

1953

After May 17

On the back cover of the magazine Mnatobi, he counts the number of printed forms and lines in Alio Mirtskhulava's Book "Enguri".

Source: MGL, t-557, magazine Mnatobi, 1953, №5.

June

1953

June 21

He plans to transfer money for the construction of a house being built in Sokhumi.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 311, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 411.

1953

June 21

In his diary, he writes about the materials that will be included in the Georgian exhibition.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 311, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 411.

1953

June 21

He is interested in whether the National Library is working on his bibliographic biography.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 311, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 411.

1953

June 21

In his notebook, He writes a poem "Mozart is coming, Chopin is coming..."

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 311, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 411.

1953

June 27

He addresses the Literary Repository with a statement, writing that he needs a short-term loan of 10,000 roubles to complete the construction of his house in Tskneti.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-205; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 126.

1953

After June 28

He submits a statement to Andro Tevzadze, requesting that the Adjara State Publishing House include the publication of the second part of his Book "Gold in Adjara's Azure", originally published in 1944, in the following year's plan.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-488; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 322.

Note: This is referenced in Andro Tevzadze's letter dated June 28.

1953

June 28 or later

He receives a letter from Andro Tevzadze. The sender complains that he lost the statement Galaktion had given him in Tbilisi before arriving in Batumi. He asks him to rewrite it and officially resend it.

He also informs him that he has already spoken with his colleagues, and the Book will definitely be published. He will notify him later about when the submission of the material will be required.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-488; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 322.

July

1953

Until July

He sends a letter to the Rector of Tbilisi University, Niko Ketskhoveli, reminding him that his relative, Nazi Kvirikadze, was unable to enrol in the Faculty of Philology the previous year due to a delay. He writes that she is a talented and hardworking young woman and expresses hope that this time she will achieve her goal.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-85; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 86;

Dating: We date based on the upper limit of Niko Ketskhoveli's tenure as university rector.

1953

July 3

He addresses the Georgian State Communal Bank with a statement, writing that he needs a loan of 15,000 roubles to complete the construction of his house in Tskneti.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-208; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 126-127.

1953

July 3

He addresses the Adjara State Publishing House with a statement, requesting that the publication of the second part of his Book “Gold in Adjara’s Azure”, of the same volume as the first, published in 1944, be included in the following year’s plan.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-207; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 127.

1953

July 3

He addresses the State Publishing House with a statement, requesting that the publication of a Book containing Russian translations of his poems, with an approximate volume of 15,000 lines, be included in the following year’s plan.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-206; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 127.

1953

July 9

He addresses the Chairman of the Presidium of the Georgian Forestry Association, S. I. Jebashvili, with a statement, informing him that the construction of his house in Tskneti is nearly complete. The only remaining work is the balcony, for which he requires planks covering an area of 24 meters in length and 12 meters in width, as well as four six-meter-long posts. On the same day, the recipient issues a resolution and gives the corresponding order to the sawmill of the “Temp” artel.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-209; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 127-128.

1953

July 31

He addresses the Writers’ Union of Georgia with a statement, writing that he is beginning work on a piece in which he intends to depict the new way of life in Abkhazia. He requests a work-related trip to complete the project on-site.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-210; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 128

1953

End of July or later

He attends an event dedicated to the 15th anniversary of actor Valerian Gunia’s death and enjoys the performance of Taso Abashidze and Shalva Dadiani in the presented play.

Source: V. Kiknadze, Galaktion and Theatre, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 76.

Dating: Valerian Gunia passed away on July 31, 1938, so the 15th anniversary of his death would have been commemorated at the end of July or after, in 1953.

August

1953

After August 11

Shalva Radiani's Book "Literary Portraits" is published, in which one essay is dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze. The critic repeats the views he expressed in his earlier works on Galaktion's poetry.

Source: Sh. Radiani, Literary Portraits, 1953, p. 3-46.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on August 11, 1953.

1953

After August 17

In the magazine Mnatobi, in the section "Excerpts from the Circle - Poems of Childhood", signed by "Galaktion Tabidze, National Poet", and dated 1905-1907, nine untitled poems are published, numbered in Roman numerals: "An Hour Has Passed...", "On a Cloudy Day by the Gorge...", "The Wolf and the Lamb...", "The Lightning-Like Path...", "Do Not Take Offense...", "The Grandmother Complains About Her Eyes...", "The Grandmother Says...", and "The Grandmother Was Astonished..."

Source: G. Tabidze, "Devoted Millions", magazine Mnatobi, 1953, №7, p. 73.

Note: The magazine is signed for printing on August 17, 1953.

1953

August 21

In his notebook, he writes that of the books to be published in 1954, the Book from the State Publishing House has been submitted to the Central Committee for approval, a contract has been signed for his Book of poems and critical essays to be published in South Ossetia, and preparations are underway for a Book to be published in the federation "Soviet Writer". The plan for this Book has been approved by the Secretariat of the Writers' Union, but it has not been presented at the Presidium meeting. The plan has been sent to Moscow.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 299, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 365-367.

1953

August 21

In his notebook, he writes that the Academy of Sciences' library has good stands that will be useful for the exhibition, and that Londa Chudetskaya, the daughter of Theodor Chudetsky, works there.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 299, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 365-366.

Note: In the source, Londa Chudetskaya is mentioned only by the name Kukusa.

1953

August 21

In his notebook, he writes that a lady named Leila Kotetishvili works at the Library of the Institute of Mathematics of the Academy of Sciences, and it is possible to process Galaktion's poem "Integrals".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 299, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 365-366.

Note: In the source, only the last name of Leila Kotetishvili is mentioned.

1953

August 21

In his notebook, he writes that a good exhibition and meeting with readers can be arranged at the public library, as there are great opportunities for beautiful decoration: there is a large hall and stands; they have a binding workshop and bibliographical section, and probably also artists and photographers.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 299, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 366.

1953

August 21

In his notebook, he writes that Tamar Popkhadze, an employee of the Writers' Union library, treats every new development indifferently and dismisses everyone with a refusal. Galaktion likes the Writers' Union's hall and wants to arrange an evening there, but he has not yet decided whether it is worth talking to this lady about it.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 299, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 366.

1953

August 22

He plans to include the poems "The Return of Elguja", "The Return of Svan", "The Return of Rachvelian", and "The Return of Imeretian" in the poems in a timely manner.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 299, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 368.

1953

August 22

He goes to the Soviet Writers' Federation, where they have not yet started working on his book, and thinks that he must somehow speed up the process.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 299, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 368.

1953

August 22

He goes to the State Publishing House and announces that starting from January 1, he will begin working on the magazine Mnatobi. He knows that there are two “subversive” women there, but he believes that many are his supporters.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 299, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 368.

1953

August 22

He goes to the Opera Park and greatly enjoys the surroundings: Mitrophan Laghidze’s new café, the State Publishing House’s bookstore, the artists’ atelier, the conservatory, the Artists’ Union, the Ministry of Culture, and the Academy of Arts.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 299, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 368.

1953

August 22

He goes to the telephone network station to set up a telephone at his Tskneti villa, where the director greets him warmly and promises to fulfil the request.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 299, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 368.

1953

August 22

He goes to the stone quarry near the new bridge in Didube and inspects the stones for his sculptures. He plans to return a second time with the sculptor. The old surroundings remind him of many things, and he thinks that if he survives, it will still be for the sake of art.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 299, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 369.

1953

August 22

Eter Shushania tells him that Moscow is not approving her dissertation on Galaktion’s work because someone from Georgia sent an anonymous letter claiming that the paper was not written by her. Therefore, she plans to take the materials and go to Moscow no later than November.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 299, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 369.

1953

August 22

He learns from Eter Shushania, an employee of the Academy of Sciences, that the South Ossetian State Publishing House will publish her Book about Galaktion Tabidze’s work in Ossetian in January 1954.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 299, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 369.

1953

August 22

He learns that his collection of poems is ready at the Children's Literature Publishing House and will be handed over to the printing house for publication next week.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 299, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 370.

1953

August 23

Niko Ketskhoveli promises to organize an exhibition for the Russian-language Book "Lyrics".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 299, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 372.

1953

August 23

For the jubilee, he plans to enlarge the images for the presentation materials and creates a list of speakers.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 299, p. 6-7; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 372.

1953

August 24

He plans to visit the artist Ucha Japaridze's house at 7 o'clock and leave three of his photographs for the portrait to be painted.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 299, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 373.

1953

Summer

Galaktion, who is in Tskneti, is working in the yard. His sleeves and trousers are rolled up, and he is smoothing wet sand with a shovel. A small, neatly dressed seven-year-old girl, Mzia Khetaguri, comes to him, and when she learns that this man is the poet Galaktion Tabidze, she joyfully jumps in the sand. Then, she takes the ribbons from her hair and throws them into the sand in front of Galaktion. Galaktion says that what she just did is a poem.

Source: M. Khetaguri, King and Poet, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 425.

September

1953

September 4

In the Literaturuli Gazeti, Shalva Radiani's article "On the Question of Tradition and Innovation" is published, where the author attempts to discuss a theoretical issue based on Georgian literature — the relationship between literary tradition and the individual approach of the creator. Shalva Radiani points out that Soviet poets continue the best traditions of 19th-century Georgian literature, and one example of this is Galaktion Tabidze, whose poem "Near the Ruins of the Fortress" is, according to the critic, a response to Ilia Chavchavadze's "The Mountains of Kvareli". Moreover, the poet frequently draws from the tradition of folk poetry.

Source: Sh. Radiani, On the Question of Tradition and Innovation, Literaturuli Gazeti, 1953, № 30 (September 4), p. 2.

1953

Until September 5

In his diary, he writes that on September 5, at 8:30 PM, an evening and concert will be held at the Writers' Club to mark the 70th anniversary of Ivan Turgenev's birth and the 30th anniversary of his death.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 300, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 375.

1953

September 5

He attends the Leo Tolstoy Days held at Mushtaidi Garden, where Demna Shengelaia gives a lecture, but due to bad weather, the evening is not as appealing as expected.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 300, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 375.

1953

September 5 or later

He attends an evening at the House of Artists dedicated to the 15th anniversary of Valerian Gunia's death and enjoys Taso Abashidze's memories. He also liked Shalva Dadiani's publication.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 300, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 375.

Dating: The entry is placed after the diary entry of September 5.

1953

September 8

The Children's Literary Publishing House signs the permission to send Galaktion Tabidze's collection "Poems" for printing, after which the necessary printing work for the book's publication begins.

Source: G. Tabidze, poems, 1953, p. 154.

1953

After September 8

The children's literary publishing house Sablitgami publishes Galaktion Tabidze's collection "Poems". The Book includes 86 works, such as the following poems: "My Song", "To Youth", "My Native Land", "To the Homeland", "Lenin", "Let the Voice Roar...", "Homeland, Life", "Stalin", "The Foundation of New Tbilisi", "Today's Day...", "Our Luminary is of Fire's Colour", "Only This and the Fortress of Gori Have Left", "In the Name of All the Georgian People", "Hymn to Peace", "Be Glorious, Homeland", "Immortal", "Great Book", "All Atoms in the World", "Stream, Stream", "Book", "Eucalyptus Seedling", "The Happy Run of Children on the Sea", "Unsurmountable", "East", "An Era Was Born and Grew", "Let Every Red Army Man Stand Like a Lion", "Our Army Is Strong, but with Another Strength", "Why Do We Want to Be Alive", "Look", "The Sun Will Shine in Your Eyes and Add Light to Your Sight", "The Car and the Cart", "From Every Side", "Greetings to Youth", "Pioneer, Be Worthy", "Flags Quickly", "The Throne Has Fallen", "In Countless Flags", "We Poets of Georgia", "To the Memory of the Revolutionary", "We Went to the Gallows", "How Many Nights Ended", "There Was Fog", "The Ship Dalland", "Let His Toast Be", "First May", "Prologue to 100 Poems", "Before They Were Broken", "March 8", "My Song, Up, Higher, Higher!", "The Argonauts of the New Era", "Peaks of New Mountains", "Rage", "Homeland", "What Will You Find Here, Abroad?", "My Life", "Woman", "Reconciliation", "Flags High, Up, Higher!", "Joy Spreads", "Excitement in Hope and World Victory", "Rocking the Cradle of New Life", "Do Not Abandon a Poem Without a Home, Outside Time, Era, and Space", "The Traveler's Song", "Glory to the Present", "From Tskaltubo to Kutaisi...", "The Integrals of Poetry", "The Heart Has Been Renewed", "The Ninth Symphony", "How Wonderful You Are, How Magnificent", "Stanzas", "Work Closely Connected with Science", "Lute, So Much Good Time", "Mountains In the Evening, Sea-wind In the Day...", "Heading to Betania", "I Love the Storm Alone", "What Was Your Childhood?", "I and the Night", "You by the Seaside", "They Were Restless", "My Star", "I Still Deserve It", "Peach Blossoms", "Will You Remember...", "Sing Something for Me", "Stanzas" and "On a High Mountain, I Built a Palace, New and Fresh".

Source: G. Tabidze, poems, 1953.

Note: The editor of the Book is Amiran Gabeskiria. The collection is 154 pages long, and the print run is 7,000 copies. The Book was submitted for production on April 20, 1953, and signed for printing on September 8, 1953. The collection includes 86 works, of which two poems are published for the first time: "Praise, Homeland" and "Hymn to Peace".

1953

September 15

The board of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia requests the director of the State Opera and Ballet Theatre, Dimitri Mtchedlidze, to allocate the theatre on October 12 for a creative evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: MGL, WUF №44.

1953

September 23

Galaktion accidentally meets Ioseb Pantskhava near the Palace of Pioneers and expresses interest in the portrait of Galaktion painted by Theodor Chudetsky, which the artist gifted to Pantskhava.

They head towards Ioseb's apartment on Griboedov Street. On the way, Galaktion talks about Roman Pantskhava and mentions the great affection they shared. Upon arriving at the apartment, Ioseb reads from Roman's notes about Galaktion, and Galaktion is very pleased. When he sees Chudetsky's painting, he asks Ioseb to display it at the event celebrating his 45 years of literary work, which will be held on October 12 at the Zakaria Paliashvili Tbilisi Opera and Ballet Theatre. Galaktion learns that Ioseb has compiled the biographies of Akaki Tsereteli and Roman Pantskhava and suggests that he also create his biography. Ioseb replies that it is a difficult task, as gathering scattered materials might prove impossible.

Source: S. Pantskhava, Galaktion, newspaper Alaznis Gantiadi, December 7, 1982, №144, p. 4.

1953

After September 24

In Alio Mirtskhulava's collection of poems and epics, he underlines lines and rhymes, adding notes and comments. After reading the poem "The Main Theme of My Life", he remarks: "Well done, Alio! If you ask him, he'll say, 'I am what I am, me and Baratashvili.'" He also records a statement by his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, who claims that Alio did not work on the Book at all, that everything was stolen from Galaktion, and that she could not determine who the real author of the Book was. At the end of the collection, he poses a rhetorical question: "Can the author of this Book lead the magazine Mnatobi? Should he be elected to the Presidium of the Writers' Union? And do those who published such a poor Book have any sense of taste?"

Source: MGL, t-79, Alio Mirtskhulava-Mashashvili, Verses and Poems, Tbilisi, 1953, p. 11-50, 69-70, 154, 646.

1953

September 27

He receives a letter from Elene Bakradze. She writes that on October 12, the Institute of Georgian Literature will also be participating in the jubilee evening at the Opera Theater, celebrating his 45 years of literary work. However, she does not have tickets and asks if he could call and reserve at least two, if not three, tickets for her, as it would deeply sadden her to miss his anniversary. She also informs him that she has delivered his Book to Lado Gudiashvili, who is using it as inspiration to paint a certain episode.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-460-d; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 280.

1953

September 29

A student from the University's Journalism Faculty, Alexandre Shengelia, meets him in front of the university and dedicates an untitled two-stanza poem to him, "The Core of Georgian Poetry...".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 300, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 376-377.

1953

September 29

He is requested to attend the Presidium meeting at the Writers' Union at 2 o'clock.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 518.

1953

After September 29

Lado Gudiashvili visits him and requests an hour to an hour and a half for a painting session. He asks Galaktion to coordinate the timing by phone in advance.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 518.

1953

After September 29

Ioseb (Sosiko) Pantskhava visits him at home, leaves an address, and asks him to come by at 10 o'clock in the evening.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 518;

October

1953

Until October 1

He plans to organize 9 evenings, inviting 9 academicians, and writes a list of speakers and those who will give speeches.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 312, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 415-416.

1953

October 5

He receives a letter from Sosiko Pantskhava, who writes that he wants to offer him something beneficial. Therefore, he asks him to visit his home after 8 o'clock in the evening sometime during the current week or call him at his workplace any day after 3:30 PM.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-472; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 295.

Note: It is possible that he wanted to discuss naming the literary circle of the Financial-Credit Technical School after Galaktion Tabidze.

1953

October 6

Mariam Matchavariani calls the house and leaves a message with Nino Kvirikadze, stating that if Galaktion wishes for Batu Kraveishvili to perform his composed romances "Do You Remember", "Mary" and "Keepsake" at Galaktion's literary evening, they should get in touch.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 518.

Note: Matchavariani's name is not mentioned in the source.

1953

October 6

Nino Kvirikadze hands over Galaktion's text "Lullaby" to the composers.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 518.

1953

October 7

Visitors come to the house: musician Valerian Tsagareishvili, two unknown women, one unknown man, and an employee of the Industrial Institute, who brings the invitation card text for review and asks Nino Kvirikadze for a photograph of Galaktion.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 518.

1953

October 7

On October 12, he is called regarding tickets for Galaktion's jubilee evening at the Opera Theater. Among the callers are a female teacher from the Teachers' House, a male Georgian literature teacher from the Second Secondary School, Gogi Chikobava, Valiko Kashakashvili, and Elene Kipshidze. Additionally, composers call and request his presence at the Philharmonic.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 518.

1953

October 8

Gamkrelidze calls from the radio's literary department. A call also comes from the editorial office of the newspaper Komunisti, urgently requesting materials for the following day. Calls are received from Lenin District, where several schools wish to arrange a joint meeting with him. The Industrial Institute calls again, requesting a photograph.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 519.

1953

October 9

Visitors from the Industrial Institute come to collect the photograph. A call comes from the museum, informing him that they are expecting him. Jvarsheishvili calls from Mtskheta, and Meskhi calls from the newspaper Norchi Lenineli.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 519-520.

1953

October 9

In the Literaturuli Gazeti, Shalva Radiani's article "The Poet and the Revolution" is published. The critic presents a literary portrait of Galaktion and repeats the views he expressed in his earlier works about his poetry.

Source: Sh. Radiani, The Poet and Revolution, Literaturuli Gazeti, 1953, № 35 (October 9), p. 2.

1953

October 9

In the Literaturuli Gazeti, Khuta Berulava's letter "National Poet" is published, in which the author addresses an important issue — the problem of translating Galaktion's works. She expresses with regret that the issue of translating Galaktion Tabidze's works into Russian has still not been resolved, and often publishers release very weak translations that fail to even come close to the original. Khuta Berulava urges publishers to pay more attention to the translation of Galaktion's poetry.

Source: Kh. Berulava, National Poet, National Poet, Literaturuli Gazeti, 1953, № 35 (October 9), p. 4.

1953

October 9

In the Literaturuli Gazeti, Grigol Abashidze's brief anniversary address "A Master of Words" is published, in which Galaktion is acknowledged as one of the prominent poets of contemporary Soviet literature. The author of the congratulatory letter does not forget to mention that Galaktion Tabidze's work was not always ideologically progressive. His poetry was influenced by foreign decadent schools, but to the poet's credit, it must be noted that he did not remain trapped by these influences until the end.

Source: Gr. Abashidze, A Master of Words, Literaturuli Gazeti, 1953, № 35 (October 9), p. 4.

1953

October 10

Visitors from the Industrial Institute come to collect the photograph. A call comes from the museum, informing him that they are expecting him. Jvarsheishvili calls from Mtskheta, and Meskhi calls from the newspaper Norchi Lenineli.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-488-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 323.

1953

After October 10

In the magazine Mnatobi, Petre Bakhturidze's article "Galaktion Tabidze" is published, in which the author characterizes the poet's creative journey from early romanticism to socialist realism, based on the approaches established in Soviet criticism.

Source: P. Bakhturidze, Galaktion Tabidze, Magazine Mnatobi, 1953, №10, p. 162-175.

Dating: The magazine is signed for printing on October 10, 1953.

1953

After October 10

In the magazine Mnatobi, Petre Bakhturidze's article "Galaktion Tabidze" is published. The author reviews the poet's work, dividing it into the pre-revolutionary and post-revolutionary periods. He writes that Galaktion's creative path faced the danger of falling into a dead end and becoming detached from social realities, a challenge the poet successfully overcame. The critic notes that no matter what neutral theme Galaktion wrote about, he was always tense, like a bow, and his work emitted a torrent of emotions. The article addresses the poet's pre-war and post-war works, giving high praise to themes covered with patriotism and revolutionary humanism. The critic concludes by stating that Galaktion Tabidze, a true member of the Academy of Sciences of the Georgian SSR and National Poet, is in a period of creative growth and ascent, and his work will justify the honourable title of a soldier building communism.

Source: Petre Bakhturidze, On Galaktion Tabidze, magazine Mnatobi, 1953, №10, p. 162-175.

Note: The issue of the magazine is signed for printing on October 10, 1953.

1953

Until October 11

On October 11, at 8 PM, he is invited to the assembly hall of the Georgian Polytechnic Institute.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 300, p. 18; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 377.

1953

Until October 11

In his notebook, he writes a phrase by Vazha-Pshavela: "I began life in darkness / and it ends in darkness".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 303, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 393.

Dating: We date it according to the time of the next entry.

1953

Until October 11

In his notebook, he writes 6 lines from his untitled poem "Tbilisi Was That Woman...".

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 303, p. 21; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 394.

Dating: We date it according to the time of the next entry.

1953

Until October 11

He writes his untitled poem "The Moon Shines Bright... The Sky is Ornate..." from the 169th issue of the newspaper Amirani in 1908.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 303, p. 25; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 395.

Dating: We date it according to the time of the next entry.

1953

October 11

In the newspaper Komunisti, Giorgi Natroshvili's article "Galaktion Tabidze's Poetry" is published, in which the critic repeats the views he expressed in his earlier writings about Galaktion's work.

Source: G. Natroshvili, Galaktion Tabidze, newspaper Komunisti, 1953, №241, (October 11), p. 3.

1953

October 11

A notice is published in the newspaper Komunisti announcing that on October 12, an evening will be held at the Zakaria Paliashvili Tbilisi Opera and Ballet Theatre to celebrate the 45th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's literary work. The event will be opened with a speech by the chairman of the organizing committee, Sergi Tchilaia. A lecture on the poet's work will be given by Shalva Radiani. The evening will conclude with a concert.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's 45th Anniversary Literary Evening, Tabidze, newspaper Komunisti, 1953, №241, (October 11), p. 3.

1953

October 11

In the newspaper Komunisti, a photo of Galaktion Tabidze and the poem "Be Glorious, Homeland, Be Glorious!" ("Again and Again...?") are published.

Source: G. Tabidze, Remember. Remember!, Newspaper Komunisti, 1953, №241, p. 3.

1953

October 11

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, Beso Zhghenti's article "National Poet" is published, dedicated to the 45th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's creative work. The article states that Galaktion's work is a poetic encyclopaedia of Soviet Georgian life and that his poems have a strong emotional impact on readers. The article quotes stanzas from Galaktion's poems, such as "A Talk About Lyrics", "The Connection of Hearts", "May Day", "We, Poets of Georgia", and others. It is mentioned that Galaktion's creative success began in Kutaisi, with a poem "May Day" read at a gathering of revolutionarily-minded youth. According to the article, the pessimistic tones in the poems of his first Book were caused by the defeat of the 1905 revolution, while the poems in his second Book reflected a turn towards Western European symbolism and showed decadent influences. Despite this, the critic notes, Galaktion always maintained the strong realist and democratic tendencies of Georgian poetry, which came to dominate his work after the victory of the 1917 socialist revolution. Galaktion encountered the revolution in St. Petersburg and Moscow, and expressed his impressions in several poems. The article emphasizes that his works reveal his gratitude to the "elder brother", the Russian people. Beso Zhghenti writes that Galaktion became actively involved in public life, participated in the publication of journals and newspapers, and used his articles to call on the public to support the victorious proletariat. To better understand the changes happening in the country's development, the poet traveled through Georgia's regions, and later to the industrial cities of Soviet republics. Drawing from these impressions, he wrote poetic cycles and poems such as "Pacifism", "Epoch", and "World Orchestra".

Source: Бесо Жгенти, Народный поэт, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1953, №241, стр. 4.

1953

October 11

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, fragments from Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Conversation About Lyrics" are published, translated by Igor Postupalskiy; the poem "Our Day", translated by Elena Nikolaevskaia and Irina Snegova; the poem "Eucalyptus", translated by Vera Potapova; and the poem "I Love Only the Roar of the Storm...", translated by Nina Manukhina.

Source: Беседа о лирике, Открывок, Г. Табидзе, Пер. И. Поступальского, Наш день (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. Е. Николаевской, И. Снеговой, Эвкалипт (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. В. Потаповой, Я люблю лишь буйство бури (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. Н. Манухиной, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1953, 11 октябрь, №241.

1953

October 11

In the newspaper Mgznebare Kolkhideli, Pavel Natsvlshvili's article "A Prominent Soviet Poet (On the 45th Anniversary of His Creative Work)" is published, in which the main trends of Galaktion Tabidze's work are reviewed in general.

Source: P. Natsvlshvili, "The Eminent Soviet Poet (On the 45th Anniversary of His Creative Work)", newspaper Mgznebare Kolkhideli, 1953, №121 (October 11), p. 3.

1953

October 11

In the newspaper Komunisti, the poem "Be Glorious, Homeland!" is published.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1953, №241, p. 3.

1953

October 11

In the newspaper Komunisti, an informative article titled "The 45th Anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's Work" is published, which states that on October 12, a large-scale event dedicated to Galaktion will be held at the Opera Theater. The event will be opened with an introductory speech by the secretary of the Writers' Union, Sergi Tchilaia, and a lecture titled "The Work of Galaktion Tabidze" will be delivered by Shalva Radiani. Additionally, writers and scholars will deliver welcoming speeches. The event will conclude with a concert. The event will start at 8 o'clock.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1953, №241, p. 3.

1953

October 11

In the newspaper Komunisti, an article by Giorgi Natroshvili titled "The Poetry of Galaktion Tabidze" is published, in which it is stated that Galaktion belongs to the ranks of those first-rate masters of words who pave new paths in poetry. The critic reviews the poet's early works and notes that from the very beginning of his creative journey, Galaktion Tabidze was imbued with liberating ideas. He was the first to welcome the October Revolution with the poem "Flags Quickly", and with the poem "The Sorrow of the People Was Passing Away", he passed a harsh judgment on the old world. The critic points out that after February 1921, with the establishment of Soviet power, Galaktion dedicated many beautiful poems to the reconstruction of the country, the party's theme, and the courageous struggle of the people. According to Giorgi Natroshvili, Galaktion's masterpieces strengthened people's unwavering belief in victory in the Great Patriotic War. The critic considers the poet's great achievement to be his ability to capture the spiritual qualities of the forward-moving human being, shaped by struggle and labour. In his opinion, this is exactly why Galaktion's work deserves high recognition from the Soviet reader.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1953, №241, p. 3.

Note: The article contains a factual inaccuracy: "Flags Quickly" is not dedicated to the October Revolution. The poem was published several months before the mentioned revolution, on March 23, 1917, in the newspaper Sotsial-Demokrati.

1953

Until October 12

He receives a letter from Jose, a close family acquaintance, from Moscow, who met him at the Moscow State Publishing House. He also receives a short note from Ossetian poet and translator Iliia Kavkazagi. Kavkazagi writes that he is sending him a poem dedicated to him, "To the Great Poet", and asks him to have it translated and published. He also requests to be informed about the date of his jubilee, to have his name included in the program, and expresses his intention to read both Galaktion's poems and the poem dedicated to him at the event. Additionally, he informs him that two of his poems have been published in the magazine Piliogi and that he is continuing to translate more.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-470; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 332;

1953

October 12

Akaki Shanidze presents him with his Book "Fundamentals of Georgian Grammar", with the inscription: "To the renowned poet, Galaktion, on the 45th anniversary of his poetic career".

Source: MGL, t-206, Akaki Shanidze, "Fundamentals of Georgian Grammar", I, Morphology, Tbilisi, 1953.

1953

October 12

The newspaper Sakhalkho Ganatleba requests four photographs. Sculptor Silovan Kakabadze calls to inform him that everything is ready and asks who will come to collect it.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 520.

1953

October 12

A ceremony dedicated to the 45th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's literary work is held at the Opera Theater, opened by the secretary of the Writers' Union of Georgia, Sergi Tchilaia. A detailed report on Galaktion's work is presented by Shalva Radiani. The poet is greeted with speeches from: Grigol Abashidze on behalf of the Writers' Union, Alexandre Baramidze on behalf of the Academy of Sciences, Akaki Shanidze on behalf of the University, and poet Ilia Kavkazagi on behalf of the Writers' Union of South Ossetia. Poems dedicated to the jubilarian are read by: Alexandre Abasheli, Makvala Mrevlishvili, Khuta Berulava, Andro Tevzadze, Archil Sulakauri, Emelian Kurdiani, and Ioseb Noneshvili. Galaktion is also greeted by pioneers who present him with a woven fork.

Source: Magazine Drosha, 1953, №11, p. 13.

Dating: According to the informative article “The 45th Anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s Work” published in the newspaper Komunisti (1953, №241, p. 3), this event was supposed to take place on October 12, 1953.

1953

October 12

On the occasion of his 45th anniversary in literary work, he receives a congratulatory letter and a gift from his childhood friend, Genadi Mikhelidze. The gift is a photocopy of entries made on September 28 in the “Tovarishch” notebook by students of the Tbilisi Theological Seminary during the 1908–1909 academic year. He recalls that Sunday in 1908, in the courtyard of the Tbilisi Seminary, when his fellow students blessed his path as a poet. He also remembers how the sender himself wished for the foundation laid by the poet to be crowned with a “wreath of victory”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-497; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 323.

1953

After October 12

He wants to find the latest issue of the magazine Drosha, which discusses his anniversary, and is wondering if the editor of this magazine, Vladimir Matchavariani, might have it.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 303, p. 28; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 396.

Dating: We date the event of Galaktion’s evening according to the time it was held, as mentioned in this publication.

1953

After October 12

He sends a letter to Sergi Tchilaia, the chairman of the organizing committee for the evening marking his 45th anniversary in literary work. He reminds him that various literary materials had been submitted to him as the organizer and asks whether a list of those materials had been compiled and where those documents are currently located. He also expresses interest in viewing the late Konstantine Kapaneli’s monograph about Galaktion, which had also been entrusted to Sergi Tchilaia.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-81; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 77-78.

Dating: The letter must have been sent after the evening took place.

1953

October 13

An article by D. Tcheishvili titled “The Great Singer of Our Epoch (On the 45th Anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s Creative Work)” is published in the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, in which the main trends of the poet’s work are reviewed in general.

Source: D. Tcheishvili, “The Great Singer of Our Epoch (On the 45th Anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s Creative Work)”, newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, 1953, №126 (October 13), p. 2.

1953

October 13

The newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti publishes a facsimile of Galaktion’s poem “Youth”. The poem is accompanied by an editorial note stating that it was written on January 23, 1948, when the poet was visiting the students of the Sokhumi Pedagogical Institute, and it is being published for the first time.

Source: newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, 1953, №126 (October 13), p. 2.

1953

October 13

In the newspaper Sabtchota Oseti, a poem titled “The Singer of Happiness” by the Ossetian writer Ilya Kachmazov, written under the pseudonym “Kavkazagi”, is published in honour of Galaktion.

Source: Newspaper Sabtchota Oseti, 1953, №202 (October 13), p. 3.

1953

October 13

In the newspaper Sabtchota Oseti, an article titled “The Great Soviet Poet” by Alexandre Ghlonti is published, dedicated to the 45th anniversary of Galaktion’s creative work. The author of the publication discusses topics such as Galaktion’s early poetry, the poet’s attitude towards symbolism, Galaktion and literary tradition, and Galaktion’s poetic language. Alexandre Ghlonti notes that Galaktion astonishingly expanded the boundaries of linguistic creativity, and his intonation and rhythm reach the peak of poetic expression.

Source: Newspaper Sabtchota Oseti, 1953, №202 (October 13), p. 3-4.

1953

October 14

In the newspaper Sakhalkho Ganatleba, an article titled “The 45th Anniversary of G. Tabidze’s Creative Work” is published, which states that on October 12, the 45th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze’s creative work was celebrated at the Zakaria Paliashvili Opera and Ballet Theater. The event was opened by the secretary of the Writers’ Union, Sergi Tchilaia. The main speaker was Shalva Radiani. Galaktion was greeted with speeches by Alexandre Baramidze, Grigol Abashidze, and Akaki Shanidze. Poems dedicated to Galaktion were read by young poets. Pioneers presented the jubilarian with a garland of flowers shaped like a harp.

Source: The Evening Marking the 45th Anniversary of G. Tabidze's Creative Work, newspaper Sakhalkho Ganatleba, 1953, №42 (October 14), p. 1.

1953

October 14

In the newspaper Sakhalkho Ganatleba, an article by Sergi Tchilaia titled "Galaktion Tabidze (On the 45th Anniversary of His Creative Work)" is published. The author provides the readers with the poet's key biographical details. Sergi Tchilaia discusses Galaktion's creative journey, pointing out that from the early stages, the poet never detached himself from the roots of national literature. After the establishment of Soviet power, he clearly distanced himself from the anti-revolutionary literary front. Through his poems "John Reed", "Epoch", and "Revolutionary Georgia", Galaktion vividly reflected the new socialist reality.

Source: D. Tcheishvili, "The Great Singer of Our Epoch (On the 45th Anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's Creative Work)", newspaper Sakhalkho Ganatleba, 1953, №42 (October 14), p. 3.

1953

Until October 15

The artist Vava Gabunia calls and invites him to his place for the next day.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 300, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 377.

Dating: The record is placed before the entry from October 15.

1953

Until October 15

He meets the artist Apolon Kutateladze, who tells him that he and his son Gurami will participate in the exhibition.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 300, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 377.

Dating: The record is placed before the entry from October 15.

1953

Until October 15

The sculptor Boris Shebuev leaves a letter and invites him to his place.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 300, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 377.

Dating: The record is placed before the entry from October 15.

1953

Until October 15

He is visited by the artist Mikhail Vadbolski, who promises to write an article about Galaktion.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 300, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 377.

Dating: The record is placed before the entry from October 15.

1953

Until October 15

He visits the actor Akaki Vasadze.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 300, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 377.

Dating: The record is placed before the entry from October 15.

1953

Until October 15

He attends Pyotr Tchaikovsky's opera "The Queen of Spades" at the Opera Theater. He likes the set design, lighting, and the interior of the hall in the second act.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 300, p. 22; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 378.

Dating: The record is placed before the entry from October 15.

1953

Until October 15

The visitor from Stalingrad, Yuri Okunov, offers to make copies of the poems.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 300, p. 25; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 378.

Dating: The record is placed before the entry from October 15.

1953

October 15 or earlier

The magazine Drosha sends a message requesting new photographs of him at his writing desk. Additionally, Book covers will be printed on a full page of the magazine. They ask him to call the editorial office and speak with Vakhtang Tchelidze.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 521.

1953

October 15

The collector intends to cut off the electricity, but as a special favour, he is given one extra day to make the payment.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 521.

1953

October 15

He sends a telegram to Elizbar Ananiashvili, the editor of his Russian-language book, in Moscow, expressing his astonishment at his neglect. He writes that the Book will not be printed until his return, and if the delay continues, it will be removed from the publishing process, which he will never forgive.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 300, p. 34; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 379-380.

Note: Elizbar Ananiashvili traveled to Moscow to have Galaktion's poems translated into Russian by Russian poets.

1953

October 15

An article by Bezhan Bardavelidze, titled "The Singer of the Revolution", is published in the newspaper Akhalgazrda Stalineli, in which Galaktion's poetic evolution is briefly described.

Source: B. Bardavelidze, "The Singer of the Revolution", Newspaper Akhalgazrda Stalineli, 1953, №31 (October 15), p. 2.

1953

October 15

In the newspaper Akhalgazrda Stalineli, Galaktion's poem "My Song" is published.

Source: Newspaper Akhalgazrda Stalineli, 1953, №31 (October 15), p. 2.

1953

October 15

In the newspaper Akhalgazrda Stalineli, Tamaz Tchiladze's poem "It Will Thunder Many More Times" dedicated to Galaktion is published.

Source: Newspaper Akhalgazrda Stalineli, 1953, №31 (October 15), p. 2.

1953

October 15

In the newspaper Akhalgazrda Stalineli, Archil Sulakauri's poem "To Galaktion Tabidze" is published.

Source: Newspaper Akhalgazrda Stalineli, 1953, №31 (October 15), p. 2.

1953

October 16

In the newspaper Komunari, an article by D. Cheishvili titled "The Great Singer of Our Epoch (On the 45th Anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's Creative Work)" is published, in which Galaktion's creative journey is reviewed.

Source: The Great Singer of Our Epoch (On the 45th Anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's Creative Work), newspaper Komunari, 1956, №124 (October 16), p. 2; 1953

October 16

In the newspaper Norch'i Lenineli, an article by L. Tchitchinadze titled "The National Poet" is published, dedicated to the 45th anniversary of Galaktion's literary work.

Source: Newspaper Norch'i Lenineli, 1953, № 42 (October 16), p. 2.

1953

October 16

In the Literaturuli Gazeti, an article titled "The 45th Anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's Creative Work" is published, which briefly describes the held anniversary event.

Source: Literaturuli Gazeti, 1953, № 36 (October 16), p. 3.

1953

October 17

Regarding the landscaping of the garden at the dacha in Tskneti, he goes to the Horticulture Department and agrees with Abel Japaridze to prepare the soil by Monday, October 19. After the leaves fall from the trees, they will begin planting on November 15.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 301, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 382.

1953

October 18

In the newspaper Sabtchota Sopeli, an editorial article titled "Galaktion Tabidze (The 45th Anniversary of His Creative Work)" is published, which briefly characterizes Galaktion's creative journey.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze (45th Anniversary of Creative Work), newspaper Sabtchota Sopeli (Abasha), 1953, №284 (October 18), p. 2.

1953

October 18

In the newspaper Sabtchota Sopeli, Nodar Narsia's poem "Galaktion's Lines" is published.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze (45th Anniversary of Creative Work), newspaper Sabtchota Sopeli (Abasha), 1953, №284 (October 18), p. 2.

1953

October 18 or later

He familiarizes himself with the article "Creative Community" by Elizbar Ubilava, published in the newspaper Komunisti, and adds a note in the same newspaper. He points out that this article is a premeditated act of sabotage. He mentions that it does not mention at all that in the issue of the Armenian magazine, which contains translations of almost all Georgian poets' works, the name of Galaktion Tabidze is missing.

Source: MGL, d-637, 21; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 460.

Dating: The note was made in the October 18, 1953, issue of the newspaper Komunisti.

1953

October 20

Ruben Zubiashvili comes to visit and informs that one ton of barbed wire needed for the fence at the Tskneti dacha will cost 3500 roubles.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 301, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 382.

1953

After October 20

He is preparing material for the newspaper Komunisti. He needs to prepare content for five columns, a total of 725 lines, but he has only completed 241 lines so far.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 301, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 383.

Dating: The record is placed after the entry from October 20.

1953

October 22

He has a successful and interesting day, as he had productive meetings at the State Publishing House, the Printing Trust, the Book Chamber, the Industrial Institute, the Writers' Union, the Theatre Society, the University, the Pedagogical Institutes, and the Agricultural Institute.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 302, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 390-391.

1953

October 22

The Bureau of the Vani District Committee of the Georgian Communist Youth Union requests him and the Writers' Union to fulfil the district youth's wish to hold a jubilee evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze in Vani. At the meeting, a six-member organizing committee is presented to arrange the event.

Source: MGL, WUF №42.

1953

October 25

He accidentally meets Shalva Kashmadze and Kolau Nadiradze and thinks that for some reason, they are in bad mood.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 302, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 389.

1953

October 27

The Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia receives an excerpt from the minutes of the Vani Komsomol District Committee Bureau meeting regarding the invitation of Galaktion Tabidze and the establishment of an organizing committee for the event.

Source: MGL, WUF №53.

1953

Until October 29

On October 29, he is invited to the teacher's house.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 300, p. 18; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 377.

1953

October 29

At 8 o'clock in the evening, a lecture by Pati Nishnianidze on the 55th anniversary of Galaktion's creative work is held at the Teachers' House in Tbilisi. Due to the warm reception from the audience, the poet becomes cheerful and, after stepping onto the stage, delivers a thank-you speech. When asked to read a few poems, he apologizes, saying he doesn't remember them by heart, and recalls excerpts from the poems "Ilia sings – Oh my, or what does it really mean, I wonder..." and "You walk, and your suffering goes with you". He is so pleased with the lecture that he later asks Pati to read it at other gatherings as well.

Source: P. Nishnianidze, From Galaktion's Life, Tbilisi, 1964, p. 136 -138.

November

1953

Until November 6

The editorial team of Literaturuli Gazeti asks for a poem to be submitted in honour of the anniversary of the October Socialist Revolution. Galaktion sends a poem dedicated to this event, titled "Forever Passionate".

Source: T. Jangulashvili, "Leap toward the Sky", magazine Tsiskari, 1992, №8, p. 105.

Note: The source does not specify the event it relates to, nor the title of the poem. However, on November 6, 1953, a poem titled "Forever Passionate" was published in this newspaper.

1953

Until November 6

He writes a poem "Forever Passionate" ("Thus it rushes and races with such glory...").

Source: Autograph, MGL, №3868; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 213.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "With Such Glory" and untitled "Thus it rushes and races with such glory...".

Dating: It is dated according to the date of its first publication.

1953

6 November

In the Literaturuli Gazeti, the poem “Forever Passionate” is published, but two lines in it have been altered by the editorial staff without agreement from the author.

Source: G. Tabidze, Forever Passionate, Literaturuli Gazeti, 1953, №39, November 6, p. 2.

1953

After November 6

In the magazine Drosha, under the rubric “45 Years of Creative Work”, an informative article titled “Galaktion Tabidze” is published. It begins with a brief overview of the significance of the poet’s Soviet-themed poems, followed by a statement that Galaktion’s works dedicated to the new epoch are distinguished by passionate content and high artistic quality, which in turn explains the working people’s affection for the author. The article also includes photos of Galaktion Tabidze, his collected works, and individual editions. Additionally, the key aspects of the event held on October 12 at the Opera Theater, dedicated to the 45th anniversary of the poet’s creative career, are reviewed.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze, magazine Drosha, 1953, №11, p. 13.

Dating: The magazine Drosha is signed for printing on November 6, 1953.

1953

After November 6

The poem “Be Glorious, Homeland!” is published in the magazine Drosha.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze, magazine Drosha, 1953, №11, p. 13.

Dating: The magazine Drosha is signed for printing on November 6, 1953.

1953

After November 6

After reading the altered version of his poem “Forever Passionate” in the Literaturuli Gazeti, Galaktion meets with the newspaper’s staff member, Teimuraz Jangulashvili, and, laughing, thanks him for printing the poem “so well”.

Source: T. Jangulashvili, “Leap toward the Sky”, magazine Tsiskari, 1992, №8, p. 105.

Note: The source does not specify the event it relates to, nor the title of the poem. However, on November 6, 1953, the poem “Forever Passionate” was published in this newspaper.

1953

November 6-7

For two consecutive days, Galaktion’s poems “With the October Flag”, “Forever Passionate”, and “Flags Quickly” are broadcast in both Georgian and Russian on Georgian Radio.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 301, p. 12; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 385.

1953

November 8

He goes to Tbilisi Radio to collect his honorarium. He is received very well, but the payment is delayed.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 301, p. 12; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 385.

1953

November 12-14

He is in Sokhumi and buys shingles for the roof of his house.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 301, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 384.

1953

Until November 15

In Tskneti, he plans to build a 40 square meter garage and a 15 square meter basement, and writes about it in his diary.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-500, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 14;

1953

November 16

From the Sokhumi hotel Abkhazia, he sends a telegram to the director of the Children's Literary Publishing House, asking urgently whether the honorarium for his book, which is in production at their publishing house, has been credited, and if so, how much.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 302, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 397.

1953

November 16

From the Sokhumi hotel Abkhazia, he sends a telegram to the accounting department of the Georgian Dzerzhinsky Academy of Sciences, requesting the urgent transfer of his salary.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 302, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 397.

1953

November 16

From Sokhumi, he sends a telegram to his step-daughter, Nunu Ebanoidze, informing her that he is sending 200 roubles.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 302, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 397.

1953

November 16

From Sokhumi, he sends a document to the Literary Repository and requests confirmation of its receipt via telegram.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 302, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 397.

1953

November 16

He attends a performance at the Sokhumi Theater.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 302, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 397.

Note: He has recorded 12 roubles for the theater in the expenses of that day.

1953

November 16

In Sokhumi, for the construction of his house, he pays 862 roubles for 250 shingles in the market alley.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 308, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 405.

1953

November 17

In Sokhumi, for the construction of his house, 4,000 bricks and a large quantity of building sand are taken to the builders so that they can begin the construction of the second floor at an accelerated pace.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 308, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 405.

1953

November 17

While in Sokhumi, the Presidium of the Writers' Union urgently calls him to a meeting in Tbilisi. This situation makes Galaktion think, as he has never been invited to such meetings before. He suspects that there might be some scheme behind it.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 308, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 405.

1953

After November 19

He familiarizes himself with the selected collection of his poems translated into Russian, makes notes in the table of contents, and writes that the Book includes 171 poems.

Source: GTSM, 1639, Г. Табидзе, Избранное, Tbilisi, 1953;

1953

Until November 21

In Sokhumi, He writes a poem “The Palm Twig”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 305, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 398-399.

Note: The initial titles were “Palm Branch” and “Palm Twig”.

Dating: The finalized version of the poem is dated November 21, 1953.

1953

November 21

He is in Sokhumi and writes an untitled poem “O branch of the palm, branch of peace...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5176; №7273; №497-d, p. 1; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 213.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles “Palm Branches”, “Two Poems”, “The Palm Branch”, and untitled “O branch of the palm...”.

1953

Until November 23

In his notebook, he writes the text for the evening’s poster to be held on November 23 at the Sokhumi State Theater.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 301, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 386.

1953

November 24

He is pleased with the enthusiasm of the builders at his house in Sokhumi and is reassured that the construction materials have already been delivered to the site. The neighbour took down the fence that was put up around his house, and now the yard looks even more spacious.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 308, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 405-406.

1953

November 26

The bank director gives him 15 percent of the money and promises the rest once it is determined how much of the house’s construction has been completed.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 301, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 385.

1953

November

He writes a list of 89 poems, with the first one being “Who Does Not Recognize the Ship?”

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 305, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 398-399.

1953

November

At 3 a.m. in the Sokhumi hotel, he writes in a twelve-page notebook containing rhymes. On the cover, he writes: "№1 Rhymes Notebook / Sometimes Sand, Sometimes Gold", and then fills out the standard fields, indicating which school he is a student of ("Romantics"), which grade ("I"), and his name and surname ("Galaktion Tabidze").

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 307, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 402.

Dating: "1953 Sokhumi" is written, and the month is determined based on his stay in Sokhumi.

1953

November

The poem "To Youth" is published in the magazine Pioneri.

Source: Magazine Pioneri, 1953, №11, p. 9.

1953

November

The Literary Circle of the Tbilisi Financial and Credit Technical School, initiated by Ioseb Pantskhava, is named after Galaktion Tabidze. The members of the circle will develop a program focused on studying the poet's work.

Source: S. Pantskhava, Galaktion, newspaper Alaznis Gantiadi, December 7, 1982, №144, p. 4.

1953

November or later

He writes an untitled poem "Oh, song!..".

Source: MGL, a-1722, AE in 25 books, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 322;

December

1953

December 1

He addresses Valerian Khatiashvili, the director of the Simon Janashia State Museum of Georgia, with a statement requesting permission to have the first issue of the 1909 magazine "First Wave", preserved in their library, retyped by a machinist.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-211; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 128.

1953

After December 3

In the magazine Mnatobi, under the signature "Galaktion Tabidze, National Poet", the poem "With the October Flag" ("...and proud of that title...") is published.

Source: G. Tabidze, “With the October Flag”, magazine Mnatobi, 1953, №11, p. 17.

Note: The magazine is signed for printing on December 3, 1953.

1953

After December 3

In the magazine Mnatobi, an article by Giorgi Merkviladze titled “Notes on 1930s Georgian Soviet Literature” is published, which reviews the main trends of Georgian literature in the 1930s. The author primarily focuses on Galaktion’s work, noting that in the 1930s, there was an increasing presence of realistic motifs in Galaktion’s lyrics. Giorgi Merkviladze argues against critics who had claimed that in Galaktion’s early poetry, symbolist-decadent motifs held a dominant role. According to the critic, while there are indeed melancholic moods in the poet’s early lyrics, the dominant theme in his work from the beginning was a revolutionary spirit, which the poet expressed in certain poems. In the 1930s, Galaktion further developed the traditions of socialist realism.

Source: G. Merkviladze, “Notes on 1930s Georgian Soviet Literature”, magazine Mnatobi, 1953, №11, p. 113-137.

Note: The magazine is signed for printing on December 3, 1953.

1953

December 7

He attends the anniversary celebration dedicated to Mariam Garikuli, marking the 70th anniversary of her birth and the 35th anniversary of her literary work.

Source: A. Ratiani, Recollections about Galaktion, Magazine Mnatobi, 1996, № 9-10, p. 134.

1953

Until December 12

In his notebook, he writes that on December 12, in the evening from 7 to 8 o’clock, the Pedagogical Institute of Foreign Languages will host his evening event.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 301, p. 30; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 388.

1953

Until December 15

He prepares a guest list and a list of participants from the musical department for the evening to be held at the Mtskheta Club on December 15.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 301, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 386.

1953

December 15

In his notebook, he lists the issues to be resolved, which include: Book publication, preparation of a portrait, poster, and small pictures, the improvement of houses in Tskhneti and Sokhumi, organizing manuscripts and books, organizing evenings in Kutaisi, Sokhumi, and Batumi, preparing the academic publication, and others.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-485, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 392-393.

1953

December 15

He makes a note titled "1915-16: Balmont in Kutaisi", in which he outlines a plan for writing a memoir about Balmont's visit to Georgia.

Source: MGL, d-544, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 216.

1953

December 15 -21

He plans to have Ucha Japaridze create a portrait for the book, make vignettes with Georgian-style ornaments, and design the initial letter of each poem, as was done in Akaki Tsereteli's publication. He hopes that if possible, the Book will also include photographs of himself from different periods and portraits painted by artists. He thinks that if these are placed on separate pages, they will not interfere with the editorial work of the book.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 301, p. 22-23; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 387.

Note: A vignette is an ornament or illustration placed at the beginning or end of a Book or a part of it.

1953

December 21

He is worried about the house under construction in Sokhumi, fearing that the building materials might scatter or get ruined due to bad weather.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 301, p. 24; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 388.

1953

December 21

For literary activities, he is granted a business trip certificate for 15 days, starting from December 22, to Batumi and Sokhumi.

Source: MGL, WUF №45.

1953

December 22

Together with Bondo Keshelava and Andro Tevzadze, Galaktion arrives in Batumi by train, where an evening dedicated to his poetry is held at the Batumi State Theatre. At the railway station, admirers of his poetry gather from every corner of Adjara. Galaktion is deeply moved by the warm welcome. During the evening, writer Ilia Rurua reads a lecture on Galaktion's life and work.

Giorgi Salukvadze presents a lecture titled “The Sea in Galaktion’s Work”. Poems dedicated to Galaktion are read by poets Nana Gvarishvili, Pridon Khalvashi, Shota Rokva, Bondo Keshelava, and Andro Tevzadze. Later, actors from the Batumi State Theatre read Galaktion’s own poems. At the end of the evening, Galaktion thanks the audience and promises that he will never forget this evening.

Source: G. Salukvadze, Unforgettable Evenings, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 265-266.

1953

December 22 or later

At the literary evening organized in Batumi, young poets present a cigarette case, a pen, and a notebook with the inscription “From the young fellow poets of Batumi”.

Source: L. Kheladze, Everyone has something as a keepsake, newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1983, 10 August, N 33, p. 3.

Dating: We date it according to the time of his arrival in Batumi in 1953.

1953

December 22 or later

Together with the writers from Batumi, he tours the sights of Adjara and they take photographs.

Source: P. Loria, Recollections about Galaktion, newspaper Sabtchota Adjara, October 12, 1973, N 199, p. 4.

1953

23

December A poetry evening dedicated to Galaktion’s work is held at the Teachers’ House in Batumi. The poet reads the poem “I and the Night”, which is recorded on tape by the staff of the Adjara radio station.

Source: G. Salukvadze, Unforgettable Evenings, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 267.

1953

December 24

A meeting with Galaktion Tabidze is held at the Shota Rustaveli Pedagogical Institute in Batumi.

Source: G. Salukvadze, Unforgettable Evenings, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 267.

1953

December 25 or later

He writes the lyrics of the folk song “Alilo” on a copy of the newspaper Komunisti.

Source: MGL, d-637, 22; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 460.

Dating: The inscription was made in the December 25, 1953, issue of the newspaper Komunisti.

1953

After December 25

In the magazine Mnatobi, an article by Vasil Baiadze titled “With All My Heart” is published, in which he discusses how the theme of Gori is reflected in Georgian Soviet poetry. The critic talks about Galaktion’s poem “Gori”. According to him, the poem portrays the revolutionary upheaval against a historical backdrop, succinctly conveying several moments of Stalin’s activities. The poem is crowned with an image of the happy life of Soviet citizens.

Source: V. Baiadze, With All My Heart, magazine Mnatobi, 1953, №12, p. 123-124.

Dating: The magazine was signed for printing on December 25, 1953.

1953

December 30

He revises his poem “Then Glory to the Sun” and sends a new version of the text, titled “Many New Years”, to Baghdati for publication in the local newspaper.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №238; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 193.

1953

After December 30

On the back endpaper of Tedo Razikashvili’s collection of recorded folk poems, he writes a note stating that the Book must be sent to Tariel Iashvili at the Theatrical Institute in the evening.

Source: MGL, t-231, Folk Oral Literature, III: Folk Poems Recorded by Tedo Razikashvili, Tbilisi, 1953.

1952-1953

He frequently visits Shalva Radiani in Tskneti, and since his summer house is located near a pioneer camp, he often talks to the children there.

Source: M. Gomarteli-Radiani, Brief Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 282.

1952-1953

Annoyed that recently more attention has been given to translating Russian literature rather than supporting national writers, Galaktion complains to Karlo Kaladze, saying, “What good will just Pushkin-Mushkin and Gogol-Mogol do for us?” He has great respect for these Russian writers and has no intention of disrespecting them, but he is frustrated by the neglect of national literature. Karlo Kaladze relays the poet’s words to Akaki Mgeladze, the First Secretary of the Central Committee of the Party, who then summons Galaktion. When the poet sees Karlo Kaladze in the Central Committee Secretary’s office, he immediately realizes what the matter is about and resorts to a familiar tactic - he energetically begins talking about the new volume he has prepared and asks Mgeladze for help in getting the Book published. He speaks so energetically that the Central Committee Secretary cannot steer the conversation to another topic, and the matter ends there.

Source: Nodar Tabidze’s record, GTDA, №1436, p. 2-3.

Dating: The record suggests that this must have happened not long before Akaki Mgeladze was removed from his position.

1953

In Tbilisi, under the editorial work of Elizbar Ananiashvili and with a foreword by Sergi Tchilaia, Galaktion Tabidze's Selected Poems is published in Russian. The collection includes the following cycles: "Flags Quickly", "Homeland, Life", "May and Peace", "Paths and Years", "Under the Native Sky", as well as the poems "The New Shore" and "A Conversation About Lyricism".

Source: Табидзе Г.В. Избранное, Стихи, Пер. с груз, Под ред. Э.Г. Ананиашвили, Шумите, знамена!; Жизнь моя, Отчизна!; Май и мир; Тропы и годы; Под родным небом; Поэмы: Новая набережная; Беседа о лирике, Вступ. статья С. Чилая, Тбилиси, Заря Востока, 1953.

1953

He writes an impromptu to Simon Kakhiani, the accountant of the Writers' Union: "Under your kind hand, Mr. Simon, / The moon's strings should also play".

Source: T. Jangulashvili, "A Leap Toward the Sky", magazine Tsiskari, 1992, №8, p. 105;

1953

He withdraws 275 roubles from the savings account and leaves a small amount in the account.

Source: Excerpt from G. Tabidze's storage ledger notebook, 300, p. 38; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 380.

1953 or later

He makes a note on the telegram form stating that in order to activate literary processes, it is essential to ensure the material interest of the writers. This is an issue that needs to be addressed promptly.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-468, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 248;

After 1953

He recalls that the seriously ill Daria Akhvlediani wrote a memoir in which she mentioned that Akaki Tsereteli considered Galaktion Tabidze the best of the young poets. He also recalls someone saying that Giorgi Leonidze, who was then leading the Literary Museum, had visited the sick Daria and offered to buy the memoir, if she removed the passage where Akaki's praise of Galaktion was mentioned. According to the account, Daria Akhvlediani, allegedly following the advice of her relatives, accepted Leonidze's offer, had the memoir rewritten without the episode about Galaktion, and sold it to the museum. However, she sent the full version of the memoir, including the Galaktion episode, to Galaktion himself, ensuring that he kept the authentic and complete version. Along with this story, Galaktion writes in his notebook that Giorgi Leonidze had supposedly purchased reactions about Galaktion from some writers – Davit Kldiashvili, Vasil Barnovi, Domenica Eristavi, Ia Ekaladze, Zakaria Chichinadze, and Shio Mghvimeli – for the museum, but instead of preserving them, he had them removed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-625, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 187-189;

1954
January

1954

Until January 3

He writes a poem titled “Many New Years!” (“Dear friends!..”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №189; №3875; №4045; №7293; №7774; №8349; №15; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 211.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles “Oh, Hatred to the Unspeakable”, “What is Conscience?”, “Dear Friends!”, and untitled “Dear friends!..”, “Oh, dear guests...”, “Let us first mention the homeland...”, “Let us mention the brotherhood of nations...”, and “Dear friends...”.

Dating: It is dated according to the date of its first publication.

1954

January 3

In the newspaper Komunisti, under the signature “Galaktion Tabidze, National Poet”, the poem “Many Happy New Years” (“Dear friends!..”) is published.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1954, №2, p. 3.

1954

January 6

In the newspaper Metalurgiisatvis, the poem “Many Happy New Years” is published.

Source: Newspaper Metalurgiisatvis, 1954, №2, p. 1.

1954

January 7

He drafts a plan on how to revise the poem “The Flower of Light”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-607, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 47.

1954

January 9

He writes an untitled poem “A pure conscience, purity, and clarity...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №430-433; №499; №2853-2854; №3427; №8132; №8350-8351; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 216.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles “On Literary Conscience”, “Editors Whom I Have Met”, “Brothers, Writers!”, and untitled, beginning with “To Moscow and Kyiv, oh, thousands of kilometres away...”, “Oh, friends! Over many thousands of kilometres...”, and “With this greatest example...”.

1954

January 12

He meets with Rezo Orjonikidze, the editor of the State Publishing House, and Giorgi Merkviladze, the director. He is coordinating the details with them regarding the publication matters of “Selected Works”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-574, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 384.

1954

January 19

For submission for the Stalin Prize, the Writers’ Union compiles Galaktion Tabidze’s documents in Russian and attaches a list that includes: a photograph, the personal card of a Writers’ Union member, an autobiography, and a questionnaire. The nomination document, prepared in Russian, states that the basis for his nomination for the prize was the publication of his poems in Russian in 1953.

Source: MGL, WUF №57, №64.

1954

January

At the editorial office of the magazine Mnatobi, he meets Nika Agiashvili, and when he learns that Agiashvili is from Dikhashkho, he recalls his time in Dikhashkho in 1908. When mentioning his aunt’s husband, Thaddeus Namicheishvili, he remembers that it was Namicheishvili who chose the name “Galaktion” for both him and his son. He explains that the name comes from the Greek word “galaktos”, which means “milky”. He adds that milk puts him in a bad mood and he generally doesn’t like it, but he really likes his name.

Source: N. Agiashvili, Quietly, Past, Quietly, newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1981, 16 January, N 3, p. 12-13.

February

1954

Until February 15

He drafts a dedication text to be written in a Book intended for the writer Lado Tatishvili.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-560, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 327.

1954

Until February 19

He sustains a hand injury and is hospitalized. His treatment is overseen by surgeon Andria Ghvamichava.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 423.

Dating: Based on Eter Kvirikadze’s letter dated February 21, this must have occurred a few days earlier.

1954

February 19

He writes a poem “To Javakhishvili” (“Let the land rejoice in the sun of nations’ brotherhood!..”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №6383; №6384; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 216.

1954

February 27

While in the hospital, he is visited by his wife Nino Kvirikadze and his step-daughter Nunu Ebanoidze. They tell him about the list of writers nominated for Stalin’s Prize by Moscow Radio, which includes Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 313, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 419.

1954

After February 27

He writes about events related to his work over the past months: His 45th anniversary in literary work was celebrated at the Opera Theater. In connection with this occasion, 30 events were held with his participation, and 300 events took place in his absence. Zarya Vostoka published his “Selected Works” in Russian, which was submitted for the Stalin Prize. He handed over 25 printed sheets, approximately 20,000 lines of material, to the State Publishing House. In Moscow, the State Literary Publishing House began translating the books he had submitted. He continues working on the ninth and tenth volumes of his collected works. His poems are being published in the newspapers Komunisti and Literaturuli Sakartvelo and in the magazine Mnatobi. The Shota Rustaveli Institute of Georgian Literature, in accordance with a resolution of the Central Executive Committee, has begun preparing an academic edition of his works.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-214; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 129.

Dating: We date based on the submission for the Stalin Prize, which he learned about on February 27.

Note: His 45th literary anniversary was celebrated in 1953, and Zarya Vostoka also published “Selected Works” that year. However, the entry mistakenly lists 1954.

1954

February 28

In the hospital, he is visited by Apolon Makharadze, who shows him the issue of Moscow’s Literaturnaya Gazeta, which contains the list of 26 writers, including Galaktion Tabidze, nominated for the Stalin Prize.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 313, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 419.

1954

February

In the magazine Komunisturi Aghzrdisatvis, an article by G. Iaseshvili, the head of the academic department at Tbilisi's 7th Boys' School, titled "Teaching G. Tabidze's Work in the 11th Grade", is published. Taking into account the approaches established in Soviet criticism, the article provides methodological guidelines for teachers on how to teach Galaktion's biography and work to students, considering the historical and social context.

Source: G. Iaseshvili, Teaching G. Tabidze's Work in the 11th Grade, magazine Komunisturi Aghzrdisatvis, 1954, №2, p. 46-52.

March

1954

March 1

Surgeon Andria Ghvamichava informs him that he can now be discharged from the hospital.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 423.

1954

March 2

In his notebook, he makes a note that his doctor, Arkadi Gotsiridze, has passed away.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 423.

1954

March 13

He sends a telegram to Alexandra Ryabinina, the chief editor of the State Literary Publishing House in Moscow, requesting an update on the status of his book's publication.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-169; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 78.

1954

March 13

He sends a telegram to Leonid Gvatua, the head of Sokhummsheni in Sokhumi, requesting an update on the progress of his house construction.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-165; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 78.

1954

March 13

He sends a telegram to engineer Shura Tabidze in Sokhumi, requesting an update on the progress of the house construction.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-165; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 78.

1954

March 27

At 7 o'clock, a meeting with the poet Galaktion Tabidze is held at the Literary Circle club of the Tbilisi Financial and Credit Technical School. The event program includes a lecture, welcoming speeches, readings of Galaktion's poems and poems dedicated to him, and a literary section.

Source: S. Pantskhava, Galaktion, newspaper Alaznis Gantiadi, December 7, 1982, №144, p. 4.

1954

March 29

On a pencil-drawn self-portrait by Mamia Malazonia, he writes: "A picture, my dear Mamia, is truly an immortal thing".

Source: M. Malazonia's private collection.

1954

March

He writes a poem "May You Soon Reach Your Goal" ("You lift your brow and break through the darkness...").

Source: Autographs: MGL, №815; №1121; №67-a, p. 1643; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. I, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 56.

Note: The poem is also found untitled "You lift your brow and break through the darkness...".

April

1954

April 14

In Sokhumi, he writes a poem titled "The Problem of the Sokhumi House" about the delayed construction of his house.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 313, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 420.

1954

April 14

He finds out that the builders of his house in Sokhumi have received the money he sent, but the roofing is not yet finished, and neither the ceiling nor the floor have been completed.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 313, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 421.

1954

April 15

He speaks by phone from Tbilisi to A. Zhvania, the acting chairman of the Sokhumi City Council Executive Committee, and to the accountant. Despite the fact that the full amount has already been paid, the accountant still demands a transfer of 10,000 roubles and tells him that it is necessary for him to come to Sokhumi.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 313, G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 421.

1954

April 17

He meets with the Minister of Construction, Giorgi Jabua, who promises to issue an order for the immediate continuation of the house's construction.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 313, G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 421.

Note: The source does not mention Jabua's name.

May

1954

May 1

In the Russian newspaper Molodoy Stalinetz, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "May Day" by Boris Serebryakov is published.

Source: Первое Мая (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Молодой сталинец, Тбилиси, 1954, 1 мая, №53.

1954

After May 7

He reads Sergi Danelia's Russian-language Book "On the Worldwide Significance of Russian Literature", making highlights and notes. Next to the publishing records, he writes that he is interested in the book's release date, given that it was submitted for production on April 7 and signed for printing on May 7.

Source: GTSM, 297, С. Данелия, "О мировом значении русской литературы", Tbilisi, 1954.

Dating: The Book was signed for printing on May 7, 1954.

1954

May 9

He prepares a plan for the work to be carried out at the summer house in Tskhneti.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 313, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 419-420.

1954

After May 14

He is in Sokhumi, reading Shalva Inal-ipa's Book "Essays on the History of Abkhaz Marriage and Family", making underlining and writing rhymes.

Source: MGL, t-320, III. Инал-Ипа, "Очерки по истории брака и семьи у Абхазов", Sokhumi, 1954.

1954

After May 14

On the endpaper of Shalva Inal-ipa's Book "Essays on the History of Abkhaz Marriage and Family", he writes: "Galaktionology, Foundations of Galaktionology, Galaktionologists".

Source: MGL, t-320, III. Инал-Ипа, "Очерки по истории брака и семьи у Абхазов", Sokhumi, 1954.

1954

After May 14

He writes a poem "Dawned" ("One gaze comes into the world...").

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, t-320, III. Инал-Ипа, "Очерки по истории брака и семьи у Абхазов", Sokhumi, 1954.

1954

After May 14

He writes three versions of the untitled poem "Mountain and Valley...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, t-320, III. Инал-Ипа, "Очерки по истории брака и семьи у Абхазов", Sokhumi, 1954.

1954

After May 31

He reads Dimitri Arakishvili's Book "The Modal Structure of Folk Songs of Western Georgia", making highlights. At the end of the book, he writes down the 1945 threat made by British Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery, stating that the use of atomic and hydrogen weapons against peace-loving peoples, the Soviet Union, and the countries of people's democracy is necessary and inevitable, and that a new war would be a true celebration because many people would perish. He concludes that atomic weapons are a destructive force and will bring terrible consequences.

Source: GTSM, 233, D. Arakishvili, "The Modal Structure of Folk Songs of Western Georgia", Tbilisi, 1954.

June

1954

June 18

He addresses G. Kavkasidze, the administrative manager of the Georgian Academy of Sciences, with a statement, requesting his salary for the second half of June due to illness and severe financial difficulties.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-212; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 129.

1954

June 20

He makes a note titled "Ashtree Garden", in which he lists the tasks required for the landscaping of the yard at the Tskhneti summer house.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-634, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

1954

June 22

He is anxious because his “Selected Poems” have not yet been edited and submitted for printing at the State Publishing House. He has little hope that the Book will be published in the coming months.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-574, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 384. G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 313, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 422.

1954

June 22

He speaks with the Minister of Construction, Giorgi Jabuashvili, who promises that the roof of his house in Sokhumi will be completed soon.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 313, G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 421.

July

1954

Until July 1

He notes that Sergi Tchilaia, the secretary of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia, in one of his feuilletons, reviews the works of 122 Georgian writers and primarily attacks him. Galaktion believes that Tchilaia’s article should be considered a sort of report from the Presidium of the Writers’ Union - if such a text, filled with polemical pathos, incorrect conclusions, and self-promotion, can even be called a report.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-580, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 418-419;

1954

Until July 1

He makes a note about the upcoming congress at the Writers’ Union, which is intended to summarize the path travelled by Georgian Soviet literature since the third congress held in 1946. According to the note, the objectives of the congress were to assess the effectiveness of the governing bodies of the Writers’ Union, evaluate how Georgian literature fulfilled its patriotic duty to the people and the homeland, and examine how it contributed to instilling a new socialist consciousness in society.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-580, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 419;

1954

July 1

At the Fourth Congress of Writers of Georgia, Carlo Kaladze delivers a report on Georgian poetry, in which, among other authors, he also discusses the work of Galaktion Tabidze. Kaladze points out that Galaktion's collected works have been poorly compiled and that some of his poems are printed twice. He also notes that some of the published poems do not match Galaktion's style. According to Kaladze, the editors were too hesitant to refuse to publish some of the poet's weaker poems. In his opinion, "It is time to protect Galaktion Tabidze's work with true heartfelt love, even from Galaktion Tabidze himself". After Kaladze's speech, Archil Sulakauri defends Galaktion, stating that Galaktion Tabidze should not be protected from Galaktion Tabidze, but rather from the critics.

Source: V. Javakhadze, On Literary Conscience, Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1998, №51, December 25, p. 14.

1954

July 3

He speaks at the Fourth Congress of Writers of Georgia. He is introduced without any formal titles, with the words: "The floor is given to poet Galaktion Tabidze". In his speech, he talks about literary conscience. He mentions that for nearly half a century, he has written not one hundred, two hundred, or a thousand, but seven thousand poems, and the path he chose from childhood was supported by Ilya Chavchavadze and Akaki Tsereteli. He states that he was granted the title of National Poet of Georgia, which he views as a clear expression of literary conscience. At the end of his speech, he reads the poem "A Pure Conscience is Purity and Sharpness...".

Source: V. Javakhadze, On Literary Conscience, Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1998, №51, December 25, p. 14; G. Tabidze's speech, MGL, d-661, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 569-570.

1954

July 11

In the newspaper Kutaiskaia Pravda, an article by Raphiel Shamelashvili titled "An Outstanding Master of Georgian Poetry" is published in Russian, which discusses the "Selected Poems" of Galaktion Tabidze, published by Zarya Vostoka in 1953.

Source: P. Шамелашвили, Выдающийся мастер грузинской поэзии, Кутаисская правда, 1954, №83, 11 Июля.

1954

July 13

Aristo Tchumbadze reads a story at the Writers' House in which "svintria" is mentioned, and he explains several times that svintria is a type of grass in Imereti. Motivated by this, Galaktion spontaneously writes the poem "Svintri" ("Neither in Kizikhi, nor in Dvaleti...").

Source: A. Khintibidze, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 307.

Dating: The poem is dated according to the time it was written.

1954

After July 17

He reads Shalva Inalipa's Russian-language Book "Essays on the History of Abkhaz Marriage and Family", making underlines and brief notes.

Source: MGL, t-320, III. Инал-Ипа, Очерки по истории брака и семьи у абхазов, Sokhumi, 1954.

1954

July 21

He writes a statement addressed to the Director of the State Publishing House, Giorgi Merkviladze, requesting that the eighth and ninth volumes of his works be included in the next year's publishing plan, which would involve printing material of approximately seven thousand lines.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 77; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 193.

1954

July 22

He goes to the State Publishing House and submits the statement he wrote the previous day, requesting that the eighth and ninth volumes of his works be included in the next year's publishing plan. The statement is read by the Director of the Publishing House, Giorgi Merkviladze, who makes a note on the text, stating that the publishing plan for the books to be issued should be presented during the discussion of the statement.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 78; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 193.

1954

July 22

He speaks by phone with the Deputy Director of the State Publishing House, David Dumbadze. He promises the poet that the eighth volume of Galaktion's eight-volume collection will definitely be included in the publishing plan.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 78; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 193.

1954

July

He writes an untitled poem "On Contemporary Georgian Prose".

Source: MGL, d-625, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 191.

August

1954

After August 12

On the title page of the magazine Mnatobi, he writes that Mnatobi throws a stone up, exposes its head, and lets the stone strike it on the head.

Source: MGL, t-650, magazine Mnatobi, 1954, July, №7.

1954

After August 12

He reads the magazine Mnatobi, makes underlining, and draws a pipe on the portrait of Stalin placed at the beginning.

Source: MGL, t-649, magazine Mnatobi, 1954, December, №12.

September

1954

After September 24

Sergi Tchilaia's Book "The Path of Development of Georgian Soviet Literature" is published, in which the critic expands on the views he expressed in his earlier works regarding Galaktion's poetry.

Source: S. Tchilaia, The Path of Development of Georgian Soviet Literature, 1954, p. 34-37, 77-83, 180.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on September 24, 1954.

1954

After September 24

He reads the third volume of Akaki Tsereteli's works. He writes under the stanza of the poem "Bodva" - "I prepare honey for the living, / a holy candle for the dead, / and I connect the sweetness and light / of the two worlds"- that Shota Nishnianidze took it. In the table of contents, next to the poems from 1908, he notes that 50 years since his literary debut will be completed in 1958.

Source: GTSM, 1634, complete works in fifteen volumes, vol. III, poems, Tbilisi, 1954, p. 43, 582.

October

1954

October 1

He writes an untitled poem "And I remember nineteen seventeen...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4211; №2847; №162-a, №4281; №4934; №4935; №5904; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 218.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles "Heavy Downpour"; "Cloud", "New Year", and untitled "I remember the sky of nine hundred and five...".

1954

October 6

He attends a performance at the Sokhumi Drama Theater. He notices that in the nearly empty hall, the majority of the audience consists of Russian spectators who are using headphones. He is satisfied with the service staff, except for the cashier woman, whom he does not like. He notes the names of the actors whom he believes could be involved in literary evenings.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-590, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 488.

1954

October 8

He writes a list of tasks to be completed on paper, which includes settling the debt for timber, finding frames for pictures, resolving the issue of Book publishing, visiting the Zarya Vostoka publishing house, and others.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-469, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 262.

1954

October

In the magazine Mnatobi, an article by Carlo Kaladze titled "Issues of Georgian Soviet Poetry" is published. The author notes that over the years, the cult of personality was established not only in political life but also in literature, which greatly hindered the development of Soviet literature. Dominant poets were met with submissive and intimidated criticism, which no longer dared to speak out. Kaladze specifically highlights two poets whom, in his opinion, Soviet criticism showed excessive tolerance toward. One of them is Ioseb Grishashvili, who, according to Kaladze, no longer approached his poetic output with the necessary responsibility due to excessive praise. The second poet he mentions is Galaktion. Kaladze sharply criticizes Giorgi Merkviladze, who, in his view, "artificially exaggerates Galaktion Tabidze's pre-revolutionary revolutionary stance" and attempts to separate Galaktion from the label of decadent. The author not only mentions Galaktion's previous "sins", but also points out that his poems are still not entirely free from decadent recidivism. According to Kaladze, Galaktion failed to completely free himself from the influence of symbolism after the revolution, and he did not become a typical representative of socialist reality.

Source: K. Kaladze, "Issues of Georgian Soviet Poetry", magazine Mnatobi, 1954, №10, p. 118-133.

November

1954

November 1

He writes an untitled poem "Hurrah to the native, the indestructible...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1117; №6814-6815; №7633; №7841-7842; №6356-6358; Na-35, p. 64; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 219.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles "The Battle Path of 37 Years", "The Battle Path", "To the Great October", and untitled, beginning with "Let the flags not be touched..." and "On every October day...".

1954

November 6

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "On the Path of Victories" by Aureli Levit is published.

Source: По дороге побед (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. А. Левита, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1954, 6 Ноябрь, №4.

1954

November 6

Ioseb Megrelidze gifts his Book "Legends About Rustaveli" with the inscription: "To my dearest poet".

Source: GTSM, 254, I. Megrelidze, "Legends About Rustaveli", Staliniri, 1954.

1954

November 9

He writes a poem "Ash Tree Garden" ("Since this alley was formed...").

Source: Autographs: MGL, №8181; №8202; works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 252.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "Just About a Hundred Years" and untitled ("Since this alley was formed...").

1954

November 9

At the end of the reference Book of the Georgian Academy of Sciences, he writes that the salary received from the academy since 1944 amounts to 395,000 roubles.

Source: GTSM, 364, Georgian SSR Academy of Sciences – 1954, Tbilisi, 1954.

1954

November 12

He reads Literaturuli Gazeti, making highlights. He notes that Shota Nishnianidze's poem "Autumn" contains a sentence with 43 words, while Givi Dzneladze's poem "Khevistskali" has a sentence with 62 words.

Source: MGL, t-674. newspaper Literaturuli Gazeti, November 12, 1954, №46, p. 3.

1954

November 13 or later

He refers to an article by Simon Kintsurashvili, published in the newspaper Komunisti, titled "The Magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba", and writes the author's opinion that it is inappropriate to place completely different images next to each other on the pages of the magazine. As an example of such a case, Kintsurashvili's article mentions the printing of Korneli Sanadze's artwork "Galaktion Tabidze" and Kahi Khutsishvili's still life on the same page of the magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-544, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 212; S. Kintsurashvili, magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba, Newspaper Komunisti, 1954, № 268 (November 12), p. 3.

1954

November 13 or later

He learns from an announcement in the newspaper Komunisti that a new season is opening at the Zakaria Paliashvili Tbilisi Opera and Ballet Theatre.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-544, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 212; Newspaper Komunisti, 1954, № 269 (November 13), p. 4.

1954

November 21

He writes a list of 33 Georgian writers and notes that 20 of them are no longer alive.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-595, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 515.

1954

After November 24

He is in Tbilisi and receives a letter sent by Lavrenti Dzidziguri from Tskaltubo. The letter mentions that the weather there is good, and they are expecting his arrival.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-227; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 272.

1954

November 25

He writes an untitled poem "Swift as a Thought, the Wind Howls Outside...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, Nt-478; №160-a, p. 4275; №6671; №6706; №7269; №7295; №7318; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 250; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 678.

Note: The poem is also found under the title: "O, Nana, Nana, Nana, Nana"; "Nana, Nana..." and untitled, with a different beginning ("Swift in thought, outside the wind howls...").

December

1954

First half of December

In Moscow, among the list of individuals selected to participate in the Second Union Congress of Writers, Galaktion's name is absent. The chosen delegates meet with the First Secretary of the Central Committee, Vasil Mzhavanadze, at the Government Palace. When he reviews the list, he is surprised and asks Irakli Abashidze and Sergi Tchilaia why Galaktion's name is not included. Aleko Shengelaia responds that they simply didn't have time for Galaktion and forgot. A murmur is heard in the hall, followed by restrained laughter. Mzhavanadze personally adds Galaktion's name to the list of delegates.

Source: M. Kvlividze, Galaktion is in Moscow (about the Writers' Congress and the Decade), Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 274.

Dating: The Decade opened on December 15, though it should have taken place earlier.

1954

Until December 15

He meets the composer Kote Potskhverashvili, who laments that he has grown old and lost his strength. In response to the composer's question about the state of poetry, Galaktion replies that preparations are underway for the Second All-Union Congress of Writers. Kote Potskhverashvili tells the poet that he has composed a Hymn to Poetry, which he wrote based on Galaktion's text. Galaktion is delighted, thinking that another wonderful song has been created, which could be used at creative evenings and literary events.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-554, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 288;

1954

Until December 15

He meets Mark Zlatkin, the head of the publishing house "Zarya Vostoka". They exchange general greetings and inquire about each other's well-being. He feels that Zlatkin is in the camp of his opponents.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-554, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 288;

Note: In the note, Mark Zlatkin is mentioned only by his surname, Zlatkin.

1954

Until December 15

In Moscow, Galaktion Tabidze does not travel with the Georgian delegation to the Second Union Congress of Writers. Instead, he arrives the following day by an international carriage. At Kursk Station, as the train empties of passengers, he remains in his compartment, smoking a cigarette. When Mikheil Kvlividze – specially sent to greet him and serving as a consultant on Georgian literature in Moscow – arrives, Galaktion greets him with mockery before recognizing him. He responds in Russian to questions posed in Georgian and instructs him to remove his luggage from the compartment. However, Galaktion's initial negative attitude soon dissipates, and he speaks warmly. Kvlividze escorts the poet to the "Moscow" hotel and settles him in a private room.

Source: M. Kvlividze, Galaktion is in Moscow (about the Writers' Congress and the Decade), Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 274-75.

Dating: The Decade opened on December 15, and he could have arrived the day before as well.

1954

December 15

He is unable to attend the publication of the 3000th issue of the newspaper Stalineli because he is in Moscow at the Congress of Soviet Writers. Instead, he sends a telegram to the editorial office from Moscow, congratulating them on the release of the jubilee issue and wishing them success. The telegram is read aloud at the evening event and is met with ovations.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-213; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 78-79; Sh. Nutsubidze, Gori hosted Galaktion, newspaper Gamarjveba, November 1, 1973, №131, p. 3.

1954

December 15 or later

In his notebook, at the end of an old entry describing how Aleksei Surkov arrived tipsy at the Georgian Writers' Union on May 22, 1952, and how Galaktion did not applaud him, he adds a note after December 1954. This new addition mentions that Surkov, who in 1954 served as the chairman of the Writers' Union during Georgia's Decade in Moscow, took his revenge on Galaktion.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 312; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 284.

1954

December 15 or later

While participating in the Second Union Congress of Writers in Moscow, Galaktion glances over the Georgian delegation's poets of noble lineage and remarks, "There are plenty of Dadianis, Abashidzes, Lortkipanidzes, and Chikovanis, but where are the people?"

Source: A. Ratiani, Recollections about Galaktion, Magazine Mnatobi, 1996, № 9-10, p. 135.

Dating: This is dated according to the first day of the Congress.

1954

December 15 or later

During his time in Moscow for the Second Union Congress of Soviet Writers, Galaktion has to travel by car with other Georgian writers. Annoyed by their apparent desire to sideline him, he asks the driver if he writes poetry. When the driver responds negatively, Galaktion, feigning surprise, gestures toward the writers seated in the back and says, "Why, man, all of these people write poetry – what, did God forsake you?"

Source: L. Nutsubidze, Seen and Heard, magazine Gantiadi, 1993, № 3-4, p. 115.

1954

Until December 15

On the eve of the Second Union Congress of Writers in Moscow, Konstantin Voronkov, the secretary of the Union's executive committee, asks the literary consultants of the republics to name the "patriarch" writers in each genre, so these distinguished figures could be seated on the presidium. For Georgian literature, Kvlibidze nominates Galaktion for poetry, Leo Kiacheli for prose, and Shalva Dadiani for drama. However, he fails to account for the fact that one Georgian poet, Irakli Abashidze, was already slated to be seated on the presidium as the chairman of the Georgian Writers' Union.

Source: M. Kvlevidze, Galaktion in Moscow (at the Writers' Congress and the Decade), Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 275.

Note: The name of Voronkov is not mentioned in the memoir, but historical documents reveal that the person in question is likely Konstantin Vasilyevich Voronkov.

Dating: According to the memoir, this took place before the congress, which officially opened on December 15.

1954

December 15

The writers' congress opens in a columned hall. Mikhail Kvlibidze is astonished when he cannot spot Galaktion on the presidium. He scans the parterre, but Galaktion is not there either. Then, in the tiers, the vestibule, and finally on the dark and deserted pedestal, he finds him in the last row, his hat tilted over his head. Kvlibidze asks why he is not on the presidium. Galaktion believes they are asking him to leave the hall and, irritated, responds in Russian, saying they have no right to ask him to leave, showing his invitation as proof. Kvlibidze tells him that he is there to assist him and repeats his last name. Galaktion replies that he knows who he is and also knows that he is an artist. Overjoyed, Kvlibidze rushes to Konstantin Voronkov and asks why Galaktion is not sitting on the presidium. The response he receives is, "Irakli Abashidze told me that Galaktion would be drunk and should not be allowed on the presidium".

Source: M. Kvlevidze, Galaktion in Moscow (at the Writers' Congress and the Decade), Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 275-276.

1954

After December 15

From Moscow, he sends a telegram to the editorial office of the Stalineli newspaper in Gori, congratulating them on the publication of the three-thousandth issue.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 78, 79.

1954

Until December 20

He is in Moscow and writes a miniature titled "Somewhere, above the tenth floor...". A starving student needs to sell his jacket to buy food, but he shows the holes in his pockets and on the sleeve. This peddler reminds Galaktion of the compilers of his books. They often rummage through his poems and include those in his collections, the publication of which he does not particularly enjoy.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 470.

Dating: We date the next entry according to the date of the following record.

1954

Until December 26

While in Moscow to participate in the Second Congress of Writers, Galaktion, accompanied by his nephew, Nodari Tabidze, enters a restaurant in the evening. There, they coincidentally meet the National Poet of Belarus, Yakub Kolas, and greet each other warmly.

Source: N. Tabidze, Where the True Galaktion Began, newspaper Tbilisi, December 3, 1982, N 277, p. 3.

1954

December 29

He travels from Moscow to Tbilisi by train. He is in an international carriage and writes several versions of the poem “Nine Volumes” (“I erected my nine volumes as a monument...”).

Source: G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book VII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 277.

1954

December 28-31

He travels from Moscow to Tbilisi. During the journey, he writes an untitled poem “In the Field Stands a Single Sheaf...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №292-d, p. 21; №292-d, p. 15; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 249.

Note: The poem is also found untitled with a different beginning (“In the Field Stood...”).

1954 or earlier

Stalin’s death gives hope that the country may free itself from the totalitarian swamp and he writes a poem titled “I Wish You Reach Your Goal Soon...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №a-1218; G. Tabidze, “Selected Works”, Tbilisi, 1954, p. 66; AE, Book I, p. 390; For clarification of information: V. Javakhadze, “Again Galaktion”, 2008, “Galaktionology”, №4, p. 10.

Dating: We date according to the first publication.

1954 or earlier

He sends a dispatch to Revaz Asaev, reminding him that Galaktion’s poems were published in his magazine in December and requesting the payment of the honorarium. He also inquires about the progress of the translation of his poems for the Ossetian book.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-277; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 89;

Note: Presumably, this refers to the magazine «Фидиуæг».

1954

He teaches the alphabet to his four-year-old granddaughter, Marine. He enjoys spending time with the child and is eager to fulfil all her wishes.

Source: E. Mamukelashvili, New Pages from Galaktion’s Life, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 418.

1954

He visits the Academy of Sciences and converses with the Academy's president, Niko Muskhelishvili. After leaving his office, he approaches a young scientist standing nearby and asks several questions: where he is from, whether he holds a scientific degree, whether he loves poetry, and more. After hearing the answers, he tells him that a time has come when everyone aspires to science, and the government is ready to support everyone, both the talented and the untalented. However, he warns that this approach will not work because the untalented will overwhelm the country, and such populism in science is harmful. He states that our science has been thoroughly polluted. After this, he bids farewell to his interlocutor and leaves the building of the Academy of Sciences.

Source: B. Kevanishvili, Two meetings with Galaktion, magazine Gantiadi, 1994, №3-4, p. 162.

1954

Sergi Tchilaia's Book "The Path of Development of Georgian Soviet Literature" is published, and a small section of it is dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze. The work states that since 1922, Galaktion has firmly stood among the fighters for Soviet literature, serving the new ideas as a master of the artistic word. The Book mentions "some mistakes" associated with the symbolist period of the poet's work, which, according to the critic, Galaktion quickly corrected. Galaktion becomes acquainted with the Book and is dissatisfied with its content, particularly with the fact that Sergi Tchilaia does not present him as the founder of Georgian Soviet poetry.

Source: S. Tchilaia, "The Path of Development of Georgian Soviet Literature", Tbilisi, 1954. G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 32; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 150.

1954

Giorgi Merkviladze's Book "On Socialist Realism" is published, in which the theoretical problems of socialist realism and the trends in the development of Soviet poetry are discussed. Among other topics, the author aims to highlight "some characteristic moments in the growth and establishment of realist motifs in Galaktion's work". Like other Soviet critics, Merkviladze attempts to see a revolutionary spirit in Galaktion's early lyric poetry. He examines Galaktion's poetry from the 1930s and 1940s as a notable example of the achievements of Georgian socialist realism. He speaks about the heroism of labour, the image of the new man, and the reflection of the capitalist world's ugliness in Galaktion's work.

Source: G. Merkviladze, "On Socialist Realism", 1954, p. 141-174.

1954 or later

He reads the Book "From the History of Cultural Relations Between Georgia and Ukraine" by Alexandre Baramidze, Levan Asatiani, and Besarion Zhghenti, making highlights. In the concluding section of the publication, regarding the translation of Ukrainian poetry by prominent Georgian writers, he writes that this is "the looting" of Simon Chikovani, Giorgi Leonidze, and Irakli Abashidze.

Source: GTSM, 663, A. Baramidze, L. Asatiani, B. Zhghenti, From the History of Cultural Relations Between Georgia and Ukraine, Tbilisi, 1954.

1954 or later

He reads the Russian Book “Documents on the History of Georgia”, edited by Shalva Chkhetia, making highlights and comments regarding Chkvishi and Satchilao.

Source: GTSM, 135, “Документы по истории Грузии” (1962-1917), vol. 1, Part. 1, Tbilisi, 1954.

1954 or later

He reads Maria Ovsyannikova’s Russian Book “Women in the Fight for People’s Happiness” and makes highlights.

Source: GTSM, 260, М. Овсянникова, “Женщины в борьбе за народное счастье”, Moscow, 1954.

1954 or later

He reviews the catalogue “All-Union Art Exhibition – 1952”, makes underlining, and writes a list of the 16 Soviet republics on the cover.

Source: MGL, t-634, “Всесоюзная Художественная Выставка – 1952”, Тбилиси, Баку, Киев, Львов, Вильнюс, Рига, Таллин, Ленинград, 1953-1954.

1955

January

1955

January 1

A poem titled “Many New Years” is published in the newspaper Sabtchota Oseti.

Source: Newspaper Sabtchota Oseti, 1955, №1, p. 1.

1955

January 7

In the Literaturuli Gazeti, he reads Irakli Abashidze’s speech at the Second Union Congress of Soviet Writers and expresses his attitude toward the speaker with a bilingual, two-line satirical verse: “Irakli struck the pliers / На безрыбье И рак рыба” (In a place where there’s no fish, even a crayfish is a fish”), which he writes in his diary.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 7.

Note: The Russian part of the verse is a proverb, which corresponds to the Georgian saying: “In a land without dogs, the cats learn bark”.

1955

January 7

He plans to attend the meeting of the Writers’ Union Presidium at 2 PM and is curious about who the secretary of the Presidium is. He also tries to figure out whether it would be worthwhile to attend future Presidium meetings.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 46-48; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 33

1955

January 7

Galaktion's wardrobe, which the poet had delivered to the Writers' Union, becomes the centre of widespread attention. Notable figures such as Marijani – Mariam Tkemaladze, Irodion Kavzharadze, Revas Japaridze, Emanuel Feigin, and Besarion Zhgenti show particular interest. Marijani comments that the wardrobe is very large in size, while Besarion Zhgenti clarifies the dimensions, saying that even the poets themselves could fit inside the “poets' wardrobe”. At this moment, Irodion attempts to open the wardrobe and inspect its contents.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 46-48; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 33.

Note: In the source, Emanuel Feigin is mentioned only by his last name, Irodion Kavzharadze by his first name only, and Mariam Tkhemaladze by her pseudonym, Marijani.

1955

January 7

He is at the Writers' Union, where he meets Revas Japaridze, who recites his poems from memory, including the poem “Mysteria in the Rain”. The poet is pleased by this and makes a note of it in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 49; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 34.

1955

January 8

He unexpectedly meets the critic Lavrosi Kalandadze on the street, and together they wait for the tram.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 32; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 29.

1955

January 8

He believes that Ioseb Noneshvili is a true admirer of his poetry and a patriot of his work, and he writes this in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 37; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 31.

Note: Galaktion referred to the sincere and true admirers of his poetry as “Galaktion's patriots”.

1955

Until January 9

The publishing house Zarya Vostoka releases an anthology in Russian titled “Georgian Soviet Poetry”. The Book includes translations of Works – poems and poems – published by Georgian poets between 1934 and 1954. As stated in the annotation of the anthology, the selected works specifically reflect Soviet life, the Great Patriotic War, and the post-war period. The anthology devotes nearly twenty-seven pages to the translations of poems by the National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze. The poems included are: “To the Homeland”, “My Song” (“Everyone has something to remember...”), “The Glory of the Present”, “Red Square”, “Moscow”, “I Write, Some Meskhi Was Writing”, “The Eye of the Current Day”, “Thoughts in the Growl of Rationing”, “The City Underwater”, “To the Homeland”, “The Union of Hearts”, “May and Peace”, “The Old Woman”, “Paris. This Voice”, “The Poppy Bloomed”, “How Could I Not Love”, “The Oaks”, “Calm Down, Wind”, “The Great Winter”, “The Starry Dome Shines!”, “Spring”, “From the Train”, “In the Fields”, “In the Evening, When the Mist Covers Mtatsminda”, “Rati Ratishvili”, “Henri Barbusse at the Anti-Fascist Congress”, “Abkhazian, War-hardened”, and a fragment from the poem “Conversation About Lyricism”. The Book includes information about the authors of the works featured in the anthology. The brief biographical notes on Galaktion Tabidze, the National Poet of Georgia, place the main emphasis on his work during the Soviet period.

Source: “Georgian Soviet Poetry”, Tbilisi, Zarya Vostoka, 1954 (“Грузинская советская поэзия”, Тб., “Заря Востока”, 1954).

1955

January 9

In his notebook, Galaktion notes information stating that on February 7, 1955, a major creative evening of his will be held at the Opera Theater. This information is confirmed with signatures from Galaktion Tabidze and Shalva Radiani.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 22.

1955

January 9

He meets Konstantine Chichinadze, and they discuss the anthology “Georgian Soviet Poetry” published in Russian by the publishing house Zarya Vostoka. It turns out that Konstantine Chichinadze is dissatisfied with the anthology, but he appreciates the translations of the poems by Giorgi Tsagareli and also the translations of Galaktion’s poems by various authors included in the collection.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,27, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 13.

Note: In the source, Konstantine Chichinadze is mentioned by his initials and surname.

1955

January 9

He attends the funeral of writer Mikheil Kintsurashvili (Yasamani) and is displeased with the farewell speeches given by the speakers.

Source: G. Tabidze’s note on the calendar page, MGL, d-326, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 7.

1955

January 9

While reviewing his papers, he selects important materials written about him by 300 writers at different times.

Source: G. Tabidze's note on the calendar page, MGL, d-326, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 8.

1955

January 9

He begins working on an untitled poem: "Having shattered the mountain strewn with cliffs..."

Source: Autographs: MGL, №418; №111-a, p. 8056-8057; №8059; №1065; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 225.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "Two Aragvis".

1955

January 9 or after

He completes work on the untitled poem "Having shattered the mountain strewn with cliffs..." and creates a new version of the piece under the title "Two Aragvis" ("Having shattered the mountain...").

Source: Autographs: MGL, №418; №111-a, p. 8056-8057; №8059; №1065; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 225.

1955

January 10

While traveling on the trolleybus, 100 roubles are stolen from his pocket.

Source: G. Tabidze's note on the calendar page, MGL, d-326, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 8.

1955

January 10

He thinks about holding the event in the evening and preparing posters for it. He writes on the calendar page that opera posters are varied, and the posters of the opera theater singer, People's Artist Vera Davidova, are good, but in Galaktion's opinion, a better one could be prepared.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 8.

1955

January 10

On a calendar page, he marks the tasks and issues he needs to address, which are related to his poems, as well as the publication of Georgian and Russian books.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 8.

1955

January 11

He learns from the printer that part of his early works, specifically material from 1905, has already been printed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 8

1955

January 12

On a calendar page, he makes a note that Shalva Ghambashidze – an actor from the Marjanishvili Theatre – is dissatisfied with the writers' congress because Galaktion was not properly presented. Based on Shalva Ghambashidze's words, he concludes that the Marjanishvili Theatre is on his side.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 8-9.

1955

January 12

He purchases three new bookcases and 60 folders. He discovers that one of the newly purchased bookcases comes with a foldable table, and he is so delighted that he jots down a small impromptu verse in his notebook: "Discoveries brand new / Look, how many the world has too".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 8-9.

1955

January 12

He learns from the State Publishing House that his book, "Selected", will be ready in a week.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 9.

Note: The title of the Book is not mentioned in the entry and was established through research.

1955

January 12

Beno Chikobava is assigned to compile the eighth volume of Galaktion Tabidze's works, and he suggests to the poet that they begin working on the poems right away.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 9.

1955

January 12

He gives a recommendation for the journalist and poet Aurel Levit to be accepted as a member of the Writers' Union.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 9.

1955

Until January 12

He reviews the 1954 "Selected" collection of his poems and discovers a section titled "The Poet-Tribune", which will be useful for the cycle "Art poétique". He also finds numerous poems that are not included in his volumes but should be added.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 9.

1955

January 14

He begins organizing his study and arranging his manuscripts.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 9.

1955

January 14

He makes a note on a calendar page, indicating that he plans to go to Tskneti the following day.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 9.

1955

January 14

Irakli Abashidze and Sergi Tchilaia ask him to work in the Poets' Section of the Writers' Union.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 9.

1955

January 14

At the State Publishing House, they tell him again that his book, "Selected", which had to be released in 1954, will be ready in a week.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 9.

Note: The title of the Book is not specified in the entry. It's true, it was released in 1955, but the cover page states 1954.

1955

January 15

They inform him that a plenary session of the board is scheduled at the Writers' Union on January 24th.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 9

1955

January 15

While reviewing the manuscripts, ideas emerge for three publications: his seven-volume collection, the works of Georgian writers, and the publication of his poems. He believes that for this, they will need active and culturally engaged people who will properly organize the material.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 9-10.

1955

January 15

He is in Tskneti.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 9.

1955

January 16

He makes a note on a calendar page that he was in Tskneti the previous day and is satisfied with the location of his house there.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 10.

1955

Until January 17

He records information in his notebook about the reporting meetings of the sections of the Writers' Union. He notes which section's meeting is scheduled for which day. According to the entry, the Poets' Section meeting is set to take place on January 17th at 2 PM.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 41; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 31-32.

1955

January 17

He gives a speech at the Poets' Section meeting of the Writers' Union, and is unanimously elected as the chairman of the bureau for this section.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 10.

1955

January 17

At 8 PM, he attends a discussion on the results of the second Congress of the Writers' Union at the Marxism-Leninism Institute and also delivers a speech.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 10.

1955

January 17 or later

He writes in his notebook that he will never forget January 17, 1955, the day he was elected chairman of the Poets' Section bureau.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 24.

1955

After January 17

At the Writers' Union, he speaks at a writers' meeting. He notes that due to illness, he could not participate in the First Congress of Soviet Writers. When the Georgian writers attending the congress visited Joseph Stalin, he expressed surprise that Galaktion was not among them. The poet states that this news was brought to him by colleagues from Moscow, and it gave him a tremendous boost in his creative work. According to Galaktion, he first met Stalin in 1917 in Smolny and warmly greeted him. In his speech, the poet responds to the viewpoint voiced by some writers, claiming that contemporary Georgian poetry is going through a crisis. He points out that he has personally written about 50 poems, which are still waiting for their researcher. In response, Khuta Berulava interjects ironically, saying that 50 poems have not been written even in the entire Georgian poetry. Galaktion disagrees with him and continues to speak about the necessity of a scientific study of the poem genre. At the end of his speech, he emphasizes that writers must adequately prepare for important dates, such as the 40th anniversary of Akaki Tsereteli's death and the 50th anniversary of the 1905 Revolution.

Source: MGL, d-661, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 570-572;

1955

After January 17

During his time as the chairman of the Poetry Section at the Writers' Union, he goes to the office every day at 2 PM and stays there until 5 PM. He converses with young writers, offering them advice and guidance. On one occasion, he mentions that he was once fascinated by Théophile Gautier's artistic style and even wrote a poem dedicated to him, but now his artistic vision has become more realistic.

Source: M. Jibuti, One Summer, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 315;

1955

After January 17

He outlines the future goals of the Poets' Section of the Writers' Union. He plans to organize lectures and excursions under the section's aegis, establish connections with various literary circles, representatives of different fields of art, and others.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-513, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 83;

1955

After January 17

He makes notes about the work plans of the Poets', Prose Writers', Critics', and Translators' Sections of the Writers' Union.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-513, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 85-86;

1955

January 18

He attends a meeting of the Translators' Section of the Writers' Union. He is dissatisfied with their work, noting that only ten people attended the meeting. He ironically remarks on the fact that seven of these ten were elected as members of the board. He is pleased with Geronti Kikodze's speech, but does not like the one delivered by Shalva Apkhaidze. However, it is Apkhaidze who is elected as the chairman of the section.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 10.

Note: In the source, only the initial of Geronti Kikodze's name is mentioned.

1955

January 19

They negotiate with him that a meeting with students and young people will be held in Avlabari on January 25.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 11.

1955

January 19

He writes in his notebook the work report for 1954. He notes that the year was primarily devoted to selecting materials for the substantial one-volume collection of selected poems from the seven volumes of his works, which has already been sent for printing. He also mentions that he participated in numerous literary events over the past year, including the Writers' Union Congress held in Moscow, where he was sent as a delegate by the Georgian Writers' Union.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-483, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 370.

1955

January 19

He attends a meeting of the Prose Writers' Section of the Writers' Union, where Konstantine Lortkipanidze is elected as the chairman of the section. Galaktion listens to the speeches of Konstantine Lortkipanidze, Sergo Kldiashvili, Aleksandre Tcheishvili, Leo Kiacheli, and Demna Shengelaia. The poet is displeased with both the election and the speeches, and writes in his notebook that the prose writers are uncultured people.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 11.

1955

January 19

At the Writers' Union, he meets Khuta Berulava. His speech and behaviour seem strange to him, but he cannot figure out what the issue is. While reflecting on this matter, he even suggests that perhaps Khuta Berulava is displeased by the fact that the poets unanimously elected Galaktion as the chairman of their section's bureau. He plans to speak with her about it and get to the bottom of the situation.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 11.

1955

Until January 20

He meets with the person responsible for the publication of his "Selected", Zakaria Papukashvili, who provides information about the book's printing process. After this conversation, Galaktion notes in his notebook which forms of "Selected" are already ready and which ones are still to be printed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 22.

Note: In the source, Zakaria Papukashvili is mentioned only by his last name.

1955

Until January 20

Along with other poets, he participates in a meeting organized by the Society for the Dissemination of Political and Scientific Knowledge, dedicated to the results of the Second Congress of Soviet Writers. At the event, he delivers a speech, talks about his future creative plans, and recites one of his new poems.

Source: newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, January 20, 1955, №9.

Note: The source does not specify the date of the event.

1955

January 20

The article “An Evening Dedicated to the Results of the Soviet Writers’ Congress” is published in the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti. The informational piece states that a meeting dedicated to the results of the Second Congress of Soviet Writers was organized by the Society for the Dissemination of Political and Scientific Knowledge. The event was opened by Academician Giorgi Akhvlediani, and the report was delivered by the Secretary of the Writers’ Union, Sergo Kldiashvili. Following this, the creative plans of the attendees were shared with the audience by Georgia’s National Poet Galaktion Tabidze, Karlo Kaladze, Revaz Margiani, Ioseb Noneshvili, Khuta Berulava, and others. Additionally, the mentioned authors read their new works.

Source: newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, January 20, 1955, №9.

Note: In the source, Giorgi Akhvlediani, Sergo Kldiashvili, Galaktion Tabidze, Karlo Kaladze, Revaz Margiani, Ioseb Noneshvili, and Khuta Berulava are mentioned by their initials and last names.

1955

January 20

He attends a meeting of the Playwrights’ Section of the Writers’ Union, where Makvala Mrevlishvili gives a report, and the following individuals speak: Alexandre Shanshiashvili, Simon Mtvaradze, Iona Vakeli, and Shalva Dadiani. The session is chaired by Shalva Dadiani. While listening to the speakers, Galaktion gradually becomes filled with irony, but when reflecting on the events of the day, he still notes that Makvala Mrevlishvili, Alexandre Shanshiashvili, and Iona Vakeli possess oratorical talent. He also likes Konstantine Lortkipanidze’s speech, in which he is mentioned in a positive context.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 11.

Note: In the source, Makvala Mrevlishvili, Alexandre Shanshiashvili, Simon Mtvaradze, Iona Vakeli, Shalva Dadiani, and Konstantine Lortkipanidze are mentioned by their initials and last names.

1955

January 20

Family problems are hindering his work. He is irritated by the fact that, some time ago, the key to the garage was lost, and the issue remains unresolved. Additionally, his granddaughter, Marine Pirskhalava, is screaming terribly.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 11.

1955

January 20

He meets with Ilia Arosia, who informs him that the previous day, his poem "Shoulder to Shoulder" was sung in Megrelian on the radio. He also shares that the final forms of his Book "Selected" are being printed, along with copies featuring a different-coloured cover. According to Arosia, the printing process of the Book is expected to last until February.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 22.

1955

After January 20

On the radio, he hears a song sung in Megrelian, based on his poem "Shoulder to Shoulder, Side by side".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 11.

1955

January 21

He learns that the printing of his "Selected" has begun, and that the price of the Book will be determined by the accounting department only once the printing is finished. He is now curious about when this will happen.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 24-25.

1955

January 21

He reads the January 20th issue of the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, which contains an article titled "An Evening Dedicated to the Results of the Soviet Writers' Congress". The article mentions that, at the event dedicated to the results of the Second Congress of Soviet Writers, Georgia's People's Poet Galaktion Tabidze and other poets shared their future creative plans with the public. The article also notes that the poets read their new poems. After reading the article, he notes the information about himself and the other poets in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 25.

1955

January 21

He attends an evening held at the Officers' House and listens to Beso Zhghenti's report. He is curious as to why Lavrosi Kalandadze, whose persistent request led him to decide to attend the event, did not show up. His attention is drawn to the laughter in the hall when Beso Zhghenti looks at a question written on a piece of paper thrown from the audience and responds with a serious expression.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 26.

1955

January 21

He speaks with Ilia Khoshtaria, who praises his new Book "Verses and Poems". Khoshtaria has high hopes for this collection and is convinced that after reading the book, everyone will begin to flatter him, including those who had not paid him attention before. Galaktion is amazed by the poet's confidence and notes his words in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 25.

1955

January 21

He speaks with a poet who mentions that the entire literary era has been conquered by Galaktion and Mikhail Sholokhov. Galaktion recalls a caricature displayed nearby – a giant Book and a tiny figure of Sholokhov. According to the poet's observation, the meaning of the caricature is that sometimes a writer cannot reach the height of his own book. Considering this context, Galaktion wonders if his conversation partner is implying some similar subtext.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 25.

1955

January 21

He sits in the presidium at a meeting of the Writers' Union Children's Section and also attends an evening at the Officers' House. In both events, he is photographed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 12.

1955

January 17 – 22

He reflects on the future work of the Writers' Union Poets' Section and the atmosphere within this section.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 21;

1955

January 17 – 22

He plans to visit Sosiko Pantskhava, the head of the literary circle named after Galaktion, on January 22. For this purpose, he notes down his address in his notebook. Since Pantskhava had previously been involved in organizing events related to Galaktion's work, the poet intends to collaborate with her even more intensively in the new context, as the chairman of the Poets' Section.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 21;

1955

January 17 – 22

He thinks about his upcoming poetry evening, which is to be held at the Opera and Ballet Theatre. Organizing the event requires addressing several formal issues, which is why he wants to involve the Academy of Sciences and the former director of the Opera Theatre, Mamia Duduchava, in this process.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 21.

1955

January 22

He is at the Writers' Union, attending a meeting of the Critics and Literary Scholars Section, where Dimitri Benashvili speaks. In the poet's opinion, the critic speaks very well about him. During the same meeting, Beso Zhghenti is elected as the chairman of the bureau.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 12.

1955

January 22

In his notebook, he makes a note that on the radio, they spoke about Kale Bobokhidze's poetic work but did not mention anything about the quality of his creations. He is particularly upset by the fact that they failed to mention the origins of the author's main characters. The poet refers to this behaviour as "shameless", as he believes it represents a deliberate attempt to diminish Galaktion Tabidze's role and contributions in the ongoing literary process.

Source: MGL, d-355, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 269.

1955

January 22 or later

He makes a note about his poem "Memories of the Days When the Sun Shone". He mentions that due to the work, the magazine Mnatobi was banned, and copies were cut with scissors and destroyed. The poem has not been included in any of his collected works.

Source: MGL, d-475, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 310;

1955

January 22 or later

He makes a note about the future plans of the Writers' Union's Poets' Section. He states that the section should establish connections with the poets' sections of all the republics; it should have its own material base, a secretary, and a chancery, as well as a library and a car. The section should organize literary evenings, prepare anthologies in Georgian and Russian, and hold events against the improper use of atomic energy. The section should lead the children's poetry department and also organize evenings dedicated to Paolo Iashvili, Titsian Tabidze, and Valerian Gaprindashvili.

Source: MGL, d-475, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 310-311;

1955

January 23

He writes on the calendar page which person was elected as the chairman of each section in the Writers' Union.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 12.

1955

January 23

He is looking for a photo of his "seven-volume" collection and the cover illustration of the same edition. He believes that the photo needs to be redrawn in ink and a plate prepared for the exhibition.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 12.

1955

Until January 25

In his notebook, he notes lines from his poem "Flags Quickly": "Freedom was so longed for by the soul..."

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 22;

1955

Until January 25

On January 25th, from 4 to 6 PM, he plans to meet with the students of the 26th Commissars District School (now Avlabari) in Tbilisi.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 21.

1955

January 25

He attends a plenary session of the Writers' Union, where the chairman of the Union, Irakli Abashidze, announces that the Critics' Section has already started working. This statement confuses the head of the Critics' Section, Beso Zhghenti, and causes laughter in the hall, as a section that was just elected the day before could not have started working so quickly.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 12.

Note: Beso Zhghenti is referenced by his first name only in the source.

1955

After January 25

He is at the Writers' Union and notes the phone numbers of the poets Grigol Abashidze, Khuta Berulava, Alexandre Gomiashvili, Karlo Kaladze, Revaz Margiani, and Ioseb Noneshvili in his notebook. He also plans to verify and write down the numbers of Alexandre Shengelaia and Simon Chikovani. He believes this information is important for him as the chairman of the Poetry Section.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 21;

Note: In the source, Grigol Abashidze, Khuta Berulava, Alexandre Gomiashvili, Carlo Kaladze, Revaz Margiani, Ioseb Noneshvili, Alexandre Shengelaia, and Simon Chikovani are referred to by their initials and last names.

1955

After January 25

While at the Writers' Union, he learns that Irakli Abashidze has traveled to Moscow on a business trip. He clarifies and notes in his notebook the name of the hotel and the room number where the Chairman of the Writers' Union is staying. He thinks that this information may be useful for sending a letter to Irakli Abashidze or calling him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 21;

Note: The entry is written in Russian - "Москва, гост. "Гранд-отель". Ком. 526. Ираклий Абашидзе".

1955

January 27

He goes to the Writers' Union and takes the desk of the chairperson of the poets' section. At the request of Khuta Berulava, he changes the date of the poetry section meeting from January 29, as originally planned, to February 1.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,26, p. 21; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 12.

1955

Until January 28

He meets Davit Mamaladze, an employee of the Mtskheta Culture House, who asks him to plan a poetry evening in Mtskheta. In his notebook, the poet writes down his own name and surname, as well as the address of the Mtskheta Culture House. While talking to Davit Mamaladze, the poet also notes the name and surname of the director of the Culture House, as if he decides to hold the poetry evening, it will naturally be necessary to negotiate the details with the director of the institution.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 36; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 31;

1955

Until January 28

He is invited to attend a scientific session at the Academy of Sciences, where a presentation is scheduled to be given by researcher Givi Mikadze on January 28. Later, he learns that the planned session has been postponed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 36; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 31.

1955

January 29

Together with Georgian writers, he travels to the city of Rustavi and participates in a meeting with metallurgists and construction workers at the Rustavi Culture House, organized by the city committee of the Georgian Communist Party and the editorial office of the newspaper Komunisti. The meeting is opened with a welcoming speech by Vasil Chaladze, the First Secretary of the Rustavi City Committee of the Georgian Communist Party. A presentation titled “Rustavi in Georgian Soviet Literature” is given by Giorgi Guruli, head of the planning department at the Stalin Rustavi Metallurgical Plant. The writers read poems and prose excerpts. The event concludes with a concert by the Song and Dance Ensemble of Rustavi Culture House and a screening of the new film “They Came Down from the Mountain”.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, February 1, 1955, №26, p. 4; Autograph, GTDA, №403, p. 1.

Note: The publication states that the meeting is attended by writers Grigol Abashidze, Shalva Amisulashvili, Akaki Beliashvili, Konstantine Gamsakhurdia, Alexandre Gomiashvili, Tengiz Gogoladze, Nodar Gureshidze, Sandro Euli, Solomon Tavadze, Carlo Kaladze, Ioseb Noneshvili, Galaktion Tabidze, Sandro Shanshiashvili, Demna Shengelaisia, Boris Chkheidze, Otari Tchelidze, and Shalva Ghonghadze.

1955

January 31

He is at the Nikoloz Baratashvili School, meeting with the teachers and students.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 24.

1955

January 31

He writes from the Russian newspaper Pravda that fiction literature ranks fourth in terms of the number of publications.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №403, p. 5.

1955

January

He is contemplating organizing an event dedicated to the 40th anniversary of Akaki Tsereteli’s passing and is listing, in alphabetical order, the names of writers who should participate in this event.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 23-24, 26; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 28;

Note: The list is not completed.

1955

January

He wishes to contact the teacher at the Kutaisi Music School, Simon Kukhianidze, whose father, Bartolome Kukhianidze, composed a choral song in 1945 based on Galaktion’s poem “On the High Mountain, I Built a Home”. He plans to reach out to this individual to request the sheet music for the song. He assumes that, with the help of Meliton Tevdoradze, an employee of the State Publishing House in Kutaisi, he will be able to find the teacher's address and phone number.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 32; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 29-30.,

1955

January or later

In his notebook, he records a list of poets who are members of the Writers' Union. He divides the names into separate groups, distinguishing, in his view, slightly reliable and neutral writers. To the first group, he assigns: Alio Adamia, Kale Bobokhidze, Ketevan Kuchukashvili, Lidia Megrelidze, Kolau Nadiradze, Ilia Sikharulidze, and Solomon Tavadze. Meanwhile, in the second group, he includes: Grigol Abashidze, Alexandre Shengelia, Ioseb Noneshvili, Andro Tevzadze, Grigol Khechuashvili, Giorgi Tsagareli, Grigol Tsetskhladze, Konstantine Chichinadze, and Revaz Margiani. Additionally, he observes that, according to the official list compiled in 1950-1951, the Writers' Union had forty poets, while the list recently provided by Writers' Union employee Tamar Andghuladze indicates forty-seven. Based on this information, he concludes that seven new poets have joined the Writers' Union in recent years.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 23;

1955

January or later

He speaks with the critic Giorgi Khukhashvili. From their conversation, he learns that Khukhashvili wishes to write an article about Galaktion's Book "Selected Works". The poet believes that this same individual could also deliver a presentation about his seven-volume collection.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 24.

1955

January or later

He reflects on the activities of the State Publishing House. He believes that the publishing house should produce books based on readers' demands and interests. Specifically, it should first print promotional copies, observing their sales performance to determine the appropriate size of the full print run. Only after this should the mass publication of a particular Book be carried out.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 24;

February

1955

From January 17 to February

As the head of the Poets' Section of the Writers' Union, he reflects on the future activities of this section. He plans to prepare an anthology that will bring together poetic works by both classical and contemporary authors.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 25; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 29;

1955

February 1

He attends the first meeting of the Poets' Section Bureau with Alexandre Gomiashvili, Ioseb Noneshvili, Khuta Berulava, and Aleko Shengelia. The secretary of the meeting is Tamar Andghuladze.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №403, p. 6.

1955

February 1

A notice is published in the newspaper Komunisti stating that on January 29, Galaktion Tabidze, along with other Georgian writers, participated in a meeting of Georgian writers with metallurgists and builders at the Rustavi House of Culture. The event was organized at the initiative of the Rustavi City Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia and the editorial office of the newspaper Komunisti.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, February 1, 1955, №26, p. 4.

1955

February 1

He is at the Writers' Union, where his attention is drawn to Konstantine Gamsakhurdia's remarks. The writer refers to Davit Chkhikvishvili, the head of the Central Committee's Department of Science and Culture, as a scribbler.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 46-48; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 33

1955

February 1

He is curious whether the Russian translation of Sergi Tchilaia's Book "Galaktion Tabidze's Poetry" has been published.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 46-48; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 33

Note: Galaktion refers to the translation of Sergi Tchilaia's Book "Galaktion Tabidze's Poetry" done by Giorgi Mazurini and Mikheil Zaverin: Чилая С.Е., Поэзия Галактиона Табидзе, Перевод с груз. Г. Мазурина и М. Заверина, Тбилиси, Заря Востока, 1955.

1955

February 1

In his notebook, he records the phone number and home address of the researcher Giorgi Jibladze.
Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 46-48; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 33

1955

February 2

At five o'clock in the morning, he makes a note that he has copied 1,180 stanzas. He also reports the number of lines copied. Since each stanza contains eight lines, it turns out that he has copied a total of 9,440 lines.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,29, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 40.

1955

February 3

At the Voroshilov Club, he attends a meeting with voters along with Akaki Beliashvili, Sandro Euli, and Alexandre Gomiashvili. He is impressed by Dimitri Benashvili's speech.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №403, p. 7.

1955

February 3

He is preparing for the event dedicated to the 40th anniversary of Akaki Tsereteli's death. With the help of his colleagues, he tries to establish contact with newspapers and the radio. Poet Alexandre (Aleko) Shengelia takes responsibility for liaising with the press. He goes to the editorial offices and asks them to publish informational articles about the upcoming event. First, he informs Beno Tatariashvili, an employee of the Komunisti editorial office, about the event, and Tatariashvili greets the news with enthusiasm. Alexandre Shengelia is assured by the editorial offices that they will publish informational articles about the event on Sunday, February 8. What catches Galaktion's attention is the fact that Tamar Andghuladze, an employee of the Writers' Union, does not refer to Galaktion Tabidze as the National Poet of Georgia in the notices sent to the editorial offices. The same occurs with Teimuraz Jangulashvili: in the invitation cards for the guests, he also fails to mention Galaktion Tabidze as the National Poet of Georgia. Galaktion speaks with both of them, giving them a reminder. As a result, they amend the text according to his instructions.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,30, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 41.

1955

February 3

He learns that the theater critic and musicologist Ilia Zurabishvili is seriously ill. This news deeply worries him, especially considering Zurabishvili's age, as he has already passed eighty.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,30, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 41.

1955

February 4

He reads information about the sections of the Writers' Union in the Literaturuli Gazeti.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №403, p. 9.

1955

February 4

He attends a meeting with students at the Writers' Union and also delivers a speech.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №403, p. 9.

1955

Until February 7

He is thinking about the grand creative evening scheduled to take place at the Opera and Ballet Theatre on February 7. He wants to contact Teimuraz Jangulashvili to find out whether the invitations are ready and if the information about the event has been sent to the magazines and newspapers.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 22.

1955

Until February 7

He reflects on significant events related to his biography. He recalls the events of the first and second congresses of the Writers' Union, remembering the atmosphere of the first congress in 1934 when Stalin was still alive, and how the situation changed during the second congress in 1954, after Stalin's death. He also recalls how, not long ago, he was elected as the head of the Poets' Section of the Writers' Union. Following this, he begins to think about his future plans and upcoming publications. First and foremost, he intends to publish an academic collection of his works and a Book of poems.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 22;

1955

February 7

He buys a wardrobe for storing books and manuscripts, referring to it as the "smart wardrobe" due to its intended purpose. He notes that Nino Kvirikadze, Lavrosi Kalandadze, and Tamar Andghuladze particularly like this wardrobe.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 27.

Note: In the source, Nino Kvirikadze, Lavrosi Kalandadze, and Tamar Andghuladze are mentioned only by their first names.

1955

February 7

He prepares a speech for a literary evening dedicated to the 40th anniversary of Akaki Tsereteli's passing. In his notes, Galaktion refers to Akaki as one of the greatest Georgian poets, who, alongside Ilia Chavchavadze, was a key figure in the national liberation movement. According to Galaktion, Akaki Tsereteli's defining characteristic as an artist was his constant expression of the aspirations and interests of the people and the wider masses.

Source: MGL, d-661, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 572-574.

1955

February 8

He prepares for his speech at the event dedicated to the anniversary of Akaki Tsereteli's death. In his notebook, he writes out the text of his speech, where, alongside discussing the significance of Akaki Tsereteli's poetry, a large portion is devoted to talking about contemporary Georgian poetry. Special emphasis is placed on the closeness of Georgian Soviet poets of the 20th century to the people and their participation in the process of building a better future.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,30, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 45-46.

1955

February 8

He conducts the evening dedicated to Akaki Tsereteli at a high level.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №403, p. 11.

1955

February 8

He receives a short note from Sosiko Pantskhava, requesting that he send back as many tickets as possible with the bearer of the note, as the members of the Galaktion Literary Circle at the Finance and Credit Technical School also wish to attend the evening dedicated to Akaki Tsereteli.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-473; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 295.

1955

February 9

He attends a meeting of the Presidium of the Writers' Union. Observing the heated speeches, he feels as though he is in a marketplace. He thinks that the writers show little respect for one another. He sees that the argument between Besarion Zhghenti and Alexandre Gomiashvili nearly escalates into a physical altercation. Someone calls Ioseb Noneshvili by the name of Khuta Berulava, which upsets him. Simón Chikovani, Akaki Beliashvili, Carlo Kaladze, and Alio Mirtskhulava criticize Savle Abuladze and Tedo Sakhokia. Galaktion tells Simón Chikovani that it is unacceptable to attack the older generation of writers and that Tedo Sakhokia deserves to be treated with respect.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-629, 11; GTDA №403, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 314-315.

1955

February 10

He writes an untitled stanza: “ჯვინს, თუნს, მერე სანს...”.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №403, p. 13.

1955

February 7 -11

He reads the information noted in the notebook, which states that a grand creative evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze was scheduled to take place at the Opera Theatre on February 7, 1955. Below this text, he makes a note that the planned event has been postponed to March 7. The note is confirmed with signatures from Galaktion Tabidze and Shalva Radiani.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 23.

1955

February 11

The grand creative evening, initially scheduled to take place at the Opera Theatre on February 7 and later postponed to March 7, is now rescheduled for March 14, in agreement with Shalva Radiani.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 23.

1955

February 11

In the name of the Secretary of the Presidium of the Writers' Union, he writes a letter addressed to the director of the Zakaria Paliashvili Opera and Ballet Theatre, requesting that the Opera Theatre be made available on March 7 to host an evening dedicated to the poetry of Georgia's National Poet, Academician Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,30, G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 42.

1955

February 11

He goes to the Shota Rustaveli Institute of Georgian Literature, meets Shalva Radiani, and hands him a letter requesting permission for his poetry evening to be held at the Opera Theatre on March 7. Shalva Radiani, in turn, passes the letter to Vakhtang Kochoradze, a representative of the Central Committee. The decision on the event's approval depends on Kochoradze's decision. Because of this, the poet closely observes his actions and later, when recalling the events of that day, notes that Kochoradze made a good impression on him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,30, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 47.

1955

Until February 12

He notes the anniversary dates of prominent figures and significant events for the year 1955.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-603, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 25.

1955

February 12

When he arrives at the Writers' Union, he finds an anonymous letter on his desk, in which the recipient's audacity and insolence are discussed. He is troubled by this and suspects that the letter might be referring to him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-620, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 147.

1955

February 15

He writes a welcome speech for the 20th anniversary of the Literary-Creative Circle at the Tbilisi Teachers' House. In his address, he emphasizes his deep respect for the circle and, as a token of sincere appreciation, announces that he will present them with handwritten copies of his poems.

Source: MGL, d-661, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 574-575.

1955

February 16

He plans to go to Navtlughi with the construction worker, Bitchiko Gotsadze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-607, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 48.

1955

Until February 17

He notes the name and phone number of Vakhtang Kochoradze, a representative of the Central Committee. He plans to meet with this person to obtain permission for the grand creative evening to be held at the Opera and Ballet Theatre.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 22;

1955

February 17

In order to obtain permission for the evening at the Opera Theatre, he goes to the Central Committee, where he meets Vakhtang Kochoradze. During their conversation, he notices that Kochoradze is friendly and supportive. He also learns that Kochoradze has already contacted the Academy of Sciences, specifically speaking with Amberki Gachechiladze. During their discussion, Kochoradze requests a precise program of the planned event, which should be given to Davit Mtchedlishvili, the Secretary of the Central Committee for Ideology. After his conversation with Kochoradze, Galaktion goes to the Academy of Sciences, where he meets Shalva Radiani. They agree that Galaktion will present the event program plan for the Opera the following day. This conversation is attended by Mamia Duduchava, the head of the Department of Literary Theory at the Shota Rustaveli Institute of Georgian Literature.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,30, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 47.

1955

Until February 19

In his notebook, he writes a plan to organize his materials. His goal is to save and separate manuscripts, books, magazines, newspapers, folders, photographs, and posters from each other.

Source: MGL, d-467, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 227-228;

1955

After February 19

In Akaki Khintibidze's Book "I. Grishashvili's Poetry", he makes underlining and comments. He notes that it is incorrect to associate Grishashvili's early books in terms of content and form with the poetry of Besiki and Sayat-Nova. Additionally, he does not agree with the opinion that Grishashvili is an outstanding expert of the Georgian language and a devoted guardian of its purity.

Source: MGL, t-233, Akaki Khintibidze, "I. Grishashvili's Poetry", Tbilisi, 1955. p. 5, 17, 28, 44-45, 52-53, 61-71, 81, 87, 90, 98, 102, 104-105, 110, 125, 133, 137, 138-138, 140-149, 154, 171-173,175, 177.

1955

February 19-20

He begins organizing his archive, but is unable to complete the task.

Source: MGL, d-467, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 227-228;

1955

February 21

He receives a letter from Sosiko Pantskhava, who expresses dissatisfaction that Galaktion's evening at the Finance and Credit Institute has been postponed several times due to the poet's unavailability.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-474; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 296.

1955

February 23

During the day, as well as the previous night, there is a strong wind in Tbilisi. The wind tears through everything in Tskneti, and in the Writers' Union, it breaks the windows of the poets' section room. Seeing the aftermath of the storm, Galaktion recalls that this is the very room where, in 1921, during a time of homelessness, he lived.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 60; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 36.

1955

February 24

A poem titled “Be Glorious, Homeland!” is published in the Gori newspaper Stalineli.

Source: G. Tabidze, Be Glorious, Homeland, newspaper Stalineli, February 24, 1955.

1955

February 24

At the initiative of Otari Chkheidze, the Nikoloz Baratashvili Pedagogical Institute of Gori holds a meeting. Simon Gachechiladze delivers a report on the poet’s work, and Galaktion reads his poems.

Source: Sh. Chubinidze, Only This and the Fortress of Gori Have Left, newspaper Gori, №144, December 12, p. 4.

1955

February 24

The meeting is organized by the Pedagogical Institute of Gori and the city’s community. Before the evening begins, Galaktion browses the Stalineli newspaper, in which an entire page is dedicated to his life and work, and he likes the issue. At the meeting, lecturers from the Pedagogical Institute of Gori, Giorgi Chitaia and Nodar Alania, give speeches. Poems dedicated to the poet are read by P. Janashvili, A. Kartoza, and M. Dzvelaia. The poet concludes by thanking the hosts and reading several of his poems.

Source: Sh. Nutsbidze, Gori hosted Galaktion, newspaper Gamarjveba, November 1, 1973, №131, p. 3.

Note: In the source, the titles of the poems are not specified.

1955

February 26

In the Russian newspaper Molodoy Stalinets, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “The Day of Joy” is published, translated by Boris Serebryakov.

Source: День радости (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Молодой сталинец, Тбилиси, 1955, 26 февраля, №25.

1955

From January 18 to February 28

Galaktion Tabidze writes several different versions of the poem “A Monument of a Poem”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,27, p. 4-15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 13-21;

1955

From January 18 to February 28

Galaktion Tabidze is preparing to organize an event titled “One Poem Evening”, dedicated to a single poem, with himself as the organizer and as the chairman of the Writers’ Union’s Poets’ Section.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,27, p. 4-15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 13-21;

1955

February 28

Galaktion Tabidze takes a new notebook for making entries and titles it: “One Poem Evening”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,27, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 13.

1955

February 28

At the Writers’ Union Club, he magnificently conducts an evening dedicated to a single poem.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №403, p. 25.

1955

February 28

He meets the agronomist Ilia Nakashidze, who writes his own address and the address of the Dighomi Nursery Farm in the notebook. He wishes to cultivate various grapevine varieties on his private estate in Tskneti and plans to take the seedlings from this farm.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 52.

1955.

February 28

He notes the name of the representative from the Housing Supply Department. He believes that this person will assist in organizing the documentation related to the renovation of his house in Tskneti.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 52.

1955

February 28

He learns that the daughter of Ioseb Imedashvili possesses archival materials of Mikheil Abramishvili and Vakhtang Kotetishvili. This information piques his interest, and he notes it in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 52.

Note: Mikheil Abramishvili and Vakhtang Kotetishvili are mentioned in the source by their initials and last names.

1955

February 27

He writes a poem titled “One Poem”.

Source: N. Agiashvili, Let us erect a monument to a single poem, newspaper Tbilisi, December 3, 1982, N 277, p. 4.

Note: The poem also appears in the autograph under the title “A Monument of a Poem”.

1955

March

At the Writers’ House, the second “One Poem” evening is held, initiated by Galaktion Tabidze. The event is attended by Ioseb Grishashvili, Simon Chikovani, Irakli Abashidze, Giorgi Shatberashvili, Grigol Abashidze, Mukhran Matchavariani, Nazi Kilasonia, and others. The evening is opened by Galaktion himself, the chairman of the Poetry Section Bureau. He explains the concept of “one poem” and, specifically, the purpose of poetry, emphasizing the contemporary poets who remain in the readers’ memory with only one or two remarkable poems. Galaktion notes that the first such evening was dedicated to Georgian classics and reads the poem “One Poem”, written specifically for this event.

Source: N. Agiashvili, Let us erect a monument to a single poem, newspaper Tbilisi, December 3, 1982, N 277, p. 4.

March

1955.

March 1

He attends an event held at Tbilisi’s 47th school, which begins at 2 PM. The meeting opens with a speech by Besarion Zhghenti. The critic presents a report on the works of Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 52-53.

1955.

March 1

He visits the State Union-Republican Committee of Wine Industry’s vineyard in Dighomi. He discusses viticulture and grapevine varieties with the director of the facility, Davit Sanadze, and the chief agronomist, Akaki Khutsishvili. They agree that on Thursday, between 1 PM and 2 PM, they will deliver the rooted one-year-old saplings he has selected, specifically thirty saplings of Tavrizi variety and seventy of Shavtita variety, to Tskneti. Before making this decision, the poet carefully studies the specifics and names of various grapevine varieties, which he records in his notebook. He also notes the phone number of the vineyard director, Davit Sanadze.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 5-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 53.

1955

March 2

On behalf of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia, a request is made to the director of the State Opera Theatre, Dimitri Mtchedlidze, asking for the use of the hall on March 21 to organize an evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-216; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 130; G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-331, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 54.

1955

March 2

He is in Tbilisi. He calls the vineyard farm in Dighomi and asks them to prepare the vine seedlings for the next day. He also calls the council of the collective farm in Tskneti and requests that a truck with manure be arranged for the vine seedlings. He asks his driver, Ohana, to somehow find a truck that can transport the manure. He considers that it might be necessary for him to go to Tskhneti to resolve the issue. However, in the end, due to the situation, it turns out that everything is taken care of in Tbilisi, and there was no need for him to go to Tskneti.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 54.

1955

March 2

He talks to writer Revaz Margiani about the event dedicated to the 50th anniversary of the 1905 Revolution, which the Writers' Union is planning to hold.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 56; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 35

1955

March 3

He is in Mtskheta with his driver, Ohana. They are taking a portion of vine saplings from the nursery farm to his country house in Tskneti to plant a vineyard.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 53.

1955

March 4

He is at the Soviet-Republic State Committee for Wine Industry of Georgia, located on Lenin Street (now Kostava Street). He wishes to speak with a representative of this organization regarding the purchase of vine saplings and the arrangement of a vineyard.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 53.

1955

March 4

He plans to visit the Dighomi Nursery Farm to discuss the acquisition of the next batch of vine saplings with the agronomist Ilia Nakashidze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 53.

1955

March 4

He is thinking about the renovation of his house in Tskneti and plans to go there to personally get involved in the planning of the renovation works. He has decided to contact a representative of the Housing Supply Department, who will assist in resolving this issue.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 53.

1955

March 4

He remembers that on March 12th, an event titled "One Poem Evening" is scheduled at the Writers' Union, and he is the main participant. He is curious about the preparation progress for the event.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 53.

1955

March 4

He makes a note that his palm has been itching since morning and wonders what it could mean. He recalls the popular superstition that itching on the palm is related to incoming money. He goes to the "State Publishing House" and finds out that he has a royalty of 128,844 roubles to collect.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 11-12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 55.

1955

March 6

He is thinking about the renovation of his house in Tskneti, wishing to organize both the yard and the house itself. Specifically, he plans to renovate both floors of the house, repair and repaint the fence, and address the issue with the staircase.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 55.

1955

March 6

He writes an untitled poem: "I opened the calendar...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №119-d, p. 9-11; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 196; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 657.

1955

March 6

Together with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, he is in Tskaltubo. He plans to renovate the house and arrange the yard. Additionally, he intends to change the roof of the house. In his notebook, Nino Kvirikadze writes down the length of the fence to be painted and also notes the dimensions of the rooms on the second floor that need renovation, so that this information can be provided to the craftsmen.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, MGL, d-332, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 71.

1955

Until March 7

He writes the poster text for an event dedicated to the 5th anniversary of the publication of his seven-volume collection of works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-526, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 140;

1955

March 7

He writes a recommendation for the publication of selected works by Noé Zomleteli in Russian. The recommendation highlights that this poet began his literary career in 1905 and gained significant popularity among the broad public of Georgia. Therefore, it is deemed appropriate to publish his book.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-501, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 20.

1955

March 7

He is interested in the lecture "On the Moment of New Familial Abnormality".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 56.

Note: In the source, the lecturer is referred to as "N".

1955

March 7

He is awaiting the official authorization for the sale and distribution of the 1954 "Selected Works", which was scheduled to be issued by the end of January.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 56.

1955

March 7

He is interested in whether a collection of the Russian poet Aleksey Merzlyakov is available in the public library.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 56.

Note: In the source, Merzlyakov is mentioned only by his last name.

1955

March 7

He is a member of the Writers' Union, in the section for poets, where discussions are held about the trends in the development of contemporary poetry. A great debate takes place, in which the following participate: Lavrosi Kalandadze, Sergo Kldiashvili, Tamar Andghuladze, Mariam Tkemaladze, Teimuraz Jangulashvili, Giorgi Shatberashvili, and others. Later, reflecting on this discussion, the poet notes in his notebook that Marijani – Mariam Tkemaladze – agreed with his position and supported him. In light of this, Galaktion plans to offer his support to her in the future. He believes that this debate, initiated by the young philosopher Venori Kvachakhia, will soon spread throughout Georgia. He hopes that the poetry section of the Writers' Union will select four speakers to represent its position.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 56.

Note: In the source, Lavrosi Kalandadze, Sergo Kldiashvili, Tamar Andghuladze, Teimuraz Jangulashvili, and Giorgi Shatberashvili are mentioned only by their first names, while Mariam Tkemaladze is referred to by her pseudonym – Marijani.

1955

March 7

To mark the fifth anniversary of the release of Galaktion Tabidze's seven-volume collection, seven evenings are planned to be held. The events will take place from March 25 to 31 at the Tbilisi Financial and Credit Technical School. Critics and writers – Besarion Zhghenti, Eter Shushania, Ilia Bakhtadze, Solomon Tsaishvili, and Sergi Tchilaia – will participate in the evenings, delivering lectures on Galaktion's works as well as the creative output of other authors.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 56.

Note: In the source, Besarion Zhghenti is mentioned by his last name and initial, while Eter Shushania is mentioned by her first name and initial.

1955

March 8

He is given Sergi Tchilaia's Russian-language monograph "The Poetry of Galaktion Tabidze". He plans to purchase several more copies of this book.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 56.

Note: Galaktion refers to the Russian translation of Sergi Tchilaia's 1951 Book "The Poetry of Galaktion Tabidze", which was translated into Russian by Giorgi Mazurin and Mikheil Zaverin: Чилая С.Е., Поэзия Галактиона Табидзе, Перевод с груз. Г. Мазурина и М. Заверина, Тбилиси, Заря Востока, 1955.

1955

March 8

The photographer gives Galaktion two of his photographic portraits, which he took some time ago.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 56.

1955

March 8

The writer Teophile Kekelidze gives Galaktion photographs of the article "The Yellow Leaf" by Alexandre Abasheli, published in 1915. This pleases the poet, as Abasheli's article is dedicated to his early poetry.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 56.

1955

March 8

He is reading the March 8th issue of the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka and enjoys Murman Kikvadze's review "The Play about the Heroic Girl of the People", which is dedicated to the performance "Maia From Tskneti" staged at the Marjanishvili Theatre.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 56; М. Киквадзе, "Спектакль о героической дочери народа". газ. "Заря Востока", 1955, №56, 8 март, стр.3.

1955

March 8

He is troubled by the fact that the official permission for the sale and distribution of the 1954 "Selected Works", printed at the end of January, has not yet been issued, which is why the Book has not yet been delivered to the stores.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 57.

1955

March 8

He plans to visit the secretary of the Artists' Union Presidium, Vladimir Lemonjava, to discuss the poetry evening that had been planned a long time ago, for which a special commission had been appointed by the Artists' Union.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 57.

1955

March 9

In the morning, he is in Tskneti, reflecting on the nearby places of Pantia and Abrameti. Afterward, he returns to Tbilisi and heads to the Artists' Union. On the way, near the Ministry of Culture, he encounters his friend, the artist Mikheil Vadbolsky. He tells him that although the Artists' Union had appointed a commission some time ago to organize his poetry evening, nothing has been done so far. Together, Galaktion and Mikheil Vadbolsky go to the Artists' Union, where they meet Vladimir Lemonjava, the secretary of the Presidium. Lemonjava hands Galaktion a list from the old 1954 commission. At Galaktion's request, Mikheil Vadbolsky is added to the list. During this conversation, Shalva Kvashvadze, a member of the Artists' Union, enters and joins the discussion. They decide to begin work on March 11, as by then Vadbolsky will have the event's project ready. They plan to meet again on March 15 at 3 p.m. Galaktion is pleased with this arrangement, believing that the involvement of artists in the preparation of his poetry evening is a wonderful initiative. He also plans to include his nephew, Nodari Tabidze, in the preparations.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 19; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 57.

Note: In the source, Mikheil Vadbolsky, Vladimir Lemonjava, and Shalva Kvashvadze are mentioned by their last names only, while Nodari Tabidze is mentioned by his first name only.

1955

March 10

At 11 o'clock, he attends the general assembly of the Academy. He listens to speeches by Niko Ketskhoveli, Alexandre Baramidze, Varlam Tophuria, Niko Berdzenishvili, and Alexandre Janelidze. He meets with Mikheil Vadbolski.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №403, p. 32.

1955

March 11

He is at the Academy of Sciences, where he attends a session with Korneli Kekelidze, Apolon Tsanava, Akaki Shanidze, and other scholars.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 57.

1955

Until March 12

In his notebook, he makes a note of the list of artists provided by the Artists' Union a few days earlier, which was compiled on October 8, 1954. The artists named – Ucha Japaridze, Lado GrigOlya, Konstantine Chankvetadze, Shalva Kvashvadze, and Dimitri Tavadze – were to participate in organizing Galaktion's creative evening. At Galaktion's request, Mikheil Vadbolsky was added to this list on March 9, 1955. The poet also notes that a meeting with the artists is planned for March 12, marking the start of preparations for the long-awaited event.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 31; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 67.

Note: In the source, Ucha Japaridze, Lado GrigOlya, Konstantine Chankvetadze, Shalva Kvashvadze, Dimitri Tavadze, and Mikheil Vadbolsky are mentioned by their initials and last names.

1955

March 12

He is thinking about the plans to be carried out in the coming days. He intends to visit the Artists' Union and work with the artists involved in organizing his creative evening. He also plans to speak with a representative from the Housing Supply Department, who is supposed to assist with organizing the documentation related to the renovation of the house in Tskneti. At six o'clock in the evening, he plans to go to the Ministry of Culture's club.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 22; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 58.

1955

March 12

He plans to purchase several copies of Sergi Tchilaia's Russian-language monograph "The Poetry of Galaktion Tabidze".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 22; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 58.

Note: Galaktion refers to the Russian translation of Sergi Tchilaia's 1951 Book "The Poetry of Galaktion Tabidze", which was translated by Giorgi Mazurin and Mikheil Zaverin: Чилая С.Е., Поэзия Галактиона Табидзе, Перевод с груз. Г. Мазурина и М. Заверина, Тбилиси, Заря Востока, 1955.

1955

March 12

He plans to visit the State Publishing House to inquire about when it will be possible to obtain the official permission for the sale and distribution of the 1954 "Selected Works", which was printed at the end of January.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 22; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 58.

1955

March 12

He addresses a statement to the head of the Tbilisi Housing Administration, Vladimir Chomakhidze, requesting 5 cubic meters of sawn timber to complete the construction of his house in Tskneti, 4.5 cubic meters of low-quality planks for soil retention, and 45 support beams.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-217; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 130.

1955

March 14

He intends to meet Bichiko Gotsadze at two o'clock in the afternoon, who is to assist with planning the renovation of the house in Tskneti. However, Bichiko does not arrive at the appointed time, and therefore the meeting does not take place.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 23; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 58.

1955

March 14

He is greatly irritated by the fact that the official authorization for the sale and distribution of the 1954 "Selected Works", printed at the end of January, has been excessively delayed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 23; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 58.

1955

March 14

He plans to visit the Writers' Union and clarify what kind of "anthologies" are being planned for publication and which of his works they intend to include in these "anthologies".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 23; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 58.

1955

March 14

He is troubled by the fact that he was unable to visit the Academy of Sciences and, consequently, is unaware of the latest news from there.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 23; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 58.

1955

March 14

He is pleased to learn that the issue of organizing an exhibition showcasing his biography and works has been resolved positively, and holding the exhibition is no longer a problem.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 23; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 58.

1955

March 14

He meets with a staff member of the State Publishing House, writer Noe Kakushadze. They discuss his "Selected Works", which was printed back at the end of January, but despite this, the official authorization for its sale and distribution has still not been granted. Kakushadze explains that the “Selected Works” was sent to Vasil Mzhavanadze and Davit Mtchedlishvili on March 12. This information causes Galaktion to be astonished and raises the question of whether the authorities send every newly published Book to officials or if, in this case, they were particularly interested in his “Selected Works”. He tries to find out how long it will take to receive the official authorization for the book’s sale and distribution, but no one can provide an answer. Instead, they hand him the author’s copies of the “Selected Works” and ask him to meet with the accountant on March 15 to clarify the honorarium, and with the director of the publishing house on March 16 for further discussions.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 23; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 58.

1955

March 15

He plans to meet with Besarion Zhghenti and discuss the events planned and to be held by the Poetry Section. He also wishes to clarify the matter of the 1954 “Selected Works”, as he wants to find out whether the official authorization for the sale and distribution of the Book has been obtained.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 26; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 59

1955

March 15

He reflects on the problems that need to be resolved. He plans to look into the issues of the renovation of the house in Tskneti and the construction of the house in Sokhumi. Additionally, he intends to have his car repaired.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 26; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 59

1955

March 15

He learns that while he was not at home, poets Kale Bobokhidze and Teimuraz Jangulashvili visited his house.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 26; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 59

Note: In the source, Kale Bobokhidze and Teimuraz Jangulashvili are mentioned by their last names only.

1955

March 15

He learns that, at last, his Book is being published and writes, “Shota, Ilia, Akaki, Vazha, / Today my Book is coming out, hurray!”

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №403, p. 34.

1955

March 16

He is at the Writers' Union, attending a Presidium meeting. During the session, Besarion Zhghenti learns that he has been assigned to the Russian section, while Grigol Abashidze is announced as being assigned to the poetry section, despite being a bureau member. Observing the situation, Galaktion concludes that even Presidium members are being attached to specific sections of the Writers' Union. He is also surprised that, although the quarter has not yet ended, the administration has already begun summarizing the completed work – and in a negative light. It is stated that the sections have slowed down their activities.

Galaktion closely observes the writers' behaviour and their attitude toward him. He is irritated by Grigol Abashidze's provocative actions and by Lavrosi Kalandadze's remark that the event dedicated to Akaki Tsereteli was merely a ceremonial gathering. He also disapproves of the actions of Sergi Tchilaia, Besarion Zhghenti, and Irakli Abashidze. However, he decides not to pay attention to them and to continue focusing on his own work.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-330, p. 16-18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 48-49.

Note: Sergi Tchilaia, Besarion Zhghenti, and Irakli Abashidze are mentioned by their surnames in the source, while Grigol Abashidze and Lavrosi Kalandadze are referred to by their surnames and initials.

1955

March 16

He plans to visit the Academy of Sciences to collect his rightful salary, and afterward, he intends to go to Navtlughi to meet Bichiko Gotsadze, who is to assist with planning the renovation of the house in Tskneti.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 28; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 59

1955

March 16

He is at the car workshop with the driver, trying to explain to the mechanic what is wrong with his car.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 28; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 59.

1955

March 16

He plans to purchase the fourth issue of the Russian political magazine Partiuli Tskhovreba and read the Literaturuli Gazeti.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 28; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 59.

1955

After March 16

He receives a letter from Otar Akhvlediani, the son of writer Daria Akhvlediani. In the letter, Otar reminds him that on April 13, 14, and 15, 1949, he visited Galaktion in Tbilisi, requesting his support in publishing his late mother's poems. The problem is that Otar has been accused of participating in a theft in Tkibuli on those exact dates. He asks Galaktion to go to the Supreme Court and testify that he was in Tbilisi during those days, thereby helping an innocent man regain his freedom.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-255; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 317.

1955

March 17

He plans to meet Bichiko Gotsadze at 10 a.m., who is to assist with planning the renovation of the house in Tskneti. After this meeting, at 11 a.m., he intends to go with the driver to purchase car parts. Additionally, throughout the day, he wishes to visit the State Publishing House and a bookstore, where he plans to buy several copies of Sergi Tchilaia's Russian-language monograph "Galaktion Tabidze's Poetry". He also intends to purchase the fourth issue of the Russian political journal Partiuli Tskhovreba.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 30; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 60.

Note: Galaktion is referring to the Russian translation of Sergi Tchilaia's 1951 Book "Galaktion Tabidze's Poetry", originally published in Georgian, and translated into Russian by Giorgi Mazurin and Mikheil Zaverin: Чилая С.Е., Поэзия Галактиона Табидзе, Перевод с груз. Г. Мазурина и М. Заверина, Тбилиси, Заря Востока, 1955.

1955

March 17

He calculates how many lines he will be able to write over the course of several months, assuming he writes one hundred lines per day.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 31; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 60.

1955

March 19

He calculates the amount of money he had on March 9 and how much remained ten days later, on March 19. It turns out that out of 10,426 roubles, he has only 6,496 manats left. He thinks that he must have spent half of his monthly salary – 4,000 roubles.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 31; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 61.

1955

March 19

He examines the calendar, observing the first and last dates of September, October, November, and December to determine which days of the week they fall on. He notes this information in his notebook and separately writes down the dates of each Monday for those months. He thinks that since performances are not held in major theatres on Mondays, he could plan his creative evenings for that day.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,33, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 73.

1955

March 19

He takes part in an event for the pioneers, alongside Ioseb Grishashvili, Mariam Tkemaladze, Revaz Margiani, Akaki Beliashvili, Mikheil Mrevlishvili, and Lavrosi Kalandadze. He is dissatisfied that the organizers initially planned not to introduce him as the National Poet, and it was only after a remark from Revaz Margiani that the host's approach was changed. He is also displeased by Lavrosi Kalandadze's departure from the established order, as he first named Akaki Beliashvili and Mikheil Mrevlishvili, and only later mentioned Galaktion Tabidze. Additionally, the poet is struck by how much attention the children pay to Ioseb Grishashvili and Mariam Tkemaladze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 31; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 60.

Note: In the source, Ioseb Grishashvili is referred to as Soso, while Mariam Tkemaladze is mentioned as Marijani. Lavrosi Kalandadze is referred to by both his last name and initials.

1955

March 19

In the notebook, there is a recorded dialogue between unknown individuals discussing intrigues and scheming. The conversation takes on a comic tone due to the fact that one of the participants does not understand the meaning of the word "intriguer" and considers scheming to be a noble endeavour.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 56; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 36.

1955

March 19

He writes a humorous, untitled text dedicated to Irakli Abashidze and Sergi Tchilaia, titled "Irakli is Coming from Moscow".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 21; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 27.

1955

March 19

In the Writers' Union, he meets poet Ovanes Karayan and notes down his phone number in the notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-493, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 453.

1955March 20

He plans to go with the driver to purchase car parts, and also intends to buy fruit tree saplings for the house in Tskneti and have keys made for the Tskneti residence.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 31; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 61.

1955Until March 21

He makes a note planning a literary evening dedicated to his seven-volume collection of works. He mentions that a separate event is needed to present his recently published "Selected Works". He anticipates that an exhibition will be organized and that the event will feature participation from actors, writers, and critics.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-640, 93; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 66-67.

1955March 21

He makes a note stating that "I and the Night" is a revolutionary poem and has an autobiographical nature, just like "Send Us Weapons".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-640, 93; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 67.

1955Until March 23

In the notebook, he notes information about the events to be held by the Poets' Section of the Writers' Union. He indicates that Andro Tevzadze is scheduled to speak on March 23, while on March 31, he himself plans to deliver a lecture, which will review the literary output of the previous year – 1954.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 25; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 59.

1955March 25

He is thinking about the events to be organized under his leadership by the Poetry Section of the Writers' Union. He plans to gather the section members every two weeks and, together with them, hold an evening dedicated to the Georgian ballad, as well as an evening celebrating brotherhood among nations. Additionally, he wishes for the Poetry Section to dedicate some time to listening to and discussing the works of Ioseb Noneshvili and Andro Tevzadze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,34, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 73-74.

1955

March 25

He signs an agreement with the representatives of the library at the Medical Combine, according to which a special corner will be set up in the library for the study of the works of the Georgian National Writer Galaktion Tabidze. This corner will feature all editions of the poet's works, as well as articles, monographs, and photo-documentary materials related to Galaktion. According to the agreement, this corner must be arranged within no more than one month.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,35, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 76.

1955

Until March 27

He learns that Ilia Bakhtadze is giving a lecture titled "The Life and Works of Galaktion Tabidze" at the Ministry of Culture's Lecture Bureau. He notes down the address of the Lecture Bureau in case he is able to attend the lecture.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,31, p. 31; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 70.

1955

March 29

He is preparing for the Georgian Ballad Evening to be held at the Writers' Union. He plans to reprint his own ballads, take part in the organizational tasks of the event, prepare the text for the announcement, and compile a list of participants.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-468, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 243.

1955

March 30

He continues his preparations for the Georgian Ballad Evening to be held at the Writers' Union. He plans to have François Villon's ballad reprinted.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-468, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 243.

1955

March 30

He reads the newspaper Komunisti, writing next to the headline: “Galaktion and Shota Rustaveli, Galaktion and Guramishvili, Galaktion and Baratashvili, Galaktion and Ilia, Galaktion and Akaki, Galaktion and Vazha, Galaktion – the founder of the new Soviet themes”.

Source: MGL, t-694. newspaper Komunisti, March 30, 1955, №75, p. 1.

1955

March 31

He goes to the Labour Palace to help his cousin, Ioseb Tabidze, resolve the issue of his trip ticket.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 120.

1955

March 31

In the morning, he goes to the Labour Palace, trying to speak with the Minister of Labour or his deputy to request a trip ticket for his cousin, Ioseb Tabidze. He intends to tell the officials that it doesn’t matter which month’s ticket he receives – whether for April, May, or June – what matters is that the ticket is granted. Galaktion is unable to meet with any representatives of the government or resolve the issue. The staff at the Labour Palace advises him to return after 2 PM.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,36, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 82.

1955

March

He is thinking about what needs to be arranged in order to improve the living conditions at the Tskneti summer house. In the notebook, he notes that both floors of the house need to be renovated. Additionally, the shutters, the pool, the porch, and the balcony need to be refurbished, the fence should be painted, and the issue with the stairs must be addressed.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,32, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 70.

April

1955

Until April

He is thinking about having his works translated into Russian. He learns that the Russian poet and translator, Aleksandr Mezhirov, is in Tbilisi. In the notebook, he notes down the name of the hotel and the phone number where Mezhirov is staying.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 34; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 31.

Note: In the source, Aleksandr Mezhirov is mentioned only by his last name.

1955

Until April

In his notebook, someone has written down the lines of the Megrelian folkloric poem “Chvins, Tuns”. Following that, based on the same poem, he begins writing an untitled text, “When does the phase have the modesty of someone else”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 33-34; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 30;

Note: It was not possible to determine who should have made this entry in the poet’s notebook.

1955

Until April

He thinks that Leila Lortkipanidze, a candidate of philological sciences who defended her dissertation last year on the biography and works of the children’s writer Shio Mghvime, is capable of writing a monograph titled “Children in Galaktion Tabidze’s Works”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 35; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 31.

1955

Until April

He makes a note listing the members of the Scientific Council of the Shota Rustaveli Institute of the History of Georgian Literature at the Georgian Academy of Sciences. He indicates that the council members should receive his books. In the poet’s opinion, sending the books to the researchers will be the first step toward starting the preparation of an academic edition of his works.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 26;

1955

Until April 3

He takes an old photo of his mother, Makrine Adeishvili, to a photo studio and requests the photographer to prepare one large and six small copies of the image. The photographer promises that the photos will be ready by April 3rd or 4th. The news delights the poet, and he plans to gather photo portraits of his aunts, uncle, and other relatives, and, if necessary, have them reprinted by the photographer.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,36, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 82.

1955

April 3

He writes a poem “Yesterday” in memory of the recently deceased musicologist and theater critic, Ilia Zurabishvili.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-640, 91; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 66. G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 288.

1955

Until April 4

He is thinking about the upcoming events planned by the Poetry Section of the Writers' Union. In the notebook, he notes the themes and dates of the evenings to be held at the Writers' Union in April and May. According to the entry, on April 4th, a "Georgian Ballad Evening" is planned; on April 7th, there will be a discussion of Ioseb Noneshvili's poetry book; on April 14th and 17th, events dedicated to Vladimir Mayakovsky are scheduled; and in May, an evening featuring writers from the North Caucasus will take place.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,35, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 76.

1955

Until April 4

He prepares an announcement for the event "Georgian Ballad Evening", which he will lead and participate in on April 4th. According to the announcement, the opening speech will be given by the National Poet Galaktion Tabidze, while Giorgi Kalandadze will present a lecture titled "The Georgian Ballad". The evening will begin at 8 PM, and attendance is free.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,35, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 78.

1955

Until April 4

He meets Giorgi Kalandadze at the Writers' Union, who agrees to present a lecture titled "The Georgian Ballad" at the ballad-themed evening scheduled for April 4th.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 26;

1955

Until April 4

He prepares the text of the introductory speech for the Georgian Ballad Evening. In his speech, he notes that the purpose of the event is to highlight one interesting aspect of the history of Georgian poetry – the characteristics of the ballad genre – while considering the rich history of world poetry.

Source: MGL, d-661, 12-13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 583-586;

1955

April 4

He attends the "Georgian Ballad Evening" organized and led by him. He listens to Giorgi Kalandadze's lecture titled "The Georgian Ballad". In his notebook, he notes the names of the types of ballads: heroic ballads and hunting ballads.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,35, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 78.

1955

Until April 6

He learns that on April 6th, at 1 PM, Ivane Gomelauri will give a lecture titled "Nuclear-Powered Electric Station" in the session hall of the Academy of Sciences. After the lecture, the film "The Structure of the Atom" will be shown. He plans to attend this event without fail.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,36, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 84.

1955

Until April 6

He reads Sergi Tchilaia's Book "The Path of Development of Georgian Soviet Literature", making highlights on the section written about it.

Source: G. Tabidze's inscription in the book, GTSM, 176, S. Tchilaia, "The Path of Development of Georgian Soviet Literature", Tbilisi, 1954, p. 34-83.

1955

April 6

He attends a discussion about Sergi Tchilaya's Book "The Path of Development of Georgian Soviet Literature" at the Writers' Union.

Source: G. Tabidze's inscription in the book, GTSM, 176, S. Tchilaia, "The Path of Development of Georgian Soviet Literature", Tbilisi, 1954.

1955

April 6

On the page of the wall calendar, he makes a note that today, Sergi Tchilaia had his skin removed because he does not refrain from vulgar talk.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-620, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 146.

1955

April 6

He makes a humorous note about the Writers' Union, suggesting that it should be divided into the following sections: 1. The Summit Writers' Union, which would include the best writers, or literary "peaks"; 2. The Writers' Union, for ordinary writers; 3. The Non-Writers' Union, for those who are not writers but are part of the Union; 4. The Transcribers' Union, or the critics' section; 5. The Correspondents' Union, where registry clerks would be grouped; 6. The Recorders' Union, for honorary authors; and 7. The Writers' Union, which would unite writers and various "parasites" – those artificially linked to the Union. Galaktion believes these "sections" perfectly reflect the current state of the Georgian Writers' Union.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,36, p. 25; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 87.

1955

April 7

At his initiative, the fourth evening of the Poetry Section of the Writers' Union is held, during which the new Book by Ioseb Noneshvili, "On the Steppes of Kazakhstan", is discussed. Galaktion gives the opening speech. He mentions that Ioseb Noneshvili had spent two months on the vast lands of Kazakhstan alongside Georgian patriots, and it was these impressions that inspired the writing of his book, which is now being presented for public discussion at the Poetry Section's meeting. After this, the poet hands the floor to the author of the book, poet Ioseb Noneshvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,36, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 81.

1955

April 9

He purchases a round table.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №403, p. 53.

1955

April 9

He writes a draft of a letter to the head of the State Publishing House, stating that he is experiencing severe financial hardship and requests the transfer of his Book royalties, amounting to 30,000 roubles, to his savings account.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-572, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 365.

1955

April 4-10

From April 4th to 10th, the Poetry Section of the Writers' Union, under the leadership of Galaktion Tabidze, plans to hold a series of Georgian Ballad Evenings. The events will take place on April 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, and 9th, with lectures covering the following topics: "The Origins and Development of the Ballad – The Beginnings of the Georgian Folk Ballad", "Georgian Folk Heroic, Hunting, and Love Ballads", "Domestic Ballads and Those Reflecting the Struggle Against Social Injustice", "Ballads on War, Soldiering, Death, Religion, and Folk Tales", and "The Reflection of the Folk Ballad in Georgian Literary Art". He initially thinks it would be a good idea for Grigol Abashidze to give the opening speech, but later changes his mind and crosses out his name in the event plan.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,34, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 74.

1955

April 12

He arranges a car excursion to Udzo. He is greatly delighted by the spring scenery, which reminds him of his childhood, when he once descended from a great height toward the valley. Along the way, they admire a massive wine-jar, and then the poet's attention is captured by a shepherd and a flock of sheep. They stop in Shindisi to visit the driver Artur's relatives. Galaktion watches with interest the behaviour of the driver's young relative, seven-year-old Sandrik. After observing the surroundings, he suddenly wonders, "Will I ever have my own house in Tskneti?"

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,36, p. 50-51; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 91-92.

1955

April 14

He writes a one-stanza untitled poem: "If Mayakovsky believed..."

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №403, p. 56.

1955

Until April 19

He plans to organize an evening dedicated to the events of 1905, with the participation of senior-generation writers and critics.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-507, 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 58-59.

1955

April 20

He makes an agreement with two workers regarding the renovation of his Tskneti cottage and gives them 200 roubles in advance, under the condition that they will start working the next day and complete the first stage of the renovation by May 1st.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,36, p. 66; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 96.

1955

April 21

They plant 197 Rkatsiteli vines.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №403, p. 57.

1955

April 25

He goes to the editorial office of the newspaper Komunisti and submits five poems for publication, neatly copied onto a clean sheet of paper: "The Future," "When One Understands Friendship with the People...", "And I Remember...", "There Where the Sun-Coloured..." and "Dedicated in Spirit..."

Source: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 579.

1955

April 25

He writes an anti-Soviet sketch titled “At the Spring”. In it, he describes a conversation between peasants gathered at the spring and an urban woman, clearly showing an ironic attitude towards the communists.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,36, p. 48; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 90.

1955

Until April 25

He is in Ash-tree Garden, where he writes an untitled poem: “The young lion’s eyes reflect the colour of the sky...”, with the refrain: “Georgia stands, Georgia stands”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4219; №2848-2849; №94-d, p. 1-2; №8326; №5906; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 248; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 568.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “The Future”; “May and Children”; and untitled versions “The young lion’s eyes reflect the colour of the sky...”; “The gentle dew of the sky shimmers in their eyes...”.

1955

Until April 25

He is in Ash-tree Garden, where he writes an untitled poem: “There, where the sun-coloured...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №8113; №8114; №6816-6817; №6812; №8303; №5907-5908; №2850-2851; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 281; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 660.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Maple Tree”; “May in Ash-Tree Garden”; and untitled versions (with the opening lines: “What has it not seen...”; “Does it even know what sleep is...”; “Aptsiauri! In this world, no one...”; “Comrades! In this world, no one...”; “Oh, friends! In this world, no one...”).

1955

April 29

He makes a note of the list of materials purchased and to be purchased for the renovation of the Tskneti house and reports the amount of money to be paid to the workers.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,36, p. 69-70; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 97.

1955

April 30

He thinks about the renovation of the Tskneti house, lists the materials needed for the renovation, and specifies the corresponding amount of money required for their purchase. It turns out that the total amount needed for this stage of the renovation is 2.978 roubles.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,36, p. 60; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 94.

1955

April

He hears from someone and writes in his notebook how a Megrelian lecturer gave a failing grade to a Megrelian student simply because the student didn't know how many Platan trees stand near the Abasha railway station.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,36, p. 66; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 96.

1955

April

He stands in line at the newsstand, surrounded by young people. Galaktion thinks they are gathering around him to express their love, and he feels pleased, but upon talking to them, he realizes they are just waiting for newspapers. Disappointed, the poet remarks that it's not enough to just read newspapers; the young people should read poems and other things as well, and quickly leaves the area.

Source: M. Turava, brief recollection, Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, January 29, 1993, p. 14.

1955

March-April

He reflects on the major cultural events the Poets' Section of the Writers' Union, under his leadership, could organize. In a note titled "Major Cultural Anniversaries", he lists several key dates: June 15 marks the 150th anniversary of Friedrich Schiller's death, September 26 the 100th anniversary of Adam Mickiewicz's death, and November 26 the 100th anniversary of the publication of Walt Whitman's "Leaves of Grass". He also notes that May 21 will mark the 100th anniversary of Emil Verharn's birth, the 155th anniversary of Grigol Orbeliani's birth, and the 70th anniversary of Victor Hugo's death. He suggests that Akaki Gatsrelia will give a lecture on Grigol Orbeliani during the event dedicated to him, while Geronti Kikodze will speak at the event for Victor Hugo. He also plans for the Poets' Section to hold events to commemorate the victory in World War II on May 9 and Naval Day on July 24. Other planned events include an evening celebrating Ekaterine Gabashvili's birthday on June 28 and one dedicated to Ivane Machabeli on July 8.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,36, p. 1-2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 79.

1955

Until May

He reflects on the events to be organized by the Poets' Section of the Writers' Union, which he will lead and participate in, during May, June, and July. In his notebook, he outlines the schedule of events. According to the note, in May, there will be a session dedicated to the 10th anniversary of the victory in World War II, and a poets' meeting with the collective farmers of Ortachala. On June 19, there will be an evening to mark the 70th anniversary of Grigol Orbeliani's death. A discussion of Andro Tevzadze's Book is also planned for June, with a lecture on Andro Tevzadze to be given by critic Lavrosi Kalandadze. On July 8, there will be an evening dedicated to Ivane Machabeli, and later in July, an event in collaboration with the Military Defense Literary Commission, as well as an evening dedicated to Walt Whitman.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,36, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 81-82.

1955

Until May

In his notebook, he records the income and expenses for March and April. The expenses amount to 16.772 roubles, while the income is 38.522 roubles. He also notes the expected upcoming expenses, including 3,000 roubles for carpenters, 1.000 roubles for construction work by Bichiko Gotsadze, and 1.500 roubles for masonry and building materials. Upon reviewing his accounts, he realizes that he does not remember what the 1.000 roubles was spent on.

Source: MGL, d-355. p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 270.

1955

Until May

He is in the ash tree garden. He writes an untitled poem "May comes with a full cup in hand...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №6796; №8182; №1060; №4218; №8325; №2848; №5905; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 288. For clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 692.

Note: The poem is also found under the following titles: "Farewell, May" and "May of Peace", as well as untitled with a different beginning line: "Dedicated with spirit and heart...".

Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

May

1955

May 1

In the newspaper Komunisti, under the signature "Galaktion Tabidze, National Poet of Georgia", the poem "May Comes with the Chalice of Truth..." is published.

Source: G. Tabidze, "May of Peace", Newspaper Komunisti, 1955, №103, p. 1.

1955

May 1

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "May and Peacefulness" by Pavel Antokolskiy is published.

Source: Май и мир (Стихи), Г. Табидзе, Переводчик П. Антокольский, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1955, 1 мая, N 103.

1955

May 1

In the Russian newspaper Kutaiskaya Pravda, a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "First of May" by Boris Serebryakov is published.

Source: Первое Мая (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. Б. Серебряков, Кутаисская правда, Кутаиси, 1955, 1 мая, N 52.

1955

May 5

The poet from Stalingrad (now Volgograd), Yuri Okunev, gifts him with his 1954-published Book "Poems" with an inscription.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,75, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 365.

1955

May 5

He talks to the poet Yuri Okunev, who shares stories about Stalingrad (now Volgograd). During the conversation, it becomes clear that Yuri Okunev has begun translating works of Georgian poets. In this context, he recalls a humorous remark by the Russian writer and translator Pavel Antokolskiy, who, based on his own experience, warned Okunev that if he started translating Georgian poetry, he would be doomed, as he would no longer be able to accomplish anything else.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,75, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 365.

1955

May 6

He thinks about the renovation of the house in Tskneti. In his notebook, he makes a note in Russian about the construction materials needed for the renovation and the amount of money to be paid to the workers.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 49-50; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 134.

1955

May 7

He thinks that steps have already been taken to repair the interior walls of the house in Tskneti, as the necessary materials have already been delivered to the summer house, and the craftsman will arrive the next day to begin the work.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 47; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 133.

1955

May 8

He attends an evening at the Teachers' House. As soon as the poet enters the hall, he is greeted with standing ovations. He reads a poem, and at the end of his speech, he recalls his years at the seminary.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 46; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 132.

1955

May 8

The driver and the construction worker, Bichiko Gotsadze, take Galaktion's car without his permission, which annoys Galaktion and makes him feel insulted. However, they soon return, and the poet's anger fades away.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 46; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 133.

1955

Until May 9

He prepares the text of an announcement stating that on May 9, at the Writers' Union, an evening dedicated to the 10th anniversary of the victory over Fascist Germany will be held. The event will be opened with an introductory speech by Galaktion Tabidze, National Poet of Georgia.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-563, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 337.

1955

Until May 9

He writes down on a piece of paper phrases spoken by Marine Pirtskhalava, the daughter of his foster daughter, Nunu Ebanoidze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-565, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 344.

Note: In the source, Marine Pirtskhalava is mentioned by the nickname Kakina.

1955

Until May 9

Galaktion visits Ioseb Noneshvili. Also present are Viktor Goltsev and Giorgi Leonidze.

Source: M. Noneshvili, brief recollection, Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, June 26, 1992, № 24, p. 14.

Dating: The date is based on Viktor Goltsev's death (May 9, 1955).

1955

May 9

He is informed that the Victory Day celebration has been postponed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 46; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 133.

1955

May 10

He is in Tskneti, waiting for the driver and the construction worker, Bichiko Gotsadze, from 11:00 to 14:30.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 45; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 132.

1955

May 13

The renovation of the Tskneti summer house continues. This time, the painters begin work on the house. The poet closely observes the process and notes every important detail related to the work in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 47; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 133.

1955

May 14

He attends a poetry evening dedicated to Ioseb Grishashvili, where part of the speakers are Armenians. The event also includes Sergi Tchilaia, Tamar Andghuladze, Mariam Tkemaladze - Marijani, and Teimuraz Jangulashvili. The poet is struck by the small number of attendees. What particularly irritates Galaktion is the fact that Ioseb Grishashvili attempts to establish the notion during the evening that he is the main poet of modern Georgia. In Galaktion's view, this attempt fails; instead, the event demonstrates Grishashvili's estrangement from contemporary Georgian literature. Based on his overall impressions, the poet concludes that Ioseb Grishashvili seeks to become the flagbearer of the Tbilisi Armenians against Georgian writers.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 47-48; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 133-134.

1955

May 14

The renovation of the house in Tskneti continues, and Galaktion notes in his notebook that the plasterers have been working in the house for two days.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 48; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 133.

1955

May 14

He goes to the vehicle inspection station with the driver to register the car.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 48; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 133.

1955

May 14

He notes the plan for the day's tasks. The list includes: going to the inspection at 6 a.m., the Writers' Union at 11 a.m., and then heading to Tskneti at 12 p.m. He plans to bring posts and nails to the house and take care of the painting work at the summer house.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 43; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 132.

1955

May 15

He writes a humorous untitled poem "They Are Building the Seaside".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 124; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 124.

1955

May 15

In his notebook, he writes an untitled humorous poem by one of the workers, someone named Ohana, titled "When a Man Gets Bored".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 19; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 124.

1955

May 15

In Tskneti, there is a heavy hailstorm that destroys and damages the trees. Galaktion hears from the local residents that such a strong hailstorm hasn't occurred in a long time.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 42; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 132.

1955

May 16

In the magazine Mnatobi, he reads Alio Mirtskhulava's poem "To Stalin", underlines rhymes taken from it, and writes "Chqimi!" (Mine) next to them.

Source: MGL, t-648, magazine Mnatobi, 1955, March, №3, p. 5.

1955

May 16

He is informed that a literary evening is planned at the Teachers' House, and that he himself should be one of the participants.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 42; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 132.

1955

After May 16

In the magazine Literaturuli Dziejani, Ksenia Sikharulidze's article "Galaktion Tabidze and Folk Creativity" is published. The researcher points out that Galaktion showed an interest in folk creativity from the very beginning of his artistic journey, as evidenced by the use of folkloric themes, plots, and artistic images in his early poems. Ksenia Sikharulidze notes that one of the most cherished artistic images for Galaktion was that of Amirani, which in the poet's post-revolutionary works comes to symbolize a liberated homeland. According to the researcher, in Galaktion's poetry, not only the images rooted in Georgian folklore but also those from Greek mythology are imbued with new meanings. The author of the article suggests that in Galaktion's lyrics, there is also a tendency to lexically and phraseologically approach folk creativity. According to the critic, Galaktion's works are deeply influenced by his great love for folk music. In the poet's verses, the artistic image of a wandering musician appears repeatedly, and folk instruments such as the 'salamuri' (reed pipe), 'chonguri' (four-stringed lute), 'panduri' (three-stringed lute), 'kamancha' (three-stringed fiddle), 'stviri' (bagpipe), etc., serve as artistic adornments. Ksenia Sikharulidze points out that the poet pays particular attention to one of the most important genres of folk creativity – the fairy tale – and, just like Ilia and Akaki, frequently uses the form and tone of children's songs and lullabies. Among the folkloric genres, the poet also makes use of the riddle form. The researcher explains that the appearance of palindromes in Galaktion's poetry can also be attributed to the influence of folk creativity.

Source: K. Sikharulidze, Galaktion Tabidze and Folk Creativity, magazine Literaturuli Dziejani, 1955, IX, p. 57-68.

Dating: The magazine is signed for printing on May 16, 1955.

1955

After May 16

In the magazine Literaturuli Dziejani, Dimitri Benashvili's work "On the Issue of the Specificity of the Poem in Georgian Soviet Literature" is published. Describing the trends in the development of Georgian Soviet poetry, Dimitri Benashvili points out that it can be said with certainty that Galaktion Tabidze holds special significance for Georgian Soviet poetic epic, as his "John Reed" stands at the beginning. Despite the historical and literary importance of this work, according to Benashvili, we must accept the fact that Galaktion Tabidze failed as an epic poet during this experiment. The critic attempts to explain the reasons for this failure, indicating that it was caused by the failure to account for the nature of epic poetry. According to the author of the article, the foundation of epic poetry is the unfolding of action, but in "John Reed", it is not the protagonist who acts, but rather the poet who narrates events that happened to him, thus depriving the narrative of its epic nature. This flaw, according to the critic, is also present in the poem "Akaki Tsereteli", as for Galaktion Tabidze, Akaki is material that only serves as a pretext for expressing his own desires. Considering this, "Akaki Tsereteli" is perceived more as an extensive poem than an epic. Despite these shortcomings, Dimitri Benashvili argues that Galaktion's poems laid the groundwork for the development of the Georgian Soviet poetic epic.

Source: D. Benashvili, "On the Issue of the Specificity of the Poem in Georgian Soviet Literature", magazine Literaturuli Dziebani, 1955, IX, p. 45-53.

Dating: The magazine was signed for printing on May 16, 1955.

1955

May 17

He considers ways to address the issues at the Tskneti summer house. He mentions that poles and nails need to be brought from Tbilisi. Additionally, he thinks it is important to cover the round table in the Tskneti house with cellophane in such a way that the symmetry is maintained and no creases appear. In the future, he plans to cover all the tables at the summer house, both inside the house and in the yard, with the same type of cellophane.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 41; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 131.

1955

May 17

He writes down the amount he needs to pay the driver, the painter, and the domestic helper. He is calculating the total amount of money required to settle their payments.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 42; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 132.

1955

May 17

He plans to go to the Academy of Sciences at three o'clock in the afternoon.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 42; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 132.

1955

May 18

He is calculating the expected expenses and writing down the amounts he needs to pay to the helpers who assisted with the renovation of the Tskneti villa. He recalls the behaviour of one of the helpers, Arkadi, and thinks that he should never give him money in advance. Additionally, he notes in his notebook that he owes 100 roubles for his wife, Nina Kvirikadze's, dress.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 44; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 132.

1955

May 19

He learns that Shalva Ghambashidze has passed away and that Levan Asatiani's funeral is also taking place on the same day. He records both pieces of information in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 40; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 131.

1955

May 19

He browses through the latest issue of the magazine Drosha, reading Grigol Abashidze's article "Montesquieu", which is dedicated to the French writer and philosopher Charles-Louis de Montesquieu. He has an ironic attitude toward both the article and the magazine in general. He thinks that this issue of Drosha contains several intrigues, and that Grigol Abashidze doesn't know much about Montesquieu.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 40; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 131.

1955

May 21 or later

He attends the funeral of the actor Shalva Ghambashidze.

Source: V. Kiknadze, Galaktion and Theatre, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 74-75.

Dating: Shalva Ghambashidze passed away on May 18, and his funeral took place on the third day or later.

1955

May 25

The radio announces that the Ukrainian composer Lazarenko has composed music based on a text by Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №403, p. 60-61.

1955

May 28

He is in Tskneti, inspecting his yard, and recalls the difficulties he faced while building the fence and who helped with the fencing of the summer house.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 120-121.

1955

May 28

He writes down phrases spoken by strangers on the street in his notebook. He notices that the speakers use urban jargon, the Imeretian dialect, and Russian words.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 126.

1955

May 28

He is in Tskneti with the driver and the helper. While listening to their conversation, Galaktion's attention is drawn to the unusual form of the verb "Atana" (lifting) which is used as "Aitaneba". He notes the heard dialogue about this in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 121;

1955

May 28

He plans to build a fence at the house in Tskneti, which will require digging holes and cutting planks, a task that will take 6 days. He also considers making benches in various locations around the house, including the large area next to the house, by the water tap, in the shade of the trees, near the entrance to the yard and the eastern doors, by the oak grove, near the toilet, along the alley, and in the forest. He makes notes about this plan in his diary.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-501, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 19-20.

1955

May 28

While in Tskneti, he listens to the locals' conversations and writes down unfamiliar, colourful phrases in his notebook. Additionally, he clarifies and notes what needs to be done to tidy up the villa. He believes it is essential to sort, distribute, and properly organize the building materials he has gathered. He also remembers that he owes 1200 roubles to the worker, Bichiko Gotsadze, for the construction work.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 8, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 122-123;

1955

May 29

He returns to Tbilisi from Tskneti and cleans his shoes in front of the Tbilisi hotel. Based on the dried mud on the shoes, the cleaner deduces that he had been in the countryside, and Galaktion responds that he has just arrived from Tskneti.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 121.

1956

May 29

He thinks it would be possible to organize an event dedicated to the topic: "1905 in Galaktion Tabidze's Creativity". In his opinion, the following people could participate in the event: Sargis Tsaishvili, Ipolite Vartagava, Savle Abuladze, Giorgi Kavtaradze, Grigol Khechuashvili, Bezhan Svanidze, Mikheil Kvinikadze, Ilia Kazmachov, Giorgi Tavzarashvili, Elene Didimamishvili, and others.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 26-27; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 126-127.

Note: In the source, Sargis Tsaishvili, Ipolite Vartagava, Savle Abuladze, and Mikheil Kvinikadze are mentioned by their initials and last names. Ilia Kazmachov is referred to by his pseudonym, Kavkazagi, while Grigol Khechuashvili is mentioned as Gigo Khechuashvili. Elene Didimamishvili is referred to by her last name only;

1956

May 29

He is thinking about the topic "1905 in Galaktion Tabidze's Creativity" and writes two versions of an untitled extemporaneous piece titled "It seemed like there was something delightful about it".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 26-27; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 127.

1955

May 30

He addresses a statement to the director of the State Publishing House, Giorgi Merkviladze. He requests that the accounting department transfer the honorarium he has been waiting for a long time. He also notes that he is experiencing financial hardship, and receiving this payment is very important for him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 28; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 127.

1955

After May 30

He reads the magazine Mnatobi, underlines lines from Grigol Abashidze's poem "May 9", and writes down twelve points of notes. "But whoever still thinks about war" – "Thinks of war"; "They knew" – "Let him know"; "We have never been" – "We have not been ever"; "On their heads" – "On the enemies' heads"; "The plan turned to dust" – "The plan"; "Slid into the dust" – "When it slid into Berlin"; "The light cuts through the dark curtain of smoke" – lacks climax; "And the spring of victory slid into Berlin" – suggests that victory is not complete, it is still just spring; if the war ended in victory, what would this mean if it had ended in defeat?; "Dark smoke" – is there non-dark smoke? Can something that has turned to dust become a fire?

Source: MGL, t-625, magazine Mnatobi, 1955, May, №5, p. 3.

1955

After May 30

He reads Ioseb Grishashvili's poem "My Tbilisi" in the magazine Mnatobi, makes underlining and notes: if he calls himself a bee, how can he also be a sailor; questions the rhyme "ახალი არი – ნაღვერდალი" ("new is – hearth"); and concludes that, according to the poem, Grishashvili lacked empathy in the past and his path was distorted.

Source: MGL, t-625, magazine Mnatobi, 1955, May, №5, p. 4.

1955

May 31

He is in Tskneti and is thinking about the villa's upkeep. In his opinion, the issue of the electrical wiring needs to be addressed immediately.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 122.

1955

May

He learns that his cousin, Ioseb Tabidze, still hasn't received the travel ticket that he had helped him obtain, and he notes in his notebook what needs to be done to finalize the matter. The list includes: an interview with the ministry inspector, a visit to the social services department of the Kalinin district (now Mtatsminda), and bringing the documents to the minister once again.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 120.

1955

May

He does not allow the driver to take the car for personal errands, which causes the driver to complain that Galaktion only thinks about himself.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 123.

1955

May

He is thinking about the renovation of the Tskneti summer house and makes a note in his notebook in Russian, listing the materials needed for the cottage's upkeep and renovation.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 16-17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 122.

1955

May

He is in Tskneti, observing the process of tidying up his summer house, listening to the helpers' conversation, and writing down phrases in his notebook that seem interesting and unusual to him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 124.

1955

May

He thinks that in Tbilisi, there are very few families left that speak pure Georgian, and he writes about this in his diary.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 22; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 125;

1955

May

To write a satirical poem about Simon Chikovani, he writes down words in his notebook, then uses them to form phrases starting with the conjunction "if" and ending with the address "Simon". Eventually, he turns these phrases into an untitled poem, which begins with "If the lyre doesn't have a string.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 22; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 125;

1955

Spring

At the invitation of the Vani district Komsomol regional committee workers, Galaktion travels to Vani. A large crowd gathers in the centre of the district. Their sincere, emotional welcome touches Galaktion's heart. In the evening, at a grand feast held at Noe Lortkipanidze's home, a student, Inesa Verulashvili, reads a poem dedicated to the poet. In gratitude, Galaktion kisses the girl and keeps the poem in his portfolio.

Source: P. Kordzadze, The Grand Master of Georgian Poetry in His Hometown Vani, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 349.

Note: The title of the poem is not specified in the recollection.

1955

Spring

Galaktion travels by tram and murmurs to himself that he has written volumes, but who understands, and who cares? He says he is tired, and that even Pushkin felt the same way. He then asks the girl standing next to him, "Isn't that right, my dear?" The girl doesn't recognize him and says nothing. A young student, Murman Turava, helps him get off the tram and accompanies him home. Galaktion asks why he is showing such attention to a stranger, to which the young man replies that Galaktion is known throughout the country. Seeing how pleased Galaktion is by his words, he then asks who he thinks is the second greatest poet in Georgia. Galaktion answers that he knows better. The young man then names a well-known poet, but Galaktion responds that he has never read his work. The poet then stops a taxi to head up to Tskneti. Murman Turava tries to pay for the ride, but the driver refuses the money and says he will serve Galaktion himself. The poet is greatly pleased by this attention.

Source: M. Turava, brief recollection, Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, January 29, 1993, p. 14.

June

1955

June 2

He is in Tskneti, observing his yard, looking at the nearby pits, and then writes down a list of these pits in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 31; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 128.

1955

June 2

The hired worker or driver asks for his wage, but there is no money available, and he promises to pay the next day.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 32; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 128.

1955

June 2

He talks to Aleko Shengelia, who informs him that in the seventh issue of the magazine Mnatobi, the novel "Mist" by Otar Chkheidze is being published, in which the prose writer mentions Galaktion.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 32; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 128.

1955

June 4

He observes a safety notice near Bathhouse №9, written in both Georgian and Russian, warning citizens that contact with the high-voltage underground cable of Telasi is hazardous to life. He writes this information down in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 34; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 130.

1955

June 4

He takes the trolleybus to Bathhouse №9. During the ride, he confirms that a trolleybus runs every morning from his apartment to this bathhouse. He decides that he will use this route again in the future and plans to go to the bathhouse twice a week. He also plans to find out if there is a medical point nearby. If he discovers that a healthcare facility is close to the bathhouse, he will be able to visit the doctor for routine check-ups while continuing to go to the bathhouse.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 23; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 126.

1955

After June 5

He receives a short letter from Lavrenti Dzidziguri, who asks to borrow 200 roubles for a short period.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-228; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 273.

1955

June 6

He compiles a list of items needed for the summer house, which he plans to purchase. Among them are several brooms and a key.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 35; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 130.

1955

June 10

He is at the printing house of the Theatrical Society, listening to the conversation of those present, and writes down some of the phrases he overhears in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 29-30; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 128.

1955

June 13

He is thinking about the tasks he needs to address in the near future. He plans to meet with Akaki Gatsrelia the following day to discuss the memorial evening for Grigol Orbeliani, scheduled for June 20th, and arrange his participation in the event. He also intends to personally handle some of the organizational and technical aspects of the event related to the romantic poet. Additionally, he believes that for the future work of the poets' section in the Writers' Union, there should be a meeting of the members involved in the celebration of Shota Rustaveli's anniversary. The overwhelming number of tasks worries him, especially since he sees that nothing has been done yet to organize the event. Meanwhile, he also has other matters to resolve: specifically, he needs to visit the administrator of the Academy of Sciences and find the address of poet Vasil Gvetadze, as he expects this person may participate in his future creative events.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,39, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 137.

1955

June 14

He is thinking about the events organized by the Poets' Section of the Writers' Union, which he will lead in June. In his notebook, he writes down a list of the planned evenings. According to his notes, the schedule includes: on June 20th, an evening dedicated to the memory of Grigol Orbeliani; on June 23rd, a meeting with poets and the Kolkhoz workers of Ortachala; on June 25th, a creative evening for Andro Tevzadze; and on June 30th, a concluding event where a report will be presented about the activities organized by the Poets' Section in the previous months.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,39, p. 14; Autograph, GTDA, №192, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 137-138;

1955

June 17

He is browsing through the Book "Georgian Children's Writers" published by the State Publishing House. He is ironically inclined towards this publication, especially since the compilers have considered Ioseb Grishashvili a children's writer. He is curious about who compiled this book.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,40, p. 8-9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 139.

1955

June 18

He meets the young writer Elizbar Maisuradze, who informs him that the State Publishing House will soon print his Book "The Gardabani Best Men". From him, Galaktion also learns an important piece of news: the organization International Book has requested 3.500 copies of his poetry collection to distribute throughout Europe. The poet is delighted by this news, as he considers the spread of his Book in Europe to be a tremendous achievement.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,40, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 138.

Note: The organization "International Book" is mentioned in the source in Russian: "Международная книга".

1955

Until June 19

He reflects on the events to be held in June under his leadership and participation by the poetry section of the Writers' Union. In his notebook, he records the schedule of these events. Specifically, on June 19, an event will be held to mark the 155th anniversary of Grigol Orbeliani's birth; on June 21, an evening dedicated to the 115th anniversary of Akaki Tsereteli's birth; on June 23, a meeting of Georgian poets with the collective farmers of Ortachala is planned, and on June 25, an evening dedicated to Friedrich Schiller will take place.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,36, p. 56; GTDA, №192, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 93-94.

1955

June 19

In his notebook, he writes down lines from Alexander Blok's poem "The Sound is Approaching".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 22; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 28.

Note: The Russian title of the poem is "Приближается звук".

1955

Until June 20

He gets ready for the event that will be held on June 23rd in Ortachala under the leadership of the Writers' Union's poetry section. He tries to create a plan and figure out the issues that need to be resolved before the event. Additionally, he wants to establish contact with the press and the radio to ensure proper coverage of the evening to the public. He thinks it would be great if the event could be filmed. Furthermore, he wants to clarify the event's format. To achieve this, he plans to meet with representatives of the Ortachala collective farm on June 20th. In their discussion, he plans to clarify the involvement of students in the evening, the organization of the club, and the arrangement of lighting in the yard. He assumes that during the event, the poets will visit the local agricultural facilities, including the gardening, horticulture, sericulture, and livestock sectors, as well as tour the fish farm and vineyards. They will observe the harvest process, and the poetry evening will begin at 8 PM.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,40, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 138

1955

Until June 20

He is thinking about the event dedicated to Grigol Orbeliani, which the poetry section of the Writers' Union is set to organize on June 20th. He plans to prepare the evening's agenda, decide who will open the event, who will give the lecture, and who will read poems dedicated to the romantic poet, as well as Grigol Orbeliani's works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,36, p. 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 84.

1955

Until June 20

In his notebook, he writes Grigol Orbeliani's poem "The Sorrows of Dimitri Onikashvili".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,39, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 135;

1955

Until June 20

He is thinking about the event dedicated to Grigol Orbeliani, which will be organized by the Poetry Section of the Writers' Union. In his notebook, he drafts an outline of the plan, according to which the evening will be opened by the head of the Poetry Section, Galaktion Tabidze. Then, the following individuals will give speeches: Sergi Tchilaia, Ioseb Grishashvili, Solomon Tsaishvili, Konstantine Chichinadze, Khuta Berulava, and Ioseb Noneshvili. The poem of Grigol Orbeliani will be read by the poet Nodar Gureshidze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,39, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 136;

1955

Until June 20

He gets ready for the event dedicated to Grigol Orbeliani, which will be organized by the Poetry Section of the Writers' Union under his leadership. In his notebook, he writes down a fragment of the speech with which he plans to open the evening dedicated to the memory of the Romantic poet. According to the noted text, Galaktion will briefly explain the reason for the gathering to the invited audience and will then hand the floor to Geronti Kikodze. The evening will feature participation from Konstantine Chichinadze, Akaki Gatsserelia, and others.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,39, p. 8-9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 136;

1955

June 20

Together with Giorgi Leonidze, Konstantine Gamsakhurdia, and Ioseb Grishashvili, he nominates Pavle Ingorokva as a candidate for the Academy of Sciences.

Source: V. Javakhadze, "Unknown. Apology of Galaktion Tabidze", Tbilisi, 2020, p. 180.

1955

June 20

He writes an untitled poem "With my heart, I feel every rich treasury...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №1177; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 231.

1955

June 21

He reads the Russian newspaper Literaturnaya Gruzia, writing next to the headline: "Akaki Tsereteli – Poet and Thinker".

Source: MGL, t-654. newspaper "Литературная Грузия", June 21, 1955, №73, p. 1.

1955

Until June 23

He plans to participate in the event organized by the Poetry Section of the Writers' Union on June 23, which involves a meeting of Georgian poets with the Ortachala collective farmers. Along with other authors, Mukhran Matchavariani will also take part in the event.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,36, p. 26; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 87.

1955

Until June 29

In his notebook, he writes an outline for an introductory speech to be delivered at the literary evening of poet Andro Tevzadze. In the speech, he highlights the main merit of Andro Tevzadze's poetry as its exceptional reverence for cultural heritage.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-514, 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 92-93.

1955

May-June

He makes a note titled “Three Chauffeurs”, in which he recounts an incident that took place in Tea House. He repeatedly emphasizes the phrase “the crashed down” several times.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,38, p. 33; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 129;

July

1955

July 5

The Central Lecture Bureau issues an order stating that on July 9, 1955, a thematic evening dedicated to the works of the National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze, will be held at the Vani District Cultural Center. The order also specifies that for the event, Galaktion Tabidze, Vakhtang Gurgeniidze, Pati Nishnianidze, and Andro Tevzadze are assigned to Vani for three days.

Source: V. Gurgeniidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 203.

1955

Until July 8

Vakhtang Gurgeniidze, along with his group, decides to film Galaktion’s visit to Imereti and contacts the leadership of the film studio for this purpose. However, his request is denied because, due to the ongoing campaign against the personality cult, filming is prohibited for anyone. In response, Vakhtang Gurgeniidze turns to the Deputy Minister of Culture, Vladimer Chiaureli, explaining that almost nothing has been filmed about Galaktion Tabidze, and asks if they could be given permission. The Deputy Minister takes the request to heart and instructs the director of the film studio to assign camera operators to the group.

Source: V. Gurgeniidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 207.

Note: Of the 180-meter film reel, only a small portion was used in № 25 newsreel in 1955, while the rest was lost.

1955

July 9

At 12 o’clock at night, Vakhtang Gurgeniidze and Pati Nishniadze, along with others, are traveling by car to the railway station. The driver wishes them a pleasant journey and says goodbye. Afterward, they board the train and, by 12:15, they are seated in the international compartment of the train heading to Poti. They talk about Samtskhe-Saatabago, recalling Klukhori, which joined Georgia in 1943, but was taken away in March 1955 and became part of the Stavropol region. They say it would be nice to travel to this territory as well. Galaktion is unsettled by the delay of Lavrosi Kalandadze and Andro Tevzadze, but reassures himself that the main participants of the planned event – the evening’s host, the speaker, and himself – are already present, so the event will certainly not be cancelled. There are five minutes left until one o'clock in the morning. Vakhtang Gurgенidze and Pati Nishniadze exit the train onto the platform and wait for the delayed guests. The poet thinks that if Lavrosi Kalandadze and Andro Tevzadze don't arrive, it will be a deliberate failure to attend, an attempt to sabotage the planned event. During these thoughts, the clock strikes twelve, the anthem of the Soviet Union plays, and Lavrosi Kalandadze joins the passengers. Now there are four of them, and Galaktion calms down. They start talking, recalling Shalva Dadiani, Thedo Sakhokia, Leo Kiacheli, Nino Nakashidze, Ipolite Vartagava, Mariam Garikuli, and other older writers. They talk especially much about Shalva Dadiani. While talking, they mention Geronti Kikodze and his age, the fact that the critic is already 75, which once again reminds them of the swift passage of time. During the conversation, Lavrosi Kalandadze expresses dissatisfaction with the work of the Lecture Bureau, as he believes that tickets for cultural events are not being distributed properly. Galaktion considers Lavrosi's dissatisfaction to be unfounded.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 4-7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 142-143.

Note: In the source, Pati Nishniadze's full name is not specified; she is referred to as the "female speaker". Her identity is clarified in V. Gurgенidze's memoirs. See: V. Gurgенidze, Earthly Galaktion, Memoirs about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 201-202.

1955

July 9

At 2 a.m., Vakhtang Gurgенidze, Pati Nishniadze, and Lavrosi Kalandadze are in the international compartment of the train to Poti at Tbilisi railway station. They are talking and waiting for Andro Tevzadze, who is supposed to join them on the journey. The poet speaks with the train conductor and finds out that the train will arrive in Samtredia at 11 a.m. and in Poti at 1 p.m. After two hours and forty minutes, Andro Tevzadze joins them, and the train departs. During the journey, they discuss a debate initiated by Venori Kvachakhia when he published an article titled "On Scientific Schools" in Akhalgazrda Komunisti, which sparked a polemic on issues of science and art, ultimately leading to a confrontation between Komunisti and Akhalgazrda Komunisti. They also talk about an editorial published on April 8 in the Komunisti newspaper, titled "Let's Raise the Activism of the Communists", and mention an article by Lavrosi Kalandadze titled "In Defense of the Principles of Socialist Realism", published in the Literaturuli Gazeti on February 25. This article was directed against formalist principles in art. During this conversation, they eventually fall asleep.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 142-143.

1955

July 9

In the train to Poti, Vakhtang Gurgенidze, Pati Nishniadze, Lavrosi Kalandadze, and Andro Tevzadze are together. He wakes up at 8 a.m., looks out the window, and realizes that they have already entered Imereti. He observes the forests, fields, cottages, and small huts typical of western Georgia. By 11:30, they are in Samtredia. As they get off the train, they are greeted at the station by the secretary of the district committee and Galaktion's sister-in-law – his brother Abesalom's wife, Tatiana Tsintsadze-Tabidze. They are heading toward Vani in a "Zim" car. The poet recalls that the main road once passed near his house, but now the direction has changed, and they are traveling toward his native region along a new road built at the foot of the mountain. He is amazed that he is now traveling by car on a road that, during his youth, not even a stagecoach used to pass.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 7-9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 143.

Note: In the source, Tatiana Tsintsadze-Tabidze is mentioned only by her first name.

1955

July 9

Galaktion is in Vani with Vakhtang Gurgeniḑze, Pati Nishniadze, Andro Tevzadze, and Lavrosi Kalandadze. The visitors from Tbilisi are warmly hosted with a splendid lunch at the district committee. During the gathering, Galaktion sings the song "I Remember the First Day at School" accompanied by a guitar. Seeing his native region reminds the poet of lines from his poem "The Book of Peace", and he writes down a stanza in his notebook dedicated to the village of Shuamta, which lies between two mountains.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 143; P. Nishnianidze, "Several Meetings of Galaktion with the Workers of Georgia", Tbilisi, 1960, p. 10.

1955

July 9

At 7 p.m., Galaktion, accompanied by others, heads from the hotel to the Vani Cultural House, where a meeting was supposed to take place. However, due to the large crowd, they decide to hold the event in the open air in the centre of the district. On the podium in the square, along with the guests, are the district leaders: Giorgi Liluashvili, Germane Maghlakelidze, Ieremia Sigua, Noe Lortkipanidze, and others. In the evening, Vakhtang Gurgeniḑze opens the event, Pati Nishniadze talks about Galaktion's life and work, and Lavrosi Kalandadze, representing the Writers' Union, gives a speech. The poet Andro Tevzadze reads his own poems dedicated to Galaktion, along with the poem "To the Mountains of Guria". The poet is greeted by Leila Nikoleishvili, a student from Vani Secondary School, and Alexandre Nadiradze, the principal of Vani Secondary School. At the end of the event, Galaktion thanks the audience for attending.

Source: V. Gurgeniḑze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 203-204.

1955

July 9

After the open-air meeting, the community, along with the poet, heads toward the House of Culture, where a concert is held under the direction of Levan Gersamia, the director of the House of Culture. The poet's verses are recited. After the concert, a dinner takes place.

Source: V. Gurgenidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 203-204.

1955

July 9

He writes in the desk calendar that he is Vani and the trio is singing.

Source: GTSM, 109, 1955 Desk Calendar, Tbilisi, 1955.

1955

After July 9

He reflects on the places he visited in July. He recalls his native Vani and the village of Shuamta, where he was on the ninth of July. The memory of Shuamta brings to mind lines from his poem "The Book of Peace", and he writes in his notebook the stanza from the work dedicated to the village of Shuamta, nestled between two mountains.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 40; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 156-157.

1955

After July 9

He notes in his notebook that he did not like Pati Nishnianidze's speech in Vani because she spoke at length about the early period of Galaktion's work, which the poet neither considers safe nor appropriate.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 10-11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 144-145;

1955

July 10

He writes in the desk calendar: "In my Chkvishi!!!".

Source: GTSM, 109, 1955 Desk Calendar, Tbilisi, 1955.

1955

July 10

In the morning, they set off from the hotel toward Shuamta by car. Along the way, local residents organize impromptu gatherings. At midday, on behalf of the students, teachers, and workers of the region, speeches are delivered by Germane Maghlakelidze, the chairman of the Vani district executive committee, Nino Apkhazava, the director of the agricultural technical school in Shuamta, and the students. Student Zhora Makharadze recites a poem dedicated to Galaktion titled "Greetings to Galaktion Tabidze". A proposal is made to grant the status of a house-museum to Galaktion's childhood home in Chkvishi, which is met with enthusiastic applause from the audience. Lunch is held in Germane Maghlakelidze's yard.

Source: V. Gurgenzidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 204-205.

1955

July 10

As Galaktion Tabidze approaches his family home in the village of Chkvishi, he is greeted by his brother Abesalom's wife, Tatiana Tsintsadze-Tabidze; the caretaker of the poet's house, Elpite Bakhtadze; the elder of the Tabidze family, his cousin Dimitri Tabidze; Titsian's brother, the teacher Simon Tabidze, along with his wife; and their elderly uncle, Dimitri Tabidze. Galaktion enters the house, looks around, and, seated by the balcony railing, talks to his family members. Later, he heads to the banks of the Rioni River. From the riverbank, he returns through the fields, a scene recorded on film for a newsreel. During dinner, which is accompanied by further greetings and speeches, a few of his poems are read aloud. When asked to recite "Mary", he responds that he does not remember it by heart, but a copy of one of his editions is immediately brought to him, opened to the correct page, and he reads it. After dinner, he examines his family home, delighted to see the old belongings, and recalls how he used to climb the ladder leaning against the building without using his feet, relying only on his hands. He visits his parents' graves and, upon returning, stops by Titsian Tabidze's house, where relatives are gathered, reminiscing about Titsian. That same evening, they all get into cars and return to Tbilisi.

Source: V. Gurgenzidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 205-206. Simon Tabidze, "Recollection of Galaktion Tabidze", Collection "Galaktionology", IX, Tbilisi, 2022, p. 348.

1955

July 10

In Chkvishi, a feast is held in honour of the poet. Eteri, a childhood friend of Galaktion, shares with the guests a story about six-year-old Galaktion, who was deeply affected by the sorrow of a neighbour mourning the loss of a child to tuberculosis and dreamed of becoming a "doctor for tuberculosis". At the end of the gathering, in his speech of gratitude, Galaktion remarks that he is the blood and flesh of his people, and whatever goodness resides in him is their merit. He recounts hearing from his mother about a tiny bird that hears nothing but its own voice, and its song is dreadful. But there is also the nightingale, which listens to the sounds of nature and speaks to it with its melody. According to Galaktion, a poet should aspire to be like the nightingale.

Source: A. Ratiani, Recollections about Galaktion, Magazine Mnatobi, 1996, № 9-10, p. 136-137; P. Nishnianidze, Galaktion's Several Meetings with the Working People of Georgia, Tbilisi, 1960, p. 11-12.

Dating: The event is dated to 1955, during Galaktion's stay in Chkvishi.

1955

July 10

The Executive Committee of the Workers' Deputies Council of the Vani District adopts a resolution to establish a house-museum dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze in the village of Chkvishi and to name the Shuamta Cultural Center after Galaktion Tabidze. They appeal to the Presidium of the Supreme Council and the Council of Ministers of the Georgian SSR to approve this request.
Source: V. Gurgenidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 205.

1955

July 10

In the afternoon, a feast is laid out in Galaktion's yard. The celebration lasts for a long time. Galaktion does not drink wine; after every toast, he places the full glass back on the table.

Source: V. Gurgenidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 204-205.

1955

July 10

During a trip to Vani, a man named Avtandil Chkhirodze gifts Galaktion pitchers and clay pans. Inspired, the poet writes an untitled impromptu poem, "To a Pitcher".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 145.

1955

July 11

From Vani, Galaktion travels to Tbilisi with his group. On the way, they stop in Samtredia at the home of Tatiana Tsintsadze-Tabidze's brother, Galaktion's sister-in-law's family.

Source: V. Gurgenidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 207.

1955

Until July 12

In his notebook, Galaktion notes that on July 12, Tedo Begiashvili will deliver a lecture on Georgian-Ukrainian literary relations.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-485, 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 395.

1955

July 15

He visits Vakhtang Gurgenidze, who gives him the posters for Galaktion's creative evenings planned in Meskheta-Javakheti during July and August.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 147.

1955

Until July 19

In his notebook, Galaktion notes that on July 19, Vasil Gorgadze will deliver a lecture on the topic “The Life and Work of Ilia Chavchavadze”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-485, 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 395.

1955

Until July 19

In his notebook, Galaktion notes that on July 19, a meeting between Georgian writers and the workers’ collective of the Maud-Kamvol Factory will take place. The introductory speech will be delivered by the National Poet, Galaktion Tabidze, followed by a lecture on the topic “Contemporary Georgian Poetry in Memory of Peace” by Sergi Tchilaia.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-485, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 395.

1955

Until July 21

In Tbilisi, a translation of Sergi Tchilaia’s Book “Galaktion Tabidze’s Poetry”, translated by Giorgi Mazurin and Mikheil Zaverin, is published.

Source: Чилая С.Е., Поэзия Галактиона Табидзе, Перевод с груз. Г. Мазурина и М. Заверина, Тбилиси, Заря Востока, 1955.

Dating: The July 21 issue (№86) of the newspaper Literaturnaya Gruzia reveals that the Book has already been published.

1955

July 21

He is preparing to travel to Bolnisi, where a meeting with the local community and a poetry evening are planned.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 29; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 149.

1955

July 21

On his way to Bolnisi, he admires Mount Shavnabada, captivated by the landscape, and notes in his notebook that Shavnabada is a rare sight. The evening is held exceptionally well, and the poet returns satisfied.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 29-30; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 149.

1955

July 22 or later

He reflects on the situation within the Writers' Union, considering that the organization has little connection to literature and art, as it is dominated by a bureaucratic spirit. In Galaktion's view, this needs to change, and the ice must melt. He believes that to bring about this transformation, a weekly journal titled Poetry Day should be established. The poet recalls the proverb, "Haste has never achieved anything", and resolves not to rush but to implement his idea gradually and methodically.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 31; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 149-150.

1955

July 22 or later

While reviewing the July 22 issue of Literaturuli Gazeti, Galaktion reads Vladimir Jibuti's article, "A Study on the History of Georgian Soviet Literature". The article discusses and evaluates Sergi Tchilaia's 1954 book, "The Path of Development of Georgian Soviet Literature". As he reads the review, Galaktion reflects on Tchilaia's Book and concludes that Tchilaia is as treacherous as Besarion Zhghenti. In the poet's view, both critics are attempting to challenge the idea that Galaktion Tabidze is the founder of Georgian Soviet poetry.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 32; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 150. V. Jibuti, A Study on the History of Georgian Soviet Literature, newspaper Literaturuli Gazeti, 1955, №29.

Note: In the source, Besarion Zhghenti is referred to by his last name and initials, while Sergi Tchilaia is mentioned as "Chilaiavi".

1955

Until July 23

He reflects on the evening dedicated to the 40th anniversary of Vazha-Pshavela's passing, which the Writers' Union's poets' section is planning to organize. In his notebook, he begins drafting the plan for this event. As the head of the poets' section, he intends to open the evening himself. The event will also feature an exhibition showcasing the writer's biography and works, to be curated by Londa Chudetskaya.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 28; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 149.

Note: In the source, Chudetskaya is referred to only by her last name.

1955

July 24

He notes down lines from Alexander Blok's poem "To Friends".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,28, p. 22; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 28.

Note: The poem's Russian title is "Друзьям".

1955

July 25

According to the June Plenum resolution of the Communist Party of Georgia, Galaktion, along with Givi Kiguradze and Vakhtang Gurgeni, is assigned from July 27 to August 5 to conduct lectures and discussions for shepherds at the summer pastures of Akhalkalaki, Bogdanovka, Bakuriani, Aspindza, and Adigeni. Gurgeni once again requests a cinematographer to accompany them from the film studio but is refused, as the Ministry of Culture, led by Avtandil Gunia, had received severe criticism for filming in Vani.

Source: V. Gurgeni, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 209-210.

1955

Until July 26

In his notebook, he notes that on July 26, Pavle Gudushauri will deliver a lecture on the topic “Shota Rustaveli and His ‘The Knight in the Panther’s Skin.’”

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-485, 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 395.

1955

Until July 26

The leadership of the month-long propagandist courses under the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia requests the First Secretary of the Writers’ Union, Irakli Abashidze, to grant permission for a meeting with writers to be held on July 26 at 11 a.m. for the course participants. The event is planned to take place in the Physics Auditorium of the second building of Tbilisi University. Irakli Abashidze responds positively to the request. According to his decision, the meeting will include participation from Galaktion Tabidze, Ioseb Grishashvili, Besarion Zhghenti, Ioseb Noneshvili, and other writers.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 53; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 159.

1955

July 26

At 11 a.m., he goes to Tbilisi State University to participate in an event organized in collaboration with the Writers’ Union by the leadership of the month-long propagandist courses under the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia. Soon it becomes clear that some of the writers who were supposed to attend (Ioseb Grishashvili, Besarion Zhghenti, and Ioseb Noneshvili) are unable to come for various reasons. Despite this, the meeting takes place. Galaktion recites his poems: “I and the Night” and “The Poet-Tribune”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 53; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 159.

1955

July 26

Together with Vakhtang Gurgeniḏze and Givi Kiguradze, Galaktion is at the Government House to discuss their planned trip to Samtskhe-Javakheti with officials. They spend the remaining time before the meeting in the waiting room. Galaktion converses with Vakhtang and Givi, reflecting that both are brilliant individuals. While observing the waiting room, the poet is struck by its coziness and the attentive female staff member present. On the walls are portraits of Soviet leaders, including Vladimir Lenin, Nikolai Bulganin, Vyacheslav Molotov, and Stalin. He notes that Stalin's portrait is larger than the others. As he waits, his thoughts turn to current political events, particularly the fact that the Chairman of the Council of Ministers of the Soviet Union, Nikolai Bulganin, along with Nikita Khrushchev, Defense Minister Georgy Zhukov, and other top officials, are in Geneva, Switzerland, attending a summit of the leaders of four states. Galaktion feels positively about this political event and thinks that even in the government's waiting room, one can sense an atmosphere of fostering peace and friendship among nations.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 33-34; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 150.

1955

July 26

He is preparing for his trip to Borjomi and Meskheti-Javakheti, trying to complete all the tasks that must be addressed before his departure.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 33; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 150.

1955

July 27

At seven in the morning, Vakhtang Gurgeniḏze picks him up by car, and together they head to the railway station, where they meet Germane Marshania, the manager of the books and magazines kiosk. Vakhtang Gurgeniḏze searches for historian Givi Kiguradze, who is supposed to travel with them. Galaktion stands in front of the station, observing his surroundings. He reflects on how much the station has changed, feeling that the atmosphere now is entirely different from what it was ten years ago. The abundance of travellers also catches his attention. As he thinks about Meskheti-Javakheti, lines from his poem "My Native Land" come to mind: "Racha-Lechkhumi is far away, close by – Meskheti-Javakheti". Once Givi Kiguradze arrives, they board the general carriage of the train and depart for Borjomi at ten o'clock.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 33; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 150.

Note: The lines from Galaktion's poem "My Native Land!" are quoted with slight modifications: "Here is Racha-Lechkhumi, there is Meskheti-Javakheti".

1955

July 27

While traveling by train from Tbilisi to Borjomi, Galaktion observes the passengers, counting their numbers. He notes that there are eighty people in the carriage, fifteen of whom are reading either a Book or a newspaper. Among the readers are men, women, and elderly individuals. He recalls an event from 1907 when his uncle, Iustine Tabidze, brought a newspaper to him at the Rioni station containing news of Ilia Chavchavadze's assassination. At that time, only one person in the entire carriage was reading, though everyone was deeply curious about the information in the newspaper. Simultaneously, the poet gazes out of the train window, observing the scenery. When they pass through Mtskheta, he glances at his watch and realizes that it took the express train only twenty-five minutes to reach Mtskheta.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 34; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 151.

1955

July 27

While traveling by train, Galaktion speaks with Givi Kiguradze, a university associate professor and historian. Kiguradze recalls an article published in 1937-38 by Shalva Radiani, in which he expressed admiration for Kale Peodosiashvili's lines: "I will kill my mother, I will strangle my father, if the revolution commands me to!"

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 26; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 148;

Note: In the source, Kale Peodosiashvili's full name is not mentioned.

1955

July 27

While in Borjomi, Galaktion notes in his notebook the words of a local doctor about the habits of pigeons. According to the doctor, pigeons never settle in another's nest and never pair with another's mate.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 23; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 147.

1955

July 27

He talks to Alexandre Gomiashvili about the nuances of Book printing. During the conversation, it becomes clear that Alexandre noticed a printer's error at the printing house. This observation leads Galaktion to reflect on the importance of always double-checking the printer's copy. He also recalls that Shalva Radiani distrusts printers and submits manuscripts directly to the printing house instead of typed copies. Galaktion considers Shalva's approach to be correct, as it reduces the likelihood of errors in the text.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 23; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 147.

1955

July 27

At two in the afternoon, Galaktion arrives in Borjomi with Vakhtang Gurgeniḏze and Givi Kighuradze. They head toward the Culture House. The poet is dissatisfied with the indifferent reception by the staff and notes in his notebook that in Borjomi, “they don’t know how to say hello”. He is particularly surprised by the attitude of one staff member, nicknamed “Sheri”, who seems perpetually displeased, even with his own nickname. Galaktion learns that the Culture House in Borjomi employs a total of twenty-nine people. He reflects that the same number might work at the Shuamta Culture House, which will bear his name. Among the local staff, he discovers one person from Imereti – a woman who relocated from Chiatura in 1944. The Culture House staff hosts the visitors, but Galaktion feels that caution is necessary, especially regarding food and drink. While he ponders this, another person joins the conversation without greeting anyone, begins talking directly, and then leaves just as abruptly. The poet is astonished by the stranger’s lack of manners. Additionally, he feels annoyed with Vakhtang and Givi, who have left their bags with him and gone off somewhere. This forces Galaktion to stay in the room and watch over their belongings. He recalls that Vakhtang and Givi had done the same thing earlier that morning at the Tbilisi railway station, leaving their bags with him while they disappeared elsewhere.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 35; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 151.

1955

July 27

Galaktion is at the Borjomi Culture House, from where he, Vakhtang Gurgeniḏze, and Givi Kighuradze are scheduled to depart for Samtskhe-Javakheti later in the day. As he observes his surroundings, he notices that the Culture House displays only a portrait of Vladimir Mayakovsky, with no portraits of Georgian writers. However, there is a large statue of Shota Rustaveli in the building. The poet speaks with representatives of the Culture House, who request that he hold a meeting with the local community in Borjomi upon his return from Samtskhe-Javakheti. Based on his overall impression of the Culture House staff, Galaktion is sceptical about this proposal. He doubts that the same people who greeted him so indifferently just hours earlier would genuinely want to organize and successfully host an event dedicated to him in a few days’ time.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 35-36; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 151.

1955

July 27

Together with Vakhtang Gurgeniḏze and Givi Kighuradze, Galaktion explores Borjomi Park while waiting for a car arriving from Akhalkalaki. Locals explain that Akaki Tsereteli once visited this park and even wrote a poem inspired by it. The car is delayed, and it is already night when the poet and his companions bid farewell to the Borjomi residents and set off for Akhalkalaki. Galaktion feels regret that they left many interesting places unexplored. Passing through Akhaltsikhe, the poet notices familiar posters announcing his visit to Samtskhe-Javakheti. Around midnight, they leave Akhaltsikhe. From the car, Galaktion gazes into the distance and observes the landscape changing: treeless plains replace the beautiful scenery of the Borjomi Gorge.

However, it is difficult for him to discern the surroundings clearly, as the new moon provides only faint light, making it impossible to fully perceive the natural beauty. As the asphalt road ends, the car struggles to move forward. Finally, they reach Akhalkalaki and settle into the “Javakheti” hotel, which lacks even basic amenities. There are no separate rooms for guests, no electric lighting, and the room is dimly illuminated by a kerosene lamp. Galaktion shares the space with three other people and finds it hard to sleep, disturbed by both the sound of their snoring and a peculiar smell in the room.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 36-37; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 152.

1955

July 28

Galaktion is in Akhalkalaki with Vakhtang Gurgenuidze and Givi Kighuradze. He wakes up earlier than anyone else, leaves the hotel room, and steps outside to wash up in the yard. He enjoys the cold water and tries to adopt an optimistic mindset, convincing himself that the day will be splendid. Observing the nature, weather, and surroundings, he remembers that Vakhtang and Givi are still sleeping, as they were all very tired the previous day. His curiosity intensifies, wondering what the day will bring, where they will go, and what they will see. At the same time, he counts the remaining days of July and realizes that in three days, it will already be August 1 – the first day of summer’s last month. Reflecting on summer, he finds it remarkable that despite it being late July, the weather is so cold. A little later, Vakhtang and Givi also wake up, join him in the yard, and start discussing the people of Akhalkalaki. Givi remarks that the locals, mostly Armenians, are poor and, at the same time, very uncultured. Vakhtang responds that Georgians left this region long ago, moving toward western Georgia. They discuss the families that once lived there and recall the Mikeladze family and a line from a folk verse about their poverty: “Mikeladze held a wedding with a charred chicken”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 38-39; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 152-153.

1955

July 28

Galaktion reflects on the work of the Writers’ Union’s Poets’ Section and begins drafting a plan for the events the section should organize under his leadership from early September to January. He aims to hold four evenings each month, ensuring that sixteen or seventeen events are completed by the end of the year. The poet envisions the planned evenings as thematic and diverse. They could include events for the unions of artists, musicians, and architects, as well as a separate meeting for academics. He also suggests hosting poetry evenings dedicated to Armenian, Azerbaijani, and Russian literature, as well as meetings with representatives from the Ministry of Culture, Tbilisi State University, State Publishing House, and various literary circles. In Galaktion’s opinion, the Poets’ Section should not limit itself to interactions with artists based solely in Tbilisi. The events must involve the intellectual communities of Kutaisi, Batumi, Tskhinvali, and Sokhumi. He is convinced that organizing such events will require the assistance of a secretary, as there will be numerous technical issues to address during the planning and execution of these evenings.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 25; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 148.

1955

July 28

He is in Akhalkalaki with Vakhtang Gurgeniḏze and Givi Kighuradze. In the morning, they visit the District Committee, then have breakfast while discussing the local people's lifestyle and history. After breakfast, they head out to explore the sights, visiting the old church of Abuli. They take photos, observe the surroundings, and continue toward the summer pastures. Due to the poor road conditions, they frequently have to push the car uphill themselves. Skirting Abuli Mountain from the south, they are met with indescribable beauty. They visit the shepherds' settlements from the Sighnaghi district on the pastures. Galaktion is particularly fond of the blue horse owned by the brigade leader, Ilo Shikhashvili, and even rides it. The unusually cheerful poet listens to shepherds reciting his poems. They continue toward the mountains, and Galaktion notices the absence of trees in the landscape, yet the nature remains stunning. The poet also remarks on the abundance of stones in the area. Along the way, they take more photos. Soon, their car breaks down, and they borrow a truck from the shepherds to proceed. Climbing a steep mountain, they finally reach the lake, where Galaktion is overwhelmed with amazement and admiration. The sight of the vast, beautiful lake deeply moves him. As he surveys the surrounding area, he notices villages in all four directions, unlike any he has seen before – houses with flat roofs and courtyards devoid of vegetation. The folk ballad "The Youth of Tavparavani" comes to his mind. He realizes that neither Ilia, Vazha, nor Akaki – or any of his contemporary writers – had ever visited Lake Paravani. He understands that he is the first among renowned poets to see this extraordinary place.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 42-43; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 153-154. V. Gurgeniḏze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 216- 219.

1955

July 28

At Lake Paravani, a feast is laid out. Galaktion becomes intrigued by the shepherds' work and way of life, learning that some of them have spent fifty years on the pastures. The poet's attention is drawn to details of their daily lives: staves, woollen cloaks, papakhas, tents, dogs, and the way the sheep startle and flee at the sight of a vehicle. Together with Vakhtang Gurgeniḏze and Givi Kighuradze, the poet distributes magazines, newspapers, and books to the shepherds, noticing their delight. They take photos, and one young shepherd surprises Galaktion with his knowledge of his poems. In response, Galaktion promises to write poems as numerous as their flock of sheep. As evening approaches, the poet observes the surrounding nature, gazing at the mountains, fields, and springs, overwhelmed by their beauty and grandeur. He thinks to himself that he will never forget the stone-covered landscapes of Meskheta-Javakheti. His thoughts turn to the historical past of the area, and he feels sorrow that where Georgia once flourished, Georgians are now a minority, with only six Georgian villages remaining. The shepherds light a fire in a stone hut. Galaktion and his companions move into the warmth and continue their conversations with the shepherds. They discuss Sul Khan-Saba's words: "In Meskheti-Javakheti live people similar to those of Kartli, but wild". It is revealed that the word "wild" (gakhona) carries a derogatory connotation. Vazha-Pshavela's advice on the importance of education is also recalled. Galaktion remarks that it would be wonderful if this region were transformed into a global destination for relaxation and recreation. He promises the shepherds that upon returning to Tbilisi, he will tell the scientists at the Academy of Sciences about this area and suggest they visit with their families – to both rest and study the region. As night falls, the visitors bid farewell to the shepherds and return to Akhalkalaki.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 43-45; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 154. V. Gurgenidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 216- 219.

1955

July 28

After visiting Tavparavani and meeting the shepherds, Galaktion returns to the centre of Akhalkalaki at night with Vakhtang Gurgenidze and Givi Kighuradze. Locals invite the visitors to dinner at the home of a District Committee employee. After the meal, they return to the "Javakheti" hotel. Before falling asleep, the poet reflects on the day's impressions – the places he saw, the people he met, and the mountains, the likes of which he had never encountered before. In his view, no other mountains could surpass these in beauty. He tries to capture his emotions in his notebook, recording the day's events and his personal impressions.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 44-45; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 154.

1955

After July 28

He receives a letter from Lavrenti Dzidziguri, who is upset that he asked Galaktion for a 200-ruble loan in a note but the latter never even responded. He asks him to return Galaktion's picture, which the poet had borrowed from him on the condition that he would give it back.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-229; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 273.

1955

July 29

By eleven in the morning, Galaktion is at the "Javakheti" hotel, reflecting on the events of the previous day while thinking about future plans. He is in good spirits and realizes that such an elevated mood is a rare occurrence for him. Despite some health issues, including a cold and mild heart complaints likely caused by the altitude, his mood remains unaffected. In his hotel room, he waits for Vakhtang Gurgenidze and Givi Kighuradze, who had left the hotel a few hours earlier, leaving their bags and assuring the poet they would return soon – but they are still nowhere to be seen. Galaktion assumes they went to make arrangements for the next stage of their journey. He begins contemplating the problems and lives of the local population. He recalls a shepherd mentioning a disease affecting the sheep and remembers the beautiful, Eastern-style chests he saw during his exploration of Akhalkalaki, crafted by a local carpenter. As noon approaches, Vakhtang and Givi have yet to return. Galaktion continues his musings about Javakheti and notes a rhymed couplet in his notebook: “From the peak, I glanced down at the shepherd: Now look down, there – Javakheti!”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 46-48; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 155-156.

1955

July 29

Upon arriving at the hotel in Akhalkalaki, Galaktion steps out onto the balcony and begins writing a poem in his notebook. When he returns to the room and makes some corrections to his draft, Vakhtang Gurggenidze snaps a photo of him. Galaktion then reads the newly written poem, titled “Meskheti-Javakheti”, to Vakhtang and Givi Kighuradze. Enthralled, they embrace him warmly, expressing their admiration.

Source: V. Gurggenidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 218-220.

1955

July 29

Galaktion wakes up early in the morning while his companions, Vakhtang Gurggenidze and Givi Kighuradze, are still asleep. He washes his face with ice-cold water, thinking how wonderful it would be to have such water in Tbilisi. Although he feels that he has caught a cold, he tries not to pay attention to his health. He decides to visit a pharmacy to purchase the flu remedy Kalcex. He asks a child to show him the way to the pharmacy. The child not only explains the directions but also accompanies the poet to the pharmacy. Galaktion is delighted by this gesture and reflects on how polite and kind the unfamiliar child turned out to be.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 46; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 155.

1955

July 29

As he prepares to travel to Lake Tabatskuri, the phrase “The Last Omnibus” flashes through Galaktion’s mind, unsettling him. He reassures himself that this journey will not be his last. His thoughts continue to wander, and he recalls a line from a folk poem associated with Meskheti-Javakheti: “What was I seeking in Javakheti?” He also remembers his own poems, “I Write to a Meskhetian Poet” and “The Gaze of a Meskhetian”. He thinks about the photos taken the previous day and wonders how they will turn out. Reflecting further, he realizes it has already been twenty days since he began his journey with Vakhtang Gurggenidze. Despite the short time, he acknowledges that these twenty days have brought many new experiences into his life. Mentally, he lists the places he has visited with Vakhtang. Returning to his hotel room, Galaktion contemplates how people he has met during this journey often recount stories of the Second World War. He recalls a comment by the hotel maid, who said her husband never returned from the war and was declared missing in action. While reflecting on this, he realizes it has been four days since he last read a newspaper and wonders about the outcomes of the Geneva summit of the four state leaders and how the events have unfolded. Trying to find information, he discovers that the locals know nothing about these developments.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 46-48; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 155.

Note: In the source, the phrase "The Last Omnibus" is presented in French: "Le Dernier Omnibus".

1955

July 29

After a brief rest at the hotel in Akhalkalaki, Galaktion, along with his companions, visits the Pioneer Camp in the village of Chobareti. At 4 p.m., a ceremonial meeting takes place, where the camp leader addresses the gathered audience. At the impromptu rally, Tamar Lazarashvili, the second secretary of the Akhalkalaki District Committee, delivers a speech about Galaktion's life and work. Students, Zhuzhuna Tsintsaladze and Eteri Lazarashvili, recite poems dedicated to the poet. In response, Galaktion thanks the students and reads his poem "Youth" along with his newly written "Meskheta-Javakheti". Afterward, the hosts invite the guests to a feast.

Source: V. Gurgenidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 220-221.

1955

July 29

At night, they arrive in Atskuri, where they explore the fortress and the ruins of the ancient episcopal cathedral. They recall the defeat of the Turks by King Erekle II in 1770 and the betrayal of General Totleben.

Source: V. Gurgenidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 212.

1955

July 29

In the evening, an event dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze's work takes place at the Akhalkalaki Culture House. The poet is escorted to the venue with ovations. At the event, Tamar Lazarashvili, the second secretary of the Akhalkalaki District Committee, delivers a speech. Next, Arsen Karapetyan, a philologist and teacher from the district's Georgian school, reads his poem dedicated to Galaktion, "To the Great Bard". The poet is also addressed by the director of the district's Armenian school and a tenth-grade student from the Russian secondary school. Local residents recite poems dedicated to Galaktion as well. The poet thanks the hosts, reads his own works, and promises to write an epic poem about Meskheta-Javakheti.

Source: V. Gurgенidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 221-223.

Note: Among the speakers mentioned are G. Manukiani, L. Hovanesyan, M. Nikabadze, and N. Alelishvili, about whom no additional information is available.

1955

July 29

Due to the difficult roads, they continue their journey in a so-called “Kolkhoznik”-type vehicle toward the summer pastures of the village of Arboshiki in the Tsiteltskaro district. The shepherds find Galaktion’s visit almost unbelievable and are overjoyed. The poet gets out of the vehicle and marvels at the surrounding landscape. He then expresses a desire to see the Javakheti Aragvi River and the nearby villages up close.

Source: V. Gurgенidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 221-223.

1955

July 29

They descend the mountain and arrive in the village of Aragvi, then continue toward the remote village of Khando. Galaktion recalls a verse: “The pasha descended to Khando, to the house of the good host; sometimes he eats matsoni, sometimes dosa”. Members of a local construction brigade are exploring the village. Galaktion lags behind his companions, approaches a threshing floor, stands on a pile of straw, and circles around it, observing the oxen at work. When Vakhtang Gurgенidze joins him, Galaktion requests that they sing the song “Kalospiruli”. Gurgенidze seizes the moment to take a photograph of the scene.

Source: V. Gurgенidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 224-225.

1955

July 29

After visiting Khando and other villages, they rest in Akhalkalaki before continuing their journey toward the episcopal cathedral of Kumurdo in Samtskhe-Javakheti. Galaktion silently walks around the ruins of the cathedral, his heart aching at the sight of this ancient monument left in such neglect. He resolves to write about it upon his return to Tbilisi.

Source: V. Gurgенidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 224-225.

1955

July 29

After visiting Kumurdo, they travel to the village of Kartsakhi, located near the Turkish border. They explore the village’s lake and are warmly welcomed by the local residents and Georgian border guards. Tamar Lazarashvili, the second secretary of the Akhalkalaki District Committee, speaks by phone with the head of the border detachment, informing him of Galaktion’s visit and requesting permission to approach the border. Shortly after, the border commander arrives, carrying books in hand. One Book features Galaktion's photo and his poems in Russian, while the other is a Russian literature anthology for school students, which includes a section about Galaktion Tabidze's life and work. This recognition leaves a profound impression on the poet.

Source: V. Gurgенidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 225-226.

1955

July 27-30

Inspired by the stunning landscapes of the Borjomi Gorge, Galaktion writes the poem "Borjomi Gorge".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 51; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 157-158.

1955

July 30

After leaving Kartsakhi, they visit the village of Okami, home to Georgians resettled from the nearby village of Kalda. At the village spring, Galaktion and his companions listen to locals recount the tragic history of the region. Moved to tears, Galaktion bids farewell to the shepherds and enters the village. There, they meet residents working in the fields to harvest their crops. Galaktion speaks with Levan Maisuradze, the leader of the youth brigade, and engages in conversation with the village's young people.

Source: V. Gurgенidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 227-228.

1955

30 July

From the hotel in Akhalkalaki, they set out toward Vardzia. Along the way, they stop to rest at the ancient fortress city of Khertvisi. They visit the Tsunda Church and the village of Nakalakari, as well as the ruins of Tmogvi Fortress on the left bank of the Mtkvari River, the Vani caves, and gradually approach Vardzia.

Source: V. Gurgенidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 230-232.

1955

July 30

They ascend a narrow path and almost completely explore the Vardzia complex. Afterward, they descend and have lunch by the banks of the Mtkvari River. Following the meal, they head toward Vakhtang Gurgенidze's native village of Saro. Galaktion becomes interested in the village's history and listens to a local legend about Shota Rustaveli. At 7 p.m., a meeting dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze is held in the village club. The event is opened by Arsen Aspanidze, followed by Vakhtang

Gurgenidze, who delivers a speech and recites the poet's poem "Why Is Georgia Called the Land of Poets?" The audience greets the poet with a standing ovation. Next, Givi Kighuradze reads Galaktion's poems. At the end of the meeting, the guest thanks the hosts, and they dine at Arsen Aspanidze's home. During the meal, the host, acting as toastmaster, recounts the tragedy of his family and the attacks on the region's population by Turkified Meskhetians in the 1920s. Galaktion responds, sharing that the Tabidze family also originates from Meskheta.

Source: V. Gurgenidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 235-239.

1955

July 30

He reflects on his journey through Meskheta-Javakheti, attempting to transform his emotions into poetic expression. He begins working on the poem "Meskheta-Javakheti", composing several stanzas.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 52, 55-56; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 158-161.

1955

July 30 or later

He writes a poem "Vardzia".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 62; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 162;

1955

July

He is pleased to have visited his native region in the month of July. In his notebook, he writes a note emphasizing that traveling holds great significance.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 145;

1955

July

He writes a poem "To a Fellow Poet" ("If You Are a Champion of Poetry").

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 20; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 146;

1955

July

He writes a humorous, untitled poem, "The Broom of the Writers' Union", in which he expresses a sharply negative attitude toward prose writers.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 147-148.

August

1955

Until August 1

He is troubled by joint pain, particularly in the knees, which intensifies when walking or sitting down. He ascends stairs easily but has difficulty descending.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 141.

1955

August 1

From the Aspanidze family home, they travel toward Aspindza. Galaktion asks the driver to drive slowly so he can better observe the surroundings. Near the ruins of a deserted village called Khvilisha by the Mtkvari River, they come across the remnants of a church, and Galaktion listens to a legend associated with the village. Together with his companions, he recalls the battle fought in this area in 1700 by King Erekle II, when the victorious king decapitated the Turkish commander, Kohta Beladi, in single combat. Afterward, they explore the Aspindza baths on the left bank of the Mtkvari before descending into Aspindza itself.

Source: V. Gurgenedze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 239-240.

1955

August 1

In Aspindza, accompanied by local leaders, they tour the district centre, take photos in the garden of the Cultural Center, and climb Aspindza Fortress. After a break, they bid farewell to their hosts and, joined by the chairman of the District Executive Committee, L. Isakadze, set off toward Akhaltsikhe. On the way, they stop at the village of Rustavi, halfway between Aspindza and Akhaltsikhe. Galaktion suggests to Isakadze that a statue of Shota Rustaveli be erected at the entrance to the village. They then get back into the car and continue toward Akhaltsikhe. Near the approaches to the village of Minadze, they pause to admire the view of Sapara Monastery, the ancestral seat of the Atabegs of Samtskhe. However, due to the lack of a motorable road, they are unable to visit the monastery and proceed to Akhaltsikhe.

Source: V. Gurgenedze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 240-242.

1955

August 1

They arrive in Akhaltsikhe, rest in the city garden, visit the regional history museum, and explore the city's ancient district, Rabati Fortress. They then set off toward Adigeni, discussing the past and present of the small Georgian population in the Samtskhe-Javakheti region along the way.

Source: V. Gurgenedze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 244.

1955

August 1

They arrive in Adigeni, where at 12 o'clock, the district leadership and local residents welcome Galaktion in the district centre. Later, on the road from Adigeni toward Adjara, they stop at a beautiful spot called Tsivtskaro, where a lunch is arranged in his honour. After the gathering, the poet thanks the hosts.

Source: V. Gurgенidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 244.

1955

August 1

After lunch at Tsivtskaro, Galaktion Tabidze and his companions visit Zarzma Monastery. Galaktion recalls "The Life of Serapion of Zarzma", the inscription of Ioane, son of Sula, the builder of the church's chapel, and reverently examines the ancient carvings. At his request, Vakhtang Gurgенidze takes a photo of him against the backdrop of the monastery ruins near the statue of a horse.

Source: V. Gurgенidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 245.

1955

August 1

The leadership of Adigeni suggests visiting Abastumani, and the poet, along with his companions, agrees to go. By 7 p.m., they arrive in Abastumani and tour the health sanatoriums. Abastumani reminds the poet of Lado Asatiani, who spent much time there due to his incurable illness.

Source: V. Gurgенidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 246.

1955

August 1

Galaktion is deeply impressed by the mountain astrophysical observatory perched at an altitude of 1.700 meters on Mount Kanobili. The young scientists warmly welcome the guest and, as night falls, allow him to observe celestial bodies through the telescope.

Source: V. Gurgенidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 246.

1955

August 1

At midnight, Galaktion and his companions arrive in Borjomi. The hotel is overcrowded, and the district leadership makes no effort to arrange their accommodation. As a result, Vakhtang Gurgенidze takes them to his parents' home. Galaktion enjoys the warm hospitality of the hosts and feels comfortable and well-received.

Source: V. Gurgenidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 246.

1955

August 2

In the morning, Galaktion explores the surroundings near the Gurgenidze family's home in Borjomi and wonders why the street has not been named after Meskheti-Javakheti, given the origins of its residents. Vakhtang Gurgenidze's father tells him that when the family still lived in the village of Saro, they had an ancient handwritten copy of "The Knight in the Panther's Skin", which was stolen by a family acquaintance who later sent sheep in exchange. During breakfast, the table is set, and the hosts are surprised that Galaktion does not drink. The poet explains that he does not like to drink wine while traveling. He shares his impressions of the journey and joins the hosts in singing the Meskhetian version of "Mravalzhamieri" (Many years of life). A little later, he steps into the terrace and writes the poem "The Meskhetian Oak" in his notebook.

Source: V. Gurgenidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 246.-247.

1955

August 2

In the afternoon, Galaktion bids farewell to the Gurgenidze family and, along with his companions, visits the Borjomi Regional Museum, the district library, a bookstore, and the Likani Sanatorium. He then rests in a room prepared for him at the "Borjomi" hotel.

Source: V. Gurgenidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 248.

1955

August 2

At 9 p.m., a meeting is held at the district's Culture House, taking on a festive atmosphere. The head of the cultural department opens the evening, followed by a discussion of Galaktion's works. Students and schoolchildren deliver welcome speeches. During the meeting, it is decided that the Borjomi Children's Library will be named after Galaktion Tabidze. At the end, Galaktion thanks the participants and recites his poems: "To Revolutionary Georgia", "Meskheti-Javakheti", and "The Borjomi Oak". Following the meeting, a concert and dinner are held. They spend the night at the hotel.

Source: V. Gurgenidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 248-250.

Note: Among the speakers mentioned are V. Lomidze and A. Kachkachishvili, about whom no additional information is available.

1955

After August 2

After the trip to Vardzia, his health deteriorates, and his joint pain intensifies.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 141.

1955

August 3

In the morning, he departs from Borjomi toward Tbilisi. Near Gori, he and his companions visit archaeological excavations before continuing their journey to Tbilisi.

Source: V. Gurgenidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 250.

1955

August 6

He arrives in Adigeni and carefully explores the Zarzma Monastery. At 8 p.m., a meeting is held where he recites the poem "Meskheti-Javakheti".

Source: P. Nishnianidze, From Galaktion's Life, Tbilisi, 1960, p. 167.

1955

August 6

He buys 2,000 photo frames of various sizes.

Source: Nodar Tabidze's record, GTDA, №1456, p.1.

Dating: The time is referenced in Nodar Tabidze's August 8 entry.

1955

August 8

He shows his nephew, Nodar Tabidze, photos taken in the village and notices that Andro Tevzadze appears in more of them than he does. He is generally interested in photography and suggests to Nodar that they buy a camera and set up a laboratory in Tskneti.

Source: Nodar Tabidze's record, GTDA, №1456, p.1.

1955

August 8

On the 50th anniversary of Vazha-Pshavela's death, he ascends to Mtatsminda and, together with Giorgi Leonidze, lays a wreath on the poet's grave. They then take photographs at the graves of Vazha, Akaki, Ilia, Baratashvili, and Griboedov.

Source: P. Nishnianidze, Galaktion's Several Meetings with the Working People of Georgia, Tbilisi, 1960, p. 22–23.

1955

Until August 9

He reflects on the evening dedicated to the 40th anniversary of Vazha-Pshavela's death, which, as the head of the Poets' Section of the Writers' Union, he had planned for July 23 but was unable to organize at the scheduled time. Now, he intends to reschedule the event for August 9. He plans to directly participate in organizing the exhibition, selecting appropriate themes and subtopics himself. Additionally, he intends to familiarize himself with the scientific literature available on Vazha-Pshavela, reading essays on topics such as: the portrayal of the hero in Vazha-Pshavela's works, the relationship between character and theme, the contemporary village and its population in Vazha's time, and the foundations of social relations in the 19th and 20th centuries. He also wishes to select texts from existing literature about the writer for the exhibition. Furthermore, in his notebook, he notes the issues that need to be resolved for the event.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 27; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 149.

1955

August 9

On the 40th anniversary of Vazha-Pshavela's death, Galaktion Tabidze and Giorgi Leonidze bring a large wreath of fresh flowers with the inscription "Vazha-Pshavela from Georgian writers" to the writer's grave at the Mtatsminda Pantheon. Other writers and the staff of the Vazha-Pshavela Library also adorn the grave with flowers.

Source: MGL, t-659, "Yesterday on Mtatsminda", newspaper Komunisti, August 10, 1955, №188, p. 3.

1955

August 9

Together with Giorgi Leonidze, he lays a wreath on Vazha-Pshavela's grave on Mtatsminda. He then separates from the group of writers, heads to Baratashvili's grave, asks Vakhtang Gurgeneidze to take a photo, and tells him that Galaktion's grave will be located at this spot.

Source: V. Gurgeneidze, Galaktion in Pshavi, Tbilisi, 1994, p. 3-4.

Note: Four years later, he is indeed buried near Nikoloz Baratashvili.

1955

August 10

The poem "The Borjomi Oak" is published in the newspaper Komunizmis Droshit.

Source: Newspaper Komunizmis Droshit, 1955, №94, p. 2.

1955

August 10

The newspaper Komunisti publishes a group photo of writers and the intellectuals of Tbilisi gathered at the poet's grave at the Mtatsminda Pantheon, taken by Vladimir Ginzburg on the 40th anniversary of Vazha-Pshavela's death. The photo features: Galaktion Tabidze, Giorgi Leonidze, Pavle Ingorokva, Shalva Radiani, Revaz Margiani, Alexandre Shanidze, and others.

Source: MGL, t-659, "Yesterday on Mtatsminda", newspaper Komunisti, August 10, 1955, №188, p. 3.

1955

August 10

He reads the newspaper Komunisti, marking the information printed for the 40th anniversary of Vazha-Pshavela titled “Yesterday at Mtatsminda”, and the article about the poet Andro Tevzadze published in the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo.

Source: MGL, t-659, newspaper Komunisti, August 10, 1955, №188, p. 1.

1955

August 10

The poem “Meskhети-Javakheti” is published in the newspaper Oktombris Droshit.

Source: Newspaper Oktombris Droshit, 1955, №95, p. 2.

1955

August 12

Vakhtang Gurgენიdze agrees with Galaktion that they will travel to Dusheti and Charkhali on the 50th anniversary of Vazha-Pshavela’s death. The poet arranges the meeting at 10 a.m. at Marjanishvili Square. Critic Lavrosi Kalandadze will also accompany them on the trip.

Source: V. Gurgენიdze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 251.

1955

August 12

A review by Lavrosi Kalandadze titled “On Galaktion’s Chosen One” is published in Literaturuli Gazeti.

Source: A. Ratiani, Recollections about Galaktion, Magazine Mnatobi, 1996, № 9-10, p. 137

1955

After August 12

He reviews the Russian magazine Khalkhta Megobreba and notes Shota Lomsadze’s presentation “The Theme of the Riverside in Galaktion Tabidze’s Work”.

Source: MGL, t-703, magazine “Дружба Народов”, 1955, August, №8, Moscow.

1955

August 14

In the newspaper Komunisti, a letter by Lavrosi Kalandadze titled “Galaktion Tabidze’s Poetry” is published, responding to the poet’s 1954 collection. The critic regards this Book as an important event for Georgian literature but expresses some reservations about the editor. He considers it unjust that the poet’s masterpieces “What Time Is It?” and “Autumn Fragment” were excluded from the collection. Additionally, Kalandadze states that the poem “The Poem That Opens the Collection” does not belong to the set of Galaktion’s selected works. He also points out that the thematic sections are poorly chosen, and the lack of a systematic arrangement of the poems will make it difficult for the reader to form a clear understanding of the poet’s worldview evolution. Kalandadze argues that the editor should have followed a chronological principle.

Source: L. Kalandadze, Galaktion Tabidze's Poetry, newspaper Komunisti, 1955, № 192 (August 14), p. 4.

1955

August 14

At the appointed time in the morning, Vakhtang Gurgeniḏze and Lavrosi Kalandadze meet Galaktion, and they travel together in his car, with his driver Arto behind the wheel. Upon arriving in Mtskheta, they stop near Svetitskhoveli, quietly walking around the cathedral but not entering, and continue on their journey. They take a brief rest in Tsitsamuri, at the site of Ilia Chavchavadze's assassination, and discuss this crime of the century. During a break near Natakhtari, Galaktion recalls Platon Ioseliani's assessment of the history between Russia and Georgia, agreeing with his perspective. He then mentions Zakaria Chichinadze's Book on Platon Ioseliani and his phrase about how Ioseliani predicted the Russification of the Georgian people.

Source: V. Gurgeniḏze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 252.

1955

August 14

They arrive in Dusheti and settle on the second floor of the hotel, in what is called the "District Committee's" room, which causes some dissatisfaction among certain writers. Before the evening begins, they explore the district centre, the library, the summer theater, the market, and the building where Ilia Chavchavadze worked as a conciliatory judge. They then return to the hotel, go up to the balcony, and Vakhtang Gurgeniḏze takes a photo of Galaktion sitting in a chair. In the hotel, they discuss Vazha-Pshavela's life and work, as well as the tragic fate of his son, Levan Razikashvili. Galaktion expresses the view that Vazha is the Georgian Homer, although Homer can never rise to the heights of Vazha's mountains, nor can he be reduced to the level of Vazha's "tales of the wolf's cub". According to Galaktion, Vazha is both more mythical and more contemporary. He also says that his life closely resembles Vazha's. Like Vazha, who lived a life of poverty, suffering, and hunger, Galaktion feels that his own life is similarly afflicted. He even compares himself to Vazha in that both of them began their careers as educators. Galaktion states that such people, almost all of them, are unhappy in life.

Source: V. Gurgeniḏze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 252. V. Gurgeniḏze, Galaktion in Pshavi, Tbilisi, 1994, p. 5, 10. O. Tchelidze, Galaktion in Chargali, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 81;

Note: He gives Vakhtang Gurgeniḏze a copy of the photograph taken in Dusheti, with an inscription.

1955

August 14

He reads Lavrosi Kalandadze's review "On Galaktion's Selected One" with exclamations: "Come on, come on... let's make them happy, let's make them happy... people, brother, people, come on, who? Let's see!"

Source: A. Ratiani, Recollections about Galaktion, Magazine Mnatobi, 1996, № 9-10, p. 137.

1955

14 August

Teimuraz Jangulashvili dedicates him a poem titled “Chargali, August 14, 1955”.

Source: T. Jangulashvili, Galaktion Goes to Chargali, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 267-269.

Note: In his recollection, Teimuraz Jangulashvili, as an eyewitness, repeats several stories told by Vakhtang Gurgeniidze.

1955

August 14

He is at the Dusheti summer theater, where an event dedicated to Vazha-Pshavela is to take place. The poet, along with a few others, arrives at the theater before the scheduled time and takes his seat. He observes the surroundings. Soon, the theater fills with people. He is astonished by the fact that just half an hour ago there was no sign of anyone in the theater, yet now it is overcrowded. They wait for a long time for the event to begin, but the curtain does not rise. It becomes apparent that preparations for the concert are underway behind the curtain. The poet watches the curtain, which sways as someone moves behind it. The audience waits, growing increasingly impatient. This situation disturbs Galaktion, and he is confused about why the organizers are behaving this way, why they are making people wait, and why everything cannot be done on time.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 168.

1955

August 14

At the Dusheti summer theater, during the creative evening dedicated to the 40th anniversary of Vazha-Pshavela’s death, Galaktion is dissatisfied with many aspects of the event. Above all, he is frustrated by the fact that some people are reading long, drawn-out poems in the Pshavian style, including a person invited by Giorgi Leonidze, whose performance drags on for too long. He is also irritated by the content of a poem read by a local teacher, as the author implicitly portrays Akaki Tsereteli as an enemy of Vazha, which he finds distasteful. He feels that the evening took on a provincial tone, which, in his view, was not fitting for the occasion. While listening to Beso Zhghenti’s lecture, Galaktion is left with the impression that Zhghenti characterized Vazha as completely detached from contemporary poetry. He also critiques the lecture for being overly long. Additionally, he is dissatisfied with Giorgi Leonidze’s introductory speech, believing it fails to capture the scope of Vazha’s work and his connection to the people. Galaktion finds Siko Pashalishvili’s speech normal and enjoys the poem read by Otar Chiladze. He also appreciates Andro Tevzadze’s presentation and has a positive impression of Nazi Kilasonia, who read Vazha’s poem “The Eagle”. Among the local speakers, the poet is drawn to a young woman and a man who had approached him earlier at the Writers’ Union with a notebook of poems for review. Reflecting on his own performance, he believes it was exceptionally good, considering the text he read – a part of the poem “Conversation about Lyrics” (“I remember my childhood; / Far away, very far, beyond the swamps...”) – was well chosen. He notices that the audience responded well to his reading, but despite this, they did not stand up. Galaktion views this, along with other factors, as a sign of the audience’s lack of culture. He observes that beyond the summer theater, in the garden, children have climbed trees and are listening to the speakers. He believes they are far superior to the audience. He also watches the choir of singers and dislikes their musical performances, though he notes that they are wearing beautiful costumes.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 8, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 166.

1955

August 14

After the event dedicated to Vazha-Pshavela in Dusheti, a festive dinner is held that lasts until dawn. Giorgi Leonidze refers to Galaktion as the first poet of then-Soviet Georgia, toasts to him, approaches, and hugs him. Gurgenidze captures this moment in a photograph. Galaktion is pleased with the guests at the dinner, but he finds the toasts silly and dislikes that many important individuals were left out of the toasts. The poet is also irritated by the fact that a fan of Giorgi Leonidze’s works, a certain neighbour, sings “Don’t Worry, Mother”. While at the table, Galaktion converses with the local residents and other invited guests. He meets a respected person and learns that the sculptor Bichina Avalishvili is supposedly advised by this man on which trees to use for sculptures. Galaktion tells him that Avalishvili plans to make a sculpture of him, and the person promises to find a beautiful tree for the sculptor. During the dinner, Galaktion sings “Mravalzhamieri” (Many years of life) with the Dusheti district’s choir, and the audience is delighted. Alexandre Gomiashvili, who is also present, comments that the first voice belongs to Galaktion, as he is the first poet. Hearing these words, the poet recalls that he had heard similar praise from Gomiashvili before. Specifically, once in front of an audience, Gomiashvili had declared that there is only one National Poet – Galaktion. The poet realizes that, both then and now, Gomiashvili was intentionally saying these words for his benefit.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 12-14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 166. V. Gurgenidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 252. V. Gurgenidze, Galaktion in Pshavi, Tbilisi, 1994, p. 5, 10.

1955

August 14

While in Dusheti, Galaktion speaks with the local residents. They tell him that there is a place nearby called Platonian Land, named after Platon Ioseliani, who lived there. They also remind him that Ilia Chavchavadze served in Dusheti and wrote “Scenes with the Conciliatory Judge” there. The poet also meets some locals from Vani, who complain to him about the lack of culture among the local population.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 167.

1955

August 14-15

During the celebrations of Vazha-Pshavela's anniversary, there is a discussion about the existence of two Galaktions – one from before the revolution and one from after the revolution. Galaktion remarks that this idea was invented by Besarion Zhghenti, questioning how it is possible for one person to be “two poets”.

Source: V. Gurgenidze, Galaktion in Pshavi, Tbilisi, 1994, p. 5

Note: He refers to Besarion Zhghenti as “Besia”.

Dating: According to the author of the recollection, the event took place during Galaktion's travels to Dusheti and Pshavi.

1955

August 15

He reflects on the event held the previous day, dedicated to Vazha-Pshavela. He recalls the interesting conversations, people, and events, and notes them down in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 166.

1955

August 15

In the morning, they continue their journey toward Charkhali. There, they meet young writers who have arrived from Tbilisi, and they surround Galaktion, offering their admiration. The ceremonial rally is led by the chairman of the district executive committee. Speakers at the rally include Akaki Shanidze, Alexandre Begiashvili, and the participants from the previous day's event in Dusheti. In the evening, Vazha's widow, Tamar Didibashvili, attends the gathering, and photographs are taken. Galaktion believes the photos will turn out beautifully, especially the one with Tamar Didibashvili, as he is certain it will be a particularly important photo-document.

At the event, poems dedicated to the poet are read by Vazha's son, Vakhtang Razikashvili, his grandson, Alexandre Razikashvili, and Bachana's son, Pavle Razikashvili. Galaktion reads his own poem dedicated to Vazha. A concert follows, which is concluded by a grand feast laid out in the meadow. Galaktion does not stay long at the table and, together with Vakhtang Gurgenidze and Lavrosi Kalandadze, soon sets off back to Tbilisi. On the way, he sits quietly, speaking only to himself: “Freedom to the people... the people, our people”.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 167-168; V. Gurgenidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 258-266. O. Tchelidze, Galaktion in Chargali, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 81. V. Gurgenidze, Galaktion in Pshavi, Tbilisi, 1994, p. 25-27. A. Ratiani, Recollections about Galaktion, Magazine Mnatobi, 1996, № 9-10, p. 137;

1955

August 15 or later

He writes several versions of the humorous, untitled poem “Eternal with Memories”. The poem is addressed to Giorgi Leonidze, who, according to the poem, constantly held a wine goblet in one hand and a turkey’s wattle in the other while in Chargali.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 15-16; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 167-168.

1955

After August 15

After returning from Chargali, he learns that the cars of two other writers, Karlos Kaladze and Alexandre Gomiashvili, were damaged in Dusheti. Additionally, two people traveling by bicycle fell into a ravine. The accident and misfortune caused significant chaos on the road. Upon hearing this, he reflects on how well he and a few others acted by returning to Tbilisi in time, as in the general disorder, no one knows what might have happened to them.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 173.

1955

After August 15

He examines the photos taken during the events dedicated to Vazha-Pshavela on August 14-15, observing how each person appears in the pictures. He then notes in his notebook a list of individuals who, in his opinion, stand out in the photos. Among those listed are: Vakhtang Gurgенidze, Vasil Gvetadze, Alexandre Shanidze, Lavrosi Kalandadze, Nodar Gureshidze, Vakhtang Razikashvili, Vano Tsulukidze, Alexandre Begiashvili, Teimuraz Jangulashvili, and others.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 45; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 181.

Note: In the source, Vakhtang Gurgенidze, Vasil Gvetadze, Alexandre Shanidze, Lavrosi Kalandadze, Nodar Gureshidze, Vakhtang Razikashvili, Vano Tsulukidze, Alexandre Begiashvili, and Teimuraz Jangulashvili are mentioned by their initials and last names.

1955

August 16

He is in Tskneti. It is raining heavily. He gazes at the rainy landscape while beginning to write a humorous, untitled poem called “Let’s Buy a Sofa” in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 20-23; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 171-173.

1955

Until August 19

A creative evening dedicated to Galaktion’s work is planned to be held in Tskneti on August 19.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 167.

1955

Until August 19

He wonders whether it is possible for the Tskneti Children's Home to be named after him. He is curious whether it is worth officially raising the issue.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 167.

1955

August 20

A meeting is held in Tskneti, at the pioneer camp located next to his house. The pioneers address him with poems and songs, electing him as an honorary pioneer, which encourages Galaktion. He gives a speech to the children and concludes the meeting with an impromptu poem, "I have much to share with you, comrades, at the railroad workers' children's pioneer camp".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198; P. Nishnianidze, Galaktion's Several Meetings with the Working People of Georgia, Tbilisi, 1960, p. 22-23.

1955

August 22

He is in Abkhazia, at the balneological resort of Avadkhara. He listens to a Russian song and notices that it is based on the motif of Akaki Tsereteli's "Suliko". The poet asks someone to write down a fragment of the song's lyrics in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 30; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 176.

1955

After August 27

He reads the 16th issue of the magazine Niangi, in which his attention is drawn to a humorous article about the unmounted statues of Georgian writers, and he makes excerpts from it in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-570, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 356-357.

Dating: The magazine is signed for printing on August 27, 1955.

1955

After August 27

In his diary, he writes that the literary circle named after Galaktion Tabidze publishes documents that are very important for literary studies, entirely unknown, and of great significance for a deeper understanding of his pre-revolutionary works.

Source: MGL, d-500, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 13;

1955

August 28

Leon Bezhitashvili, a resident of Tbilisi, addresses the chairman of the Writers' Union and the editor of the Literary Gazette with a proposal to organize similar meetings between poets and readers in Georgian cities, like the one planned for September 11 at Moscow's Bookstore №18. In his opinion, during such a meeting, it would be preferable not for poets to read their own poems, but for readers to have live communication with them. At the end of the letter, the author mentions that he is personally very interested in meeting Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 179-180.

Note: In 1955, the Writers' Union was led by the First Secretary, not the Chairman, who was Irakli Abashidze. The editor of the Literaturuli Gazeti was Giorgi Natroshvili.

1955

August 28

At 10 a.m., he is at the Tbilisi City Council's Executive Committee, which he refers to as "Massachusetts", and under the common title "A Cycle of Poems: Left the House and Never Returned", He writes a poem "The Window, the Evening and the Curtain Covered with Mist...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 37; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 177-178.

1955

August 28 or later

He reflects on the plans to be implemented in the upcoming months. In his notebook, he makes a note listing the institutions where meetings organized by the Poets' Section of the Writers' Union of Georgia will be held in the fall of 1955. The list includes 31 points, which feature institutions such as the Georgian State Museum, various types of research institutes, and libraries.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 38, 40; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 178.

1955

From August 20 to August 29

In his notebook, he writes about the article "Poet's Day" published in the August 20th issue of Literaturuli Gazeti, which states that the Moscow Poets' Section has decided to organize a meeting between poets and readers in 18 bookstores across the Russian capital on September 11th. According to the article, more than 70 literary figures will participate in this event. On the designated day, the poets will sell their books in all eighteen bookstores, read their poems to the readers, and talk about the works of other poets and poetry in general. He also writes about a letter sent by Leon Bezhitashvili to the First Secretary of the Writers' Union, Irakli Abashidze, and the editor of Literaturuli Gazeti, Giorgi Natroshvili, in which he expresses his desire to hold a similar event in Georgia. Bezhitashvili is particularly interested in meeting Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 41-43; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 178-180. "Литературная газета", 1955, №99, стр. 1.

1955

August 29

He gets ready for the creative evening scheduled for September 10. He discusses the details related to the event with Tamar Gotsiridze and Pati Nishnianidze, employees of the "State Publishing House".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 44; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 180-181.

1955

August 30

He meets Irakli Abashidze, who asks him to speak at the event dedicated to David Guramishvili on October 7. Galaktion agrees. Additionally, he reflects on what Irakli Abashidze will say regarding organizing a similar "Poet's Day" in Georgia, like the one planned for September 11 at 18 bookstores in Moscow.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 45, 49; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 181, 182.

1955

Until August 31

In his notebook, he notes that 10,000 roubles have been transferred for the construction of his house in Sokhumi, and an additional 6,000 roubles still need to be added.

Source: MGL, d-344, p. 0; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 197.

1955

August 31

He calls the organization Sokhummsheni with his step-son, David Ebanoidze, to get in touch with architect Giorgi Gvatua. He doesn't meet him in person, but learns from the staff that the construction materials for his house in Sokhumi will be delivered on September 1st. He plans to check on September 3rd to see if this promise will be fulfilled.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,44, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 197.

Note: David Ebanoidze is referred to as "Dutu" in the source.

1955

August 31

He is in Tskhneti, listening to a conversation between two strangers. The dialogue catches the poet's attention due to its absurd content. One person answers the other's question about the time in a strange way, apologizing and saying that the watch is not his, but belongs to someone else. The conversation partner repeats the question, yet the first person still does not answer what time it is, only explaining the reason for not responding: he says that if it were his own watch, he would definitely tell the time, but since it belongs to someone else, he cannot give an answer.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 169.

1955

July-August

He writes a humorous untitled poem titled "Since I Bought It".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 57; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 161;

1955

August

He writes an untitled poem titled "Whatever August May Bring".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,41, p. 63; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 162;

September

1955

Until September 1

He learns about a letter from Leon Bezhitashvili, in which he addressed the First Secretary of the Writers' Union, Irakli Abashidze, and the editor of Literaturuli Gazeti, Giorgi Natroshvili, expressing his particular interest in Galaktion Tabidze and his work. He writes about this in his diary.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198.

Dating: The letter is mentioned in the September 1, 1955, entry.

1955

September 1 or earlier

He reads Otar Chkheidze's novel "Mist", in which the writer uses a Galaktionian epithet, "skeleton-like", and notes it as something "as Galaktion would say". The mention of his name in the novel excites the poet, as he sees this as a sign of universal recognition.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198. For noting: T. Doiashvili. Otar Chkheidze's Galaktion, in book: "Teary-Laughing", Tbilisi, 2013, p. 257.

Note: The title of the novel is not mentioned in the source.

1955

September 1

He plans to organize poetry evenings on September 10 and 12 at the State Publishing House and the City Council.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198.

1955

September 1

He notes in his notebook that he should meet with the sculptor Shakro Gorgadze, who works as a sculptor at the Academy.

Source: MGL, d-345, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198.

1955

September 1

He assigns Solomon Lekishvili the task of going to the City Executive Committee and handling the arrangements for his evening event with the cultural department there. He learns that cultural matters are personally handled by the deputy chairman of the Executive Committee, Boris Lomidze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198.

1955

September 1

He notes to find out in which issue of Literaturuli Gazeti Sergi Tchilaia's article was published.

Source: MGL, d-345, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198.

Note: It may refer to the information about Sergi Tchilaia's Russian-language Book "The Poetry of Galaktion Tabidze" published in the July 21, 1955 issue (№86) of Literaturuli Gazeti.

1955

September 1

He transfers 1,156 roubles to the Commercial Bank of Abkhazia.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198.

1955

September 1

He recalls the title of John Reed's novel "Ten Days That Shook the World" and thinks that the next ten days should shake not the world, but the atmosphere around him. He sets a plan for what he needs to do in the coming days. The poet's mood is positively influenced by the fact that the first autumn morning is sunny and beautiful.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198.

1955

September 1

He receives a letter from Giorgi Nazarenko, a lecturer at Taras Shevchenko University in Kyiv.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198.

Note: In the entry, Giorgi Nazarenko's name and occupation are not mentioned, nor is the letter preserved.

1955

September 1

He reads an article by Shalva Apkhaidze about Henri Barbusse published in the August 30th issue of Zarya Vostoka. He is pleased that in the article, he is mentioned as a participant in the 1935 Anti-Fascist Writers' Congress and as the National Poet of Georgia.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198.

Note: In the source, neither the article's author nor the mention of Galaktion in the article is indicated.

1955

September 1

The Ossetian poet and translator, Ilia Kachmazov, dedicates his newly published collection of verses and poems titled "Golden Mountains" with a written inscription.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198.

1955

September 1

He receives a newspaper from Kutaisi in which his poem is published. The same newspaper excerpt is sent to his wife, Nino Kvirikadze's cousin, Eteri Kvirikadze, who lives in Kutaisi.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198.

Note: In the source, Eteri Kvirikadze is mentioned only by her first name.

1955

September 1

He receives the newspaper Oktombris Droshit from Akhalkalaki, in which his poem "Meskhet-Javakheti" is published in the August 10th issue.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198.

1955

September 1

Lavrosi Kalandadze and Irakli Abashidze ask him to write a poem and prepare a speech for the anniversary event dedicated to David Guramishvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 199.

1955

September 1

He is in Tskhneti and is pleased with the good weather.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 199.

1955

September 1

In his notebook, he notes that Pati Nishnianidze wants a poetry evening to be held in Kutaisi, while Vakhtang Gurgenidze wants one in Tsiteli Tskaro, now known as Dedoplistskaro.

Source: MGL, d-345, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 199.

Note: Pati Nishnianidze and Vakhtang Gurgenidze are mentioned in the source only by their first names.

1955

September 1

He is pleased because they return the pen he thought was lost.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 199.

1955

September 1

In his notebook, he notes that on September 2nd, he is scheduled to meet Solomon Lekishvili and Misha Gotsiridze, an employee of the publishing house Saktsigni (Georgian Books).

Source: MGL, d-345, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 199.

Note: Solomon (Suliko) Lekishvili is mentioned in the source only by his first name, while Misha Gotsiridze is mentioned by his last name.

1955

September 1

He plans to continue working on the preparation and publication of the eighth volume of his collected works in an eight-volume series.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 199.

Note: In the source, the eighth volume of the collected works is referred to as "the book".

1955

September 2

He reflects that, based on the title of John Reed's novel "Ten Days That Shook the World", the planned "Ten Days That Should Shake Humanity" has begun, and a step has already been taken to fulfil the plans he set for September 1st.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 4; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 200.

1955

September 2

He tries to clarify when his poetry evening will be held at the City Executive Committee. The staff at the cultural department of the Executive Committee tell Solomon Lekishvili, to whom he had sent a letter, that they know nothing about an event related to Galaktion, and that they are only preparing for the poetry evening of Ioseb Grishashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 4; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 200.

Note: Solomon (Suliko) Lekishvili is mentioned in the source only by his first name, Suliko.

1955

September 2

He talks to Vakhtang Gurgeniḏze about his poetry evening, which is to be held in the City Executive Committee's hall. The poet insists that the event must take place on September 10th. Vakhtang Gurgeniḏze tries to resolve the issue and sends Solomon Lekishvili to the Executive Committee once again. However, Solomon is still unable to settle the matter, as the person responsible for organizing events is not available at the Executive Committee.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 5; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 200.

Note: Solomon (Suliko) Lekishvili is mentioned in the source only by his first name, Suliko.

1955

September 2

Vakhtang Gurgeniḏze makes him sign a document, according to which Galaktion's honorarium will be received by Pati Nishnianidze, as she is supposed to give three lectures at the poetry evenings.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 5; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 200.

Note: In the source, Pati Nishnianidze is mentioned only by her first name.

1955

September 2

At 3 o'clock, he goes to the Central Lecture Bureau under the Ministry of Culture and learns that Solomon Lekishvili was unable to resolve the issue of his poetry evening at the City Executive Committee. To address the matter, Vakhtang Gurgeniḏze contacts the Party Bureau of the Executive Committee and speaks with the secretary, who states that the hall is booked on their selected date, September 10, but that Galaktion's poetry evening could be held a day earlier. They agree on the date, and the event is scheduled for September 9. Galaktion is satisfied with this decision.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 5; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 200.

Note: Solomon (Suliko) Lekishvili is referred to as Suliko in the source.

1955

September 2

While at the Ministry of Culture, he examines the wall newspaper, which features a photograph of him taken on July 28 near Lake Tavparavani with shepherds. He reads the accompanying text and considers copying it.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 5; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 200.

Note: The source does not specify the location or time of the photograph, nor does it indicate that Galaktion is pictured with shepherds.

1955

September 2

He plans to schedule a poetry evening titled "The Poet's Day" for September 12, to be held at the State Publishing House Club. Misha Gotsiridze, an employee of 'Saktsigni' publishing house, promises to assist with organizational matters and, in addition, will deliver a lecture during the poetry evening. He explains to the poet that posters are unnecessary, as he will personally ensure the mobilization of the audience. According to Misha Gotsiridze, the event will be attended by 200 employees from his department alone, and an exhibition will also be arranged.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 5; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 201.

1955

September 2

Misha Gotsiridze, an employee of Saktsigni publishing house, shows him Mukhran Machavariani's 1955 collection "Poems" and mentions that he did not understand one of the poems.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 5-6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 201.

1955

September 2

Misha Gotsiridze, an employee of Saktsigni publishing house, suggests that information about the poetry evening and exhibition planned for September 12 should be published in newspapers. Galaktion believes that a well-crafted informational text is necessary and discusses the matter with Tamar Andghuladze, an employee of the Writers' Union.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 5-6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 201.

1955

September 2

In his notebook, he records that Edisher Kipiani noticed a passage in Otar Tchkhaidze's novel "Mist" where the writer mentions Galaktion.

Source: MGL, d-345, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 201. For noting: T. Doiashvili. Otar Chkhaidze's Galaktion, in book: "Teary-Laughing", Tbilisi, 2013, p. 257.

Note: The title of the novel is not mentioned in the source.

1955

September 2

In his notebook, he notes that Teimuraz Jangulashvili was very pleased to see the photograph taken on August 14 in Chargali, during Vazhaoba, featuring Galaktion and Nodar Gureshidze.

Source: MGL, d-345, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 201.

1955

September 2

In his notebook, he notes that as part of the "Evenings of Remembrance" series, Parmen Tsakheli's evening will be held on September 19.

Source: MGL, d-345, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 201.

Note: Parmen Tsakheli is referred to as Tsakheli in the source.

1955

September 2

He is pleased to learn that Academician Alexandre Tvaltchrelidze provides monthly assistance of 1,500 roubles to Tsakheli's family.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 201.

1955

September 2

He notes a list of tasks to address during the day. First and foremost, he plans to meet with Solomon Lekishvili to clarify what was resolved during his visit to the Executive Committee and whether it will be possible to hold Galaktion's creative evening and exhibition by September 10. Additionally, he wishes to meet with Vakhtang Gurgeniidze and Pati Nishnianidze, as organizing the planned evening will not be feasible without their involvement and assistance. He also intends to stop by the State Publishing House to meet with its employee Tamar Gotsiridze, with whom he will discuss the printed materials needed for the exhibition. Alongside all these tasks, he must also attend to ensuring financial stability for his family.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 160-170.

1955

September 2

Noe Sanikidze, an 80-year-old visitor from Tobanieri, comes to see Galaktion and shares that it was his father, Vasil Tabidze, who taught him to read and write. The guest expresses his sorrow over Vani's significant underdevelopment and conveys that their native region looks to the poet for help.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 201.

1955

September 3

Arriving in Tbilisi from Tskneti, he visits the City Executive Committee to check whether the announcement for his poetry evening scheduled for September 9 has been posted, as promised. He discovers that no announcement about the event has been put up by the organization. However, he does not take this to heart, reasoning that even if the announcement is made just four days before the event, it would still not be too late.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 201.

1955

September 3

He considers it especially important now to focus on the content of the poetry evening scheduled for September 9 at the City Executive Committee and to ensure the event is concluded with flair. He is undecided whether to start the necessary preparations immediately or to begin working on it two days later, on Monday. He is confident that the active involvement of Vakhtang Gurgeniidze will contribute significantly to the evening's success.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 201.

Note: Vakhtang is referred to only by his first name in the source.

1955

September 3

At the City Executive Committee, he plans to discuss the poetry evening scheduled for September 9 with Vakhtang Gurgenidze, Besarion Zhghenti, and Pierre Kobakhidze. In his notebook, he records the phone numbers of Vakhtang Gurgenidze and Besarion Zhghenti.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 201.

Note: In the source, Vakhtang Gurgenidze is mentioned only by his first name, Pierre Kobakhidze by his initials and last name, and Besarion Zhghenti first by his initials and last name, and later by his first name "Besia".

1955

September 3

He examines the hall at the City Executive Committee where his poetry evening is to be held. He is very pleased with the venue and thinks that a bouquet of flowers should definitely be placed near the podium.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 201.

1955

September 3

He is planning the evening scheduled for September 9 at the City Executive Committee hall and believes it is essential to print invitations. In his view, writers will also participate in the event.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 201.

1955

September 3

He examines old manuscripts and unexpectedly finds his own note stating that Alio Adamia, in a poem published in the newspaper Musha, called for Galaktion's execution. He is curious about the year Adamia published this poem and plans to visit the public library to find out.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 68; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 190.

1955

September 4

From the Vera Bridge (now the Galaktion Bridge) to the Cheluskinsy Bridge (now the Queen Tamar Bridge), he observes the riverbank. He is convinced that this area has a magnificent future. While strolling, he is in high spirits, as, although it is a Sunday and no workers are visible, the traces of their labour are evident everywhere. Thinking about the workers, he recalls the final passage of "Arsena's Poem" and, with some alterations, writes a line from the piece in his notebook: "My thousand roubles are embedded in a great rock on the shore!" His mood improves further, and he reflects that this day is one of those rare ten days that bring about fundamental change.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 9; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 202.

Note: In the note, the phrase from "Arsena's Poem" is quoted by the poet in an altered form.

1955

September 4

He is in Tskneti, in the Ash Tree Garden, where he writes an untitled poem, "From Our Ash Tree Forest, One Hears".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 54; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 183.

1955

September 4

In his notebook, he records an untitled poem dedicated to the 1924 uprising, "Witness to Pillage and Plunder".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 56; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 184.

1955

September 5

He learns that his poetry evening, planned for September 9 at the City Executive Committee, cannot take place because Solomon Lekishvili, entrusted by Galaktion to handle the arrangements, failed to organize it. The confusion and the need to change the date arose when it became clear that neither the Executive Committee's secretary nor its chairman was aware of the planned event. Ultimately, thanks to the active involvement of Galaktion and Pati Nishnianidze, the poetry evening is rescheduled for September 22.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 10; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 202.

Note: Solomon Lekishvili is mentioned as Suliko in the source.

1955

September 5

He discusses the inadequate attitude toward writers with Zakaria Chichinadze and Sergo Kldiashvili. They note that in Georgia, writers are not properly appreciated, and the field of literature, in general, is in decline. He wonders whether the event he has planned for September 12, "The Poetry Day", will bring any change in this regard.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 10; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 202.

1955

September 6

He writes an untitled poem "Places Where the Day".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 58, 70; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 185.

1955

September 6

He writes an untitled poem: "This once joyful..."

Source: Autographs: MGL, №7759; №590-d, p. 78; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 284.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "This Once Joyful".

1955

September 6

He is in Tskneti, where he writes an untitled poem: "The mist descends from the mountain..."

Source: Autographs: MGL, №7760; №590-d, p. 79; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 240.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "Nine Steps".

1955

September 6

He begins working on the poem "Books to the People" and writes two versions of it.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 63-66; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 187-190.

1955

September 6

The issue of holding Galaktion's poetry evening at the City Executive Committee remains uncertain, as the Minister of Culture, Avtandil Gunia, disapproves of the event's format - specifically, the plan for Pati Nishnianidze to deliver a lecture during the evening. Galaktion strives to ensure that the event takes place regardless, considering the Rustaveli Theatre as an alternative venue if the Executive Committee hall is unavailable.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 202-203.

1955

September 6

Galaktion blames Elguja Maghradze, an instructor from the Culture Department of the Central Committee, for the cancellation of the poetry evening planned at the City Executive Committee. Maghradze drew the attention of the Minister of Culture, Avtandil Gunia, to the fact that Pati Nishnianidze was scheduled to deliver a lecture during the event. The mention of this woman irritated the minister, leading to inquiries about her identity, and ultimately, the evening was canceled.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 202-203.

Note: In the source, Maghradze, Gunia, and Gurgenidze are referred to only by their last names.

1955

September 6

The poetry evening dedicated to Galaktion, planned at the City Executive Committee, led to a reprimand for Gurgenidze due to its format. The dissatisfaction of Minister of Culture Gunia and the Central Committee's Culture Department instructor, Maghradze, as well as the event's cancellation, stemmed from the plan for Pati Nishnianidze to deliver a lecture about Galaktion's work during the evening. When Nishnianidze learned of this, she remarked that it was likely the result of intrigues and scheming within the Writers' Union and stated she would report this confusion to the Central Committee. Gurgenidze attempted to justify himself to Zurab Akhvlediani, a representative of the Ministry of Culture, by pointing out that Galaktion himself was expected to attend Nishnianidze's lecture. Nevertheless, the evening was ultimately canceled.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 11-15; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 202-204.

Note: In the source, Maghradze, Gunia, and Gurgenidze are referred to only by their last names.

1955

September 6

He plans to hold the poetry evening at the Rustaveli Theatre instead of the Executive Committee. The theatre's director, Pavle Kandelaki, requests an official permit and a payment of 2000 roubles from the poet to organize the event.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203.

Note: Pavle Kandelaki is referred to only by his last name in the source.

1955

September 6

In his notebook, he notes that Valerian Melkadze, the Second Secretary of the Central Committee, and Givi Vardosanidze, the editor of Akhalgazrda Komunisti, have been dismissed. He wonders whether these changes might, in some way, affect the publication of the eighth volume of his collected works.

Source: MGL, d-345, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203.

Note: The source does not specify the names of the Second Secretary of the Central Committee or the editor of Akhalgazrda Komunisti.

1955

September 6

To clarify the issue regarding the eighth volume of his eight-volume work, he plans to submit a formal request to the director of the State Publishing House and the Central Committee. He is determined to meet with the Central Committee's secretary for ideology, Davit Mchedlishvili, in the coming days.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203.

Note: Davit Mchedlishvili is referred to by his last name in the source.

1955

September 6

In his notebook, he records that Sergi Tchilaia is not printing the invitation cards for the poetry evening scheduled for September 12.

Source: MGL, d-345, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203.

1955

September 6

He is irritated by the driver's behaviour, as the driver is preoccupied with trying to acquire timber and drags Galaktion along on his errands.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 12; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203.

1955

September 6

He recalls the plan he conceived at the beginning of September about ten crucial, transformative days and writes in his notebook the phrase: "10 Days That Shook Humanity".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 12; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203.

1955

September 6

He writes a poem "Return to the Shore" and its second version, titled "The Shores".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 174-176.

Note: This work, titled "Books to the People", was published in 1957 in Literaturuli Gazeti (February 22, №18).

1955

September 6-7

He is angry with Maghradze, an instructor from the Central Committee's Culture Department, who disrupted the poetry evening planned at the City Executive Committee. He wants to understand why Maghradze opposes holding his event, especially when the same venue has already hosted evenings for other poets, such as Ioseb Noneshvili and Ioseb Grishashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 15; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 204.

Note: Elguja Maghradze, Ioseb Noneshvili, and Ioseb Grishashvili are referred to only by their last names in the source.

1955

September 7

He outlines a plan for the following day: he intends to prepare and post an announcement at the Writers' Union regarding the poetry evening scheduled for September 12 at the Writers' Club. Additionally, he plans to draft an informational text for publication in the press about the same event. Moreover, he plans to write an opening speech and coordinate with the poets who are expected to participate in the evening.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 13; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203.

1955

September 7

He plans to focus on the activities of the Poetry Section within the Writers' Union during his speech at the poetry evening scheduled for September 12 at the Writers' Club. He also intends to mention the "Special Evening" dedicated to the Ossetian writer and translator Kavkazagi – Ilia Kazmachov – that this section is planning to organize.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 13; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203.

Note: In the source, Ilia Kazmachov is referred to by his pseudonym, Kavkazagi.

1955

September 7

It turns out that, at the request of Saktsigni publishing house employee Misha Gotsiridze, the event "The Poetry Day", planned for September 12, will be held not at the Printers' Club but at the Writers' Club.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 13; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203.

1955

September 7

Whether Galaktion's poetry evening, initially planned for the City Executive Committee but later considered for the Rustaveli Theatre, will take place remains uncertain. Galaktion feels it would be better to first focus on organizing the event "The Poetry Day" at the Writers' Club.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 13; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203.

1955

September 7

He cannot find the list of poets who are scheduled to perform at the event "The Poetry Day", planned for September 12.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,45, p. 13; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 203.

1955

September 8

On the stairs of the Writers' Union, he encounters Irakli Abashidze, who asks him to come to his office at one o'clock. Galaktion speculates that, since Abashidze has summoned him, it must be something serious. He notes in his notebook the possible topics of their conversation. In his view, the dialogue might concern the event dedicated to Davit Guramishvili, scheduled for October 7, or perhaps the creative evening dedicated to Galaktion, which the Lecture Bureau is planning to organize.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 83; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 194.

1955

September 8

He is at the Writers' Union, speaking with the First Secretary, Irakli Abashidze, who informs him that, by government decision, the Writers' Union will no longer be nominating Pavle Ingorokva as a candidate for membership in the Academy. Following this conversation, Galaktion concludes that Alexandre Baramidze is undeservedly prevailing in the Academy.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 83; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 195.

1955

September 8

He plans to visit the Georgian Book Trade Department on September 11 to meet with individuals involved in Book publishing. Additionally, he wants to negotiate with the department's leadership to organize an event where its employees will have the opportunity to discuss poetry with poets. He envisions this as a localized version of the large-scale event planned for September 11 in Moscow's 18 bookshops, which involves poets meeting with readers. He hopes to hold this event on September 12.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 45; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 181, 182.

1955

Until September 9

He is preparing for his creative evening scheduled for September 9, considering what needs to be arranged to ensure the event is properly conducted. He plans to draft an announcement for publication in the press and intends to coordinate with the poets and critics who are expected to speak at the evening. Additionally, he wants a stenographic record of the event to be prepared.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 170.

1955

September 9

He writes an untitled poem, "Here Once Cheerful".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 73; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 191-192.

1955

September 9

In Tskneti, he writes a poem "Discovery of 9 Steps".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 74; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 192.

1955

September 10

Boris Kandelaki gifts his Book 'Mtatsminda' with the inscription: "To the National Poet, the esteemed Galaktion Tabidze, in fond memory".

Source: GTSM, 275, Boris Kandelaki, "Mtatsminda", Tbilisi, 1955.

1955

After September 10

He reads Boris Kandelaki's book "Mtatsminda", making highlights and writes next to the table of contents the greeting from Savle Abuladze to the workers of the printed word.

Source: GTSM, 275, Boris Kandelaki, "Mtatsminda", Tbilisi, 1955.

1955

Until September 12

He writes the introductory speech for a meeting planned on September 12 between Georgian writers and employees of Saktsigni. In this speech, he discusses the general history of books and printing in Georgia. The poet's introductory speech includes an untitled poem, "I Often Remember...", which, according to Galaktion, he wrote specifically for the event.

Source: MGL, d-661, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 575-583.

Note: The untitled poem "I Often Remember..." included in the introductory speech was later titled by the poet as "Books for the People".

1955

Until September 12

He wishes to organize a meeting between writers and the employees of the State Publishing House on September 20. He considers the format of the event and notes the plan in his notebook. According to the plan, the introduction will be delivered by Galaktion Tabidze, the National Poet of Georgia. A presentation will be given by Davit Dumbadze, Deputy Director of the State Publishing House, followed by speeches from other writers and employees of the publishing house. The event is scheduled to begin at 7 PM.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 45; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 182-183.

1955

September 12

He reflects on the large-scale event dedicated to Davit Guramishvili, scheduled to take place on October 7 at the initiative of the Writers' Union. The organizers of the event are Irakli Abashidze and Sergi Tchilaia. At the request of the head of the Writers' Union, Irakli Abashidze, Galaktion is expected to participate in the event. For this reason, the poet is paying close attention to the preparation process and notes specific details about the participants in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 45; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 181.

1955

September 14

He makes a note that exactly five years have passed since the day when the seventh volume of his works was signed for printing.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-640, 94; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 67.

1955

September 15 or earlier

He hands over a portrait of himself, painted by Teodor Chudetsky, to Tamar Andghuladze, an employee of the Writers' Union.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,46, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 204.

1955

September 14-15

He plans to look for the seventh issue of the magazine Mnatobi, which contains the first part of Otar Chkheidze's novel "Mist".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,46, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 204.

1955

September 14-15

The photographer from Zarya Vostoka hands over nine photographs, which he likes very much.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,46, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 204.

1955

September 14-15

In his notebook, he records that his stepdaughter Nunu Ebanoidze's friend attended his poetry evening held at Saktsigni publishing house and took photographs of the event.

Source: MGL, d-346, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 204.

Note: Nunu is referred to only by her first name in the source.

1955

September 14-15

He seeks an artist to prepare an announcement for the event scheduled on September 20 at 7 PM. According to the text of the announcement, writers will meet with employees of the State Publishing House. The introductory speech will be delivered by Galaktion Tabidze, a report will be presented by the director of the publishing house, Davit Dumbadze, and speeches will be given by writers and employees of the publishing house.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,46, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 204.

1955

September 14-15

He plans to hand over the poem "New Shore" to one of the speakers at the event on September 20.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,46, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 204.

Note: The source does not specify the name of the speaker.

1955

September 14-15

In his notebook, he notes that Tamar Andghuladze, an employee of the Writers' Union, has agreed to participate in the poetry evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze, scheduled for September 20.

Source: MGL, d-346, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 204.

1955

September 14-15

He gets ready to celebrate the birthdays of his stepson, Davit Ebanoidze, and his son, Zurab Ebanoidze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,46, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 204.

Note: In the source, Davit and Zurab Ebanoidze are mentioned only by their first names – Dutu and Zura.

1955

September 14-15

He learns that the Minister of Culture, Avtandil Gunia, reprimanded Vakhtang Gurggenidze for filming scenes depicting Galaktion's time in Vani, and this angers him. He believes that the Minister of Culture is biased against him and is therefore siding with his adversaries.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,46, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 205.

1955

September 14-15

He writes a one-stanza, untitled satirical poem, "What Will Gunia Understand", addressed to the Minister of Culture, Avtandil Gunia.

Source: MGL, d-346, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 205.

1955

September 14-15

He withdraws 14.000 roubles from the treasury.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,46, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 205.

1955

September 14-15

In his notebook, he records the phone number of Tamar Andghuladze, an employee of the Writers' Union.

Source: MGL, d-346, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 205.

1955

September 14-15

He speaks with the writer Geno Kelbakiani, who warns him that nothing should be left at the Writers' Union because everything tends to get lost there. During the conversation, Geno Kelbakiani mentions Tamar Andghuladze, an employee of the Writers' Union, in a negative context.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,46, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 205.

Note: In the source, Tamar Andghuladze is referred to only by her first name.

1955

September 14-15

In his notebook, he records the address of the poet and historian Shota Lomadze.

Source: MGL, d-346, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 205.

1955

September 14-15

In his notebook, he notes that he gave an autograph of the poem "The Shore" to Tamar, an employee of the Writers' Union.

Source: MGL, d-346, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 205.

1955

September 14-15

In his notebook, he records the names of the warehouse manager and the foreman of the colour printing press in relation to the poetry evening scheduled for September 20 at the Writers' Club. He also notes that Shota Jijeishvili is the representative of the local trade union committee, and Davit Dumbadze is the Deputy Director of the State Publishing House.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,46, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 205.

Note: In the source, Erasti Torotadze is referred to only by his initials and last name. No additional information could be found regarding the warehouse manager, V. Meladze, or the foreman Bukhnikashvili.

1955

September 14-15

He wishes to obtain the memories of the seminarians who studied at the institution between 1908 and 1910, regarding him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,46, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 205.

1955

After September 15

He is interested in the situation in Sokhumi, at his house under construction, where the floor was supposed to be laid, the walls plastered, and the stairs built by September 15. He plans to find out what prevented these tasks from being completed on time. He also wants to clarify the issues regarding the doors and windows.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,47, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 210.

1955

Until September 16

He plans to give Eteri Shushania a photocopy of his portrait painted by Theodor Chudetsky as well as a photograph of his mother, Makrine Adeishvili. He also intends to prepare a list of books from their family library in Chkvishi, which he read in his youth, for the young researcher. During his conversation with Eter Shushania, he wishes to focus on his works written about the ruins of the Bagrati Cathedral.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,46, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 206.

1955

September 16

He calls Tamar Andghuladze and asks whether he left the portrait and the facsimile with her for the organizers of the event scheduled for September 20. He learns that they liked the manuscript and took it, but not the picture, as its size was too large for their needs.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,46, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 205.

1955

September 16

In his notebook, he notes that everyone is troubled by the fact that, due to government interference, it was not possible to nominate Pavle Ingorokva from the Writers' Union as a candidate for membership in the Academy.

Source: MGL, d-346, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 206.

Note: The issue related to Pavle Ingorokva is only briefly mentioned in the notebook entry, but a more detailed discussion is found in the entry from September 8 of the same year.

1955

September 16

He meets with Eter Shushania, who defended her dissertation in 1950 on the topic "The Poetic Development of Galaktion Tabidze" and is currently preparing a Book for publication titled "Galaktion Tabidze: Life and Works".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,46, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 206.

1955

Until September 17

He plans to meet with Shota Jijieshvili, a member of the local committee of the State Publishing House's trade union, on September 17 at 12 o'clock.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,46, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 206.

1955

Until September 17

In his notebook, he notes that the issues of the hall and the stands need to be resolved for the exhibition, and the nature of the materials to be displayed also needs to be clarified. He believes that on September 17, he will know the exact date when the exhibition showcasing his biography and works will open.

Source: MGL, d-346, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 206.

1955

September 17

He writes an untitled, one-stanza humorous poem "I Should Have Seen Lezhava Tina", dedicated to Tina Lezhava, a member of the local committee of the Poligraftrest trade union.

Source: MGL, d-346, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 206-207.

1955

September 17

He is in Tskneti with his family and is worried because his stepdaughter Nunu Ebanoidze's child, Marine, has a fever.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,46, p. 13-14; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 208.

Note: In Galaktion's notes, Nunu Ebanoidze's daughter, Marine, is referred to as "Kakina".

1955

September 18

Galaktion's wife, Nino Kvirikadze, goes to the Academy of Sciences, collects the poet's salary, and spends it all.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,37, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 99.

1955

September 18

A telephone technician is in Galaktion's apartment, attempting to fix a damaged phone line. During the process, Nino Kvirikadze insults him, calling him a "fool", which causes the frustrated man to abandon the job and leave.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,37, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 99.

1955

Until September 19

He is thinking about the events to be organized under his leadership by the Poets' Section of the Writers' Union. According to his plan, the next meeting should take place on September 19, and subsequent meetings will continue in October. He intends to organize an event in October dedicated to the 110th anniversary of the death of Nikoloz Baratashvili. He also plans to hold events celebrating the anniversaries of Sergi Meskhi and Iakob Gogebashvili in October. Additionally, he wants the Poets' Section to mark in October the 65th anniversary of Sandro Euli's birth and the 80th anniversary of Avetik Isaakian's birth with special events.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 55-56; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 184.

1955

September 19

He writes an untitled poem "This September counts the forest leaves...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №3858; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 238.

1955

September 19

The phone is not working in Galaktion's apartment, and the poet remembers that it is all his wife, Nino Kvirikadze's fault, as the day before, she had a conflict with the telephone technician.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,37, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 99.

1955

September 19

In his notebook, he notes three versions of the announcement text. They state that on September 29, a meeting between Galaktion Tabidze and the employees of the State Publishing House will take place at the Printing Word Combine's club. The event will be opened by Valerian Dolidze, the director of the Printing Word Combine, and a report on Galaktion's poetry will be delivered by Sergi Tchilaia. Writers and employees of the Printing Word Combine will also speak at the event. The evening will begin at 6 PM, and attendance will be by invitation only.

Source: MGL, d-347, p. 5-7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 208-209.

Note: According to other notes, the director of the Printing Word Combine was Sergo GrigOlya, and Valerian Dolidze was his assistant.

1955

September 19

While waiting for the bus to Tskneti at half-past ten in the evening, he writes an untitled poem, "Hope, Some Kind of Hope".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,47, p. 36; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 217.

1955

September 19 or later

For several days, Galaktion's apartment has not had electricity. In the poet's opinion, this is his wife Nino Kvirikadze's fault, as she called the electrician three times but was never home when he arrived. Additionally, she did not pay the plumber the full amount, which resulted in the unresolved issue with the bathroom's plumbing.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,37, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 99.

1955

September 19 or later

He makes a note listing the irritating actions of his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, in recent times. He is particularly troubled by the fact that she continues with intrigues and constantly ruins his mood, making it difficult for him to work. This situation is unbearable for Galaktion, as he has numerous tasks to attend to and no one to assist him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,37, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 99.

1955

September 20

In agreement with the director of the gallery, art historian Mikheil Topuria, he notes in his notebook what needs to be done to organize the exhibition showcasing his works. He wants everything related to the biography and works of the National Poet, Galaktion Tabidze, to be included in the exhibition, whether it be sculpture, painting, or graphic art. He has decided that manuscripts should be displayed on stands, as well as the covers of his publications. Materials titled "Georgian Writers on Galaktion's Works", "Russia and Foreign Countries on Galaktion", and a separate stand dedicated to "Galaktion in October" will also be featured. Additionally, the poet believes that posters and invitation cards should be printed, a guestbook should be prepared for impressions, and the exhibition hall should be equipped with radio broadcasting. According to the note, the exhibition is set to open in the first days of November. The plan is signed by Galaktion Tabidze and Mikheil Topuria.

Source: MGL, d-347, p. 8-10; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 210.

1955

September 20

He believes that in order to organize the exhibition about his biography and works, scheduled for the beginning of November, approval from the Central Committee of the Party is necessary. For this, he thinks it is essential that the Writers' and Artists' Unions intervene on his behalf in writing.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,47, p. 8-10; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 210.

1955

September 20

The issue of organizing an exhibition about Galaktion's biography and works has already been agreed upon with Shota Jijieshvili, a member of the local trade union committee. However, in Galaktion's opinion, Jijieshvili is waiting for the final, official approval from Barnab Pataraiia, the head of the Party Committee at the State Publishing House, and the decision of the Chairman of the Council of Ministers of the Soviet Union, Giorgi Malenkov.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,47, p. 8-10; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 210.

1955

September 20

He plans to have a portrait of his father, Vasil Tabidze, painted for the exhibition scheduled for the beginning of November.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,47, p. 8-10; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 210.

1955

September 21

He fears that the exhibition he has planned might be canceled because he needs to get approval from Barnab Pataraiia, the head of the Party Committee at the State Publishing House. Pataraiia had recently rejected their proposal to organize an evening at the institution, citing that the director, Giorgi Merkviladze, was not in Tbilisi. However, Galaktion's fear proves unfounded. Barnab Pataraiia responds positively to the idea of the event and even tells him that in the future, he will personally organize an exhibition fitting for the National Poet. After hearing these words, he also receives official approval from the representative of the main literary department, and they sign the materials for printing.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,47, p. 13-14; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 211.

Note: In the source, Barnab Pataraiia is mentioned only by his last name.

1955

September 21

The issue of organizing the exhibition about Galaktion's biography and works is resolved positively, which greatly pleases the poet. He assumes that by September 26, the invitation cards will be ready.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,47, p. 13-14; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 211-212.

1955

September 21

After receiving official approval for the exhibition, he hands over the texts for the poster and invitation cards to Valerian Dolidze, the assistant to the director of the Printing Word Combine, for printing. He is confident that, unless something unexpected occurs, the poster will be displayed in two or three days. He also thinks it would be great if the Poligrafrest could provide him with a room to arrange the materials needed for the exhibition before the invitation cards are printed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,47, p. 14; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 212.

1955

September 21

He is confident that the exhibition he has planned will turn out very well. He is waiting to see when the posters prepared for the exhibition will be printed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,47, p. 13-14; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 212.

1955

September 21

In his notebook, he notes that Parmen Tsakheli's evening will be held at the Writers' Union on September 26.

Source: MGL, d-347, p. 13-14; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 212.

1955

September 21

He takes the announcement to the State Publishing House and requests that the publication of the eighth volume of his collected works be included in the 1956 plan. He has not yet decided whether to request the publication of the ninth volume as well, as neither of the two volumes has been prepared yet.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,47, p. 15; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 212.

1955

September 21

He takes the announcement to the Minister of Culture and informs him that he wishes to publish the eighth volume of his collected works in 1956. According to the minister, the 1956 publishing plan will be discussed in November 1955, and by that time, the ministry will be able to include Galaktion's Book in the plan. After receiving this response from the minister, he begins to fear that they may request the volume immediately, while he has not yet prepared the material in a presentable form for submission.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,47, p. 15; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 212.

1955

September 21

He specially comes to Tbilisi from Tskneti to attend the Party Bureau and reporters' meeting, but upon reading the announcement, he learns that the meeting has been postponed to September 29. He notices an inconsistency in the text of the announcement: it states "Monday, September 29", while September 29 is actually a Thursday, not a Monday. He is curious as to why they specifically chose September 29 for the meeting, the same day he has a scheduled meeting with the typesetters. Due to this coincidence, he plans to reschedule his meeting to October 1. He is certain that the announcement was written by Teimuraz Jangulashvili and thinks that he will know the truth about who chose the meeting date and who, through this tactic, wanted to sabotage Galaktion's evening: Sergi Tchilaia, Irakli Abashidze, Giorgi Leonidze, or Karlo Kaladze. He believes that anything could be expected from these individuals. He is also interested in whether they knew about Galaktion's planned event from Barnab Patariaia, the head of the Party Committee at the State Publishing House.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,47, p. 16-17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 212.

1955

September 22

He thinks a lot about the exhibition showcasing his biography and works, which is set to open at the beginning of November. In his notebook, he lists the types of materials to be prepared for the exhibition: books, wall newspapers, portraits, inscriptions, and photographs. He plans to organize the materials on display according to the following chronological periods: 1908-1914, 1914-1918, 1918-1923... He also intends to quickly resolve the issue of the exhibition poster.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,47, p. 19; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 213.

1955

September 22

He plans to take care of matters related to the exhibition on October 1. He intends to visit the accounting department of the State Publishing House to find out when the payment will be made. He also plans to speak with the director of the publishing house, Giorgi Merkviladze, and the director of the Printing Word Combine, Valerian Dolidze. Additionally, he plans to go to the Writers' Union to meet with Irakli Abashidze, Tamar Andghuladze, Sergi Tchilaia, and Teimuraz Jangulashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,47, p. 19; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 213.

Note: In the source, Giorgi Merkviladze's full name is not mentioned, while Valerian Dolidze, Irakli Abashidze, and Sergi Tchilaia are referred to by their last names only. Tamar Andghuladze and Teimuraz Jangulashvili are mentioned by their first names only.

1955

Until September 23

He plans to go to the Critics' Bureau of the Writers' Union and meet with Besarion Zhghenti at 3 o'clock.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,47, p. 19; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 213.

Note: In the source, Besarion Zhghenti is referred to only by his first name, Beso.

1955

September 24

In the morning, he writes a poem "September 24, 1955, Morning" ("From the balcony of my house, the Caucasus is visible...").

Source: Autograph, MGL, №3856; G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 311.

1955

September 24

He writes a poem “September 24, 1955” (“In this hall today, my friends...”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №194; №1142; №8108; №2551; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 238.

Note: The poem is also found untitled “In this hall today...”.

1955

September 26

He is in Ash Tree Garden, where he writes an untitled poem “By the banks of the Mtkvari in Vera...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №3854; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 239.

1955

Until September 30

In the room, he finds a letter from his nephew, Nodar Tabidze. The latter informs that the house manager did not come and he could not find him at his place either. He is leaving for Samtredia for three or four days. Therefore, he was unable to pay the rent and leaves the money on the table, so when the representative comes, he can pay himself.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-443; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 248.

1955

After September 27

In the magazine Mnatobi, Mamia Ebralidze’s work “Galaktion Tabidze and Old Georgian Poetry” is published, in which the author seeks to clarify the peculiarities of Galaktion Tabidze’s creative relationship with ancient Georgian literature. First and foremost, Mamia Ebralidze focuses on the poet’s attitude toward “The Knight in the Panther’s Skin” and notes that no poet, except Archil, who dedicated a more extensive poem-dialogue to Rustaveli and Teimuraz the First, has engaged with Rustaveli and his “The Knight in the Panther’s Skin” as much as Galaktion Tabidze did. According to Mamia Ebralidze, the influence of Rustaveli’s artistic world on Galaktion’s poetry is primarily to be found in the worldview sphere. In the researcher’s view, Galaktion is the first among the modern Georgian writers to continue Rustaveli’s humanistic traditions. The author points out that the lexical richness of Galaktion’s poetry is evident to all, which is largely due to the poet’s thorough study of ancient Georgian literature, especially the poetic lexicon of “The Knight in the Panther’s Skin”. The critic emphasizes certain words and lexical forms confirmed in Galaktion’s poetry, which, in his opinion, can be traced back to “The Knight in the Panther’s Skin”. He specifically discusses the poetic image of the panther, which Galaktion often uses as a component of simile or metaphor. Mamia Ebralidze then examines how Galaktion’s creative connection with “The Knight in the Panther’s Skin” manifests in the realm of tropological speech and poetic syntax. According to his observation, Galaktion does not merely repeat existing artistic images but reworks and enriches them with his own unique nuances.

The researcher also discusses Galaktion’s approach to ancient Georgian poetry in the field of metrics. He notes that, of the ancient meters, Galaktion most frequently uses the Shavteli-Chakhrukhauri meter. Mamia Ebralidze focuses on one aspect of Galaktion’s poetry in relation to the works of David Guramishvili. He mentions that, at the beginning of his creative journey, Galaktion was probably captivated by the religiously themed poems of David Guramishvili. The basis for this claim, according to the researcher, lies in the mystical tone found in some of Galaktion’s early poems. The critic also observes the echoes of Besik’s love poetry in Galaktion’s work.

Source: M. Ebralidze, Galaktion Tabidze and Old Georgian Poetry, Magazine Mnatobi, 1955, №9, p. 168-176.

Dating: The magazine is signed for printing on September 27, 1955.

1955

Until September 30

He notes in his notebook that on September 30 at 12:00 PM, there will be a general meeting of the Academy members at the Academy.

Source: MGL, d-347, p. 27; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 215.

1955

September 30 or later

He copies from the September 30 issue of the newspaper Komunisti the information that the Tbilisi City Council’s Executive Committee has decided to move the statue of General Leselidze from the Seaside Square to the square on Leselidze Street.

Source: MGL, d-347, p. 41; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 218.

1955

August-September

In his notebook, he notes someone’s remark that Galaktion Tabidze’s name should be given to one of the streets in Tbilisi, but directly within the city, not outside of it.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 30; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 176;

1955

September

He is informed that the construction work on his villa in Sokhumi has been halted.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 21; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 295

Dating: The time is specified in a letter from Ladaria, the head of the First Trust Construction Management.

1955

September

On the first page of his notebook, he writes “The Lucky Notebook”.

Source: MGL, d-347p. 0. AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 208.

1955

September

He is dissatisfied with the preparations for the anniversary event dedicated to Davit Guramishvili, as he feels that no one is truly interested in the matter. He believes the exhibition prepared for the event is chaotic and lacks coherence, and that the artists’ works clearly show a disconnect from Guramishvili’s personality and his environment. He finds Alexandre Baramidze’s monograph “Davit Guramishvili” to be formulaic and uninteresting, thinking that such a work could be written about any author. He also dislikes the fact that the monograph overlooks many important aspects of the classic writer’s life, even though it would have been entirely possible to poetically explore and present these aspects. He notices that the members of the anniversary and exhibition committee, as well as the translators and press workers, seem to be only concerned with their own income and are not concerned with how the event will unfold. Their behaviour shows no sense of responsibility, enthusiasm, or passion for the task at hand. He is also troubled by the fact that the organizers are planning to hold a banquet similar to the one held in Vazha-Pshavela’s yard, and to once again set up a table on the field in Saguramo. He feels this is inappropriate, as a cultural event should be organized, not an orgy.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 57; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 186.

1955

September

He reflects on the tragic end of his cousin, Titsian Tabidze. He recalls someone recounting that Titsian was tortured by Nikita Krimian, an officer of the People’s Commissariat for Internal Affairs. He is shaken by the realization that Krimian committed this atrocity at the age of twenty-one.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,42, p. 45; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 182.

Note: In the source, Nikita Krimian is referred to only by his last name. Additionally, the information regarding Nikita Krimian’s age is incorrect. In 1937, when Titsian became a victim of the purges, Krimian would have been 24 years old.

1955

September

He is at the editorial office of Mnatobi, hoping to meet with Mikheil Maghradze, but he is unable to. He reads a text posted there, stating that meetings with Maghradze are possible on Mondays from 14:00 to 18:00. Inspired by this official information, he writes a one-stanza, untitled humorous poem, “Maghradze, Our Luminous Light”.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 162.

Note: The clarification of Mikheil Maghradze's position could not be determined.

October

1955

Until October 2

He plans to meet with Korneli Kekelidze on October 2 at 2 o'clock.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,47, p. 41; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 218.

Note: In the source, Korneli Kekelidze is referred to only by his last name.

1955

6 October or earlier

On October 6 at 6:00 PM, he sends an invitation for a planned meeting with him at the Printing Word Combine Club to Vakhtang Gurgenidze, addressing it with the words "Dearest of the Dear".

Source: Document preserved at Galaktion's Tbilisi House-Museum, №279.

1955

October 6

He distributes tickets for the exhibition dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze's biography and works. He gives 39 tickets to Ilia Adeishvili, the head of the "Galaktion Tabidze Literary Circle", 9 tickets to Vakhtang Gurgenidze, and 2 tickets to Academician Alexandre Tvalchrelidze. He leaves tickets with Teimuraz Jangulashvili at the Writers' Union and also at the Academy of Sciences. In the end, he distributes more than a hundred tickets, with 86 remaining to be handed out.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,48, p. 4; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 219.

Note: In the source, Ilia Adeishvili, Teimuraz Jangulashvili, and Alexandre Tvalchrelidze are referred to only by their last names, while Vakhtang Gurgenidze is referred to only by his first name.

1955

Until October 18

In his notebook, he notes that on October 21, a meeting with Galaktion will take place in Mestia. The initiators of the event are Nikoloz Gujejiani, the head of the District Propaganda and Agitation Department, and Razhden Japaridze, the head of the District Executive Committee's Culture Department. He plans to depart from Tbilisi on October 18, and by noon on the following day, he will be in Zugdidi, where he will stay at the "Odishi" hotel. In Samegrelo, a car will be arranged to take him to Mestia.

Source: MGL, d-347, p. 21; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 214.

Note: As indicated in other notes, he did not travel to Mestia.

1955

October 18

A meeting is scheduled with the doctors of the Central Clinical Hospital in Tbilisi, in agreement with him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,47, p. 41; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 218.

1955

October 19

He writes an untitled poem, "Comrades! How Shall We Paint You?" dedicated to the doctors of the Central Clinical Hospital in Tbilisi.

Source: MGL, d-348, p. 21-22; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 225-226.

1955

Until October 22

On behalf of the doctors and patients of Tbilisi Central Clinical Hospital, he is drafting the text of an appeal to the Supreme Council of the Georgian Soviet Socialist Republic. According to the appeal, after a meeting with the National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze, the event attendees request that Galaktion's immense role in the development of Georgian literature be acknowledged. Since he has lived near the riverside for almost twenty-five years, they propose that the left bank of the Mtkvari River be named "Galaktion's Embankment".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-572, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 366.

1955

October 19-22

He writes an untitled poem "Allow me to praise with a poem...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2812; 7300; 185-d, p. 13-17; 185-d, p. 20-22; works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 241.

Note: The poem is also found untitled with a different opening line ("For the first time, I lay here in 1909...").

1955

Until October 23

He plans to hold a meeting with the doctors of the Central Clinical Hospital in Tbilisi on October 23. During this meeting, he hopes that the attendees will advocate on his behalf before the Presidium of the Supreme Council, so that, considering Galaktion's merits, contributions, and place of residence, the second Seaside Street will be named after the National Poet, Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,48, p. 26; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 219.

1955

October 24

He writes untitled lines, "My Homeland, the Many-Suffered".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-469, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 251.

1955

Until October 30

A meeting with the People's Poet of Georgia, Academician Galaktion Tabidze, is scheduled for October 30 at the Tbilisi Teachers' House.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,37, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 106.

November

1955

November 9

He plans to go to the publisher's office and submit the eighth volume of his collected works to the editor.

Source: MGL, d-557, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 313.

1955

November 9

He plans to speak with Sergi Tchilaia and schedule a general meeting of the Poets' Section for November 19. He intends to handle the necessary technical details for the invitation to the meeting.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-557, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 313.

1955

Until October 15

In his notebook, he drafts a sketch for the event poster. According to the text, on October 15, 1955, a meeting with the National Poet, Academician Galaktion Tabidze, will take place with the employees of the State Book Chamber of Georgia. A report on the poet's works will be presented by Alexandre Shanidze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-488, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 417.

1955

November 30

He copies from Zarya Vostoka the information that on November 29, Ivan Rusinov, an actor from the Griboedov Drama Theatre in Tbilisi, read Russian translations of Adam Mickiewicz's poems at the Writers' Union.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-510, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 69.

1955

Autumn

Poets Anzor Abulashvili and Nodar Narsia are sitting at a restaurant at the intersection of Ilia Chavchavadze Avenue and Arakishvili Street when they notice Galaktion entering. People at various tables ask Galaktion to sit with them, but he silently leaves the restaurant.

Source: A. Abulashvili, Order of Lenin, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 94-95.

Dating: According to the recollection, this took place “a couple of years after Stalin’s death, in the autumn”.

December

1955

December 2

The youth of Zestaponi-Argveta-Sviri learn from the newspapers that a meeting with Galaktion is planned in Kutaisi, and they decide to greet the poet at the Sviri station, escort him off the train, host him, and then send him on his way to Kutaisi. They do just that. They meet the poet at the Sviri station, greeting him with words of welcome and poems dedicated to him, lifting him up in their arms. They then take him to a specially prepared feast. Galaktion enjoys such an emotional reception, has a good time, and even reads some of his own poems. Afterwards, he travels towards Kutaisi, accompanied by several people, in the cabin of a freight train’s engineer.

Source: D. Antadze, Pages of Memories, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 183-185

1955

December 3

A meeting with Galaktion Tabidze is planned at the Lado Meskhishvili State Theatre in Kutaisi. In the morning, some members of the event organizing committee, together with Dodo Antadze, travel by car to the Rioni station to greet the poet, but they find that he is not on the train. The bewildered hosts call Tbilisi and learn that the poet is traveling to Kutaisi from Sviri in the cabin of a freight train’s engineer.

Source: D. Antadze, Pages of Memories, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 183-185.

1955

December 3

Upon arriving in Kutaisi, Galaktion is settled into the “Kutaisi” hotel. The weather is chilly, but a crowd gathers in front of the hotel, buzzing like flies. The theater is packed, and many people are waiting outside the building for the performance to end in order to see Galaktion. During the evening, poet Giorgi Samkharadze gives a speech about Galaktion’s life and work. He is greeted with welcoming words by Konstantine Medzvelia, Mikheil Alavidze, the student youth of Kutaisi, and local poets. At the end, Galaktion reads his poems, and after the evening, the young people, carrying him in their arms, take him back to the hotel. Overcome with emotion, the poet cannot hold back his tears.

Source: D. Antadze, Pages of Memories, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 183-185.

1955

December 4

He meets with the students of the Kutaisi Pedagogical Institute.

Source: D. Antadze, Pages of Memories, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 186.

1955

December 4

He is in Kutaisi, meets with his friends from Kutaisi, as well as the workers of the newspaper and radio, and, inspired by this encounter, writes a one-stanza poem.

Source: D. Antadze, Pages of Memories, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 186.

Note: In the source, the title of the poem is not mentioned.

1955

Until December 6

Andro Tevzadze writes a poem dedicated to him in his notebook, titled “Extempore at Galaktion’s Evening”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 301, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 381.

Dating: The record in the notebook is placed before the December 6 entry.

1955

December 7

The hosts from Kutaisi bring him in a carriage full of flowers, various gifts, and bread and salt, and then send him off to Tbilisi.

Source: D. Antadze, Pages of Memories, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 186.

1955

December 21

He receives a letter from Elizbar Ananiashvili from Moscow, informing him that the publishing house “Soviet Writer” is beginning work on preparing his collection. Ananiashvili requests the submission of poems written over the last two to three years since the collection published by Zarya Vostoka. He writes that if this material is provided on time, the new Russian-language Book will be ready for submission in the first half of January.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-250; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 324.

1955

December 23

He sends a letter to Elizbar Ananiashvili, the editor of Zarya Vostoka, requesting that Boris Turganov be appointed as the editor for the Book of his poems to be published in Russian.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,49, p. 20; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 233.

1955

December 23-25

He lies in bed for three days due to illness, feeling very unwell, and is treated with injections, medical cupping, and medication.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-261, 55; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 108.

1955

Until December 25

He writes an untitled poem "He stirred, he mixed...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3344; №3990; №190-a, p. 5117; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 283. For clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 694.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "What the Wars Have Told Us".

1955

December 25

At night, he feels slightly better, but he cannot sleep, and the noise from the buses, traveling from Vera Bridge to Marjanishvili Square, the shouting of drunks, the clattering of his upstairs neighbour's slippers, and the creaking of chairs all disturb his nerves. On the table, he finds Grigol Chkhikvadze's Russian-language Book "Composers of the Soviet Socialist Republic of Georgia". He browses through it and thinks it is pathetic, which makes him even more upset. He believes that his illness and being in such a state are a consequence of his dedication.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, d-261, 55; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 108.

1955

Until December 26

He gets ready to organize an exhibition showcasing his biography and works. He wants a large-format image of his photographic portrait to be prepared for the exhibition. He also plans to print a large-format photo of the cover of his seven-volume collected works. Additionally, he intends to obtain a picture of the old theater in Kutaisi where he witnessed the February Revolution. He believes it would be great if he could also acquire a photograph taken in Leningrad (now St. Petersburg) in Smolny, the building associated with the 1917 revolution.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,37, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 108;

1955

Until December 26

He continues preparing for the exhibition showcasing his biography and works, planning to acquire the following photos: one taken at the evening event held at Tbilisi's Dimitrov Factory, one from 1908, one from 1914 with Russian poet Konstantin Balmont, one from 1918 with students, and one from 1953 with writer Ia Ekaladze. Additionally, he has selected photos from the following years based on his creative work over five-year periods: 1923, 1928, 1933, 1938, 1943, and 1948. He also wants to have Ia Ekaladze's inscription made on his seven-volume collected works prepared for the exhibition.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,37, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 108.

1955

December 26

Inspired by the creative impulse from the sonnet of the Armenian lyricist Misak Metsarents, translated by Valery Bryusov ("In the Mountains, in the Monastery"), he begins working on an untitled sonnet, "Here from the Fence, the Kamuri Watches You".

Source: MGL, d-337, p. 20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 110.

Note: In his notebook, the version of the poem is presented with the title "White Kamuri".

1955

After December 30

He receives a letter from Igor Postupalsky from Moscow, wishing him a Happy New Year and informing him that the State Literary Publishing House has decided to appoint him as an editor for Galaktion's Book without an external editor. The Book will be personally prepared by Aleksandra Ryabinina by spring. The situation is more complicated with the publishing house Soviet Writer, which does not intend to involve an external editor at all, which could significantly harm the quality of the book. As an example, Postupalsky mentions the Book prepared by this publishing house for Ioseb Grishashvili, which, in his opinion, clearly damaged the poet's reputation in the eyes of Russian readers. He advises Galaktion to urgently write to "Soviet Writer" and request Boris Turganov as an external editor. Turganov has already worked on Galaktion's first publication, has good editorial experience, and would gladly take on the task.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-30; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 311-312.

1955

December

He notes fragments and rhythmic words from the sonnets included in Valery Bryusov's Book "Experiments" ("Flowers shed their leaves in fear..." and "In the mountains, the song of the monastery bells weeps...").

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,37, p. 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 109.

Note: In the original, the titles of the poems are: "Цветы роняют робко лепестки"... and "В горах, в монастыре, песнь колокола плачет".

1955

He writes an untitled humorous poem dedicated to Ioseb Noneshvili, titled "God, Help the Thin Ioseb".

Source: MGL, Galaktion Tabidze's archive, d. 626, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198;

1955

He writes a poem titled “Old”, addressed to Simon Chikovani.

Source: MGL, Galaktion Tabidze’s archive, №1125; G. Tabidze, AE, Book VIII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 397.

1955 or later

He acquires Akaki Khintibidze’s monograph “The Poetry of Ioseb Grishashvili”, reads it attentively, and makes annotations in the margins of the book. He is particularly interested in the last chapter, which discusses the artistic side of Ioseb Grishashvili’s poems and the melodic quality of their sounds, using Galaktion’s poetic art as an example.

Source: A. Khintibidze, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 317-319.

Dating: The publication date of Akaki Khintibidze’s Book “The Poetry of Ioseb Grishashvili” is based on the time of its release.

1955

He rewrites his poem “Oh, My Old Dream...” for five-year-old Marina Pirtskhalava to memorize and asks her mother, Nunu Ebanoidze, to keep this autograph safe.

Source: N. Ebanoidze, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 400.

1955

He participates in an event organized by the Society for the Dissemination of Political and Scientific Knowledge.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-402, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 530.

After 1955

Galaktion is asked which Georgian poem deserves to have a monument erected in its honour. He pauses for a moment, then lists: Baratashvili’s “Pegasus”, Ilia Chavchavadze’s “The Mother of Kartli”, Akaki Tsereteli’s “Dawn”, Raphael Eristavi’s “The Homeland of the Khevsurs”, and adds that several of Vazha’s masterpieces could also be considered. With a modest smile, he says that his own poems are not worthy of such an honour. In his opinion, a competition should be held, and this issue should be decided by a special jury.

Source: N. Agiashvili, Let Us Erect a Monument for a Single Poem, newspaper Tbilisi, December 3, 1982, N 277, p. 4.

1955

He writes a poem titled “Day and Night”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 272, p. 15-16; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 239-240.

1955

Korneli Sanadze draws another portrait of Galaktion Tabidze in pencil. The poet is sitting at his desk, head bowed. In his left hand, he holds an open notebook, while his right hand rests on an open book.

Source: O. Egadze, The Poet's Image in the Artist's Work, magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba, 1965, N 11, p. 72.

1955

On the cover of the Georgian translation of Svetlana Raeva's Book "Sunrays", next to the title, he writes: "Ultraviolet, or the Solarium Problem". On the last page, he includes two lines from his poem "My Native Land!": "When I will defend your glory, I will defend the colour of your flag!"

Source: MGL, t-108, S. Raeva, "Sunrays", Tbilisi, 1955.

1955

He writes an untitled poem "The protection of an old monument is our holiest duty...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №184-d, p. 29-30; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 246.

1955

He writes an untitled poem: "With a great victory...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1124; 6813; works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 246.

1955

He writes an untitled poem: "Who in this world tends their graves...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1124; 6813; works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 246.

1955

He writes an untitled poem: "An old lineage of the Old Testament...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4074; works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 242.

1955

He writes an untitled poem "Travel and preach...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №1188; №7681; №8331; works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 247.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "We Traveled, We Preached".

1955 or later

From the Book "Iakob Nikoladze. Selected Works Album", he writes down the words of the book's compiler and editor, Mamia Duduchava, who states that Iakob Nikoladze was one of the founders of Georgian realist sculpture, and the artistic and historical significance of his work places him alongside such outstanding figures of the century as Gigo Gabashvili, Zakaria Paliashvili, and Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-586, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 448.

1956

January

1956

January 6

In his diary, he writes that the response from the editor of Zarya Vostoka, Elizbar Ananiashvili, to his letter, in which he requested the appointment of Boris Turganov as the editor for his Book in Russian, is delayed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,49, p. 20; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 233.

1956

January 7

He plans to go to Mikhaylov's hospital and the State Publishing House to collect documents to take to the Literature Foundation.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,49, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 228.

1956

January 7

In his notebook, he lists food items (butter, potatoes, onions, fat, pasta, and others) and notes the amount spent on each product. He also calculates the total amount spent, which comes to 272 roubles.

Source: MGL, d-349, p. 4; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 232.

1956

January 9

He begins working on an untitled poem, "The Mountain That Was Destroyed by Cliffs".

Source: MGL, d-349, p. 18-19; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 238-239.

1956

9 January or later

He completes work on the untitled poem "The Mountain That Was Destroyed by Cliffs" and writes a new version of the piece.

Source: MGL, d-349, p. 21; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 240.

1956

Until January 10

Inspired by the creative impulse from the play "Maia Tskneteli" directed by Vakhtang Tabliashvili at the Marjanishvili Theatre, he writes the sonnet "Maia Tskneteli".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,37, p. 26; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 112.

1956

January 14

He receives a letter from the Russian newspaper Trud.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,56, p. 14; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 273.

1956

January 20

He plans to gift his 1954 "Selected Works" to Givi Mikadze. He is thinking about what inscription to write in the book. In his notebook, he drafts the inscription, in which the poet wishes the young researcher progress and success.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,37, p. 29; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 111.

1956

January 20

He writes a poem titled "Restless Nights".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,37, p. 29; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 113-114.

Note: At the end of each stanza of the poem, the autograph includes the date: the year, month, and day.

1956

January 21

He is irritated by the astonishing carelessness of the family's helper, Irma Papashvili. First, she places Galaktion's stepdaughter Nunu's brand-new dress on the stove to dry and burns it. Then, due to her clumsiness, she knocks a jar off the table and unevenly sews a patch on the blanket. Finally, while Galaktion is sitting at his writing desk reading Alexei Tolstoy's Book aloud, she knocks over a glass of water from the table, spilling it on the poet's robe. Galaktion is unable to understand what has made her so upset and confused.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,37, p. 30; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 114-115.

Note: In the source, Irma Papashvili is referred to only by her first name.

1956

January 21

He has ready 6,064 lines of the "Book of Peace".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,55, p. 12; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 272.

1956

January 22

After five days of waiting, he finally receives the eye drops. After applying them, he feels his vision worsen, and a sense of fear arises. He begins to suspect that there may be some conspiracy, thinking that they might be trying to blind him on purpose.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,55, p. 9; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 270.

1956

January 24

In his notebook, he makes a note that after completing work on the "Book of Peace", he will begin preparing the Russian-language collection for the Georgian Culture Decade in Moscow.

Source: MGL, d-355, p. 9; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 270.

1956

January 24

He makes a note in which he speaks about the intrigues directed against him. He writes that he was deliberately not chosen for the Presidium of the Writers' Union. He believes the Secretariat of the Writers' Union (Irakli Abashidze, Giorgi Leonidze, Sergi Tchilaia) and "harmful individuals" (Tamar Andghuladze, Marijani, Irodion Kavzharadze) are acting against him. He plans to intensify the work on the academic edition of his collected works and quickly finish the poem "Book of Peace".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-624, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 172-173.

1956

January 25

He has completed 8,749 lines of the "Book of Peace".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,55, p. 12; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 272.

1956

January 28

He plans to prepare the paper and ink by 10 o'clock the next morning, and from 12 noon, he will begin transcribing his poem "Book of Peace".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,54, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 253.

1956

January 28

He plans to work on the final chapters of "Book of Peace", as well as review the sections that have already been prepared and rhyme the few pages of text that have been left unrhymed so far.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,55, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 272.

1956

January 28

He completes working on the final chapters of "Book of Peace".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,55, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 272.

1956

January 29

He begins transcribing the poem "Book of Peace".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,54, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 253.

1956

After January 31

He receives a reply from Mikhail Kornev, the director of the publishing house Soviet Writer, from Moscow. Kornev writes that his letter requesting Boris Turganov as the editor of his Book was received in mid-January, while work on the Book had already begun in November 1955, and Elizbar Ananiashvili was officially assigned to the task on January 4, 1956. He adds that Ananiashvili will soon submit the edited Book to the publishing house.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-497-a; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 324.

1956

January

He makes a note titled "Shalyapin Was Singing", which is dedicated to the Russian opera singer Fyodor Shalyapin.

Source: MGL, d-349, p. 4-6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 229-231.

1956

January

He writes the initial version of the poem "Memory" ("I Was Listening to the Great Singer"), which is dedicated to the Russian opera singer Fyodor Shalyapin.

Source: MGL, d-349, p. 4-6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 231.

1956

January

He remembers that Paolo Iashvili was a member of the Hunters' Union and would go hunting, but he never killed anything. Therefore, in the village of Sadakhlo, he would buy shot birds from other hunters, hang them on his waist, and return to the capital, where everyone believed he was a great hunter.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,37, p. 25; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 111;

1956

January

In his notebook, he notes Karl Marx's words that poetry begins where there is a specific beautiful form, without which a high idea or object, no matter how important, can never create poetry.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,37, p. 31; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 115;

1956

January or later

He is editing the poem "Memory" ("I Was Listening to the Great Singer").

Source: MGL, d-349, p. 4; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 232.

February

1956

February 1

He completes transcribing 4,312 lines of "Book of Peace".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,55, p. 12; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 272.

1956

February 2

He receives a letter from Savle Abuladze, the poet and leader of the literary circle at the Tbilisi Teachers' House. Abuladze congratulates him on his recovery and expresses regret that they have not met for nearly six months. He informs him that on February 15 of the current year, the literary circle plans to celebrate its 20th anniversary. Abuladze writes that Galaktion is already familiar with two collections published by the circle, while a third, which includes a poem dedicated to Galaktion by Abuladze himself, is in the binding stage, and a fourth is also in preparation. He asks for permission to announce Galaktion as one of the participants and expresses hope that he will be able to attend, either to read a poem or to give a speech.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-489; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 325.

1956

February 3

He completes transcribing "Book of Peace".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,54, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 253.

1956

February 7

He completes transcribing the poem "Book of Peace".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-624, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 173.

1956

February 8

He hands over the poem "Book of Peace" for printing.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-624, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 174.

1956

February 8

He promises Akaki Gatsserelia that he will give him one printed copy of the poem “Book of Peace”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-624, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 174.

1956

February 8

Akaki Gatsserelia invites him to an evening dedicated to Fyodor Dostoevsky, where he will give a speech.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-624, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 174.

1956

February 8

He buys Viktor Gabeskiria’s Book “One-volume book” at the State Publishing House bookstore.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-624, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 174;

1956

February 8

At the State Publishing House bookstore, they give him the Book gifted by Arno Oneli, which the author had left for him to receive the previous July.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-624, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 174.

1956

February 9

In the morning, his nephew, Nodar Tabidze, calls and informs him about a printing error in “Book of Peace”, where the stanzas are incorrectly numbered, and the 498th stanza is marked as the 600th. He decides to continue the printing with the incorrect numbering and to place ellipses in the appropriate spots, as though several chapters have been omitted.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-624, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 175.

1956

February 9

He goes with Nodar Tabidze to buy paper so that they can provide it to the printers in time for “Book of Peace” to be printed. At Marjanishvili Square, he sees that a large photograph of him is displayed as a sample by a photographer, which brings him satisfaction.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-624, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 175.

1956

February 9

He goes to the Literary Repository with Nodar Tabidze, where the director of the Fund, Alexandre Gomiashvili, tells him that he will soon be moved to a new apartment. He feels the urge to visit the new house, but decides to go to the printers first.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-624, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 175.

1956

February 9

He goes to the printer's office, where he has left his poem "Book of Peace" for printing. The printers tell him that it is a long poem, but the writing is very small. They ask whether there will be a "magarichi", a reward, after the work is finished. Galaktion promises to leave the folders with them and, after the Book is published, to give everyone signed copies.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-624, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 175-176.

1956

February 9

He buys "Kartlis Tskhovreba" (Life of Kartli) and Shalva Kashmadze's Book "The Opera and Ballet Theater of Tbilisi" at the bookstore.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-624, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 176.

1956

February 9

He makes a note that it would have been better if "Kartlis Tskhovreba" had not been published after Mari Brose's edition, as the Book contains contradictory ideas. He is unable to understand what the word "corrected" next to certain phrases means. What has been corrected, how, and when?

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-624, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 176.

1956

February 9

He plans to reprint the poem "The Book of Peace" with a different stanza structure. He believes it is better to organize the work in two-line stanzas, as this will give it more musicality, internal and external strength, and save on costs. He also thinks this format will make it easier for the poem to be disseminated. He intends to distribute the printed copies of the work to selected intellectuals and influential literary figures who will help lay the foundation for the triumph of “The Book of Peace”. He believes the work deserves widespread love and recognition. He also thinks that even his enemies will unite against the poem, and it is necessary to disconnect them, for which adequate financial resources are required.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-624, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 176-177.

1956

February 10

He makes a note that his enemies are preparing to launch an offensive, although they have not yet dared to attack. Tensions are rising within the Writers’ Union. Beso Zhghenti is waging a campaign against Dimitri Benashvili, Benashvili is attacking Giorgi Margvelashvili, and Margvelashvili is opposing the older generation of writers. The atmosphere of conflict is felt at the Academy of Sciences and the editorial office of Mnatobi. He believes that amidst all this, efforts are being made to push him into the shadows.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-624, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 177-178.

1956

February 10

At four o’clock in the morning, he works on the untitled poem “How Wonderful the Street of Balakhvani Was” and writes two versions of the piece.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,54, p. 8-9; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 255-256.

1956

February 11

At the Shota Rustaveli Institute of Georgian Literature, he meets Shalva Radiani, who is working on a study of Galaktion’s works. The monograph is being prepared in connection with the Moscow Decade of Georgian Writers. Radiani asks him to provide materials for the biography.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-624, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 178.

1956

February 11

He is informed that the transcription of the poem “The Book of Peace” onto the typewriter is continuing, and the poem will be ready in a few days.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-624, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 178.

1956

February 11

He listens to a song based on his poem “From Tskaltubo to Kutaisi...” on the radio. He feels dissatisfied because the text has been altered, and a stanza has been added.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-624, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 178.

1956

February 11

He writes an untitled poem, “The Most Immaculate Sky...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-624, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 178-179.

1956

February 11

Nino Kvirikadze promises to help with reviewing the manuscripts.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-624, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 179.

1956

February 12

In his notebook, he notes that the artist Ivane Vepkhvadze is leading an exhibition of 27 young artists at the Artists’ Club and writes down his phone number.

Source: MGL, d-355, p. 5; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 274.

1956

Until February 15

He writes a speech to be delivered at the 20th anniversary of the literary circle at the Tbilisi Teachers’ House, in which he greets its leader and members and announces that he will present them with handwritten copies of his poems and poetry as a gift.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-489; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 325.

Dating: Savle Abuladze’s letter from February 2, 1956, indicates that the event was scheduled for February 15.

1956

February 18

From the announcement published in the newspaper, he learns that Tedo Sakhokia has passed away.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,58, p. 24; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 287, 289.

1956

February 18

He makes a note about Tedo Sakhokia, recalling details of his relationship with him.

Source: MGL, d-358, p. 19-20; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 286-287.

1956

February 19

He addresses the State Publishing House with a statement regarding the publication of the ninth volume of his works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,61, p. 5; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 316.

1956

After February 11

At 12 o'clock, they announce that the poem "The Book of Peace" has been printed, and this makes him very happy. At the exact same moment, the radio plays a musical fragment from Rimsky-Korsakov's "Scheherazade". This coincidence convinces him that the Book has been printed and will gain worldwide recognition.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,58, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 282.

Dating: In the entry dated February 11, Galaktion notes that the printers promised to finish printing "The Book of Peace" in a few days.

1956

February

The poem "Between Two Seas, Long Ago" is published in the magazine Pioneri.

Source: Magazine Pioneri, 1956, №2, the second page of cover.

March

1956

Until March 2

On March 2, he plans to visit the Agricultural Institute at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,52, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 244.

1956

March 6

He reads the newspaper Komunisti. He makes highlights on Irakli Abashidze's poems "Notes from the 20th Congress". Next to the poem "To Comrade Ju-de", he notes how many times each word is used in the poem. Regarding the poem "Dolores Ibaruri", he notes that Titsian Tabidze also has a poem with this title.

Source: MGL, t-689, newspaper Komunisti, March 6, 1956, №55, p. 1.

1956

March 7

He thinks that the eighth volume of the eight-volume works will be handed over for production in the second half of the year, between July and September.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,58, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 281.

1956

March 8

He sends a telegram to writer Parmen Loria in Batumi, congratulating him on his 60th birthday.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-266; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 81.

1956

Until March 9

He receives a letter from the Georgian Academy of Sciences informing him that on March 10, a session of the Academy's Department of Social Sciences will be held, with reports to be delivered by Dimitri Benashvili, Ivane Gigineishvili, and Shalva Radiani.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-591, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 487.

1956

March 9

He writes a humorous poem "Today's Meeting..." in response to the letter received from the Georgian Academy of Sciences, inviting him to the session to be held on March 10.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-591, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 487.

1956

March 9

He is standing at the bus stop near the Zemeli Pharmacy with Nodar Tabidze when the demonstrators supporting Stalin approach, shouting: "People, Galaktion is with us, long live Galaktion!" They try to pull him into their circle. When asked if he liked Stalin, Galaktion sarcastically replies, pointing out how this "love" was expressed when they point a gun at you and force you to write a poem. They invite him to join their march, but Galaktion tells them that he is feeling unwell and will join them later. After the demonstrators pass by, he goes home.

Source: N. Tabidze, My Life is the Colour of the Purest Wine..., Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, March 8, 1991, № 10, p. 10. For noting: N. Gogotchuri, the light of recollections, Newspaper Ertoba, 1992, November, № 18 p. 3.

1956

After March 9

He writes an untitled poem "Why do you remind me, scattered on the vine, of...".

Source: A. Khintibidze, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 311.

Dating: The poem is dated September 26-27, 1950, in the autograph, but according to Akaki Khintibidze, the year is falsified, and the poem actually refers to March 9, 1956.

1956

Until March 12

He wants to organize a poem poetry evening on March 12.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,52, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 245.

1956

March 12

The third "One Poem" evening, organized under the leadership of Galaktion Tabidze, is dedicated to a folk ballad. Galaktion delivers a speech in which he focuses on the techniques of poetry, the thousand-year history of Georgian poetry, particularly folk creativity, as he believes that studying folklore provides an opportunity to discover new forms.

Source: G. Tabidze, newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, October 5, 1973, N 39, p. 3; For dating: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,52, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 245.

1956

March 12

He writes a poem "Inscription on the Book "The Life of Kartli" ("The hero's face is sculpted by wind and storm...").

Source: Autograph, MGL, №8102; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 256.

Note: The poem is also found untitled "The hero's face...".

1956

March 15

He writes a poem "In Memory of Elo Andronikashvili" ("It was in the past, long ago..."), dedicated to the late actress Elo (Elene) Andronikashvili.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №7277; №8133; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 256.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "In Memory of a Homeless Poet" and untitled ("It was in the past, long ago...").

1956

After March 15

He revises the poem "In Memory of Elo Andronikashvili", written on March 15, 1956, dedicated to the late actress Elo (Elene) Andronikashvili, creating a new untitled version "It was in the past, long ago...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №7277; №8133; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 256.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "In Memory of a Homeless Poet".

1956

Until March 16

He reads Ivan Bunin's poems and copying the text of one of the poems, "Birds Have Nests, Animals Have Dens", onto a separate sheet of paper.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №8133.

Note: The title of Ivan Bunin's poem is "У птицы есть гнездо, у зверя есть нора".

1956

March 16

He writes an untitled poem, "By the Black Sea...", inspired by Ivan Bunin's work "Birds Have Nests, Animals Have Dens".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №7277; №8102; №5795; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 258.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "In Memory of the Homeless Poet" and without a title ("The Shimmering Veil of Mists..."). The title of Ivan Bunin's poem is "У птицы есть гнездо, у зверя есть нора".

1956

March 20

He writes an untitled poem "Wherever We May Be...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5175; №7281; Na-27, p. 77; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 259.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "I Greet You, Book of Peace" and "Preface".

1956

March 21

He receives a letter from Savle Abuladze, the poet and leader of the literary circle at the Tbilisi Teachers' House, who respectfully requests him to provide the text of the speech he delivered at the 20th anniversary of the circle's founding, as well as his opinion on the four collections published by the circle. Abuladze informs him that they plan to publish a literary almanac compiled from selected material from these four collections.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-490; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 325-326.

1956

March 24

He visits Ioseb Noneshvili, and they talk for a long time. Upon saying goodbye, he gifts the hostess, Medea Noneshvili, a self-painted self-portrait with the inscription: "This picture, my dear sister, is full of joy and beauty".

Source: M. Noneshvili, brief recollection, Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, June 26, 1992, № 24, p. 14.

1956

Until March 25

Famous writers and literary critics, including Galaktion Tabidze, are invited to the film studio to view the footage for the film “Magdana’s Blue” and to express their opinions. After the screening, he congratulates the production team, praises the film, and encourages the young directors Rezo Chkheidze and Tengiz Abuladze.

Source: R. Chkheidze, Galaktion Saved Us, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 134-147.

Dating: It is dated according to the film’s release time on screens.

1956

March 25

He writes humorous poems dedicated to the people of Racha: “Kve, Kven”, “Rachunikebo...”, and “Previously for Nations...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-605, 9; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 38-39.

1956

March 25

He makes a note in Russian, describing how his portrait should be painted. He writes that it is essential for his image to be depicted against the backdrop of an impending thunderstorm, with lightning flashing across the dark sky. The artist must remember that he is creating a portrait of a man of the 20th century, not of a person lost in time. This will be a difficult task, but only the artist’s brush can make eternal that which is fleeting and, conversely, transform the eternal into something transient.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-607, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 46.

April

1956

April 4

He writes an untitled poem “Anything Can Happen...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №7276; №8125; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 260.

1956

April 9

Dimitri Benashvili informs him by phone that the Tskhinvali Pedagogical Institute is holding an evening dedicated to his poetry on April 20, and he must attend.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 291, p. 21; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 325.

1956

April 10

At home, Galaktion calls Dimitri Benashvili to find out whose initiative it is to hold the poetry evening in Tskhinvali, but he is told that Dimitri is unavailable. Galaktion thinks that Benashvili is avoiding speaking with him again, just as he did regarding the academic edition of Galaktion's works.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 291, p. 21; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 325.

Note: In the note, it is thought that the date "today (December 10)" is incorrectly indicated. It should be April 10.

1956

April 12

He writes an untitled poem "Oh, Spring, I Believe in You...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №7735; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 261.

1956

April 20

The fourth-year students of the Georgian Language and Literature Department at the Tskhinvali Pedagogical Institute plan to arrange a meeting with Galaktion Tabidze. The details of the event are coordinated by Alexandre Ghlonti. He arranges for a "Pobeda" car in Tskhinvali and sends student Givi Liakhvispireli to pick up Galaktion. Critic Dimitri Benashvili is also supposed to attend the meeting. Liakhvispireli, along with Benashvili, visits the poet at his home. Galaktion invites the guests into his house and intends to offer them cognac, but his wife reminds him that alcohol is not suitable for a journey. Nino asks the student to keep Galaktion away from alcohol, as he becomes very anxious when drunk. On the way, they talk about Galaktion's poetry and even recite some of his poems.

Source: G. Liakhvispireli, There is Only One Galaktion – Meetings in Tskhinvali, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 342.

1956

April 20

During the drive towards Tskhinvali, as they pass by Stalin's house in Gori, he says to those accompanying him, "Ah, what a man we had, it's been three years since he's gone, and it feels like life in the world has stopped". He then recalls the story of Stalin's prize, how it was offered to him and subsequently rejected, and asks Benashvili, "Wouldn't the Stalin Prize have suited Galaktion?"

Source: G. Liakhvispireli, There is Only One Galaktion – Meetings in Tskhinvali, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 342.

1956

April 20

While in Tskhinvali, he writes a poem on a cigarette box, which begins with the words: “Anything can happen”.

Source: Al. Ghlonti, Meetings with Galaktion, Mravalkari (Philological Etudes), Tbilisi, 1991, p. 154-155.

1956

April 20

The meeting with Galaktion in Tskhinvali takes place in the university’s large hall. After greetings from Alexandre Ghlonti, Dimitri Benashvili, and the students, Galaktion reads the poem he wrote before coming to Tskhinvali, “Anything can happen”. The banquet is held at the home of student Tsiala Durglishvili-Kulijanova. Galaktion dances and students sing him songs. They ask him if he was really in love with Mary, to which he gives a positive answer. Galaktion drinks from a chalice and begins a song based on his own poem “From Tskaltubo to Kutaisi”. He then tells the students about his days in Petrograd, his meetings with famous Russian and foreign writers, including John Reed, among others. One student points out that “I and the Night” shows traces of symbolism, which the poet denies, stating that critics invented symbolism. He then turns to Dimitri Benashvili and asks him to confirm that Galaktion is a poet of the revolution, not a symbolist, and shares the story behind the writing of “I and the Night”. According to his account, the poet’s revolutionary friend, who was imprisoned in the Kutaisi gubernatorial prison, was waiting for a secret signal from him. They had previously agreed that during the prisoner’s walk, he would throw a secret message wrapped in a piece of bread from the prison yard into the street. During the walk, the revolutionary threw the bread bundle, but a dog grabbed it in the street. Galaktion claims that he rushed to the dog, tore the bread from its teeth, hastily opened it, and found a note inside that read: “We will send you weapons”. According to the poet, this event became the basis for writing “I and the Night”.

Source: G. Liakhvispireli, Galaktion is One, Meetings in Tskhinvali, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 342. Al. Ghlonti, Meetings with Galaktion, Mravalkari (Philological Etudes), Tbilisi, 1991, p. 154-155. A. Topuria. Methodology of Teaching Georgian Literature (Grades VIII-X), II, Tbilisi, 1959, p. 278.

1956

April 21

In the morning, he returns to Tbilisi from Tskhinvali with Dimitri Benashvili.

Source: G. Liakhvispireli, There is Only One Galaktion – Meetings in Tskhinvali, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 338.

1956

April 30

Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “May and Peacefulness” is published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, translated by Pavel Antokolsky.

Source: Май и Мир (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с грузинского П. Антопольский, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1956, 30 апреля, №102.

1956

March-April

He asks the young poet Jansugh Charkviani if he has heard the names of Yezhov, Andrei Vyshinsky, and Lavrentiy Beria. After receiving confirmation, he tells him that they all resemble Stalin's coats.

Source: J. Charkviani, Brief Recollections about Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 101-102.

May

1956

May 14

He notices that his two front teeth are damaged. He becomes very anxious, as he believes that losing teeth is the first sign of old age.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 292.

1956

May 14

He has no money at all, which is why he borrows ten roubles from his wife, Nina Kvirikadze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 292.

1956

May 14

He is traveling from Tskneti to Tbilisi with the driver, and the driver asks for his salary from the previous month, despite having worked no days that month.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 292.

1956

Spring

In the underground passage of the Pedagogical Institute, two young men stop him and rudely flirt with him. At that moment, Galaktion notices an acquaintance and signals him to help get him out of the situation. The acquaintance takes his arm and pulls him away from the unknown young men.

Source: B. Abesadze, three meetings with Galaktion, newspaper Tbilisi, October 26, 1991, № 196, p. 3

June

1956

June 6

The editor of the State Publishing House, Rezo Orjonikidze, promises that the work on "The Book of Peace" will be completed by June 11.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 293.

1956

Until June 7

He sends a telegram to the Museum of Russian Literature of the Academy of Sciences of the Soviet Union, also known as the Pushkin House. He expresses his consent to participate in the Eighth All-Union Conference and requests that a hotel room be reserved for him at his own expense.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-262; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 89.

Dating: We date it according to the time of the conference.

1956

June 10

The editor of the State Publishing House, Rezo Orjonikidze, completes the work on “The Book of Peace” and hands the Book over to the director of the publishing house, Giorgi Merkviladze.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 293.

1956

After June 10

The director of the State Publishing House, Giorgi Merkviladze, tells him that a response regarding “The Book of Peace” will be given on June 25. These words anger Galaktion, as he had submitted the completed poem to the publishing house back in the winter, and yet the process was still delayed.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 13; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 293.

1956

June 15

He makes a list of items needed for the house that he plans to buy. Among them are: lampshades, light fixtures, chairs, tables, a typewriter, a radio, folders, glue, coloured inks, a fountain pen, and pencils.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 294.

1956

June 16

He receives a letter from G. Ladaria, the head of the First Construction Trust Directorate in Sokhumi, in which he learns that the security for his house under construction in Sokhumi was removed on May 11, and that the organization is no longer responsible for its safety, as the allocated funds did not cover the costs of security.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 21; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 295

Note: The letter is written in Russian and was sent on June 11.

1956

June 18

The driver does not have the car's passport with him, which results in Galaktion having to pay a fine of 75 roubles.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 14; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 291-292.

1956

Until June 20

He sends a telegram to the manager of the Sixth Construction Trust in Sokhumi, informing them that he is undergoing treatment in a hospital and will visit as soon as he is able. He confirms a debt of 46,000 roubles to the trust.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-167; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 80.

1956

June 20

He writes a letter to the Minister of Urban and Rural Construction of Georgia, informing him that the construction of his house in Sokhumi has been ongoing for six years and still hasn't been completed. He attaches a letter from the head of the construction directorate, G. Ladaria, in which the organization disclaims responsibility for the construction project. Galaktion explains to the minister that, over the past year, he has constantly had health issues and was undergoing treatment, which prevented him from settling matters with the construction organization. Therefore, he requests a two-month delay in resolving this issue.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 23; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 295.

1956

June 21

He plans to submit a statement to the Ministry of Social Security, confirming that he is a personal pensioner and, as a result, is exempt from taxes. Additionally, he wants to find out why his personal pension was discontinued and clarify whether there is an option for the pension to be reinstated starting from November of the same year.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 13; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 286-287.

1956

June 23 or later

While at the Writers' Union, he reads the notice posted on the doors of the offices of Irakli Abashidze and Sergi Tchilaia, which states that writers should address their inquiries regarding creative assignments, household issues, Book publishing, and matters related to copyright directly to the Georgian Literary Fund, publishing houses, and the Copyright Protection Department.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,61, p. 9; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 316.

Note: The Copyright Protection Department is referred to as “საუკდო” in the source.

1956

After June 23

He revises the untitled poem “In the Field Stands a Single Sheaf...”, written on December 28-31, 1954, and creates a new untitled version with a different beginning: “In the Field Stood...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №292-d, p. 21; №292-d, p. 15; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 249.

1956

June 24

A photo of Galaktion and Vazha-Pshavela’s wife, Tamar Didebashvili, is published in the newspaper Zarya Vostoka, taken in Charkhali during the celebration of Vazha-Pshavela’s name day.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 24; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 296.

Note: In the source, the newspaper Zarya Vostoka is referred to as “Z.V”.

1956

June 25

In the morning, he is in Tskneti. He is pleased that the water has arrived and that the driver did not make him wait. He plans to return to Tbilisi.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 25; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 296.

1956

June 26

He is on his way from Tskneti to Tbilisi. The car breaks down on the incline. The driver explains that the reason is that there was no water in the yard in Tskneti, and it was necessary to refill the car with water. Since this could not be done, the car stopped. This explanation irritates Galaktion, as they passed by at least ten faucets after leaving Tskneti.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 27; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 297.

1956

June 26

He is at the Navtlughi baths, where he sees Dr. Alexandre Kekelia.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 297.

1956

June 27

He outlines a long-term action plan in short points. He plans to address every day, family matters and also focus on promoting his own creative work.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-540, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 201-202.

1956

June 29

He is on Udzo Mountain, watching a rainbow. With him is the family's helper, Irma Papashvili, who greets the appearance of the rainbow with a cheerful exclamation.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 24; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 296.

Note: In the source, Irma Papashvili is referred to only by her first name.

1956

June 29

In his notebook, he writes down the phone numbers of the Deputy Director of the State Publishing House, Erasti Torotadze, the employee of the same publishing house, Noe Kakushadze, the artist Giorgi Gordeladze, the director of Zarya Vostoka, Mark Zlatkin, the employee of Children's Literature Publishing, Viktor Gabeskiria, and the representative of Saktsigni, Shalva Meburishvili. He also writes the phone numbers of the switchboard operator at the Ministry of Culture and the editorial offices of the magazines Drosha and Sabtchota Khelovneba.

Source: MGL, d-359, p. 31; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 297.

Note: In the source, Erasti Torotadze, Mark Zlatkin, and Shalva Meburishvili are referred to by their last names only, Noe Kakushadze and Giorgi Gordeladze are mentioned by their last names and initials, and Viktor Gabeskiria is referred to as "Gabesk".

1956

June 29

He is in Tskneti with his family. His stepdaughter, Nunu Ebanoidze's husband, Vakhtang (Vata) Pirtskhalava, behaves rudely towards the family members, speaking loudly and making threats. Galaktion is astonished by this man's unusual audacity. Vakhtang Pirtskhalava shows disrespect towards Galaktion as well, not even standing up when the poet enters the room. The poet finds this behaviour appalling, as it is clear that the man has not appreciated Galaktion's efforts, including the fact that the poet has been financially supporting his wife, Nunu Ebanoidze, and his daughter, Marine Pirtskhalava, for six years.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 32-35; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 297-298.

Note: In the source, Vakhtang (Vata) Pirtskhalava is not named.

1956

June 30

He is at the Academy of Sciences, where the defence of a dissertation begins. He signs the relevant protocol but does not attend the defence.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 36; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299.

1956

June 30

At the Academy of Sciences, he meets Giorgi Abzianidze and Shalva Radiani. He observes Shalva Radiani's behaviour and thinks that he is a great schemer, as he feels no discomfort or shame in meddling with matters and manipulating the situation to his advantage.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 36; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299.

1956

June 30

He writes a two-stanza, untitled epigram dedicated to Shalva Radiani, which begins with the line “Every incompetence starts with Radiani”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 36; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299.

1956

June 30

He meets with Sergi Nadimashvili, the director of the Gori State Historical-Ethnographical Museum, at the Ministry of Culture.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 37; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299.

1956

June 30

He learns that there is ongoing discussion among the authorities about confiscating the houses built by the residents of Tbilisi in Tskneti.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 24; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 296.

July

1956

July 2

He plans to select manuscripts for an exhibition and prepare materials for the eighth and ninth volumes of his works.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-524, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 128.

1956

July 3

He meets with Mark Zlatkin, the director of Zarya Vostoka. During their conversation, it becomes clear that Zlatkin is interested in the preliminary preparations for the Georgian Culture and Art Decade. He tells Galaktion that Sergi Tchilaia and Besarion Zhgenti are currently in Moscow for the Decade, and they will bring back the approved plan for the event. Zlatkin also informs him that the publication plan includes the release of Galaktion’s Book in Russian. He further promises that if any Book about Galaktion is published in Georgian, he will ensure its Russian edition as well. In addition, the poet is offered the opportunity to publish a poem for the Decade. According to Zlatkin, Galaktion should actively cooperate with Russian literary organizations.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 45-46; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

Note: In the source, Mark Zlatkin, Sergi Tchilaia, and Besarion Zhgenti are referred to by their last names only.

1956

July 3

He plans to quickly resolve the issues related to his dental treatment.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 39; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299.

1956

July 3

He plans to purchase necessary items for the house: a table, a suitcase, glue, repair materials, and indoor footwear. He also plans to have his typewriter repaired.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 39; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299.

1956

July 3

He plans to organize a meeting at the Officers' House in September, with topics covering the 1917 revolution and World War II.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 39; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 299-300.

1956

July 3

He wants to enlarge a photo of the bust of himself sculpted by Iakob Nikoladze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 39; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

1956

July 3

He urges himself to be cautious and reminds himself not to forget the behaviour of the critics and their tricks.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 39; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

1956

July 3

He plans to publish his works in the newspapers Komunisti and Zarya Vostoka.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 39; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

1956

July 3

From his conversation with Mark Zlatkin, the director of Zarya Vostoka, he learns that many important books are planned for release within the framework of the Georgian Culture and Art Decade, including the works of the classics and anthologies of young poets.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 45-46; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

Note: Mark Zlatkin is referred to by his last name only in the source.

1956

July 3

He is thinking about the Georgian Culture and Art Decade, which is set to take place next year in Moscow. He plans to publish the poem “The Book of Peace” separately in connection with this event. Additionally, he wants to release a Book that will compile articles and other materials about Galaktion published by well-known writers, such as Vasil Barnovi, Davit Kldiashvili, and others.
Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 46; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

1956

July 3

He meets with the artist Giorgi Gordeladze and the academic secretary of the Academy of Sciences’ Department of Social Sciences, Angia Botchorishvili. Both of them promise to assist and support him in organizing the exhibition.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 47; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

Note: In the source, Giorgi Gordeladze and Angia Botchorishvili are referred to by their last names only.

1956

July 3 or later

His stepdaughter, Nunu Ebanoidze, praises the artist Ioseb Bakhtadze, and Galaktion decides to involve him, along with other artists, in the exhibition preparations.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 51; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301.

Note: In the source, Ioseb Bakhtadze is referred to by his last name only.

1956

July 3 or later

He learns that there is a frame at the medical combine that can be used for the exhibition. After receiving this information, he writes a humorous, untitled, five-line poem titled “After the Great Exhibition”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 51; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 301.

1956

July 6

On the road to Tskneti, he meets Sergi Kldiashvili, who asks him when he will take his archive from the Writers’ Union’s wardrobe. Galaktion is encouraged by the thought that his bookcase is disturbing some people’s peace of mind.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 46; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 293.

1956

July 7

He is at the medical combine, and they ask him to have an electrocardiogram (ECG) taken.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 38; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 302.

1956

July 7

He thinks that it is possible to include fragments of poems and verses in critical articles, monographs, and prose translations, in the same way as prose. This way, the poetic quotes will not take up much space and will also be pleasant to read.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 26; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 296.

1956

July 9

In Tskneti, in the Ashtree Garden, he begins working on the ninth volume of his collected works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,60, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 306.

1956

July 16

He pays the driver his salary, and the driver, upon receiving the payment, tells him that he will quit the job the following day.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,61, p. 20; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 319.

1956

July 16

He plans to visit the dentist and restore his damaged teeth.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,61, p. 22; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 319.

1956

July 16

He is curious about the volume of the Book that needs to be prepared for the Georgian Culture and Art Decade, and he also wants to find out the deadline for submitting the book, as he knows that he won't be able to finish working on it by August. To clarify this, he speaks with Tamar Andguladze, an employee of the Writers' Union, who informs him that Sergi Tchilaia has said the Book should be ready by the end of September.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,61, p. 22; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 319.

1956

July 17

In his notebook, he notes the address of the artist Kote Eristavi, as he believes that he will be able to help with organizing the exhibition.

Source: MGL, d-361, p. 21; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 318.

1956

July 17-18

His driver, who has decided to leave the job, visits him for just one hour.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,61, p. 20; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 319.

1956

July 19

He addresses the writer Marietta Shaginyan, as a representative of the State Publishing House, and requests that the ninth volume of his works be included in the 1957 publishing plan.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,61, p. 34; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 321.

1956

July 19

He submits a statement to the director of the State Publishing House of Georgia, writing that, in accordance with the November 1933 resolution, seven volumes of his works have already been published, the eighth has been submitted for publication, and the ninth is ready for typesetting. He requests that the publication of the ninth volume of his works be included in the 1957 plan.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-218; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 130.

1956

July 20

He meets with Ilia Bakhtadze and Akaki Vasadze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,61, p. 22; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 319.

1956

July 20

He writes a poem "Forward, Forward, My Homeland!"

Source: MGL, d-640, 97; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 69.

1956

July 20

He is in the Vere River Gorge and makes entries in his diary about his childhood.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,61, p. 23; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 319.

1956

July 21

He meets with the writer Gigla Mebuke.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,61, p. 30; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 321.

1956

July 22

He makes a note on the poem "Forward, Forward, My Homeland!" stating that in the morning, while he was trimming stakes for vines in Tskneti, a child approached him and asked why he was working so slowly. He mentions that upon hearing this, he quickened his pace, and it felt as though he wrote the poem in the same manner – putting his heart into the work, not giving up, and finishing it quickly.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-640, 97; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 69.

1956

July 23

He is at the dentist Vladimir Antonovich's office and notes his full name in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,61, p. 8; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 316.

1956

July 24

He is in Tskneti, looking over the exhibition materials dedicated to his biography and works: enlarged Book covers from various publications, prints, photographs, portraits of him created by artists, a facsimile of Galaktioni and the ornament adorned with the inscription "National Poet of Georgia".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,62, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 321.

1956

July 25

He works with his wife, Nina Kvirikadze, on compiling the ninth volume of his collected works. They list a part of the works to be included in the volume, count the number of lines in each, and then mark the date.

Source: G. Tabidze's and Nino Kvirikadze's record, MGL, d-363, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 323-325.

1956

July 25

He submits a statement to the publishing house Zarya Vostoka, requesting that the publication of his poems be included in the 1957 plan. He writes that he will provide the word-for-word translations by the end of August.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-219; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 131.

1956

July 27

He is at the Writers' Union, where he meets Tamar Andghuladze. From her, he learns that Besarion Zhghenti has returned from Moscow and brought news about the Decade.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,61, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 317.

Note: In the source, Besarion Zhghenti is referred to as Besia.

1956

July 27

He thinks that it will be necessary to travel to Moscow before the Georgian Culture and Art Decade and resolve some of the matters on-site.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,61, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 318.

1956

July 28 or later

He learns from Besarion Zhghenti that on July 28, the participants of the Georgian Culture and Art Decade had a meeting to discuss the issues related to the event.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,61, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 318.

Note: In the source, Besarion Zhghenti is referred to as Besia.

1956

July 29

He is at the medical clinic, where he notices that the frame he had liked earlier for his portrait is still in its place.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 15; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 370.

1956

July 30

He notes the titles of his poetry collections published in Russian in 1950 and 1953. He plans to include the "Selected Poems" published in Russian in 1950 and prepare a bibliography. All of this helps him gather material for the Russian-language Book to be published for the Decade.

Source: MGL, d-364, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 325.

1956

July 30

He continues working on the Russian-language Book to be published within the framework of the Georgian Literature and Art Decade. He plans to select translated texts from the 1945 Russian edition of the Book "Lyrics", which includes translations by Giorgi Tsagareli.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,65, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 326.

1956

July 30

He continues working on the Russian-language Book to be published within the framework of the Georgian Culture and Art Decade. He reports the number of translated poems, the number of verses to be included in the book, and the verses of the poem "John Reed".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,65, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 325.

1956

July 30

He works on the Russian-language Book to be published within the framework of the Georgian Culture and Art Decade. He plans to select works for the new edition from three of his poetry collections published in the 1930s in Russian: Poems (1933), Verses and Poems (1935), and Selected Poems (1937).

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,66, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 328.

1956

After July 30

In the magazine Literaturuli Dziebani, Akaki Khintibidze's article "For the Issue of Conflict in Lyrics" is published, addressing the general theoretical issue of the peculiarities of depicting conflict in lyrical poetry. To support his arguments, the critic references Galaktion's works. According to Akaki Khintibidze, lyric poetry is distinguished from other literary genres by several characteristics. The critic raises the question: How capable is lyric poetry, through its single hero, of depicting conflict? The researcher believes this is entirely possible, and the proof lies in the 19th-century Georgian classical poetry as well as in Galaktion Tabidze's work. According to Khintibidze, the lyrical hero in Galaktion's poetry is in conflict with the existing reality, opposing the negativity rooted in life, as well as certain groups of people who represent the negative aspects of life. The author of the article asserts that in Galaktion's pre-revolutionary lyric poetry, the conflict between the poet and the dark reality is depicted, while the lyric of the 1920s and 1930s is a steadfast struggle for everything that was revolutionary.

Source: A. Khintibidze, On the Issue of Conflict in Lyric Poetry, magazine Literaturuli Dziebani, 1956, X, p. 1-10.

Dating: The magazine is signed for printing on July 30, 1956.

1956

After July 30

In the magazine Literaturuli Dziebani, Dimitri Benashvili's article "Galaktion Tabidze's Lyrics" is published, which, according to the author, is based on the study of materials from the poet's personal archive and museums. The extensive work aims to clarify three main issues: 1. Which aspects of the epoch influenced the nature of Galaktion's creativity? 2. What is the creative connection between the poet and Georgian classical poetry? 3. What innovation did he introduce into the rich Georgian poetic culture? When reviewing Galaktion's early work, Dimitri Benashvili rejects the idea of the poet being a symbolist. In his view, symbolists in Russia, France, and Georgia were not connected in any way to the revolution. Therefore, the defeat of the revolution could not have been the reason for their pessimistic mood. On the contrary, according to Benashvili, Galaktion's early work clearly expresses the sorrow caused by the defeat of the revolution, and thus, his melancholic tone has nothing in common with the symbolic melancholy of the symbolists' vanity. The critic asserts that linking Galaktion's early poetry to symbolism was an unforgivable mistake in Georgian literary studies. Benashvili indicates that, due to the means of poetic expression, Galaktion's early works do not fit into the framework of realism. Moreover, the poet does not adhere strictly to the traditions of classical romanticism. Therefore, to describe Galaktion's early creative method, the critic proposes the term "romantic realism". Benashvili defines this term as follows: a writer imbued with the aesthetic worldview of romantic realism reflects real life in an artistic form that portrays human life with a romantic tint; romantic realism views reality not with the calm eye of steady realism but with a restless, sometimes nervous feeling. The critic sees the foundation of Galaktion's innovation in this new artistic method of grasping reality. Benashvili notes that even at the beginning of his second creative period, Galaktion remains a representative of romantic realism, but gradually moves toward socialist realism. Dmitri Benashvili also discusses the poet's attitude toward literary tradition. He states that some literary figures intentionally try to present Galaktion as a poet disconnected from the national literary tradition, which is not true. Benashvili draws attention to the philosophical issues in Galaktion's poetry and attempts to explain the poet's melancholic mood through social foundations. He also speaks about Galaktion's love lyrics, asserting that Galaktion was a reformer in this area as well, executing a poetic reform as significant as that of Nikoloz Baratashvili in his time. Galaktion gave his love lyrics philosophical depth and drama. In this sphere of lyricism too, Benashvili argues, Galaktion follows romantic realism. The author also focuses on Galaktion's patriotic lyrics. According to him, Galaktion is almost foreign to stereotypical patriotism, and the search for national accessories in Galaktion's patriotic lyrics is futile. The poet does not follow the beaten path of Georgian patriotic lyricism, and through new poetic means, he attempts to express national colour.

Source: D. Benashvili, Galaktion Tabidze's Lyric Poetry, magazine Literaturuli Dzebani, 1956, X, p. 187-216.

Dating: The magazine is signed for printing on July 30, 1956.

August

1956

Until August 1

At midnight, he begins compiling a list of materials to be included in the ninth volume with his wife, Nina Kvirikadze.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, MGL, d-360, p. 2-7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 306.

1956

August 1

He is in Tskneti and is upset about cute beloved dog, named "Kursha", which was hit by a car.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-130, p. 85-86; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XVI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 52-57.

1956

August 1

He continues working with his wife, Nina Kvirikadze, on the list of materials to be included in the ninth volume. For some works, he adds various types of information in parentheses, whether it be the publication date or the fact that the poem was read on the radio.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's and Galaktion Tabidze's records, MGL, d-360, p. 7-16; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 307-309.

1956

August 1

He, along with his wife Nina Kvirikadze, counts the lines of the poem “The Book of Peace”. He thinks that it is necessary to add a few more lines to the existing 6,000 lines.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-467, 13; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 236;

1956

August 1

He plans to publish a Book for the Georgian Culture and Art Decade, including the publication of his poem, ensuring the translation and publication of his works in Russian. He wants to gradually prepare for the Decade. To do this, he plans to address the current matters at home, the Academy of Sciences, the public library, and the editorial office of Zarya Vostoka.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,59, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 303.

1956

August 1

He goes to the Academy of Sciences to find out how the translation of his poem “The Book of Peace” is progressing. Before arriving at the Academy, he is drawn to the sight of sixteen flags decorating the garden near the Academy. Seeing this scene lifts his spirits, and he thinks that these sixteen flags are rustling in anticipation of “The Book of Peace”, that his poem will be under the protection of these flags. He has no doubt about the grandeur of his work’s future and wishes for the poem’s success. In high spirits, he also enjoys the fact that the month of August, a month full of plans for him, is starting off so well.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,67, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 329.

Note: In the sixteen flags, it is presumably implied that the flags of the 15 republics of the Soviet Union and the flag of the Soviet Union itself are meant.

1956

August 1

Alio Mashashvili tells him about the commission for the Georgian Culture and Art Decade, stating that they will use their position and fill the anthology prepared for the Decade with their own writings. Galaktion thinks that this is a noteworthy point.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,67, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 330.

1956

August 2

He learns that the commission for the Georgian Culture and Art Decade consists of six writers: Besarion Zhghenti, Sergi Tchilaia, Grigol Abashidze, Carlo Kaladze, Simon Chikovani, and Mikheil Mrevlishvili. He writes down their phone numbers, as he believes he will need to contact them during the preparation process for the Decade.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,67, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 330.

1956

August 2

He plans to speak on the phone with Besarion Zhghenti about the Georgian Culture and Art Decade. He wants to find out when the chief editor of the State Literary Publishing House, Alexandra Ryabinina, will arrive from Russia.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 60; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 303.

1956

August 2

He is preparing a Russian-language Book for the Georgian Culture and Art Decade. He is selecting materials, some of which have already been translated, but the amount of untranslated texts is greater than the translated ones. He believes that to resolve the translation issue, it is essential to clarify the matter of proofreading. Additionally, part of the poems still needs to be translated. He assumes that the material needed for the Book will be printed by the end of September.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 59; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 304.

1956

August 2

He plans to go to the public library and browse through his 1940 Book "Selected Poems", which was published in Russian by Valerian Gaprindashvili and Viktor Goltsev, in order to gather translated material from that edition as well.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 59; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 304.

1956

August 2

He is thinking about the Russian-language Book to be published. Since some of the material to be included in the Book has not yet been translated into Russian, he plans to contact the Russian poet and translator Boris Serebryakov, who translated several of Galaktion's poems years ago.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 59; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 304.

1956

August 3

In his notebook, he reviews the entries of 1951 year, in which he criticizes Shalva Radiani and adds that, for now, he is still lingering.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 272, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 233-234.

1956

August 3

He finishes organizing his own poems. He thinks that it is a significant task accomplished, but it is still necessary to review the organized material once more.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,68, p. 4; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 330.

1956

August 3

He plans to visit the Writers' Union to clarify details directly related to the preparations for the Georgian Culture and Art Decade. Specifically, he intends to ask the widow of the poet and translator Georgy Kreytan for the translations his late husband completed. He also plans to meet with the chairman of the Writers' Union, Irakli Abashidze, to find out who is responsible for compiling the anthology to be published for the Georgian Culture and Art Decade.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 62; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 304.

1956

August 3

He plans to speak with Veriko Anjaparidze and ask her to participate in the poetry evenings.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 62; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 304.

1956

August 3

He plans to visit the public library to study how the Armenian Culture and Art Decade was held in Moscow. He believes that clarifying this matter will help him achieve his goals and assist in the preparation for the Georgian literature and art decade. He is confident that he will be able to clarify the details of this interesting topic within two hours, and he plans to spend that time in the library. He also considers involving the librarians in the preparation for the decade, as he will need their assistance in finding the necessary materials.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 62; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 304.

1956

August 3

He plans to work at home on the ninth volume of his works and the Book to be published in Russian.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 62; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 304.

1956

August 3

He plans to visit the Literary Repository to check if he has any outstanding debts. After clarifying this, he intends to take a loan from the fund.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 62; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 304.

1956

August 3

He plans to travel to Sokhumi to address the issues related to his construction project on-site. To avoid wasting time, he intends to work on the ninth volume of his works and the Book to be published in Russian while on the road.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 62; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 304.

1956

August 3

He believes it is necessary to review the poems, select those to be translated word-for-word into Russian, prepare the manuscripts, and hand them over to the translators.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 62; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 304.

1956

August 3

He plans to closely monitor the ongoing processes at the Academy, paying attention to the influence of Radianism and Leonidism, that is, the effects of Shalva Radiani and Giorgi Leonidze, as well as the actions of their supporters.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 62; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 304.

Note: In the source, Shalva Radiani and Giorgi Leonidze are not named; only the terms Radianism, Radianization, and Leonidism are used.

1956

August 4

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes Boris Serebryakov's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "The People".

Source: Народ (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1956, 4 августа, №180.

1956

August 4

He is thinking about a Book to be published in Russian and writes down the problems related to the publication of this book. First of all, he wants to clarify which specific materials need to be translated and plans to prepare the final list of poems to be translated. He also plans to ask the Writers' Union for assistance with the translation of the texts.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 306.

1956

August 4

He is interested in the identity of the compiler of the anthology to be published for the Decade of Georgian Culture and Art.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 306.

1956

August 4

He plans to familiarize himself with the periodical press of May 31 at the public library. He is interested in information about the Decade of Armenian Culture and Art.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 306.

Note: The reason for the interest in the periodical press is not specified in the source.

1956

August 4

He is interested in how representatives of other fields of art are preparing for the Decade of Georgian Culture and Art and plans to get in touch with them to find out.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 306.

1956

August 4

He plans to approach the artist Theodor Chudetsky for the illustration materials for the Book to be published for the Decade of Georgian Culture and Art. Additionally, he thinks it is necessary to prepare as much photographic material as possible.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 306.

1956

August 4

He thinks that all three books – the one to be published in Georgian, the one in Russian, and the collection of poems – should be prepared concurrently. In addition, he plans to compile a collection of articles and reviews about his work, as well as a Book that brings together his writings on the theme of October.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 306.

1956

August 4

He plans to ask Bariatinskiy, a neighbour of the current Gia Tchanturia Street resident, named Tabidze, for assistance in the preparations for the Decade of Georgian Culture and Art.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 306.

1956

August 5

The newspaper Sabtchota Oseti publishes a review by Karpes Donadze of Galaktion Tabidze's "Selected Works". The reviewer discusses the poet's 1954 Book thematically and considers it a valuable addition to Georgian literature.

Source: K. Donadze, Galaktion Tabidze's "Selected Works", Newspaper Sabtchota Oseti, 1956, №152 (August 5), p. 4.

1956

August 5

He compiles an alphabetical list of works already translated into Russian, with the title of each text accompanied by the name of the translator and the year of publication.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,68, p. 3-17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 330-331.

1956

August 6

He collects 624 poems for the Russian edition of his works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,64, p. 45; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 326.

1956

August 8

He works on the Book to be published in Russian. He plans to organize the translations by sorting out the already printed texts separately and identifying the texts that need to be handed over to the printer. Additionally, he considers it necessary to create an alphabetical index for the completed and preparatory materials, while also ensuring a clear distinction between these two categories.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,69, p. 2-4; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 332.

1956

August 9

He increases the number of poems collected for the Russian edition of his works to 690.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,64, p. 45; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 326.

1956

August 9 or later

He calculates that he needs a total of 960 poems for the Russian edition of his works. He has selected 642 poems, and 318 remain to be translated.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,64, p. 45; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 326.

1956

Until August 13

He makes a note regarding the organizational matters of his jubilee celebration. He specifies that the jubilee committee should consist of representatives from the party, government, public organizations, specially invited individuals, and recognized writers from fraternal republics. A proclamation should be issued on behalf of the jubilee committee in both Georgian and Russian languages. He believes that the current administrative apparatus of the Writers' Union cannot take on the responsibilities of the jubilee committee.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-601, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 17;

1956

August 16

He awaits information from the organizers of the Decade of Georgian Culture and Art, but they have not responded yet.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,61, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 318.

1956

August 17

He submits the translations of eleven poems to the editorial office of Zarya Vostoka: “It Is War”, “Revolutionary Georgia”, “Symphony of October”, “Epoch”, “Flower of Light”, “Four Days”, “Kitesa”, “Serious Disease”, “Zhuga and Asida”, “A story of a night”, and “Explosion”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,70, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 333.

1956

August 17

He notes that at nine o’clock, a bird flew into his room.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-582, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 426.

1956

August 20

They ask him to help the orphaned Tkebuchava from Tetnuldi continue his studies at an agricultural school, specializing in agronomy-plant protection or horticulture-viticulture. For this purpose, he notes the name of the school’s rector at the time, Ivane Sarishvili, in the notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,70, p. 34; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 340.

1956

August 20 or later

Savle Abuladze gives him the Russian translation of the poem “Explosion”. Galaktion checks the length and counts 696 lines.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,61, p. 33; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 321;

Note: The source only specifies the year, but month and day are not provided.

1956

August 26

He writes an untitled poem “As If He Had Heard Some News...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №8105; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 265.

1956

August 26

He writes an untitled poem “From Mountain to Mountain, the Rainbow Shines...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №8106; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 266.

1956

August 26

He writes an untitled poem “Coming from Above...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №8104; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 303; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 677.

1956

August 28

He tries to help Tkebuchava from Tetnaldi, who received high scores on the exams, continue his studies at the agricultural school, specializing in agronomy-plant protection or horticulture-viticulture. However, he is unable to assist because it turns out that there is no available space. Galaktion regrets that the young man, who performed well on the exams, will be left outside.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,70, p. 34; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 340.

1956

Until August 29

He thinks that the translator Savle Abuladze will have the Russian translation of his poem “Invention” ready by August 29.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,70, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 334.

1956

August 29

He is scheduled to meet the translator Savle Abuladze at one o’clock, who promised the day before to bring the translations of his works at the appointed time.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,70, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 333.

1956

August 30

He notes the name and last name of the police officer Vazha Bulachauri in the notebook.

Source: MGL, d-361, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 316.

1956

July-August

Together with his spouse, Nino Kvirikadze, he works on the Book to be published for the Decade of Georgian Culture and Art. To record various types of related information, Nino Kvirikadze takes a separate notebook and humorously writes that it is the “second-grade student of the Book Compilation School” – Nino’s notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,69, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 332.

1956 or later

Summer

Klimenti Gogiava, along with his young son, plans to travel to Sokhumi, but all the tickets are sold out at the railway ticket offices. Unexpectedly, he meets Galaktion and complains about not having a ticket. Galaktion gives him his own ticket, asking him to pay attention to the construction of his house in Sokhumi and report any news. A little while later, after settling in the train carriage, Klimenti is unexpectedly visited by the poet again, holding a paper bag. He brings food as a snack for the child and asks one more thing: to measure the walls of his house under construction and let him know.

Source: K. Gogiava, I Love the Rain of Abkhazia, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 196-197;

September

1956

Until September

He notes in the notebook that Ilia Bakhtadze will have the lecture “Akaki and Galaktion” ready in September.

Source: MGL, d-361, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 316.

1956

September 1

He attends an exhibition of artworks by artists from North Ossetia.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,70, p. 12; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 335.

1956

September 3

He is interested in the centenary celebration of the Ukrainian writer and public figure Ivan Franko, which is to be held at the Writers’ Union. In his notebook, he notes a discrepancy: the announcement published in the newspapers states that the anniversary evening will start at 6 o’clock, while the notice posted on the Writers’ Union board mentions 8 o’clock. He writes a humorous poem titled “The 100th Anniversary of Franco’s Birth” about this confusion.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,70, p. 16; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 336.

1956

September 3

He notes in his notebook the names of the writers who are to participate in the centenary celebration of the Ukrainian writer and public figure Ivan Franko. These are: Konstantine Lortkipanidze, Irakli Abashidze, Grigol Abashidze, Kale Bobokhidze, Givi Gachechiladze, Alexandre Gomiashvili, Vaso Gorgadze, Sandro Euli, Solomon Tavadze, Andro Tevzadze, Giorgi Margvelashvili, Revaz Margiani, Ioseb Noneshvili, Besarion Zhgenti, Simon Pashalishvili, Demna Shengelaia, and Sergi Tchilaia.

Source: MGL, d-368, p. 30; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 339.

Note: In the source, Konstantine Lortkipanidze is mentioned by his last name only, while the writers Irakli Abashidze, Grigol Abashidze, Kale Bobokhidze, Givi Gachechiladze, Alexandre Gomiashvili, Vaso Gorgadze, Sandro Euli, Solomon Tavadze, Andro Tevzadze, Giorgi Margvelashvili, Revaz Margiani, Ioseb Noneshvili, Besarion Zhgenti, Simon Pashalishvili, Demna Shengelaia, and Sergi Tchilaia are referred to by their initials and last names.

1956

Until September 4

He notes in his notebook that on September 4, at 8 o'clock in the evening, there will be an open meeting of the Writers' Union's party organization, at which Sergi Tchilaia will deliver a report on the topic "On the preparations for the Decade of Georgian Literature and Art in Moscow in 1957".

Source: MGL, d-370, p. 31; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 339.

Note: In the source, Sergi Tchilaia is mentioned by his initials and last name.

1956

Until September 4

He meets Sergi Tchilaia at the Writers' Union, who is inquiring about Galaktion's condition.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,70, p. 31; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 339.

Note: In the source, Sergi Tchilaia is mentioned by his initials and last name.

1956

September 4

He talks to the artist David Kutateladze, who expresses concern that the Writers' Union is not paying attention to the situation of the older writers and that the members of the Presidium only think about themselves.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,70, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 336.

1956

September 5

The translator gives him the Russian translation of the poem "Zhuga and Asida".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,70, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 333.

1956

September 5

He writes a draft of a recommendation for G. I. Grigolava, in which he notes that he positively evaluates the poems presented by the author and, with minor revisions, considers their publication possible.

Source: MGL, d-546, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 226.

Note: It is not possible to obtain additional information regarding Grigolava.

1956

September 6

While in the Ash Tree Garden in Tbilisi, a car suddenly stops in front of him, and an unknown driver tells him that he is looking for Shalva Radiani, as he has been invited to a session of the Central Committee's Bureau. Galaktion is curious about why the critic has been summoned.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,70, p. 9; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 334.

Note: In the source, Shalva Radiani is mentioned by his last name only.

1956

September 6

He waits for several hours in the Ash Tree Garden in Tbilisi for the translator Andro Pataria, but the latter does not show up.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,70, p. 9; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 334.

1956

After September 17

Eter Shushania's Book "Galaktion Tabidze" is being published. The monograph summarizes the Soviet criticism of the 1930s and 1940s regarding the study of Galaktion's work. The author of the work generally agrees with and relies on Sergi Tchilaia's framework for the development of Galaktion's creativity. In the early poetry of Galaktion, she attempts to find "revolutionary-propagandist" poems and tries to interpret the social content of his intimate-romantic lyrics. Shushania's monograph takes the extreme form of Soviet critics' efforts to separate Galaktion's name from the literary movement of symbolism. The author notes that, unlike the Tsisperkantselis, Galaktion never confronted the tradition of national literature. She categorically denies any connection between Galaktion and symbolism, pointing out that from the early stages of his work, the "self-centeredness" of poetry – "song for the sake of song" – was "alien and unacceptable" to him.

Source: E. Shushania, Galaktion Tabidze, 1956, p. 3-110.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on September 17, 1956.

1956

Until September 20

He plans to meet Pati Nishnianidze on the evening of September 20 at 10 o'clock.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,61, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 316.

Note: In the source, Pati Nishnianidze is mentioned by her first name only.

1956

September 20

He travels by train from Poti to meet the miners from Tkibuli. At midnight, he happily listens to the young people in the carriage singing a song based on his poem, "From Tskaltubo to Kutaisi the wind blows..." However, he notices that the last lines of the song – "Kutaisi is a city, a builder of industry, while Tskaltubo is the region that decorates it" – do not belong to him.

Source: P. Nishnianidze, Galaktion's Several Meetings with the Working People of Georgia, Tbilisi, 1960, p. 20.

1956

September 21

An untitled poem, "Forward, forward, homeland..." is published in Literaturuli Gazeti.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Gazeti, 1956, №38, p. 3.

1956

September 21

During his journey from the Rioni station in Kutaisi to Tkibuli, Galaktion meets students from the village of Orpiri, who invite him to a meeting at the school. The students sing a song based on Galaktion's poem, "From Tskaltubo to Kutaisi the wind blows..." The students Nineli Khetereli and Nargiza Lanchava read poems dedicated to the poet. At the end, Galaktion reads his own poems, thanks the hosts, and recalls that his father, Vasil Tabidze, worked as a teacher at a school in Tkibuli, and he was frequently invited to Tkibuli as well. Eventually, he was able to meet the workers of the region.

Source: P. Nishnianidze, Galaktion's Several Meetings with the Working People of Georgia, Tbilisi, 1960, p. 20. Sh. Chkheidze, The Immortality of a Great Poet, newspaper Kutaiskaia Pravda, September 11, 1973, N.220.

1956

September 21

He takes a photograph with the residents of the village of Orpiri and the school director, Irakli Khetereli.

Source: Sh. Chkheidze, The Immortality of a Great Poet, newspaper Kutaiskaia Pravda, September 11, 1973, №215, p. 3.

1956

September 21

The students and teachers of the Khresili village school organize a meeting.

Source: P. Nishnianidze, Galaktion's Several Meetings with the Working People of Georgia, Tbilisi, 1960, p. 20.

1956

September 21

At the meeting with the miners in Tkibuli, Vaso Gorgadze talks to the audience about Galaktion Tabidze's early works and reads several poems from that period. At the end, Galaktion reads his still unpublished poem "The People".

Source: P. Nishnianidze, Galaktion's Several Meetings with the Working People of Georgia, Tbilisi, 1960, p. 20.

1956

After September 21

He plans to visit the editorial office of the newspaper Komunisti, send his foster daughter Nunu Ebanoidze to the Academy of Sciences to collect his due salary, transcribe the poem "The People" from Literaturuli Gazeti and add it to the materials for reprinting, and purchase paper.

Source: MGL, d-619, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 143.

1956

September 22

He tours the sights of Tkibuli.

Source: P. Nishnianidze, Galaktion's Several Meetings with the Working People of Georgia, Tbilisi, 1960, p. 20.

1956

September 22

The miners of Tkibuli organize a meeting at the Lenin Mine, where the leading miner, Ivane Orjonikidze, greets Galaktion on behalf of the workers and presents him with a miner's hat as a gift, inscribed with the words: "From the miners of the Tkibuli mine to the National Poet Galaktion Tabidze".

Source: Newspaper Tkibuli, 1966, N 139; P. Nishnianidze, Galaktion's Several Meetings with the Working People of Georgia, Tbilisi, 1960, p. 22.

1956

September 22

In the Russian newspaper Sovetskaya Abkhazia, Boris Serebryakov's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "In the Tkvarcheli Mines" is published.

Source: На шахтах Ткварчели (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. Б. Серебряков, Советская Абхазия, Сухуми, 1956, 22 сентября, №188.

1956

After September 22

He receives a letter from a group of young people. They do not like Galaktion's poem "To the People" and ask him whether he could have written a better poem than this, and if he could, why he did not write it before the death of the great leader, Stalin. The senders demand that he respond in the pages of the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-494; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 328.

1956

September 23

The hosts from Tkibuli accompany Galaktion towards Kutaisi.

Source: P. Nishnianidze, Galaktion's Several Meetings with the Working People of Georgia, Tbilisi, 1960, p. 22.

1956

September 28

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, the translations of Galaktion Tabidze's poems "Our Day" and "The Page of a Bright Era" by Elena Nikolaevskaya and Irina Snegova are published.

Source: Наш день - эпохи светлая страница (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. Е. Николаевская, И. Снегова, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1956, 28 сентября, №227.

1956

Until September 28

He is at the Writers' Union. In his notebook, he notes the text of a notice posted on the board, according to which the IV Plenary Session of the Board of the Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia will take place on September 28 at 12 o'clock at the Writers' House.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,71, p. 4; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 340.

1956

Until September 28

He reviews the theses and program of the expanded scientific session of the Psychiatry Research Institute, according to which the scientific event begins on September 28 and ends on October 2. Galaktion is interested in the number of speakers and notes how many reports are scheduled for each day. He is also struck by the fact that the scientific session is dedicated to the issues of clinical pathophysiology and therapy of schizophrenia.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,61, p. 26-29; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 320.

1956

September

He takes an interest in the exhibition of Ossetian artists held in Tbilisi, speaks to the correspondent of the newspaper Sabtchota Oseti about the brotherhood of the Georgian and Ossetian peoples, and impromptu leads the exhibition with his poem "I Greet This Exhibition...".

Source: G. Liakhvispireli, Galaktion is One – Meetings in Tskhinvali, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 358.

1956

September

During the meeting with the miners from Tkibuli, the student Nineli Khetereli dedicates him a poem.

Source: P. Nishnianidze, Galaktion's Several Meetings with the Working People of Georgia, Tbilisi, 1960, p. 20.

1956

September

An article by Marine Akhvlediani, titled "Georgian Writers in Foreign Languages", is published in the magazine Mnatobi, discussing the foreign translations of Georgian fiction. The article notes that Georgian Soviet writers – Giorgi Leonidze, Leo Kiacheli, Irakli Abashidze, Grigol Abashidze, Ioseb Grishashvili, and Galaktion Tabidze – enjoy particular popularity abroad.

Source: M. Akhvlediani, Georgian writers in foreign languages, magazine Mnatobi, 1956, №9, p. 149.

October

1956

October 10

He is at the medical clinic. The patients ask him to read his new poems. This request gives him the idea that it would be good to organize a meeting in the hospital's reading room exactly one week later, on October 17. He thinks that meeting with readers is his duty as a National Poet.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,72, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 344.

1956

October 11

The driver, who had asked for a few minutes' break, is an hour late and further frustrates with his provocative behaviour.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 14; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 292.

1956

October 12

He talks to the artist Korneli Sanadze, from whom he learns that the canvas is ready, and he can now begin painting Galaktion's portrait.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,72, p. 19; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 348.

1956

October 12

He notes the phone number and address of the artist Korneli Sanadze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,72, p. 19; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 348.

1956

October 15

He is at the medical clinic. In his notebook, he notes the phone number of the Academy's accounting office and plans to call to check if his salary is available and if they can send the money. He considers giving a power of attorney to his stepdaughter, Nunu Ebanoidze, and with her help, collect the salary. However, he soon changes his mind about sending Nunu, as he is sure she will be late, and he urgently needs the money. Two days later, in the evening, he is at the hospital, and he also needs to pay the female stenographer.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,72, p. 10; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 346.

Note: In the source, Nunu Ebanoidze is mentioned by her first name only.

1956

October 16

He is interested in whether Besarion Zhghenti has returned from Moscow.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,72, p. 22; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 349.

1956

October 16

He is interested in whether Korneli Sanadze has finished painting his portrait.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,72, p. 22; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 349.

1956

October 16

He plans to ask Mery Kutchaide to arrange a venue for his event scheduled at the medical clinic on October 17.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,72, p. 22; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 349.

1956

Until October 17

He plans to organize a poetry evening at the medical clinic, with the theme "1917 in Galaktion Tabidze's Works".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,72, p. 13; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 347.

1956

Until October 17

Galaktion sends an old canvas, more than three meters long, to the artist Korneli Sanadze. He then sneaks out of the medical facility, goes to him, and asks him to urgently paint his portrait, which he needs for a scheduled meeting at the Railway Workers' House. Sanadze tells him that he won't be able to finish such a large portrait with quality in such a short time. Galaktion becomes angry, slams the door, and leaves.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,72, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 346.

1956

October 17

Angry at the artist Korneli Sanadze, Galaktion calls him a traitor in his diary and threatens that he will force him to fulfil his promise and paint the portrait.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,72, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 346.

1956

After October 17

He sends a telegram to Alexandra Ryabinina, the chief editor of the State Literary Publishing House in Moscow, informing her that he had been seriously ill and was only discharged from the hospital today. He promises to submit the promised Book by the end of October. He requests that a reply telegram be sent to the address: Marjanishvili Street, №4.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,72, p. 32; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 350.

1956

October 18

He plans to take a bath, then have lunch, and begin preparing for his trip to Moscow.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,72, p. 23; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 349.

1956

Until October 20

He is making a plan to prepare for his trip to Moscow. He intends to review the ready materials translated into Russian, select more than 3,000 lines, take a business trip, request a loan from the Literary Fund, and ask for his salary from the Academy. He wants to ensure that his family is financially supported while he is away from Tbilisi.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,72, p. 24; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 350.

1956

October 20

At the medical complex, he organizes a meeting with readers and delivers a speech. He notes that it was in this very hospital, 15 years ago, that he began writing a poem whose main protagonist was the people. In this work, along with the theme of the search for peace, the significance of old, handwritten books was also highlighted. According to Galaktion, he lost the poem, which was as long as "The Knight in the Panther's Skin" and written in eight-line stanzas, but he later found it with the help of friends. He mentions that the recovered text was handed over to the state publishing house for inclusion in the eighth volume of his collected works.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. XII, Tbilisi, 1975, p. 200-201.

1956

October 20

He plans to meet Besarion Zhghenti.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,72, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 345.

November

1956

Until November 5

In his notebook, he notes the announcement that on November 5, a thematic evening dedicated to the National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze, will take place at the Opera and Ballet Theater.

Source: MGL, d-372, p. 25; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 350.

1956

November 7

The poem "Symphony of October" is published in the newspaper Avangardi.

Source: Newspaper Avangardi, 1956, №132, p. 2.

1956

November 21

He writes an untitled poem "The Sky of Poland Was Covered in Gloom...".

Source: N. Kvirikadze's manuscript, MGL, №8216; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 266.

Note: The manuscript has been corrected by Galaktion himself.

1956

After November 25

He sends a telegram to the director of the sixth construction trust in Sokhumi. He informs them that on November 25, he transferred 9,000 roubles to the Abkhazian branch of the Georgian Communal Bank to partially cover his debt. He requests that security be reinstated at his house, the construction work continue, and assures them that he will arrive soon.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-167; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 80.

1956

November 31

Together with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, he works on the Book to be published in Russian. Nino Kvirikadze notes in the notebook what needs to be done. First, they plan to save the translated poems, particularly those that exist only in rough draft form in Russian. In addition, they need to create the table of contents. He thinks the Book should be printed in three or four copies, and then the Writers' Union should review the prepared book, which will grant approval for printing.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, MGL, d-373, p. 4-5; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 351.

1956

November 31

Together with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, he continues working on the Book to be published in Russian. Nino Kvirikadze notes in the notebook that the best versions of each poem, translated by different translators, should be selected for the book.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, MGL, d-373, p. 4-5; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 351.

December

1956

Until December

He sends a telegram to Aleksandra Ryabinina, the chief editor of the State Literary Publishing House in Moscow. He writes that after the addressee left Tbilisi, he fell ill and was unable to complete the book. He states that he has decided to travel to Moscow in December and deliver it himself.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-266; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 81.

1956

December 2

He goes to Tskneti together with Nino Kvirikadze to retrieve materials for the Book that is to be published in Moscow.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 523.

1956

After December 2

Nino Kvirikadze organizes the materials for the Book to be published in Moscow and notes in her notebook that the word-for-word translations lack transcriptions, the same material is repeated in different years, and an unfinished poem from the 1928 folder, “The Passenger Waiting for the Tram on the Road,” appears in its complete form in later reprinted materials. She also observes that the folders from 1937 and the following two years contain almost identical content, while the word-for-word translations from 1917 are missing.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 523.

1956

December 3

He and Nino Kvirikadze spend the entire day organizing Galaktion’s writings by year.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 523.

1956

December 4

Shalva Radiani calls for the fifth time, requesting a biography. They make a special trip to Tskneti to retrieve the material, but the text requires additions and revisions.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 523.

1956

December 6

In his diary, he writes that he has work to do on the poems.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-629, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 309.

1956

December 6

He receives a phone call from Pati Nishnianidze, who informs him that Alexandra Ryabinina, the chief editor of the State Literary Publishing House, will arrive in Tbilisi at the end of December.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-629, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 309.

1956

December 6

In his diary, he writes that Alexandre Tcheishvili displays a cynical and hostile attitude.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-629, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 309.

1956

After December 6

He writes a satirical poem about Alexandre Tcheishvili's prose.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-629, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 309;

1956

December 9

He plans to review the poems, identify those that have been printed several times, redate some of them, and change their titles. He also intends to rearrange them in such a way that each year will contain a relatively equal number of poems.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-584, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 437.

1956

Until December 10

Galaktion plans to republish his collected works. For this purpose, his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, notes in the notebook that volumes IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, and IX of his works should be reprinted on a typewriter. The poet has decided to fight for the publication of each volume at the Academy.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, MGL, d-373, p. 5; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 352.

1956

Until December 10

He plans to move his wardrobe from the Writers' Union to the Academy of Sciences.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, MGL, d-373, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 352.

1956

Until December 10

He plans to address a statement to the Academy of Sciences, requesting that an editorial board be selected for his new book.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, MGL, d-373, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 352.

1956

Until December 10

He plans to address a statement to the Ministry of Culture, requesting that an event be organized to celebrate the 50th anniversary of his career.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, MGL, d-373, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 352.

1956

Until December 10

He makes a plan for how to organize a commemorative exhibition dedicated to the 50th anniversary of his career.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, MGL, d-373, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 352.

1956

Until December 10

Nino Kvirikadze believes that Galaktion has many enemies and opponents. This conflict has intensified even more during the preparation process for the Decade of Georgian Culture and Art. They take advantage of the poet's illness and act as they please. Nino Kvirikadze is convinced that Galaktion never wrote anything with the intention of receiving a prize.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, MGL, d-373, p. 8; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 352.

1956

December 10

He investigates how many word-for-word translations of poems written between 1908 and 1957 exist in Russian. He divides his works chronologically into five-year periods and indicates the number of existing word-for-word translations for each period. In the end, it turns out that there are word-for-word translations of 675 of his poems into Russian.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 19-20; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 392.

1956

December 10

He plans to begin the final and particularly important stage of working on the Book to be published in Russian on December 11, together with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze. This will involve organizing the prepared materials chronologically by year, as well as refining the word-for-word translations by year, compiling a list of poems included in each year, and preparing the final, complete alphabetical list.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, MGL, d-368, p. 10; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 352.

1956

December 11

He makes a note that he is unable to achieve spiritual peace because he constantly thinks about the eighth volume of his works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-592, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 490.

1956

December 12

He adds to the list of Georgian writers' addresses that ten of the writers on this list are no longer alive.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-613, 11; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 77.

1956

After December 14

In his notebook, he writes the names of the Russian editors and publishers who attended the meeting held on December 14 regarding the issues of the Decade of Georgian Culture and Art.

Source: MGL, d-374, p. 31; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 362.

1956

December 17

He revises the untitled poem “Swift as a Thought, the Wind Howls Outside...”, written on November 25, 1954, and creates a new version titled “Oh, Nana, Nana, Nana...” (“Swift as a Thought...”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, Nt-478; №160-a, p. 4275; №6671; №6706; №7269; №7295; №7318; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 250; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 678.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Nana, Nana...” and without a title, with a different beginning (“Swift in thought, outside the wind howls...”).

1956

December 19

He is making a note that everyone in the family is trying to help him: his wife Nina is ready to resume work, his stepson Dutu has gone to Kharauli, Nunu promised to bring a photo, and Nunu’s grandchildren, Zurab and Marina, sharpened his pencils.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-578, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 409.

1956

Until December 20

He receives a telegram from Moscow again. Arkadi Deev, the head of the State Literary Publishing House, informs him that his Book is included in the 1957 publishing plan, and the text needs to be submitted urgently.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, MGL, d-373, p. 10; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

Note: In the source, Arkadi Deev is mentioned by his last name only.

1956

Until December 20

He sends a telegram to Arkadi Deev, the head of the State Literary Publishing House in Moscow. He expresses his joy that his Book is included in the publisher’s 1957 plan and informs him that he will be flying on December 20, bringing both completed translations and drafts.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-184; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 81.

1956

Until December 20

Nino Kvirikadze notes that she is unsure whether Galaktion will be able to prepare the Book to be published in Russian before their departure to Moscow on December 20.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, MGL, d-373, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1956

Until December 20

He receives a message from Sokhumi stating that it is essential for Galaktion to come and take care of his house under construction. The poet thinks that a one-day visit will be enough.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, MGL, d-373, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 353.

1956

December 21

At 7 a.m., he departs for Moscow by plane. He was supposed to arrive in Moscow via Rostov, but due to fog, the plane is unable to land at Rostov's airport and is forced to stop first in Nalchik and then in Kharkov, causing him to arrive in Moscow later than planned.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 354.

1956

December 21

He is in Moscow, attending the Estonian Culture and Art Decade, and notes that it is being held in a tasteless manner.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 354.

1956

December 21

He is in Moscow and goes to the "State Literary Publishing House", where he meets the director, Arkadi Deev, who shows hostility towards him. Galaktion presents the materials for the Book to be published in Russian: the translations of 500 poems and 16 poems, as well as word-for-word translations of 600 poems. Arkadi Deev refuses to approve the publication of a Book with 25.000 lines, agreeing only to a Book with 7.000, at most 10,000 lines. Galaktion does not like the director's attitude and is convinced that he is an ally of Irakli Abashidze. He believes that measures need to be taken to achieve his goal.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 5-6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 355-356.

Note: In the source, Arkadi Deev is mentioned by his last name only.

1956

December 22

From Moscow, he sends a telegram to Nino Kvirikadze at 4 Marjanishvili Street in Tbilisi. He informs her that he has settled in the "Moscow" hotel and will stay for 12 days.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551.101; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 55.

1956

December 22

He is in Moscow and visits the Chairman of the Supreme Council of Georgia, Mirian Chubinidze. He tells him about his visit to Arkadi Deev and expresses regret that the director of the publishing house does not plan to publish his Book in its entirety. Mirian Chubinidze tells him that he will instruct the head of the Georgian Representation in Russia to resolve the issue. Additionally, Galaktion informs him that his eighth volume of works, prepared under the editorial supervision of Mirian Chubinidze's close relative, Revaz Orjonikidze, was submitted to the "State Publishing House" long ago, but the contract has not yet been finalized. Mirian Chubinidze promises to help with this matter as well.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 22-23; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 359.

Note: In the source, Arkadi Deev is mentioned by his last name only.

1956

December 22

He is in Moscow, with almost no money left, and his only hope is the Moscow Literary Fund, from which he can possibly take out a loan.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 23; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 359.

1956

December 22

He is in Moscow and plans to find out where the official representation of Georgia in Russia is located in order to ask for assistance with the full publication of his Book in Russian.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 23; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 359.

1956

December 22

He is in Moscow and plans to send a telegram to the editor Revaz Orjonikidze in Georgia, informing him that the Chairman of the Supreme Council of Georgia, Mirian Chubinidze, has promised assistance with the publication of the eighth volume of his works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 23; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 359.

1956

December 22

He plans to send a telegram from Moscow to his family members in Tbilisi and writes about it in his diary.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 23; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 359.

1956

December 23

He is interested in whether it is possible to publish his poems in Russian. He has translations of 30 poems and wants them to be published as a separate book. He thinks that he shouldn't expect the publication of such a Book from the "State Literary Publishing House", and that "Soviet Writer" probably already has its own plan. However, it may be possible to publish the Book of poems in connection with the Decade of Georgian Culture and Art, if the official representation of Georgians in Russia intervenes. He plans to try publishing the same Book in Zarya Vostoka and, in addition, find out what other publishing houses exist in Moscow.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 24; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 360.

1956

December 24

He is in Moscow and plans to contact the official representation of Georgians in Russia to request assistance with the publication of his Book of poems translated into Russian as a separate volume.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 24; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 360.

1956

December 24

He is in Moscow, with no money left, and is thinking about what solution might exist for this situation. He wants to sign a contract with the "State Literary Publishing House" to receive an advance payment.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 24; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 360.

1956

December 24

He is in Moscow and, due to financial problems, is considering, as a last resort, asking the Georgian representation in Russia for assistance, although he feels that this would be very awkward.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 24; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 360.

1956

December 24

In Moscow, he meets Aron Lichthentul, the administrative manager of the Writers' Union, who suggests traveling to Paris. Galaktion tells him that he doesn't even have enough money to return to Tbilisi. Lichthentul calls the Moscow Literary Repository and manages to find return ticket to Georgia for him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 25; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 360.

1956

December 24

He requests a loan from the Moscow Literary Fund.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 10; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 356.

1956

December 24

He receives a loan of 5,000 roubles from the Moscow Literary Fund.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 10; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 356.

1956

December 24

He is in Moscow and plans to meet with Anatoliy Starostin, the chief editor of the State Literary Publishing House, to discuss his Book to be published in Russian.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 27; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 361.

Note: In the source, Anatoliy Starostin is mentioned by his last name only.

1956

December 24

He is in Moscow and plans to gift a Book of his poems to Mirian Chubinidze. He is preparing a warm inscription, which clearly expresses both gratitude and great respect, as well as the fact that the poet is still awaiting assistance from the recipient in the matter of publishing the eighth volume of his works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 29; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 362.

1956

December 26

He is in Moscow and receives 15 copies of his Book to be published in Russian. They promise to add another 25 copies the following day.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 26; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 360.

1956

December 26

He is in Moscow and buys 200 picture frames. He wants to purchase more, but he is not allowed to.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 26; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 360.

1956

December 26

At the "Moscow" hotel, he meets the President of the Georgian Academy of Sciences, Niko Muskhelishvili. Muskhelishvili promises that after returning to Tbilisi, the preparation of the academic edition of Galaktion Tabidze's works will begin under his guidance.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 26; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 361.

1956

December 26

He meets Arkadi Deev, the director of the State Literary Publishing House, who comments on the volume of Galaktion Tabidze's Book in Russian, saying that they were unable to publish a Book of this format even for Avetik Isaakian. Galaktion is offended by this comparison, as Avetik Isaakian is not a National Poet, but he says nothing and thinks that this is a part of an Armenian conspiracy against him. He recalls Avetik Isaakian's diminished status in 1935, at the Anti-Fascist Writers' Congress in Paris, when Isaakian had begged him for help to be taken to Armenia. He is surprised that now this poet is being placed above him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 26; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 361.

Note: In the source, Arkadi Deev is mentioned by his last name only.

1956

Until December 27

He notes the Moscow address from where, on December 27, by the end of the day, he is supposed to pick up 25 copies of his Book published in Russian. He thinks that the process of obtaining copies of his own Book has been made unnecessarily difficult and is irritated by it.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 32; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 362-363.

1956

Until December 27

He is in Moscow and writes down the phone number of one of the members of the Georgian representation in Russia, Mikheil Tokhadze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 34; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 363.

1956

Until December 27

He is in Moscow and notes the address of the Russian Writers' Union.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,74, p. 34; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 363.

1956

December 28

He sends a telegram from Moscow to Revas Orjonikidze, the editor of the eighth volume of his collected works. He informs him that he met his relative, Mirian Chubinidze, the Chairman of the Presidium of the Supreme Council of Georgia, whom he describes as an exceptional person. Chubinidze promised to expedite the signing of the contract for the eighth volume. He also extends his best wishes for the upcoming New Year.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-92; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 81.

1956

December 28

He sends a telegram from Moscow to David Dumbadze, the director of the state publishing house, extending his New Year's greetings and informing him that the matter of the eighth volume of his collected works is going well.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-92; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 82.

1956

December 28

He sends a telegram from Moscow to his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, informing her that he will be in Tbilisi on December 31.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-92; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 82.

1956

December

From the Moscow Hotel “Moskva,” he sends a telegram to Boris Nanitashvili, the head of the printing service, requesting that he inform him by telegram about the status of the book’s publication.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-269; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 82.

1956

December

In 1956, he submitted the eighth and ninth volumes of his writings to the state publishing house and sent poems and epics, totaling 60,000 lines, for publication in Moscow. He also prepared books about the October Revolution, participated in various literary evenings, and met with Tkibuli miners, youth, and others. Additionally, he continued working on the tenth volume of his collected works.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-219; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 131.

1956

Under the editorial guidance of Elizbar Ananiashvili, Galaktion Tabidze’s “Selected Works: Poems” is published in Russian in Moscow. It includes the following cycles: “Homeland and May”, “Epoch”, “Paths and Years”, and “Under the Bright Sky”.

Source: Табидзе Г.В., Избранное: Стихи, (Циклы: Родина и Май; Эпоха; Тропы и годы; Под ясным небом) Пер. с груз, Под ред. Э.Г. Ананиашвили, Москва, Сов. писатель, 1956.

1956

The writer Tedo Begiashvili gifts his 1956 book, “Theses of Lectures on the Knight in the Panther’s Skin”, with an inscription.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,70, p. 4; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 334.

1956

The Literary Cabinet of the Pioneer Palace organizes a literary evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze. Among those attending the event are then-students Rezo Tabukashvili, Guram Asatiani, Tamaz Chkhenkeli, and Melor Sturua. After the evening, a feast is held, and they celebrate and discuss poetry. Suddenly, Rezo Tabukashvili asks, “Who is the second greatest poet in Georgia?” Galaktion responds with a smile, “It can’t be, my dear, should we start directly from the sixth?”

Source: D. Sturua, Galaktion at the Decade, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 271-272.

1956

An article by Akaki Khintibidze, titled “For the Issue of Conflict in Lyricism”, is published, in which the poetry of Nikoloz Baratashvili and Galaktion Tabidze is discussed from the perspective of conflict. The author gives Galaktion a copy of the printed version of his article.

Source: A. Khintibidze, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 304.

Note: The title of the press is not mentioned in the recollection.

1956

Mikhail Vadbol'ski paints a picture titled “Galaktion Tabidze Visiting I. Ratishvili”.

Source: G. Chikobava, Galaktion and Art, Khelovneba, Tbilisi, 1959, N 4, p. 34.

1956

Giorgi Merkviladze's Book “Poetry and the People” is published, one section of which addresses Galaktion Tabidze's work. The author focuses on the poet's civic stance in the 1920s and notes that he adhered to a realistic understanding of literature's purpose. In the same context, Giorgi Merkviladze argues with Karlos Kaladze and criticizes Kaladze's attack on Galaktion Tabidze, calling it a “disgrace” typical of the Russian Proletarian Writers' Association, and asserts that Kaladze's claim that the poet's work is still not entirely free from decadent remnants is unfounded.

Source: G. Merkviladze, Poetry and the People, 1956, p. 102-105.

1956

He writes an untitled poem “The Oaks in Chokha...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №6780; №8124; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 267.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “The Oaks Thunder” and untitled with a different beginning (“Like a Chokha in a Barrel – Oaks...”).

1956

He writes a poem dedicated to Kristine Dgebuadze “Kristine” (“When I Free My Dream from Shackles...”).

Source: Autograph, MGL, №14-a, p. 2133; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 269.

Note: The poem is also found untitled (“In the Wind, It Sobs...”).

1956

He writes an untitled poem “The Bush Wears the Face of a Café...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №14-a, p. 2133; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 268.

1956

He writes an untitled poem “Let's Say: A Mountain to Gaze Upon and to Bathe in...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2500; №6797-98; №8077; №3317; №5486; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p.

Note: The poem is also found under the title: “Ruins”, “The Cruelty of Time”, and untitled with a different beginning (“On the Ridge to Gaze Upon, to Gaze Upon and to Bathe in...”).

1956

He writes an untitled poem “The Sky Collapses Upon Us with Rain...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №14-a, p. 2134; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 268.

1956

He writes an untitled poem “A Pile of Corpses Lies Before Our Eyes...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №14-a, p. 2132; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 270.

1956

He writes a poem “Visiting Akaki Tsereteli” (“A Man Lives Through Many Ages...”).

Source: Autograph, MGL, №14-a, p. 2132; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 270.

1956

He writes an untitled poem “If Art and Labour...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №14-a, p. 2129; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 271.

1957

January

1957

Until January

He examines the 1957 calendar. His attention is drawn to the cover of the calendar and the illustration on the page for January 9 – a ship on the sea.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 40; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 300.

1957

Beginning of January

He sends a letter to Mikhail Kornev, the director of the publishing house “Soviet Writer” in Moscow. He expresses his satisfaction with the publisher’s decision to release a collection of his selected poems but voices his concern that too much depends on the editor. He emphasizes the need for an editor who is well acquainted with his work, as otherwise, the Book might turn out to be unsuccessful, similar to what happened in the case of Ioseb Grishashvili. Galaktion states that his preferred choice would be Boris Turganov, who had previously worked on editing his first Russian-language book. The poet requests that if no other editor has already been appointed, the task be entrusted to Boris Turganov, as he would carefully review the existing translations and find good specialists for the new ones.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-268; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 79.

1957

Beginning or later

He sends a telegram to Anatoly Starostin, the senior editor of the State Literary Publishing House in Moscow, requesting that he inform him by telegram whether his Book is ready for publication.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-190; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 83;

1957

January 10

He is at home and watches as the housekeeper, Irma Papashvili, searches for the lost three-kopeck coin in various rooms, pockets, and on the tables, only to find it in her own pocket.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-226, p. 9; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 442.

Note: In the source, Irma Papashvili is mentioned by her first name only.

1957

January 13

He is making a plan for working on the ninth volume of his works. He has decided to compile a complete list of the works to be included in it, review the material to be transcribed, and decide separately which parts need to be reprinted.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-226, p. 19; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 442.

1957

After January 13

He plans to take out a loan from the Literary Fund.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's record, MGL, d-226, p. 41; AE, Book XVII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 442.

1957

January 14

He is visited by Nino Chikhladze, an employee of the Georgian Literature Museum and the daughter of revolutionary Raphael Chikhladze. She takes materials about Giorgi Kuchishvili, as the museum is planning an exhibition on 20th-century literature. He also writes down the phone number of the museum's director, Vano Kakabadze.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 2, 4;

1957

January 14

He writes an untitled poem: "Today, everyone sees my hardship...".

Source: Autograph, G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book VII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 347.

1957

January 17

He reads the January 16th issue of Izvestia, in which the list of nominees for the Lenin Prize is published. Galaktion Tabidze is listed as number 28. He and his nephew, Nodar Tabidze, look over the list together and discuss the merit of the contenders. He thinks that if he is not awarded the prize, it won't upset him too much, but he acknowledges that winning the competition would be beneficial because the winner's books are published abroad.

Source: N. Tabidze, Galaktion, newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, December 3, 1982, N 49, p. 8.

1957

January 18

He reads the newspaper Komunisti, where he comes across informational articles about the socialist camp countries – Hungary and Poland – activating diplomatic relations with China.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 368.

1957

January 18

He reads the newspaper Komunisti, where he comes across an informational article about the situation in South Korea, specifically regarding the country's increased military preparations with the assistance of the United States. This information causes him to develop a negative attitude toward South Korea.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 368.

1957

January 18

In his notebook, he notes the information that the famous Italian conductor Arturo Toscanini passed away in New York on January 16 at the age of 89.

Source: MGL, d-377, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 368.

1957

January 18

In his notebook, he notes the information that on January 15, Maria Chekhova, Anton Chekhov's sister, the founder of his house-museum in Yalta, and a distinguished figure in the arts, passed away. He thinks that she must have been very elderly by then.

Source: MGL, d-377, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 368.

1957

January 18

From the obituary published on the last page of the newspaper Komunisti, he learns that the poet Shahrukh (Shalva) Charkviani, whom he personally knew, has passed away. He recalls that Shahrukh was a relative of Kandid Charkviani. He is curious about the cause of his death. Thinking about Shahrukh Charkviani, he remembers Kolau Nadiradze as the person among the writers who was closest to him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 368.

Note: In the source, Shalva (Shahrukh) Charkviani is mentioned as Shahrukh Giorgi's son Charkviani, and Kolau Nadiradze is mentioned by his first name only – Kolau.

1957

January 18

From the obituary published on the last page of the newspaper Komunisti, he learns that Geronti Kikodze's cousin, the actress Aneta Kikodze, has passed away. He writes down the information about when and from which address the funeral will take place.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 368.

1957

January 18

In his notebook, he notes the information about the people whose deaths he learned of that day and is troubled by their number.

Source: MGL, d-377, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 368.

1957

Until January 22

In his notebook, he notes the plan for dividing the ninth volume of his works into sections, writing down twelve titles according to which the volume should be divided into twelve parts.

Source: MGL, d-360, p. 20; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 312.

1957

January 22

He submits the ninth volume of his collected works to the state publishing house and provides a written report on its structure. The Book consists of 12 sections: The People – October; The People Build a New Country; Among the Ruins; The People Demand Peace; Against Plunder and Devastation; The Siege of Paris; Near the Compiègne Forest; Six-Million China; In the Fortress of Surami; On the Whip-Like Winding Road; The Poet and the People; and I Listened to the People Singing. He requests that the process not be delayed and that he be given the opportunity to review the materials once more before the Book goes to print.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-221, 24551-274; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 131-132.

1957

Until January 25

He finishes the work on the ninth volume of his works. In his notebook, he notes that the Book is divided into 12 parts, each with a title derived from his own lyrics. The Book contains 106 poems and 4 short poems. Since the table of contents has also been compiled, he thinks that the form of the Book is now finalized.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,60, p. 16; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 310.

1957

Until January 25

He calculates the number of lines in the ninth volume of his works, trying to determine how many lines each printer has printed and how many are still left to be printed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,60, p. 21; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 312.

1957

January 25

He hands over the ninth volume of his works to Vladimir Mgaloblishvili, the director of the State Publishing House. The handover is attended by the publishing house employees, Davit Dumbadze and Shota Sulaberidze. Mgaloblishvili tells him that the response regarding the Book will come only after ten days. From the conversation, he learns that the Book must be read by Shota Sulaberidze, who will also write the conclusion. He is confident that everything regarding the Book will be clarified by the beginning of February.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,60, p. 16; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 310.

1957

January 25

He writes an untitled, humorous poem titled "Today I Handed Over to the State Publishing House", in which he describes how he handed the ninth volume of his works to the "State Publishing House" and the unserious attitude he encountered at the publishing house.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,59, p. 16; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 310-311.

1957

January 27

An article by Elizbar Ubilava, titled "The Guests of Andalala", is published in the newspaper Komunisti, in which he describes his impressions from traveling in Dagestan. The article states that upon seeing these landscapes, the author's heart sings the lines of a poem he once read and later organically settled in his soul. He quotes a stanza from Galaktion: "The black mist covered the mountains of Dagestan...".

Source: E. Ubilava, Who Announced Your Death, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 280;

1957

After January 27

He reads the published article by Elizbar Ubilava in the newspaper Komunisti, in which his stanza is quoted. He calls the author at home and expresses his gratitude.

Source: E. Ubilava, Who Announced Your Death, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 282;

1957

After January 27

He meets Elizbar Ubilava, who spoke very warmly about him in his article about Dagestan. As a sign of gratitude, Galaktion hugs him and says, “I realize, my dear, that you truly loved me”, because it was in the mountains of Dagestan that you remembered me.

Source: E. Ubilava, Who Announced Your Death, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 282;

1957

Until January 29

He reads the January 24th issue of the newspaper Molodoy Stalinets.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 15; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 370.

1957

January 29

He thinks that a group of people closely connected to Demna Shengelaia is working at the Zarya Vostoka publishing house. In his opinion, this is confirmed by Demna Shengelaia’s own public appearances and his Russian-language publications. He is convinced that it is precisely this group affiliation that explains why Zarya Vostoka only publishes futurists and their followers.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 15; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 370.

1957

January 29

He is at the Opera House, where a young photographer quietly takes his picture.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 26; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 372.

1957

January 31

He examines Konstantine Gamsakhurdia’s novel “The Blooming of the Vine”, published in 1956, and is surprised by its large volume.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 26; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 372.

Note: In the source, the novel is mentioned as “The Blooming of the Rose”.

1957

January 31

He examines the painting of a child’s colourful portrait by the artist Natela Iankoshvili at the editorial office of the magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba. He is curious about the artist’s age and learns that she is 38 years old.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 27; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 372.

Note: In the source, Natela Iankoshvili is mentioned by her last name only.

1957

January 31

He is interested in whether the young poet Giorgi Lezhava will bring him the bibliography and portrait of his works that have been published.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 27; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 373.

Note: In the source, Giorgi Lezhava is mentioned by his last name and initials.

1957

January 31

Shalva Porchkhidze gifts Galaktion with his 1954 poetry collection "On the Blue Path", with a commemorative inscription. Galaktion appreciates the gesture and thinks that he is a polite person.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 27; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 373.

Note: In the source, Shalva Porchkhidze is mentioned by his last name and initials, and the title of the Book is not specified.

1957

January 31

From the conversation with the writers, he learns that the State Publishing House has approved this year's publishing plan, and many authors' books have been removed from the plan. This information piques his interest, and he wants to know whether his Book is included in the plan.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 27; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 373.

1957

January 31

He discusses the recently approved publishing plan for the current year with the poet Giorgi Lezhava and learns that the exact information about the plan will be available from the director of the State Publishing House, Davit Dumbadze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 27; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 373.

Note: In the source, Davit Dumbadze is mentioned as Datiko Dumbadze.

1957

January 31

He learns that several earthquakes have occurred in Western Georgia and is disturbed by this information.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 27; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 373.

1957

January 31

He is upset by the fact that his book, the eighth volume of his collected works, which he submitted to the publishing house back in 1955, has been removed from the current year's publishing plan.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 27; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 373.

1957

Until January 31

The editor of the magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba, Otar Egadze, asks him to send the poem “Oh, Nana, Nana, Nana” for publication in the magazine.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 25; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 372.

1957

January 31

He goes to the editorial office of the magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba and submits the poem “Oh, Nana, Nana, Nana” for publication. After reviewing the poem, Otar Egadze asks him to make certain changes and provide a revised version.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 25; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 372.

1957

January 31

He is curious to know who will be the chairman of the Writers’ Union Presidium, whose identity is expected to be revealed soon. He learns that the potential candidates for the chairmanship include Demna Shengelaia and Simon Chikovani.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 25; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 372.

Note: In the source, Demna Shengelaia and Simon Chikovani are referred to only by their first names.

1957

January 31

He is at the Writers’ Union, listening to speculations about who might become the chairman of the Writers’ Union Presidium. Some favour Simon Chikovani, while others prefer Demna Shengelaia. Galaktion considers neither of them suitable for the position.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 25; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 372.

Note: In the source, Demna Shengelaia and Simon Chikovani are mentioned only by their first names.

1957

January 31

The bibliographer Vladimir Jojua suggests that it would be beneficial to collect various types of materials about Galaktion’s life and work: artworks created by painters, composers, and sculptors.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 25; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 372.

Note: In the source, Vladimir Jojua is mentioned only by his last name.

1957

January 31

It is said that his fellow villager Alexandre Tabidze has returned home because his position in Tbilisi was abolished. He talks about this with the young poet Giorgi Lezhava, who likes Alexandre Tabidze’s decision and notes that it is better to stay in the village.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 26; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 372.

1957

January 31

He is at the editorial office of the magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba, where they show his photo, which was secretly taken by a young photographer two days ago at the Opera House. He really likes the secretly taken photo and the photographer promises to give him a copy.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 26; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 372.

1957

January 31

He talks to the bibliographer Vladimir Jojua, who promises to compile his bibliography. Jojua considers it necessary for the bibliography to be included in the state publishing house's plan for the following year. In his opinion, the intervention of the Writers' Union is essential for this. The mention of the Writers' Union's intervention triggers Galaktion's ironic attitude.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 25; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 372.

Note: In the source, Vladimir Jojua is mentioned only by his last name.

1957

January 31

It is said that soon the Book "Analytical Bibliography of the Monthly Literary-Artistic and Socio-Political Magazine Mnatobi" (1924-1954), prepared by Vladimir Jojua, will be published. The Book will compile information about all the material published in Mnatobi from the founding of the magazine throughout its existence. He is confident that this Book will include information about many of his works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 25; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 372.

Note: In the source, Vladimir Jojua is mentioned only by his last name.

1957

January 31

He submits the poem "Oh, Nana, Nana, Nana!" for publication to Otar Egadze, the editor of the magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 16;

1957

January

He examines the 1957 calendar from beginning to end and writes down the information that interests him in his notebook, whether it is descriptions of illustrations, lists of portraits of Georgian and foreign writers, or details about their birth and death dates and anniversary dates.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,60, p. 24-25; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 313-315.

1957

January

While examining the 1957 calendar, he discovers that his birthday is listed with the date of December 17 instead of November 17. He notes that in 1957, he will turn 65 years old.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,60, p. 25; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 315.

1957

January

He thinks about the events to be held. He wants Besarion Zhgenti to read the report "1917 Year in Galaktion's Work". He plans for the event to be decorated with various editions of his works' plates, and he also wants a poster to be printed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 370.

Note: In the source, Besarion Zhghenti is mentioned by his initials and last name.

1957

January

He plans to organize the event and intends to obtain permission for this from the Central Lecture Bureau, where Vakhtang Gurgenidze works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 370.

February

1957

February 2

He plans to contact the Akhaltsikhe Pedagogical Institute, specifically Ioseb Neadze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,60, p. 22; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 312.

1957

February 2

He writes an untitled poem: "With my forehead from my eyebrows...".

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 13;

1957

February 4

He makes a note about the poem "The Book of Peace". He mentions that he worked on the piece for 12 years. The eighth volume of his works was presented to the state publishing house a year ago, but there has been no feedback during this time. He believes that the poem "The Book of Peace" is innovative. There may be areas that could be improved, but in this case, the publishing house is obliged to point them out to the author. Galaktion notes that he also has the ninth volume of his works ready, but it may be combined with the eighth volume and published in that form.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-611, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 69.

1957

February 7

He attends a meeting at the Shota Rustaveli Institute of Georgian Literature at the Academy of Sciences, where they discuss the literary production of the previous year. Among the speakers are Besarion Zhghenti, Akaki Khintibidze, and Tina Jibladze. Along with other works, they talk about Galaktion's poems. The presentations by Tina Jibladze and Akaki Khintibidze provoke Galaktion's ironic attitude. He decides to speak at the same kind of meeting scheduled two days later.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 28; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 373.

Note: In the source, Besarion Zhghenti is mentioned only by his first name, Beso, while Akaki Khintibidze and Tina Jibladze are referred to by their last names only.

1957

February 7 or later

He thinks that Tina Jibladze should have sharply criticized Revaz Margiani during her presentation at the meeting held at the Academy of Sciences and placed special emphasis on the fact that Revaz Margiani is not suited to be the editor of children's literature. However, he is satisfied that, during the course of the meeting, a negative attitude toward Revaz Margiani was still revealed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 31; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 373.

1957

February 7 or later

He is pleased that, during the meeting held at the Academy of Sciences, where they reviewed the literary production of the previous year, Akaki Khintibidze did not even mention Revaz Margiani's "Selected Works" published in 1956 during his presentation.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 31; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 373.

1957

February 7 or later

He plans to meet with Otar Saneblidze and is interested in knowing where, in which museum, he might be found.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 32; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 373.

Note: In the source, Otar Saneblidze is mentioned only by his last name.

1957

February 7 or later

He plans to browse through the 1927 collection of poems "Verses" by Nikoloz Tchilashvili, which includes a poem dedicated to him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 32; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 374.

Note: In the source, Nikoloz Tchilashvili is mentioned by his last name and initials.

1957

February 8

He meets Tamar Sajaya and Ketevan Kuchukashvili. He learns that Revaz Margiani removed the poem dedicated to Galaktion from the 1955 edition of “Selected Works” by Alexandre Sajaia. In his opinion, this is not a coincidence, as Revaz Margiani consistently acts against him. He becomes convinced that the anti-Galaktion tendency in the publishing sphere was not introduced by Andro Tevzadze, but by Revaz Margiani himself. He believes that this writer and his followers form a group opposing him.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 28; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 373.

Note: In the source, Andro Tevzadze is mentioned only by his first name.

1957

February 8

He meets a young typesetter woman who expresses great love for Galaktion. She tells him that she has worked on his Book before and would gladly do so again.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 28; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 373.

1957

February 8

He talks to Besarion Zhghenti, who is outraged by the Marxist and idealist understanding of Academician Niko Berdzenishvili.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 29; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 373.

Note: In the source, Besarion Zhghenti is mentioned by his nickname, Basia, while Niko Berdzenishvili is referred to by his last name only.

1957

February 8

He plans to launch an attack and demand that the Book he submitted back in 1955, the eighth volume of his collected works, be returned to the publishing plan for the current year. He is confident that some of the writers will support him.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 29; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 373.

1957

February 8

He is upset by the removal of the eighth volume of his works from the publishing plan and wonders how the publishing house will explain the fact that, in celebration of Galaktion’s 50th anniversary, the promise made for the 25th anniversary of his career regarding the publication of his collected works will not be fulfilled.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 29; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 373.

1957

February 8

He plans to attend the meeting of the state publishing house and express his stance regarding the publishing plan for the current year, from which his Book was removed. He believes that Revaz Margiani, who is hostile toward him, will definitely be present at the meeting.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 29; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 373.

Note: In the source, Revaz Margiani is mentioned by his first name, Rezo.

1957

February 8

Due to the removal of the eighth volume of his works from the current year's plan by the state publishing house, he, upset with certain individuals, makes a note in his notebook: "Will you include Shota Rustaveli in the plan or not? Huh? Huh? Huh?"

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 29; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 373.

1957

February 8 or later

He is at the state publishing house with Amberki Julakidze and Alexandre Kokaia. Alexandre Kokaia mentions Galaktion and his work in a positive context, which pleases the poet, and later he writes about it in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 370.

1957

February 9

He meets the poet Alexandre Begashvili at the Academy of Sciences, who dedicates a poem titled "Impromptu" to him. In the work, Galaktion is declared a poet on par with Vazha-Pshavela and Akaki Tsereteli, whose heart is always burning with Georgian poetry.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 48; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 377.

1957

February 9

While near the Opera House, he realizes that he feels a strange shiver.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 35; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 374.

1957

February 11

He plans to meet the writer Grigol (Guguli) Bukhnikashvili in ten days.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 44; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 376.

Note: In the source, Grigol (Guguli) Bukhnikashvili is mentioned only by his first name, Guguli.

1957

February 11

He plans to meet his friend, the artist Theodor Chudetsky, in ten days.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 44; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 376.

Note: In the source, Theodor Chudetsky is mentioned only by his first name.

1957

February 11

He plans to go to the Ministry of Culture in four days, as Minister Avtandil Gunia is returning to Georgia at that time.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 44; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 376.

Note: In the source, Avtandil Gunia is mentioned only by his last name.

1957

February 12

He drafts a letter to be sent to Theodore Chudetsky on behalf of Victor Gabeskiria, the director of the Soviet Literature Publishing House. The letter states that in Eter Shushania's Book "Galaktion Tabidze", the illustrator is listed as Alexei Balabuev, despite the fact that the portrait of the poet was created by Theodore Chudetsky, while Balabuev was only responsible for the inscription. The letter includes a promise to Chudetsky that he will be sent the honorarium he is owed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-591, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 485-486.

1957

February 12

He is at an exhibition, viewing works by Georgian, Russian, and Armenian artists. A total of over 150 paintings by 25 artists are on display. In his notebook, he notes the last name of each artist, the number of works exhibited, and his impressions. He particularly likes the paintings by Eteri Andronikashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 50, 52. AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 378.

Note: In the source, Eteri Andronikashvili is mentioned only by her last name.

1957

February 14

The secretary of the Writers' Union, Sergi Tchilaia, petitions the director of the State Literary Publishing House, Arkadi Deev, to increase the line count of Galaktion Tabidze's book, included among those to be published in Moscow, from 10,000 to 20,000.

Source: MGL, WUF №73.

1957

February 14

He attends the elections at the Writers' Union for selecting candidates to be presented to the councils. He sketches a profile portrait of Ioseb Grishashvili with a pencil on paper. The drawing is observed by Geronti Kikodze, Sandro Shanshiashvili, and Sergi Tchilaia. They praise Galaktion for his talent in drawing. Sandro Shanshiashvili says, "But this is Mashashvili!" Galaktion assumes that Shanshiashvili is confusing the pseudonyms of Ioseb Grishashvili and Alio Mashashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-610, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 63.

1957

February 14

He hands over the third and fourth volumes of his collected works to be printed. He learns that the cost of printing 28 lines will be one rouble and fifty kopecks. They promise that the text will be ready by February 28.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 47; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 376.

1957

February 15

In the morning, the photographer from the Armenian-language newspaper Khorurdain Vrastan (Soviet Georgia) visits his home and takes a photograph of him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 54; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 379.

Note: In the source, the newspaper is mentioned inaccurately and incompletely as Khorurdain Vrast.

1957

February 15

He arrives late at the Academy of Sciences, at four o'clock, for the meeting of the researchers of the Shota Rustaveli Institute of Georgian Literature, which started at two o'clock, and attends its final part.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 54; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 379.

1957

February 15

At the Academy, he meets Pavel Ingorokva and the former director of the state publishing house, Grigol Abashidze, whom, according to the poet, is his mortal enemy in the matter of publishing the eighth volume of his collected works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 54; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 379.

Note: In the source, Pavle Ingorokva is mentioned only by his last name, and the identity of the former director of the state publishing house is not specified.

1957

February 15

At the Academy of Sciences, he meets his friend Theodor Chudetsky's daughter, Londa Chudetskaya, who works at the Academy's library, and they talk about preparing a bibliographic Book related to Galaktion's Works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 54; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 379.

Note: In the source, Londa Chudetskaya is mentioned only by her nickname, Kukusa, without specifying her last name or full identity.

1957

February 15

He learns that the previous night, thieves had robbed Akaki Khorava and took his coat while he was on his way home.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 54; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 379.

1957

February 15

In the evening, he is at the Writers' Union and observes how Grigol Abashidze, the former director of the state publishing house, enters the building with an air of arrogance. During his tenure as director, he never even went to the Writers' Union.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 54; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 379.

1957

February 16

He plans to prepare materials for the newspaper Literatura da Khelovneba.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-605, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 37.

1957

February 17

He reads the poems of Shota Lomsadze and writes down fragments in his notebook. He plans to recommend this young poet for publication in the magazine Mnatobi.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 55; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 379-380.

1957

Until February 18

He takes a photo with Nino Nakashidze.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 16.

Dating: The photo is mentioned in the entry dated February 18, 1957.

1957

February 18

He is interested in the fate of his Book set to be published in Moscow and thinks that Irakli Abashidze, who is there, might bring back news about it.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 16.

Dating: The photo is mentioned in the entry dated February 18, 1957.

1957

February 18

He writes that he has submitted materials to Zarya Vostoka, specifically to Devi Sturua.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 16;

1957

February 18

Boris Serebryakov calls him and agrees on the translation of 100 lines.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 16;

1957

February 18

He speaks with Yeremia Astvatsaturov, an employee of Saliteraturo Gazeti, who agrees to translate the poems.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 16;

1957

February 18

He learns that Tamar Vanidze is publishing his fifth to seventh volumes.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 16;

1957

February 18

He meets Ilia Kavkazagi, Nodar Gureshidze, and Davit Kasradze. Nodar Gureshidze promises to give him a copy of his Book "Through a Friend's Eyes (Two Weeks in the German Democratic Republic)".

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 16;

Note: The title of Gureshidze's Book is not explicitly mentioned, but among his published works, this was the most recently released.

1957

February 18

Shota Lomsadze officially agrees that they should meet at the Writers' Palace on February 23 at 12 o'clock in the morning. The poet writes the text of the agreement in the notebook, and both sign it.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 56; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 379.

1957

February 19

He submits poems to the newspaper Komunisti for publication and is told that he will receive a response in two or three days.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 16;

1957

February 20

He visits the Artists' Club exhibition at the gallery and then tries to find Korneli Sanadze but is unable to locate the address.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 18;

1957

February 20

He goes to the printing house, but no one meets him, and he is unable to find out anything.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 18;

1957

February 21

He goes to Korneli Sanadze's house with his step-daughter, Nunu Ebanoidze, but does not find him at home.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 18;

1957

February 22 or earlier

He meets with the Minister of Culture, Avtandil Gunia, who has been told that the eighth volume of Galaktion's works contains many earlier materials. The poet dispels the minister's doubts when he tells him that he, along with the editor of the volume, removed the old material. As a result, Gunia issues an order for the immediate publication of the book.

Source: MGL, d-637, 22; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 460.

Dating: The entry is made in the February 22, 1957 issue of the newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, on pages 1-2.

1957

February 22

He agrees with Shalva Kvashvadze that his meeting with the professors, teachers, and students of the Tbilisi Academy of Arts will take place in April at the Academy of Sciences. He writes the text of the agreement in his notebook, and Kvashvadze signs it.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 57; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 380.

Note: In the source, Shalva Kvashvadze is mentioned by his last name and initials.

1957

February 22

He publishes the poem "Books for the People" in Literaturuli Gazeti.

Source: Newspaper Literaturuli Gazeti, 1957, №18, p. 1.

1957

February 23

At 12 o'clock, he meets the poet Shota Lomsadze at the Writers' Palace.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 56; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 379.

1957

February 23

He agrees with the poet Shota Lomsadze that they will meet at the Writers' Palace on April 9 at 12 o'clock in the afternoon.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 56; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 379.

1957

February 24

He makes a note that Vakhtang Gurgeniidze and Pati Nishnianidze involve him in many futile endeavours, which drain him spiritually and deplete his energy.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-617, 15; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 136-137.

1957

February 24

He notes in his notebook the government's decision to name one of Tbilisi's streets after Galaktion, as well as the desire of typesetters and workers to name a riverside embankment in his honour. He also records plans to erect a monument on this embankment during his lifetime in connection with his upcoming 65th anniversary.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 22;

1957

February 24

He notes in his notebook that the main priorities for the jubilee evening are setting the date and sending invitations.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 22;

1957

February 24

He gets ready for meetings with typesetters. The first event is scheduled for March 4. According to his plan, the event should include a poetry evening, as well as an exhibition. He checks what materials are already ready for the exhibition and what still needs to be prepared. He believes that rushing and anxiety will not be beneficial.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 386.

1957

February 24

He gets ready for the poetry evening and exhibition scheduled for March 4. He plans to address the typesetters with a poem and, for this purpose, he revises the final stanza of his work "Books for the People", where the addressees are specifically the representatives of this profession.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 386

1957

February 24

He is troubled by the fact that the Russian poet and translator Boris Serebryakov has not returned the text that was handed over for translation.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 386.

1957

February 24

He gets ready for the event scheduled for March 4. He plans to have his portrait, painted by Theodor Chudetsky, ready for the exhibition, where it will be displayed alongside the portraits of great classical figures, including Rustaveli, Guramishvili, Baratashvili, Ilia Chavchavadze, Akaki Tsereteli, and Vazha-Pshavela, which were specifically acquired for the event.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 386

Note: In the source, Theodor Chudetsky is mentioned only by his last name.

1957

February 24

He gets ready for the poetry evening and exhibition scheduled for March 4. Following the idea of poet Shota Lomsadze, he plans to have his poem "Books for the People" artistically decorated for the exhibition. In his opinion, a specific number of artists is required for this, namely no fewer than ten. However, he believes it would be even better if the poem's 19 motifs were artistically interpreted by 19 different artists.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 386.

1957

February 24

In the Zarya Vostoka newspaper, dedicated to the 36th anniversary of Georgia's Sovietization, on the first page under the subtitle "Fragments from the New Poem 'Motherland'", the Russian translation of the poem "Soviet Georgia" by Boris Serebryakov is published.

Source: Советской Грузии, Фрагменты из новой поэмы "Родина", Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Б. Серебряков, Заря Востока, Тб., 1957, 24 февраля, №47.

1957

February 24

He thinks that a lot of work is needed to organize the exhibition, but if the event takes place on March 4, everything will be ready in time. In addition, he considers it significant that by that time he will have the funds to purchase the exhibition materials, as he is expecting a total of 2600 roubles from his honorarium and salary. He hopes to also receive some compensation from Zarya Vostoka. With this money, he plans to pay the artist, the craftsman, the person assembling the stands, and the carpenter.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 10; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 390.

1957

February 24

He gets ready for the exhibition scheduled for March 4. He thinks it would be good to display his facsimiles as well, and specifically considers various options for his signature: Galaktion Tabidze; G. Tabidze; G. T.; Galaktion; Gal. Tabidze; Galaktion – Tabidze; and Galaktion T.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 10; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 390.

1957

February 25

He makes a list of the photo materials that need to be ready for the exhibition. He believes that around 200 photographs are needed, including images of Lenin, the October Revolution, the Civil War, Moscow, demonstrations, five-year plans of construction, foreign countries, specifically Paris, World War II, and contemporary peace periods. He thinks these photos must be ready the very next day. To achieve this, he plans to review all the books he has in his possession, collect the photos from them, and then take them to the printing house for preparation for the exhibition.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 390.

1957

February 25

He is curious about how it happened that, according to the decision of the radio committee, none of his poems were read on the radio during the 36th anniversary of Georgia's Sovietization, while works by Giorgi Leonidze, Ioseb Noneshvili, and others were broadcast. He believes that his enemies specifically orchestrated this and expects similar actions in the future from Giorgi Leonidze and the chairman of the Georgian Radio Committee, Anton Kelenjeridze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 385.

Note: In the source, Anton Kelenjeridze is mentioned only by his last name.

1957

February 25

He is troubled by the fact that none of his works were published in the issue of the Komunisti newspaper dedicated to the 36th anniversary of Georgia's Sovietization. He is convinced that the newspaper's editorial staff is engaging in some sort of provocation, and it is this that motivated their actions. However, these thoughts do not spoil his mood, as he recalls a Chinese proverb, which suggests that enemies are the best teachers.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 385.

1957

February 25

He submits a formal request to Avtandil Gunia, the Minister of Culture of Georgia. He writes that, in connection with the 40th anniversary of the Great October Socialist Revolution, he wishes to publish a Book titled “Flags, Quickly!” The Book will include material about the days of the October Revolution, socialist transformations, the Great Patriotic War, and peaceful construction. He states that the Book is ready, with Sergi Tchilaia taking on the role of editor. Additionally, the Russian word-for-word translations are also prepared. Galaktion requests the minister’s support for publishing the Book in both Georgian and Russian.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-222; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 132-133.

1957

February 27

He plans to hold a thematic evening on April 1, titled “The Great October Socialist Revolution in Galaktion Tabidze’s Work”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 14; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 391.

1957

February 27

He gets ready for an exhibition about his biography and works. He plans how the materials should be displayed on the stands. He intends to purchase paper, fasteners, frames, hanging rings, and nails.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 388-389.

1957

February 27

He talks to Theodor Chudetsky, who tells him a story from long ago about how Vladimir Purishkevich verbally insulted students, and how the young people immediately published an ironic letter in response in the newspaper the next day.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 15; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 391.

1957

February 27

He writes a poem “Thought at the Shaytan Bazaar” (“This Roar, This Filth...”).

Source: Autograph, MGL, №406-d, p. 5; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 272.

1957

February 28

For the exhibition, they bring him materials: two copies each of the fourth and seventh volumes of Galaktion’s collected works, a printed copy of “Epoch” on the typewriter, and the 1954 edition of “Selected Works”.

Source: N. Kvirikadze’s record, MGL, d-378, p. 5; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 385.

March

1957

Until March 1

He learns from the Central Lecture Bureau that the event he had planned, where Beso Zhghenti was supposed to give a report titled “1917 Year in Galaktion’s Work”, will not take place before March.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 370.

1957

March 1

The young photographer, whose secretly taken photo at the Opera House on January 29 he liked, now takes a photo of Galaktion’s meeting with the typesetters and a photo of his seven-volume collected works.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 26; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 372.

1957

Until March 4

In his notebook, he writes down the text of an announcement stating that on March 4, there will be a meeting with the typesetters and the National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze, and that attendance will be possible only with invitation cards.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 4; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 387.

1957

March 6

He notes the phone numbers of museums and the art gallery in his notebook.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 26;

1957

March 7

He notes in his notebook that it is necessary to compile and publish a short biography.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 26;

1957

March 7

He finalizes the arrangement of materials for the display stands of volumes III-VII. At the same time, he completes the selection of materials from these volumes for the “October Book”.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 26;

1957

March 7

He notes in his notebook that he, along with his book’s editor, Sergi Tchilaia, needs to meet with Vasil Mzhavanadze, the First Secretary of the Central Committee.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 26;

1957

March 7

He meets Nazi Kilasonia, to whom he hands over the facsimiles for the magazine Pioneri. He learns that the female writer plans to organize a meeting between Galaktion and the readers of Pioneri, as well as to arrange an exhibition.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 402.

1957

March 7

He transports 24 display stands from the state publishing house to his home.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 26;

1957

March 7

At the state publishing house, he meets Rezo Orjonikidze, who promises that the review will be ready by Monday.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 28;

1957

March 7

He writes an epigram about Literaturuli Gazeti.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 28;

1957

March 8

In the morning, there is a knock on the door. The poet's wife, Nino Kvirikadze, opens the door to find a man with a wine vessel who, in a Mingrelian accent, tells her that he wants to see "him". The poet's wife tries to prevent the uninvited guest from entering the house, and after a verbal altercation, she threatens to call the police. The stranger retreats and leaves. Galaktion assumes that the unknown man was sent by his adversaries and is pleased that Nino stood firm against him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-629, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 309-310.

1957

March 8

From midnight to 3 a.m., Nino Kvirikadze organizes the materials for Galaktion's ninth volume according to lists. The first three lists are missing some items, while nothing from the fourth list is visible. She cannot determine where the missing materials are.

Source: N. Kvirikadze's record, G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 523.

1957

March 8

He is at the printing trust with Pati Nishnianidze, attending an event dedicated to International Women's Solidarity Day.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 402.

Note: In the source, Pati Nishnianidze is referred to only by her first name.

1957

March 8

Revaz Orjonikidze gives Galaktion a written promise that, with the approval of Vladimir Mgaloblishvili, the head of the state publishing house, he will sign a contract with him on March 11, according to which the poem "The Book of Peace" will be included in the publishing plan as soon as a positive review is submitted.

Source: MGL, d-579, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 416.

1957

March 9

At 1 o'clock, he meets the editor of the newspaper Komunisti, the writer Beno Tatarashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 402.

1957

March 9

He learns that the poet Ivan Nazarbegov has passed away. Before his death, Nazarbegov had requested that Galaktion be informed.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 28;

1957

March 9 or later

In honour of Ivan Nazarbegov's memory, he writes an untitled poem in Russian: "Для твоей могилы...".

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №591, p. 1;

1957

March 10

He brings the necessary materials for the Book from Tskneti.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 28;

1957

March 10

He notes in his notebook that he needs to get involved in the jubilee events dedicated to Ilia Chavchavadze.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 28;

1957

March 11

In agreement with the editor of the eighth volume of his collected works, Revaz Orjonikidze, he plans to sign a contract with the state publishing house once the volume is included in the publishing plan.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 8; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 402.

Note: In the source, Revaz Orjonikidze is mentioned only by his first name, Rezo.

1957

March 11

He plans to visit the editorial office of the newspaper Komunisti.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 8; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 402.

1957

March 12

The director of School №61 informs him by phone that their planned event has been rescheduled to March 20 due to the elections. From the tone of the conversation, he concludes that the school director must be an energetic woman.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 8; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 402.

Note: In the source, Pati Nisnianidze is mentioned only by her first name.

1957

March 13

He writes an untitled poem "In short to our presidium or if you cut off the esidium..." in three versions.

Source: MGL, t-655. newspaper "Заря Востока", March 13, 1957, №61, p. 1.

Note: A different version of the poem, titled "Preparation of the Decade" ("Contemporary Prose..."), was published in Vakhtang Javakhadze's Book "Unknown", Tbilisi, 1988, p. 46.

1957

March 15

He hands over materials about his work to the Teachers' House, specifically articles by Vasil Barnovi, Davit Kldiashvili, and other authors.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 9; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 402.

1957

March 15

In his notebook, he notes the address of Sergo Shavgulidze and the phone number of the editor of his eighth volume of works, Revaz Orjonikidze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 10; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

1957

Until March 16

He writes a draft of the statement to be submitted to the state publishing house. He mentions that the poem “The Book of Peace” contains more than 2,000 lines. The idea of the work is outlined in the preface. He requests the appointment of an editor so that the Book can be published in the “Library” series, without any abbreviations.

Source: MGL, d-579, 8; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 416.

1958

March 16

He writes a poem “The Flags of the Decade” (“We are the creators, and right now, nine hundred seventeen...”).

Source: Autographs: MGL, №6703; №8468; №481-d, p. 15; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 311.

1957

After March 16

He receives a letter from Revas Orjonikidze, the editor of his eighth volume. The sender expresses satisfaction that the head of the state publishing house, Vladimer Mgaloblishvili, has agreed to publish Galaktion’s poem “The Book of Peace”. Orjonikidze promises to try to prepare the Book for typesetting as soon as possible.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-494; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 328.

1957

After March 16

The poem “Nana” is published in the magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba.

Source: Magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba, 1957, №2-3, p. 80.

Dating: The magazine is signed for printing on March 16, 1957.

1957

March 17

He notes in his notebook that Khuta Berulava’s poetry Book is being published, which includes two beautiful poems about Galaktion.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 36;

1957

March 17

He signs a contract to organize a large exhibition titled “The Great October Socialist Revolution in Galaktion Tabidze’s Work” at the building of School №99. According to the contract, the materials for the exhibition must be collected by May 15, the exhibition is to open on June 1, and it will run until September 3. The contract is signed by Galaktion and representatives of the school.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 22; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 406.

1957

March 18

He begins working on the Book together with Rezo Orjonikidze.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 38;

1957

March 19

He plans to make certain compositional changes to the text of the poem “The Book of Peace”.

Source: MGL, d-472, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 286.

1957

March 20

He plans to participate in the meeting scheduled for that evening at Tbilisi School №61. He recalls that he spoke with the school’s director on the phone a few days ago and learned that Pati Nishnianidze was also at the school.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 10; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

Note: In the source, Pati Nishnianidze is mentioned only by her first name.

1957

March 20

In his notebook, he notes the work and home phone numbers of Alexandre Shvangiradze, an employee of the Personnel Department of the Ministry of Education.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 10; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

1957

March 21

He is ill, as are his stepdaughter, Nunu Ebanoidze, and her daughter, Marine Pirtskhalava. A doctor arrives, but not to examine him.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 38;

1957

March 21 or earlier

He requests the rescheduling of the thematic evening “The Great October Socialist Revolution in Galaktion Tabidze’s Work”, which was supposed to take place on April 1.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 14; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 391.

1957

March 21

In his notebook, he notes the phrase from Aristotle’s Poetics: “Poetry is more philosophical than history”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 23; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 406.

Note: The phrase from Aristotle is written in Russian in his notebook.

1957

March 21

He comments on his note from February 12, 1956, in his notebook about Ivane Vepkhvadze: “Vano Vepkhvadze - leads the exhibition of 27 artists (young ones) at the Artists’ Club” by stating that this person no longer leads the exhibition.

Source: MGL, d-355, p. 5; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 274.

1957

March 22

His nephew, Nodar Tabidze, brings him his poems translated by K. S. Ovanov, and he is pleased with the result.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 38;

1957

March 22

He learns that the meeting scheduled with him for April 2 at the Council of Ministers has been postponed due to a session.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

1957

March 24

He goes to the funeral of Vazha-Pshavela’s wife, Tamar Didibashvili. She is buried in Didube, in the same grave where Vazha-Pshavela was buried before being reinterred in Mtatsminda.

Source: T. Kobaladze, The Candle... Your Soul is a Candle..., newspaper Tskhovreba da Kanoni, November 23, 1991, № 23, p. 3; For dating: The funeral of Tamar Razikashvili, Literaturuli Gazeti, March 29, №13, p. 4.

1957

March 25

Kote Ratiani visits him, bringing a photo of Galaktion and a poster for the display stand.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 44,;

1957

March 25

He has a scheduled meeting with Rezo Orjonikidze at 1 o’clock but is kept waiting until 5. After the meeting, he takes the Book home.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 44;

1957

March 25 or later

He receives a letter from Davit Enukidze, the deputy chairman of the Georgian Society for the Dissemination of Political and Scientific Knowledge, who, as a member of the society, informs him that the third plenum of the board has decided to regularly send scientists and writers to the regions to give lectures. The addressee is asked to notify them of which region he will be able to give a lecture by April 10.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-636, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 442.

Dating: The letter is dated March 25.

1957

March 25 or later

He makes a note on the letter received from Davit Enukidze, the deputy chairman of the Georgian Society for the Dissemination of Political and Scientific Knowledge. He points out that it is necessary to clarify Enukidze's full name, patronymic, address, and phone number; to determine when the fourth plenum of the board will take place; to find out who the members of the society's board are, as well as the lecturers who might be involved in preparing a lecture about his work. He also notes that a short bibliographical Book about him needs to be prepared.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-636, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 442.

Dating: The letter is dated March 25.

1957

March 27

Liza Malania, a graduate of the Tbilisi Cultural-Educational Institute, goes to Galaktion's house and asks him to help her find a job.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-624, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 186.

1957

March 28

He is at the Academy of Sciences, attending the annual report meeting, where he listens to Nikoloz Berdzenishvili's speech. The speaker discusses the Marxist and idealist trends in historical science, noting that he himself is a Marxist, not an idealist. A heated debate is sparked with Konstantine Gamkrelidze, Besarion Zhghenti, Giorgi Leonidze, and Varlam Topuria, to the point that the confrontation takes on an aggressive tone toward the scholar. Galaktion is curious whether there is a stenographic record of this meeting and where it can be obtained. While reflecting on the meeting and Nikoloz Berdzenishvili's argument, he writes in his diary his own position, stating that he is not an idealist either.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 25; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 395-396.

Note: In the source, Konstantine Gamkrelidze, Besarion Zhghenti, and Giorgi Leonidze are mentioned by their last names and initials, while Varlam Topuria is referred to as "Topuria Akad".

1957

March 28

He meets the President of the Academy of Sciences, Academician Niko Mushelishvili, and hands him the Russian-language Book “Under the Banner of the Great October” (Soviet Republics in 40 Years). In turn, Niko Muskhelishvili gives this Book to the secretary-academician of the Division of Social Sciences, Angia Botchorishvili. The poet is curious about the outcome of the academicians’ review of the book.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 25; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 396.

Note: In the source, Niko Mushelishvili is mentioned by his initials and last name, while Angia Botchorishvili is referred to only by her last name. The original title of the Book is “Под знаменем Великого Октября (Советские республики за сорок лет)”.

1957

March 28

He notes the address of Alexandre Chogovadze.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 10; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

1957

After March 28

Shalva Ghlonti’s Book “The Peculiarities of the Artistic Mastery of Georgian Writers” is published, which includes an essay titled “The Realistic Motifs in G. Tabidze’s Poetry”. The author traces the development of realistic motifs in Galaktion’s poetry and attempts to prove that realism played a significant role in the poet’s early lyricism.

Source: Sh. Ghlonti, The Peculiarities of the Artistic Mastery of Georgian Writers, 1957, p. 157-175.

Dating: The Book is signed for printing on March 28, 1957.

1957

Until March 29

He plans to organize a second meeting at the Printing House on March 29. He lists the materials that, in his opinion, are necessary for the exhibition. He intends to have fifteen new stands prepared, with enlarged covers of the seven volumes of his collected works and “Epoch” displayed. As soon as the stands are ready, he plans to immediately print a poster and ask Sergi Tchilaia or Pati Nishnianidze to read the speeches at the event. He also plans to involve his family members in preparing for the exhibition: his wife, Nino Kvirikadze; his stepdaughter, Nunu Ebanoidze; Nunu’s husband, Vata Pirtskhalava; his nephew, Nodari Tabidze; as well as the family helper, Irma Papashvili. He believes that Sosiko Pantskhava and the head of the “Galaktion Tabidze Literary Circle”, Ilia Adeishvili, will also help. He intends to entrust the decoration of the stands to an artist from the state publishing house. He plans to entrust the decoration of the stands to an artist from the State Publishing House. He intends to present the Book “Under the Banner of the Great October” to the Minister of Culture as part of the exhibition and wants the presentation of the Book to have a grand and impressive character.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-355, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 276-277.

Note: In the source, Nino Kvirikadze, Nunu Ebanoidze, Vata Pirtskhalava, Nodari Tabidze, and Irma Papashvili are mentioned only by their first names.

1957

March 29

He meets Mikheil Kveselava at the Central Committee.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 48;

1957

March 30

He makes a note titled “Five-Minute Poem”, in which he lists the tasks he has completed or planned in five minutes, whether it’s agreeing on newspaper publications, preparing exhibition materials, or negotiating with officials about upcoming events. Although each negotiation ends according to his wishes, he still thinks that rushing is not helpful, as such serious matters require more time and careful consideration.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 16-17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 391-392.

1957

March 30

In five minutes, he agrees with Shalva Manjavidze that his son, Vakhtang, will create a sculpture of Galaktion based on the bust of Iakob Nikoladze. He plans to discuss the matter in detail with Shalva Manjavidze in two days and clarify when Vakhtang will be able to visit him and start working. To facilitate this, he notes Shalva Manjavidze’s phone number in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 16; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 391.

1957

March 30

For five minutes, he talks to Elizbar Ubilava about the publication of his poems in the Komunisti newspaper. His interlocutor explains that the Komunisti editorial board is doing its best to publish Galaktion’s works soon and promises that his poems will be printed in the newspaper within a week. Galaktion is confident that this will happen, but he considers the matter urgent and plans to take additional steps to expedite the publication.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 16; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 391.

1957

March 30

He learns that the Russian poet and translator Boris Serebryakov is ready to translate the remaining materials – Galaktion’s poetry drafts – if Davit Sturua, a representative of Zarya

Vostoka, wishes it. He believes that this issue will be easily resolved, as Davit Sturua is positively inclined toward him. He is pleased that it only took five minutes to clarify this matter.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 16; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 392.

1957

March 30

He talks to Dmitri Mtchedlidze, the director of the Opera and Ballet Theater, and informs him that the date for the event, April 16, has already been agreed upon with Mikhail Kveselava, the head of the Culture Department of the Central Committee. After hearing this information, Dmitri Mtchedlidze also gives his approval and tells him that the Opera and Ballet Theater will be at Galaktion's disposal on April 16.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 16; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 392.

1957

March 30

They call from the Council of Ministers and inform him that a meeting with him will be arranged on April 2.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 392.

1957

March 30

He learns that a meeting is scheduled at the Navtlughi Railway Club on April 6, and that a wall newspaper is being specially prepared for that day. He recalls that there is a library named after him in Navtlughi, where Kote Ratishvili and Natela Ratiani work. He is pleased with the idea of the event, especially since, in his opinion, the organizers seem enthusiastic. However, he believes that the main focus should be on organizing the evening at the Opera House.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 392.

1957

March 30

He learns that a meeting is planned with him at the Financial and Credit Technical School, where the Galaktion Tabidze Literary Circle, led by Ioseb Pantskhava and Ilia Adeishvili, operates. The event will take place on May 4. The poet is pleased by this, as he believes that the planned meeting will not be just an ordinary event, but rather a grand matter will be settled on that day. In his opinion, it is during this meeting that several circles named after Galaktion Tabidze could unite, and it is possible that an exhibition will be organized there, continuing through May, June, July, and August.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 392.

1957

March 31

He notes the address of the writer Gigla Mebuke's house in Sokhumi.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 10; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

1957

March 31

He learns from his nephew, Nodar Tabidze, that a great anthology of Soviet poets is being published in Moscow.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 50;

1957

March 31

He makes a note titled "Where can we find 10,000 roubles?" in which he discusses several possibilities for obtaining the mentioned amount. He notes that the director of the Literary Fund, Alexi Gomiashvili, could lend him the money if he presents a guarantee document. The state publishing house does not provide such a loan to anyone, but if the Central Committee intervenes, they cannot oppose its decision. He believes that raising the issue with the Central Committee is not advisable unless there is no other option. He suspects that the Writers' Union will also refuse him, as it is controlled by the "Abashidze-Tchilaia-Leonidze faction". He is convinced that his opponents will do everything possible to prevent him from succeeding.

Source: MGL, d-579, 5; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 413-414.

1957

March

He writes an untitled poem "And a thousand mountains fell silent...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №406-d., p. 22-24; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 284. For clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 695.

Note: The poem is also found untitled with a different beginning line: "Let all nations gather...".

April

1957

April 1

He is at the Literary Fund. He writes a letter addressed to the director of the fund, Alexi Gomiashvili, requesting a loan of 10,000 roubles for two months and promises to repay the loan by the end of May.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,79, p. 27; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 396.

Note: The date at the end of the statement is indicated as April 2, but a note nearby reveals that the statement was actually submitted to the Repository on April 1.

1957

April 1

He writes down a list of tasks he plans to address in the near future. He intends to visit the Teacher's House, the Literary Fund, and the state publishing house, meet with the sculptor, and talk to Pati Nishnianidze. He also wants to find out who the members of the Literary Fund's board are and what time their meeting is on April 2.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 14; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

1957

April 1

He plans to visit the Academy of Sciences until 3 p.m., and then go to the department store.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 14; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

1957

April 2

A ceremonial meeting is held in the meeting hall of the Council of Ministers of Georgia, where the attendees greet each other by standing and applauding. The opening speech is delivered by S. Silagadze, the chairman of the local committee of the Council of Ministers. Then, the secretary of the party organization, G. Pophkhadze, speaks, and at the end, at the request of the audience, the poet reads the poem "My youth, the one with a smiling face...".

Source: P. Nishnianidze, From Galaktion's Life, Tbilisi, 1960, p. 181-182.

1957

April 2

At 5 p.m., he writes an untitled poem "With your eyelash, the second chases the second...".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 25; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 407.

1957

April 3

Rezo Orjonikidze takes only a tenth of Galaktion's poem to the state publishing house, which frustrates Galaktion, making him wonder why it takes so long to divide the poem. Orjonikidze assures him that it will be sent to the printing house on Sunday.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 53;

Note: In his frustration, Galaktion writes "Chonchorikidze" instead of "Orjonikidze".

1957

April 5

A grand evening is organized for him at Tbilisi's 47th secondary school, but despite having distributed tickets, no one from the Writers' Union attends.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 55;

1957

April 8

He notes in his notebook that a poem about Lenin is needed and that the topic "The Image of Lenin in Galaktion Tabidze's Work" could be well-developed by Beno Chikobava.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 59;

1957

After April 9

In the magazine Komunisturi Aghzrdisatvis, Isidore Odishvili's review of Eteri Shushania's Book "Galaktion Tabidze" is published. Overall, the reviewer gives a positive assessment of the monograph but points out some shortcomings: it contains little about the poet's childhood and youth, as well as his public activities.

Source: I. Odishvili, A monograph about Galaktion Tabidze, magazine Komunisturi Aghzrdisatvis, 1957, №4, p. 91-92.

Dating: The magazine was signed for printing on April 9, 1957.

1957

April 11

David Shughliashvili, an employee of the Institute of Georgian Literature, visits. He plans to have Galaktion fill out a data questionnaire for the collection "Georgian Soviet Writers" and to get an autograph of one of his poems. The poet is interested in this idea and dictates his personal information to the guest. Shughliashvili tells him that the next day he will provide printed special sheets on which Galaktion should write his autobiography and one of his poems.

Source: D. Shughliashvili, Galaktion's last literary evening, magazine Mnatobi, 1980, №1, p. 162-163.

1957

After April 11

He receives a letter from a family friend, an engineer named Jose, who met with Arkady Deev, the director of the Moscow State Publishing House, on April 8 to inquire about the status of Galaktion's Russian-language book, "Verses and Poems". The sender informs the poet that in the coming days, the publishing house will receive the translated material, finalize which texts will be included in the book, and send it to the printing house in May. The Book is expected to be published before the literary decade, in September. Additionally, books by 17 other Georgian writers will be published. Jose did not need to meet with the chief editor, Anatoly Starostin, as Sergi Tchilaia had already sent a telegram requesting an increase in the book's volume. While the publishing house does not plan to print all 20,000 lines, they will expand the volume as much as possible. At the end of the letter, Jose informs Galaktion that he will visit Deev again at the end of May and will update him on any new developments.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-495; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 329.

Note: Jose is often mentioned alongside Nino Kvirikadze and her children.

1957

April 12

David Shughliashvili brings the questionnaire sheets to Galaktion for the autobiography and poem, but the poet is too busy. He apologizes and asks him to leave the sheets to be filled out, promising that they will be ready in three days.

Source: D. Shughliashvili, Galaktion's last literary evening, magazine Mnatobi, 1980, №1, p. 162-163.

1957

April 15

As promised, Galaktion hands over the filled-out autobiography and the autograph of the poem "Everyone Has Something to Remember" to David Shughliashvili. Galaktion talks to the guest at length about matters related to the publication, offers advice, and gifts him a collection of poems with the inscription: "To David Shughliashvili, as a sign of my deepest respect. G. Tabidze, April 15, 1975".

Source: D. Shughliashvili, Galaktion's last literary evening, magazine Mnatobi, 1980, №1, p. 162-163.

1957

April 16

He gets ready for the event and plans to inform the Writers' Union and the Academy of Sciences about the scheduled evening. He also considers notifying Mikhail Kveselava, the head of the Culture Department of the Central Committee.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 15; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 403.

1957

April 17

He writes an untitled poem "Oh, Sea, Oh, Palm Branch...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №6148; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 273.

1957

April 20

A review of Eteri Shushania's Book "Galaktion Tabidze" by Revaz Orjonikidze is published in the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti. The reviewer gives a positive assessment of the monograph and points out that the author has expressed new perspectives on several issues.

Source: R. Orjonikidze, A work on Galaktion Tabidze, newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti, 1957, №48 (April 20), p. 4.

1957

April 22

He writes a poem "It Has Emerged!" ("From the Pages of History...").

Source: Autograph, MGL, №6919; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 274.

1957

April 22

He writes a poem “In Moscow... On Foot” (“If the Atlantic Ocean...”).

Source: Autograph, MGL, №6919; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 274.

1957

April 23

He writes a humorous untitled poem dedicated to Louis Aragon, titled “Louis Aragon... Barakoni Gorge”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 16; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404.

1957

April 25

He gets ready for an exhibition about his biography and works. He finds out that the stands are being made, and by April 26, he will be able to hand over the texts to be placed on these stands.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404.

1957

April 25

He meets with the members of the Galaktion Tabidze Literary Circle.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404.

1957

April 25

He meets Dmitri Benashvili and Angia Botchorishvili at the Academy of Sciences.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404.

Note: In the source, Dimitri Benashvili is mentioned by his initials and last name, while Angia Botchorishvili is referred to only by her last name.

1957

April 25

He is thinking about the organizational matters for the exhibition about his biography and works. He plans to arrange the stands in the same way as they were in the previous exhibition. He wants one of the stands to feature the inscription “Galaktionology”, and he intends for the event to be accompanied by an orchestra. Additionally, he plans to have a stenographic record of the meeting made. He also intends to take care of the banquet arrangements.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404.

1957

April 26

He plans to go to the Georgian film studio at 12 o’clock and meet with Gulbaat Abelishvili.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 31; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 408.

1957

April 26

He expects to receive a loan from the Literary Repository by April 27.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404.

1957

April 26

He plans to sign a contract with the state publishing house regarding the publication of the eighth volume of his collected works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404.

1957

April 26

He plans to meet with the artist the next day, who will prepare the texts he provided for display on the stands.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404.

1957

April 26

He plans to go to the Writers' Union and meet with Sergi Tchilaia. He intends to hand over the layout of the eighth volume of his collected works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404.

Note: In the source, Sergi Tchilaia is mentioned only by his last name.

1957

April 26

He plans to visit the printing house to find out how the process of formatting the Book to be published in Russian is progressing.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404.

1957

April 26

He plans to organize the manuscripts of the poem "The Book of Peace".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404.

1957

April 27

In his notebook, he notes that the text to be handed over to the artist should be ready by 9 a.m. on the same day.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404.

1957

April 27

He plans to go to the printing house at 11 o'clock to clarify the issue of formatting the Book to be published in Russian.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404.

1957

April 27

He plans to go to the state publishing house at 3 o'clock to resolve the issue regarding the contract for the publication of the eighth volume of his collected works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404.

1957

April 27

He plans to go to the Literary Repository at 5 p.m. to receive the loan he requested.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404.

1957

April 27

He plans to go to the cinema in the evening.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 404.

1957

April 28

He is pleased with the meeting that was arranged for him at the Navtlughi Railway Club.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 18; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1957

April 28

He plans to go to the printing house from 9 to 10 a.m., meet with the artist from 11 to 12 a.m. to hand over the texts for display on the exhibition stands, then go to the Literary Repository from 12 to 1 p.m. to receive the loan he requested. Finally, from 1 p.m., he plans to go to the state publishing house to sign the contract regarding the publication of the eighth volume of his collected works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 18; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1957

April 29

In his notebook, he notes the phone number of the printing house where his Book to be published in Russian is supposed to be printed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 18; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1957

April 29

In his notebook, he notes the phone number of the Literary Fund. He plans to go to the Repository at 3 p.m. to receive the loan he requested.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 18; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1957

April 30

He plans to involve the members of the Galaktion Tabidze Literary Circle in the preparation process of the exhibition about his biography and works. They will assist both in transferring and organizing the exhibition materials and in setting up the stands.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 18; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1957

April

An untitled poem "Let us rise higher outside..." is published in the magazine Pioneri.

Source: Magazine Pioneri, 1957, №4, p. 27.

May

1957

May 1

He writes an untitled poem "There Was a Forest Up to the Ravine...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №7677; №399-d, p. 1; №399-d, p. 2; №399-d, p. 4; №6528; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 275.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "There Used to Be a Forest Here" and untitled with different beginnings ("There Was a Forest Up to the Ravine..." and "Once There Was a Dense Forest Here...").

1957

Until May 4

He writes an untitled poem "Like a Ship That Does Not Recognize...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2489; №8096; №8174; №2033; №5502; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 271.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "To the Abkhaz, Strong in Spirit" and untitled ("To the Abkhaz, Strong in Spirit..." and "To the Georgian, Strong in Spirit...").

Dating: The eighth volume of the collected works, in which this poem was first published, was submitted for production on May 4, 1957.

1957

Until May 4

He revises the untitled poem "When one passes along the Black Sea shore..." written on February 8, 1946. He creates a new untitled version of the work and prepares the revised text for publication in the eighth volume of his collected works' eight-volume edition.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5241; №3318; №5490; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 308. For clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 688-689.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “By the Black Sea Shore”.

Dating: The eighth volume of the collected works, in which the new version of the poem was first published, was submitted for production on May 4, 1957.

1957

Until May 4

He writes an untitled poem beginning with “With the dampness of these autumn roads...”.

Source: MGL, N. Kvirikadze’s manuscript, №8193; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 285. For clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 696.

Note: The manuscript has been corrected by Galaktion himself.

Dating: The eighth volume of the collected works, in which the poem was first published, was submitted for production on May 4, 1957.

1957

Until May 4

He writes an untitled poem “In the evening over Kobuleti...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №86-a. p. 7427; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 293. For clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 696.

Dating: The eighth volume of the collected works, in which the poem was first published, was submitted for production on May 4, 1957.

1957

Until May 4

He writes an untitled poem “We have passed...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №86-a, p. 7424-7425; №8809-8810; №8346-8348; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 294. For clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 697.

Note: The poem is also found under the following titles: “Liakhvi and Mtkvari”, “South Ossetia”, and “After February”, as well as untitled with different beginning lines: “Who turned the blackness into the sun here...” and “What vastness, what a ridge...”.

Dating: The eighth volume of the collected works, in which the poem was first published, was submitted for production on May 4, 1957.

1957

Until May 4

He writes an untitled poem “Paths impassable and paths traveled...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №6783; №136-d, G. 15; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 290. For clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 698.

Dating: The eighth volume of the collected works, in which the poem was first published, was submitted for production on May 4, 1957.

1957

Until May 4

He writes an untitled poem “We feel that no variety of things will save us...”.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 298.

Dating: The eighth volume of the collected works, in which the poem was first published, was submitted for production on May 4, 1957.

1957

Until May 4

He writes an untitled poem “With the fire of great bitterness burning...”.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 301.

Dating: The eighth volume of the collected works, in which the poem was first published, was submitted for production on May 4, 1957.

1957

Until May 4

He writes an untitled poem “What has collapsed...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №7288; 8135; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 301.

Note: The poem is also found untitled with a different beginning line: “I don’t know why they called you, black...”.

Dating: The eighth volume of the collected works, in which the poem was first published, was submitted for production on May 4, 1957.

1957

Until May 4

He writes an untitled poem “Vanity! I feel, why doesn’t it reach...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №86-a, p. 7423; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 301.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: “Mtskheta” and “In the Mtskheta Region”.

Dating: The eighth volume of the collected works, in which the poem was first published, was submitted for production on May 4, 1957.

1957

Until May 4

He writes an untitled poem “The agreement, made once by the Aragvi...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №7286; №7319; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. II, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 44. For clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 695.

Note: The poem is also found under the following titles: “The Agreement with Aragvi” and “The Agreement Between Aragvi and Us”.

Dating: The eighth volume of the collected works, in which the poem was first published, was submitted for production on May 4, 1957.

1957

Until May 4

He writes an untitled poem “There is a reader of a beautiful book...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №8156; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 291.

Dating: The eighth volume of the collected works, in which the poem was first published, was submitted for production on May 4, 1957.

1957

Until May 4

He writes an untitled poem “Salute to the people of the dawn...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №5752-5753; №6805; №5915; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 296. For clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 699.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “With the October Flag”.

Dating: The eighth volume of the collected works, in which the poem was first published, was submitted for production on May 4, 1957.

1957

Until May 4

He writes an untitled poem “We remember the greatness of the days of October...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №7274; №83830; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 286. For clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 696.

Note: The poem is also found untitled with different beginning lines: “I remember the greatness of the days of October...” and “Oh, I can barely hold back the flood of tears...”.

Dating: The eighth volume of the collected works, in which the poem was first published, was submitted for production on May 4, 1957.

1957

Until May 4

He revises the untitled poem “Can no longer set a trap...” written before July 28, 1929, and creates a new untitled version of the work, beginning with “There was a wealthy house...”. He prepares the revised text for publication in the eighth volume of his collected works’ eight-volume edition.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №941; №4343; №2699; №8378-8379; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 304; For clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 684.

Note: The poem is also found under the following titles: “The Idle Man with a Handsome Face” and “A Simple Corner of a Wealthy House”.

Dating: The eighth volume of the collected works, in which the new version of the poem was first published, was submitted for production on May 4, 1957.

1957

Until May 4

He revises the 1936 poem “Two Murdered Poets”, dedicated to Ilia Chavchavadze and Alexander Griboedov, creating a new untitled version with a different beginning line: “The rocky mountains of Tbilisi...”. He prepares the revised text for publication in the eighth volume of his collected works’ eight-volume edition.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №200-a, p. 5450; №8180; №137; №57; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 292. For clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 687.

Note: The poem is also found under the following titles: “The Heads of Tbilisi” and “Mournful Georgia”, as well as untitled with different beginning lines: “The rocky mountains of Tbilisi...” and “The cliffs of Tbilisi’s mountains...”.

Dating: The eighth volume of the collected works, in which the new version of the poem was first published, was submitted for production on May 4, 1957.

1957

Until May 4

He revises the untitled poem “Before me, the fierce torrents roar...” written in 1939-1940, creating a new untitled version with a different beginning line: “From the ash tree garden...”. He prepares the revised text for publication in the eighth volume of his collected works’ eight-volume edition.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №7414; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 288. For clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 687.

Note: The poem is also found untitled with a different beginning line “From the ash tree garden, the torrents roar...”.

Dating: The eighth volume of the collected works, in which the new version of the poem was first published, was submitted for production on May 4, 1957.

1957

Until May 4

He revises the 1940 poem “Thuja” (“At the peak, where the thuja blooms...”) and creates a new version of the work with the same title. He prepares the revised text for publication in the eighth volume of his collected works’ eight-volume edition.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №4005; №623-d, 3063; №5493; From Na-390, p. 4; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 290. For clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 688.

Note: The poem is also found under the title “Before a New Life Begins” and untitled “At the peak, where the thuja blooms...”.

Dating: The eighth volume of the collected works, in which the new version of the poem was first published, was submitted for production on May 4, 1957.

1957

Until May 4

He revises the untitled poem “I will not let the merriment go...” written in 1935 and creates a new untitled version with a different beginning line: “The dark merriment has faded...”. He prepares the revised text for publication in the eighth volume of his collected works’ eight-volume edition.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №7307; №353-d, p. 12; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 286. For clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 685.

Note: The poem is also found untitled with a different beginning line: “That we may cut through the darkness sharply...”.

Dating: The eighth volume of the collected works, in which the new version of this poem was first published, was submitted for production on May 4, 1957.

1957

Until May 4

He writes a poem “Paris”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №2639-2644; №12094; №7850-7859; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. V, Tbilisi, 1967, p. 154.

Note: This poem also appears untitled, with the opening lines “They say that Italy...” and “The magnificent city is silent...”

Dating: The eighth volume of G. Tabidze’s collected works, where this poem was first published, was submitted for production on May 4, 1957.

1957

May 4

The state publishing house grants permission for the production of the eighth volume of Galaktion Tabidze’s collected works.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in eight volumes, vol. VIII, 1957, p. 293.

1957

Until May 4

He receives a letter from Sosiko Pantskhava, who asks him to show the same kind of attention to the young admirer of his poetry, Besik Adeishvili, as Romanoz Pantskhava once showed toward Galaktion. The sender also requests that he read the enclosed poem at his literary evening.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-475; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 296.

1957

May 4

He plans to meet with the members of the literary circle named after him, located on University Street. Additionally, he intends to visit the Academy of Sciences and see the head of the Academy's library.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 19; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1957

May 4

He plans to visit the state publishing house and the printing house to clarify the issue regarding the publication of his books.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 19; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1957

May 4

He plans to call Dimitri Benashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 19; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1957

Until May 6

He thinks that May 6 will be a decisive day in many aspects. He plans to order 40 frames, which will be needed for organizing the exhibition.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 29; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 406.

1957

May 6

He plans to print invitation cards for the opening of the exhibition showcasing his biography and works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 19; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1957

May 7

He wants the majority of the guests at the exhibition showcasing his biography and works to be students, and he writes about this in his diary.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,80, p. 19; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 405.

1957

Until May 8

The printing house of the Georgian Theatrical Society prints the invitation and program for a meeting with Galaktion Tabidze at the Tbilisi Financial-Credit Technical School. The program includes an opening speech, a lecture by Beso Zhghenti on "The Great October Socialist Revolution in Galaktion Tabidze's Work," speeches by Georgian writers, presentations by members of the Galaktion Tabidze Literary Circle, and an exhibition featuring the poet's books, manuscripts, portraits, artworks, sculptures, and more.

Source: Invitation card-program, GTDA, №440, p. 1-2.

Dating: The date May 8 is handwritten on the invitation.

1957

May 8

A literary evening dedicated to Galaktion is held at the Railway Junction Club. Following the opening speech, Beso Zhghenti delivers a lecture on “The Great October Socialist Revolution in Galaktion Tabidze’s Work”. Georgian writers and members of the Galaktion Tabidze Literary Circle also take the stage. The event includes an artistic segment and an exhibition showcasing the poet’s books, manuscripts, portraits, artworks, sculptures, and more.

Source: Invitation card-program, GTDA, №440, p. 1-2.

Dating: The date May 8 is handwritten on the invitation.

1957

Until May 13

He writes a poem “Pioneering” (“Glory Forever to the Day...”).

Source: Magazine Pioneri, 1957, №5, p. 2; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 300.

Dating: The issue of the magazine Pioneri in which “Pioneering” was first published was signed for printing on May 13, 1957.

1957

After May 13

The poem “Pioneer” is published in the magazine Pioneri.

Source: Magazine Pioneri, 1957, №5, p. 2.

Dating: The issue of the magazine was signed for printing on May 13, 1957.

1957

May 14

He is sent an issue of the Vani district newspaper Kolmeurnis Mnatobi.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 5; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 427.

1957

May 22

The 19th School for Working Youth in Tbilisi organizes a meeting. Students recite poems dedicated to him, while Galaktion reads his poem “The Days Turn Like Dice...” At the end of the meeting, the teachers escort the poet and his companions, and along the way, Galaktion shares the story behind the creation of his poem “I and the Night”.

Source: P. Nishnianidze, Galaktion’s Several Meetings with the Working People of Georgia, Tbilisi, 1960, p. 22–23.

1957

May 24

He tries to resolve the issue of organizing the event at the Financial and Credit Technical School. For this, he is advised to call the technical school's commandant at home. This idea does not appeal to him and leaves him feeling ironic about the suggestion.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 410.

1957

May 24

He learns that it is impossible to hold the planned event in the hall of the Financial and Credit Technical School because a festival is being held there. Seeking a solution, he considers organizing the meeting in another hall of the same technical school. This means that, due to the festival, children will not be able to participate in his evening, but he is still determined to see the matter through to completion.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 410.

1957

May 25

He is satisfied that, despite the obstacles and challenges, the meeting at the Financial and Credit Technical School was successfully held.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 410.

1957

Until May 25

He notes the information that a meeting is to be held at the Pioneers' Palace, in which he will participate along with Ioseb Grishashvili, Nino Lomtadze, Ketevan Ananiashvili, Nino Kakabadze, and Patsia Paichadze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 30; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 373.

Note: In the source, Ioseb Grishashvili is referred to as "Gr", while Ketevan Ananiashvili is mentioned by her initials and last name.

1957

May 27

He completely transfers the materials of the exhibition showcasing his biography and works from the Financial and Credit Technical School to the Railway Workers' House located on Plekhanov Avenue, now Aghmashenebeli Avenue.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 410.

1957

May 27

He plans to organize an event at the Railway Workers' House and arranges for invitations to be prepared.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 410.

1957

May 28

He is irritated by the behaviour of Alexandre Chogovadze, one of the organizers of the event planned at the Railway Workers' House, referring to him as 'Chio-Chio-San'. He plans to discuss the event over the phone with journalist Ilia Bakhtadze and the head of the Railway Workers' House Club.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 410.

Note: In the source, Alexandre Chogovadze's first name and last name are not mentioned, while Ilia Bakhtadze is referred to only by his last name.

1957

Until May 30

He plans to meet with artists on May 30. The meeting is organized by the Society for the Dissemination of Political Knowledge. As part of the event, there will be a charcoal painting session. He wants to know in advance how many artists will participate in the event, in which Pati Nishnianidze will also be involved along with Galaktion.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 409.

1957

May 30

He plans to visit the Academy of Sciences to see Besarion Zhghenti.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 410.

Note: In the source, Besarion Zhghenti is referred to as: "Be, E, Sso, Oo, O!".

1957

May 30

He writes a humorous, untitled poem "Chio-Chio-San" dedicated to Alexandre Chogovadze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 410.

1957

May 30

He notes the names of individuals who, in his opinion, should be involved in preparing the event planned at the Railway Workers' House. These include Vakhtang Gurgenidze, Alexandre Chogovadze, and the head of the Railway Workers' House Club, Alpaidze. He also mentions that there has been no noticeable activity from these individuals so far.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 411.

1957

May 30

He gets ready for the meeting and exhibition planned at the Railway Workers' House and confirms that Besarion Zhghenti is ready to deliver a presentation at the event.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 411.

1957

May 30

He takes care of the organizational matters related to the evening and exhibition planned at the Railway Workers' House. To clarify details, he notes the phone number of the head of the railway workers' section in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 411.

1957

May 30

He discusses the evening and exhibition planned at the Railway Workers' House with Pati Nishnianidze, who believes it is essential to organize a dinner after the event. This idea surprises Galaktion.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 411.

June

1957

June 1

He hands over 600 invitations for the event planned at the Railway Workers' House on June 8 to the head of the Railway Workers' House Club, who promises to have them all distributed within two days.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 9; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 411.

1957

June 2

He attends an exhibition and enjoys viewing the paintings by artist Varlam Makharoblidze, particularly the landscapes of Svaneti. He feels as if he is traveling through Svaneti while admiring them. In his opinion, these landscapes clearly show that the artist serves art with his soul and heart. He is captivated by the fact that everything in the paintings is Georgian, even the colours and paints themselves.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 9; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 411.

1957

June 3

The previous day, inspired by the paintings of Varlam Makharoblidze he viewed at the exhibition, He writes a poem "The Painter of Mountains".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 412.

Note: "The Painter of Mountains" is a variant of the untitled poem "Here, Precious Appears Our".

1957

June 4

He tries to contact Arkady Deev and Sofia Khitarova in Moscow, but nothing comes of it with these mysterious individuals.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-616, 19; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 130.

Note: Arkady Deev and Sofia Khitarova are mentioned in the record only by their last names.

1957

June 4

He sends telegrams to Arkady Deev and Sofia Khitarova in Moscow, informing them that he is unable to depart immediately and asking whether it would be too late for him to arrive between June 16 and 18.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 90;

1957

June 5

He sends three signed copies of the contract related to the publication of his Book to the publishing house "Soviet Writer".

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-267; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 80.

Dating: The date is indicated in the entry from June 20.

1957

June 3

He is on Mount Udzo and notes in his notebook Nikoloz Kakhelishvili's account of the traditions and religious rituals associated with Mount Udzo.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 20-21; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 412.

1957

June 6

He is curious whether the telegram and letter he sent to Moscow, to the publishing house Sabtchota Mtserali, were received. He recalls that he paid for the telegram but did not indicate that it was urgent. He plans to send the letter again on June 17 or 18.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,62, p. 5; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 321.

Note: In the source, the recipient of the telegram and letter is not specified.

1957

June 8

A meeting with him is organized at the Railway Workers' House, accompanied by an exhibition.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 94;

1957

June 10

The transportation of exhibits for Galaktion's exhibition to the Railway Workers' House is being planned, as the exposition will remain there for an extended period.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 96;

1957

June 10

He learns that Pati Nishnianidze is traveling to Poland and Czechoslovakia with a group of Georgian educators. Galaktion gives her his collection of poems and asks her to somehow deliver it, along with a note, to the then-President of Czechoslovakia, Antonín Zápotocký. In the letter, the poet sends greetings to the addressee and writes that he is sending a Book containing excerpts from the poem "Epoch", dedicated to the participants of the Sixth Congress of the Comintern. He writes that this poem was published as a separate Book in 1929. He recalls traveling with the addressee and other delegates to the industrial cities of the Soviet Union after the congress concluded.

Source: Letter's autograph, MGL, 24551-65; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 82; P. Nishnianidze, Galaktion's Several Meetings with the Working People of Georgia, Tbilisi, 1960, p. 144.

1957

After June 11

He calculates the amount of money transferred to him by State Publishing House from May 6 to June 11. He determines that a total of 30,000 roubles has been transferred, with 16,000 roubles remaining to be paid.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 408.

1957

After June 15

He submits a formal request to David Mamatsashvili, the head of the Transcaucasian Railway. In the letter, he states that on June 8, a literary evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze, along with an exhibition about his work, was held at the organization's club. Due to public interest, a larger-scale version of this exhibition was also organized at the Plekhanov Railway Club on June 15. Given the significant attention it has received, the Shota Rustaveli Institute of Georgian Literature is petitioning the Transcaucasian Railway to allow the exhibition to remain permanently in one of the rooms of the club's large foyer and to be officially named "The Permanent Exhibition of the National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze's Work".

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-244; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 137;

1957

Until June 20

He plans to send a letter to Moscow to find out whether the signed contracts he sent to the publishing house "Soviet Writer" have been received. He wants to know how much the honorarium will be and when he will be able to receive the payment.

Source: AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 79.

1957

June 20

He speaks by phone with the chief accountant of the publishing house “Soviet Writer”, inquiring whether they have received the signed contracts sent on June 5, whether the author’s honorarium has been calculated, and whether the payment can be transferred urgently.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-267; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 80.

1957

June 22

He notes down the phone number and working hours of Grigol Kachkachishvili, the deputy head of the production department at the locomotive and wagon repair factory. He plans to speak with this person, as his next meeting with readers is scheduled to take place at the Railway Workers’ House.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 409.

1957

June 22

He writes an epigram: “Carefree by nature are Beria’s henchmen”.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 98;

1957

June 22

He wants to select photographs for an exhibition and have them enlarged to be displayed on exhibition stands. He plans to dedicate three days to sorting through the photo materials. According to his estimate, if he submits the photographs for enlargement on June 25, they will be ready by June 28. In his notebook, he notes the name, surname, and address of the person who will handle the enlargement of the photo materials.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 409.

Note: The source contains a typographical error – it mentions May 28 instead of June 28.

1957

June 27

Antonín Zápotocký presents him with a copy of his Book “Red Glow Over Kadno,” published in Czech, with a personal inscription.

Source: MGL, t-312, A. Запотоцкий, Красное Заревое над Кадно, Moscow, 1954.

July

1957

July 1

He spends the entire day in Tskneti and learns that a meeting with the Pioneers has been scheduled for July 18.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 103;

1957

July 2

Rezo Orjonikidze visits him and tells him about an attempt to remove Nikita Khrushchev from his position as First Secretary of the Central Committee.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 104;

1957

July 7

A meeting is organized at the Tbilisi Pioneers' and Students' Park of Culture and Recreation. The children greet him with bouquets and recite his poems. The poet talks to them, recites poems himself, and at the end of the evening, takes a photo with them.

Source: M. Ghudushauri, July 7, 1957, newspaper Norchi Lenineli, December 4, 1982, N 49, p. 3.

1957

July 7

With the help of an artist, he transfers lines from his poems onto large-format sheets for exhibition stands: "My Native Land", "To Youth Again", "For Peace", "Oh, Homeland", "Rocks the Cradle of New Life".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 23; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 415-416.

Note: In the source, the titles of the poems are not mentioned; only the stanzas intended for display on the stand are transcribed.

1957

July 7

In his notebook, he notes information about a meeting organized by the Pioneer Camp with the poet-academician Galaktion Tabidze. The meeting will include welcoming speeches and recitations of poems, as well as a presentation on Galaktion's works. At the end of the event, a grand concert will take place in the garden, with a brass band performing. The meeting is scheduled to start at 6 p.m.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 24; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 416.

1957

July 10

He reads the newspaper Komunisti writing next to the headline: "Moscow, Party Card – 1917-1918, regarding the entry of Galaktion Tabidze and Olya Okujava into the party".

Source: MGL, t-696. newspaper Komunisti, July 10, 1957, №161, p. 1.

1957

July 12

He submits a formal request to the director of the Stalin Transcaucasian Railway Car Repair Factory. In the letter, he explains that, in connection with the 40th anniversary of the Great October Socialist Revolution, his literary evenings and exhibitions are being held frequently, and for these events, he requires display stands. He requests the production of twenty-five stands, each two meters long and one-meter-wide, to be placed on a one-meter-high platform.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-223; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 133.

1957

July 13

He reads the July 13 issue of the newspaper Komunisti, which features the television program schedule. It states that poets Galaktion Tabidze, Alio Mirtskhulava, and Makvala Mrevlishvili will be at the television studio at 8 p.m. The broadcast will be allocated fifteen minutes.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 24; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 416; Newspaper Komunisti, July 13, 1957, №164, p. 4.

Note: In the newspaper Komunisti, as well as in Galaktion's notes, Galaktion Tabidze, Alio Mirtskhulava, and Makvala Mrevlishvili are mentioned by their last names and initials.

1957

July 13

He is in the television studio together with Alio Mirtskhulava and Makvala Mrevlishvili. The television program featuring the poets begins at 8 p.m.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, July 13, 1957, №164, p. 4.

Note: In the newspaper Komunisti, as well as in Galaktion's notes, Galaktion Tabidze, Alio Mirtskhulava, and Makvala Mrevlishvili are referred to by their last names and initials.

1957

July 16

He wonders if he will have enough time that day to visit the state publishing house and the printing press to ensure the timely publication of the eighth volume of his collected works and, since everything is ready for the exhibition, to print the portraits.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,82, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 420.

1957

July 16

The printing press assures him that the printed forms of his Book will be ready for him by the following day.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,82, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 420.

1957

July 16

He is on the banks of the Mtkvari River, surveying the area and looking for a suitable building for an exhibition-museum space. He thinks the best location is next to the state publishing house. He also likes the exhibition building on Plekhanov Avenue, now Aghmashenebeli Avenue. Ultimately, he does not make a final decision, as he believes that a similar space might be found elsewhere.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,82, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 420.

1957

July 16

He is at the Academy of Sciences and formally requests the establishment of a Galaktion Tabidze Museum in connection with the 50th anniversary of his creative career. He learns that, in honour of this jubilee, the Academy of Sciences plans to prepare an academic edition of Galaktion Tabidze's works and to hold a scientific session.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,82, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 420.

1957

July 17

He writes an untitled poem "Without speaking a word, I am longing...".

Source: Autographs: MGL, №3494; №24325; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 276.

1957

July 17

He reflects on the tasks he resolved the previous day while simultaneously planning what needs to be done. He intends to visit the editorial office of Zarya Vostoka with Mikheil Vadbol'ski, then call the Writers' Union, and by 5 p.m., stop by the printing press to check on the status of his book. Additionally, he wants to find out how the preparations for the exhibition are progressing, specifically the condition of the stands. He plans to confirm details about the exhibition with his nephew, Nodar Tabidze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,82, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 420.

Note: In the source, Mikheil Vadbol'ski is referred to only by his last name, while Nodar Tabidze is mentioned only by his first name.

1957

July 17

He continues to add to the exhibition materials reflecting his biography and creative work. He plans to print a photo titled "National Poet of Georgia" for this purpose. Additionally, he wants to prepare stands with appropriate inscriptions, one of which is to be "Galaktionology".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,82, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 420.

1957

July 18

He is at the Writers' Union, meeting with writers who have arrived from Ukraine.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,81, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 411.

1957

July 18

In his notebook, he lists tasks to be completed, including: a meeting with railway workers in Nadzaladevi; visits to the Writers' Union, the state publishing house, the printing press, and the Academy of Sciences; printing the collection Galaktionology; presenting the eighth volume of his collected works; compiling and translating a large single-volume collection of his works into Russian; preparing material for the ninth volume; preparing interlinear translations for Russian translations; organizing a major literary evening to improve his financial situation; preparing for trips to Abkhazia and Moscow; and delivering issues of Galaktionology.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-514, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 90.

1957

Until July 19

He notes in his notebook that almost five months ago, he submitted poems to the newspaper Komunisti, but Gigla Pirtskhalava has still not published them.

Source: Autograph, GTDA, №402, p. 102;

1957

July 22

He visits the state publishing house's bookstore, where he speaks with the staff, examines posters of Dostoevsky and Mickiewicz, new books, and the latest editions of "The Knight in the Panther's Skin" and Lenin's works. He also converses with readers who enter the store.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-539, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 198.

1957

July 29

He is in Vake, in front of the Tbilisi State University printing house. He is pleased that the university has its own printing house and that a new road is being paved.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 15; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 370.

1957

Second half of July

While staying in Tskneti for rest and work, Revaz Inanishvili encounters Galaktion one rainy evening in the forest, sitting cross-legged on a mossy boulder. Galaktion is swaying side to side, humming the chords of a poem or song. Witnessing this enigmatic scene, the writer quietly leaves so as not to disturb him. A few days later, on a sunny day, he returns to the same spot and discovers that the word “Galaktion” has been etched into the boulder with a sharp object.

Source: R. Inanishvili, Pani, newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, November 2, 1973, N 43-44, p. 6.

August

1957

August 14

The State Printing Word Combine grants permission to print the circulation of the eighth volume of Galaktion Tabidze’s collected works.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in eight volumes, vol. VIII, 1957, p. 293.

1957

After August 14

The eighth volume of Galaktion Tabidze’s eight-volume works is published. It includes fragments from the poem “The Book of Peace” and 89 poems: “Forward, forward, homeland...”, “What waves rolled over the vast...”, “Dedicated with the soul and heart...”, “The air, filled with evening frost, and the hills full of thoughts ...”, “There was one rich corner of a wealthy house...”, “The dark kaleidoscope of cities...”, “Forward, forward, toward the light, sprinting...”, “A maiden with a book! On our native path...”, “Among the ever snowy emerald Alpine peaks...”, “We remember the greatness of the October days...”, “And the thousand mountains fell silent, waiting in sorrowful shadow...”, “We feel: no debate can save us, not even a king, nor God...”, “The dark clamour faded away, the ancient routine...”, “Let’s say: a mountain top, and raise a monument...”, “Here, visible dreams are followed by enchantments...”, “We passed Shindari, Tbeti...”, “In the evening, a gentle breeze comes from the sea in Kobuleti...”, “On the Black Sea shore, a tree stood bent...”, “It seemed like something had happened...”, “A rainbow shines from mountain to mountain...”, “The fir trees glow with radiance as they draw near...”, “From above, the sky shines pure, below are the mountains and the marsh...”, “On the heights, the ruins of a temple stand...”, “The war was crowned with a great victory...”, “Will anyone find their graves in this world, I wonder?...”, “Vanity! I feel it, why doesn’t it help us...”, “The mountain destroyed by the rocks scattered about...”, “A ship, unaware of the vast and open sea...”, “Historically, with steady strides in every age, every time of war...”, “The ruins look out from many past years...”, “The treaty once signed with the Aragvi...”, “When Tamar begins dancing Perkhuli...”, “To The New Wave”, “Here, through the fence, the Kamuri looks at you...”, “The rocky mountains of Tbilisi overlook the river...”, “They speak eloquently, but they are greatly mistaken...”, “Greetings to the people of dawn – to this sky, earth, and sunny seas...”, “The window darkens at dusk with its curtain...”, “Wherever we may be, here or beyond the nine mountains...”, “Friendship among the people... this is the wish of our fathers and mothers...”, “Let me praise light with verse, not darkness...”, “Now it’s time, worker, for your labour and work to be valued...”, “I have much to share with you, brother, companion...”, “To the wall, created by something, blindly disconnected among nations...”, “Travel, preach in the city, in the village...”, “The branch of the palm tree, the branch of peace...”, “Anything can happen...”, “The Black Sea shore as it passes by...”, “The wars have shaken and paved the way for the people...”, “Stronger than the strong, louder and more thunderous...”, “The hymn to peace – the fate of Georgia...”, “In Hitler’s heart, there is undoubtedly a lake of destruction and decay...”, “In the evening, a glowing light spreads across the trembling avenues...”, “Witnesses of the races and wanderings...”, “The wolf met the lamb on the ship...”, “China”, “Paris”, “On the winding path of Ash Tree”, “There, where the sun embraces the sky’s blue...”, “The oaks, dressed in chokhas, placed their acorns in jars...”, “As this appeared – the avenue of the forest – clear, delicate, slow...”, “From the Ash Tree garden, the storm winds blow...”, “Mist is coming down from the mountain, the forest has been caressed...”, “In the old days, they loved to walk this joyful path...”, “From our Ash Tree forest, the noise of the Udzo gorge echoes...”, “From above, noise rises, like a swarm...”, “The purest sky, a blue frost of glass...”, “How beautiful it is, glacier, your sunny view...”, “I love the rain of Abkhazia, do you know why?...”, “With the paths of this autumn...”, “Oh, spring, I adore you, you came to me like a swallow...”, “Why do you remind me, scattered on the vine...”, “On the first of August, at night, snow fell in Shovi!...”, “Thuja”, “It sails like a ship on the sea...”, “The paths are impassable, and the paths are passed...”, “The hero’s face is carved by winds...”, “There is a reader of a beautiful book...”, “I was happy and I will be happy...”, “Look: the land is bright with splendour, past, present, and a great tomorrow...”, “Pure conscience, purity, and sharpness...”, “Will the poem be defeated by death? On the contrary!..”, “The oxen were dragging the cart bitterly...”, “Giorgi! Now the caretaker and the keeper...”, “This was once, a long time ago...”, “Ilia sings – oh my!...”, “Oh, Nana, Nana, Nana...”, “I was listening to the people’s singer...”.

Source: G. Tabidze, works in eight volumes, vol. VIII, 1957.

Note: The editor of the Book is Revaz Orjonikidze. The volume consists of 294 pages, and the print run is 7,000 copies. The Book was sent to production on May 4, 1957, and signed for printing on August 14 of the same year. The volume includes 90 works, of which 35 poems are published for the first time, along with fragments from the poem “The Book of Peace”.

1957

After August 14

The state publishing house, under the editorship of Rezo Orjonikidze, prints the eighth volume of Galaktion Tabidze’s collected works with a circulation of 7,000 copies.

Source: G. Tabidze, collected works, vol. VIII, Tbilisi, 1957.

1957

After August 14

In the eighth volume of his collected works, he makes annotations next to the titles of poems.

Source: MGL, t-163, G. Tabidze, collected works, vol. VIII, Tbilisi, 1957, p. 146, 149, 151.

1957

August 20

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes a translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “The True Word”.

Source: Правдивое слово (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1957, 20 августа, N 196.

1957

August 31

The newspaper Komunisti publishes the poems “With the October Book”, “After February”, and “Anything Can Happen...”.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1957, №206, p. 3.

Note: At the end of the publication, there is a note: “From the cycle of poems My Dear Homeland”.

1957

Summer

The editor of the magazine Tsiskari, Vakhtang Tchelidze, sends Jansugh Charkviani to Tskneti to collect a poem from Galaktion for the magazine. Standing by the fence of Galaktion’s house, Charkviani sees the poet with a local villager, scooping blackberries from a bucket with his hand and eating them. When Galaktion asks the price and considers buying them, he discovers that the villager does not know the Georgian word for blackberry and calls it “Zhivaka”. Galaktion becomes very angry. The puzzled blackberry seller, curious about who Galaktion is, is jokingly told by Jansugh Charkviani that he is the chief of the city police.

Source: J. Charkviani, Brief Recollections about Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 101.

September

1957

Until September 1

He writes an application for the admission of his wife Nino Kvirikadze’s granddaughter, Marine Pirtskhalava, to school.

Source: V. Gurgenidze, The Earthly Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 198.

Dating: It is dated to the time of Marine Pirtskhalava’s admission to school.

1957

September 1

He and his stepdaughter, Nunu Ebanoidze, take first-grader Marina Pirtskhalava together to her first day of school. In the schoolyard, children surround the poet with cheerful excitement, which delights him greatly. On the way back from school, he buys books for Marina and tells her, “Remember, the National Poet of Georgia has blessed your path”. He remains in a festive mood all day. In the evening, at the dinner table, he recites the poem “Marina, Marina A...” to the girl with special intonation and promises to teach her how to recite poetry just as he was taught in his childhood.

Source: N. Ebanoidze, Recollections about Galaktion, Tskhvediani, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 400-401.

1957

September 7

He is in Sokhumi and writes an untitled humorous poem in Russian dedicated to the Abkhaz writer Dimitri Gulia, titled “Гулия – не Гуляние”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 421.

Note: In the source, the identity of the recipient is not specified, nor is the work on the text completed.

1957

September 11

Galaktion Tabidze is sitting in the Writers’ Union garden with Konstantine Gamsakhurdia when Lado Mrelashvili approaches and introduces Revaz Mishveladze. Galaktion and Konstantine engage in light-hearted conversation on some topic until Nino Topchishvili calls them from the Writers’ Union.

Source: R. Mishveladze, For the first and last time, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 145-148.

1957

September 12

In his notebook, he calculates the cost of sending invitation cards by mail for his 60th jubilee to 2,015 members of the Writers’ Union of the Soviet Union. He considers the cost of sending them via regular mail, via airmail, and the cost if half are sent by regular mail and the other half by airmail.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 280, p. 319; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 285.

1957

Until September 17

He notes the tasks that need to be completed by September 17. At the top of the list is submitting a poem for inclusion in Zarya Vostoka’s anthology to the publishing house. Additionally, he plans to give the same poem to an artist who will transfer the text onto a poster.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 4; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 421.

1957

Until September 17

He submits Andro Patariaia’s Russian translation of his poem dedicated to Ilia Chavchavadze for publication.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 4; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 421.

Note: In the source, Andro Patariaia is mentioned only by his last name.

1957

Until September 17

He continues working on the untitled poem “Common, Help Me”.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 4; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 421-422.

1957

September 19

He writes "Academy Notebook" on the front page of a notebook and begins making various types of entries in it.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 421.

1957

September 19

He goes to the Academy of Sciences to work on his publications, where he is assigned a writing desk in the reading room near the library. He is very pleased that the desk is located in the cosiest spot.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 5; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 422.

1957

September 23

He hikes Mount Udzo on foot.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-494, 7; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 458.

1957

September 24

He writes an untitled humorous poem, "We Came Down from Above".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 23; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 430.

1957

September 27

In his diary, he records Kekelidze's account of how Ioseb Grishashvili, when introducing Galaktion to Hovhannes Tumanyan's daughter, Ashkhen, subtly disparaged Titsian Tabidze, saying, "He is more of a critic, but this one is a true poet".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 25; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 431.

Note: In the source, Ioseb Grishashvili is mentioned only by his last name, Titsian Tabidze only by his first name, and the name of Hovhannes Tumanyan's daughter is not specified.

1957

September 28

At the Academy of Sciences, he meets Konstantine Gamsakhurdia and, during their conversation, reminds him of a joke he once made, saying that if Galaktion hadn't existed in Georgian literature, his place would have been taken by Nestor Tabidze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 24; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 431.

Note: In the source, Konstantine Gamsakhurdia is referred to as Kotia Gamsakhurdia. Nestor Tabidze, a distant relative of Galaktion, had no connection to literature.

1957

September 28

He gets ready for a large-scale exhibition and a poetry evening, planning for a newspaper to be printed specifically for these events. He is contemplating the title and structure of the newspaper, intending for the first page to feature a collective message from typesetters, printers, and binders. He also plans to select one of his own portraits for publication in the newspaper.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 12; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 424.

1957

September 28

At the Academy of Sciences, he meets Varlam Topuria and Angia Botchorishvili. He then moves to the reading room, where he has his own designated desk. He enjoys the cosy atmosphere and plans to go there daily to work.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 12; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 424.

Note: In the source, Angia Botchorishvili is mentioned only by her first name.

1957

September 28

He is in the reading room of the Academy of Sciences. He is irritated by Giorgi Jibladze's behaviour and is convinced that in about a year, it will become clear whose workspace will be superior.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 12; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 424.

1957

September 28

He reflects on the advantages of working in the reading room of the Academy of Sciences and plans to read magazines and newspapers there daily. In his diary, he notes the names of the people working there: Pati Didia, Angia Botchorishvili, and Davit Gamezardashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 14; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 424.

Note: In the source, Pati Didia and Angia Botchorishvili are mentioned only by their first names, while Davit Gamezardashvili is referred to only by his last name.

1957

September 28

He plans to organize the preparation and publication of a complete academic collection of his works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 14; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 424.

1957

September 28

He is at the Academy of Sciences, attending a meeting of academicians where the chair of the Social Sciences Division is to be elected by vote. Angia Botchorishvili, who previously held the position, nominates Giorgi Tsereteli as a candidate. The nomination is supported by Arnold Chikobava, who speaks positively about Giorgi Tsereteli during the meeting. A vote is held, and Giorgi Tsereteli is elected with 19 votes in favour and one against.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 30; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 432.

1957September 28

He is upset with Giorgi Jibladze and an unknown individual but believes that it is not over yet and that, in the end, his opponents will laugh differently – bitterly.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 30; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 433.

1957September 28

He plans to visit Pati Didia on Monday, September 30. He believes that this meeting will mark the beginning of work on the Galaktionology project.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 30; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 433.

Note: In the source, Pati Didia is mentioned only by her first name.

1957September 30

He plans to go to the Academy of Sciences daily and work in the academy's reading room.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 16; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 425.

1957September 30

He transfers the prints of the second, third, fourth, fifth, and eighth volumes of his collected works from the Writers' Union to the Academy of Sciences. When he places this material on his designated desk in the reading room, he notices that the sixth volume is missing. This troubles him, as he cannot determine whether he forgot to bring it or if someone removed it from the materials to be transferred.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 16; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 425.

1957September 30

He believes it is essential to gather all volumes of his works at the Academy of Sciences and, through their study, determine which texts need to be reprinted to complete his future edition.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 16; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 425.

1957

September 30

He wants all the books and materials necessary for preparing both academic and non-academic editions of his works to be gathered at the Academy of Sciences. This primarily includes the manuscripts of his poems housed in his Tskneti residence and the printed volumes stored in his apartment on Marjanishvili Street. He believes that once everything is consolidated, the Academy of Sciences will have the resources needed to prepare Russian interlinear translations for the publishing house Zarya Vostoka and for other editions of his works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 16; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 425.

1957

September 30

He plans to go to Tskneti, retrieve the manuscripts of his poems, and bring them to the Academy of Sciences. He considers this task highly important and notes it in his notebook as a reminder not to forget to resolve this matter.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 16; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 425.

1957

September 30

He reflects on what is needed to consolidate the publication of his collected works and the manuscripts of his writings to create a foundation for both academic and non-academic editions. The list of tasks to be addressed and their complexity unsettle him. He is deeply affected by the chaos surrounding him and is uncertain when the day will come when everything is organized and ready for future publications.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 16; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 425.

1957

September 30

He plans to hand over the first, sixth, and eighth volumes of his collected works to the printer in the coming days.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 16; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 425.

October

1957

October 1 or earlier

In connection with the release of the eighth volume of Galaktion's collected works, Ipolite Vartagava, at the initiative of Yuri Chikvaidze, the head of the Literary Circle at the Teachers' House, organizes an evening dedicated to the poet's work. For the occasion, Ipolite requests a photograph from Galaktion, who responds that he has long wanted to have a picture taken with his former teacher, Ipolite Vartagava, and agrees.

Source: I. Vartagava, Days from the Past, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 212.

1957

October 1

He writes an untitled poem “This desk of mine has eight drawers...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №5806; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 276; For clarification of information: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 700.

1957

October 1

Galaktion, together with Yuri Chikvaidze, visits Ipolite Vartagava on Tsereteli Street and asks him to accompany them to the nearby Shikhman’s photo studio to take a picture. The poet escorts him arm in arm to Shikhman, where the photo is taken. In the photograph, Ipolite Vartagava sits in the middle at a table, with Galaktion Tabidze and Yuri Chikvaidze seated beside him.

Source: I. Vartagava, Days from the Past, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 212.

1957

October 1

While in a store, his palm starts to itch persistently. A woman selling lemonade notices this and tells him that it is a sign he will receive money soon.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 425.

1957

October 1

He visits the bookbinding workshop, where he is informed that the eighth volume of his collected works has been bound but has not yet been placed in its cover. They promise to complete the work within a week, and the Book will be finally ready.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 426.

1957

October 1

He plans to organize and arrange his personal archive. He thinks that much of it could be stored in the garage; however, before placing the materials there, the garage needs to be properly prepared and organized.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 426.

1957

October 1

He plans to search for the sixth volume of his collected works and add it to the materials stored in the Academy’s reading room.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 426.

1957

October 1

He purchases Valerian Gaprindashvili's "Selected Works", published in 1956.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 426.

1957

October 1

He recalls the idea for a Book he once envisioned, "A Hundred Poets". This publication was intended to feature works dedicated to Galaktion by a hundred different poets. However, for various reasons, the idea was never realized.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,83, p. 17; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 426

1957

October 1

The Tskneti bus driver persistently asks him to write something about the transportation sector and the people working in it.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 12; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 428.

1957

October 2

Volumes two, three, four, and seven of his collected works are brought to Galaktion from the Academy's library. He notices that the collection is missing the first, fifth, and sixth volumes. He recalls that the first volume was retyped somewhere, but the status of the fifth and sixth volumes remains unclear to him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 34; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 433.

1957

October 2

He learns that Nino Chikhladze, an employee of the Literature Museum, whom he met on September 28, has prepared materials related to his work.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 34; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 433.

1957

Until October 10

From October 10 to October 20, meetings are planned for Galaktion with the workers of Racha-Lechkhumi in Tsageri, Ambrolauri, Oni, and Lentekhi.

Source: Unknown person's record, MGL, d-384, p. 13; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 428.

1957

October 10

He finds a letter from his nephew, Nodar Tabidze, in his room. Nodar informs him that they have received a payment notice stating that rent for July and August, totaling 181 roubles and 76 kopecks, must be paid by the end of the day. He offers to leave the money so he can take care of the payment.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-444; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 248.

1957

After October 10

The first volume of Levan Asatiani's "Selected Writings" is published, which includes the critic's 1933 article "Galaktion Tabidze".

Source: L. Asatiani, Selected Writings, I, 1958, p. 567-575.

Dating: The Book was signed for printing on October 10, 1957.

1957

October 12

He drafts a plan for tasks to be carried out at the summer house, which is co-signed by Galaktion, his wife Nino Kvirikadze, the family helper Irma Papashvili, and his granddaughter Marina Pirtskhalava, who is referred to as "Kakina".

Source: MGL, d-467, 21; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 240.

1957

October 12

He receives a short note from Solomon Tsaishvili, who writes that he has been looking for him for four days but has not been able to meet him. He needs his photograph for the newspaper.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 332.

Dating: We date it based on the year of Solomon Tsaishvili's death and the date indicated on the letter.

1957

October 12

Ivane Beritashvili presents his Book "Teachings on Human Nature in Georgia" with the inscription: "To Galaktion Tabidze, with respect".

Source: MGL, t-22, Iv. Beritashvili, "Teachings on Human Nature in Georgia", From ancient times to the fourteenth century, Tbilisi, 1957.

1957

October 14

In his notebook, he records that German prisoners were used by the Soviet Union to build Khrami-river Hydroelectric Plant. After the construction was completed, their leader was executed. He notes the presence of a German cemetery near Khrami-river Hydroelectric Plant.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 428.

1957

October 14

In his notebook, he notes that the house of Soviet party official Petre Sharia was built in just one week. He specifies that there is an old cemetery near Sharia's house.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 428.

Note: In the source, Petre Sharia is mentioned only by his last name.

1957

October 14

He discovers that the Tskneti road, which he thought was old, is actually relatively new, while the truly old road passed by Konstantine Gamsakhurdia's house.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 11; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 428.

Note: In the source, Konstantine Gamsakhurdia is referred to by the nickname "Kotsia".

1957

After October 16

He reviews the Russian magazine Khalkhta Megobreba. He makes underlining and comments, and at the end lists the interesting authors mentioned in the magazine: Vladimir Mayakovsky, Yeghishe Charents, Yanka Kupala, Leo Kiacheli, Korney Chukovsky, Samed Vurgun, and others.

Source: MGL, t-714, magazine "Дружба Народов", 1957, November, №11, Moscow.

1957

October 18

He observes the starry sky and notices a star falling. In his notebook, he records a phrase someone once said about a falling star: "You go, I won't come". Additionally, he notes the widespread belief that if one makes a wish upon a falling star, it will come true. However, he remarks that, in general, it is difficult to formulate a wish in such an extremely brief moment.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 26; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 431.

1957

October 18

He writes an untitled humorous poem, "Mashashvilo, Mashao", addressed to Alio Mashashvili and Ioseb Grishashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 26; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 431-432.

1957

October 18

He thinks that ten railings could be used to create an excellent podium, which would be useful for various events.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 27; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 432.

1957

Until October 20

He plans to organize a creative exhibition dedicated to the 40th anniversary of the October Revolution, showcasing his books, illustrations of his poems, and posters.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-540, 1; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 200.

1957

After October 20

He receives a letter from Konstantine Lazaridi, the person responsible for the renovation of his house in Sokhumi. The sender informs him about the current situation and requests additional funds.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 50-51; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 458.

Dating: It is not known whether Galaktion received this letter. Its sending date is mentioned in another letter from the same sender, dated November 15, 1957.

1957

October 22

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, Andro Pataraia's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Pia's Song" is published.

Source: Песня Ильи (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. А. Патараия, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1957, 22 октября, №250.

1957

October 23

He meets and speaks with Mitrofan Chikovani, and later notes in his notebook his account, in which Russian writer Anna Antonovskaya, at Ilia Chavchavadze's jubilee in the opera house, remarked that Georgia has the ability to give birth to children of global significance.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 53; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 437.

1957

October 23

He submits a formal request to Vladimir Mgaloblishvili, the director of the state publishing house. In the letter, he states that on September 28, 1908, one of his poems was simultaneously published in the newspaper Amirani and the magazine Akhali Kvali. Accordingly, 1958 marks the 50th anniversary of his literary debut. He requests that, in honour of this occasion, a large single-volume edition be published based on his eight-volume collected works. He also adds that the material will be ready in a very short time.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-224; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 133-134.

1957

October 24

He writes an untitled poem, "From This Place".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 44-45; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 436.

1957

October 24

He writes an untitled poem “Exactly from this place...”.

Source: Autographs: MGL, №414-d, p. 44; №414-D, p. 45; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 277.

Note: The poem is also found untitled with a different beginning line: “Here, at this place...”.

1957

October 26

He plans to meet with Ilia Arosia, Revaz Orjonikidze, and a representative of the party committee from the State Publishing House to discuss the issue of Book publications. He also intends to talk about the event to be held at the State Publishing House on November 15.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 51; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 437.

1957

October 26

He plans to have photographs taken at the photo studio located on Lenin’s Square, the current Freedom Square.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 51; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 437.

1957

October 26

He plans to visit the Writers’ Union and the Academy of Sciences. After taking care of matters at these institutions, he intends to stop by the barbershop first, and then, right next door, he will speak with the carpenter at the workshop.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 51; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 437.

1957

October 26

In his notebook, he notes that he needs to take care of sorting out his shirt and socks.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 51; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 437.

1957

October 29

He is at home, waiting for the carpenter, who is supposed to arrive at four o’clock to resolve the issue with the keys.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 47; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 436.

1957

October 29

He plans to transport the exhibition stands showcasing his works to the State Publishing House the next morning with the help of his nephew, Nodar Tabidze, and a couple of workers from the Railway Workers' House. The event, including his poetry evening and a meeting with the publishing house staff, is scheduled for November 15.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 47; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 436.

1957

October 29

He plans to contact the Kutaisi researcher, Ketevan Sanikidze, to address the issues related to the upcoming event in Kutaisi. He believes that this event, which will include an exhibition as well as a meeting with readers, will be very significant and will resemble that one day that will inspire humanity.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 47; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 437.

1957

Until October 29

A creative evening dedicated to Galaktion's works is planned to take place in Kutaisi on October 29.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 39; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 434.

1957 or earlier

October

During Ilia's jubilee celebrations, he visits Saguramo with a group of Georgian writers. The chairman of the jubilee committee tells him that he is the Ilia of modern times, and the only thing missing is a bullet in the forehead!

Source: L. Nutsubidze, Seen and Heard, magazine Gantiadi, 1993, № 3-4, p. 115.

Dating: The time is not specified in the memoir, but we can date it to Ilia's last jubilee (the 120th anniversary of his birth and the 50th anniversary of his death), which took place during Galaktion's lifetime.

1957

October

He dedicates the poem "40 Years" to the 40th anniversary of the October Revolution and revises it several times before publication.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,85, p. 9; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 446.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "Forty Years!"

1957

October

He speaks with Shota Baghdavadze, the editor of the Vani district newspaper Kolmeurnis Mnatobi, and Ambrosi Abramidze, the head of the Political Education Cabinet. He gives the poem "40 Years" to the former for publication in the newspaper's November 7 issue, dedicated to the October Revolution.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 5; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 427.

1957

October

As part of the Georgian Literature and Art Decade in Moscow, alongside other cultural events, an exhibition of Georgian Book graphics and posters is planned. This exhibition opens in Tbilisi on the first floor of the Simon Janashia State Museum before the Decade. Galaktion frequently visits the exhibition and writes in the special Book of impressions that the Georgian Book exhibition should be permanent. He also offers the exhibition organizers to showcase his own books.

Source: L. Kvirtskhalia, Meetings with Galaktion, Kvlividze, Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 279.

November

1957

November 1

He is thrilled that, upon delivery to the printing press, the inscription “Galaktionology” was printed incredibly quickly for the exhibition stand. In his view, this word signifies a new literary movement that will soon inspire humanity. Overcome with excitement, he no longer remembers where the newspapers went or where his cane is; he is completely absorbed in thoughts and ideas related to Galaktionology. The inscription “Galaktionology”, prepared in both Georgian and Russian for the exhibition stands, does not go unnoticed by the printing press staff. The typesetters and the supervisor are curious about the meaning of the word. Their attention further fuels Galaktion’s positive emotions, and he believes it is a great day, as society’s interest in Galaktionology is beginning.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,86, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 447.

1957

November 2

He is informed of the final, confirmed details that his meeting with the staff of the State Publishing House will take place on November 15. He is pleased, as he likes the date chosen for the event.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,86, p. 4; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 447.

1957

November 2

On his way to the Academy of Sciences, he meets Ilia Paliani, who stops to speak with him and asks whether he received the poem dedicated to him that he had sent.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,86, p. 4; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 448.

1957

November 2

He is at the Academy of Sciences, sitting at his desk, and thinking that he should take advantage of the work conditions available to him. He reviews the materials and notices that he has all the volumes of his collected works except for the first one. He wonders whether it will be possible to prepare his large single-volume collections for the State Publishing House, Zarya Vostoka, and the Academy of Sciences. In his view, to carry out such large-scale publications, significant work will be required both at home and outside, along with organizing his family and restoring his health.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,86, p. 4; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 448.

1957

November 2

While at the Academy of Sciences, as he reflects on future books to be published and events to be held, he remembers that there is a bookbinding workshop at the Academy, and probably some artists are there as well. He hopes that the artists will help with decorating the stands and preparing the inscriptions for the exhibition, which will be displayed at the State Publishing House during the meeting scheduled for November 15. He thinks that such assistance is especially important, given that no one at the State Publishing House is responsible for organizing anything, and therefore, he can't involve anyone in the event's organization.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,86, p. 4; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 448.

1957

November 2

Excerpts from Galaktion Tabidze's new poem "Homeland" are published in the Russian newspaper Sovetskaya Abkhazia under the title "Soviet Georgia". The translation is done by Boris Serebryakov.

Source: Советской Грузии, Фрагменты из новой поэмы "Родина", Г. Табидзе, Пер. Б. Серебряков, Советская Абхазия, Сухуми, 1957, 2 ноября, N 217.

1957

November 2 or later

He notes information about the amount of money he has spent over the past two months. He specifies that on September 2, he had 9,324 roubles and 80 kopecks in his savings account, on October 2 he had 6,424 roubles, and on November 2 he had 2,000 roubles. According to his calculations, the total amount spent over the two months is 7,324 roubles.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 19; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 429.

1957

Until November 5

He plans to visit the State Publishing House, meet with the staff, and clarify the issue of publishing his books. He also intends to confirm the details of the event to be held at the State Publishing House on November 15.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 44; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 435.

1957

November 6

The poem “Forty Years!” dedicated to the 40th anniversary of the October Revolution is published on the first page of the newspaper Komunisti.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, November 6, 1957;

1957

November 7

The poem “40 Years” is published in the Vani district newspaper Kolmeurnis Mnatobi.

Source: Newspaper Kolmeurnis Mnatobi, November 7, 1957, №89-90, p. 1.

1957

November 7

In the Russian newspaper Molodoi Stalinets, Andro Pataraia’s translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “With the October Book” is published.

Source: Книга Октября (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. А. Патараия, Молодой сталинец, Тбилиси, 1957, 7 ноября, №134.

1957

November 7

In his diary, he writes that his house in Sokhumi is still unfinished.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 313, G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 421.

1957

November 9-10

In preparation for the jubilee single-volume collection, he begins studying each volume of his collected works. He starts with the first volume and finds that it has been printed in three copies. He thinks that comparing these texts with the originals will only be possible at the public library.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 27-34; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 452.

1957

November 9-10

Together with Nino Kvirikadze and the family helper Irma Papashvili, he arranges the materials for the eighth volume of his collected works. He prepares texts for inclusion in the jubilee edition by tearing apart the printed Book from the press and pasting the selected poems onto sheets of paper. As a result of this work, 127 pages of material are selected for the eighth volume.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 34; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 452-453.

Note: In the source, Nino Kvirikadze and Irma Papashvili are mentioned only by their first names.

1957

November 10

He arranges the materials for the eighth volume of his collected works, after which he writes an untitled poem, “We Benefit from the Untouched Fund”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 6; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 451.

1957

November 10

He writes an untitled poem, “Every Morning, Feel the Fruit Like Fruit”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 7; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 451.

1957

November 10

Together with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, he reviews the materials included in the second volume of his collected works in preparation for his jubilee single-volume collection. According to Nino Kvirikadze’s observation, the texts from the second volume are entirely included in “The October Book”. Galaktion recalls that he gave this Book to Sergi Tchilaia, and a copy is kept at the Academy. He decides that the following day he will take “The October Book” from the Academy to his home.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 28; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 452.

Note: In the source, Sergi Tchilaia is referred to only by his last name.

1957

November 10

He works on the large single-volume collection for the jubilee. In order to compile the book, he studies the materials from the third volume of his collected works, counting the number of poems and lines selected for re-publication from this volume. It is eventually determined that the third volume contains 6,117 lines and includes 149 verses and one poem.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 29; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 452.

1957

November 10

He continues working on the large single-volume collection for the jubilee, thoroughly studying the fifth, sixth, and seventh volumes of his collected works. He determines which works should be included in the new edition, identifies which texts are missing, and figures out which ones need to be urgently reprinted and added to the layout of the new edition.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 30-33, 35; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 453.

1957

November 10

After reviewing and organizing the materials from the eight volumes for the single-volume collection, he determines how many lines from each volume will be included in the final edition. He then sums up the total number of lines from the poems and works to be included in the large single-volume collection, which amounts to 55,000 lines.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 30-33; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 453.

1957

November 10 or later

He plans to address a request to the director of the State Publishing House, Vladimir Mgaloblishvili, asking for the publication of the jubilee large single-volume collection, which will be compiled from the works included in the eight volumes of his collected works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 36; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 454.

Note: In the source, Vladimir Mgaloblishvili is not named.

1957

November 12

He writes a statement addressed to the director of the state publishing house regarding the publication of a selected works single-volume edition.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-586, 12; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 448.

1957

November 13

He is curious about the response he will receive from the director of the State Publishing House, Vladimir Mgaloblishvili, to whom he has already submitted a request for the publication of his large single-volume collection. In his notebook, he notes that the official response to his request will likely come about a month later, in mid-December.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 38; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 454.

Note: In the source, Vladimir Mgaloblishvili is not named.

1957

November 13

In his notebook, he records that during a recent meeting at the Writers' Union, the speeches of the writers showed signs of aging. Sandro Shanshiashvili emphasized his old age, Ioseb Grishashvili spoke in a frail voice about his aging, and Konstantine Gamsakhurdia's speech also reflected a similar tone, where he denied the difference between poetry and prose. He is surprised by Sergi Tchilaia's words that the main focus of the Moscow Decade will be on Georgian prose. He is distressed by the disregard for Georgian poetry and believes that some people want to pit poets against prose writers. He feels that Leo Kiacheli, Konstantine Gamsakhurdia, and Sergi Tchilaia are striving to overshadow poetry, with the support of the Writers' Union's secretariat. As a result, Georgian literature is presented as divided at the Decade. He thinks that Simon Chikovani, Irakli Abashidze, and Sergi Tchilaia are deliberately fighting against him to prevent his contribution from being properly represented at the Decade.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-624, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 171-172.

1957

November 13

He learns that on November 20, he will attend an evening dedicated to one of the writers, where the director of the publishing house, Vladimir Mgaloblishvili, will give the introductory speech. At the same event, Pati Nishnianidze is also scheduled to give a lecture. He thinks he should take advantage of the occasion and somehow get Pati Nishnianidze to declare that it is essential to publish Galaktion Tabidze's collected works as a single-volume edition. He believes that making such a statement at the event will be effective, as in addition to the publishing house director, poets will also be present at the gathering.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 38; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 454.

1957

November 15

He receives a letter from Konstantine Lazaridi, the person responsible for the renovation of his house in Sokhumi. The letter informs him that, according to their agreement, when Galaktion and Nino Kvirikadze left Sokhumi, Lazaridi wrote to him but did not receive a reply, so he is writing again. He provides details about the ongoing renovation at the Sukhumi house and requests an additional 250-300 roubles to complete the floor installation. He also informs him that the electrical wiring work has begun and that each chandelier will cost 650-700 roubles. Lazaridi asks whether these chandeliers should be installed and how many are needed. He requests a prompt response to ensure the timely completion of the renovation.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 50-51; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 458.

Note: The letter from Sokhumi is sent on November 11, and the recipients, along with Galaktion, are his wife, Nino Kvirikadze.

1957

November 16

He writes a letter to Konstantine Lazaridi, who is overseeing the renovation of his house in Sokhumi, and sends him 400 roubles to complete the flooring in the rooms. He also informs him that purchasing and installing chandeliers is not necessary for now and will be arranged when he himself travels to Sukhumi. He requests that Lazaridi send a telegram with updates on the progress of the construction, specifically regarding the renovation of the balcony, bathroom, and kitchen, and whether the issue of water piping has been resolved.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 52-53; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 460.

1957

November 16

He writes a letter to Arkadi Deev, the director of the State Publishing House in Moscow, asking him to find out who will be the editor for his Book to be published in Russian. He is also interested in all the important details about the book, specifically how many volumes it will consist of, how many lines will be included, and when it will be published. He also plans to send a similar letter to Sofia Khitarova and Sergi Tchilaia, employees of the State Publishing House in Moscow.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 53; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 460.

Note: In the source, Arkadi Deev, Sofia Khitarova, and Sergi Tchilaia are mentioned only by their last names.

1957

November 16

In his notebook, he notes the first name and last name of the young poet, Giorgi Mekoshvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 46; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 458.

1957

November 20

He suspects that many people know about his future plans because as soon as he says something at home, it is immediately known to the public the next day. In his view, information is being shared by his family members. He also suspects that his recent ideas might have been heard not only from his family but also from the printing press, as well as from Beso Zhghenti and Sergi Tchilaia. He is surprised by the obstacles to the realization of his future plans but is confident that, despite the opposition, he will manage to accomplish everything.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 53; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 461.

1957

November 20

At night, he reads the November 16, 1957 issue of the newspaper Akhalgazrda Komunisti. His attention is drawn to the information stating that a photograph of a literary evening held in Kutaisi in 1914 with the participation of Akaki Tsereteli was taken by photographer Niko Sagharadze. Now, several decades later, this photographic material has been donated free of charge to the Central State Archive of the Georgian SSR. He carefully examines the photo published in the newspaper, which features: Titsian Tabidze, Grigol Veshapeli (Veshapidze), Irodion Evdoshvili, Varlam Rukhadze, Akaki Tsereteli, Davit Kldiashvili, Lado Darchiashvili, Iason Nikolaishvili, Isidore Kvitsaridze, Galaktion Tabidze, Akaki Svan (Margiani), Barnaba Galazonia (Gela), Mikheil Janoev (Nemo), Ia Ekaladze, Ilia Bakhtadze, Theophile Khuskivadze, Konstantine Gamsakhurdia (Abashispireli), Jaju Jorjikia, Davit Mebuke (Tsvar-Nami), Leli Japaridze. Galaktion counts the people in the photo, categorizes them by different generations, notes how many of them are still alive, describes the clothing, expressions, and character of several individuals, and tries to guess what they might have been thinking when the photo was taken. He then sadly mentions that, apart from himself, everyone in the photo was financially well-off, while he didn't even have enough money for lunch that day. He also remembers that he respected everyone, but he had never been close enough to any of them to talk about his own hardships; on the contrary, he never showed his poverty and held himself like a lord. He recalls that his cousin, Titsian Tabidze, who was still called Titia back then, was in a similar situation. He also notes that, unlike some, such as Konstantine Gamsakhurdia, no one had helped him in his youth, and everything he achieved was through his own efforts, without anyone's assistance. He enjoys the process of studying the photo and describing it so much that he thinks that if he wrote as much about every photo, it would turn into an autobiography.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 61-67; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 462-468.

1957

November 20

He recalls the events of 1914 and the period when his first poetry Book was published, in the summer, when he was in Chkvishi with his cousin, Titsian Tabidze. He lamented that his recently published collection of poems had no luck, as the war began, and instead of the book, Germany started bombing the country.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 67; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 467-468.

1957

November 20

At night, he looks out the window and watches the first snowfall, thinking that there will be snow in Tskneti as well. He senses an improvement in his health and notices that the flu is gradually retreating.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 67; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 468.

1957

November 20

His cousin's Eter Tabidze's husband and child visit him, and it turns out that the child writes beautiful poems. After saying goodbye to his guests, he recalls his childhood, the yard in Chkvishi, and how, during a childhood fight, Eteri would run away and shout from the other side of the fence to annoy him, "Galoktiani Gamoshrili" – meaning "the crazy Galaktion".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 68; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 469.

1957

After November 20

Grigol Kiknadze's book "The Issues of Speech Style" is published, in which one paragraph is dedicated to the characterization of Galaktion Tabidze's poetic style. According to the author, the peculiarities of Nikoloz Baratashvili's lyricism lead us to a great contemporary artist like Galaktion Tabidze. The critic argues that Galaktion's lyricism is genetically linked to the "philosophical turmoil" depicted in the poetry of Nikoloz Baratashvili. Kiknadze views one of Galaktion's contributions to Georgian poetry as giving the poetic language, tinged with philosophical overtones, a place in Georgian literature, thus acquiring a "citizenship" for a previously foreign and distant lexicon. The author points out another key aspect in the philosophical lyricism of both Baratashvili and Galaktion: the sense of doubt. According to the critic, Nikoloz Baratashvili was not only the predecessor of Galaktion in terms of philosophical thirst and the artistic expression of emotions but also in the poetic lexicon itself. While Baratashvili established the cult of "blue" in Georgian poetry, as well as themes of fate and storm, and imparted the aesthetics of mystery, vagueness, and suggestion, Galaktion developed Baratashvili's poetic language in his own way. Grigol Kiknadze also discusses the common and distinguishing features in the poetry of Nikoloz Baratashvili and Galaktion Tabidze. While both artists' philosophical thirst inherently contained lyricism, Kiknadze observes that the lyricism born from this foundation in Galaktion's work lacked the intensity of Baratashvili's emotional turmoil. This difference, according to Kiknadze, arises because Nikoloz Baratashvili was searching for answers and thus expressed the emotional turmoil characteristic of such a search, while Galaktion relied on the hopeless answers already provided by others. One of the peculiarities of Galaktion's poetry, which brings him closer to Nikoloz Baratashvili, is the "present of feelings", as Kiknadze describes it. Galaktion often speaks of his past, but in such a way that this past does not stand out from the present in terms of emotional quality. However, whereas Baratashvili could somewhat control his emotions, Galaktion's feelings were so overwhelming that they sometimes appeared as unreflected sensations. Kiknadze explains that this is why, while Nikoloz Baratashvili's poems are characterized by a solid composition with clear semantic connections between stanzas and within stanzas, Galaktion's Symbolist poetry often lacks such clear connections, and the poet sometimes follows free associations. The researcher concludes that Galaktion's Symbolist poetry cannot be evaluated by the criteria of traditional poetry and traditional poetics, as Galaktion's artistic thinking is not guided by ordinary logic but by a unique poetic logic, based on associations.

Source: Gr. Kiknadze, The Issues of Speech Style, Tbilisi, 1957, p. 312-317.

Dating: The Book was signed for printing on November 20, 1957.

1957

November 21

He plans to stock up on food for the family and makes a list of the quantities of sugar, butter, potatoes, pasta, rice, and other products needed for the winter. He wants to purchase all of this within two days.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 68; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 470.

1957

After November 21

He learns of Solomon Tsaishvili's death, whom he believes was a very good man. He regrets that due to illness, he was unable to see him off on his final journey. He is curious about how the deceased's son, the young writer Sargis Tsaishvili, is doing, as he has not heard anything about him recently.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 42; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 458.

Note: In the source, Sargis Tsaishvili is referred to as Savle.

1957

November 25

He reads the Australian writer Frank Hardy's short story "Ten Shillings" and writes down an excerpt from this work in his notebook. The excerpt describes a poor but neatly dressed homeless man, walking toward the park near the library, who is forced to spend the night under the open sky.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,88, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 473.

1957

November 25

Inspired by the Australian writer Frank Hardy's short story "Ten Shillings", he begins writing a poem, but after a couple of lines, he does not continue.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,88, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 473-474.

1957

November 27

He is at home with Nino Kvirikadze and the family helper, Irma Papashvili. While in his study, he hears the phone ringing incessantly in the other room. Eventually, Irma picks up the receiver, says a couple of sentences to the stranger, then puts the phone down. She goes to Nino Kvirikadze, informs her of something, and then returns to the phone. She continues the conversation with the stranger, asks for his last name, puts the receiver down again, and tells Nino that someone named Zhordania is calling. After these formalities and Nino's discussion with Irma, Irma enters Galaktion's study and informs him that someone is asking for him on the phone. Galaktion is irritated by the women's actions, leaves his study, and picks up the receiver. The caller, Zhordania, tells him that they met five years ago when they were both treated at Mikhailov Hospital, but Galaktion does not remember him. Zhordania wants Galaktion to read his writings, but he prefers not to take the manuscripts out of his home, so he invites Galaktion to come to his house instead. He promises to send a car. Galaktion tells him that he has the flu and cannot come, but the caller continues to insist. Nino finds all this strange and suggests that Zhordania might be someone sent by others. Galaktion agrees with his wife's suspicion, as he also thinks that literary enemies might be trying to create some danger before the Georgian Culture and Art Decade.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,88, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 475-476.

Note: In the source, Irma Papashvili is mentioned only by her first name.

1957

November 27

He reflects on the upcoming Georgian Culture and Art Decade in Moscow and is disturbed by the realization that literary enemies might try to prevent him from participating in this important event. He finds it suspicious that, over the past week, strange people have been visiting his home, including some who have never been there before. He suspects that they are plotting something to prevent him from carrying out his goals and literary plans.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,88, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 475-476.

1957

November 28

He is informed by phone that the wife of the critic Romanoz Pantskhava has passed away.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-624, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 183.

Note: In the entry, Romanoz Pantskhava is referred to by the pseudonym "Khomleli".

1957

November 28

He hands his eighth volume of works to his nephew, Nodar Tabidze, and tells him that it should have been three times larger, but his enemies managed to reduce it to this size. Among his enemies, he names Giorgi Leonidze, Alio Mashashvili, Simon Chikovani, and Irakli Abashidze. He calls them Beria's tails. He says that they wrote poems about Beria and enjoyed his favour. Galaktion, however, was not liked by Beria, and to this day, he is surprised that he escaped arrest and execution. He recounts that the Futurists, the Tsisperkantselis, Aripioni, Grishashvili, Gamsakhurdia, and even Grigol Tsetskhladze ("Tolabuli Belt") each had their own distinct line and direction, but Galaktion did not belong to any of them. He considers it audacious that Alio Mashashvili wrote "Me and Baratashvili" and continues to have it published. He writes that Geronti Kikodze used the Aripioni group for his own purposes, although its true driving force was Mikheil Javakhishvili. The poet says that not telling the truth leads to obscurity. He takes Ioseb Grishashvili's "People's Calendar" from the shelf and comments on a poem published under Sayat-Nova's name, saying that it was actually altered by Ioseb Grishashvili. However, no one knows about such cases, and when Galaktion mentioned in his magazine that Sayat-Nova was a secondary poet, people were surprised. Grishashvili keeps proclaiming "Old Tbilisi", but was Tbilisi made up of only kintos? Soon, it will probably turn out that "The Knight in the Panther's Skin" was also written in Tbilisi. The poet recalls the kindness shown to him by Vasil Barnov and Davit Kldiashvili and notes that they appreciated him for his impartiality. They valued him for expressing the thoughts, feelings, sorrows, and joys of the people. With heartfelt regret, he notes that he has neither a magazine nor a newspaper to promote his own literary direction and that he is not even a member of the Presidium of the Writers' Union. He finds it laughable to be mentioned alongside Giorgi Leonidze and Simon Chikovani, as they are completely different from him. He says that his goal for the coming year is to prepare books in Georgian and Russian.

Source: Nodar Tabidze's record, GTDA, №1473, p. 1-2.

1957

November 28 or after

He writes an epigram dedicated to Giorgi Kachakhidze "...With an Axe in Hand".

Source: MGL, d-624, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 181.

1957

November 28 or after

He writes a poem "Washington".

Source: MGL, d-624, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 182.

1957

November 28 or after

He writes a humorous poem dedicated to Khariton Vardoshvili and Giorgi Katchakhidze, titled “One is called Giorgi, the other Khariton...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-624, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 181;

1957

November 30

Galaktion tells his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, that he should wear his only coat the next day, to which Nino laughs and says that the coat can no longer be worn. Galaktion responds that the coat can be repaired and cleaned and asks her to take it to the tailor. Nino refuses, saying that she can’t hold the coat herself. Galaktion’s stepdaughter, Nunu, intervenes, suggesting it’s better to buy a new coat, which will cost only 1,000 roubles. Galaktion, upset, exclaims that he doesn’t have that much money. Nino tells him he can take the money from the savings account, throws his coat on the chair, and leaves the room. Galaktion becomes anxious, as he has a meeting at the Palace of Pioneers the next day. By the end of the day, Nino begins to sew the coat.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-624, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 182-183.

1957

November 30

The family members of the artist Theodor Chudetsky call him on the phone and inform him that the artist is in poor health. They ask for help.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-624, 6; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 183.

1957

November

He writes an untitled poem, “There is strength on my side...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 289, p. 11-12; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 318.

December

1957

December 1

He plans to meet with Sergi Tchilaia to find out if there are any updates regarding the publication of his poetry Book in Russian. He is also interested in who might grant permission for the compilation of his new Book and whether it could be the responsible editor of the magazine Tsiskari, Revaz Tvaradze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 38; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 458.

Note: In the source, Revaz Tvaradze is mentioned only by his last name.

1957

December 1

He plans to go to the Palace of Pioneers at 2 o'clock to meet with the teacher, Nino Kakabadze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,87, p. 101; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 472.

1957

Until December 3

A collection of works by Georgian and non-Georgian writers working in Georgia, titled "To the Great October", is published by the Zarya Vostoka publishing house. This collection includes Galaktion's poem "Forty Years", dedicated to the 40th anniversary of the October Revolution.

Source: Сб. "Великому Октябрю. Сборник произведений писателей Грузии". Тбилиси, «Заря Востока», 1957, p. 3.

1957

December 3

An informative article dedicated to the collection of works by Georgian and non-Georgian writers working in Georgia, published by Zarya Vostoka under the title "To the Great October", is printed in the Russian newspaper Literaturnaya Gazeta. Galaktion reads this article and writes down the excerpt in his notebook, which states that the collection opens with the poem "Forty Years" by the National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Газ. "Литературная Газета", 1957, №144, 3 декабря, p. 1; G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 51; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 486.

1957

December 9 or earlier

He is preparing to participate in the Georgian Culture and Art Decade. In his notebook, he writes down the phone numbers of the representatives of the Central Committee: Mikheil Kveselava, Tsitso Jishkariani, and Isidore Dolidze, as well as the phone numbers of Sergi Tchilaia's home and work, thinking that he will need to contact these people during the preparation process for the Georgian Culture and Art Decade.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 477.,

Note: In the source, Sergi Tchilaia is mentioned only by his last name.

1957

December 9

He arranges the documents and takes care of the formalities necessary to submit his candidacy for the Lenin Prize. He then goes to the Writers' Union, meets with the union's secretary, Sergi Tchilaia, and hands over the documents to be sent to Moscow. Sergi Tchilaia, in turn, passes Galaktion's documentation to the head of the Writers' Union's administrative affairs, Irodion

Kavzharadze. It turns out that, in addition to these documents, two more photographs are required, and Galaktion will need to bring these photographs to the head of the administrative affairs at the Writers' Union in the coming days.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 477.

Note: In the source, Sergi Tchilaia and Irodion Kavzharadze are mentioned only by their last names and initials.

1957

December 9

He is at the Writers' Union, where writers and representatives from various fields of art are discussing his poetry. The discussion is joined by Givi Tevzadze, a journalist from the Georgian Radio Committee, who unexpectedly disappears after the conversation. The journalist's sudden disappearance surprises the poet.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 477-478.

1957

December 9

In his notebook, he notes the work address of Givi Tevzadze, the journalist from the Radio Committee.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 477.

1957

December 9

To be corrected by Gogi Chikobava, Galaktion takes the materials for the second volume of his collected works to his home and reassures him that the work on the first volume is progressing well. Currently, the printed text on the typewriter can be compared to the already published version. Galaktion is pleased with the process of preparing his large single-volume edition and is also reassured that his nephew, Nodar Tabidze, will assist Chikobava.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 317; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 285.

1957

December 9

He receives a pleasant letter from the children's library in the village of Izvarino, Krasnodar region, and notes in his notebook that he must reply to it.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 321; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 285.

Note: It is unclear from the entry whether the addressee, "G. E. Kirsanov", is a reader or an employee of the library.

1957

December 9 or later

He orders picture frames and scaffolding for his anniversary from Mikheil Jibuti, an employee at the Aviation Technical School located on Kamos Street.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 322; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 286.

1957

December 10

He is questioned as a witness regarding the rehabilitation of Olya Okujava. In his written testimony, the poet states that he met Olya in 1913 when she was a student at the Kutaisi Women's Gymnasium. The poet was accompanied by Titsian Tabidze, who told his cousin that the girl had "genial eyes". According to Galaktion, the Okujava family in Kutaisi was known for its honesty. Olya was a cheerful and lively girl. Since 1914, she had been teaching at the Chiatura Women's Gymnasium, where she actively participated in social affairs. She was highly regarded with great love and respect. From the very beginning, she stood out for her straightforwardness and communist ideology. In 1917, the couple traveled to Moscow, where, according to Galaktion, Olya kept a diary of the revolutionary processes while she helped him. During their stay in Moscow, the poet prepared a collection of poems but could not have it printed there, as he could not find a Georgian font. Olya returned to Georgia after the Bolshevik takeover. In Tbilisi, she began working at the Workers' and Peasants' Inspection. According to Galaktion, once he fell seriously ill and was placed in the Mikhailov's hospital. Upon his discharge, Olya was arrested on charges of Trotskyism. The poet asserts that Olya was never a Trotskyist and was, in fact, a passionate supporter of Lenin.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-612, 3; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 72.

1957

December 10

He speaks with Ioseb Botsvadze, a member of the Department of Journalism History at Tbilisi State University, and together they plan an event to be held at Tbilisi State University in February 1958.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 478.

Note: In the source, Ioseb Botsvadze is referred to as Soso Botsvadze.

1957

10 December

He reflects on the event to be held at Tbilisi State University in February 1958. In his notebook, he notes the information provided by the organizer of the meeting, Ioseb Botsvadze, a member of the Department of Journalism History at the university, that the academic process will resume on February 7. He also writes down the name and surname of Tina Rukhadze, an employee at the university's library in the periodicals section, and notes that the Faculty of Philology also has a phone. He believes this information will be necessary during the preparation process for the event.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 478.

Note: In the source, Ioseb Botsvadze is referred to as Soso Botsvadze.

1957

December 10

The chairman of the Writers' Union of Georgia, Irakli Abashidze, sends a telegram to Sergey Smirnov, an employee of the Writers' Union of Russia, informing him that they wish to nominate Galaktion Tabidze, the National Poet of Georgia, for the Lenin Prize. He also notifies him that additional documentation will be sent in the coming days.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 14-15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 480.

Note: In the source, Sergey Smirnov is mentioned by his initials and last name, while Irakli Abashidze is mentioned only by his last name.

1957

December 10

The poet Teimuraz Jangulashvili gifts his 1957 poetry collection "Poems" and writes a poem dedicated to Galaktion on the title page.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 479.

1957

December 10

His wife, Nino Kvirikadze, informs him to listen to the Georgian Radio at 3 p.m. They will broadcast a song composed by Otar Dikhaminjia based on Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Do You Remember, Mary?", which was previously performed by the Ishkhneli sisters. Galaktion is deeply moved, and tears well up in his eyes.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 323; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 286.

1957

December 10

He dedicates an untitled poem "Datiko Giorgi, Like New York..." to the employees of the photo studio located on Marjanishvili Square: Shalva Chopikashvili, Davit Chikovani, and Giorgi Amiridze.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 323; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 286.

1957

December 11

He is at the Writers' Union, where Samuel Modzghvrishvili gives him his 1957 poetry collection "Poems" with a commemorative inscription.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 479.

1957

December 13

On the bus heading toward Tskneti, he listens to the conversation of the passengers about the radio and radio program hosts. In his notebook, he notes one of the passengers saying that a strange time has come, as people now get paid for speaking.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 479.

1957

December 14

A telephone is installed in Galaktion's apartment, in his study. The number is 3-47-31. Galaktion's literary secretary and assistant, Giorgi Chikobava, is so excited about this that it seems as if the phone is intended specifically for him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 480.

Note: In the source, Giorgi Chikobava is referred to by the name Gogi.

1957

December 15

He is in Tskneti. He listens to the conversation of the local residents and notes several colourful phrases in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 18; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 480-481.

1957

Until December 16

Work begins at the Academy of Sciences on preparing the first volume of Galaktion Tabidze's collected works for its academic edition.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 479.

1957

December 16

He is at the editorial office of the newspaper Komunisti, and writes the poem "May's Flags" ("May, not atoms...").

Source: Autographs: MGL, №7268; №7270; №7271-7272; №8187; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 309.

Note: The poem is also found under the titles: "With May's Flags", "Song of Peace", and untitled (with different beginning lines: "Not of atoms, but of bloodshed..." and "May, not of atoms...").

1957

December 16

He begins writing an untitled, humorous poem titled “Tomorrow, Tomorrow, Tomorrow”, but does not finish working on the text.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 481.

1957

December 16

He reflects on the academic edition of his collected works and plans to clarify the issues related to its preparation, intending to visit the Academy of Sciences for this purpose. He wants to speak with Shota Vashakmadze, a philologist at the Academy of Sciences. Additionally, he plans to confirm whether Dimitri Benashvili is indeed in charge of the preparation of the first volume of the academic edition or if someone else has been chosen.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 479.

1957

December 16

While thinking about the first volume of the academic edition of his collected works, he recalls two individuals – Mikheil Chikovani and Alexandre Baramidze – whose involvement, in his opinion, could be possible in certain aspects of the preparation process. He then analyses the situation, realizing that Mikheil Chikovani is an assistant to Giorgi Leonidze and, most likely, won’t be able to find time to work on such an edition. He also finds the possibility of Alexandre Baramidze’s involvement doubtful, as the researcher no longer works at the Academy of Sciences.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 479.

1957

December 16

He writes an untitled, humorous poem titled “Fear, Dread, and John Reed”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 478.

1957

December 17

An article about Galaktion is published in the Russian newspaper Molodoy Stalinets, featuring translations of his poems “Homeland”, “Georgian Ornament”, and “Do You Remember...” by Vladimir Bugaevski, Mark Talov, and Giorgi Tsagareli.

Source: “Родине”, “Грузинский орнамент”, “Помнишь иль забыла дни в родном краю?” (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. В. Бугаевский, М. Талова, Г. Цагарели, Молодой сталинец, Тбилиси, 1957, 17 декабря, №150.

1957

December 17

He speaks with Sergi Tchilaia, the secretary of the Writers' Union, and Irodion Kavzharadze, the head of administrative affairs, about the necessary documents to be sent for his nomination for the Lenin Prize.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 19; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 481.

1957

December 17

He reflects on upcoming events and in his notebook writes down the names of people who might participate in his evenings or assist with resolving various organizational issues.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 22-24; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 481-482.

1957

December 17

In his notebook, he writes that a good article about him and translations of his poems were published in the newspaper Molodoy Stalinets.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 325; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 287.

1957

December 17

He hears a letter dedicated to him on the radio, and then Veriko Anjaparidze and Akaki Vasadze read his poems, leaving him very pleased.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 327; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 287.

1957

December 17

An article by the young poet and critic Simon Arveladze, titled "The Beauty of Georgian Soviet Poetry", is published in the Kutaisi newspaper Stalineli on the occasion of Galaktion Tabidze's 65th anniversary.

Source: S. Arveladze "The Beauty of Georgian Soviet Poetry" (Due to the 65th anniversary of G. Tabidze's birth), newspaper Stalineli, Kutaisi, 1957, №248.

1957

December 18

The procedure for submitting the documents and telegrams for Galaktion Tabidze's nomination for the Lenin Prize is completed, and they are sent to Moscow.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 329; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 287.

1957

December 18

His wife, Nino Kvirikadze, helps him complete the work on the single-volume edition. The Book includes the material from nine volumes and spans 2784 pages. Galaktion plans to submit it for printing to the State Publishing House the next day.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 331; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 287-288.

1957

December 18

He is at the Writers' Union, observing the process of preparing and organizing the documents to be sent to Moscow for his nomination for the Lenin Prize. He is deeply unsettled by the realization that these documents are being prepared in the same place at the Writers' Union where, in 1937, Paolo Iashvili took his own life.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 25; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 482.

1957

December 18

The process of preparing the necessary documentation for the nomination of Galaktion Tabidze, the National Poet of Georgia, for the Lenin Prize in Moscow is completed. Official documents and relevant informational telegrams are sent from the Writers' Union. The poet believes that everything is now ready for the submission of his candidacy for the Lenin Prize.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 25; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 479, 482.

1957

December 19

The Union of Soviet Writers of Georgia petitions Isidore Dolidze, Secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, to assign the publishing house Soviet Georgia the task of publishing a single-volume edition of Galaktion Tabidze's selected works in honour of the 50th anniversary of his literary career.

Source: MGL, WUF №72.

1957

December 19

He learns that Sergi Tchilaia is preparing a monograph in Russian titled "Georgian Prose". He recalls the critic's repeated statement that at the Georgian Culture and Art Decade in Moscow, scheduled for March 1958, Georgia should be represented by prose rather than poetry. He suspects that the excessive emphasis on prose and the sort of disregard for poetry might be the reason for the delay in the submission of his candidacy for the Lenin Prize.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 478.

1957

December 19

He begins to suspect that members of the Writers' Union administration are trying to obstruct his nomination for the Lenin Prize. He explains this by the fact that his documentation was sent to Moscow very late, specifically on December 18. The deadline for receiving the documents is December 20, and if they are received late, his candidacy may not even be considered.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 479.

1957

December 19

In the newspaper Komunisti, under the signature "Galaktion Tabidze, National Poet of Georgia", the poem "New Song" ("Not of atoms, but of bloodshed...") is published.

Source: G. Tabidze, "New Song", Newspaper Komunisti, 1957, №297, p. 2.

1957

December 19

Under the pretext of ongoing renovation work, the State Publishing House does not release the single-volume edition. In conversations with the staff, Galaktion realizes that the director of the publishing house, Vladimir Mgaloblishvili, will not begin printing without instructions from higher-ranking party officials. Therefore, the poet goes to the Central Committee to meet with Mikheil Kveselava, who keeps the book's layout with him and promises to help.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 337; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 288.

1957

December 20

Galaktion is dissatisfied with the fact that only Georgian Radio, the newspaper Molodoy Stalinets, and the Kutaisi newspaper Stalineli acknowledge his 65th anniversary. The main literary organ, Literaturuli Gazeti, neglects his anniversary and publishes an article about the unpublished works of Titsian Tabidze instead.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 339; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 289.

Note: In the entry, the name of the newspaper from Kutaisi is not mentioned.

1957

December 20

He loses and then finds his notebook, which contains an excerpt from Literaturuli Gazeti about the collection titled "To the Great October", published in 1957 by Zarya Vostoka in Russian.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 340; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 289.

1957

December 22

He learns from Sergi Tchilaia that the Secretary of the Central Committee, Isidore Dolidze, has instructed the publishing house to release Galaktion Tabidze's complete single-volume edition. Accordingly, within one day, it will be known whether the relevant order has been sent to the director of the publishing house, Vladimir Mgaloblishvili, specifying when the Book should be handed over, who will be the editor, and when the contract for the 56,709-line edition will be signed. Galaktion is in a hurry to submit the Book so that there will be no rejection due to delay.
Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 343; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 289.

Note: In the entry, Dolidze is mentioned only by his last name.

1957

December 22

He is informed that the Writers' Union plans to hold a creative evening for Galaktion Tabidze at the House of Art Workers on February 10, 1958. The poet thinks that many artists will be needed to prepare for this event and recalls Gogi Chikobava's companion, an artist who could assist with the preparations.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 345; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 289.

1957

Until December 23

The editor of the magazine Sabtchota Kali, Theo Abashmadze, is preparing a report for which Galaktion provides information about his eight-volume collection of works.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 249; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 290.

Note: In the entry, the title of the poem is not mentioned.

1957

Until December 23

He hands over the poem "It is the Will of the People that Our Planet..." for publication to Theo Abashmadze, the editor of the magazine Sabtchota Kali.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 249; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 290.

Note: In the entry, the title of the poem is not mentioned.

1957

December 23

He travels to Sokhumi with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, to resolve matters related to the construction of their house. They are promised that the construction will be completed by January 15.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 351; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 290.

1957

December 23

During a phone conversation, Mikheil Kveselava informs that he will send a letter to the State Publishing House on December 25 and suggests that the Book be submitted on time. Galaktion calls Isidore Dolidze, the secretary of the Central Committee, and from his secretary, he learns that Mikheil Kveselava has already spoken with Dolidze, and since Kveselava said, "We will send the letter to the State Publishing House on December 25", it will indeed happen.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 347; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 290.

1957

December 24

He lists the tasks that must be completed at the house under construction in Sokhumi in order to create basic living conditions. In his opinion, the issues of the flooring, windows, plastering, water supply, and electrical wiring must be addressed, as well as the fencing of the yard and the external stairs. He discusses all these matters with the person responsible for the construction and renovation, who assures him that these issues will be resolved by January 15. Galaktion is dissatisfied with the situation but says nothing further, thinking that the most important thing is for these matters to be resolved and the main stage of the renovation completed by January 15.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 29-33; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 483.

1957

December 25

He tries to find out when the State Publishing House will receive the layout of his prepared large single-volume edition. To clarify this matter, he contacts the management of the publishing house. From Nikoloz Shvelidze, a staff member and writer at the State Publishing House, he learns that the institution will resume operations on January 1, and until then, they will not accept the layouts of books to be published, as there is complete chaos in the publishing house and there is a risk that the received materials may get lost.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 34; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 483.

Note: In the source, Nikoloz Shvelidze is mentioned only by his last name.

1957

December 25

He is interested in how the representatives of the Central Committee, Mikheil Kveselava and Isidore Dolidze, will respond to the publication of his large single-volume edition.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 34; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 484.

Note: In the source, Mikheil Kveselava is mentioned by his initials and last name.

1957

December 25

He plans to clarify whether his early poem “The Shepherd” has been typed for printing.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 35; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 484.

1957

December 25

He wants to find out if his poem “The Book of Peace” is ready for publication.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 35; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 484.

1957

December 25

He is interested in where the old manuscript book, which was previously kept in his personal family library, is now.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 35; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 484.

1957

December 25

He plans to clarify when the Academy of Sciences will receive the materials for the first volume of his academic edition of works.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 35; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 484.

1957

December 25

The head of the Textual Department at the Shota Rustaveli Institute of Georgian Literature, Solomon Kubaneishvili, who is set to begin work on the academic edition of Galaktion Tabidze’s works, immediately requests the materials for the first five volumes from the poet.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 35; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 484.

1957

December 25

He plans to speak with his nephew, Nodar Tabidze, and find out when he will finish working on the materials for the first volume of Galaktion Tabidze’s academic edition of works.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 35; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 484.

1957

December 25

He is trying to determine the expected expenses starting from January 1, 1958, and also to consider the amount of royalties to be received.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 36; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 484.

1957

December 25

He plans to organize the material already published in the fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth volumes of his collected works in preparation for his academic edition, specifically the relatively early poems printed in these volumes.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 37; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 484.

1957

December 25

In the morning, he returns from Sokhumi with his wife, Nino Kvirikadze, and discovers that his poems "The Book of Peace" and "The Shepherd" have still not been reprinted. He then goes to the publishing house to submit the book, but the employees, Shvelidze and Ubilava, do not accept it, citing the inconvenience, though they agree to proceed with the printing. At home, he searches and finds a poem written for the New Year.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 353; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 291.

1957

December 25

He goes to the publishing house to submit the layout of his single-volume edition. They do not accept the book, citing the inconvenience, but tell him that they are aware of the Central Committee's decision and that it will definitely be printed.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 353; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 291.

1957

December 25

He searches the apartment and eventually finds the poem he wrote for the New Year.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 353; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 291.

1957

December 26

He goes to the publishing house again, but the staff of the Fiction Literature Editorial Board, Elizbar Ubilava and Nikoloz Shvelidze, still do not accept the layout of the single-volume edition. Galaktion begins to suspect that Mikheil Kveselava has still not sent the relevant decision to Isidore Dolidze.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 355; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 290.

1957

December 27

He hands over the poem “Many New Years” to the editorial office of the newspaper Komunisti.
Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 280, p. 357; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 290.

1957

December 27 or earlier

The reprinting of his poems “The Book of Peace” and “The Shepherd” is completed.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 280, p. 361; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 290.

1957

December 27

He takes the translation of the poem “New Year’s” to the editorial office of the newspaper Zarya Vostoka for publication.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 280, p. 357; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 290.

1957

December 27

In his notebook, he writes down a list of authors whose poems dedicated to him have already been translated into Russian.

Source: G. Tabidze’s diary entry, 280, p. 359; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 290.

1957

December 28

He writes an untitled poem “I will detach myself... with thought...”.

Source: Autograph, MGL, №7986; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 279.

Note: The poem is also found untitled with different beginning lines: “With thought, I stay in one place...” and “I will detach myself with thought...”.

1957

December 29

He reviews the December 29 issue of the newspaper Komunisti and notes down several pieces of information: the dates of the Supreme Soviet elections of the Soviet Union and the session of the Supreme Soviet of the Georgian Republic, as well as the speeches of Irakli Abashidze, Grigol Abashidze, and Arnold Chikobava.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-615, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 94-95.

1957

December 29

He writes an epigram dedicated to Irakli and Grigol Abashidze titled “If a Man Lacks Writing Talent...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-615, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 94-95.

1957

December 29

He regrets having submitted Andro Pataraia’s translation of his poem “Happy New Year” to the newspaper Zarya Vostoka without reviewing it first. He hopes that the editorial team will correct any errors that may have slipped into the poem. He is surprised that the translator disappeared from the editorial office just when Galaktion was expecting his response.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-615, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 95.

1957

December 29

After the New Year, he plans to read the poem “The Book of Peace” together with Beno or Giorgi Chikobava.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-615, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 95.

1957

December 29

He makes a note that a desk calendar is needed.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-615, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 95.

1957

December 29

He writes an untitled stanza: “Imer speaks to Imer...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-611, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 95.

1957

December 29

He writes an untitled poem: “There, where the waves crash against the shore...”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-615, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 95.

1957

30 December

He meets Giorgi Leonidze at the Academy of Sciences, who is reviewing the publishing plans for the following year and says that the issue of Galaktion Tabidze's academic edition of works must be resolved in 1958.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 37; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 484.

1957

December 30

Solomon Kubaneishvili is officially tasked with working on Galaktion's large single-volume edition. The researcher suggests that it would be helpful if the young journalist and poet's nephew, Nodar Tabidze, assists with the work. Additionally, Solomon Kubaneishvili requests to be informed about when the book's layout will be handed over. Galaktion promises to provide all the materials after the New Year. This conversation convinces the poet that the publication of the Book depends on its preparation, and as a result, he decides to expedite the process.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 39; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 484.

1957

He is at the Komunisti newspaper's club, inspecting the environment. He thinks that poetry evenings and various events could be organized here. He counts the available spaces, examines the stage, and speculates that the wall could be used for exhibition materials. He likes that there is a piano in the hall, a tea room nearby, and the appropriate staff to accommodate events.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 3; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 366.

1957

He is in Tskneti, in the garden of Ash Trees, and in his notebook, he notes a line from Grigol Orbeliani's poem "Toast": "The dawn of the East blooms in the colour of the rose". Inspired by this phrase, he begins writing a poem and creates several versions of an untitled work titled "By the Dawn of the East". The initial versions of the poem are influenced by the phrase from "Toast", which serves as a refrain. However, in the final version, there is no longer a direct connection to Orbeliani's line.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,85, p. 1-4; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 438-443.

1957

He writes an untitled, humorous poem titled "This is for Valia, This is for Tedore".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,84, p. 35; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 433;

1957

The editorial board of the magazine Mnatobi refuses to publish the poem "The Book of Peace".

Source: V. Javakhadze, March 17, 1959, Newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, 1992, №44, November 13, p. 11.

1957

He has 16 large stands painted with the lines of his sixteen poems in big letters and asks the Writers' Union to organize an exhibition of these poems. The poems are: "Flags Quickly"; "I and the Night"; "The Ship Daland"; "The Prologue to One Hundred Poems"; "We Poets of Georgia"; "The City Underwater"; "Blue Horses"; "The Moon of Mtatsminda"; "Ephemera"; "More Ephemera"; "Praise to the Praise of Nikortsminda"; "Revolutionary Georgia"; "Do Not Leave a Poem Unfinished"; "Poetry Above All"; "Oh, My Old Dream"; "Mary". However, the Writers' Union rejects his request. Galaktion does not give up, rents a truck, arranges the stands, and displays them on the fence of his private house in Tskneti. He is pleased when passersby read his poems and takes joy in the fact that no one else in Georgia has such an exhibition.

Source: N. Agiashvili, Let the Toast be in his honour and his name remembered with glory, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 176;

1957

He visits the director of the Griboedov Theatre, Dodo Antadze, and requests to organize a meeting with the Russian public at the same theatre. Antadze agrees, they set a tentative time for the meeting, and outline the evening's program.

Source: D. Antadze, Pages of Recollections, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 186-187.

Note: The meeting was postponed multiple times and was never held.

1957

Korneli Sanadze draws another portrait of Galaktion Tabidze in pencil. The poet is wearing a top hat and holding a cigarette in his right hand.

Source: O. Egadze, The Poet's Image In The Artist's Work, magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba, 1965, N 11, p. 72.

Until 1958

He writes an untitled poem "It is the will of the people...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №7989; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 297; For dating: G. Tabidze, AE, vol. VII, Tbilisi, 2005, p. 704.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "Many New Years".

Until 1958

He writes a poem "Many New Years" ("Strong, thundering, and long-lasting applause...").

Source: G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 310.

1958

January

1958

January 1

The poem "Many New Years" is published in the newspaper Komunisti.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1958, №1, p. 1.

1958

January 1

In the newspaper Komunisti, the typesetters warmly greet him, and on the trolleybus, he meets the editor Beno Tatarashvili, who tells him that his poem adorns the newspaper.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 365; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 291.

1958

January 1

In the newspaper Zarya Vostoka, on the second page, the translation of his poem "Happy New Year" by Andro Patarai is published. Galaktion remains dissatisfied because his poem was printed in an insignificant spot on the second page, while other poets' poems were placed more prominently. He believes this is part of a scheme by the editors, Irakli Chkhikvishvili and Ioseb Grishashvili. He thinks such tricks should be expected from Grigol and Irakli Abashidze as well as from Giorgi Gegeshidze, the first secretary of the Tbilisi City Committee.

Source: Народный поэт Грузии Галактион Табидзе, С новым годом, 1958, №1, стр. 2. G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 365; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 291.

Note: Archil Sulakauri's poem is on the first page, while Ioseb Grishashvili's is at the beginning of the second page.

1958

January 1

The diary states that for the 1500th anniversary of Tbilisi, Ioseb Grishashvili and Giorgi Leonidze will attempt to make it a special occasion. Galaktion does not plan to join their rivalry, but he will shift his attention away from his plans.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 365; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 292.

Note: The diary entry provides a very extensive list of individuals – what kind of list is this?

1958

January 1

In his immediate plans, he includes: the publication of a major single-volume edition by the State Publishing House, the release of the first volume of an academic collection of works, the publication of a large Book by the Children's Literature Publishing House, the release of a significant Book in Zarya Vostoka, the publication of a Book by the Moscow State Literary Publishing House, achieving recognition at the Moscow Decade, establishing the field of "Galaktionology" as a scientific discipline, strengthening the Secretariat of the Writers' Union, ensuring the timely approval of the Jubilee Committee, and organizing major exhibitions in Tbilisi and Moscow, which will feature poems dedicated to Galaktion by 100 poets.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 280, p. 365; G. Tabidze, AE, in 25 books, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 292.

1958

January 3

At the Soviet Georgia publishing house, he meets with the publishing staff – Nikoloz Shvelidze and Elizbar Ubilava – and officially hands over the layout of his major single-volume collection of works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 39; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 484.

1958

January 3

He is preparing to participate in the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade and to publish his major single-volume collection. In his notebook, he writes down the phone numbers of Central Committee representatives Mikheil Kveselava, Tsitso Jishkariani, and Isidore Dolidze, as well as the director of the State Publishing House, Valodia Mgaloblishvili, as he expects to need to contact these individuals in the near future.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,93, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 491.

1958

January 3

In his notebook, he notes the address of his third wife's cousin, Eter Kvirikadze, who lives in Kutaisi.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,93, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 491.

1958

January 6

He learns that his assistant and literary secretary, Giorgi Chikobava, is ill and will not be able to work that day. He assumes that the director of the State Publishing House, Vladimir Mgaloblishvili, will also be unable to speak at the planned event. This leaves him worried, as he does not know whom he could ask to prepare and deliver a presentation about his work.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 39; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 484.

1958

Until January 10

He receives a telegram from the village of Kumuri informing him that his cousin, Agabo Adeishvili, has passed away.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-641, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 111;

1958

January 10

He makes a note about his cousin, Agabo Adeishvili, mentioning that he received a telegram from Kumuri informing him of Agabo's passing. He recalls that when he last saw him, he did not like the way he looked. Agabo himself had complained about his illness, which had forced him to ask

Galaktion for help in securing his daughter's admission to a higher education institution. Galaktion laments how time has estranged relatives from one another, despite the fact that, in childhood, he spent entire summers at Agabo's home, just as Agabo and his sister Asineti stayed with Galaktion's mother in Kutaisi. The poet notes that Asineti did not appreciate his mother's kindness, insulted her, and even brought her to tears. Because of this, Galaktion severed ties with his relatives and had no contact with them for nearly fifty years. He also recalls the death of his uncle, Kozman, and notes that he still remembers the last moments of the dying man, as it was the first time he had ever witnessed someone's passing. In his notes, the poet also mentions Agabo's other sister, Antisa, about whom a rumour had spread that she came from a family of the mentally ill. As a result, she refused to marry. According to Galaktion, he and Antisa were good friends in childhood and loved spending time by the river. The poet remembers that while living in Kutaisi, Agabo attended revolutionary gatherings, and once he was sent to Galaktion to bring him to a meeting where he could read his poems. The poet states that he went to the revolutionaries and left them in awe with his poetry. However, in Galaktion's assessment, Agabo lived only for himself and left nothing behind for others to remember.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-641, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXIII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 111-113;

1958

January 15

He receives a telegram from the village about the death of his cousin, Agabo, and immediately writes a reply.

Source: V. Javakhadze, "Unknown. Apology of Galaktion Tabidze", Tbilisi, 2020, p. 155.

1958

January 17

He reads the list of Stalin Prize nominees in the Russian newspaper Izvestia and finds his own name. He is very happy because it will provide some financial relief and also make it possible for his books to be published abroad. He reads the full list of prize nominees and looks for those he knows and those he doesn't.

Source: Nodar Tabidze's record, GTDA, №1435, p. 1-2.

1958

January 17

He talks to his nephew, Nodar Tabidze, about his single-volume collection, which is supposed to include material from all seven of his volumes. He tells him that he has submitted the Book to the state publishing house and is awaiting a response. Rezi Tvaradze brought him the layout of Galaktion's selected poems, which he had prepared and contained 15,000 lines. However, in Galaktion's opinion, it was too small. He thinks it would have been better if the editor of the volume had contacted him so they could work on it together. He doesn't even know which publishing house Tvaradze plans to submit the Book to. He takes a large bundle from the drawer and shows his nephew an old manuscript Book written in Nuskhuri script, which had been gifted to him by a clergyman, a monk. He says that inspired by this manuscript, he began writing the poem “The Book of Peace” as early as 1916. Since he has forgotten how to read Nuskhuri, he wants someone to transcribe the Book into Mkhedruli so he can study it in detail. He believes that the footnotes and annotations in an academic edition should contain extensive information about this book. Then he shows his nephew King Solomon’s decree, which granted the Tabidze family the Chkvishi estate, a photograph of the building that housed the editorial offices of the newspapers Amirani and Akhali Kvali, and a 1905 proclamation, about which he had written a poem. Then he tells him that it would be good if Nodar maintained constant contact with Solomon Kubaneishvili, the head of the scholars working on the academic edition of Galaktion’s works, and kept detailed notes in a large shared notebook about everything being done regarding the first volume.

Source: Nodar Tabidze’s record, GTDA, №1435, p. 1-2.

1958

January 17 or after

He reads Literaturuli Gazeti. He notes down Niko Samadashvili’s address and the meeting date – February 20th.

Source: MGL, t-673. newspaper Literaturuli Gazeti, January 17, 1958, №3, p. 1.

1958

January 18

After a one-year break from drinking, he starts again, enters the house noisily, and addresses a certain Lucia, who is visiting his wife at the time, with insulting words. Then, he knocks on his nephew Nodar’s door, tearfully lamenting, “Why won’t they leave me alone? Why do they want my death?” Nino Kvirikadze quietly takes coats to her neighbour, where her daughter and granddaughter are staying, so they can spend the night elsewhere. Later, Nodar goes down to the store to buy food, and Nino asks him to bring Galaktion a pack of “Kurortni” cigarettes.

Source: Nodar Tabidze’s record, GTDA, №1436, p.1.

1958

January 26

He is preparing for the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade. In his notebook, he writes in Russian the names of individuals who have expressed significant opinions about his work in the form of articles or poems. Among the listed names are: Vasil Barnovi, Davit Kldiashvili, Korneli Kekelidze, Shalva Dadiani, Akaki Gatsferelia, Ia Ekaladze, Shalva Radiani, Shio Mghvimeli, Giorgi Kuchishvili, Sandro Shanshiashvili, and others. In some cases, he notes the titles of articles or the specific epithets used by these authors to describe him.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,78, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 382.

1958

January 26

He is preparing for the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade. After reviewing some of the articles and poems written about his work, he considers the need to find works by forty more authors to bring the total number of publications to one hundred. However, he soon realizes that collecting, editing, and translating the texts into Russian cannot be accomplished so quickly, nor is it necessary. Considering this, he plans to make the best use of the materials already at hand. The responses to his work are so abundant that no contemporary writer has as much material dedicated to them. He plans to approach the task realistically and avoid creating additional problems through excessive ambition.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,77, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 382.

1958

January 26

His stepdaughter, Nunu Ebanoidze, brings him paper, but Galaktion is dissatisfied with its quality.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,78, p. 1; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 382.

Note: In the source, Nunu Ebanoidze is referred to only by her first name.

1958

January 26

At night, he reflects on his early years and regretfully realizes that he cannot recall anyone showing him affectionate care. Although he had a mother, relatives, and neighbours, no one ever treated him warmly. He believes that in this regard, he was entirely different from other children who were surrounded by warmth and affection. He wonders what caused this and why his childhood was so dreadful. He is convinced that this had a profound impact on his life. He tries to remember even one person who showed him kindness during his childhood, but he cannot, and this deeply troubles him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,78, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 382-383.

Note: The text is written in Russian.

1958

January 26

At night, he notes in his notebook that his nephew, Nodar Tabidze, is ill.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,78, p. 2; AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 383.

1958

January

In the magazine Sabtchota Kali, an untitled poem, "It is the Will of the People That Our Planet..." is published.

Source: Magazine Sabtchota Kali, 1958, №1, p. 3.

February

1958

February 1

The poet Savle Abuladze, the head of the literary circle at the Teachers' House, visits Galaktion at home, but not finding him there, leaves a letter. In it, he reminds Galaktion that he still owes him payment for the three poems translated from Georgian into Russian in September of the previous year: "The Invention," "Goga and Asida," and "The Explosion," totaling 1,648 lines. He also recalls that 800 roubles remained unpaid to him for the translation of the poem "The Embankment," which he completed back in 1948. Apologizing for the inconvenience, he explains that his family and financial situation compel him to request the payment he is owed.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-491; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 326.

1958

February 4

Gogi Chikobava visits him, and after dinner, Galaktion, along with the guests and family members present, asks him to play the piano. Galaktion dances a "Kintouri" with Nunu and his cousin Zeinab Tabidze, remarking that Lado Gudiashvili performs this dance best. Later, he recalls singing in Niko Sulkhaniashvili's choir and proposes toasts to Beethoven, Mozart, Bach, Chopin, and Zakaria Paliashvili. During a toast to his wife, he recounts the story of their relationship. As Gogi departs, Galaktion gifts him his own photograph.

Source: G. Chikobava, Close to Galaktion, Tbilisi, 1966, p. 11-15.

1958

Until February 10

He is preparing for the event to be held on February 10 at the House of Arts Workers. In his notebook, he records the names of the director and staff of the establishment, along with the telephone number of the House of Arts Workers.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,89, p. 28; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 483.

1958

Until February 12

Galaktion asks his publisher, Arkady Deev, when his Book will be ready, to which Deev responds, "Not just yours - we haven't even managed to publish Avetik Isahakyan's Book yet". Galaktion recalls his meeting with Avetik Isahakyan in Paris and their subsequent relationship.

Source: Nodar Tabidze's record, GTDA, №1438, p.1.

1958

February 12

Together with his nephew, Nodar Tabidze, at 10 a.m., he hails a taxi, withdraws money from the Central Savings Bank on Rustaveli Avenue, and then goes to the medical facility on Chavchavadze Avenue. Doctor Kereselidze is on rounds, and they wait for an entire hour. When they enter the office, the doctor greets him warmly and asks if he is still drinking. Galaktion replies that his heart is troubling him and that he thinks he has the flu. Kereselidze tells him that there are no available spots, but he asks Nodar to come the next day, saying that he might be able to arrange something.

On the way back, they walk along Chavchavadze Avenue and run into the brother of Galaktion's former lover, Raisa Chikhladze. They stop and greet each other. As they continue walking, Galaktion tells Nodar about the beautiful Raisa Chikhladze and mentions that he dedicated a couple of poems to her, signing them with initials. He says, "Raisa thought I would never love anyone else and that we would never part, but when we did, she married a doctor". On Melikishvili Street, Galaktion drinks two glasses of beer, and then they continue on their way. Galaktion recalls how they planned to allocate a separate building for Rustvelology, but Leo Kiacheli's words, "Rustaveli deserves an even bigger building", disrupted the plan. At the corner of Belinski Street, they meet Titsian's wife, Nina Tabidze. Galaktion asks her how the publication of Titsian's Book is progressing. Nina indirectly reproaches Galaktion for not taking part in the matter. Galaktion responds that he is ready to do whatever he can. As they continue on their way after parting with Nina, Galaktion remarks with heartfelt regret that Nina, like Titsian, is always fighting against him. He used to have an excellent relationship with his cousin. Titsian had great respect for him, calling him a teacher and a knight of the Order of Solitude, but after returning from Moscow, his position changed radically. Before hailing a taxi and returning home, Galaktion recalls the strange behaviours of the Tsisperkantselis, such as how Paolo had a tailor living on Krylov Street sew him a suit, put it on, and ran away without paying. The tailor chased after him but couldn't catch up. How he invited the writers to a private booth in a restaurant and then invited someone he knew to the table, making them pay for the entire gathering.

Source: Nodar Tabidze's record, GTDA, №1438, p. 1-3.

1958

February 12

He buys the 1862 issue of the magazine Tsiskari from an antiquarian bookstore and gifts it to his nephew, Nodar Tabidze, with a dedication.

Source: Nodar Tabidze's record, GTDA, №1438, p.1.

1958

February 23

He is staying at the medical facility, shaves his beard, gets a haircut, and looks well-groomed. His nephew, Nodar Tabidze, visits him, and they talk about Rezi Tvaradze's review. Nodar reminds him that he and Solomon Tsaishvili had also written a review of his seventh volume in the magazine Mnatobi. Galaktion says that Rezi Tvaradze seems like a talented young man and that he compiled Galaktion's "Selected Works" quite well. However, the poet did not agree to its publication because Tvaradze was too young. A patient enters the ward and asks Galaktion for a cigarette. Galaktion gives him a cigarette, and when the patient leaves the room, he tells Nodar his story. In his youth, he used to write poems and even brought them to the Writers' Union. Karlo Kaladze liked them, but Irakli Abashidze yelled, "What kind of poems are these?" Galaktion believes that young people need encouragement. Emanuil Apkhaidze and Sergi Tchilaia would read an unknown author's poems in the newspaper and sneer, saying, "What kind of poet is this?" Then, Galaktion talks about the abundance of literary circles in Kutaisi and recalls Balmont's visit to Kutaisi. Then, they talk about Nodar's dissertation topic and the upcoming literary decade.

Galaktion expresses doubt that they are not planning to take him to Moscow for the Georgian Culture Decade.

Source: Nodar Tabidze's record, GTDA, №1440, p. 1-3.

1958

January-February

He is unwell and in a severe emotional state. In the mornings, he paces the room, constantly staring at his trembling fingers. He cannot eat until the afternoon, sustaining himself only with tea. His wife, Nino, and other family members do not leave him alone, reading to him and engaging him in conversation. The doctor encourages him, saying he can overcome the illness and recover. He listens with his head bowed and occasionally laughs out loud.

Source: Nino Tabidze, Galaktion at the Georgian Decade in Moscow, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 285-286.

1958

January-February

He receives a call from the Writers' Union offering him the opportunity to travel to the Decade in Moscow, but he initially declines due to his illness.

Source: Nino Tabidze, Galaktion at the Georgian Decade in Moscow, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 285-286.

March

1958

March 15

He visits the laboratory located on the first floor of his building, where he talks with the staff and students.

Source: A. Shushanashvili, Galaktion's Death (Review of the Investigation Case), Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 19, p. 374.

1958

Until March 17

Along with two profile photographs of himself, he sends a letter to Sofia Khitarova, the editor of his ready-for-publication Russian-language book, "Verses and Poems", at the state publishing house in Moscow. The letter is written by Major Kostrov on his behalf. He expresses hope that, thanks to her efforts, the Book will be engaging and appealing. He also extends his warm regards to the publishing house's director, Arkady Deev.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-89; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 83.

Dating: The letter was written before the book's publication and before Galaktion's departure for Moscow.

1958

Until March 17

He sends a telegram to Sofia Khitarova, the editor of his Russian-language Book “Verses and Poems,” in Moscow. He expresses hope that, thanks to her efforts, the Book will be engaging and appealing. He also extends his warm regards to the publishing house’s director, Arkady Deev.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-89; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 83.

Dating: The telegram was sent before the book’s publication and before Galaktion’s departure for Moscow.

1958

Until March 17

He sends a telegram to Arkady Deev, the director of the literary publishing house in Moscow. He expresses hope that his Book is already ready for printing and inquires whether they have received the petition from Sergi Tchilaia, the secretary of the Georgian Writers’ Union, regarding the number of lines in the book.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-189; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 83.

Dating: The telegram was sent before the book’s publication and before Galaktion’s departure for Moscow.

1958

Until March 17

He sends a telegram to Sofia Khitarova, the editor of his Russian-language Book “Verses and Poems,” and to Arkady Deev, the director of the State Literary Publishing House in Moscow. He inquires whether his Book is already being printed, how many printing sheets it consists of, and when he should travel to Moscow to sign the contract.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-189-1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 84.

Dating: The telegram was sent before the book’s publication and before Galaktion’s departure for Moscow.

1958

Until March 17

He submits the poem “Flags of the Decade” to the editorial office of the newspaper Komunisti for publication. This poem is scheduled to be recited on March 22 in Moscow during the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 495.

1958

Until March 17

Partially recovered, he decides to participate in the All-Union Decade of Georgian Literature and Arts in Moscow.

Source: Nino Tabidze, Galaktion at the Georgian Decade in Moscow, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 286.

1958

March 17

He travels to Russia by train to participate in the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade. Accompanying him is his literary assistant and secretary, Giorgi Chikobava. During the journey, Giorgi Chikobava falls ill and is forced to disembark in Adler, returning via Sokhumi.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,94, p. 51; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 491.

1958

March 17-21

While traveling to Moscow by train, Giorgi Leonidze is in the same carriage. He gets drunk and annoys the fellow passengers with his chatter, which greatly irritates Galaktion.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 491, 499.

Note: In the source, Giorgi Leonidze is referred to only by his last name, as well as by the name "Gogla".

1958

Until March 21

While traveling by train toward Russia, he encounters an obstacle – a landslide delays the journey by an additional day, causing the train to arrive in Moscow later than scheduled.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,94, p. 51; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 491.

1958

March 21

He arrives in Moscow to participate in the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade. At the train station, Sergi Tchilaia and Mikheil Kvividze welcome him with a stunning bouquet. He takes the bouquet to the "Moscow" hotel, where it catches the attention of the hotel staff, who find a vase for it. He is pleased that the bouquet beautifully decorates his room. A meeting with Georgian poets is held at the Writers' House. On the day of the meeting, the Georgian poets gather at the agreed location, but Galaktion is absent, seemingly because someone forgets to inform him. During the meeting, well-known Russian poets praise Georgian poetry and poets, but Galaktion's name is not mentioned. Suddenly, he sits in an empty chair next to Pridon Khalvashi, listens attentively to poet Semyon Kirsanov's speech, and ironically asks Khalvashi what the speaker is talking about. Upon hearing the answer, Galaktion bursts into hysterical laughter. He then suggests taking a photo with Khalvashi. Ivane Tarba joins them, and Galaktion, arm-in-arm with them, takes a photo. Later, he hails a taxi and leaves the Writers' House.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,94, p. 51; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 491.

P. Khalvashi, Close to Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 109-110.

Dating: It is dated according to the time of the Decade's events.

1958

March 21

Some of the Georgian writers participating in the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade visit the village of Gorki near Moscow, where Vladimir Lenin spent a part of his life. Galaktion is also invited to join, but he prefers to stay at the hotel.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 495.

1958

March 21

He reflects on the following day, March 22, when he is scheduled to perform at the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade in the so-called Pillar Hall of the Kremlin. He knows he is expected to recite his poem "Flags of the Decade" in Georgian. Although he has a Russian translation of the poem, the organizers insist that the author read it in its original language. According to the rules of this large-scale event, the Russian translation of a work is to be performed by a professional reader or declaimer.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 495.

1958

March 21

He reviews the Russian newspapers from March 21 and notices that most of the periodicals write about the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade. He also observes that one of the lead articles in a newspaper quotes lines by Kale Bobokhidze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 495.

1958

March 21

He observes the behavior of the writers Simon Chikovani, Irakli, and Grigol Abashidze at the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade and notices that they are scheming in some way, resulting in the local newspapers writing mostly about them. He plans to address this injustice and rectify the situation before the Decade concludes.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 495.

1958

March 21

At the "Moscow" hotel, he meets Georgian writers who arrived earlier for the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade. He asks if they know whether his Book "Verses and Poems", which was supposed to be published by the Russian State Publishing House, has been released. Everyone responds that they know nothing about the book. He discusses the same topic with Simon Chikovani, who is also unaware of the matter. Galaktion realizes that before his arrival in Moscow, all the Georgian writers had been preoccupied solely with their own affairs and had not taken the time to inquire about his book.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 495.

1958

March 21

The director of the Russian State Publishing House, Arkady Deev, hands him two copies of his newly published Book in Russian, “Verses and Poems”. Galaktion examines his book, which contains 9,938 lines. He then calculates how much royalty he might receive if he is paid 10 roubles per line, and also works out the amount he would get if the rate were 5 roubles per line. However, he abandons the calculations, thinking they are pointless since he does not know the exact rate per line. He recalls that he has no formal contract with the Russian State Publishing House for this book. Regarding the royalties, Arkady Deev explains only that part of the payment will be given to him immediately, while the remainder will be sent later. Simon Chikovani observes Galaktion’s meeting with Arkady Deev, which irritates the poet.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 496.

1958

March 21

On the tenth floor of the “Moscow” hotel, a photographer visits his room to take pictures of him as a National Poet of Georgia and a participant in the Decade. For an hour, the photographer escorts the poet through the hotel’s corridor for the photo session. Other writers, including Giorgi Leonidze, are also photographed. Galaktion laments that the session has dragged on for so long, while Giorgi Leonidze jokingly remarks that the photographer must have been sent by someone specifically to annoy them.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 496.

1958

March 21

He meets the critic and translator Vano Tsulukidze and learns that he is working on a monograph, the first section of which is dedicated to Galaktion. Tsulukidze informs him that the editorial board of the magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba plans to devote an entire issue to Galaktion Tabidze in honour of the 50th anniversary of his literary career.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 496.

Note: In the source, the magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba is referred to as Khelovneba.

1958

March 21

At the “Moscow” hotel, he meets the artist Korneli Sanadze, who tells him that he is working on his portrait.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 496.

Note: In the source, Korneli Sanadze is referred to only by his last name.

1958

March 21

In Russia, at the “Moscow” hotel, he meets the sculptor Nikoloz Kandelaki but does not manage to ask whether he is finishing the bust he has started working on.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 496.

1958

March 21

At the "Moscow" hotel, he meets the charming man who had greeted him at the Moscow railway station, helped carry his heavy suitcase full of books from the train carriage, and accompanied him to the car. The man reminds him that they had known each other earlier and that it was he who arranged Galaktion's 1935 trip to Paris. Galaktion also recalls that before his departure to France in 1935, this man had helped him purchase a suit, provided enough money, and assisted in resolving various difficulties. During their conversation, it becomes clear that the man now works at the Union of Writers of Russia.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 496.

Note: This individual appears to be a security service officer, which is why Galaktion does not mention his name anywhere.

1958

March 21

While in Russia, at the "Moskva" hotel, he finds it strange that he cannot open or lock the door to his room, while a waitress manages it effortlessly.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 496.

1958

March 21

In the evening, in the lobby of the "Moscow" hotel, he has a pleasant conversation with writers Mamia Asatiani, Alexandre Kutateladze, and an Ossetian poet participating in the Decade. His companions praise Galaktion's newly published Russian-language book, "Verse and Poems", and also recall his works published in the 1910s and 1920s, including the poem "The White Pelican".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 496.

Note: In the source, Alexandre Kutateladze is referred to as Sasha Kutateladze.

1958

March 21

He is pleased with the actions of an unknown, charming man, a member of the Russian Writers' Union, who greatly assisted him by carrying a heavy suitcase full of books from the train carriage and also accompanying him to the car.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,94, p. 50; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 491.

Note: It seems that this man is a state security officer, which is why the poet does not mention his name anywhere.

1958

March 21

He is in Moscow, where the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade is about to begin. He awaits the official opening of the Decade at the “Moscow” hotel, where he is staying on the tenth floor.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,94, p. 51; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 491.

1958

March 21

He is staying at the “Moscow” hotel. Since he is scheduled to recite a poem at the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade the following day, he wants to have his outfit prepared in advance. For this reason, he plans to ask the hotel staff to press his suit.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,94, p. 51; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 492.

1958

March 21

He is staying at the “Moscow” hotel and meets the art historian Vakhtang Beridze, who, at Galaktion’s request, writes the phone number of the Russian State Publishing House director, Arkady Deev, in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,94, p. 48; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 492.

1958

March 21

He is in Moscow, preparing to participate in the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade. At the same time, he wants to contact the director of the Russian State Publishing House, Arkady Deev, to find out whether his Book “Verses and Poems”, which was to be published in Russian, has been released. For this purpose, he notes in his notebook the procedure for calling a city phone, specifically the State Publishing House, from the hotel’s telephone.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 495.

1958

March 21

At the “Moscow” hotel, he meets the director of the Russian State Publishing House, Arkady Deev, who asks him for a Decade-themed poem for the Georgian newspaper Komunisti. Galaktion explains that he had already submitted the poem, “Flags of the Decade”, to the Komunisti editorial office while still in Tbilisi.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 495.

1958

March 21

On the front page of the newspaper Komunisti, Galaktion’s poem “Flags of the Decade” is published. The poet is scheduled to recite this poem on March 22 in Moscow during the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1957, №68, March 21, p. 1.

1958

March 21

In the newspaper Komunisti, an informational article titled “The Celebration of Georgian Culture” is published, focusing on the scale and significance of the ongoing Georgian Culture and Arts Decade in Moscow. The article states that guests from various countries will have the opportunity to familiarize themselves with outstanding examples of Georgian classical and contemporary literature, including the immortal works of authors such as Shota Rustaveli, Nikoloz Baratashvili, Ilia Chavchavadze, Akaki Tsereteli, Vazha-Pshavela, Mikheil Javakhishvili, Galaktion Tabidze, and others.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1957, №68, March 21, p. 1.

1958

March 21

He receives a call from the editorial office of the newspaper Vechnaya Moskva. Galaktion tells them that he has brought ten new poems and lists their titles. He also discusses the Decade, sharing his thoughts and aspirations regarding this large-scale event. The journalist promises that the material will be published the following day. The poet is pleased that his visit to Moscow has garnered interest.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 495.

Note: In the next day’s issue, Galaktion Tabidze is merely mentioned, but there is no mention of his poems or his thoughts and aspirations regarding the Decade.

1958

March 21 or later

He is in Russia, staying at the “Moscow” hotel. He plans to obtain the program for the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade, which began on March 21. Additionally, he intends to submit translations of his poems for publication in various Russian periodicals. He also wants to find a declaimer capable of artistically reciting his works.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,94, p. 51; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 492.

1958

March 21 or later

He is in Moscow to participate in the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade. In his notebook, he lists the essential items he plans to purchase in the Russian capital. Among the listed items are gloves, a wristwatch, folders, paper, a pen, and scissors.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,94, p. 51; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 492.

1958

March 21 or later

He is in Moscow and is drafting a plan. To begin, he intends to find the addresses of local periodical editorial offices, make copies of his handwritten works, obtain the program and posters for the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade, and find out where the Chairman of the Writers’ Union, Irakli

Abashidze, and the Secretary of the Writers' Union, Sergi Tchilaia, are staying so he can easily contact them if needed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,94, p. 51; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 492.

Note: In the source, Irakli Abashidze and Sergi Tchilaia are referred to only by their last names.

1958

March 21 or later

He is preparing to recite a poem at the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade. He plans to send a telegram to Tbilisi to inform his family about his current situation.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,94, p. 51; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 492.

1958

After March 21

During the days of the Georgian Literature Decade in Moscow, Arkady Deev, an employee of the State Publishing House, notices that Galaktion has difficulty walking down the corridor. He advises him to visit Tskaltubo, mentioning that he has been there four times himself and found it very beneficial. Galaktion feels disheartened, remarking that Deev manages to visit Tskaltubo from Moscow, while he has been unable to do so from Tbilisi.

Source: Murtaz Kankadze, What Is Not Lost to Oblivion (Galaktion and Tskaltubo), Mtserlis Gazeti, October 1-31, 2017, №7, p. 9.

1958

After March 21

At the Georgian Literature and Arts Decade in Moscow, Georgian writers meet with Moscow citizens, industrial workers, and library staff. However, Galaktion avoids this hustle and bustle. He stays in his hotel room and shows no initiative unless someone invites him to a meeting, at which point he becomes active. He also does not attend the concluding ceremony, where participants are awarded orders. Despite this, his name is prominently featured in the coverage of the Decade in the Union-wide press.

Source: M. Kvlividze, Galaktion in Moscow (At the Writers' Congress and the Decade), Recollections about Galaktion, about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 277-278.

1958

After March 21

In Moscow, he dines with Shalva Radiani and his wife at the restaurant "Aragvi", consuming only mineral water. He intends to pay for the meal, but Radiani does not allow him to. After the meal, they take a walk along Gorky Street and later have a photo taken in the hotel lobby.

Source: M. Gomarteli-Radiani, Brief Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 283.

1958

After March 21

While in Moscow, he rarely goes out and only makes brief, formal appearances at literary sections before disappearing again. His primary focus is resolving the issue of publishing his Book in Moscow. He laments that, aside from the restaurant “Aragvi”, there is no true cultural hub representing Georgia in Moscow. He also feels deeply troubled by the neglect of the contributions of Georgian educators and military figures in Russia, the overlooked achievements of the Georgian community in St. Petersburg, and the absence of a commemorative inscription on the facade of Lomonosov University, built by Georgians, recognizing their role in its construction.

Source: M. Gomarteli-Radiani, Brief Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 285.

1958

After March 21

From Georgia, the March 21 issue of the newspaper Komunisti is sent to Moscow, featuring Galaktion’s poem “Flags of the Decade” on the front page. The poet, along with other writers, is at the “Moscow” hotel when this issue of the newspaper arrives, and everyone looks it over.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 496.

1958

After March 21

In Moscow, he meets the composer Otar Taktakishvili, who has long wanted to create a musical composition based on Galaktion’s poems but had not mentioned it out of respect. That evening, Taktakishvili composes an extraordinary melody inspired by Galaktion’s poem “I and the Night” and decides to create a full cycle.

Source: O. Taktakishvili, An Endless Source of Inspiration, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 218-219; 1958

March 22

The newspaper Vechernaya Moskva publishes an article titled “Warmly Greeted by Muscovites”, stating: “Galaktion Tabidze and Shalva Dadiani, Irakli Abashidze and Konstantine Gamsakhurdia, Giorgi Leonidze and Ioseb Grishashvili, Konstantine Lortkipanidze and Ioseb Noneshvili, Grigol Abashidze and Simon Chikovani, Marika Baratashvili and Karlo Kaladze – these names of Georgian prose writers, poets, and playwrights are well known to Soviet readers”. They are warmly welcomed at the Georgian Culture Decade in Moscow.

Source: Их сердечно приветствуют Москвичи, “Вечерняя Москва”, 1958, 22 Марта, №22, стр. 1.

1958

March 22

In his room at the “Moscow” hotel, he receives a call from Mikheil Kvlividze, who informs him that he is scheduled to recite his poem at 7:30 p.m. in the Pillar Hall of the Kremlin in Georgian. Kvlividze explains that reading the poem in its original language is essential for the audience of the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade to appreciate the sound of Georgian poetry. He also mentions that Galaktion's reading will open the event and advises him to choose a short poem, as the stage will then be handed over to Russian artists. Galaktion recalls that this is the same Kvlividze who greeted him at the Moscow railway station the previous day with flowers. However, he finds Kvlividze's argument unconvincing and questions why the poem cannot be read in Russian – what are the organizers afraid of? These doubts lead him to decide to pay special attention to which language the Abkhazian poet Dimitri Gulia will use for his recital – Abkhazian or Russian – and whether he will be allowed to read a long or short poem. Galaktion, for his part, plans to recite “Flags of the Decade”, especially since he wrote it specifically for the Decade and its text is concise.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 497.

1958

March 22

He is in Moscow, attending the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade. The writer Sasha Kutateladze suggests visiting the Tretyakov State Gallery, but Galaktion declines, as he is not in the mood to go to the gallery.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 497.

Note: In the source, Alexandre Kutateladze is referred to as Kutateladze (Kokia).

1958

March 22

He meets Mamia Asatiani, who hands him an entry pass to the Pillar Hall of the Kremlin and kisses him on the cheek. The poet is pleased by the writer's attentiveness and thinks of Mamia Asatiani as a loyal person and a true supporter.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 497.

1958

March 22

In the Russian literary newspaper Literaturnaya Gazeta, an article by Gia Margvelashvili is published, with one section dedicated to the works of Galaktion Tabidze, the National Poet of Georgia. In the article, Galaktion is presented as an outstanding Georgian poet, the author of “Revolutionary Georgia”, “The Epoch”, and “The World Orchestra”.

Source: “Литературная газета”, 1958, №35, 22 марта, p. 1.

1958

March 22

He reviews the Russian newspapers from March 22 and concludes that each periodical is filled with articles about the grand opening of the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade. In his notebook, he notes that there is an interesting discussion about his work in Gia Margvelashvili's article published in Literaturnaya Gazeta, and that Vechernaia Moskva begins its publication with his name.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 497.

1958

March 22

At the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade, in the Pillar Hall of the Kremlin, where sixteen poets are scheduled to present their works to the audience, Galaktion recites the poem “Flags of the Decade”. The literary segment begins at 7:30 p.m. with Galaktion’s performance. The announcement of his name is met with thunderous applause. After reading his poem, he steps into the foyer, where he is congratulated on his brilliant performance, with many praising his magnificent, deep, and pleasant voice. Following his performance, Russian poet and translator Pavel Antokolsky takes the stage to recite his Russian translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “May and Peace”. Galaktion is pleased with his recital and particularly delighted that no other poet’s translation was delivered as beautifully as Pavel Antokolsky’s rendition of his poem. He personally thanks the Russian poet and translator, and in his notebook, he notes that Pavel Antokolsky is an excellent poet, describing him as polite and gracious.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 4-5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 497.

1958

March 22

He is in the Pillar Hall of the Kremlin, listening to Georgian poets. Comparing his performance with theirs, he concludes that none of the others have a good voice. He also believes that, apart from Shalva Dadiani and Marika Baratashvili, the poems recited by the other authors lacked strength. Despite this, he considers that overall, the event was conducted properly and with cultural decorum.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 497.

1958

March 22

He hands over six of his poems translated into Russian to the Georgian screenwriter Giorgi Mdivani, who works in Russia, following the advice of Sergi Tchilaia. Mdivani (secretary) promises to assist in getting them published.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 497.

Note: In the source, Sergi Tchilaia is referred to as Tchintchilaia, and Giorgi Mdivani as Zhorzhika Mdivani.

1958

March 22

He meets Mark Zlatkin, the director of Zarya Vostoka, who informs him that the publication is preparing his Book for release and that the compilation process has already begun. This news delights him, and he resolves to assist Zarya Vostoka with this important project as soon as he returns to Georgia. Additionally, he plans to immediately engage in the preparation of the first volume of the academic edition of his works upon his return to Tbilisi.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 497-498.

1958

March 22

In the evening, he speaks with Arkady Deev, the director of the Russian State Publishing House, who tells him that only his recently published Russian-language book, "Verses and Poems", was sold in the Pillar Hall of the Kremlin. During the conversation with Arkady Deev, Galaktion recalls their earlier, more negative discussions. Although he senses Deev's goodwill this time, he believes that the director's true attitude will be revealed when the amount of his royalty is determined.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 497.

1958

March 22

He speaks with Shalva Dadiani and his family members, all of whom tell him that his performance in the Pillar Hall of the Kremlin was extraordinary. During the conversation, it becomes clear that they were particularly impressed by Galaktion's voice, its strong and pleasant tone, as well as the grand reception his appearance received from the audience.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 497.

1958

March 22

He speaks with Mamia Asatiani, who informs him that the delay in receiving his royalties is due to Irakli Abashidze's actions.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 497.

1958

March 22

In his notebook, he records all the significant events that took place that day at the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade. He specifically notes the presence of high-ranking government officials, Vasil Mzhavanadze and Givi Javakhishvili, at the event.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 497.

Note: In the source, Vasil Mzhavanadze and Givi Javakhishvili are referred to only by their last names.

1958

March 23

While attending the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade in Moscow, writer Revaz Margiani visits him to discuss his performance the previous day in the Pillar Hall of the Kremlin. Margiani tells him that he presented himself magnificently before the audience and was met with equal enthusiasm from both the public and the government. He particularly highlights how impressed

Vasil Mzhavanadze, the First Secretary of Georgia's Central Committee, was with Galaktion's performance. According to Margiani, the effectiveness of the recital was due in part to the fact that the poem Galaktion chose to read was short and sharp. He notes that lengthy poems are not advantageous in such events, and this oversight is what made many other authors' performances underwhelming.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 498.

Note: In the source, Vasil Mzhavanadze is referred to only by his last name.

1958

March 23

Revaz Margiani appreciates Galaktion's newly published Russian-language book, "Verses and Poems", and remarks during their conversation that it is "a very significant book". Galaktion records this opinion in his notebook, considering it one of the first reviews of the recently published book.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 498.

1958

March 23

In Moscow, near the "Moscow" hotel, he accidentally encounters Giorgi Leonidze and Alexandre Kutateladze. Giorgi Leonidze asks Galaktion if he has eaten and suggests dining together at the hotel restaurant. Alexandre Kutateladze also invites the poet. Galaktion replies that he cannot join them for lunch because he has urgent matters to attend to. Internally, he repeats the phrase "Raise the flags high, high, always higher!" from his poem "Flags of the Decade", as a reminder that during the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade, he still has much to accomplish and cannot afford to waste time.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 498.

Note: In the source, Alexandre Kutateladze is also referred to by the nickname Kokia, in addition to his first and last name.

1958

March 23

While in Moscow, he meets Guram, the son of the writer Elizbar Zedgenidze, who shares his impressions from the previous day, specifically discussing his performance in the Pillar Hall of the Kremlin. He tells him that Galaktion presented himself magnificently before the audience and read the poem with exceptional artistry.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 498.

Note: In the source, Elizbar Zedgenidze is referred to only by his last name, and his son's name is not specified.

1958

March 23

The writer Elizbar Zedgenidze's son, Guram, shows him the March 21 issue of Komunisti, with Galaktion's poem "Flags of the Decade" printed on the front page. Guram Zedgenidze mentions that, most likely, this poem and the one Galaktion read the previous day before the audience in the Pillar Hall of the Kremlin should not be the same. This observation piques Galaktion's interest. He examines the published version of his poem in the newspaper and realizes that the final lines of the work have been altered by the Komunisti editorial office. Against the backdrop of his successful performance the previous day, he finds this alteration to be a minor issue at that moment.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 498.

Note: In the source, Elizbar Zedgenidze is referred to only by his last name, and his son's name is not specified.

1958

March 23

He examines his newly published Russian-language book, "Verses and Poems", and counts the number of works included in it. In his notebook, he notes the names of the translators of his poems and verses, as well as those of the publisher's director, the artist, the editor, the technical editor, and the proof-reader. He believes that each of them deserves heartfelt gratitude for the publication of such a wonderful book.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 498-499.

1958

March 23

At half-past twelve at night, in the corridor of the "Moskva" hotel, Galaktion encounters Giorgi Leonidze, who, like during their train journey from Tbilisi to Moscow, is drunk. Leonidze asks Galaktion what makes him so lonely and suggests he call one of the women and have some fun. Galaktion laughs in response. Leonidze then approaches a hotel employee nearby, starts talking to her, and gestures toward Galaktion. The woman listens and politely declines in Russian. Galaktion realizes the nature of their conversation and believes Leonidze was asking the woman to bring someone to him. The poet thinks the woman understood Leonidze's joke. After this, Leonidze stops talking to the woman and returns to Galaktion, inviting him to his room for a drink. Galaktion refuses, thanks him, and promises to visit another time. Leonidze leaves, and Galaktion is upset by his behaviour, as he feels that such conduct is unbecoming of a writer participating in the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 499.

Note: In the source, Giorgi Leonidze is referred to only by his last name or by the name Gogla.

1958

March 23

He feels that his health has improved compared to the previous days. The pain in his joints is also lessening, though his legs still hurt. He recalls the advice given by Arkady Deev, the director of the Russian State Publishing House, regarding Tskaltubo.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 499.

1958

March 23

At midnight, in the corridor of the "Moscow" hotel, he is approached by an unknown, intellectual young woman who greets him as the king of poets. She tells her daughter in Russian to kiss his hand. At that moment, the Kremlin clock strikes twelve. This leaves an impression on Galaktion, and he notes this event in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 499.

1958

Until March 24

He plans the tasks to be completed on March 24. Among the tasks listed for March 24 are: understanding the program of the "Decade of Georgian Culture and Art", visiting the State Literary Publishing House, and thanking Sofia Khitarova, the editor of the Russian-language edition of "Verses and Poems". Sending copies of the Book from Moscow to Tbilisi and resolving the issue of the honorarium.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-614, 24; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 85;

1958

March 24

He is in his room at the "Moscow" hotel when the phone rings. Galaktion picks up the receiver, and an unknown woman, without specifying her name, asks to speak with Nina. Galaktion is upset by this request, as he is certain someone is trying to find out whether he is in Moscow alone or with his family. A little while later, the phone rings again. Galaktion answers, and upon hearing the poet's voice, the woman apologizes and says she was calling someone else.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 500.

1958

March 24

He reflects on his newly published Russian-language book, "Verses and Poems". He is concerned by the fact that he has not signed a contract with the Russian State Publishing House, and as a result, the matter of royalties remains uncertain.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 500.

1958

March 24

At 12 p.m., he goes to the Russian State Publishing House, where he waits for a long time to meet with the director, Arkady Deev. Eventually, he manages to see him and discusses the Georgian Decade evening held in the Pillar Hall of the Kremlin. He asks if Deev enjoyed the event. The director replies that he did not like the evening, as he believed the event was unnecessarily overloaded with dance and musical performances. Galaktion agrees with Arkady Deev, as he too feels that there was too much going on and believes it was the fault of the event's organizers.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 500.

1958

March 24

He discusses his newly published Russian-language book, "Verses and Poems", with Arkady Deev, the director of the Russian State Publishing House, and aims to determine an appropriate royalty amount for the publication. To this end, Arkady Deev reminds him that the Book contains 9,932 lines. The director responds that his calculation is incorrect, as, in his opinion, the Book contains many more lines. During the conversation, it becomes clear that not only the text of the poems but also the titles are counted as lines at the Russian State Publishing House. The director also provides information about the royalties. According to him, for the first printed poem, each line will be paid 20 roubles, while for the rest, it will be 14 roubles per line. This news pleases Galaktion, as he had expected to be paid only 5 roubles per line. For more precise information, Arkady Deev asks the poet to visit the publishing house again on March 31.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 500.

1958

March 24

He returns to the "Moscow" hotel from the Russian State Publishing House, feeling pleased because he learned that the royalty for his recently published Russian-language book, "Verses and Poems", will be much higher than he had anticipated. At the hotel entrance, he meets Nino, the daughter of the critic Besarion Zhghenti, who greets him warmly. Galaktion is pleased with her respectful attitude and later notes in his notebook that Besarion Zhghenti's daughter is a very cultured young woman. In the hotel lobby, he runs into Sergi Tchilaia and Grigol Abashidze, who are gathering writers for another event. Galaktion mentions that he is feeling unwell, but neither of them acknowledges his words, acting as if they didn't hear him at all. This behaviour frustrates Galaktion, and in his notebook, he refers to them as uncultured individuals.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 500.

Note: In the source, Sergi Tchilaia is referred to only by his last name, Grigol Abashidze by his last name and initials, Besarion Zhghenti is referred to as Beso Zhghenti, and his daughter's name is not specified.

1958

March 24

He reads an informational article published on the front page of the Russian newspaper Pravda, titled "The Decade of Georgian Art and Literature". The article reviews the events held during the Decade in Moscow, where Georgian artists, including writers, introduced the audience to both Georgian classical literature and contemporary Georgian writing. Galaktion thinks that this is the most memorable article among those dedicated to the large-scale event, especially since, in addition to other interesting details, it discusses the special Decade issues of the newspapers Komunisti and Zarya Vostoka.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008; p. 499; газ. "Правда", 1958, №83, 24 март.

1958

March 25

The Russian newspaper Izvestiya publishes a Russian translation of Galaktion's poem "40 Years" on the front page, titled "Colour of The Fifteen Brother-Flags". Galaktion reads the newspaper and is pleased with the fact that being featured on the front page is, in effect, an acknowledgment of his significance.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 501. газ. "Известия", №72, 25 март.

Note: In the Russian translation, the title of the poem is "Цвет пятнадцати братских знамен".

1958

March 25

He thinks about purchasing a car and wants to find out what is necessary to do so.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 500.

1958

March 25

He receives a call from Sofia Khitarova, the editor of his newly published Russian-language book, "Poems and Verses", at the Russian State Publishing House. They arrange to meet the following day at the Union of Writers of Russia. She also informs him that Eliso Jaliashvili, a colleague from the same publishing house, will be with her. Galaktion plans to inquire whether it will be possible to prepare two more books for publication in Russian in collaboration with the Russian State Publishing House. Additionally, he intends to hand over two copies of the eighth volume of his collected works to Sofia Khitarova.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 500-501.

Note: In the source, Eliso Jaliashvili is referred to only by her last name.

1958

Until March 26

In Moscow, a critical-biographical essay titled "Galaktion Tabidze" by Sergi Tchilaia is published in Russian, which includes a bibliography of Galaktion's works.

Source: Чилая С.Е., Галактион Табидзе, Критико-биограф. очерк, Москва, Сов. писатель, 1958.

Dating: The Book is mentioned in Galaktion Tabidze's March 26, 1958 entry.

1958

March 26

He receives a call from the editorial office of the Russian newspaper Izvestiya, asking him to come to the office to collect the royalty for his poem “Colour of The Fifteen Brother-Flags”, which was published the previous day.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 501.

1958

March 26

At the “Moskva” hotel, a radio correspondent meets with Galaktion, discusses Georgian poetry with him, and records their conversation.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 501.

1958

March 26

He leaves the “Moskva” hotel and goes to the Union of Writers of Russia, where the discussion of Georgian poetry begins at 12 p.m. He attends the session, but the discussion leaves a negative impression on him. Later, when recalling the events of the day in his notebook, he describes the event as “cretinous”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 501.

1958

March 26

He has lunch with Konstantine Chichinadze, Alexandre Gomiashvili, and Revaz Asaev. They discuss the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade. Alexandre Gomiashvili proposes a toast to Galaktion, stating that, whether others say it aloud or not, Galaktion is still a genius and the first poet of Georgia. After this toast, Konstantine Chichinadze returns to discussing the Decade, while Galaktion informs the Ossetian poet, Revaz Asaev, that he plans to visit Tskhinvali in two weeks.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 501.

Note: In the source, Konstantine Chichinadze is referred to by his initials and last name, while Alexandre Gomiashvili is referred to only by his last name.

1958

March 26

He is at the “Grand Hotel”, where he is seated at the table with twelve artists, including Ucha Japaridze and Shalva Mamaladze. The artists give Galaktion a standing ovation, while also mentioning in a negative context those writers who are overly active and provide the editorial offices with inaccurate information to promote themselves. The head of the artists’ club, Shalva Mamaladze, suggests organizing an exhibition dedicated to Galaktion’s works. The poet is thrilled by the meeting and conversation with the artists. He plans to start preparing for the exhibition as soon as he returns to Tbilisi and to carry out a long-planned project that will bring together works dedicated to Galaktion by one hundred authors, along with the artworks of the artists. He believes that the exhibition will be magnificent, especially if Ucha Japaridze supports it.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 501.

Note: In the source, Shalva Mamaladze is referred to only by his last name.

1958

March 26

He meets Sofia Khitarova, the editor of his newly published Russian-language book, who tells him that she wants to organize a meeting between Galaktion and the translators. The poet agrees, and Sofia Khitarova informs him that one of his translators is the poet Klara Arsenyeva.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 501.

Note: In the source, Klara Arsenyeva is referred to only by her last name, while Sofia Khitarova is referred to by her last name and initials.

1958

March 26

While at the Union of Writers of Russia and meeting with various individuals, photos are taken. In his diary, he writes that many photos were taken during the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade, and it would be great if someone were to collect them.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 501.

1958

March 26

He is informed that the discussion of Georgian poetry, which began at the Union of Writers of Russia, will continue the next day, March 27.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 501.

1958

March 26

He listens to the conversation of the writers, who mention the Russian poet and translator Mikhail Golodniy, who passed away in 1949. Galaktion recalls that this translator had also translated one of his poems.

Source: In the source, Mikhail Golodniy is referred to by his initials and last name.

1958

March 26

He learns that Sergi Tchilaia's monograph "Galaktion Tabidze: Critical-Biographical Essay" has been published in Russian. He is surprised that the book, published in Moscow, was not even displayed at the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade, as if everything related to him is being deliberately hidden.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 501.

Note: The title of Sergi Tchilaia's monograph is not specified in the source, and the critic is referred to only by his last name.

1958

March 26

The editor of the Moscow State Publishing House, Sofia Khitarova, tells him that the staff of the publishing house has calculated the number of lines in his new Book published in Russian, "Poems and Poems", and determined that there are 9,645 lines in total. Galaktion thought that there would be 9,932 lines in the Book because that was his own calculation. He realizes that the amount of the royalty will be lower than he expected, but he no longer worries about it.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 501.

1958

March 26

He wants to somehow obtain the official list of the organizers of the Georgian Culture and Art Decade and find out who is planning the upcoming events.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 501.

1958

March 26

He discusses the purchase of a car with someone, but the other person advises against it, and in the end, Galaktion changes his mind.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 501.

1958

March 26

The Moscow Radio dedicates a program to Georgia's National Poet, Galaktion Tabidze. The host informs listeners that they spoke with the poet, who is attending the Decade of Georgian Art and Culture, and that he will soon celebrate the 50th anniversary of his literary career. In honour of this milestone, a complete collection of his works will be published. The program also mentions that thirty Russian poets are working on translating Galaktion's works into Russian and that a collection of these translations will be released for the jubilee. Galaktion is unable to listen to the program, but he learns about its content from Grigol Berdzenishvili and Shalva Radiani. This news delights him, and he notes the details of the radio program in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 502.

Note: In the source, Grigol Berdzenishvili and Shalva Radiani are mentioned by their initials and last names.

1958

March 26

He meets the Ossetian poet Revaz Asayev, who talks to him about the situation in Ossetia. Asayev explains that the environment there was unacceptable to him because only chauvinists, such as Tevdore Gagloit, also known as Hapezi, remained among the writers. For this reason, Revaz Asayev continued his studies in Moscow at the Maxim Gorky Literature Institute. The Ossetian poet reminds Galaktion of his visit to Tskhinvali in 1956, when Georgia's National Poet was given a remarkable reception.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 502.

Note: In the source, Revaz Asayev is not named, while Tevdore Gagloit is referred to as Hapezi.

1958

March 26

He meets an artist who tells him that they had a portrait of Galaktion painted by Vasily Krotkov, which they handed over to the Museum of Artists. This information surprises Galaktion, as the artist could have given the portrait to him personally. Additionally, the poet is curious to know if the artist has any other portraits of him. He also tries to recall what happened to another portrait of him created by the artist Grigol Meskhi.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 502.

1958

March 26

He meets Murman Lebanidze, who invites him to a conversation with two Russian poets. Galaktion declines the invitation. Murman Lebanidze informs him that he has already received royalties for the works included in the "Anthology of Georgian Poetry" published by the Moscow State Publishing House. Galaktion decides to visit the publishing house the next day to collect the royalties for his poems featured in the same anthology. He also plans to inquire about the royalties for his works published in the newspapers Pravda and Izvestia.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 502.

1958

March 26

He meets Sandro Shanshiashvili's wife, Mariam Kasradze, who greets Galaktion with an exceptionally polite smile. This encounter leaves a positive impression on the poet, and he notes this fact in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 502.

Note: In the source, Mariam Kasradze's first name and last name are not mentioned.

1958

March 26

He is thinking about the program that Moscow Radio dedicated to his work. He is certain that this program will be of great significance to his future plans, specifically in the preparation and publication of his upcoming books.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 502.

1958

March 27

He attends the Russian Writers' Union, where from 11 a.m., he participates in a discussion about Georgian poetry. Russian writers and critics speak at the session, praising Simon Chikovani and other Georgian authors who represent the government's position, which irritates Galaktion. Iona Vakeli remarks that the discussion was "arranged" in advance. This word quickly spreads among the Georgian authors present at the discussion, and they later repeat it when discussing the session.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 502.

Note: In the source, Simon Chikovani is referred to as Simona Chikovani.

1958

March 27

He attends the Russian Writers' Union and listens to speeches by Russian and Ukrainian writers discussing Georgian poetry. A Ukrainian writer begins his speech by naming Galaktion Tabidze first, followed by other Georgian authors, and mentions that, together with Pavlo Tychna, they are preparing translations of Galaktion Tabidze's works as Georgia's National Poet in Ukraine. This information lifts Galaktion's mood, and he is also pleased that a Russian author mentions him first in their speech. Another speaker references Giorgi Kuchishvili, and the mention of the late Georgian poet is met with emotional applause from the audience. Throughout the session, there is significant discussion about the Georgian writer Mikheil Kvlividze, who worked in Russia. Galaktion believes that the emphasis on Mikheil Kvlividze's name was likely orchestrated.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 502.

1958

March 27

While at the Russian Writers' Union, photographers take pictures of him, sometimes alone and sometimes with other writers. He is pleased and thinks that enough photos were taken to cover an entire exhibition.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503.

1958

March 27

While at the Russian Writers' Union, he notices that the poet Nikoloz Chachava, who is close to Simon Chikovani, moves among the writers, slyly observing the crowd. In Galaktion's opinion, he must be Simon Chikovani's agent.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503.

Note: In the source, Nikoloz Chachava is mentioned only by his last name, while Simon Chikovani is referred to only by his first name, Simona.

1958

March 27

At the Russian Writers' Union, he meets his long-time acquaintance, poet Sergei Gorodetsky, engages in conversation, and notes the meeting in his notebook. In his entry, he refers to Gorodetsky as a sincere man. He also meets poet and translator Nikolai Zabolotsky, and it comes to mind that this individual has translated some of his poems.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503.

Note: In the source, Nikolai Zabolotsky is mentioned only by his last name.

1958

March 27

During the discussion on Georgian poetry at the Russian Writers' Union, one of the attendees whispers to Galaktion that in this discussion, they praise the piglets and forget the lions. The poet realizes that his interlocutor considers him a lion and later notes this remark in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503.

1958

March 28

He participates in an event held as part of the Decade of Georgian Culture and Art and, along with other writers, meets with military personnel who give them a standing ovation. The evening is hosted by the Russian writer Semyon Kirsanov. At the event, Akaki Beliashvili delivers a speech that earns Galaktion's admiration.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503.

1958

March 28

He observes the behaviour of Georgian authors at the Russian Writers' Union and notes in his notebook that some of them continue their hooliganism.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503.

1958

March 28

He attends the Russian Writers' Union and listens to Sandro Euli's speech against formalists. According to Iona Vakeli, the promotion of certain authors and the emphasis on their work during the Decade of Georgian Culture and Art is not accidental but arranged in coordination with government representatives. Galaktion observes that throughout the decade, the word "arranged" is frequently used when discussing literature.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503.

1958

March 28

He browses the Zarya Vostoka publishing house's Russian-language edition of the "Anthology of Georgian Classical Poetry". He reflects on the translations of his own poems and notes that the renowned poet and translator Nikolai Tikhonov has translated only four of his poems, while other poets have significantly more. He also notices that the anthology's compiler, Simon Chikovani, has included an abundance of his own poems in the book. Despite this, Galaktion is still satisfied with the collection, as fourteen pages are dedicated to his poetry.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503.

1958

March 28

He notes in his notebook that Igor Urushadze's 1958 Russian-language Book "List of Iakob Nikoladze's Major Sculptural Works" includes a photo of the bust of Galaktion that was sculpted in 1941.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503.

1958

March 28

On the poster prepared for the Decade of Georgian Culture and Art, Galaktion Tabidze's figure is depicted most prominently. This detail catches the attention of poet Kale Bobokhidze, who shares his impression with others.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503.

1958

March 28

He is curious whether the materials from the discussions held during the Decade of Georgian Culture and Art have been published as a separate book.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503.

1958

March 28

While attending one of the events held as part of the Decade of Georgian Culture and Art, he happens to meet Georgia's Minister of Culture, Davit Chkhikvishvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503.

Note: In the source, Davit Chkhikvishvili is mentioned only by his last name.

1958

March 29

He is listening to Moscow Radio. The program host announces that Giorgi Leonidze, Galaktion Tabidze, and others will speak. The poet is irritated that the hosts adhere to formalities and announce the speakers in alphabetical order rather than based on the scale and significance of their poetry.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503.

1958

March 29

While staying in his room at the “Moscow” Hotel, the telephone rings repeatedly, but when Galaktion picks up the receiver, no one answers.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503.

1958

March 29

He is pleased that, as part of the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade, he has already spoken three times and, on all three occasions, was the first among the speakers. He notes in his notebook that his works were published in the Russian newspapers Pravda and Izvestia, and an interview with him was broadcast on the radio.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503.

1958

March 29

He plans to take a bath after a tiring day and have a good rest in the evening. He also intends to take medicine for a cold and cough.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 503.

1958

March 29

At the Russian Book Chamber, a meeting is organized with the National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze, which leaves the poet satisfied. While there, at the Book Chamber, he purchases a poster featuring his portrait and a Book dedicated to the October Revolution, “October in Moscow”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 504.

Note: It is presumably referring to the Book published in 1957: Кернес И.Я., Великий Октябрь в Москве. К 40-й годовщине Великой Октябрьской социалистической революции (1917–1957 гг.): крат. указ. лит

1958

March 29

In the evening, he is invited to one of the events held as part of the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade, but he is not informed about it. The event organizers reprimand Nikoloz Chachava, as it was his responsibility to notify Galaktion about the meeting and provide him with tickets. This information makes Galaktion ironically disposed toward Chachava, and he notes a humorous line in his notebook: “Chachava goes up, then goes down”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 504.

1958

March 29

The Moscow State Publishing House requests his autobiography. They suggest that if he cannot provide it while in Russia, he should make sure to send it by mail after returning to Tbilisi.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 504.

1958

March 29

He plans to discuss the Lenin Prize with Isidore Dolidze, a representative of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia, and the renowned Russian poet Nikolai Tikhonov.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 504.

1958

29 March

He plans to speak with Irakli Abashidze about the Lenin Prize and find out why he has not been nominated for it.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 504.

1958

March 29

In his notebook, he writes down a different version of the poem written in the 1920s, "Let the Toast Be for Him".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 504.

1958

March 30

A female hotel staff member delivers to him fourteen author's copies of the Book "Verses and Poems" published in Moscow, as well as two copies of the "Anthology of Georgian Poetry".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 504.

1958

March 30

The final evening planned as part of the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade takes place at the Pyotr Tchaikovsky Concert Hall, which, in Galaktion's opinion, turns out to be magnificent.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 504.

1958

March 30

In the Russian newspaper Sovetskaya Rossiya, a Russian translation of Galaktion's untitled poem "Anything Can Happen" is published under the title "Sacred Duty". Galaktion reads the Russian text and thinks that the poem has been translated excellently.

Source: "Священный долг", газ. "Советская Россия", 1958, 30 март.

1958

March 31

He plans to write down a plan of what he wants to accomplish during the day and begins writing, but immediately changes his mind.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,95, p. 17; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 504.

1958

March

At the Georgian Literature and Culture Decade in Moscow, he recites a poem written specifically for the occasion in the Hall of Columns. The refrain of the poem is "Oh, thank you, thank you, thank you". The audience responds to his performance with great enthusiasm.

Source: D. Sturua, Galaktion at the Decade, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 270.

1958

March

Devi Sturua and Giorgi Khutsishvili leave the "Moscow" Hotel, planning to visit the Likhachov Automobile Plant. They invite Galaktion, who is standing near the hotel, to join them, and they take a taxi together. On the way, Galaktion humorously talks to the driver about writing poetry, entertaining his companions.

Source: D. Sturua, Galaktion at the Decade, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 271. About Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 271.

April

1958

April 6

In the newspaper Komunisti, under the headline "Thanks to the Workers of Beloved Moscow", brief remarks and comments from Georgian artists participating in the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade are published, including contributions from Veriko Anjaparidze, Shalva Mshvelidze, Shalva Dadiani, Irakli Abashidze, Marika Baratashvili, Galaktion Tabidze, Akaki Vasadze, and others. In Galaktion's response, titled "Forever Unforgettable Days", he describes the warm and heartfelt atmosphere of the Decade and the meetings held with colleagues and the audience during this grand event. The poet expresses joy over the publication of Russian translations of his works and emphasizes the importance of the complete collection of his writings, which the Moscow Artistic Literature Publishing House plans to release soon to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of his creative career. Galaktion notes that the days spent in Moscow will remain an unforgettable memory for Georgian writers.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1958, №82, p. 2.

1958

April 6

In the newspaper Komunisti, a photo of Galaktion taken with Pavlo Tychyna and Konstantine Chichinadze is published. The photograph was taken at the final evening of the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade in Moscow, held at the Pyotr Tchaikovsky Concert Hall.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1958, №82, p. 2.

1958

April 12

At one of the events held as part of the Georgian Arts and Literature Decade in Moscow, Armenian poet Gevorg Emin delivers a speech. He discusses Armenian-Georgian literary relations and notes that Armenian readers deeply admire Galaktion Tabidze's lyric poetry.

Source: G. Emin, Emotional Issues, magazine Tsiskari, 1958, №7, p. 103; 1958

April 24

He is at the hospital – the Vake Medical Center. He is uncertain about how many days the treatment will last or when he will be allowed to return home.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 44; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 518.

1958

April 24

While undergoing treatment at the hospital, a female doctor named Nemsitsveradze asks Galaktion for his biography, and he promises to fulfil her request. He plans to write the autobiography within a week after being discharged from the hospital, especially since he himself needs an updated and complete version.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 44; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 518.

1958

April 29

He reads the Russian newspaper Tbilisi and writes that, after participating in the Georgian culture and arts Decade held in Moscow and staying in hospitals, he sat down at his desk to work for the first time.

Source: MGL, t-679-1. newspaper "Тбилиси", April 28, 1958, p. 1.

1958

April

After returning from the Moscow Decade, he shares his impressions with his wife. He mentions that all the members of the Georgian delegation were too busy, and only Vakhtang Gurgeniidze showed him sympathy.

Source: Nino Tabidze, Galaktion at the Georgian Decade in Moscow, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 286.

1958

April

He takes a new notebook for making entries and writes the year and month on the first page – April 1958 – as well as the phrase: "Let not a single sunny day be wasted".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,97, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 506.

Note: The phrase noted by Galaktion is in Russian: "Не терять зря ни одного погожего дня".

May

1958

May 1

The poem “With the Flags of May” is published in the newspaper Komunisti.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1958, №101, p. 1.

1958

May 1

A translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “On the Morning of May First” is published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka.

Source: С первомайским утром (Стих) Г. Табидзе, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1958, 1 мая, №102, с.1.

1958

Until May 3

He is preparing to participate in the poetry evening scheduled for May 10 in Rustavi. To finalize the details, he plans to meet with the event organizers on May 3 at 11:00 a.m.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 509.

1958

May 9

In the evening, he plans to prepare for the event to be held in Rustavi the following day, May 10. He highlights two key aspects of his career that, in his opinion, should be emphasized during the event: his election as an academician and the publication of seven volumes of his eight-volume collected works.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 512.

1958

May 9

He makes a diary entry in the form of a dialogue between a cheating wife and a jealous husband. Based on their conversation, the husband believes the wife always speaks to him in a peculiar manner, while he, in turn, imagines infidelity or suspicious scenarios behind her every ambiguous word.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 38; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

1958

Until May 10

In his notebook, he outlines the plan for the event to be held on May 10 in Rustavi. According to the plan, the evening will consist of four parts: an opening speech, a presentation, a literary segment, and a concert. At the event, the writer Karpe Mumladze will deliver a presentation titled “The Works of Galaktion Tabidze”.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 509.

1958

May 10

He participates in a meeting held at the Palace of Culture for Metallurgists in Rustavi. The event is opened with a brief introductory speech by the secretary of the Komsomol Committee of the Metallurgical Plant. Following this, the head of the literary circle affiliated with the Palace of Culture, writer Karpe Mumladze, delivers a presentation on the topic "The Works of Galaktion Tabidze". Galaktion is greeted with official remarks by local writers, pioneers, and leading employees of the city's enterprises. The poet warmly thanks the participants of the event and reads several of his new poems to the audience. The meeting concludes with a grand concert.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1958, №179, p. 4.

1958

Until May 11

In his notebook, he notes that on May 11, it is the birthday of Grigol Katchkatchishvili, the deputy head of the production department at the Locomotive and Rolling Stock Repair Plant.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 511.

1958

May 11

He takes the 1940 Russian-language collection of selected poems to the Zarya Vostoka publishing house. The publisher's employee, Giorgi Bebutov, asks him to present a plan for a new Book that will include his poems written after 1917. Galaktion believes that, since he still has several months to prepare, it might be possible to complete the translations of his poems for inclusion in this book.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-607, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 47.

1958

May 12

He attends an event dedicated to his work, held at the Central House of Culture of Artisanal Cooperatives. The opening speech is delivered by Avtandil Svani, followed by a speech from Besarion Zhghenti. Participants include school students, members of the Galaktion Literary Circle, as well as poets Alio Mashashvili and Vakhtang Gogolashvili, and actors Ivan Rusinov and Jakob Tripolsky.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 40-41; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517-518.

Note: In the source, Besarion Zhghenti is referred to as Beso Zhghenti, while Ivane Rusinov is mentioned only by his last name.

1958

May 14

On a telegram sheet, he notes that a large-format, 500-page Book of his works should be published, as well as a well-prepared “Selected Works” by Revaz Tvaradze at the Soviet Literature Publishing House and translations at Zarya Vostoka.

Source: MGL, d-579, 4; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 413.

1958

May 15

He travels to Abkhazia to investigate the situation at his house in Sokhumi. He plans to personally check the progress of the renovation work.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 512.

1958

May 17

He is in Sokhumi and finds himself in multiple unpleasant situations throughout the day. The day begins with no decent breakfast at the hotel. Then, at the depository, he is denied money without a passport, forcing him to argue his case to withdraw his own funds. He eventually manages to withdraw the necessary amount, but a bank employee catches up with him and makes him return the money. Afterward, he goes to the hotel, where he is told that his passport is invalid. He stays at the hotel, intending to work in his room, but cannot, as the hotel administrator summons him, forcing him to stop working. When he finally returns to his room, he counts his money and discovers a shortage. Burdened by all these unpleasant events, he writes an entry in his notebook titled “Petty Annoyances”, trying to console himself with a phrase he once heard from the people of Guria: “This is nothing”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 26; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 514-515.

1958

May 19

He drafts a statement addressed to the head of the Sokhumi Construction Department, requesting the timely completion of construction work on his house under construction.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-606, 2; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 40.

1958

May 19

He has been in Sokhumi for five days, observing the progress of the renovation work. He believes that the house renovation is nearly complete and that it will take only two to three weeks to finalize everything. He plans to confirm the schedule according to which Konstantine Lazaridi, the person responsible for the renovation, will oversee the work during this period. Additionally, while in Sokhumi, he intends to assist Lazaridi as much as possible in sourcing and mobilizing the materials and equipment needed for the renovation.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 512.

1958

May 19

He speaks with Konstantine Lazaridi, the person responsible for the renovation of his house in Sokhumi, and becomes very angry with him. Lazaridi is ignoring the terms of the contract and will not be able to finish the renovation within the agreed timeline, which expires in two weeks. The poet is further outraged to learn that the floor craftsman, without his permission, has been living in his house, has poorly installed the parquet, and is demanding 2.000 roubles as payment. He resolves not to let Lazaridi deceive him any further and plans to hold the craftsman accountable for his misconduct.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 510.

Note: Konstantine Lazaridi is mentioned only by his last name in the source.

1958

May 19

He is with his family when his granddaughter, Kakina – Marine Pirtskhalava – asks him to lift her up so she can reach the top of the cabinet and take down a ribbon. The thoughtfulness of such a request from a small child impresses Galaktion, and he writes her words down in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 511.

1958

May 19

He is contemplating a large single-volume collection of his works, which he plans to publish for a jubilee. In his notebook, he writes down several titles that he believes would be suitable as section names for the book.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 512.

1958

May 20

An informational article titled "The National Poet with Rustavi's Workers" is published in the newspaper Komunisti, providing an overview of the May 10 meeting with Galaktion held at the Palace of Culture for Metallurgists in Rustavi. According to the article, the event was attended by representatives of the intelligentsia, metallurgists, builders, and students. The meeting was opened with a brief introductory speech by the secretary of the Komsomol Committee of the Metallurgical Plant. A presentation on "The Works of Galaktion Tabidze" was delivered by Karpe Mumladze, head of the literary circle affiliated with the Palace of Culture and a writer. Afterward, local poets, pioneers, and leading employees of the city's enterprises greeted the poet with official remarks. Galaktion warmly thanked the participants and the audience and read several of his new poems. The meeting concluded with a grand concert.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1958, №179, p. 4.

1958

May 22

He sends a telegram to the chief accountant of the State Literary Publishing House in Moscow, requesting that a certificate confirming Galaktion's receipt of royalties for the Russian-language books "Selected Works" and "Anthology of Georgian Poetry" be urgently sent for submission to the Literary Fund.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-226; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 84.

1958

May 22

At the Writers' Union, he attends the discussion of Grigol Abashidze's historical novel "Lasharela". However, the debate over the work takes on an ideological tone, leading to the event being moved to the Institute of Marxism-Leninism.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,99, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 524.

1958

May 22

At the Institute of Marxism-Leninism, he attends the discussion of Grigol Abashidze's historical novel "Lasharela" and is surprised to find that almost no writers are present, with the audience consisting mostly of young people.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,99, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 524.

1958

May 22

He reflects on his financial situation and notes in his notebook a list of editorial offices from which he is expecting payments. According to his entry, he is due honoraria from the Zarya Vostoka publishing house and the editorial office of the newspaper Komunisti. Additionally, he is awaiting payments from the State Publishing House and the Academy of Sciences. He recalls that he has not yet received the honorarium for poems published in Russian while he was in Moscow. He considers potential future income sources, including the possibility of taking a loan from the Literary Fund. He also remembers having some savings in a depository. Mobilizing these financial resources is necessary both for covering current daily expenses and for completing the renovation work on his house in Sokhumi.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 28; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 515.

1958

May 22

He speaks with Sergi Tchilaia, trying to clarify details regarding the events planned for the 50th anniversary of his literary career: when the events will take place, what kind of activities are planned, and who will participate. Sergi Tchilaia informs him that the Central Committee of the Communist Party has tasked him with preparing an event plan within two days, specifically by May 24, based on the outline provided by the poet to the Writers' Union.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 510.

Note: Sergi Tchilaia is mentioned only by his last name.

1958

May 22

He receives an honorarium from the newspaper Komunisti and the publishing house Zarya Vostoka, totaling 3.600 roubles. Additionally, he has 1.534 roubles in his savings account. Calculating his total funds to be around 5.000 roubles, he estimates that he needs approximately the same amount again to meet his needs.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 510.

1958

May 22

He plans to inquire about the progress of the renovation of his house in Sokhumi, to determine whether the process is nearing completion or still facing delays.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 510.

1958

May 22

He is interested in whether an official commission has been established to organize events for the 50th anniversary of his literary activity. Believing that Irakli Abashidze, as the chairman of the Writers' Union, would have this information, he plans to discuss the matter with him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 510.

Note: In the source, Irakli Abashidze is mentioned only by his first name.

1958

May 22

He is thinking about future publications and plans to develop a strategy for carrying out the editions planned for his jubilee.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 510.

1958

May 22

In the evening, at the Institute of Marxism-Leninism, he meets with Sergi Tchilaia, who informs him that the details regarding the organization of his 50th anniversary and the list of participants in the event have already been finalized with officials based on the list Galaktion provided.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 511.

1958

May 23

In his notebook, he writes down someone's words, wishing him another two hundred years of life.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 508.

1958

May 24

He wishes for artists to be involved in the jubilee events dedicated to the 50th anniversary of his creative career. To this end, he investigates the members of the Artists' Union Presidium and notes their names, surnames, and positions in his notebook: Ucha Japaridze (Chairman), Tengiz Ghviniashvili (Deputy), Lado Lemonjava (Secretary), Valerian Topuridze, Apolon Kutateladze, Korneli Sanadze, Robert Sturua, Beno Gordeziani, and Zakro Maisuradze. He plans to visit the Artists' Union at 2:00 p.m., when the full Presidium convenes. Simultaneously, he confirms that the director of the Art Gallery is art historian Mikheil Topuria, whose involvement will also be crucial in preparing for the events.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 64; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 522.

Note: In the source, Beno Gordeziani is mentioned by his last name and initials.

1958

May 24

He believes that he will need the assistance of the Ministry of Culture in planning and preparing the jubilee events dedicated to the 50th anniversary of his creative career, as they can facilitate the involvement of representatives from various fields of art.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 64; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 522.

1958

Until May 26

He is at the Writers' Union, reading an announcement that the Writers' Club will hold a memorial evening for the poet Vakhtang Nadareishvili on May 26. In his notebook, he notes details about the event, which states that Irakli Abashidze will deliver the opening speech, and Giorgi Shatberashvili will present the main address. Writers participating in the evening include Grigol Abashidze, Khuta Berulava, Nodar Gureshidze, Giorgi Leonidze, Alexandre Maisuradze, Mukhran Matchavariani, Silovan Narimanidze, Giorgi Kavtaradze, Moris Potskhishvili, Nikoloz Chachava, Givi Dzeladze, and Tamar Javakhishvili. The event is scheduled to begin at 8:00 p.m.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 20-21; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 513.

Note: The writers – Irakli Abashidze, Grigol Abashidze, Khuta Berulava, Nodar Gureshidze, Giorgi Leonidze, Alexandre Maisuradze, Mukhran Matchavariani, Silovan Narimanidze, Giorgi Kavtaradze, Moris Potskhishvili, Nikoloz Chachava, Givi Dzeladze, and Tamar Javakhishvili – are mentioned in the source by their initials and last names.

1958

May 26

He is sitting on a bench in Alexandre's Garden, now known as the April 9 Garden, resting and observing his surroundings. He reflects on how much everything has changed, noting that in the past, there were no pools, cinemas, stadiums, or monuments here. He reminisces about the old times and the people he had been there with years ago. Most vividly, he remembers Bachana Razikashvili, for whom he had held a special regard since his youth and whom he grew to admire even more upon meeting, impressed by his simplicity. He recalls that it was in this garden that he met Bachana for the first and last time years ago. At that time, Vazha-Pshavela's brother was already very old, while Galaktion was very young. He remembers discussing poetry with the elderly writer, telling him that Vazha's "Kesane" was a masterpiece, just like Bachana's "Oak, I Love You, Desolate".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 55; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 520.

Note: In the source, Bachana Razikashvili is mentioned only by his first name, while Alexandre's Garden is referred to as Aleksandrov's Garden.

1958

May 26

While sitting in Alexandre's Garden, now the April 9 Garden, he recalls his early days in Tbilisi as a student, walking around this area with his seminary classmates. He also remembers an incident when he turned on a faucet to drink water, and they couldn't manage to turn it off afterward.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 55; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 520.

Note: In the source, Alexandre's Garden is referred to as Aleksandrov's Garden.

1958

May 26

He writes an untitled humorous poem, "Irakli Abashidze Tomorrow, May 27", dedicated to the departure of the chairman of the Writers' Union for Moscow.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 21; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 513.

1958

May 26

At the Writers' Union, he attends a memorial evening for the poet Vakhtang Nadareishvili organized by the Writers' Club and listens to the speakers' thoughts. One detail about Nadareishvili's creative process captures his attention – specifically, that Nadareishvili would first write a poem in prose, then rhyme it, transforming it into a poem. Galaktion notes this fact in his notebook and expresses his opinion that such an approach is quite easy but inherently flawed. He believes that a poem should be written as a poem from the very beginning.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 40; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 517.

Note: In the source, Vakhtang Nadareishvili is mentioned only by his last name.

1958

May 26

He rests in Alexandre's Garden, now the April 9 Garden, reminiscing about the people he has been there with at different times. Looking at the trees, he recalls how, decades ago, around 1918, he and Evgeni Dvali, along with a blacksmith, spread a feast under those very trees and enjoyed themselves. He also remembers another occasion in the same garden with Giorgi Kuchishvili and Sio Kalandadze, when, already tipsy, they had a photo taken together, laughing at how amusingly they swayed during the shoot.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 56; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 520.

Note: In the source, Alexandre's Garden is referred to as Aleksandrov's Garden.

1958

May 26

While resting in Alexandre's Garden, now the April 9 Garden, he recalls an interesting lecture he attended there half a century ago, in 1908, which left an impression on him that still lingers. He also remembers a story Davit Pavliashvili told about the garden, specifically about encountering Niko Sulkhaniashvili sitting there coatless on a very bitter winter day. Additionally, he recalls later meeting Niko Sulkhaniashvili himself and even singing in his choir alongside Vakhtang Kotetishvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 56; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 520.

Note: In the source, Niko Sulkhaniashvili is referred to as Kikusha Sulkhaniashvili, Davit Pavliashvili as Datiko Pavliashvili, and Alexandre's Garden as Aleksandrov's Garden.

1958

May 27

He plans to work on the layout of his large single-volume collection of works, dividing the Book into sections and coming up with titles for each part in the form of headings. He also intends to prepare the table of contents for the same book.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 15; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 512.

1958

After May 27

He frequently visits the publishing house Soviet Georgia, where he plans to publish his large single-volume collection. Galaktion initially aims for a forty-sheet book, but the editorial board proposes a thirty-sheet edition. At first, he refuses, but later agrees and submits the material prepared with the help of Gogi Chikobava.

Source: E. Ubilava, Who Announced Your Death, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 283; 1958

May 28

He calculates the amount of money he received from the publishing house Soviet Georgia between April 12, 1957, and April 12, 1958. According to his calculations, the honorarium amounts to 74.546 roubles.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 49; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 518-519.

1958

May 28

The administration of the Writers' Union is planning to organize a jubilee event on October 12 at the Opera House to celebrate the 50th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's creative career as the National Poet of Georgia and a full member of the Academy of Sciences. They intend to request the use of the theater hall by submitting a formal appeal to the Opera House management. Galaktion drafts the text of the request.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 64; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 521.

1958

May 28

He wants to take a loan from the Literary Repository of the Writers' Union. Early in the morning, he goes to the Repository to meet with the director, Alexandre Gomiashvili, but does not find him there.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 68; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 522.

Note: In the source, Alexandre Gomiashvili is mentioned only by his last name.

1958

May 28

He goes to see Givi Meladze, the assistant to Vasil Mzhavanadze, the First Secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia, to discuss the 50th jubilee events celebrating his creative career. Representatives of the official structure promise some assistance, but he is unable to meet Givi Meladze and suspects that he is avoiding him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 68; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 522.

Note: In the source, Givi Meladze is mentioned only by his last name.

1958

May 28

He meets Irakli Toidze and mentions that there is little time left before the publication of the planned jubilee book. The artist assures him that he will start working immediately. At this point, Irakli Toidze has already created three portraits of Galaktion and is working on additional portraits needed for the book. He asks Galaktion to have a profile photograph taken and bring it to him, as this would expedite his work on the portrait. Galaktion plans to fulfil Toidze's request the very next day.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 64; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 522.

Note: In the source, Irakli Toidze is mentioned only by his last name.

1958

May 28

While at the Literary Fund, he meets Tengiz, the son of writer Siko Pashalishvili. Observing him, he concludes that Tengiz presents himself as a polite man but is, in fact, exceedingly rude.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 64; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 522.

Note: In the source, Tengiz Pashalishvili is referred to as Pashalishvili's son, without specifying his first name.

1958

May 28

He submits a formal request to the Georgian Literary Fund, requesting a loan of 15,000 roubles for a period of four months.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-225; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 134.

1958

May 30

He is at the Academy of Sciences, where his attention is drawn to a portrait of Nikoloz Marr. In his notebook, he records the names of the individuals he meets that day at the academy: Mikheil Chikovani, Giorgi Leonidze, Mamia Ebralidze, Giorgi Tsereteli, Giorgi Jibladze, Giorgi Tsitsishvili, Ksenia Sikharulidze, Korneli Kekelidze, Alexandre Baramidze, Akaki Shanidze, Dimitri Benashvili, Giorgi Abzianidze, and Angia Botchorishvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 33; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 516.

1958

May 30

In his notebook, he notes information about the first volume of the complete academic edition of his works. According to the entry, the volume will comprise 480 pages and is scheduled for completion in December 1958. The preparation of the edition is led by Davit Gamezardashvili, head of the Textual Department at the Shota Rustaveli Institute of Georgian Literature. The project also involves junior research associates from the same institute: Roman Miminoshvili, Neli Makharadze, and E. Ebralidze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 24; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 513.

1958

May 30 or later

Vakhtang Gurgeniidze sends a letter through his young relative, asking Galaktion to present his poems to the Poets' Section of the Writers' Union, specifically to one of its authoritative members. If he is unable to contact any of the section members by phone, Gurgeniidze suggests writing a short note to one of them, which, he assures, would bring great joy to anyone. Gurgeniidze promises to visit him when he arrives in Tbilisi.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-636, 18; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 443.

Dating: The letter is dated May 30, 1958.

1958

May

Galaktion is in the office of Boris Nanitashvili, the head of the Polygraph Department. First, he paces back and forth, then opens the window and asks Nanitashvili, “If someone fell from here, would they die or not?” A startled Nanitashvili responds, “Of course they would”. Galaktion replies, “I would jump, but I care for your reputation”, and leaves the office.

Source: G. Abdaladze, The Unfathomable, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 195.

Dating: The author of the recollection, Jondo Bardavelidze, who was in Nanitashvili’s office at the time, shared this story with Gigla Abdaladze on the day of Galaktion’s death, March 17, 1959, describing it as having occurred about ten months earlier.

1958

May

Galaktion’s poem about Tbilisi is published in the magazine Literaturnaya Gruzia.

Source: Г. Табидзе, Ты дорог нам и юный и седой, Литературная Грузия, 1958, N 5, ст. 58-59.

1958

Spring

In Orjonikidze Park, an event is held in honour of him and Lado Gudiashvili. After the event, at the request of young employees from the Radio Committee, he makes an audio recording of the poem “Anything Can Happen”.

Source: T. Kobaladze, The Candle... Your Soul is a Candle..., newspaper Tskhovreba da Kanoni, 1991, № 23, November 23, p. 5.

1958

Spring

He takes a photo with the young employees of the Radio Committee.

Source: T. Kobaladze, The Candle... Your Soul is a Candle..., newspaper Tskhovreba da Kanoni, 1991, № 23, November 23, p. 5.

June

1958

Until June 2

He calculates that after covering his necessary expenses, he will have 3,891 roubles left on June 2. Additionally, he has 1,900 roubles in his savings account and 1,500 roubles at home, making a total of 7,291 roubles.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 47-48; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 518.

1958

June 3

At the Literary Repository of the Writers’ Union, he meets Geronti Kikodze and learns that he has undergone three surgeries. Geronti enters the office of the Literary Fund’s director, Alexandre Gomiashvili, shows him his medical certificates, and discusses the surgeries.

Galaktion observes that whenever Geronti goes somewhere, he never seems to hurry and stays for a long time. The poet thinks that this is a good thing.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 53-54; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 519-520.

Note: In the source, Alexandre Gomiashvili is mentioned only by his last name, as well as by the name Alexius.

1958

June 3

He meets a staff member of the State Publishing House, writer Nikoloz Shvelidze, to discuss the upcoming books. Unexpectedly, Shvelidze takes a position that Galaktion finds unacceptable. The poet is outraged by his attitude and notes in his notebook that the man has removed his mask, revealing that his actions had only been hypocrisy up until now.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 30; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 515.

Note: In the source, Nikoloz Shvelidze is referred to as Niko Shvelidze.

1958

June 3

He meets the director of the State Publishing House, Davit Dumbadze, to discuss the publication of the book. During their conversation, the director repeatedly changes the proposed volume of the book. In the presence of the printing warehouse manager, V. Meladze, he mentions 400 pages, but with Galaktion, he fluctuates between 320 and 160 pages. This inconsistency outrages the poet, and in his notebook, he writes that Dumbadze is a deceiver and, in reality, he and his staff want a bribe to properly publish the book. However, Galaktion states that he will not pay a bribe.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-3,98, p. 30; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 515.

Note: Davit Dumbadze is referred to in the source as D. Dumba-Dumba, while the warehouse manager, V. Meladze, is mentioned only by his last name.

1958

June 4

He is at the Literary Repository of the Writers' Union to meet with the director, Alexandre Gomiashvili. From a phone conversation with the secretary, he learns that Gomiashvili has gone to Kvishkheti and will likely return the following day. He also finds out that the board meeting has not yet been held.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-400, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 525.

1958

June 4

He plans to move the exhibition stands and frames for his 50th anniversary exhibition from the Institute of Marxism-Leninism to the exhibition hall of Tbilisi's First Gymnasium. Over the next two days, he intends to bring additional exhibition materials from his home to the same location.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-400, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 525.

1958

June 6

He makes a note on a letter received from Vakhtang Gurgeniidze, in which it is suggested that it would be a good idea to establish a literary circle in Tbilisi, consisting of young writers, particularly from Meskheta-Javakheti, and to organize literary evenings with their participation.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-636, 21; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 443-444.

1958

June 10

He writes an untitled poem "Oh, sea, what are you, what are you?"

Source: Autograph, MGL, №6926; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 311.

Note: The poem is also found under the title "Marine, what are you, what are you?"

1958

June 21

He is preparing for his creative evening, which is scheduled to take place on June 30 in the hall of the Institute of Marxism-Leninism. In his notebook, he writes down the address of the Georgian branch of the institute, as well as the phone numbers of the administrative staff and the director, Varlam Esaiashvili, as he anticipates needing frequent communication with them.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-401, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 526.

1958

June 23

Together with Beso Zhghenti, the secretary of the Georgian Writers' Union, and Irodion Kavzharadze, the administrative manager, he submits a formal request to Dimitri Mchedlidze, the director of the Zakaria Paliashvili Opera and Ballet Theater. They request that the theater hall be provided on July 7 for a creative evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-227; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 134.

1958

June 29

He submits a request to Varlam Esaiashvili, the director of the Georgian branch of the Institute of Marxism-Leninism, informing him that he has planned a creative evening for the following day, June 30, at the institute's building. Due to time constraints, he was unable to meet with him personally. He writes that 5.000 roubles have been spent on the exhibition setup and that tickets for the event have been sent to the faculty of Tbilisi State University, Kirov University, the Pedagogical Institute, and the Agricultural Institute, as well as to the advanced workers of the Locomotive and Rolling Stock Repair Plant. He adds that ticket sales are voluntary and that any unsold tickets will be returned by the author. He mentions that while he is covering all other expenses, he needs the hall. He requests that an order be issued to ensure the event takes place and that a decision be communicated to him by 12:00 p.m. on June 30.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-401, p. 6-11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 526.

July

1958

After July 1

An article titled "Galaktion Tabidze" by Vladimir Jibuti is published in the magazine Mnatobi. The article discusses how the poet began his career during the years of intense political reaction and responded to the historical context with his poems "May First" and "The Hidden Flags". The article extensively covers Galaktion's Soviet patriotism, the innovative nature of his poetic forms, and his national form combined with socialist content in poetry.

Source: V. Jibuti, Galaktion Tabidze, magazine Mnatobi, 1958, №6, p. 125.

Dating: This issue of the magazine was signed for printing on July 1, 1958.

1958

July 5

At the State Literary Museum of Georgia, he meets with the director, Ivane Kakabadze, to discuss an exhibition about his biography and works. In agreement with Galaktion, Kakabadze submits a formal request to Valiko Mushkudiani, the director of the Pedagogical Cabinet of Stalin's Secondary School, asking for a suitable hall to be made available starting from July 9 on behalf of the museum's administration.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-401, p. 12-13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 527-528.

Note: Ivane (Vano) Kakabadze is mentioned in the source by his initials and last name, while Valiko Mushkudiani is mentioned only by his last name.

1958

July 9

While organizing his archive in Tskhneti, his attention is drawn to an article written by Mikheil Vadbolsky five years earlier, in which the author calls for the establishment of a Galaktion Tabidze Museum. He recalls that the then editor of Zarya Vostoka, Davit Chkhikvishvili, had refused to publish the article, and in his notebook, he writes that Chkhikvishvili will answer for this action one day. While sorting through the archive, he also finds two notebooks from the depository, photos of the seven-volume collected works, postcards, a photo of the Chkhikvishvili house taken by Niko Ketskhoveli, a poster from Paris, a reading room ticket, glasses, their case, and several other forgotten items.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-402, p. 1-2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 528-529.

Note: In the source, Mikheil Vadbolsky is mentioned by his initials and last name.

1958

July 9

While organizing his archive in Tskhneti, he discovers two certificates. The first is issued by the administration of the Kutaisi Theological Seminary on June 17, 1908, stating that the poet's birthdate is November 5, 1891. He notes that according to this certificate, he will turn 70 on November 5, 1961. Despite his health problems, he feels no sense of old age and decides to keep this certificate permanently in his Tskhneti home and not take it elsewhere. He acknowledges that everyone knows his birth year as 1892 and has no intention of changing it. The second certificate he finds is a decree from the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the Soviet Union, awarding the medal to the National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze, for his dedicated work during the Great Patriotic War. According to the certificate, the poet was honoured for his selfless labour during the war.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-402, p. 1-2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 528-529.

1958

July 9

While sorting through his personal archive at his Tskhneti home, he comes across many forgotten items, including books and newspapers. Among them, he finds the Soviet Writers' Directory from 1950-1951, which excites him, as he believes it is an important book. His attention is also drawn to the October 6, 1945, issue of the newspaper Komunisti, which contains an article titled "In Nikoloz Baratashvili's Homeland Village". The poet skims through the newspaper and recalls that it includes information about the village of Marabda, the Kherkheulidze family of nine brothers, and the ancestors of Nikoloz Baratashvili. He also discovers an article by Alpesi Kheladze about Ilia Chavchavadze, reads it, and comments that it is a beautiful piece of writing.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-402, p. 1-2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 529.

1958

July 9

While organizing his personal archive in Tskneti, he finds about a thousand photographs, though most of them are of poor quality. He wonders if their quality can be improved and plans to ask the artists and show them these photos. Additionally, he discovers a manuscript of his own poem "To the Land of Wolves and Dogs – the Writers' Palace". He decides to take a separate folder to organize the poems he finds during the archive sorting and place them there, as well as to separately arrange the prose fragments.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-402, p. 1-2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 529.

1958

July 9

While sorting through his personal archive in Tskneti, he finds lists of various commissions. The first is a list of the members of the commission for the Georgian Arts and Culture Decade held in Moscow in March 1958. The members include Sergi Tchilaia, Besarion Zhghenti, Mikheil Mrevlishvili, Grigol Abashidze, Simon Chikovani, and Karlo Kaladze. After reading these names, Galaktion concludes that the Decade could not have been more successful with their involvement. The second list contains the members of the Sulkhan-Saba Orbeliani Anniversary Commission. Galaktion recalls that 1958 marks the 300th anniversary of Sulkhan-Saba's death. Preparation for the anniversary started as early as 1956, but no actual work had been done.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-402, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 529.

1958

July 9

While sorting through his personal archive in Tskneti, he comes across pages from his 1956 notebook. The last entry is dated July 9, which intrigues him, as it is once again July 9. While browsing through the found pages, a butterfly lands on the notebook, and the poet recalls seeing a giant butterfly in Sokhumi. He also discovers a poster for an event held in 1955 by the Society for the Dissemination of Political and Scientific Knowledge, in which he had participated.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-402, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 530.

1958

July 9

While sorting through his personal archive in Tskhneti, he discovers Elene Didimamishvili's 1956 book "The Spring of Vardzia", which she had gifted to the author with the inscription: "To the great poet, beloved by the people, Academician Galaktion Tabidze – with deepest respect – the author. 1956, Tbilisi". During the organization of his archive, he also finds a personal letter sent by Grigol Gorgadze on September 1, 1923, in which the sender shares his impressions of the ninth issue of Galaktion Tabidze's Journal, published on August 12 in Batumi. While sorting the materials, he notices an unusual object, which at first he thinks is a wooden spoon, but upon closer inspection, he realizes it is a spoon-shaped mushroom. He is amazed by this discovery and thinks to himself that sometimes nature enjoys playing such tricks.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-402, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 530.

Note: In the source, Grigol Gorgadze is referred to as Grisha Gorgadze.

1958

July 9

While sorting through his personal archive at his Tskneti home, he discovers the June 24, 1956 issue of the newspaper Zarya Vostoka, which features a photo taken in Chargali during the celebration of Galaktion and Vazha-Pshavela's wife, Tamar Didebashvili's, childhood anniversary. The photo is included in V. Volski's article "The Album of Long Life".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-402, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 530.

1958

July 9

From 8 a.m., he is busy with the arrangements for the exhibition and is directly involved in the process of mounting the exhibition materials on the stands.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 530.

1958

July 9

He plans to visit the Literary Repository of the Writers' Union at 2:00 p.m. to find out whether he will be able to obtain a loan.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 530.

1958

July 9

He goes to the Literary Repository of the Writers' Union but is unable to resolve the issue of the loan. He plans to return the next day at 10:00 a.m. and try again.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 530.

1958

July 9

He plans to visit the Writers' Union to clarify the details regarding the jubilee events for the 50th anniversary of his creative career.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 530.

1958

July 9

The article by Mikheil Vadbolsky, found in the personal archive at his Tskneti home, makes him think about the need for a museum dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze in Tbilisi. He plans to have the article retyped and printed in 100 copies so that it can be read by the necessary people, primarily showing it to the Minister of Culture. He also considers the possibility of organizing a meeting to discuss this truly important article.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 530.

1958

July 9

He is thinking about the plans he needs to implement in the coming days. He intends to secure a permanent exhibition hall for his exhibition about his biography and works, but before that, he must find a temporary space to house the exhibition materials. He wants to meet with the Minister of Culture to discuss this and other matters related to the jubilee events for his 50th anniversary. Additionally, he plans to visit the State Publishing House to check on the progress of the large single-volume edition, find out what stage the printing is at, and when the Book will be released. He also wants to formalize an agreement with official institutions regarding the jubilee events to ensure everything proceeds according to plan. At the same time, he plans to call Sokhumi to check whether the renovation of his house has been completed.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 530.

1958

July 9

He meets with the Minister of Culture to discuss the jubilee events for the 50th anniversary of his creative career and the upcoming publication of his large single-volume edition. The Minister calls one of the responsible people for the book's publication, Nikoloz Shvelidze from the State Publishing House, and instructs him to assist the National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze, in resolving any issues related to the book.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 530.

1958

July 10

He plans to meet with Nikoloz Shvelidze, the person responsible for the publication of his single-volume edition at the State Publishing House, whom the Minister of Culture instructed the previous day to assist Galaktion with resolving any issues. He wants to have a contract formalized regarding the publication of the book.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 530.

1958

July 10

He plans to speak with Valiko Mushkudiani, the director of the Pedagogical Cabinet of Stalin's Secondary School, regarding the organization of an exhibition about his biography and creative life. He intends to present an official document granting him the right to hold the exhibition in the school's exhibition hall.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 530.

1958

July 10

He plans to go to the Literary Repository of the Writers' Union at 10:00 a.m. to collect the loan.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 530.

1958

July 10

He takes Mikheil Vadbolsky's article to the female printer at the State Publishing House and receives a promise that it will be printed by 1:00 p.m. the following day.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 531.

1958

July 10

He continues to think about what can be done to organize a permanent exhibition showcasing his biography and creative works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 531.

1958

July 10

In his notebook, he notes that he needs to buy butter and bread for his granddaughter, Marine Pirtskhalava.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 531.

Note: In the source, Marine Pirtskhalava is referred to by the nickname Kakina.

1958

July 10

He plans to find out the situation at his house in Sokhumi and whether the renovation work has been completed. He also plans to visit the editorial office of Zarya Vostoka to confirm when the works he submitted will be published and when he will be able to receive the honorarium owed to him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 531.

1958

July 11

He plans to meet with the director of the Literature Museum, Ivane Kakabadze, and the museum staff member responsible for preparing the exhibition materials, in relation to organizing the exhibition about his biography and creative works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 531.

1958

July 11

He learns that the publishing house Zarya Vostoka plans to release a Russian-language edition of Shalva Radiani's monograph "Galaktion Tabidze" in the near future, which does not please him.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 531.

1958

July 11

He is frustrated that the planning and preparation process for the events marking the 50th anniversary of his creative career is progressing slowly, and none of the planned tasks have been carried out so far. Given this, he decides to ask young people for help to manage the accumulated work and get things done.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 531.

1958

After July 11

The publishing house Zarya Vostoka is releasing Shalva Radiani's monograph "Galaktion Tabidze" in Russian.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 531. Радiani Ш.Д. Галактион Табидзе, Тбилиси, Заря Востока, 1958.

1958

July 12

He is trying to resolve the issue of organizing an exhibition about his biography and creative works. He wants the exhibition to be held in the near future in the exhibition hall of Stalin's Secondary School, but he also wants to find a place for a permanent exhibition. He discusses this matter with official figures and notes in his notebook that, in order to address this issue, the Literature Museum will allocate a commission.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 531.

1958

July 12

He plans to pick up the typed text of Mikheil Vadbolsky's article from the State Publishing House.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 531.

1958

July 13

He is trying to resolve the issues related to the exhibition of his biography and creative works, but there are still no real results.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 531.

1958

July 14

He plans to make the most of his capabilities to ensure that the issue of organizing an exhibition about his biography and creative works is resolved. Additionally, he is working to finalize an official contract with the State Publishing House for the publication of his large single-volume edition in a timely manner.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 531.

1958

Until July 15

He meets the Russian poet and translator Aleksandr Kochetkov and, during their conversation, learns that he lives in Saguramo and is translating works by Alexandre Kazbegi. Kochetkov mentions that part of the work has already been submitted to the printer, and he will finish translating Kazbegi's works by July 15. This information catches Galaktion's attention, and he considers offering Kochetkov the opportunity to translate his own poems, especially since the translator expressed frustration with translating prose.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-413, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 562.

1958

Until July 15

He learns that the Russian poet and translator Boris Serebryakov will soon publish a Book in Russian titled "Selected Translations", which will open with a translation of Galaktion's 1941 poem "The Cup".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-413, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 562.

1958

July 15

In connection with organizing his jubilee events, he writes down the phone numbers of writer Nina Topchishvili, translator Irodion Kavjaradze, and critic Besarion Zhghenti in his notebook, as he believes he will need frequent communication with these individuals during the preparation process for the events.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-400, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 525.

1958

July 15

He is informed at the Writers' Union that he has been invited to meet with Miron Chubinidze, a member of the Bureau of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia, at the Council of Ministers. He learns that Sergi Tchilaia had this information, but for some reason, did not inform Galaktion. He suspects that the meeting at the Council of Ministers might be related to organizing an exhibition about his biography and creative works. He thinks that there might be some issue regarding this. To clarify the situation, he notes down the phone numbers of Miron Chubinidze, Sergi Tchilaia, and the Writers' Union in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-400, p. 4; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 525.

1958

July 15

He speaks with Valiko Mushkudiani, the director of the pedagogical office at Stalin's First Secondary School, about organizing an exhibition in the school's gallery to showcase his biography and works. However, Mushkudiani declines and provides several reasons. He explains that the relevant department of the Ministry of Education does not take responsibility for Galaktion's event, that the exhibition materials contain many items unsuitable for display, that renovations are planned in the building, followed by a conference, and that the promised timeframe of a few days has already expired.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-400, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 525-526.

1958

July 15

He plans to meet with Mark Zlatkin, a staff member of the Artistic Literature Department at the Zarya Vostoka publishing house, after 4:00 p.m.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-400, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 525.

Note: In the source, Mark Zlatkin is mentioned only by his last name.

1958

July 15

He plans to submit his poems "Pure Conscience...", "Wherever We May Be...", "The People's Singer", "Oh, Nana, Nana, Nana", and the poem "The Book of Peace" for publication by the Zarya Vostoka publishing house.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-400, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 526.

Note: The untitled poem "Wherever We May Be" is referred to in the source as "Only with the Book of Peace", while the poem "Oh, Nana, Nana, Nana" is mentioned as "Oh, Nana, Nana!".

1958

After July 15

The publishing house Zarya Vostoka is releasing a Book titled "Selected Translations" by the Russian poet and translator Boris Serebryakov in Russian. Along with translations of works by other authors, the collection includes translations of Galaktion's poems: "The Cup", "Mary", "I and the Night", "The Mountains of Guria", and "Blue Horses".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-413, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 562; Б. Серебряков. Избранные переводы, Тб., "Заря Востока", 1958.

1958

July 19

On behalf of the Georgian Writers' Union, he submits a formal request to the director of the State Literary Museum. He states that this year marks the 50th anniversary of Galaktion Tabidze's literary career, which, according to the decision of higher authorities, will be celebrated ceremoniously. He suggests that it would be desirable for the Literary Museum to organize an exhibition reflecting his creative journey.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-228; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 134-135.

1958

July 20

He is in Tskneti, in the Ash Tree Garden, and writes an untitled poem "What I have experienced today in the Ash Tree Garden...".

Source: Autograph, MGL, №4189; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 311.

1958

After July 23

An article titled “Exciting Issues” by Gevorg Emin is published in the magazine Tsiskari. In the article, the author discusses Armenian-Georgian literary relations and notes that Armenian readers deeply admire Galaktion Tabidze’s lyric poetry.

Source: G. Emin Emotional Issues, magazine Tsiskari, 1958, №7, p. 103.

Dating: The magazine was signed for printing on July 23, 1958.

1958

After July 24

An article titled “For the Nature of Galaktion Tabidze’s Lyric Poetry” by Tamaz Chkhaidze is published in the magazine Mnatobi. The author primarily discusses the specificity of lyrical poetry, explaining that lyricism does not represent a direct, linear interpretation of reality. A true poet not only reflects impressions received from the outside world but sometimes, conversely, seeks events in the world that correspond to their own mood, moving objects in the process. To support his argument, Tamaz Chkhaidze references Galaktion’s poem “Queen”, noting that in this small lyrical piece, the desire to personify objects, to revive the environment, and to elevate it is evident. When discussing Galaktion’s connection to symbolism, Chkhaidze mentions that Galaktion was influenced by the “comparatively clear wing” of French symbolism, while the extremes of decadence remained alien to him. The critic emphasizes the pictorial quality of Galaktion’s poetry, noting that reading some of his poems gives the impression that the poet was not writing them but painting them. In Chkhaidze’s view, one of the most striking manifestations of Galaktion’s poetic mastery is his ability to place a word in a context where a single word defines the overall mood of the poem. As an example, the essayist brings up the different instances of the word “snow” in Galaktion’s work, where this lexical unit fills the entire piece with its poetic scent. The critic specifically dwells on the musicality of Galaktion’s poetry. He points out that the musicality of a poetic work does not simply mean that it can be easily sung. True poetry must also have an inner melody, a lyrical tremor, something that Galaktion’s poems are richly endowed with.

Source: T. Tchiladze, For the Nature of Galaktion Tabidze’s Lyric Poetry, Magazine Mnatobi, 1958, № 7, p. 91-97.

Dating: The magazine was signed for printing on July 24, 1958.

1958

After July 25

He reads the Russian newspaper Pravda, making underlines He writes that the Book of his poems and verses, to be printed by the Moscow State Publishing House, should be significant among all Russian publications.

Source: MGL, t-676. newspaper “Правда”, July 25, 1958, №206, p. 1-6.

Note: This year, the Moscow State Publishing House, under the editorship of Sofia Khitarova, published Russian translations of Galaktion Tabidze’s verses and poems.

1958

July 31

In his notebook, he writes down the phone number of the Culture and Arts Department of the Zarya Vostoka editorial office, noting that visits or calls to the office are possible after 12:00 p.m. He plans to speak with the staff and clarify the publication of the works he submitted for printing and the issue of his owed honorarium.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-404, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 533.

1958

July 31

He plans to resolve the issue of organizing an exhibition about his biography and creative works and to secure a permanent exhibition hall where he will display materials related to his fifty years of creative activity. He believes that artist Irakli Toidze and sculptor Nikoloz Kandelaki must be involved in the preparation of the exhibition. Regarding the organization of the jubilee events, he thinks that the active involvement of the chairman of the Writers' Union, Irakli Abashidze, and the secretary, Sergi Tchilaia, will be necessary. Taking all of this into consideration, he writes down the phone numbers of 11 people in his notebook, with whom he will need frequent contact to resolve these matters.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-404, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 533.

Note: In the source, Ivane (Vano) Kakabadze is mentioned by his initials and last name, while Nikoloz Kandelaki is referred to as Kola Kandelaki.

1958

July 31

He begins actively preparing for the exhibition about his biography and creative works at the First Secondary School. He plans to prepare frames for the exhibition materials during the day and find a place to display them. He also intends to calculate the number of sheets to be displayed on the stand for the theme "Soviet Georgia in Galaktion Tabidze's Works". Additionally, he plans to have portraits of himself, created by the following artists, prepared for display: Vava Gabunia, Davit Gvelesiani, Irakli Toidze, Theodor Chudetsky, Irakli Toidze, Ucha Japaridze, Korneli Sanadze, Grigol Meskhi, and an unknown artist. Furthermore, he plans to enlarge the cover of Galaktion Tabidze's Journal, created by Irakli Gamrekeli, and a portrait of him by Nikoloz Chernishkov from the second volume of his collected works. He also wants to display portraits painted by Valerian Sidamon-Eristavi and Vasily Krotkov. He intends to ask the artists for help with these preparations and to seek assistance from Valiko Mushkudiani, the director of the Pedagogical Cabinet of the First Secondary School, in resolving issues related to the exhibition.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-404, p. 8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 533.

Note: In the source, Davit Gvelesiani, Irakli Topadze, Theodor Chudetsky, Irakli Toidze, and Grigol Meskhi are mentioned by their initials and last names, while Valerian Sidamon-Eristavi, Nikoloz Chernishkov, and Vasily Krotkov are mentioned only by their last names.

1958

July 31

Unable to find large frames for his exhibition about his biography and creative works, and with limited time, he decides to repurpose the old frames from previous exhibition materials.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-404, p. 9; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 534.

August

1958

August 1

The newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes an article by Sergi Tchilaia titled "Galaktion Tabidze", in which he notes that Galaktion Tabidze, the founder of Georgian Soviet lyric poetry, is a master of the verse. He emphasizes that Galaktion has gone through a long and complex creative journey and is now a singer of the era of Soviet communist construction.

Source: S. Tchilaia, Galaktion Tabidze, newspaper Zarya Vostoka, 1958, August 1, №178, p. 3.

1958

August 1

The newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes Andro Patariaia's translations of Galaktion Tabidze's poems "October", "The Book of Peace", "Poetry", and "Tuiya".

Source: G. Tabidze, Poems, newspaper Zarya Vostoka, 1958, August 1, №178, p. 3.

1958

August 1

The newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes a translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Poems are Immortal" by V. Khatskevich.

Source: Г. Табидзе, Нет смерти для стихов, Заря Востока, 1958, 1 августа, №178, стр. 3.

Note: In the source, Khatskevich is referred to by his initials.

1958

August 4

A translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "October" is published in the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka.

Source: Октябрь (Стих) Г Табидзе, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1958, 4 августа, №178, с.3.

1958

August 4

He plans to gather the materials and items necessary for preparing exhibition stands, including blue paper and frames. Additionally, he intends to move the stands out of the room and review the exhibition materials. Afterward, he is thinking of visiting the State Publishing House to check if there have been any updates regarding the contract for the publication of his large single-volume edition. He also plans to visit the editorial office of Zarya Vostoka to receive his honorarium. He wants to hand out tickets for his creative evening to both the publishing house and editorial staff. He also plans to distribute tickets at the Academy of Sciences, the Writers' Union, and the City Council.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-404, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 534.

1958

Until August 6

He reads the Russian magazine Literaturnaya Gruzia, makes highlights, and on the last page notes down the dates of the Wednesdays from August 6 to November 12. He writes that on November 12, there will be an evening dedicated to celebrating the 1500th anniversary of Tbilisi's founding.

Source: MGL, t-539, magazine "Литературная Грузия", 1958, №3.

1958

August 6

An informational announcement is published in the newspaper Komunisti, stating that on August 6, at 8:00 p.m., the Georgian Literature Museum and the House of Arts Workers will host a creative evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1958, №179, p. 4.

1958

August 6

A creative evening dedicated to Galaktion Tabidze is held at the House of Arts Workers, with participation from poets, prose writers, and representatives from various fields of art. Simultaneously, a large exhibition dedicated to the poet is opened in the foyer of the same institution.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1958, №179, p. 4.

1958

August 7

In his diary, he makes a brief note that he lost the materials for the first volume of his academic collected works but later managed to restore them.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 262, p. 11; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 130.

1958

After August 7

In his diary, he writes that shortly before his death, his friend, the artist Irakli Toidze, gave him a rare 1914 edition of Galaktion Tabidze's works, in which there was a poem dedicated to him by the artist.

Source: G. Tabidze's diary entry, 262, 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XVIII, Tbilisi, 2006, p. 131.

1958

August 8

At 10:30 a.m., he is at the Executive Committee of the City Council of Tbilisi, representing the Deputies of Workers. He wants to find out how to obtain permission for the construction of a third floor on the two-story house he selected, located at 13 Dzerzhinsky Street (now Ingorokva Street), in front of the Academy of Sciences. To get an answer to this important issue, the staff of the Executive Committee has scheduled a meeting for September 10 at 10:00 a.m.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-405, p. 42; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 540.

1958

August 8

At the Executive Committee of the City Council of Tbilisi, he unexpectedly meets Dr. Levan Tsereteli. He stops and discusses one of Akaki Tsereteli's poems with him. Later, he writes down this person's address and phone number in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-405, p. 43; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 540.

1958

Until August 20

He plans to meet with the chief architect of Tbilisi, Alexandre Tevzadze, on August 20 to discuss the construction of an exhibition pavilion in the yard of the House of Arts Workers, where he intends to set up a permanent exhibition showcasing his creative journey.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-405, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 537.

Note: In the source, Alexandre Tevzadze is mentioned only by his last name.

1958

August 21

He plans to build a pavilion in the yard of the House of Arts Workers on the current Geronti Kikodze Street, formerly known as Philip Makharadze Street, as well as obtain permission for the construction of a third floor on the two-story house he selected on Dzerzhinsky Street, now Ingorokva Street. Both the pavilion and the additional floor are needed for organizing exhibitions about his creative journey. Naturally, to carry out these plans, official permits are required, which is why Galaktion is researching and noting in his notebook the phone numbers and addresses of Viktor Jorbenadze, the architect of the district council's executive committee for the Kalinin district (now Mtatsminda), and the phone number of the district's chief engineer. He believes that approval from these individuals and a prepared plan will help him obtain the necessary construction permits.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-405, p. 19-20; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 538.

1958

August 23

He discovers that a tooth, which had been filled since 1950, has come out.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-405, p. 22; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 538.

1958

August 30

He reads the entries he made in his notebook between July 9 and 14, reflecting on the plans he was working to accomplish during that period. Then, he mentally reviews the time that followed and realizes that none of the tasks have been completed yet. Two particularly important issues remain unresolved: finding a permanent exhibition space and sharing Mikheil Vadbolsky's article with the right people. Despite this, he consoles himself with the thought that steps have been taken to address these problems, and it is impossible for his efforts and initiatives not to yield results eventually.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-403, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 531.

1958

July-August

He learns that the Georgian State Literature Museum has assigned senior research associates to prepare an exhibition plan for showcasing the life and works of the National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-404, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

1958

July-August

He learns that the administration of the House of Arts Workers is providing space for an exhibition showcasing his life and works. However, as he finds out, the hall in this institution can only accommodate materials related to his participation in the 1958 March Decade of Arts and Culture. Therefore, he believes that more space is necessary to fully display all the exhibition materials on stands, offering a comprehensive view of his fifty-year creative journey. To achieve this, he seeks additional space in the courtyard of the House of Arts Workers, which he plans to use for constructing an exhibition pavilion. According to the poet, this pavilion must be built as quickly as possible, within a month. He thinks that resolving this issue will require an official decree for allocating the space and a pavilion plan prepared by an engineer.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-404, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

1958

July-August

He discovers that the space in the courtyard of the House of Arts Workers, where he had planned to set up an exhibition pavilion, has already been allocated for a cinema. He begins considering other locations to find a suitable space.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-404, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

1958

July-August

He hopes that, with the help of Ushangi Tavadze, the director of the House of Arts Workers, and Ivane Kakabadze, the director of the State Literature Museum, he will be able to set up a pavilion in an unallocated section of the garden at the House of Arts Workers. He believes that to implement this idea, he will need an engineer to design the exhibition pavilion.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-404, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

1958

July-August

In his notebook, he writes down the phone numbers of Ushangi Tavadze, the director of the House of Arts Workers, and Ivane Kakabadze, the director of the State Literature Museum, as he plans to organize an exhibition about his biography and creative works with their support. For the same reason, he also notes the phone numbers of senior research associates from the State Literature Museum, Nino Chikhladze and Davit Shughliashvili.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-404, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

1958

July-August

He calls Ushangi Tavadze, the director of the House of Arts Workers, and Ivane Kakabadze, the director of the State Literature Museum, to ask if they can meet with him at 9:00 a.m. the next morning. He finds out that Ushangi Tavadze will only be able to arrive at 10:00 a.m.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-404, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 532.

1958

July - August

It is evening. Returning from Tskneti, Galaktion is walking slowly along Rustaveli Avenue when two young men, Guram Rcheulishvili and Nugzar Tsereteli, separate from their group and approach him. They greet the poet and offer to accompany him home. Galaktion agrees, and they all take a trolleybus down Elbakidze Descent. Upon getting off the trolleybus, Galaktion kisses the hand of an elderly Russian conductor, which fills her with great joy.

Source: N. Tsereteli, Meetings with Immortal Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 173 - 174.

1958

Summer

After the exhibition "The Life and Works of Galaktion Tabidze" and the readers' conference held at the House of Arts Workers conclude, Sergi Tsuladze, a Doctor of Medical Sciences recently returned from France, approaches Galaktion. He shares insights about what is known in France regarding contemporary Georgian literature.

Source: G. Natroshvili, Due to One Meeting, newspaper Soplis Tskhovreba, December 2, 1982, N 278, p. 3.

1958

Summer

After the exhibition at the House of Arts Workers concludes, he takes a photograph with Giorgi Natroshvili and Sergi Tsuladze.

Source: G. Natroshvili, Due to One Meeting, newspaper Soplis Tskhovreba, December 2, 1982, N 278, p. 3.

September

1958

Until September 1

He notes information about three upcoming creative evenings: the first event he will participate in is dedicated to the 1500th anniversary of Tbilisi's founding, the second to the 41st anniversary of the October Revolution, and the third to the 50th jubilee of his creative career. In the poet's opinion, all three events should take place in October.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-406, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 540.

1958

Until September 1

He plans to meet with engineer Gorskiy on September 1 to discuss adding a third floor to the two-story house he selected on Dzerzhinsky Street, now Ingorokva Street. He intends to explain that he wants to use the additional floor to set up a permanent exhibition showcasing his creative journey.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-406, p. 2-3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 541.

Note: In the source, the housing-rental cooperative association is referred to as "ЖАКТ", an abbreviation of the institution's Russian name: "жилищно-арендное кооперативное товарищество" (Housing and rental cooperative association).

1958

Until September 1

He agrees with Varlam Tavadze, the director of Tbilisi Secondary School №39, on organizing an event at the school dedicated to the 1500th anniversary of the founding of the capital, in which Galaktion will participate. He believes that additional details will need to be clarified during the preparation process for the event in the future, so he notes Varlam Tavadze's phone number in his notebook.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-406, p. 4-5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 541.

1958

Until September 1

He is thinking about the thematic evening planned for October at Secondary School №39, dedicated to the 1500th anniversary of Tbilisi's founding. He intends to select appropriate poems from his works for the event. He plans to read the poem "Tbilisi Tells Different Melodies" as well as works about the city's riverbanks, which are included in two cycles ("May First on the Riverbank" and "May Ninth on the Riverbank") in the sixth volume of his collected works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-406, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 541.

1958

Until September 1

He plans a cycle of literary evenings dedicated to the 50th anniversary of his creative career. The poet estimates that approximately 12 events will be needed. He envisions organizing an exhibition, delivering lectures and presentations, and holding discussions. He believes that these events should be arranged under the name of the Literary Museum.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-545, 10; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXI, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 223;

1958

September 7

He receives a letter from Savle Abuladze, the poet and head of the literary circle at the Tbilisi Teachers' House, once again requesting payment for the poems he translated. Abuladze writes that he has not mentioned this issue to anyone so far and will wait until the end of September for a resolution. He expresses his hope that this unpleasant matter will not damage their nearly fifty-year friendship.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-491; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 326.

1958

After September 9

The publishing house Soviet Georgia is releasing a collection of poems by Georgian poets titled "Our Tbilisi", which includes four poems by Galaktion: an untitled one ("My old dream..."), "The Founding of New Tbilisi", "Tbilisi Tells Different Melodies", and "The Moon of Mtatsminda".

Source: "Our Tbilisi", Sabtchota Sakartvelo, Tbilisi, 1958, p. 250-254.

Note: In its first publication, the untitled poem "My old dream..." was titled "To Tiflis".

Dating: The publication is dated according to the date of signing for printing.

1958

September 10

He is at the Executive Committee of the Tbilisi City Council, which he jokingly calls "Massachusetts". He is waiting for Alexandre Chogovadze, with whom he plans to meet the deputy of engineer Gorskiy to discuss adding a third floor to the two-story house he has selected. While Alexandre Chogovadze is delayed, he observes his surroundings and watches others at work. During the wait, in the corridor of the Executive Committee, he unexpectedly encounters relatives from his aunt's family – the Rusadzes. They ask him to go to Vasil Mzhavanadze's assistant, Givi Meladze, explain their situation, and request help. The poet finds their attitude and this approach to solving the matter irritating.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-406, p. 7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 541.

1958

September 10

While at the Executive Committee of the Tbilisi City Council, he observes the work of engineer Gorskiy's deputy, who is tasked with determining how and in what form a third floor can be added to the two-story building where Galaktion plans to establish a permanent exhibition of his creative journey. The poet is irritated by the deputy's ridiculous, pitiable, yet dangerous demeanour and dislikes how the man tries to use the complexities of organizing documentation as an excuse. While watching all this, he notices a woman bringing a notice about the committee meeting where the matter of interest to the poet is to be decided.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-406, p. 6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 541.

1958

September 10

At dawn, he leaves the house. It is raining and cool outside, a stark contrast to the sweltering heat that enveloped Tbilisi just the day before, still typical of August. He heads to the Executive Committee of the Tbilisi City Council, where he is supposed to meet Alexandre Chogovadze. Since Chogovadze is late, the poet enters the building alone, goes up to the second floor, and finds a quiet spot in the corridor with a nice table. He begins writing about recent events, getting so absorbed in his thoughts and dreams that he doesn't notice Chogovadze's arrival. Together, they ascend to the third floor to meet engineer Gorskiy's deputy, who is expected to present a conclusion on whether Galaktion can add a third floor to the house he selected on Dzerzhinsky Street. During the discussion, it becomes clear that Gorskiy's deputy has forgotten to clarify the matter important to Galaktion. Apologizing, the deputy asks him to return in an hour and a half and to bring workers so they can inspect the building's foundation. Throughout the conversation, the deputy frequently uses the word "paper" to mean documents or paperwork, which catches Galaktion's attention. The poet decides to nickname this man "the paper man" and refers to him as such in his later notes.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-406, p. 10; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 541-542.

1958

September 10

Together with Alexandre Chogovadze and the workers, he goes to the two-story house on Dzerzhinsky Street where he plans to add a third floor for a permanent exhibition space. As they arrive, an elderly woman emerges from a neighbouring house, greets Galaktion, and mentions that her late son, who once worked at a medical facility, knew the poet. The woman expresses joy at the prospect of having an exhibition dedicated to Galaktion's work as her neighbour. Meanwhile, the workers begin digging and inspecting the house's foundation. Watching them, the poet recalls lines from his poem "Hit the Pickaxe!": "Hit the pickaxe, Hit the pickaxe, hey, hit it! Break apart the heavy stones of the foundation". Alexandre Chogovadze observes the work and tells Galaktion that he can now go and bring the appropriate official from the Executive Committee to assess the foundation's condition.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-406, p. 10-12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 542-543.

1958

September 10

Returning from Dzerzhinsky Street, now Ingorokva Street, Galaktion heads back to the Executive Committee of the Tbilisi City Council, where he had been earlier that morning. He plans to meet with engineer Gorskiy's deputy, who is supposed to assess the condition of the two-story house he selected and determine whether a third floor can be added for an exhibition hall. Upon arriving, he finds that the deputy is not in his office. The staff informs him that the deputy has gone somewhere, but they do not know where. Galaktion decides to wait, sits at the deputy's desk, and takes out his notebook to record the day's events. As time passes and the deputy does not appear, the poet continues to wait, overhearing an employee recounting their travels in Svaneti. The story reminds Galaktion of a Svanetian saying he once heard: "Mibinav-lizi-lichedi", meaning "We've begun to move about". Reflecting on his own movements throughout the day to handle various matters, he decides to detail his "comings and goings" and begins writing. At the same time, he wonders if the workers on Dzerzhinsky Street are still continuing their tasks. Observing the employees at the Executive Committee, he concludes that the people working there seem to do nothing all day but talk.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-406, p. 10-12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 543-544.

1958

September 10

Returning from the Executive Committee of the Tbilisi City Council, Galaktion heads back to Dzerzhinsky Street, now Ingorokva Street, where workers are digging around the house he has chosen. He hopes that engineer Gorskiy's deputy, whom he was waiting for at the Executive Committee, might have gone there. However, his expectation proves false. From Dzerzhinsky Street, he goes to the Academy of Sciences, stops by the academy's cafeteria for a snack, and resumes his search for Gorskiy's deputy by returning to the Executive Committee. This time, he finally finds the man at his workplace. Galaktion explains the situation, and they head together to Dzerzhinsky Street to inspect the house's foundation. Upon seeing the trenches dug near the street by the workers, Gorskiy's deputy, visibly annoyed, states that such work should not have been carried out without permission. He then suggests bringing in a trusted engineer the next day to assess the situation. Frustrated by the persistent uncertainty, Galaktion begins to suspect that the "paper man" at the Executive Committee might be complicating matters intentionally, perhaps in hopes of receiving compensation or a bribe. Ultimately, they agree that the next morning at 9:00 a.m., the trusted engineer, along with Galaktion and Alexandre Chogovadze, will visit the selected house to evaluate the foundation's condition.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-406, p. 10-13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 543-544.

1958

September 10

Since obtaining the construction permit was postponed until the next day for reasons beyond his control, Galaktion stops at a café on Lenin Square, now Freedom Square, to gather his strength. Afterward, he heads to the library of the Academy of Sciences, where he stays until 5 p.m. In the reading room, he reviews magazines and newspapers, noticing that Alexandre Chogovadze, with whom he had spent nearly the entire day trying to resolve the exhibition space issue, has settled at his favourite old table. He observes Chogovadze's appearance, noting that he is completely bald and wears his glasses oddly perched on his nose.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-406, p. 10-13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 544.

1958

September 10

In his notebook, he records the day's events, using mostly first-person plural verbs in his narration, which gives the entry a unique tone. The format of the writing is inspired by a Svanetian phrase the poet once heard: "Mibinav-lizi-licedi", meaning "We've begun to move about".

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-406, p. 10-13; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 542-544.

1958

September 11

Early in the morning, he wakes up and prepares to continue resolving the tasks he started the previous day. He puts on a new suit, carries a "lucky trolleybus number" in his pocket, and heads to the Executive Committee of the Tbilisi City Council. On the second floor, he finds the same table where he sat the previous day while waiting for Alexandre Chogovadze. He sits down again and checks the time, noticing it is 9:30 a.m., but Chogovadze has not yet arrived, despite their agreement to meet at this time. The poet notices old issues of Zarya Vostoka and Komunisti, which feature articles about the Georgian Culture and Arts Decade held in Moscow in March 1958. He browses the newspapers, reading Irakli Abashidze's article "Literary Georgia" in Zarya Vostoka and Ioseb Grishashvili's "We Were Brought Together by a Love of Poetry" in Komunisti. He finds both authors' tone boastful, which provokes his ironic attitude. Eventually, Alexandre Chogovadze arrives, and they go together to engineer Gorski's deputy to clarify who will inspect the foundation and walls of the house on Dzerzhinsky Street. However, the deputy refuses to follow through on his promise from the previous day and now insists they find a wall-drilling device called a schlumberger. Seeing no other option, Galaktion begins searching for the tool. He recalls that it might be available at the Stalin Factory, where he was once attached as a member of a writers' brigade in the early 1930s. After securing the tool, he inspects the factory, noticing that everyone has already left. With the help of a guard, he retraces his steps and tours the entire factory in 15 minutes. Anticipating that he might need additional equipment from the factory in the future, he notes the workshop manager's name in his notebook.

He returns with the schlumberger but cannot yet use the tool. To avoid carrying it around, he temporarily leaves it at different places, sometimes in a pharmacy storage room and other times at the Academy of Sciences cafeteria. He reflects that his efforts were in vain and that the struggle to obtain the tool deserves its own detailed account. Eventually, he hands the schlumberger over to engineer Gorskiy's deputy. Despite securing the tool, he remains dissatisfied, feeling that the entire day was unproductive and exceedingly exhausting.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-406, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 545. G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-405, p. 29-30; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 539.

1958

September 11

At the end of the day, he goes to the Zarya Vostoka editorial office to inquire about his due honorarium. The staff informs him that payments will not be made in September and advises him to return starting from the first of the following month.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-406, p. 14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 545.

1958

After September 11

The publishing house Soviet Writer releases Sergi Tchilaia's Book in Russian, "Galaktion Tabidze: A Critical-Biographical Essay". In this work, Sergi Tchilaia reiterates the views on Galaktion's works that he had expressed in earlier publications.

Source: С. Чилая, Галактион Табидзе. Критико-биографический очерк, 1958, p. 3-120.

Dating: The Book was signed for printing on September 11, 1958.

1958

September 12

He reads the newspaper Tbilisi, notes articles of interest, and writes down their titles: "Rare Manuscripts", "The Quality of Publications", "The Movement of Streets".

Source: MGL, t-552. newspaper Tbilisi, September 12, 1958, №204, p. 1-2.

1958

September 12

He continues working on the task he began in previous days, trying to determine whether it will be possible to add a third floor for an exhibition hall to the building on Dzerzhinsky Street. He meets with Alexandre Chogovadze, who had accompanied him for two days to the Executive Committee of the Tbilisi City Council to obtain the construction permit. This time, Chogovadze excuses himself, claiming he has other matters to attend to, and leaves shortly after their meeting. He assures the poet that he will return soon, but Galaktion is convinced that the promise will not be kept. After Chogovadze's departure, Galaktion also returns home, changes his clothes, rests, and regains his focus. He begins contemplating the thematic creative evening planned at Tbilisi Secondary School №39, which will be dedicated to the 1500th anniversary of the city's founding.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-406, p. 16; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 545.

1958

After September 12

He is working on resolving the technical and formal issues required for adding a third floor to the two-story building on Dzerzhinsky Street. In his notebook, he notes that the house's wall needs to be drilled in two places by workers sent from the Executive Committee of the Tbilisi City Council. Additionally, he plans to find a large hammer, which he believes will be necessary for the work. After reaching an agreement with the relevant officials, he also intends to draft the text for the construction permit for the additional floor.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-409, p. 5; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 549.

1958

After September 12

In the name of the Candidate of Technical Sciences, Engineer Melia, he drafts a memorandum in which Melia informs Senior Engineer Tevzadze that the house at 13 Dzerzhinsky Street has undergone the requested inspection. The findings confirm that it is structurally feasible to add a third floor to the two-story building, where the National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze, plans to establish an exhibition pavilion.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-409, p. 6-7; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 550.

1958

September 15

He plans to meet at 8:30 a.m. with Givi Meladze, assistant to Vasil Mzhavanadze, the First Secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Georgia, to discuss the 50th-anniversary jubilee events celebrating his creative work. Additionally, he intends to ask Meladze for assistance in obtaining the permit needed to add a third floor to the two-story building on Dzerzhinsky Street.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-407, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 546.

Note: In the source, Givi Meladze is mentioned only by his last name.

1958

After September 15

The city administration denies permission to add a third floor to the two-story house at 13 Dzerzhinsky Street, citing the need for a recommendation from the Writers' Union, which, however, refrains from providing such a recommendation.

Source: N. Tabidze, Galaktion, newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, December 3, 1982, N 49, p. 8.

October

1958

October 3

He writes a poem “Vaso Abashidze” (“I remember his small apartment...”).

Source: Autograph, MGL, №7626; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 312.

1958

October 3

He writes a poem “Taso Abashidze” (“Outside, the rain is falling...”).

Source: Autograph, MGL, №7626; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 312.

1958

October 4

He visits Lidia Megrelidze, who shows him a Book gifted that morning by Ioseb Grishashvili, inscribed with the dedication: “To my beloved writer, Lidia Megrelidze (“Mimkrali”), as a token of respect, I. Gr. 1958, October 8”. This displeases him.

Source: MGL, Fq-168, Lidia Megrelidze’s inscription on Ioseb Grishashvili’s Book “Only Love”, Tbilisi, 1958.

1958

October 5

In the morning, Galaktion, together with his nephew, Nodar Tabidze, goes to Rustaveli Avenue and withdraws money from the savings bank. He quietly slips a portion into his pocket, then takes another stack, counts 300 roubles, and gives 100 roubles to Nodar. Nodar finds the amount too little. He thinks that 160,000 roubles will come to his uncle this year from just one publishing house, and if “Zarya Vostoka” also publishes his book, it will bring in another 50,000 to 80,000 roubles. If he holds an evening event at the opera in December, he will have additional income from that as well. Therefore, he considers giving only 100 roubles an act of stinginess. On the street, they meet Nani, the daughter of Galaktion’s cousin, Agabo Adeishvili, who has been accepted into the Pushkin Institute. The relatives greet each other and continue on their way. On the way, they stop by a photographer on Rustaveli Avenue, who recalls his first meeting with Galaktion. In 1941, before leaving for the war, he and his friend were sitting in a diner when they saw Galaktion. Galaktion blessed them with the words of Vazha-Pshavela, saying: “Remember, we are few, take care of yourselves, do not fall on the bayonet”. Galaktion stops several times along the way and drinks a small glass of cognac each time. Galaktion is angry at Vasil Mzhavanadze, who considers Irakli Abashidze a great poet. He says that this very situation is what Grigol Robakidze escaped from.

Source: Nodar Tabidze’s record, GTDA, №1448, p.1.

1958

October 11

He reviews the 1908 issues of the magazine Kvali and focuses on the September 28 edition, which features his untitled poem “Thick Cloud”. This poem is particularly dear to the poet, as it represents his first publication, alongside the untitled piece “The Moon Shines Brightly”, printed in the September 28, 1908, issue of the newspaper Amirani. Observing the date on Kvali, Galaktion reflects that more than half a century has passed since his literary debut.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-409, p. 12; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 550.

1958

Until October 12

At the Rustaveli Theatre, he meets Sergo Gersamia and discusses his upcoming jubilee on October 12, mentioning his intention to visit the theatre museum to gather exhibition materials for the event. The poet feels a certain discomfort about having to personally collect and prepare these materials. Likely due to this unease, he does not follow through on his plan and does not go to the museum.

Source: Sergo Gersamia, “Galaktion Tabidze”, collection “Galaktionology”, X, Tbilisi, 2024, p. 389-406.

1958

October 7-13

He participates in the Asia-Africa Writers’ Conference held at the State Opera and Ballet Theatre in Tashkent and explores the Book exhibition organized alongside the event.

Source: L. Kvirtskhalia, Meetings with Galaktion, Kvlividze, Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 279-280.

1958

October 15 or later

On the third page of the newspaper Komunisti, he publishes a forty-eight-line untitled poem beginning with “Once, by the city hall or the bridgehead...”.

Source: G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book VII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 402.

1958

October 17

The Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka publishes a translation of Galaktion Tabidze’s poem “For Your Jubilee”.

Source: За твой юбилей (Стих) Г. Табидзе, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1958, 17 октября, №242, с.1.

1958

October 26 or later

He writes an untitled poem, “Time has broken the strap...”.

Source: MGL, d-637, 22; G. Tabidze, AE in 25 books, Book XXII, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 463.

Dating: The poem is inscribed on the 26 October 1958 issue of the newspaper Lelo.

November

1958

November 7

He listens to a radio program dedicated to the 41st anniversary of the October Socialist Revolution. His attention is caught by the host's impressive baritone voice, and he becomes curious about the host's identity.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-408, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 546.

1958

November 7

He outlines his three-year plan in his notebook, prioritizing key objectives. His primary goal is to publish an academic nine-volume collection of his works, with each volume overseen by a dedicated editor, alongside producing academic editions of his individual collections. He also plans to collaborate with composers to create songs based on his poetry and, with the assistance of the Artists' Union, to gather existing portraits, illustrations, and visual materials related to his life and works. He envisions close collaboration with literary circles, including renaming the literary group on University Street in his honour. Additionally, he hopes to establish libraries bearing his name in Tobanieri, Borjomi, and Navtlughi, and to have a street in Ortachala, Tbilisi, named after him. He proposes erecting a monument at Komsomol Square featuring seven books to symbolize the legacy of Georgia's greatest poets: Shota Rustaveli, Davit Guramishvili, Nikoloz Baratashvili, Akaki Tsereteli, Ilia Chavchavadze, Vazha-Pshavela, and himself. He also notes that his granddaughter, Marine Pirtskhalava, should prepare a wall newspaper titled Marine's Gazeti. Lastly, he expresses a desire to establish "Galaktionology", a specialized field of literary studies dedicated to analysing his biography and works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-408, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 547.

Note: The source does not specify the nature of the monument of seven books, and Marine Pirtskhalava is mentioned only by her first name.

December

1958

December 5

At Shalva Radiani's request, he writes an autobiography, revises it himself, and sends it.

Source: Ts. Khetereli, Close to Galaktion, newspaper Tbilisi, February 10, 1981, N 33, p. 3.

1958

December 17

He submits a formal request to the director of the publishing house Soviet Georgia, stating that he is presenting a typewritten copy of his selected works in a single volume. He requests that it be published in honour of the 50th anniversary of his literary career.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-229; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 135.

1958

December 18 or later

He receives a letter from a mining engineer who lives next door to the late writer Daria Akhvlediani. The sender reproaches him, stating that if not for their own efforts, neither Galaktion nor the Writers' Union would have taken care of the funerals of Daria Akhvlediani and her son, Ilia. Regarding the support given to Daria's other son, Otar Akhvlediani, in securing ownership of a kitchen, bathroom, balcony, heating system, water supply, and courtyard – properties that he later sold – the sender considers this a disservice to Galaktion. They argue that Otar was accustomed to a reckless lifestyle, which eventually led to his imprisonment. If Galaktion had truly wanted to help, they assert, he should have found him a job in a factory where he would have been provided with housing and forced to keep working to avoid becoming homeless. The sender also recalls an incident from 1942 when, at 11 p.m., Galaktion, while intoxicated, allegedly struck one of three standing generals with his cane at the corner of Elbakidze Rise and Rustaveli Avenue, nearly knocking him over. Galaktion quickly fled downhill, but the generals drew their weapons, and, according to the sender, if they had not intervened to calm the situation, Galaktion might have been killed. At the end of the letter, based on these accusations, the sender blames Galaktion for the misfortune that befell their family.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-495-8; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 331-332.

1958

December 22

At a literary evening in Batumi, his Book "Gold in the Azure of Adjara" is discussed. Poet Giorgi Salukvadze presents a report titled "The Sea in Galaktion's Poetry". Galaktion recites poems, including "1950", "Moon of Mtatsminda", and others.

Source: L. Kikilashvili, To Those Pink Peaches, magazine Droscha, 1992, №8, p. 19.

1958

December 26

In the newspaper Tbilisi, Teimuraz Jangulashvili's article "Half a Century of Creative Life" is published. The author responds to the release of the eighth volume of the poet's works and briefly describes the main themes of Galaktion's lyric poetry.

Source: T. Jangulashvili, Half a Century of Creative Life, Newspaper Literaturuli Gazeti, 1958, №52 (December 26), p. 3.

1958

December 26

The newspaper Tbilisi publishes an announcement stating that Galaktion Tabidze's jubilee evening will be held on December 29 at the Zakaria Paliashvili Opera and Ballet Theater. In honour of this significant occasion, collections of the poet's selected works will be published by Zarya Vostoka and the Soviet Literature Publishing House. Additionally, the Shota Rustaveli

Institute of Georgian Literature has commenced preparations for the academic publication of the poet's works.

Source: Galaktion Tabidze's Creative Evening, newspaper Literaturuli Gazeti, 1958, №52 (December 26), p. 3.

1958

Until December 28

He writes a poem "Seven New Years" ("Comrades! The rain, with the most dreadful hunger...").

Source: Autograph, MGL, №8213-8214; G. Tabidze, works in twelve volumes, vol. VI, Tbilisi, 1968, p. 316. Dating: It is dated according to the first publication.

1958

December 28

The newspaper Komunisti publishes the poem "Seven New Years" ("Comrades! With the terrible dirt than the rain..."). Alongside it, a group photo taken by Vladimir Ginzburg is printed with a caption stating that "The National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze, recites his new poem 'Seven New Years' to the members of Guram Chaduneli's Communist Labour Brigade at the Tbilisi Locomotive Construction Plant".

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1958, №300, p. 3.

Note: In the article, only the initial of Guram Chaduneli's name is mentioned.

1958

December 28

In the newspaper Komunisti, an informational announcement is published, stating that on December 29, a jubilee evening dedicated to the 50th anniversary of the creative career of the National Poet of Georgia, Galaktion Tabidze, will be held at the Tbilisi Opera and Ballet Theatre.

Source: Newspaper Komunisti, 1958, №300, p. 3.

1958

December 28

In the newspaper Komunisti, Giorgi Margvelashvili's article "Galaktion Tabidze (On the 50th Anniversary of His Creative Work)" is published. The critic discusses the creative kinship between Galaktion and Alexander Blok, noting that these two deeply national and unique poets perceived the revolution similarly, as an element of renewal. According to the critic, these authors also share a common past: initially representatives of the Symbolist school, they soon felt the power of the new era and radically changed their poetic paths. Margvelashvili cites fragments from Galaktion's poem "The Epoch" and notes that certain lines reveal the influence of Alexander Blok's poems "Revenge" and "The Twelve". He specifically discusses the poem "John Reed" to show how the revolution expanded and refreshed Galaktion's inner world, as well as the content, style, and poetics of his work. According to Margvelashvili, the changes are so significant that it is impossible to recognize the author of the Symbolist collection "Artistic Flowers" in this poem. He argues that in subsequent years, the poetics of "John Reed" became characteristic of Galaktion's work. The article also highlights that, despite his grey hair, the poet has not lost his youthful spirit, as evidenced by his recent poems: “Praise to Peace”, “Hymn to Nikortsminda”, “The Return of Imereti”, and many others.

Source: G. Margvelashvili, “Galaktion Tabidze (On the 50th Anniversary of His Creative Work)”, Newspaper Komunisti, 1958, №300, p. 3.

1958

December 29

A jubilee evening celebrating the 50th anniversary of Galaktion’s literary career is held at the Tbilisi Opera and Ballet Theatre.

Source: T. Jangulashvili, “A Leap Toward the Sky”, magazine Tsiskari, 1992, №8, p. 108. Sh. Shotadze, Galaktion Tabidze: Due to the 50th Anniversary of His Creative Work, newspaper Sabtchota Ajara, №255 (December 30), p. 2.

1958

December 29

In the newspaper Tbilisi, Eter Shushania’s article “The Prominent Soviet Poet” is published, presenting a literary portrait of Galaktion.

Source: E. Shushania, The Eminent Soviet Poet, newspaper Tbilisi, 1958, №293 (December 29), p. 3.

1958

December 29

At the jubilee evening held at the Opera Theatre, the Central Committee of the Georgian Komsomol presents a three-stringed lute adorned with triangular plaques.

Source: L. Kheladze, Everyone Has Something to Remember, newspaper Literaturuli Sakartvelo, August 10, 1983, №33, p. 3.

1958

December 29

The Kutaisi-based photographer Davit Mkheidze dedicates an impromptu verse: “I come with a full satchel, do not let me leave empty-handed, fill it with your books, and may you live for many years!”

Source: V. Javakhadze, “Unknown. Apology of Galaktion Tabidze”, Tbilisi, 2020, p. 148.

1958

December 30

In the newspaper Sabtchota Adjara, under the pseudonym “Sh. Shotadze”, Shota Kuridze’s article “Galaktion Tabidze: On the 50th Anniversary of His Creative Work” is published. The article notes that on December 29, an event dedicated to the 50th anniversary of the poet’s literary career was held at the Opera and Ballet Theatre. The author briefly reviews Galaktion’s poetry, emphasizing that readers now refer to the poet by his first name alone, a testament to immense love and recognition.

Source: Sh. Shotadze, Galaktion Tabidze: Due to the 50th Anniversary of His Creative Work, newspaper, Sabtchota Ajara, 1958, №255 (December 30), p. 2.

1958

Second half of December

On Rustaveli Avenue, Galaktion accidentally encounters writer and journalist Ivane Davitiani and inquires who translated his poem “I and the Night” into Armenian. Davitiani tells him that the poem has already been translated impeccably by M. Karimiyan. Galaktion then asks how the phrase “I and the Night” sounds in Armenian, and when Davitian responds, Galaktion thanks him and repeats the phrase “Yes u Gisher” several times along the way to make sure he doesn’t forget it.

Source: I. Davitiani, Yes you Gisher, newspaper Gamarjveba (Gori), November 29, 1973, N 129, p. 3.

1957 - 1958

At the Shota Rustaveli Institute of Literature, an editorial board is formed for the academic publication of Galaktion Tabidze’s works, consisting of Solomon Kubaneishvili, Dimitri Benashvili, and Akaki Khintibidze.

Source: A. Khintibidze, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 304.

1958

In Moscow, Galaktion Tabidze’s “Verses and Poems” is published in Russian, including the cycles: “From Early Lyrics”, “The Epoch”, “Poems About Europe”, “Poems of the War Years”, “Clusters of Life”, and “Poems”.

Source: Табидзе Г.В. Стихотворения и поэмы, Циклы: Из ранней лирики; Эпоха; Стихи о Европе; Стихи военных лет; Гроздья жизни; Поэмы, Пер. с груз., Москва, Гослитиздат, 1958.

1958

He visits the State Publishing House, where he meets Akaki Khintibidze, who has been summoned to review his Book “Issues of Poetic Art”. The young critic gathers his courage and offers Galaktion to read the review, as one part of his work is dedicated to “Galaktion’s Rhyme”. After reading each paragraph, the poet, visibly pleased, stands up and shakes the author’s hand.

Source: A. Khintibidze, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 305.

1958

He takes a new twelve-page notebook for making notes, writes the word “Heart” on the cover, and inside the notebook, he records expressions, idioms, and lexical units related to the word “Heart”. In some cases, he also includes their Russian meanings in parentheses.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-411, p. 1-6; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 552-553.

1958

He reads "The Knight in the Panther's Skin" and notes down in his notebook the lines that mention the word "Heart" or lexical units derived from it.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-411, p. 8-14; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 554-561.

1959

Until 1959

From the main pharmacy administration's control-analytical laboratory located on the lower floor, a strong smell of medicines wafts up to his apartment. Galaktion goes to the laboratory, complains to the staff about it, and asks whether they are preparing some kind of poison. One of the employees, Raisa Chikhladze, humorously responds that they don't have any poison and, even if they did, they wouldn't use it on him.

Source: A. Shushanashvili, Galaktion's Death (Review of the Investigation Case), Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 19, p. 374; Ivlika Mikadze's Explanation, Galaktion's Death (Investigative Documents), magazine Samartali, 1992, №1, p. 53.

Dating: According to the explanation's author, the incident occurred a few months before the poet's death.

Until 1959

At the entrance of the Writers' House, he meets Andro Tevzadze and Lavrosi Kalandadze, who are discussing hunting. Galaktion invites Lavrosi Kalandadze to his place in Tskneti to hunt tigers.

Source: A. Ratiani, Recollections about Galaktion, Magazine Mnatobi, 1996, № 9-10, p. 137.

Dating: According to the memoir's author, the incident took place a few months before the poet's death.

January

1959

January 1 or earlier

He receives a warm and heartfelt New Year's greeting from Mikheil Mamulashvili, sent from Mtskheta.

Source: Autograph, MGL, 24551-493; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XXIV, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 333.

Dating: We take the poet's last New Year as the upper time limit.

1959

January or later

Mikhail Vadboldsky paints his portrait wearing a coat and hat.

Source: FG. Chikobava, Galaktion and Art, Art, Tbilisi, 1959, N 4, p. 35.

1959

January 1

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, Andro Pataraia's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Happy New Year, Homeland!" is published.

Source: С новым годом, отчизна! (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз А. Патараия, Заря Востока, Тб., 1959, 1 января, №1.

1959

January 3

He submits a detailed autobiography to the Writers' Union.

Source: MGL, WUF №28-36.

1959

January 7

In the Russian newspaper Vecherny Tbilisi, Klara Arsenieva's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "I Love the Rain of Abkhazia..." is published.

Source: Абхазский дождь люблю... (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. К. Арсеновой, Вечерний Тбилиси, Тбилиси, 1959, 7 января, N 5.

1959

January 18

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, Andro Pataraia's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "The Poet's Word" is published.

Source: Слово поэта (Стихи), Пер. А. Патараия, Заря Востока, 1959, 18 января, №16.

1959

January 19

He begins treatment at the hospital of the Fourth Department of the Ministry of Health of the Georgian SSR, under the care of Dr. Gabriel Pondoev.

Source: Gabriel Pondoev's Interrogation Protocol, Galaktion's Death (Investigative Documents), magazine Samartali, 1992, №1, p. 51.

1959

After January 19

In Literaturuli Gazeti, a cycle of quatrains by Teimuraz Jangulashvili is published, one of which is dedicated to Galaktion.

Source: T. Jangulashvili, "A Leap Toward the Sky", magazine Tsiskari, 1992, №8, p. 108.

1959

January 20

He attends the Fifth Congress of Georgian Writers, where delegates for the Third Congress of Soviet Writers are being elected. Galaktion is not among those nominated. At the end of the meeting, the chairman asks if anyone wishes to speak. Shalva Dadiani requests the floor and states that, due to illness, he will be unable to attend the congress and suggests that another worthy candidate go in his place. While saying this, he directs his gaze toward Galaktion. Galaktion waits tensely for the response of the officials present at the meeting. Vasil Mzhavanadze declares that Shalva Dadiani's absence at the congress is out of the question, and with that, the meeting concludes.

Source: T. Jangulashvili, "A Leap Toward the Sky", magazine Tsiskari, 1992, №8, p. 109.

1959

January 28

In the Russian newspaper Sovetskaya Abkhazia, Andro Pataraiia's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "I Follow the Path Indicated by My Native Party Toward Victory" is published.

Source: Мне Партией родной указан путь к победе (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. А. Патарая, Советская Абхазия, Сухуми, 1959, 28 января, №20.

1959

January

The wife's - Nino Kvirikadze's - granddaughter, Marine Pirtskhalava, gifts him the notebook with the inscription: "In memory of my dear grandfather from Marine". The poet then adds a brief impromptu.

Source: The notebook preserved in Galaktion's Tbilisi House-Museum, №394.

1959

January

At the café upstairs, Guram Rcheulishvili and Nugzar Tsereteli are celebrating a friend's birthday. Suddenly, Galaktion enters wearing a long black coat and a thick grey scarf. He walks up to the counter and orders water. The friends invite him to join their table with respect and humility. He agrees and drinks some champagne. Soon, other members of the table join them. Upbeat Galaktion shows interest in the young people's professions. Guram Rcheulishvili answers in Russian and introduces himself as a merchant, to which Galaktion smiles ironically. Guram and Nugzar inquire about his attitude toward Georgian and world poetry, especially Symbolist and Tsisperkantseli poets. Galaktion gladly satisfies their curiosity and joins the conversation with enthusiasm. Then, as if recalling something, he suddenly stands up and decides to leave. He warmly bids everyone farewell, and jokingly smiles at Guram Rcheulishvili, saying, "This one looks a bit too 'Kartuli'".

Source: N. Tsereteli, Meetings with Immortal Galaktion, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 174 – 182.

1959

January

The children's literature publishing house Sablitgami decides to release anthologies of the best poems by leading poets, with autobiographies of the authors instead of introductions. The management of the publishing house wishes for the first Book in the series to be Galaktion Tabidze's "One Hundred Poems". The director of Sablitgami, Khuta Berulava, informs Galaktion of this decision and asks him to prepare a text for the autobiography to be included in the collection.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-414, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 563; Kh. Berulava, Recollection, Giorgi Leonidze: Jubilee Collection, Tbilisi, 1970, p. 296.

1959

January

In the magazine Literaturnaya Gruzia, Shalva Radiani's article "Galaktion Tabidze's Lyricism" is published, where the author analyses Galaktion Tabidze's immense role in the development of modern Georgian poetry. It is noted that his work is a clear example of how a poet should serve their homeland. Galaktion is one of those who enthusiastically embraced the new life and stood on the side of the revolution, which fundamentally changed the themes of his poetry.

Source: Sh. Radiani, Galaktion Tabidze's Lyricism, newspaper Literaturnaia Gruzia, 1959, №1, p. 86-96.

February

1959

February 5

In the Russian newspaper Vecherniy Tbilisi, Boris Serebryakov's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Follow Lenin" is published.

Source: Следуй за Лениным!... (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. Б. Серебрякова, Вечерний Тбилиси, 1959, 5 февраля, №30.

1959

Until February 6

Galaktion Tabidze is preparing a collection of poems titled "One Hundred Poems" to be published by the Children's Literature Publishing House. The following works will be included in the collection: "Long Life to Those Peaches, Long Life to Those Peach Blossoms", "Candles", ("Will You Remember..."), "Thirteen Years Old", "The Scythe is screaming", "Autumn is Coming", "Blame the Wine", "Autumn Day", "Autumn Fragment", "Aspens", "Autumn in the Monastery of Innocent Conception", "Sadness About You", "The Beautiful Woman Cursed Me", "Two Bells", "You Light Up Again with Excitement", "Desert", "Reconciliation", "Viols", ("I Will Remember Those Pink Peaches..."), "Snow", "The Wind Rocks as the Harp", "I and the Night", "Beyond Fate", "I Deserve It Anyway", "Mary", "You by the Seaside", "Through Mary's Eyes", "The Farther You Are", "Oak", "Ephemeral", "The Walnut Tree on Mtatsminda", "It Is Not Worth One Tear", ("This Raven Will Fly Over..."), "Sing Something for Me", "Fields", ("Here Will Be Erected a Monument to the Poet..."), "Again Ephemeral", ("The Palm Branch..."), "To a Russian Poet", "Without Love", "In the Train", "What Time Is It?" ("Sun of June, Sun of June..."), "Farewell", "The Grave-digger", "The Wind Blows", "The Farewell", "The Mountains of Guria", "The Heart

Has Been Renewed”, “Prologue to One Hundred Poems”, “Flags Quickly”, “A Few Days in Petrograd”, “The Turbid Wind”, “Her Eyes Were Left Open”, “The Ship ‘Daland’”, “We Poets of Georgia”, “The City Underwater”, “Revolutionary Georgia”, “My Kutaisi”, “Do Not Leave the Poem Alone”,  (“I Remember Childhood, Far, Far Away...”),  (“The Roads Are Impassable...”), “Our Luminary Is a Fire’s Colour”, “Inscription on the Book ‘Manon Lescaut’”, “Those Days Deserve a Monument”, “My Homeland, My Land”, “To My Homeland”,  (“Vanity! I Feel...”),  (“Let Us Say: As a Mountain...”),  (“From the Tale of the Moon...”), “Praise to Nikortsminda”, “I Write Someone Meskhi Poet”,  (“The oaks, dressed in chokhas, placed their acorns in jars...”),  (“Why Do You Remind Me...”),  (“You Are Leaving...”), and “My Song”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-414, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 563; Galaktion, One Hundred Poems, Tbilisi, 1959.

1959

Until February 6

He hands over the layout of “One Hundred Poems” to Khuta Berulava, the director of the children’s literary publishing house, and promises to bring the autobiography to be included in the Book as well.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-414, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 563.

1959

February 6

He is at the State Publishing House, trying to resolve the issue of his book’s publication. He learns that it was sent some time ago to the printing house located on Orjonikidze Street for printing. After this, he enters the publishing house’s accounting office, leaves a request, and asks for his due royalty to be transferred.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-414, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 563.

1959

February 6

It is a snowy day. He is at home, writing in his notebook the issues he plans to clarify or resolve in the near future. First and foremost, he is interested in the situation at the publishing house Zarya Vostoka, which is supposed to release a Book of his poems and verses dedicated to the 50th anniversary of his creative work, titled “Half a Century”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-414, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 563.

Note: The title of the Book published by the Zarya Vostoka publishing house is “Полвека” (Half A Century).

1959

February 6

He wants to find out when the publishing house Zarya Vostoka plans to pay royalties for the poems included in the Russian-language anthology “Tbilisi in Poetry”. He intends to contact the accounting department of Zarya Vostoka to get a specific answer regarding the royalties.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-414, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 563.

Note: The title of the Book is "Тбилиси в поэзии", and it is dedicated to the 1500th anniversary of the founding of Tbilisi.

1959

February 6

He is interested in the situation at the printing house located on Orjonikidze Street, when his large collected works will be published, or what exactly is hindering the book's release. He remembers that recently, during his visit to the State Publishing House, he saw an employee from the same printing house, Giorgi Maisuradze, who had specifically called the printing house to help him, but he could not find out anything.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-414, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 563.

1959

February 6

He plans to buy a box of Borjomi and also intends to go to the pharmacy to purchase medicine for his headache and flu.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-414, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 563.

1959

February 6

He plans to visit the Writers' Union and find out when the Fifth Congress of Soviet Writers of Georgia will take place. He is curious to know whether his name is among the twenty-five delegates who will represent the Writers' Union of Georgia at the congress in Moscow.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-414, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 563.

1959

February 6

The director of the Children's Literature Publishing House, Khuta Berulava, asks him to prepare and bring in his autobiography, which will be included in the poetic collection "One Hundred Poems" that Galaktion had recently submitted. The poet promises to deliver the autobiography the next morning. Galaktion remembers that he had already prepared the text of the autobiography, but as he starts searching for it, he cannot find it.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-414, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 563.

1959

February 6

He is at the Literary Repository of the Writers' Union of Georgia but is unable to submit the necessary documentation to receive a loan.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-414, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 563.

1959

February 6

He is thinking about his poetic collection “One Hundred Poems”, which was submitted for publication by the Children’s Literature Publishing House. He believes that it is necessary to keep an eye on the publication process. He suspects that the editing of the collection may be assigned to Revaz Orjonikidze.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-414, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 563.

Note: Revaz Orjonikidze is referred to in the source as Kurchala.

1959

February 6

Giorgi Chikobava, who had been Galaktion’s literary assistant for some time, visits him. They talk about literature and writers. Giorgi shares stories from the editorial office of the magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba, particularly intrigues involving the editor Otar Egadze and the responsible secretary of the magazine, Vano Tsulukidze.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-414, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 563.

1959

February 6

He plans to have a poster printed at the printing house with the Latin inscription “Galaktionology”. He intends to organize an event that will be attended by writers, representatives of various fields of art, and literary scholars, where he will discuss the necessity of a specialized branch of literary studies – Galaktionology – that focuses on his biography and creative work.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-414, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 563.

1959

February 7

It is a snowy day. Galaktion is thinking about his future plans. First and foremost, he remembers the publishing house Zarya Vostoka, where the Book of Russian translations of his poems and verses, “Half a Century”, is being printed. This collection of translations is dedicated to the 50th anniversary of the poet’s creative career, and therefore, Galaktion is eagerly awaiting it. He is curious about the progress of the book’s publication and plans to visit Zarya Vostoka on February 20 to find out more. At the same time, he intends to resolve the issue of his due royalties, which should have been paid for the poems included in the Russian-language anthology “Tbilisi in Poetry”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-414, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 563.

1959

February 7

He plans to visit the first printing house located on Orjonikidze Street to find out when his large collected works of poems will be printed. He also intends to visit the Writers’ Union to confirm when the Fifth Congress of Soviet Writers of Georgia will take place.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-414, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 563.

1959

February 7

He plans to prepare his autobiography and submit it to the Children's Literature Publishing House, where a new collection of his poems, "One Hundred Poems", is being prepared for publication.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-414, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 563.

1959

February 7

He surveys his study and notices that there is much to be organized. While inspecting the room, he finds a poster that he once had printed at the printing house, with the Russian inscription "Galaktionology". He also unexpectedly discovers that the calendar he had been searching for was actually tucked inside a book.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-414, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 564.

1959

February 7

At the request of the director of the Children's Literature Publishing House, Khuta Berulava, he begins writing his autobiography. As soon as he writes the birth year – 1891 – he remembers that a few months ago, while sorting through documents at the Tskneti archive, he found a document in which his birth year was specifically recorded as 1891. He is curious about where this document is now.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-414, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 564.

1959

February 7

He goes to the State Literary Publishing House and, by chance, meets Otar Egadze, the editor of the magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba, in front of the building. He is irritated by his behaviour and later writes in his notebook that he pretended to be puffed-up.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-414, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 564.

1959

February 7

In his notebook, he writes down the name of the translator and poet Yuri Luchansky and thinks about suggesting that he translate his works.

Source: G. Tabidze's record, MGL, d-414, p. 2; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 564.

1959

Until February 8

He meets Sergi Tchilaia, who tells him that his monograph, written in Russian and published in 1958, “Galaktion Tabidze: A Critical-Biographical Essay”, will be presented at the Writers’ Congress in Moscow.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-414, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 564.

1959

February 8

It’s a sunny day, he goes up to Tbilisi and works in his office. He thinks that for the anniversary, he should prepare a newspaper, and nothing else is needed.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-414, p. 3; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 564.

1959

After February 6

He goes to the Children’s Literature Publishing House, speaks with the director, Khuta Berulava, and apologizes for not being able to deliver the autobiography for the upcoming collection “One Hundred Poems”. He explains that he really tried to write the autobiography, but he couldn’t, because “it just won’t come out”.

Source: G. Tabidze’s record, MGL, d-414, p. 1; G. Tabidze, AE, Book XIX, Tbilisi, 2008, p. 563.

Kh. Berulava, Recollection, Giorgi Leonidze: Jubilee Collection, Tbilisi, 1970, p. 296.

Dating: Khuta Berulava asked to write an autobiography on February 6.

1959

Until February 11

He notes rhyming words in his notebook.

Source: The notebook preserved in Galaktion’s Tbilisi House-Museum, №394.

Dating: The entries are made on the very first pages of the notebook, with the earliest recorded entry in this notebook dated February 11.

1959

Until February 11

He constructs the poem “მიყვარს მე ეს ხეობა, მისი ვრცელსახეობა...” (“I Love This Valley, Its Vastness...”) based on rhyming words.

Source: The notebook preserved in Galaktion’s Tbilisi House-Museum, №394.

Dating: The entries are made on the very third page of the notebook, with the earliest recorded entry in this notebook dated February 11.

1959

February 11 or earlier

He notes in his notebook what is needed to organize his creative evening. The list includes: an organizing committee for the event, a wall newspaper, representatives from the Writers’ Union, a commemorative photo, a poster designer, and an exhibition of books and newspapers.

Source: The notebook preserved in Galaktion’s Tbilisi House-Museum, №394.

Dating: The plan is dated February 11.

1959

February 11 or later

In his alphabetical notebook, under the letter “L,” he notes that the word “logy” means “study” and lists compound words containing this component, such as “geology” and “biology”.

Source: The notebook preserved in Galaktion’s Tbilisi House-Museum, №394.

Dating: The entry in the notebook appears after the February 11 plan.

1959

After February 15

In the magazine Mnatobi, Giorgi Margvelashvili’s article “Galaktion Tabidze” is published, where the author seeks to present a picture of the poet’s creative evolution. According to Margvelashvili, Galaktion was a student of Akaki Tsereteli and a key figure in establishing a new poetic culture. His innovation, however, was not achieved without difficulty, as he tested the paths laid out by others before finding his own voice. Margvelashvili highlights that, ultimately, Galaktion managed to overcome the poetic clichés established by Akaki’s followers, continued the living traditions of classical poetry, and broke free from modernist conventions, leaving a distinct mark on Georgian literature. The critic notes that many of the poems in Galaktion’s first Book are examples of “poetic banality”. Margvelashvili also addresses the question of whether Galaktion’s literary predecessor was Baratashvili or Akaki, agreeing with Simon Chikovani’s view that Galaktion, by nature of his lyricism, belongs to Akaki’s school, and that Baratashvili’s influence on him was superficial. Regarding Galaktion’s attitude toward Symbolism, the critic adds little new or conceptual insight but discusses in greater detail the relationship between Galaktion and the revolution. He points out a significant similarity between Galaktion and Alexander Blok in their treatment of revolution, as both viewed it as a force of renewal. According to Margvelashvili, “Tabidze was a disciple of Blok... in spiritual aspiration, with an inner affinity already noticed and understood”.

Source: G. Margvelashvili, Galaktion Tabidze, Magazine Mnatobi, 1951, №1, p. 158-160.

Dating: The magazine is signed for printing on February 15, 1959.

1959

February 17

Pati Nishnianidze visits him in the hospital, and the poet entrusts her with his wish to travel to Kvareli, Sachkhere, and Tianeti in the summer.

Source: P. Nishnianidze, Galaktion’s Several Meetings with the Working People of Georgia, Tbilisi, 1960, p. 25.

1959

February 22

Someone from the state publishing house calls him regarding the ninth volume, prompting him to go there urgently. However, when he arrives, the person who called him is no longer there.

Source: The notebook preserved in Galaktion's Tbilisi House-Museum, №394.

1959

February 22 or later

He writes an untitled poem: "Not too bad, not too bad, the dark Aragvi will split the rock...".

Source: The notebook preserved in Galaktion's Tbilisi House-Museum, №394.

Dating: The autograph of the poem is placed in the notebook after the entry dated February 22.

1959

February 22 or later

He writes the words "Ilia Chavchavadze" in his notebook and draws a noose.

Source: The notebook preserved in Galaktion's Tbilisi House-Museum, №394.

Dating: The autograph of the poem is placed in the notebook after the entry dated February 22.

1959

February 22 or later

He lists tasks related to Tskneti in his notebook, including installing glass enclosures on the balcony, purchasing a new work desk or repurposing the old one, transporting exhibition materials from Tbilisi, buying pillows and blankets for the beds, acquiring curtains, managing hypertension with medication, improving the bathing pool, fixing the water supply, heating, and roof to prevent leaks, and negotiating with a housemaid.

Source: The notebook preserved in Galaktion's Tbilisi House-Museum, №394.

Dating: The autograph of the poem is placed in the notebook after the entry dated February 22.

1959

February 24

In the Russian newspaper Molodoy Stalinets, Vladimir Partnov's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "Under the Banner of Lenin" is published.

Source: Под ленинским знаменем (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. Р. Портнов, Молодой сталинец, Тбилиси, 1959, 24 февраля, №24.

1959

February

He notes the phone numbers of the publishing house Zarya Vostoka, its employee Giorgi Bebutov, and the State Publishing House in his notebook.

Source: The notebook preserved in Galaktion's Tbilisi House-Museum, №394.

Dating: All the entries in the notebook are from the month of February.

1959

Spring

In Tbilisi, near the administration of the Transcaucasian Railway, Galaktion notices actress Tatia Khaindrava, who is walking with a friend. He stops in front of her with open arms and tells her that he reveres this beautiful Georgian woman and kisses her hand. The actress responds that she is the granddaughter of Konstantine Gamsakhurdia and an admirer of Galaktion's talent. Upon hearing this, Galaktion's face lights up; he takes Tatia's hand and says, "Let me kiss the forehead of the little granddaughter of the great Konstantine". The actress, along with her friend, offers to accompany him home, but Galaktion replies, "I have urgent business", and continues on his way.

Source: S. Toidze, A Small Recollection About Galaktion, newspaper Leninis Drosha (Makharadze), November 21, 1981, N 140, p. 3.

March

1959

March 5

A letter is written from the Fourth Department of the Ministry of Health of the Georgian SSR, where Galaktion Tabidze was treated for a period of time. The institution issues a certificate of incapacity for work in the name of Galaktion Tabidze. The patient's diagnosis includes hypertension and atherosclerosis.

Source: Galaktion's Death (Investigative Documents), magazine Samartali, 1992, №1, p. 50, 52.

1959

March 12

Galaktion unexpectedly visits Korneli Sanadze and asks him to paint a portrait that will help him be remembered. Korneli makes a sketch, and Galaktion, pleased with the result, asks him to enlarge the image as much as possible.

Source: O. Egadze, The Poet's Image in the Artist's Work, magazine Sabtchota Khelovneba, 1965, N 11, p. 74.

1959

March 14

In the Russian newspaper Kutaiskaya Pravda, Boris Serebryakov's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "The Day of Joy" is published.

Source: День радости (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. Б. Серебрыков, Кутаисская правда, Кутаиси, 1959, 14 марта, №33.

1959

March 15

In the Russian newspaper Zarya Vostoka, Andro Patariaia's translation of Galaktion Tabidze's poem "My Bulletin" is published.

Source: Мой бюллетень, (Стихи) Г. Табидзе, Пер. с груз. А. Патарая, Заря Востока, Тбилиси, 1959, 15 марта, №61.

1959

March 15

Intoxicated, he arrives at the control-analytical laboratory of the main pharmacy department located on the lower floor of his apartment building and speaks with the staff.

Source: Ivlita Mikadze's Explanation, Galaktion's Death (Investigative Documents), magazine Samartali, 1992, №1, p. 53.

1959

March 16

The magazine Tsiskari is submitted for publication, featuring Teimuraz Badurashvili's article "To Continue the Worthy Traditions". The article discusses ongoing processes in Georgian literature. The author points out that the aesthetic taste of the youth has recently improved, evidenced by the fact that Galaktion Tabidze now has more readers than he did in the past.

Source: T. Badurashvili, To Continue the Worthy Traditions, magazine Tsiskari, 1959, №2, p. 103.

1959

March 16

The Academy of Sciences receives a letter from Maguli Ghoghoberidze, the Komsomol secretary of the Lenin Collective Farm in the village of Jikhaishi, intended for delivery to Galaktion Tabidze. The sender asks the poet to find time in May or June to visit Khoni, explore the renewed city named after Alexandre Tsulukidze, and see Galaktion Tabidze Street in Ivandidi. The sender asks the poet to inform them of his decision so that they can arrange his transportation.

Source: MGL, WUF №74.

Dating: We date it according to the postal stamp date.

1959

March 16

At the insistence of his family, he reluctantly agrees to accompany them to the hospital at the medical centre. However, on the way, he has the driver stop the car near a diner, where he drinks 200 grams of vodka. Upon arriving at the hospital, his attending physician is not present, and instead of waiting, the poet decides to return home.

Source: A. Shushanashvili, Galaktion's Death (Review of the Investigation Case), Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 365.

1959

March 16

He enters a small tavern where Arno Oneli, Aleko Shengelia, Otar Tchelidze, and Vladimir Jibuti are already seated at a table and invite him to join them. Galaktion appears agitated, and his companions attempt to calm him. They speak kindly, praising his work, but he seems not to hear them, staring off into the distance.

Source: M. Jibuti, One Summer, A Toast To Him, Tbilisi, 1973, p. 315.

1959

March 17 or earlier

Aleksei Zakomoldin hands over his handwritten poem, signed by him, on a piece of paper.

Source: A. Shushanashvili, Galaktion's Death (Review of the Investigation Case), Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 369.

Note: Zakomoldin's father's name is not mentioned in the source.

Dating: Since Galaktion had this poem in his pocket on the day of his death, it must have been given to him either on that same day or earlier.

1959

March 17

In the morning, family members once again urge him to go to the hospital. Galaktion hesitates, citing the bad weather and suggesting they go tomorrow, but he ultimately agrees. He pockets 281 roubles, a savings Book with over 26.000 roubles, a sick leave certificate, a notebook with entries gifted by Marine Pirtskhalava, a comb, keys, "Record" cigarettes, and matchboxes. Accompanied by his nephew, Nodar Tabidze, he leaves for the medical centre at 9:30 a.m. without having breakfast. By 10 a.m., they are at the hospital. Galaktion chats warmly with doctors and acquaintances while waiting for Dr. Irakli Palavandishvili to arrive. When the doctor appears, he asks to be admitted to the hospital.

Source: A. Shushanashvili, Galaktion's Death (Review of the Investigation Case), Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 365-366; E. Mamukelashvili, New Pages from Galaktion's Life, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 422; Nodar Tabidze's Interrogation Protocol, Galaktion's Death (Investigative Documents), magazine Samartali, 1992, №1, p. 52.

1959

March 17

In the vestibule, he sees a group of writers gathered to transfer the remains of Shalva Dadiani, who passed away two days earlier. He introduces his nephew to Elizbar Ubilava. Irakli Abashidze asks him how he is, and Galaktion responds that he has been unwell recently. Konstantine Gamsakhurdia is also present. Galaktion attempts to greet him with a kiss, but due to lack of time, Gamsakhurdia only shakes his hand".

Source: A. Shushanashvili, Galaktion's Death (Review of the Investigation Case), Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 365-366; E. Mamukelashvili, New Pages from Galaktion's Life, Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 422. Nodar Tabidze's Interrogation Protocol, Galaktion's Death (Investigative Documents), magazine Samartali, 1992, №1, p. 52.

1959

March 17

After the transfer of Shalva Dadiani's remains, Deputy Chief Physician Irakli Palavandishvili instructs the staff to place Galaktion Tabidze in Room 7 of the neurology department on the fourth floor. Sanitary Olga Levchenko takes Galaktion to the changing room, where he puts on the hospital pyjamas and gown, and gives his clothes to Nodar Tabidze.

Source: A. Shushanashvili, Galaktion's Death (Review of the Investigation Case), Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 366.

1959

March 17

After a three-and-a-half-hour wait, at 1:30 p.m., Galaktion is taken by a hospital orderly via elevator to the fourth floor and placed in a two-bed Room 7, where two patients, Akaki Dugladze and Alexandre Alavidze, are already staying. A third bed is awkwardly squeezed between theirs, which causes great irritation to the wife of one of the patients. Galaktion tries to calm her down, leaves the room, and walks down the corridor so quickly that he forgets his glasses on the table next to the bed.

Source: A. Shushanashvili, Galaktion's Death (Review of the Investigation Case), Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 367.

1959

March 17

At 2 p.m., he enters the office of Gabriel Pondoev, head of the neurology department, where Dr. Nino Okropiridze is also present. He tells the doctors he is experiencing chest pain and general weakness. After an examination, it is determined that his pulse is 84, blood pressure is 180/80, and his liver is slightly enlarged. At 3 p.m., in Room 92, Dr. Susanna Arakelova examines his heart and lungs in Gabriel Pondoev's office. After leaving the doctor's office, he paces the fourth-floor vestibule, smoking a cigarette. At 5 p.m., he meets the hospital's deputy director, who asks how he has settled into his room. Galaktion replies that he is satisfied and exchanges kisses. At 5:30 p.m., he speaks with the doctor of the neurology department, Irakli Palavandishvili, and Professor Andria Ghvamichava in the neurology department and then returns to the corridor. Nurse Vera Dadiani notices that Galaktion takes a chair and heads toward the balcony. The nurse advises against it, as the balcony is wet and dirty. He accepts her advice and continues walking in the corridor.

Source: A. Shushanashvili, Galaktion's Death (Review of the Investigation Case), Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 368-369.

1959

March 17

At 6 p.m., he enters the office of Gabriel Pondoev, head of the neurology department of the medical centre, which is empty at the time. He takes off his medical gown and places it on the examination couch. Then, he moves a chair to the window, opens it, climbs onto the ledge, and falls to the ground from the fourth floor. By the time the doctor arrives, he has already passed away.

Source: A. Shushanashvili, Galaktion's Death (Review of the Investigation Case), Recollections about Galaktion, Tbilisi, 2009, p. 369.